"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion, and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and disinterested agencies. Therefore, we propose that your proposals and the proposition of the railways be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods:

1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved: or

2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law" (The Newlands Act).

Leaders Refuse Offer and Take Strike Vote

Leaders of the train service brotherhoods, at the joint conference held in New York, June 1-15, refused the offer of the railroads to submit the issue to arbitration or Federal review, and the employes are now voting on the question whether authority shall be given these leaders to declare a nation-wide strike.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is proposed by the railroads as the public body to which this issue ought to be referred for these reasons:

No other body with such an intimate knowledge of railroad conditions has such an unquestioned position in the public confidence.

The rates the railroads may charge the public for transportation are now largely fixed by this Government board.

Out of every dollar received by the railroads from the public nearly one-half is paid directly to the employes as wages; and the money to pay increased wages can come from no other source than the rates paid by the public.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, with its control over rates, is in a position to make a complete investigation and render such decision as would protect the interests of the railroad employes, the owners of the railroads, and the public.

A Question For the Public to Decide

The railroads feel that they have no right to grant a wage preferment of $100,000,000 a year to these employes, now highly paid and constituting only one-fifth of all the employes, without a clear mandate from a public tribunal that shall determine the merits of the case after a review of all the facts.

The single issue before the country is whether this controversy is to be settled by an impartial Government inquiry or by industrial warfare.

National Conference Committee of the Railways

ELISHA LEE, Chairman

P. R. ALBRIGHT, Gen'l Manager, Atlantic Coast Line Railroad.
L. W. BALDWIN, Gen'l Manager, Central of Georgia Railway.
C. L. BARDO, Gen'l Manager, New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.
E. H. COAPMAN, Vice-President, Southern Railway.
S. E. COTTER, Gen'l Manager, Wabash Railway.
P. E. CROWLEY, Asst. Vice-President, New York Central Railroad.
G. H. EMERSON, Gen'l Manager, Great Northern Railway.
C. H. EWING, Gen'l Manager, Philadelphia & Reading Railway.
E. W. GRICE, Gen'l Supt. Transp., Chesapeake & Ohio Railway.
A. S. GREIG, Asst. to Receivers, St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad.
G. W. KOUNS, Gen'l Manager, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway.
H. W. McMASTER, Gen'l Manager, Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad.
N. D. MAHER, Vice-President, Norfolk & Western Railway.
JAMES RUSSELL, Gen'l Manager, Denver & Rio Grande Railroad.
A. M. SCHOYER, Resident Vice-Pres., Pennsylvania Lines West.
W. L. SEDDON, Vice-President, Seaboard Air Line Railway.
A. J. STONE, Vice-President, Erie Railroad.
E. S. WAID, Vice-Pres. & Gen'l Mgr., Sunset Central Lines.

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

During Your Visit at Fulton
OLD HOME WEEK
Stop at HOTEL CLARK
Fulton's Leading Hotel
L. T. McQUADE, Proprietor

FOR SALE
I BEAMS, new and second-hand all sizes. Also PULLEYS, second-hand MACHINERY, PIPE and all sizes of IRON PLATES.
Inquire of
I. ALDERMAN
Schuyler Street
Office Phone 2242 Res. Phone 1242

FOR SALE
Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenelle, I Beams and Shafting.
Ready for Prompt Delivery
Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE
Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

AGENTS WANTED 100% Profit
Sell BUHACH Insect Powder—necessary to rid all homes of Ants, Bed Bugs, Cockroaches, Fleas, Flies and all other insects. Quick, Easy Seller. Write for Agents proposition and free sample TO-DAY.
BUHACH CO. Dept. 22 Stockton, Cal.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING AND HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second St.

KAPLAN'S EXPRESS
Baggage, Trucking and Freight Handled Promptly, Ashes Drawn Household Goods Moved
Prompt Deliveries Terms Reasonable
All kinds of second hand goods bought and sold
Phones Residence 1568, Business 4246
38 S. Second St., Fulton, N. Y.

ADVERTISED LETTERS

The following letters remain uncalled for at the Post Office, June 28, 1916. Inquirers will please say advertised.

Men: A. W. Burgess, C. L. Falker, H. H. Gardner, Frank Howard, Nelson Martin, E. J. Monil, Oliver H. Perry, Chandler Rickey, Frank Rickey, Irving Rogers, William Rust, Frank Spafford, Walter's Bros.

Women: Miss Ada Carr, Mrs. Henry Batiman Mrs. Lillie Forze, Mrs. Eolah Perkins, Mrs. Ethel B. Smith.

For thrush use Hanford's Balsam.—Adv.

WANTED
EXPERIENCED BRICK YARD MEN
We manufacture 100,000 soft mud brick daily.
We guarantee steady work all the year.
We pay from $2.50 to $3.50 per day.
We pay Strikers $3.50 per 30,000.
We pay Dumpers $2.90 per 30,000.
We pay Setters $3.50 per 30,000.
We pay Wheelers $3.25 per 30,000.
We are not having a Strike.
We will refund railroad fare if men stay 60 days.
We want experienced Machine men and Shed men.
The American Building Brick Company
113-114 The Arcade Building
CLEVELAND OHIO

GOOD RECORDS MADE BY SCHOOL PUPILS

The following pupils in the Fulton Public schools have been neither absent nor tardy during the last term:

High School.

Esther Aylesworth, Gertrude Candee, Emma Lalande, Leah Rhodes, Martha Hollenbeck, Frederic King, Harry Lewis, King Moss, Leon Rude, Frank Mahar, Muriel Morgan, Mary Smith, Mildred Clute, Hazel Ives, Edna Roy, Mildred Sharp, John Schneider, Frederick White, Neil Hunter, Harold Palmer, Mary Church, Pearl Foster, Adelaide Harding, Hazel King, Alma Bray, Harry Dingle, Mary Favafora, Mildred Cook, Myrtis Cook, John Donovan, Harvey Goodman, Mary Hopkins.

Fourth Street School.

First Grade, Miss Farrell, teacher—Kenneth Darling, Marion Loomis, Marian VanBuren.

Second Grade, Miss Everts, teacher—Dorothea Curtis, Marguerita Frataccia, Bessie Munk.

Third Grade, Miss Tuttle, teacher—Wayne Fox, Edward Fredette, Theodore Lincoln, Catherine Mullen.

Eighth Grade, Miss Benson, teacher—Walter Buell, William Braun, Ruth Baker, Ethel Cole, William Kaplan, Mary McCann, Thomas Nealis, Isla Pangburn, Anabel Spencer, Florence Rappole.

Rochester Street School.

Fourth Grade, Miss Knapp, teacher—Tressa Procinio, Della Weaver.

Sixth Grade, Miss Bullis, teacher—Mildred Bort, Charlotte Cole, Neatrice Cole, Bernice Mullen, Ellsworth Akens, John Lincoln.

Seventh Grade, Miss Decker, teacher—Robert Cole, James Knight, Merald Orth, Frances Hubbard, Sarah Kaplan.

Phillips Street School.

First Grade, Miss Heagerty, teacher—Jennie Belaski.

Second Grade, Miss Tillapaugh, teacher—Henry Balaski, Sylvia Blann, Solomon Alderman, Ralph Dudick, David Kaminkovitz, Mary Byers, Stacia Saydera.

Third Grade, Miss Dwyer, teacher—Madge Austin, Clara Belle Seaton, Mildred Towse, Joseph Casey, Stefan Dudck, Eddie Mikalel, Charles White.

Third Grade, Miss Connelly, teacher—Erma Rowley.

Fourth Grade, Miss Broderick, teacher—Lucile Collins, Mary Dey, Madeline Merant, Clifton Rowley.

Fifth Grade, Miss McCriskin, teacher—Floris Austin, Norma Kane.

Sixth Grade, Miss Curphey, teacher—Anna Merante.

Seventh Grade, Higher English Department—Doris Painter, Ernest Kelly.

Eighth Grade, Higher English Department—William Dingle, John Guilfoyle, Glenn Seaton, Walter Wilber, Agnes Casey, Ida Miner, Mildred Sellman.

State Street School.

Second Grade, Miss Cates, teacher—Louis Debarber, Dorothy Draper, Robert Fivaz, Frank Francis, Lawrence Parker, Suvilla Pollock, Jesse Yardley.

Third Grade, Miss Dryer, teacher—Lucy Ducret.

Fourth Grade, Miss Failing, teacher—Myrtle Chubb, Helen Cronk, Clifford Mansfield, Gladys Post, Leon Skelton.

Fifth Grade, Miss Wright, teacher—George Ducret, Kenneth Padgett, Albert Rhodes, Theresa DeBarber, Frances Ravalora, Evelyn Little, Erma Little.

Sixth Grade, Miss Beebe, teacher—Marion Chubb, Harlan Oryer, Anne Edgarton, Evayden Greene, Ruth Haskins, Rita Launt, Helen Pooler, Arlene Pratt, Palma Roy, Ethel Roy.

Seventh Grade, Miss Seymour, teacher—Walter Barkley, Winfield Bogardus, Donald Casler, Virginia Cook, Sophie Ducret, Howard Hunter, Lawrence Moity, Louise Nipper, Lucille Pollock, Dorothy Prashaw, Ruth Pringle, Robert Steele.

Eighth Grade, Miss Harrington, teacher—Guy Appleby, Thelma Bogardus, Porter Butts, Marguerite Fivaz, Paul Hunter, Elizabeth Ingammells, Helen Rhodes, Beulah Roy.

Erie Street School.

First Grade, Miss Bonhurst, teacher—John Waugh.

Second Grade, Miss Brumfield, teacher—Esther Baldwin.

Third Grade, Miss Hawkins, teacher—Francis Benway, Ernest LaFrate.

Fourth Grade, Miss Kendall, teacher—Stnley Alkenbrack, James Brannan, Joseph Frataccia, Clinton Osborn, Henry VanBuren, Clara Owens, Harriet Waugh.

Fifth Grade, Miss Walworth, teacher—Donald Lamphear, Harriet Mitchell, Mary Quinn.

Sixth Grade, Miss Rogers, teacher—Howard Campbell, Stanley Gardner, Vernard O'Neill, Willson Smith, Jane Rogers.

Seventh Grade, Miss Graveley, teacher—Tony Cincotta, Mary Crahan, Marie Hollenbeck, Beatrice Richards, Helen Ward, Herbert Waugh.

Eighth Grade, Miss Lynch, teacher—Anna Erhardt, Gladys Gardner, Gladys Haines, Sherwood Schneider, Sadie Waldhorn, Elsie Wood.

Oak Street School.

First Grade, Miss McNamara, teacher—Rachel Green.

Second Grade, Miss McCully, teacher—John Clark, Robert Culkin.

Second Grade, Miss Mackin, teacher—Kathryn Cole, Leon Stuber, Vito Delgarno, Francis Kelly.

Third Grade, Miss A. Melody, teacher—Peter Okonieuski, Harold Sant, Enrica Agus, Louise Denoto, Mary Dudek, Greida Harrington.

Third Grade, Miss M. Melody, teacher—George Edward Buell, Lucille Dashnau, Francis Devereau, Herbert Kelly, Freddie McAree, Erwin Menter, Annie Moros, Doris Ackroyd, Elijah Lake.

Fifth Grade, Miss Bunker, teacher—Clifford Kelly, Thomas McKenna, Bridget Kudta.

Sixth Grade, Miss Bunker, teacher—Maurice Donovan, Adolph Kroweek, Alanson Loomis, Andrew Piptone, Clarence Stuber, Mary Herner, Lulu Luke, Lena Perry.

Seventh Grade, Miss Sadler, teacher—Harold Kelly, William Brosnaham, Kate Luke, Margaret Frawley, Lawrence Murphy, Curtis Dashnau, Charles Brooker.

Academy Street School.

First Grade, Miss Whitaker, teacher—Erwin Hawthorne.

Second Grade, Miss VanDozer, teacher—Eugene Loveless, Roy Wallace, Frederick Wood.

Third Grade, Miss Dalton, teacher—Robert Jennings, Harriet Edgarton, Eunice Smith.

Fifth Grade, Miss Lehon, teacher—Gilbert Allen, Ross Hunter, Raymond Knight, Lucille Reynolds.

Walradt Street School.

First Grade, Miss Marden, teacher—Edward Collins, Anna McGinnis.

Second Grade, Miss Marden, teacher—Bernard Dumas, Arthur Nettleton.

Open Air School.

Third Grade, Miss Rankin, teacher—Mary E. Wilcox.

HONOR STUDENTS OF FULTON HIGH

The following is a list with standings of the first fifty in scholarship for the term just closed:

Harvia Wilson, 94.33; Mildred Sharp, 94.33; Herbert Phillips, 91.14; Gertrude Candee, 90.08; Murial Morgan, 90.08; Doris Osborne, 90.06; Margaret Byrne, 89.83; Edna Hughes, 89.83; Lillian Warner, 89.08; Margaret Howe, 89.25; Earl Hopkins, 89; Elizabeth Howe, 89; Angie McNally, 88.08; Wahnoeta Beebe, 88.06; Hilda Clark, 88.05; Esther Aylesworth, 88.04; Mildred Clute, 87.08; Vernon Kimball, 87.08; Ruth Loveland, 87.05; Sherman Fisk, 87.04; Mildred Ford, 87.16; Lee Jacobs, 86.66; Elizabeth Royce, 80.05; Ivan Jones, 86; Francis Payne, 86; Edgar Stewart, 86; Charlton Hunter, 86; Hester Balch, 85.75; Marie Roy, 85.66; Mildred Brown, 85.05; Alfred Fivaz, 85.04; Frances Mangeot, 85.02; Marion Brown, 85; Frederic King, 85; Harlow Stratton, 84.08; Ida LaMay, 84.05; Edward McSweeney, 84.04; Helen Cusack, 84.33; Helen Balch, 84.33; Lela Osborne, 84.25; Lenora Eames, 84.02; Rachel Tucker, 84; Merle Bartlett, 84; Clara Smith, 83.83; Ruth Quirk, 83.08; Leah Rhodes, 83.08; Loren Wells, 83.75; Cora Holly, 83.06; Irene Bateman, 83.05; Edith Brown, 83.05; Lena Campbell, 83.05.

DOES SLOAN'S LINIMENT HELP RHEUMATISM?

Ask the man who uses it, he knows. "To think I suffered all these years when one 25 cent bottle of Sloan's Liniment cured me," writes one grateful user. If you have Rheumatism or suffer from Neuralgia, Backache, Soreness and Stiffness, don't put off getting a bottle of Sloan's. It will give you such welcome relief. It warms and soothes the sore, stiff painful places and you feel so much better. Buy it at any Drug Store, only 25 cents.

STATE OFFICERS IN THE GUARD

Many Departments at Albany Nearly Depleted, As Men Leave for the Front.

(Special to Evening Times.)

Albany—Both the legislature and many state departments have been fairly riddled by the call for the national guardsmen. Few states in the union can boasst of more patriotic sons in the state service than the Empire State. Answering the call to arms are five legislators who hold commissions.

In the Assembly there are two lieutenant-colonels, Frederick A. Wells, Brooklyn, and J. Leslie Kincaid, Syracuse. The other commissioned officers are Alfred G. Bell, Hoffman Nickerson, New York; George R. Brennan, members of assembly also and Senator Alvah H. Burlingham, Brooklyn.

The department of the secretary of state is represented in the militia by First Lieutenant Lazaway, who will go to the border with the Tenth Infantry, of Albany.

The department of the state architect contributes three to the cavalry branch: Sergeant Achille O. Van Seutendale and privates Theodore H. Fries, and Gilbert L. VanSuken. The trio are architectural designers and all are members of Troop B. of Albany.

Three guardsmen, all of them sergeants, will represent the department of state comptroller. Charles Jones, Frank Colloton and James Cook. They are members of the Second Field Hospital Corps.

Service Men in Lead.

The department having the largest number of guardsmen who will go to the border is the public service commission. In this department there are six members of the militia. Connected with the department of the state engineer in several bureaus or divisions there are fifteen membrs of the national guard. Four will go to the front from the Albany office.

A first lieutenant, two sergeants and two privates will represent the state highway department. To give a list of all of the guardsmen who are in the employ of the state would take a column for there are other departments which will be deprived of employes when all the troops are gone. Many of these hold responsible positions.

An important point of which is being discussed by these guardsmen is whether they will continue to draw their salaries of the state while they are in service. While there is a provision which continues on the pay roll members of the National Guard called into active service there is nothing in the law which provides what shall be done by the state after the troops enter the service of the national government. The question which is being asked and which will shortly be determined one way or the other is whether guardsmen employed by the state in clerical or other positions are still in the state employ after they have been mustered into the Federal army.

PRISON INSTRUCTOR COMING ON A VISIT

H. S. Goodjon, instructor at the House of Refuge, Randall's Island, is in Syracuse visiting his brother Elmer E. Goodjon. He will come to Fulton in a few days to visit another brother, F. E. Goodjon, of Buffalo street, before he returns to New York.

Mr. Goodjon is a former Fulton resident where he was a sergeant in the Fifty-first regiment, serving throughout the Civil War. For forty years he has been connected with prison work spending twenty years at Sing Sing, four at Auburn and sixteen at Randall's Island.

QUIRK THEATRE
Matinee 5c, Night: Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c
TODAY—
Bertha Kalich in "SLANDER"
Fox 6-Part Feature.
THURSDAY—
Carlyle Blackwell in Equitable Film "THE SHADOW OF DOUBT" in 5 Parts
Selig News.
SATURDAY—
9th Episode "THE IRON CLAW" in 2 Parts.
2nd Episode of "THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA" in 2 Parts
OTHERS
4—ACTS VAUDEVILLE—4

WE WANT YOU TO KNOW
ALL ABOUT ELECTRIC SERVICE AND WHAT IT WILL DO FOR YOU IN YOUR HOME.
Do you enjoy the comfort and convenience of Electric Light?
Do you actually realize the convenience, the cleanliness, the real economy of Electric Household Utensils?
We have a full line of Electric Appliances, such as Electric Flat Irons, Washing Machines, Ranges, Grills, Percolators, Fans, Vacuum Cleaners and many others.
Let us demonstrate any of the above in your home.
THE ELECTRIC COMPANY
Phone 144

G. F. Seeger, of Jonesboro, Ill., says: "Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh has taken the place of all gall cures in this vicinity. We have only to sell our customers the first bottle, after which we have no trouble in selling him again or his neighbor."—Adv.

CLEAR SKIN COMES FROM WITHIN
It is foolish to think you can gain a good clear complexion by the use of face powder. Get at the root of the trouble and thoroughly cleanse the system with a treatment of Dr. King's New Life Pills. Gentle and mild in action, do not gripe, yet they relieve the liver by their action on the bowels. Good for young, adults and aged. Go after a clear complexion to-day. 25c. at your druggist.

Sure.

"What is a coworker?"

"One who helps you work somebody, of course."—New York Press.

Your wagons and implements should last longer
Every farmer knows his wagons and machinery will last longer if kept out of the weather. It is equally important to have them protected from sun and rain when in use.
DEVOE
THE GUARANTEED
FARM WAGON PAINT
is the one protection that we can recommend. We guarantee it to give a durable and lasting finish. Ordinarily a gallon of it will repaint all the wagons and machinery on the average farm.
In addition to saving many times its cost every year, this paint will keep things looking spic-and-span.
Devoe Farm Wagon Paint is made in green, red, yellow, blue and black. Which color do you prefer?
L. P. SMITH COMPANY
PLUMBING, TINNING, WINDOWS, DOORS, LEHIGH VALLEY COAL
FULTON, N. Y.

Hoot Mon, th' Bagpipers Are Comin'!
The expert skirling of the pipers will make you step lively when the SCOTCH HIGHLAND BAND starts playing at the big tent the first day of
Chautauqua Week
These men have just completed a transcontinental tour with Harry Lauder. They will give you two great programs of Scotch folk songs, artistic bagpipe playing and intricate sword dances.
Two Other Big Attractions on Opening Day
HON. JOE R. HANLEY
A Patriotic Lecture, "The Modern Crusader"
JOHN B. RATTO
The Master Entertainer-Impersonator
This is only the beginning of the greatest joy week of the year. Five other red letter days follow, each a delight to the eye, the ear and the soul
$2.00 Buys a Season Ticket For It All if purchased in advance from the local committee
In Fulton, July 31st to Aug. 5th

Read This Circular! Prepare! Wait! Plan! Get Ready to Come--JUNE 29, AT 9 A. M.

THE TRUTH IS KNOWN

The World Revolves and Seeds Are Sown and to Reap the Harvest--Yes, the Greatest Harvest the Country has Ever Known

Copyrighted 1916 Chas. Kaufman & Bros.

The UNEXPECTED Has Happened and a REAL SURPRISE Awaits You

Opportunity comes to everyone, so here is the opportunity for you. Yes, and it's the greatest opportunity of your life; for, like good soldiers, we have lined our batteries, arranged details for a great victory. We are determined to win or die.

Entire $25,000 Stock of Clothing, Shoes, Hats and Furnishings to be Placed on Altar of Sacrifice

RAIN or SHINE this SALE will POSITIVELY Commence at the Appointed Hour

Copyrighted 1916 Chas. Kaufman & Bros.

THURSDAY, JUNE 29th, 9 A. M.

AND LASTS TEN DAYS ONLY

WE WILL TEACH YOUR $--Dollars--$ To have more cents by attending this Great Sale

WE WILL MAKE YOUR $--Dollars--$ Stretch Like Rubber during this Great Sale.

Read Our Prices---They Talk Loud and Long

SPECIAL!	SPECIAL!	SPECIAL!	SPECIAL!	SPECIAL!	SPECIAL!
500 cakes of Almond Meal Toilet Soap to be sold ... a. m. Thursday,	15c Boys' Braces, at this great sale	35c Men's Suspenders, at this great sale only	25c Neck Ties, at this great sale only	10c Work Hose, at this great sale only	$1.25 Little Gents' Shoes, at this great sale only

THE QUIRK TODAY.

Bertha Kalish is presented by William Fox in "Slander," a six part feature. The synopsis of the play is as follows:

Helene Rivers marrie John Blair, a lawyer, whose rival for her hand is Harry Carson, a man about town.

Richard Tremaine, an old friend of Blair's, nursing a secret grudge against him, to avenge himself makes love to his wife.

Tremaine forges a letter in Helen's name asking Carson to call at the Blair home.

He then arranged that Blair shall return and find his wife and Carson together.

Carson escapes through a window, is arrested, and to save himself from the police produces Helene's letter.

Blair divorces Helene and secures custody of the two small children.

Tremaine becomes Helene's consoling friend.

His wife and son returning from the south. Helene decides to inform the wife of their relations, but meets the son and through him seeks to be revenged on Tremaine.

She makes love to the son and he wants to marry her.

Tremaine cannot object for fear of being exposed by Helene.

During a scene in a dark room in Helene's home Tremaine's revolver explodes and the son is found dead on the floor.

Tremaine is arrested, charged with murder, and is defended by Helene's former husband, Blair.

HOUSE WARMING DREW BIG CROWD

Rector of All Saints Made Happy by Appreciative Flock and Eloquent Speaker

A crowd that taxed the capacity of the building attended the opening of the new parish house of All Saints' Church last night. A most interesting program was presented, and after the exercises a social evening was enjoyed, while refreshments were served. For many the occasion afforded the first opportunity to view the interior of the handsome new structure and many were the exclamations of approval voiced by those present.

The new building is indeed a credit to the city, and the rector of the church, Rev. Minor J. Peters, as well as all who assisted in any way, deserve the thanks of the public at large.

The program began with two instrumental selections by Mrs. F. Jess Newton, violinist; Byron Newton, flutist; and Miss Georgianna Koch, pianist.

Rev. F. T. Henstridge, of the Church of the Evangelist, Oswego, led in the recitation of the Lord's Prayer. A flute solo, by Byron Newton, with violin obligato, by Mrs. F. Jess Newton followed.

Rev. Mr. Tenstridge then mounted the platform and with a few extemporaneous remarks, largely devoted to humorous anecdotes about Rev. Mr. Peters and his large car, he presented the rector with a purse of gold from the Men's Club of the church, with which "to buy gasoline." A similar presentation from the young ladies of the church was also made, and when Rev. Mr. Peters came forward to accept the gifts, he was accorded prolonged applause. In a few words, after he had recovered from his surprise, Mr. Peters thanked the members of both organizations for their generosity and good wishes.

A number by the orchestra preceded the address of the evening, which was delivered by Rev. Karl Schwartz, of the Church of the Saviour, Syracuse.

Rev. Mr. Schwartz said in part:

"I'm not very keen at making addresses; I'm rather like the fellow who was called upon for an address at a dinner, and arose and said 'Yes, folks, I'll give you my address, it's 125 State street, and I'm going there right now.'

"As my text I might take the words, 'Rejoice with those that rejoice and weep with those that weep.' I don't intend to make any serious speech here this evening.

"Four years ago our church in Syracuse burned down, we had only the bare walls standing and no money with which to build another. We succeeded by hard work in getting the funds necessary to rebuild, and I want to say here, that any man who turns his back on God's business is a coward.

"Here in Fulton you have a new parish house and you will soon have a new church. This parish house is almost paid for and it is cozy, pretty and convenient. You have been doing God's work, and I congratulate you on the fruits of your labor.

"Next to building a universe, which is the work of God, comes the building of God's church, which is the work of man. The work of building God's church, my friends, is the greatest and best labor in life.

"When we raised money in Syracuse I collected $25,000 and only two men refused me out of all that I asked.

"I congratulate this parish because it is doing things, I like the parish which does not lie on its back. You have united here in one of the greatest undertakings ever attempted in your city, and the spirit is in your hearts to accomplish it."

QUIRK THEATRE

Continuous 2 to 10:30 P. M.
Matinee 5c, Night: Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c

TODAY—
George Walsh and Doris Pawn in Fox Film
"Blue Blood and Red"
in 5-parts.
Selig News.

WEDNESDAY—
1st Episode of "The Secret of the Submarine" in 2-parts.
and the Great Preparedness Photoplay
"Defence or Tribute" in 5-parts
BENEFIT LEE MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

THURSDAY—
Jane Grey in Equitable Film
"MAN AND HIS ANGEL"
in 5 Parts
BENEFIT C. R. B. A. No. 100
Selig News.

DR. GESNER WILL SPEAK TONIGHT

A splendid musical program and two speeches will feature the public opening of the All Saints Parish House to-night at eight oclock. The recently organized Newton Concert Company of this city, an octette of talented local musicians, will make its debut at the opening, and an extensive program of good music has been arranged by F. Jess Newton, the director.

Rev. Minor J. Peters, rector of the church will make an address of welcome and the principal speaker will be Rev. R. H. Gesner, of Oswego.

Informal dancing will follow the musical and the orchestra has arranged a program replete with the latest popular hits.

The program follows:

Melody in F (Rubinstein) March.. Newton Concert Co.
Prayer .... Rev. Minor J. Peters
Andante Religioso (Thorne) ...... Newton Concert Co.
Vocal Selection—"Somewhere a Voice is Calling" .... Miss Vera A. Bovard
Hungarian Fantasia (Tobani) ..... Newton Concert Co.
Address .... Rev. R. H. Gesner
Vocal Selection .. Mrs. L. Fowler Joy
Humoresque (Dvorak) .... Newton Concert Co.
Selections from "Carmen" (Bizet) Newton Concert Co.

TRINITY MEN'S CLUB COMING IN AUTOMOBILES

Thursday evening, the Men's Club of All Saints' Church will entertain the Men's Club of Trinity Church of Syracuse at the new parish house in this city. The visitors will motor to this city, and they will be met at the city line by a squadron of Fulton automobiles bearing members of the local club.

At the parish house a musical program and impromptu entertainment by talented members of both organizations will be in order. Refreshments will be served and the meeting will assume the aspect of a get-together social session.

The present temporary organization of the Men's Club of the All Saints' church will probably be made permanent at the meeting Thursday evening.

ST. JOHN'S DAY WILL BE OBSERVED BY F. & A. M.

Hiram Lodge, F. and A. M. will celebrate St. John's Day, next Sunday, with religious services at All Saints' church. The members of the order will meet at the lodge rooms Sunday evening and march to the church where they will listen to a sermon by the rector, Rev. M. J. Peters, and the formal ritual of the lodge will be read.

Every year on the St. John's Sunday, the Masons attend one of the Fulton churches. Last year they attended the Congregational church.

MASONS OF TWO CITIES WILL CONFER DEGREES

Assisted by members of Frontier Lodge and Oswego Lodge, of Oswego, Hiram Lodge, F. and A. M., of this city will initiate a class of candidates in the third degree at the Fulton lodge rooms to-night. The session will begin at seven o'clock, as the program is rather a lengthy one and the committee plans to hold a social session after the degree work is completed.

O'HARE—FLANNERY

Hugh O'Hare, formerly of this city, but now of Fayetteville, and Miss Katherine Flannery, of Syracuse, were married yesterday at the Church of the Holy Rosary, Syracuse. The ceremony was preceded by a nuptial mass.

A full line of hand-embroidered articles suitable for graduation gifts and June brides; also stamped goods, for sale by Mrs. F. H. Ure, 721 Cayuga street. Phone 1502.—Adv. tf

Fulton-Made Products Winning Approbation

(Continued from Page One)

made of white serge with binding of Elks' purple, and caps with the lodge emblem in purple.

* * *

A. M. Druse exhibits ten shot guns, the product of the Hunter Arms Co. The guns are placed on a display rack, and in the center is one of the company's famous specials, which retails at $1,000—made only to order.

* * *

H. Putnam Allen displays canned goods from the Fort Stanwix Canning Company plant in this city. Three small cannons, done in blue and gold, add a martial touch to the display in keeping with the name of the firm.

* * *

The M. Katz company has a large display of the products of the Victoria Paper Company. The display includes paper bags of all sizes, crepe paper of the finest quality, twine paper and other Victoria products. The display occupies a section of the north windows.

* * *

At the Fulton Pharmacy an entire window is devoted to an attractive display of Nestle's Food, manufactured in this city. The food is a beneficial diet for babies, and is sold all over the world with the Fulton stamp. This display occupies the south window of the store.

* * *

The Setz-McCormick Company is showing the product of the Aluminum Container Corporation, of West Third street. This display includes aluminum drinking cups of special design, card-cases, souvenir holders, and aluminum souvenir ware of every variety.

* * *

David Lipsky has devoted the south window of his store to a display of Oswego Falls Pulp and Paper Company goods. The display includes caps for milk bottles, florist boxes, shoes boxes, suit boxes, heavy wrapping paper, paper of the better quality, and copies of the three Fulton newspapers are shown, as all three plants here purchase their stock from the Oswego Falls Company.

* * *

In the Stranahan store south window is a display of Gage-Elwell Milling Company products, including the new "Pride of Fulton" flour which will soon be put on the retail market here, corn and wheat, chicken feed, and other grain products. The flour is displayed in the new paper lined sanitary bags.

* * *

A three cylinder gasoline engine, made at the Dutcher Machine Works here occupies the south window of the People's Hardware Company. The engine is finished in a dull green, and every brass part is polished to a mirror-like finish. The machine came in for a great deal of attention, particularly on the part of business men and farmers.

* * *

Paper of "kraft" quality, made to withstand wear of the hardest sort by the Volney Paper Company of this city, is displayed in the windows of the Lasher store. A government paper-testing machine which register the tensile strength of the paper is included in the display, and results of the test, which has shown the wearing qualities of the Fulton product are noted. The display also includes heavy roofing paper, known as Asphalt Shingles.

* * *

In the Palmer-Hope windows two Fulton companies have displays. The south window is devoted to North End Paper Company products, which include tissue paper of fine quality in every color of the rainbow. The paper is arranged in an attractive manner, and the bright appearance of the window was cause for much complimentary comment on the part of the public.

The north window houses a display by the John MacGregor Company of this city, manufacturers of the celebrated Viking Spark Plug. The materials used in the manufacture of the plug are shown in the raw and finished state, and several dozen completed plugs are displayed.

* * *

The J. C. O'Brien store has given space to a display of Fluff Rugs, made by the John Clark Carpet Company of the west side. Every rug is a beautiful piece of work and the display is artistically arranged in the Oneida street windows.

* * *

Large, business-like paper cutters and heavy knives for cutting machinery are on display in the east window of the Butts store. The Dilts Machine Works, manufacturer of heavy cutting machinery, furnished the knives for the display, and photographs of various machines manufactured by the company are distributed about the window.

* * *

E—Z Opener Bags, made of Volney "kraft" paper, occupy the entire west window of the Patterson store on Oneida street. Bags of all sizes, from the small half pound to large bags suitable for heavy service, including the famous "Oak King" and "Silver Oak" E—Z Opener quality, are in the display. Volney paper, from which the bags are made, is also given space.

* * *

Victor C. Lewis has devoted his west window to a display of Boland Bros. cigars, The Ti-Tu, 50-50, and Five States brand, known all over the country, comprise the display, which is arranged in pleasing effects.

* * *

The Spanswick Knitting Company display occupies one of the Oneida street windows of the J. C. O'Brien store. The display includes union suits of underwear manufactured by the Spanswick Company, face cloths of all descriptions, a large roll of cotton webbing, used in the manufacture of underwear, and cotton yarn. The display was arranged by Charles Sage, of the O'Brien Company.

* * *

The latest model of the Simple-X Wrapping Machine, manufactured in this city by the Simple-X Company, is on display in the east window of the Burritt store. The machine wraps bread, macaroni packages, and parcels of all kinds, ad is a very clean-cut and well constructed affair.

RUSSIA BEGINS BIG OFFENSIVE.

Are Actively Engaged Along a Front of 250 Miles.

[illegible] PRISONERS CAPTURED.

The Russians Are Using Large Numbers of Guns and Men and Have Achieved Success on Many Important Sectors, Taking Many Prisoners.

London, June 6.—The long-expected general offensive of the Russians against the Teutonic allies seemingly has begun. From both Petrograd and Vienna come reports the Russians are actively engaged over a front from the Pripet river, east of Brest-Litovsk, to the Rumanian frontier, a distant of about 250 miles.

The Russians everywhere are using large numbers of guns and men, and, according to Petrograd, have achieved successes on many important sectors, taking 13,000 prisoners and a number of guns and destroying or capturing Teuton positions.

Attacks of Great Violence.

Along the Bessarabian front, in the Pruth region, along the lower Strypa and in Volhynia, the Russian attacks have been particularly violent. In the region of Olyka, in the zone of the Volhynian fortress triangle, the Russian guns have heavily shelled a front more than fifteen miles long held by the Austrian Archduke Joseph Ferdinand.

Around Verdun bad weather has set in and as a result the infantry of both sides have kept to their trenches and only bombardments have taken place. No new changes in position are recorded. Around Vaux and Damloup, northeast of Verdun, the bombardment on both sides has continued with considerable intensity, while west of the Meuse the shelling has been only intermittent.

On the remainder of the front in France, except around Ypres, the situation is reported quiet. About Ypres, however, the Germans and Canadians are keeping up the violent fighting that has been in progress since last week, when the Germans, under a terrific rain of shells, captured Canadian positions, which later were retaken in hand-to-hand and bombing encounters. Germans again forced the Canadians to relinquish the bulk of the recaptured ground, but the Canadians are disputing strenuously the efforts of the Teutons to oust them from the remainder of the positions.

Advance for Austrians.

Vienna reports despite the sturdy resistance of the Italians the Austrians have made a further advance into Italy in the Cengio zone, near Asiago. The town of Cecihana and 5600 prisoners, three cannon and seven machines and 128 bomb throwers were captured by the Austrians.

Rome admits the retirement of the Italians in the Cengio zone, but says that in the Daigone valley, the Lagarina valley and on the Posina front Austrian attacks were repulsed with heavy losses.

In southern Albania in the region of Avlona the Austrians have dispersed with their artillery Italian detachments operating in that vicinity.

LULL IN CONGRESS

Harding and Borah Off to Chicago; Democrats Leaving.

Washington, June 6.—Senator Warren G. Harding of Ohio, who will deliver the keynote address of the Republican convention, and Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, who probably will have a hand in drafting the platform, headed the last contingent of Republicans who left the capital yesterday for Chicago. Senator Lodge also has left.

Few Republicans remain on watch in the senate to object to the consideration of bills against which there is opposition. Even many of the Democrats, taking advantage of the lull in congress, have left for their homes before going on to St. Louis.

Legislation will practically remain at a standstill until the conventions have adjourned. Democratic members of the ways and means committee of the house will devote some time to shaping the revenue bill, but in both bodies little work of any kind is being done.

San Francisco Has $750,000 Fire.

San Francisco, June 6.—A new concrete pier and 5,000 tons of freight, which had been unloaded from the Shinyo No. 2, a Japanese liner, recently arrived from Oriental ports, were destroyed in a spectacular waterfront blaze of unknown origin here. The Shinyo and the Governor Forbes, a freighter, which were tied to the burning pier, were slightly damaged before they got out of the fire's reach. No lives were lost. The loss is estimated at $750,000.

Approved Ericson Shaft.

Washington, June 6.—President Wilson today approved a movement to have congress appropriate $100,000 for a monument to John Ericsson, the inventor of the Monitor. He sent a letter to Senator Lea and Representative Slayden asking if it were possible to get action upon the bill this session.

GEORGE W. PERKINS.

Reaches Chicago In Conciliatory Mood.

Photo by American Press Association.

The states represented were New York, Maryland, Vermont, Washington, Georgia, Kentucky, Missouri and Alabama.

Extraordinary efforts had been made by all the leaders to be able to electrify the meeting by some clarion call from Justice Hughes, but these efforts met with great unsuccess. In response to a half dozen impassioned appeals by telegraph, volumes of silence flowed back over the wire.

Delegates Wear Badges.

Before adjournment it was decided to meet again Tuesday afternoon. In the meantime badges are to be printed and pinned on all who will wear them in and outside of the convention.

All present were instructed to go out and drag all Hughes men on the justice's band wagon, and there much rodeate on the Hughes prospects on the first ballot, which are about 180 votes, will be raised to 500.

While the meeting represented but a few states, it was important in that it is the first real organization of any kind for the justice, and that it disposes once and for all of the bunk about the justice's not being a candidate.

Those constituted the day's important doings. At its close Hughes was still in the lead, but there is nothing on which to base a prophecy of his nomination. One thing is sure. This is a Root convention. Root is the choice of the minority of delegates, and only the fear that his corporate connections might cause the voters to fall upon and rend him prevents his nomination. But that fear is very real and is shared even by his best friends, who are here in control.

Larger Army and Navy.

The Democratic direction of affairs in connection with Mexico will be attacked with special severity as totally inadequate to the demands of the situation, but no declaration for actual intervention in Mexico is contemplated now. An army and navy adequate to the protection of American interests will be advocated as the best means of preserving peace and protecting the national honor in the platform.

Fairbanks Will Not Attend.

Indianapolis, June 6.—Indiana Republicans, several hundred strong, moved on to Chicago to support Charles W. Fairbanks, Indiana's choice for the presidential nomination. "Boost Fairbanks; Knock Nobody" was the slogan of the Hoosier invaders. Mr. Fairbanks will remain at his home here during the convention.

Ford Too Busy to Go.

Detroit, Mich., June 6.—Henry Ford's secretary announced here that Mr. Ford would not be in Chicago while the Republican convention is in session. "Too busy" was the reason given.

To Endorse Suffrage.

Every effort will be made in the Republican platform, if the suggestion are followed, to incorporate some Progressive party ideas. A recall plank probably will not be approved by leaders in platform framing, but a strong fight will be made for an endorsement of woman suffrage.

Accidents Reported to State.

Charleston, W. Va., June 6.—Of the 387 accidents reported to the Workmen's compensation department this week 12 of them resulted in fatalities.

WEATHER EVERYWHERE.

Observations of United States weather bureau taken at 8 p. m. yesterday follow:

	Temp.	Weather
New York	68	Cloudy
Albany	62	Fair
Atlantic City	60	Cloudy
Boston	62	Cloudy
Buffalo	53	Fair
Chicago	56	Fair
St. Louis	64	Rain
New Orleans	82	Cloudy
Washington	72	Fair
Pittsburg	66	Clear

CARRANZA NOTE TO BE TAKEN UP.

Cabinet Will Discuss Reply to Mexican Ultimatum.

DEMAND MAY BE IGNORED.

The Demand May be Ignored Entirely, as Other Portions of the Note, Such as that Suggesting American Domestic Politics Are Behind the President's Actions.

Washington, June 6.—President Wilson and his cabinet are expected to discuss at today's meeting the reply to be sent to General Carranza's note, demanding withdrawal of American troops from Mexico. While it has been stated authoritatively that the reply will make clear the administration's determination not to withdraw the expedition until the Carranza troops have shown both the intention and ability to prevent bandit raids, there are many other questions raised by the note which must be considered.

Gen. Carranza's demand that the United States declare its intentions toward Mexico "in the interest of all Latin-America" has aroused considerable discussion in diplomatic circles. Some diplomats do not hesitate to attribute it to the activity of foreign agents in Mexico City, working to offset President Wilson's efforts toward a closer Pan-American relationship.

They argue the fact that American marines have been employed recently in Nicaragua, Haiti and Dominican Republic, and that American troops are now such agents to discount the president's declarations for Pan-American amity. Some even assert a campaign is on foot to prevent the United States from obtaining permanently the trade with South and Central America and Mexico formerly held in Europe.

State department officials refuse to discuss that possibility, and the reply President Wilson will make to the demand for new expressions of disinterestedness has not been indicated.

The demand may be ignored entirely, as other portions of the note, such as that suggesting American domestic politics are behind the President's actions, probably will be.

RAILROADS TO FIGHT BOOZE

Will Help Prohibition Department to Wage War on Bootleggers.

Charleston, W. Va., June 6.—Railroad companies operating in West Virginia will take advantage of the finding of the supreme court that it is not illegal for passengers to carry intoxicants as personal baggage only to the extent that the suit cases and other such baggage of passengers will not be searched.

Announcement has been made by both the Kanawha & Michigan and Chesapeake & Ohio officials that they will assist the department of prohibition in curbing the efforts of bootleggers and others transporting whisky into the state for illegal purposes.

Special officers on both of these roads have been instructed to assist the prohibition officers in every way possible and to not allow anyone to carry labeled whisky as baggage.

These companies will operate under a ruling of the interstate commerce commission that personal baggage included only wearing apparel and toilet articles.

PATRIOTS SPURN CITY CASH

Will Celebrate the Fourth Without Any Municipal Help.

Trenton, N. J., June 6.—Dissatisfied with the plans of the municipal fireworks committee, named by Mayor Donnelly, the residents of the Third, Fourth and Sixth wards are going to have a fireworks display of their own on July 4.

The city pays for a number of fireworks displays on the Fourth, and the arrangements are made by a committee of citizens.

This year the southern part of the city was entirely neglected, in the opinion of the residents, and they have served notice on the city commission that they want none of its money and that the three wards will join in having a show of their own.

Strike of Human Motors Grows.

Atlantic City, June 6.—Material additions to the number of striking chairpushers along the Boardwalk were made here, but the "human motors" carefully refrained from disorderly conduct. It was estimated last night that fully 400 of the men were on strike, but the service was not interrupted and there was no cessation in the constant stream of chairs running up and down the great wooden way all day and far into the night.

Five Hurt in Cyclone.

Natchez, Miss., June 6.—Five women were injured, three of them fatally, and ten houses and a church demolished when a cyclone struck Grove, a small village near here.

Italian Clocks Set Ahead.

Rome, June 6.—Legal time was advanced one hour throughout Italy, beginning at midnight last night.

METHODISTS MAY UNITE CHURCHES

Union of Branches Would Give Nearly 6,000,000 Members.

SLAVERY CAUSED THE SPLIT

Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Episcopal Church South and Methodist Protestant Church Now Have Total of 27,426 Ministers and 47,615 Churches.

The prospect of Methodist union, possibly as early as 1918 and in any case not later than 1920, has aroused widespread interest among the members of Protestant churches as to the size and rank of the Methodist church when reunited.

The Methodist general conference, which just concluded its session in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., unanimously indorsed the proposed union of American Methodism. If the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church South in 1918 also indorses the plan the union can probably be put into effect to some extent at once.

The union proposed is of these two denominations and one other, the Methodist Protestant church. The numerical results will be imposing. The new Methodist church, for that will probably be the name, will have almost exactly one-third of the 17,762,509 communicants of the thirty church bodies which are now members of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. It will have more than a third of their 139,091 churches and more than one-fourth of their 108,118 ministers. The next largest body will be the southern Baptist convention, and after that will come the negro Baptist, with the Presbyterians following.

Some Statistics.

Here are the figures for 1915, the most recent obtainable, as given in the Churches of the Federal Council, edited by Charles S. MacFarland and issued only a few weeks ago by the Fleming H. Revell company:

	Ministers.
Methodist Episcopal church	18,811
Methodist Episcopal Church South.	7,296
Methodist Protestant church	1,319
Total	27,426
	Churches.
Methodist Episcopal church	29,428
Methodist Episcopal Church South.	14,787
Methodist Protestant church	2,400
Total	47,615
	Communicants.
Methodist Episcopal church	3,657,594
Methodist Episcopal Church South.	2,072,035
Methodist Protestant church	201,110
Total	5,930,739

When it is added that neither the southern Baptist convention, with 2,502,217 communicants, nor the Presbyterian Church In the United States of America, with 1,495,157 communicants, approaches in size the Methodist Episcopal church the numerical greatness of the united Methodist church will be readily appreciated.

Caused by Slavery Issue.

Slavery, which also divided the Baptist and Presbyterian churches, was the cause of the division of the Methodist Episcopal church. Among Methodists the schism took place in 1844, arising from the case of Bishop James Osgood Andrew of Georgia, whose wife was a slaveholder. The Methodist Protestant church was the outgrowth of a still earlier dispute over the mutual rights of the ministry and laity. It was formed about 1830 and was itself split in 1858 by the slavery question. In 1866 the northern half of the Methodist Protestant church fused with the Wesleyan Methodist church, and in 1877 both parts of the Methodist Protestant church were again brought together.

The coming union of Methodists will create a denomination as pre-eminent in missionary work as in membership. The three churches when fused will have about 1,700 foreign missionaries as against 1,300 missionaries of the Presbyterian Church In the United States of America and 325 foreign missionaries of the Presbyterian Church In the United States South. The reunited Methodists will have about 6,200 home missionaries. Northern and southern Presbyterians together have not many more than 3,000.

T. R. CALLS IT RO-ZE-VELDT.

Proper Pronunciation of Name That Is Frequently Mispronounced.

Chauncey M. Depew, who has known T. R. from babyhood, says "Rosevelt," with the accent on the first half of Rose.

The dictionaries say "Ro-se-velt," with the accent on "Ro." It is a question why nine persons out of ten persist in pronouncing the last half of the Colonel's name as if it were spelled Roosefelt.

That "felt" is abominably wrong. The ex-president himself says Ro-se-veldt, all spread out nice and soft like, with none of your Roosey or Rosy "felts" about it.

There are three distinct syllables in his name instead of two.

Farmer Buys a Street Car.

Two well dressed men sold Wisconsin farmer the Chicago street car on which he was riding for $75, but the motorman refused to give it up at the end of the run.

FLIRTS IN SHADOW OF DEATH CHAIR

Waite Puzzled When Charms Fail In Courtroom.

HIS EGOTISM IS REVEALED.

"She Wouldn't Look at Me," He Complains to Alienist—Slayer by Poison of Parents-in-law Says That He Never Loved Young Wife, Heiress to Fortune.

A brand new record in flirtation has been made. Dr. Arthur Warren Waite has broken the old one and established the new—making eyes in the shadow of the electric chair—in the courtroom in New York where he was on trial for his life.

The crushed young wife whose parents he poisoned, his broken hearted father and brothers and the studio dove whom he "thought more of than all the Pecks and Waites put together" were all in the room with him. It would not have been strange if his good looking head had been bowed with shame. But it wasn't bowed. It was slightly raised, and there was a bright and interested gleam in his frank blue eyes. Arthur Warren Waite, chaperoned by judge and jurors, his fate in their hands, was doing his best to attract the attention of a pretty girl.

"She wouldn't look at me," he complained to the alienist, who told of the little affair upon the stand. Arthur Warren Waite was astounded. Apparently he could see no reason why his charms should fail him for the first time, there in the prisoner's chair.

"I never could have believed he was interested in any other woman," his young wife had said.

In the corner where she sat listening so calmly and grimly, leaning a little forward in her chair, her small hands folded, Clara Louise Peck, as she now desires to be called, learned how far misplaced her faith had been. Her slayer-husband and the alienist to whom he had told his story both said he had never loved her for a moment.

Didn't Love His Parents.

"When I got rid of her I meant to get a beautiful wife," that supreme egoist had explained. "She was not my equal in anything. She was not beautiful nor talented. She was just an ordinary quiet girl."

He did not know how to love. All ego, entirely selfish, he admitted that he felt emotion for no human being, this strangely solitary man in the prisoner's chair. "I didn't feel anything for my parents," he said. "I know I ought to love them, because they were good to me. Mrs. Horton (his studio companion)—oh, I'm afraid that was only a temporary matter! Life is only a hollow, miserable shell."

His Studio Companion.

Upon his inability to feel a throb of love or fear or sorrow the defense based most of its argument. Arthur Warren Waite, they said, was "by himself, of himself and with himself," a moral imbecile, a man who could not realize murder because he could not realize any personality outside his own.

Meanwhile the man who wrote poems on love in the Tombs seemed to feel that it did not much matter what happened to him, but bewailed the lack of "harmony" in the courtroom.

"When I look into people's eyes I can make them like me," he said. "I could do it now if they would look at me. But the atmosphere is hostile."

SUGAR CARDS IN ENGLAND.

Issued to 25,000 Members of a Co-operative Society.

Sugar cards have been issued to the 25,000 members of the Sheffield and Ecceleshall Co-operative society. Before sugar can be bought at any of the stores the card, which bears the member's name and number, must be presented. When the quantity bought weekly is half the normal quantity in peace times a record is made on the card. Nonmembers are not supplied.

The system has been adopted by other societies and is proving most successful in husbanding supplies.

Speaking of the likelihood of the card system being extended to other articles, T. Walton, the general manager, said that his board felt that it would be necessary before very long if supplies diminished as they were doing week by week. Cards for all food might soon be in use.

GETS LINCOLN'S BIBLE.

Presented to Negro College by Son of the Emancipator.

President F. A. McKenzie of Fisk university, the negro institution at Nashville, Tenn., announced the gift by Robert T. Lincoln of a Bible which was presented to former President Abraham Lincoln by negroes in Baltimore in 1864.

In presenting the book Mr. Lincoln said:

"It has seemed to me better that this notable testimonial should be preserved in some institution where its resting place will be permanent, and I can think of no more fitting selection than the institution founded by General Clinton Bowen Fisk immediately upon the conclusion of a distinguished military service in the war which resulted in the abolition of human slavery in our country."

HUGHES STOCK HIGH AT CHICAGO

Justice Leads With More Votes Than Other Candidates.

FAIRBANKS FOR SECOND PLACE

Ex-Vice President's Friends Say that He Was Born for Office and that No Man in the United States Is So Perfectly Qualified to Fill It—Hughes Men Organized.

Chicago, June 6.—The outstanding facts in the skirmish for the advantage at the start of the Republican presidential race were these:

There are more votes for Hughes than for any other candidate, but not enough to nominate the justice.

Hughes Men Organize.

In an effort to recruit sufficient delegates to win the Hughes men got together and effected a loose organization today.

They will meet again today, pass out badges and begin to buttonhole delegates.

They have given up all disposition to row among themselves. Frank Hitchcock and Governor Whitman of New York made pleas for harmony. Whitman spoke about 2,000 words; Hitchcock about twenty-five.

So much for the Hughes hopes. Now for the other side of the case. Senator Borah of Idaho, who had been counted on to come to the conference and take the leadership, came to Chicago, but not to the conference. Senator Henry C. Lodge of Massachusetts, confidently counted on to support Hughes after Weeks shall be eliminated, deposited a fly in the Hughes ointment by declaring that he is against Hughes.

The Hughes people think this means he is for Roosevelt.

They even see in Lodge's change of champions a dark plot on the part of the colonel to block the Hughes candidacy. This they would not put past either Lodge or the colonel.

Fairbanks for Second.

Meanwhile the favorite sons have been eliminated. Fairbanks, the strongest of them, will, it is known, be serenely contented with the vice presidency. His friends say that Fairbanks was born for this office—that no man in the United States is so perfectly qualified to fill it.

Cummins of Iowa with many delegates has been used merely to mask the purpose of the state leader. He is out of it.

Burton has failed to arouse any enthusiasm. Weeks will disappear after the first ballot, bar a miracle.

In the event of the failure of Hughes to receive the nomination there is a possibility that Warren C. Harding of Ohio may be selected. Harding is highly regarded by all factions. His adherents believe that he will be the strongest man before the country. He will be temporary chairman and in the sounding of the keynote he will have an opportunity to impress his personality upon the delegates.

WHITMAN IN DARK

Unable to Tell Delegates Just Where Justice Stands.

A rumor that Governor Whitman would be able to tell the delegates just where the justice stood proved groundless. Whitman confessed before he went into the meeting that he was still in the dark. To the Hughes men he made a fervent talk, asserting that he felt sure that the whole convention should and would follow the lead of Oregon and line solidly up behind Justice Hughes as the only man who could win.

Senator Wilton, chairman of the Oregon delegation, called the meeting to order and John J. Anetzka of Maryland was made chairman.

Frank H. Hitchcock, whose activities in the Hughes interest were once regarded by the justice's followers as distinctly pernicious, drifted in late in the session and was welcomed like a prodigal son. He said:

"You know I don't speak. I have just this to say. I am for Hughes because he is a winner. He is going to be nominated and he is going to be elected."

It was Hitchcock's speech and it made a terrific hit. He divided the handshaking with Governor Whitman through the rest of the meeting, which was conducted standing up.

PROGRESSIVES RESTIVE

Talk of a Third Ticket Continues to Grow.

The Progressives continue restive. Talk of a third ticket was louder among them. Today they refused absolutely to appoint any committee to confer with the Republicans. Only stern restraint on the part of their leaders keeps them from nominating Roosevelt and hastening home.

This attitude the old guard leaders regard as a bluff. Nevertheless, there is a real fear of a third ticket and this fear will continue Roosevelt as a possibility right up to the hour of balloting. Thus far the Hull report of the Roosevelt people has put Hughes out of the racing.

The Hughes people got together at the request of former Senator Charles W. Fulton, as chairman of the Oregon delegation.

Watch Your Step? Look for Sign on Building.

1c
Only 2 cakes sold to a person.

SPECIAL!
50c Boys' or Girls' Sneaks, at this great sale only
19c
9 a. m. to 10 a. m. Opening Day

SPECIAL!
35c Boys' Blouses, at this great sale only
21c

15c Soks in Black, Browns and Fancies, at this great sale only
9c

75c Caps, at this great sale only
43c

SPECIAL!
20c can Colgate's Talcum Powder to be sold at this sale
11c

SPECIAL!
10c White Handkerchiefs, at this great sale only
2c

$1.25 Suit Case, at this great sale only
79c

50c Balbriggan Shirts or Drawers at this great sale only
39c

$1.25 Kaki Work Pants, at this great sale only

SPECIAL!
15c Pad Garters, at this great sale only
5c

SPECIAL!
50c President Suspenders, at this great sale only
33c

$5.00 Trunks, at this great sale only
$3.89

$1.00 Dress Shirts, at this great sale only
79c

50c Work Shirts, at this great sale only
39c

SPECIAL!
25c Men's Balbriggan Shirts or Drawers at this great sale only
18c

SPECIAL!
25c Silk Socks, at this great sale only
19c

50c Sport Shirts, at this great sale only
43c

50c Jersey Sweaters, at this great sale only
43c

$3.00 Dress Trousers, at this great sale only
$1.89

SPECIAL!
15c Ladies' Hose, at this great sale only
8c

SPECIAL!
10c Red and Blue Handkerchiefs, at this great sale only
3c

60c Overalls and Coats, at this great sale only
43c

75c Men's Union Suits, at this great sale only
43c

$15.00 Black Silk Faced Overcoat, at this great sale only
$9.89

SPECIAL!
25c Boston or Paris Garters, at this great sale only
18c

SPECIAL!
15c Children's Hose, at this great sale only
9c

65c Boys' Pants, at this great sale only
43c

25c Children's Rompers, at this great sale only
19c

$5.00 Raincoats, at this great sale only
$2.89

$2.00 Hats, in Gold Bond and other good makes, all styles and colors, at this great sale only.
$1.69

$1.50 Straw, Silk or Soft Hats at this great sale only

25c Boys' Caps, at this great sale only
19c

$16.50 Nobby Young Men's Suits, all the newest styles, pinch backs, etc., at this great sale only
$4.00 Boys' Suits, at this great sale only
$10.89

$4.00 Boys' Suits, at this great sale only
$2.89

$15.00 Men's and Young Men's Suits, at this great sale only
$9.98

50c Athletic Union Suits, at this great sale only
43c

$10.00 Men's Raincoats, at this great sale only
$7.39

50c Boys' Sport Blouses, at this great sale only
43c

$5.00 Suit Cases, at this great sale only
$3.89

One lot Men's Odd Vests in Ser and Cassimeres, sizes 34 to 37, at this great sale only
47c

$1.00 Men's Caps, at this great sale only
79c

50c Pure Silk Neckwear, all the newest shapes and shades, at this great sale only
34c

$6.00 Boys' Suits at this great sale only
$4.38

One lot Young Men's Suits, sizes 17 to 19, were $6 to $12, at this great sale only $4.39

$3.00 Boys' Suits, at this great sale only
$1.98

60c Men's Sneaks, tan, white and black, at this great sale only
43c

$10.00 Men's and Young Men's Suits, at this great sale only
$6.49

$20.00 Men's Fine Suits in all the new goods, shades and cuts at this great sale only $13.89

$2.00 Men's Pants, at this great sale only
$1.39

$12.00 Mens and Young Men's Suits, all new and nobby, at this great sale only
$8.49

$4.00 Panama Hats, at this great sale only
$2.89

MONEY SAVED ON FOOTWEAR AT THIS GREAT SALE

$3.00 Men's Scout Shoes at this great sale only
$1.69

$2.50 Men's Dress Shoes, at this great sale only
1.89

85c Boys' Outing Shoes, with white rubber soles, at great sale only
68c

$2.00 Boys' Shoes, in button or lace, at this great sale only
1.49

$2.50 Men's Rubber Boots, at this great sale only
1.98

$3.00 Men's Work Shoes, at this great sale only
2.39

$4.00 to $4.50 Beacon Shoes, all styles in gun metal, calf and Russia tan, at this great sale only
3.19

$2.50 Heavy Work Shoes, at this great sale only
1.93

$1.00 Men's Outing Bals, at this great sale only
79c

$3.00 Men's Vici Kid Oxfords, at this great sale only
$1.79

$3.50 Men's Dress Shoes, Beacon and other good makes, at this great sale only
$2.89

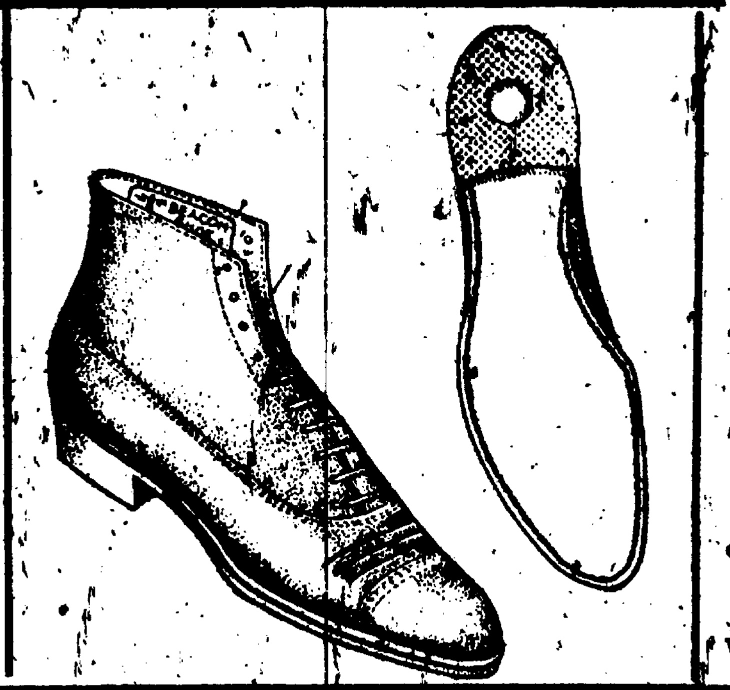
$3.00 Men's Tan Shoes, in lace or button, at this great sale only
$1.98

$2.25 Men's Work Shoes, at this great sale only
$1.68

$3.00 Boys' Beacon Shoes, at this great sale only
$2.39

$3.50 Rubber Boots, in Hood and U. S. makes, at this great sale only
$2.93

$2.00 Boys' Scout Shoes, at this great sale only
$1.49



Wanted
15
EXPERIENCED SALESPEOPLE
15

SELLING STARTS
Thursday June 29
AT 9 A. M.
WATCH and WAIT

FREE ROUND TRIP FARE PAID TO ALL PURCHASES AMOUNTING TO $10.00 OR OVER, WITHIN A RADIUS OF 25 MILES!

We have now the largest stock of merchandise on hand at this time of the year. Same must be turned into cash. Our low prices will do the trick.

REMEMBER SALE STARTS
Thursday, June 29th, at 9 A. M.

Store Closed
TUESDAY, JUNE 27th, and WEDNESDAY, JUNE 28th TO ARRANGE STOCK

EXTRA SPECIAL!
10c Shoe Polish, white, tan and black, at this great sale only
5c

ROSENBLOOM'S

55 SOUTH FOURTH STREET - - - - - - FULTON, NEW YORK

Helene confesses that Tremaine's son was killed by accident.

Blair, realizing that his wife was forced into trouble through the plots of Tremaine, forgives her and the family is reunited.

The Best Kind of Woman to Marry.

You take a tip from me, son. When you marry, marry a home woman—a woman who's willing to hang a "God Bless Our Home" sign on the wall without making funny cracks about it.—E. C. Ranck in American Magazine.

Legitimate Occupation.

"That beauty doctor is fooling those pretty girls taking his treatment. He ought to be arrested."

"His is a recognized business; he's merely grafting peaches."—Baltimore American.

WORRY.

How utterly useless and foolish it is to worry! Those who worry simply throw rocks at their troubles and hit themselves.

The Great Trouble.

"It is every woman's duty to keep young as long as possible," she said.

"Yes," he admitted, "but the great trouble is that so many young women insist on keeping young after it is impossible."—Chicago Herald.

Superstitious.

"What! Did you let the examinations go by again, Carl?"

"I'll tell you, father. On the way to the college I met an old woman, and then I turned back again."—Fliegende Blaetter.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

COMMENCEMENT

Not a few young people when graduating from college or school have the idea that they have completed all the hard work of life—but they are just commencing—just starting out to learn to be useful.

An account with us is the commencement of successful endeavor.

4% PAID IN OUR INTEREST DEPARTMENT

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

State of New York, Office of the State Commission of Highways, Albany, N. Y.—Pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 30, Laws of 1909, as amended by Chapter 646, Laws of 1911, and Chapter 80, Laws of 1913, sealed proposals will be received by the undersigned at their office, No. 55 Lancaster Street, Albany, N. Y., at one o'clock p. m., on Wednesday the 12th day of July, 1916, for the improvement of the following highways:

Oswego County—Road No., 5408; name of road, Fulton City: East First Street; approximate length, 0.36.

Also on Friday, the 14th day of July, 1916, for the improvement of the following highway:

Road No., 1413; name of road, Hastings-Parish; approximate length, 2.04.

Maps, plans, specifications and estimates may be seen and proposals forms obtained at the office of the Commission in Albany, N. Y., and also at the office of Division Engineer, William M. Acheson, 433 So. Salina St., Syracuse, N. Y.

The especial attention of bidders is called to "General Information For Bidders" in the itemized proposal, specifications and contract agreement.

Proposals for each road or contract must be presented in a separate sealed envelope, endorsed on the outside with the name and number of the road or contract for which the proposal is made. Each proposal must be accompanied by cash or a certified check payable to the order of the State Commission of Highways for an amount equal to at least five per cent. of the amount of the proposal which such cash or check accompanies.

This cash or check will be held by the Commission until the contract and bond are duly executed.

The successful bidder will be required to give a performance bond for fifty per cent. of the contract, and a maintenance bond covering the wearing surface of all roads, except water-bound macadam and cement concrete pavements for twenty per cent. of the contract price of the items which comprise the wearing surface, such bonds to be executed by a surety company to be approved by the Commission: or a bond secured by the deposit of collateral securities to be approved by the Commission.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

EDWIN DUFFEY,
Commissioner.

I. J. MORRIS,
Secretary.

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of D. P. Morehouse, jr., special Surrogate of the County of Oswego, N. Y., notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Frank R. Caldwell, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his office in the Village of Central Square, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 15th day of September, 1916.

Dated this 6th day of March, A. D., 1916.

HENRY D. COVILLE,
Executor.

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Clara A. Fredenburg, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at No. 59 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 23rd day of October, 1916.

Dated this 24th day of April, A. D., 1916.

JAMES R. SOMERS,
Attorney for the Administrator of the Estate of Clara A. Fredenburg, deceased.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Citation On Settlement.

The People of the State of New York: To Robert E. Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Elmina Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Cyrus Frederick Phillips, Rochester, N. Y.; Ross Phillips, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Asa Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Grace Phillips Bryant, Akron, O.; May Wood Taylor, St. Josephs, Mo.; All Saints' Church (formerly Zion Episcopal Church), Fulton, N. Y.; Mount Adnah Cemetery Association, Fulton, N. Y.; Minnie Wood Douglas, Nutley, N. J.; Charles Shaw, Kansas City, Mo.; Frank Barnes, Fulton, N. Y.; Hiram Barnes, Little Falls, N. Y.; Nellie Barnes Huntly, Colosse, N. Y.; Harriet A. Phillips, Denver, Col.; Charles R. Phillips, Youngstown, O.; Fanny Barnes Burt, Hannibal, N. Y.; Edith Barnes, Fulton, N. Y.; Hattie Hurlburt, Natural Bridge, N. Y.; Ella Reed, Russell, N. Y.; Mary Curtis, Hermon, N. Y.; Anna Phillips Nagle, Minneapolis, Minn.; Leonard T. Haight, Syracuse, N. Y.; William B. Phillips, Toledo, O.; Thurber C. Phillips, Long Island City, N. Y.; Mary Helen Winegar, Syracuse, N. Y.; Ruth Winegar, Nutley, N. J.; Josephine Broadwell, Fulton, N. Y.; Mary A. Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Eleanor Barnes Tamlyn, Custer City, S. Dak.; George H. Phillips, Stockbridge, Mich.; Cyrus W. Phillips, Rochester, N. Y.; Florence C. Boddy, Rochester, N. Y., and to all other persons interested in the estate of Julia A. Broadwell late of the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, deceased, either as creditors, legatees, next of kin or otherwise, Send Greeting:

Upon the petition of Arvin Lewis Rice, of the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, the executor of said Julia A. Broadwell, deceased:

You and each of you are hereby cited to show cause before the Surrogate's Court of Oswego County, New York, at the Surrogate's Office in the City of Oswego, in said county, on the 31st day of July, 1916, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why the account of Arvin Lewis Rice as executor of said deceased should not be judicially settled and allowed, and such of you as are under age of twenty-one years are required to appear by your general guardian, if you have one; or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed; or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a special guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate's Court to represent and act for you in the proceeding.

In Testimony Whereof, We have caused the seal of the Surrogate's Court of the County of Oswego to be hereunto affixed.

(L.S.) Witness, Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of our said County of Oswego, at the City of Oswego, in the said County, the 26th day of June, A. D., 1916.

H. E. HINMAN,
Clerk of the Surrogate's Court.

CLEVELAND MAYOR DECLINES TO AID CUPID

(By United Press)

Cleveland—There won't be any marriages at the city hall so long as Harry Davis is mayor. Te just won't help Mr. Cupid, that's all. Davis explained he has religious scruples against a mayor marrying couples.

"A minister ought to perform all marriages; it's more satisfactory to everybody, especially the bride," said Davis. "There hasn't been or won't be any marriages at the city hall so long as I'm mayor. I want to have an untroubled conscience when I leave office."

In previous administrations marriages by the mayor were events in the dull routine of city hall life.

Proper Treatment for Bowel Troubles

Mrs. Annie Peck, New Hartford, N. Y., says: "I have used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy time and again with the most satisfactory results, and I advise anyone in need of such a medicine to give it a trial."

For Sale by all Dealers.

The Kittredge Case

A Story of a Queer Old Man.

By CLARISSA MACKIE

That Colonel Kittredge was a queer old man was evident from the many queer things he did. In the first place, being rich and consequently constantly called on to give money for various purposes, he never gave a cent to any public institution. And when he gave to an individual he would conceal it in some worthless article and leave the beneficiary to find it. It was known that three different persons to whom he gave money in this way did not hit upon the donation for a long time after it had been made. How many gifts were never discovered at all nobody knows.

But the queerest thing the colonel ever did was to disown his daughter Anna when she married her cousin, Daniel Kittredge. She had been engaged to Kittredge for a long while before her marriage, and neither she nor any one else ever heard her father say anything against the young man or make the slightest objection to his daughter marrying him. At the wedding he gave the couple $1,000, telling them to make it last as long as possible, for it might be a long time before they got any more.

Anna thought her father was joking. She had always been his pet, and she had no doubt notwithstanding these words that she could always get from him all the money she wanted. What was her surprise on her return from her wedding trip to find his house vacant and locked. He had gone away and did not return for months. When he did he would have nothing to do with her.

Those most charitably disposed toward Colonel Kittredge said that he was crackbrained, some even declaring that he was crazy, and it was reported that a former Kittredge had been sent to bedlam.

When Mrs. Daniel Kittredge became assured that there was no hope of her regaining her former influence over her father she accepted the situation and made the best of it. Her husband proved unsuccessful, and it is possible that the colonel, with his keen vision for practical things, had discerned some deficiency in his makeup, and this had been the cause of his strange action toward the couple.

Daniel Kittredge died not long after his marriage, leaving Anna a widow with one child, a daughter, Anita, a pretty child and a great consolation to her mother. Mrs. Kittredge was obliged to get on as best she could and without any assistance from her father.

The only thing the colonel ever did that was not queer was to die.

The day after the funeral the heirs gathered in the lawyer's office and listened to the reading of the will.

When Mr. Drayton had concluded his reading he looked around at five puzzled faces.

Then they burst into a chorus of vigorous protest, all save little Anita Kittredge, who was very white and trembling.

The other Kittredges had money, but Anita's widowed mother, the colonel's disinherited daughter, was poor and in ill health.

On his death bed the colonel had sent for his daughter.

"Forgive me, child," he had whispered with his last breath. "Don't misunderstand me. I have not forgotten you and little Anita, and you will be provided for. Those other Kittredges who are waiting like vultures—forgive—me—Anna," and with the words, he had died.

Now, Anita, sole representative of her mother and nearest of kin to the colonel, listened to the words of the will which resolved itself into several bequests.

"To my cousin, Amos Kittredge, I bequeath all the books he has borrowed from my library and failed to return."

"To my Cousin Pauline Clark, whatever article of furniture, picture or bric-a-brac she may choose from my home."

And the following bequests were the same, each one was to choose some keepsake of the dead man, and each one was to receive the sum of $100 in cash.

The residue of the estate was to be sold and the proceeds diverted to various charitable organizations.

After every effort had been made to break the will, the indignant heirs agreed to meet at the colonel's late home and choose some keepsake.

"I shall select the Khorassan rug in the drawing room," thought Pauline Clark. "It's worth $5,000—and that will be something."

"And I," thought Amos Kittredge, "will borrow a few more books and keep those, too," he thought greedily, although he was a rich man.

"And I," thought another, "will choose a piece of the Kittredge gold plate—it is valuable."

Anita Kittredge went up the path to the front door of her grandfather's house; she was a slender girl in her early twenties. She was bookkeeper in a stationery store in town and supported herself and mother in humble comfort.

Mr. Drayton, the lawyer, met her with a cordial smile.

"The vultures are gathered, Miss Anita," he said whimsically. "They are appraising the household goods."

Anita shivered.

"It seems so dreadful to do that when he is hardly through with them," she said.

"It was Colonel Kittredge's wish."

"And I must choose something for mother?"

"Yes, and something for yourself. What shall it be? The Chinese vases in the blue room?"

"Oh, no. Something more personal than that, Mr. Drayton."

Mr. Drayton's eyes twinkled.

"Then the Kittredge silver?"

Anita smiled. "What would we do with all that? Besides, mother wanted something very personal—something that really speaks of him. You know they were fond of each other, and if it hadn't been for grandfather's obstinacy I believe he would have forgiven mother."

"I am sure he was very remorseful for many years, but he possessed the Kittredge obstinacy to a degree. It darkened all his later days."

"I am sorry," said Anita, with tear filled eyes.

"Now," said the lawyer briskly, "suppose you walk around and select some things. Take your time. Anything that is not already chosen is yours. So make a wise choice."

At a distance he followed Anita around the house, watching her anxiously, as if fearful that she might make an unwise choice.

Once Anita paused before her grandfather's desk. It was a huge affair of mahogany and stood in the library. But another heir had chosen it, feeling certain that its secret drawers and hiding places must give up some untold wealth or at least another will.

How disappointed he must have been when all he discovered was a package of canceled bank checks and some worthless mining stocks!

In the dining room Anita lingered longest.

Over the mantelpiece hung two portraits. One was that of her grandfather, and the other her grandmother. They were finely executed in oils, and she had often heard her mother speak of them and wish that she might even have a copy of her parent's pictures.

Pauline Clark, passing through the room, saw Anita regarding the portraits.

"My dear child, you are never going to be so sentimental as to choose those portraits?" she asked, in horror.

Anita nodded.

"I shall choose one for mother, and the other for myself," she said gravely.

"Little goose," laughed Mrs. Clark as she went out to give orders to her chauffeur to make room in the limousine for the Khorassan rug.

Anita turned her head and saw the lawyer standing beside her.

He was looking keenly at her.

"Have you made a choice, Miss Anita?" he asked.

"Yes," said Anita. "I have chosen the portraits—one for mother, and the other for myself. They are my grandparents, you know," she added.

"I know, Miss Anita. Your grandfather was quite right," said the lawyer. "Shall I send the pictures down to you?"

"If you please, Mr. Drayton."

He glanced at his watch.

"The others have all gone home with their belongings. My motorcar is outside. Suppose I take you and the portraits home now."

"Thank you, that will be so nice," agreed Anita, and she helped the lawyer remove the portraits, dusting them carefully before placing them in the tonneau of the car.

When they reached the little cottage where Anita lived Mr. Drayton carried the pictures into the house and hung them in the living room where Mrs. Kittredge could see them from her easy chair.

As the lawyer turned to go, he said to the tired looking girl:

"Will you invite me to tea tomorrow night, Miss Anita?"

"Of course! We shall be so glad to see you," she cried.

The next evening Mr. Drayton appeared, visibly excited. With him was his clerk, a grave faced, earnest young man whom Anita had met several times.

"I brought Tom along with me. There is a little matter of business to be transacted," said the lawyer, as Anita laid another plate for Tom Baldwin.

After the pleasant little meal, which was rendered very festive by Mr. Drayton's offering of flowers and a box of bonbons, the lawyer turned to Anita.

"Miss Anita, your grandfather was so certain that you and your mother would choose those portraits as your share of the inheritance that he prepared a surprise for you. Tom, you are tall; hand me the portraits."

Under the wondering eyes of Anita and her mother Mr. Drayton removed a thin linen covering from the back of the frames and disclosed layer after layer of valuable stocks and bonds worth in all many hundred thousands of dollars, half of the colonel's large fortune.

"This is the inheritance which goes to you two, the ones who scorned worldly value and chose the pictures because you loved the originals. In my safe at the office is a document which sets forth this entire transaction and makes it quite legal. In the meantime, accept my congratulations!"

And so Anita Kittredge and her mother came into their rightful inheritance and bought in the mansion on the hill and all its contents. As for Tom Baldwin, he rose rapidly to fame and in time married Anita, and they all live together on the hill, where Lawyer Drayton is a frequent visitor.

When Mrs. Clark heard of the hidden fortune she gasped indignantly:

"Of course I would have chosen the portraits if I had only known what was hidden there!" And to add to her bitterness the Khorassan rug proved to be a clever imitation and worth perhaps a hundred dollars.

Long Island and New England

It's the best place for children. Miles of beach—tramps on the sand, searching for mysterious shells—queer marine animal life.

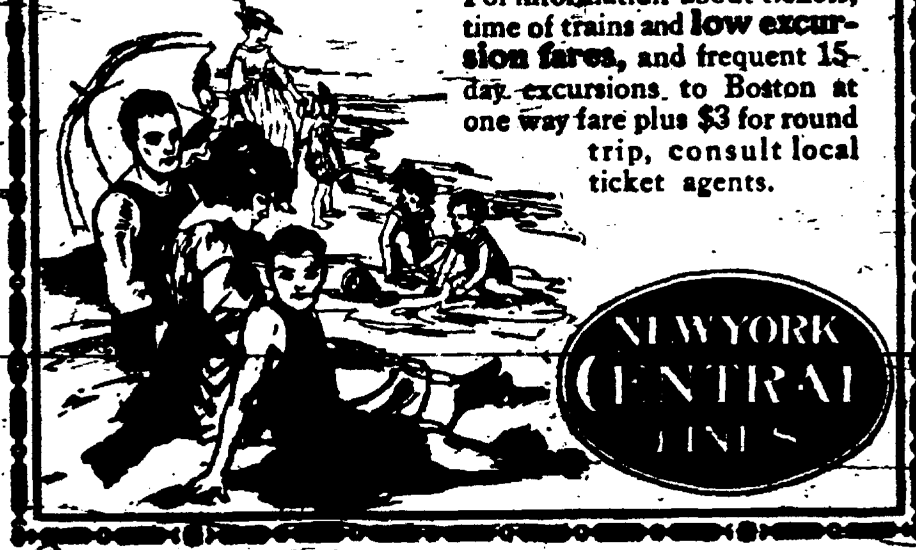
Hotels—Cottages—Camps—at the price you want to pay.

Where is there a finer vacation land?

Through cars to Boston and New York, the gateways to the shore resorts.

Low Summer Excursion Fares

For information about tickets, time of trains and low excursion fares, and frequent 15-day excursions to Boston at one way fare plus $3 for round trip, consult local ticket agents.



NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

GRANBY CENTER.

Mr. George Roberts, of Fulton, was the over Sunday guest at Charles Vanderlender's and Mr. John Follan at M. A. Thomson's.

* * *

The Misses Susan Murphy, Hazel King and Ella Ballard are home from Fulton High School.

* * *

Marvin Hall, who has been quite ill, is able to be out again.

* * *

Little Eugene Holden, the year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Holden, was severely scalded with hot water Saturday.

* * *

The L. A. S. and Brotherhood will hold a social on the church lawn Friday, June 30. Ice cream, hot Coney Islands and other good things will be served. Everybody is cordially invited.

* * *

Mr. John Gillespie has two brothers visiting him from New Jersey.

* * *

Mrs. Crockford is visiting her son, Mr. William Crockford.

* * *

The L. A. S. was entertained at the home of Mrs. Fred Ballard, on Friday last.

* * *

Miss Cooper is visiting at Mr. and Mrs. Will Goodrowes'.

* * *

Mr. Charles Sampson, of Mexico, is visiting at Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ensworths.

* * *

Several from this place attended the closing exercises of the South District School, taught by Miss Minnie True.

* * *

The Closing Exercises of our school were held at the church, June 20. Dora Caswell, Ethel Vandelinder and Marion Williams received prizes for honors. Harold Allen, Florence King, Maud King, Marion Williams Myrtle Williams, Leroy Williams and Orla York had perfect attendance throughout the year. Ethel Vandelinder completed the Eighth grade and will attend Fulton High School next year.

* * *

The Young People's Missionary Society is postponed indefinitely on account of the ice cream social.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. All druggists, 75c.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

REDUCED FARES
NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

Alexandria Bay 2.50
(Including Tour of Islands)

Round Trip. Every Wednesday, Saturday, Sunday and Holiday to August 30th. Return limit same day.

Consult local ticket agents for time of trains and other information.

Notice to Creditors

IN PURSUANCE OF AN ORDER of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Bridget Gibbons, late of the City of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his office, No. 24 White Memorial Building, Syracuse, in the County of Onondaga, New York, on or before the 15th day of October, 1916.

Dated this 27th day of March, A. D., 1916.

EDWARD L. MOORE,
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of Bridget Gibbons, deceased.

WILLIAM H. BAMERICK,
Attorney for Executor,
24 White Memorial Bldg.,
Syracuse, N. Y.

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Sarah Hancock, late of the City of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at the law office of Claude E. Guile, 35 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 1st day of September, 1916.

Dated this 7th day of February, A. D., 1916.

Alden M. Hurd,
Executor.

Claude E. Guile,
Attorney for Executor,
35 South 1st st., Fulton, N. Y.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Clark Butts, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his law office No. 59 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 15th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 29th day of May, A. D., 1916.

JAMES R. SOMERS,
Attorney for Administrator

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

This filmy princess slip of glove silk bears repetition in batiste, lawn or some of the fabrics within the income of the average miss. It is trimmed with embroidery and finished with a deep lace ruffle. The slip is to be slipped on over the head and fastened in strap effect over the shoulders. Medium size requires 3 yards 36-inch material.

Pictorial Review Slip No. 6600. Sizes, 10 to 18 years; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

MIDWEEK MENU.

WEDNESDAY—BREAKFAST.
Oranges. Cooked Cereal.
Minced Beef on Toast.
Parker House Rolls.
Jam or Marmalade.
Coffee or Cocoa.
LUNCHEON.
Puree of Dried Peas.
Smoked Tongue. Potato Cakes.
Graham Muffins.
Stewed Dried Apricots.
Milk, Tea or Cocoa.
DINNER.
Tomato Soup.
Baked Weakfish a la Creole.
Potato Puffs.
Lettuce, Watercress and Radish Salad. String Beans.
Strawberry Dainty.
Coffee.

Luncheon Dishes.

IRISH STEW.—Any kind of meat will answer, but the best is neck of mutton. Peel and slice two pounds of potatoes and lay half of them at the bottom of a stewpan. Spread over them a pound of sliced onions and a tomato or two. Cut the meat into pieces, season it with salt and pepper and a sprinkle of cayenne. Cover with the other potatoes and onions, add nearly a pint of water, cover tightly and simmer gently without boiling for three hours.

Vegetable Stew.—Three good sized carrots, three turnips, three onions, three potatoes to make a vegetable stew for three persons. Use an earthenware saucepan if possible, put in four ounces of butter, and when melted add vegetables sliced. Stir them in the butter on the fire for about three minutes, then add a gill of water, pepper and salt. Cover closely and allow to simmer gently for an hour.

Meat Pie.—Stew any kind of cooked meat until tender, thicken and season the liquor to taste, add onions, tomatoes, mushrooms or any flavor preferred. Put into a deep baking dish and cover with mashed potato or with a flaky crust. Make an incision for the steam to escape and bake until the crust is done.

Mock Oyster Stew.—Freshen well a cupful of shredded salt fish. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, stir in a spoonful of flour, add two cupfuls of milk and cook five minutes; then put in the fish and a dozen and a half of good sized oyster crackers split. Season with pepper.

Asparagus Omelet.—Use the leftover asparagus for this omelet. Break three eggs in dish and beat with fork until well mixed, then pour in a hot omelet pan in which three tablespoonfuls of melted butter are beginning to brown. When partly set sprinkle over with cold asparagus which has been [illegible] in half inch pieces. Fold over and [illegible] turn on hot platter. Garnish with [illegible] of asparagus and serve.

Anna Thompson.

For Evening Wear at Beach and Mountain Hotels

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York.

LUXURY is the word for this ermine stole, so dainty for wear with an evening frock this summer. Without the tails the stole is seventy-two inches long by eight and one-half wide. It is lined with white satin. The scarf also comes in Scotch moleskin and Hudson seal, if preferred.

• • •

For board walk wear with smart, snow white summer tailleurs, the fashionable shoe dealer recommends very high, buttoned boots of washable kid—high heeled, of course. These boots fit foot and ankle with exquisite daintiness, as any boot should that will be worn on a breezy board walk where skirts will inevitably be whisked about. There are also very good looking white canvas buttoned boots, tall enough to meet the edge of very short skirts and with white kid foxing and heels in the preferred Louis XV. style.

• • •

Many of the new topcoats are finished at the neck with a wide scarf that ties gracefully into a large, soft bow.

ANNA MAY.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

Attractive In Japanese Silk

A Japanese silk tailleur in natural color trimmed with collar of dark brown. The back of the jacket may be made with or without tab extensions.

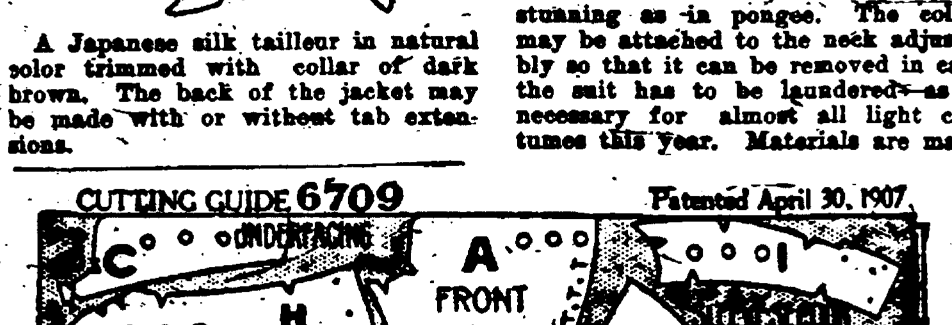
silk, pongee or any of the silks that launder satisfactorily may be used for the development of this particular model. Many of the latest silks are very wide coming in the same widths of cloth and serge. In medium size this design requires 4½ yards 54-inch material.

If the silk is in natural color, brown faille or velvet is suggested for the collar. The back may be made with or without the tab extensions. Cutting off the pattern ⅜ inch below small "o" perforations will eliminate the extension.

Three sections of the pattern are laid directly on the lengthwise fold of the material, the back, the back peplum and the collar. If faille or velvet be used for the collar place on material in the same way as illustrated in the guide. The section marked "F" is for the front of the peplum, and is laid on a lengthwise thread of material. Along the upper row the home dressmaker finds the sleeve section, with underfacing above, then the front—to the right of the sleeve—and, finally, the undersleeve. All of these are laid on a lengthwise thread of the silk.

Many home dressmakers hesitate to make a coat because of the danger of spoiling the lines. No mistake can be made, however, if the cutting guide is studied carefully beforehand and followed exactly. The suit is one of the most attractive of the simple designs. In white serge trimmed with black, it is equally as stunning as in pongee. The collar may be attached to the neck adjustably so that it can be removed in case the suit has to be laundered—as is necessary for almost all light costumes this year. Materials are made

CUTTING GUIDE 6709 Patented April 30, 1907.



FOLD OF 54 INCH MATERIAL WITH NAP.

The passing of spring has not made so that they wash well, however, so the tailleur frock unseasonable, for that the delicate colorings offer few it is still in great demand. Japanese drawbacks on tubbable grounds.

Pictorial Review Jacket No. 6709. Sizes, 34 to 44 inches bust. Price, 15 cents. Skirt No. 6715. Sizes, 22 to 36 inches waist. Price, 15 cents.

BUNDY'S CROSSING.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer King, of Minetto, spent Sunday with their [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. Lottie Rickert.

* * *

Claude Echard has bought a [illegible] auto.

* * *

Mrs. Howard Simons, of Scriba, spent one day of last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Echard.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Wells are rejoicing over the arrival of a [illegible] pound boy, named [illegible] Emerson, born June 22.

* * *

Mrs. [illegible] Burch [illegible] her niece and nephew [illegible].

* * *

Mrs. [illegible] Hill and [illegible] children, [illegible] Minetto, Mrs. [illegible] Stacy [illegible] children, [illegible] Mrs. [illegible] and three children, of [illegible] and Cecil Hill, of Fulton [illegible] Mrs. Byron Wells' last [illegible] their mother, Mrs. Margaret Hill.

* * *

Mr. Duane Wells spent a few days of last week with friends in Oneida county.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Allen Dewey are receiving congratulations over the arrival of a baby boy, born Sunday.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Echard entertained on Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Simons, Mr. and Mrs. Masil Simons, of Scriba; Mr. and Mrs. William Storms, Mr. and Mrs. William Brennan, Mr. and Mrs. John Mahanna, Mr. and Mrs. Harper, of Fulton, and Mr. and Mrs. Otto Scholtz, of this place.

Always keep Hanford's Balsam in your stable for accidents.—Adv.

Stiff Neck Quickly Cured.

A stiff neck is usually caused by rheumatism in the muscles of the neck. It comes on suddenly and is often mistaken for a sprain. It is quickly cured by applying Chamberlain's Liniment. Mrs. Conrad Oliver, of Little Falls, N. Y., writes: "About three years ago my husband sprained his neck. We had a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment in the house and applied it. It afforded quick relief, and after using it a few times all of the lameness and stiffness in his neck and shoulders had entirely disappeared."

For Sale by all Dealers.

BERNHARD'S BAY.

[illegible], of [illegible], was [illegible] of Mrs. Mary Beach [illegible].

* * *

[illegible], of [illegible], spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Rhoda Scott.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allen, Fred Kingsley and Miss Edith Marsden, of Syracuse, are guests of Mrs. L. P. Marsden.

* * *

Miss Sophia Crandall spent Sunday at The Chestnuts.

* * *

Mrs. Vera [illegible] has returned from Pamlett, Vt.

* * *

Mrs. Isabelle Adle, of Fulton, was a guest of her mother, Mrs. Grace Deeley, last week.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Winn, of Oneida, spent Sunday at Arthur Webb's

* * *

Mrs. Mary Rickaby, of New York, is visiting her cousin, Mrs. E. Earl Dickinson.

* * *

Mrs. John Coady is improving in health.

* * *

Mrs. Jennie Cook, of Oswego, is spending some time with her sister, Mrs. A. D. Crandle, of the Chestnuts.

* * *

Mrs. Walter Richie, of West Vienna, was the guest Tuesday at the home of Miss Mary Beach.

* * *

Clayton Winn, Wednesday, was in Waterloo.

* * *

Miss Helen Kuttz, who has been spending the winter with her aunt, Mrs. Leon Fuller, returned to Addison, N. Y., last Friday.

* * *

Miss Mildred Marsden returned home from Syracuse Tuesday.

For fouls use Hanford's Balsam.—Adv.

They stay fresh in the metal pails

CHICHESTER S PILLS
DIAMOND BRAND
Beware of Counterfeits. Refuse all Substitutes.
LADIES! Ask your Druggist for CHI-CHES-TER S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS in RED and GOLD metallic boxes, sealed with Blue Ribbon. TAKE NO OTHER. Buy of your Druggist and ask for CHI-CHES-TER S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS, for twenty-five years regarded as Best, Safest, Always Reliable.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS
TIME TRIED EVERYWHERE WORTH TESTED

"Onyx" Hosiery
You Get GOOD Value at ANY Price—Silk; Lisle or Cotton 25c to $5.00 per pair
Emery-Beers Company, Inc.
WHOLESALE 153-161 EAST 24th ST. NEW YORK
For Sale by C. A. BECKWITH, Shoes
FULTON, N. Y.

A Skin Like Velvet smooth, clear, free of wrinkles
Use the exquisitely fragrant cream of the beauty flower of India and be complimented on your complexion. Your dealer has Elcaya or will get it.
CRÊME ELCAYA

LADIES

We have on display in our South window a large number of Sets of

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

while they last we will sell them at

70 Cents the Set

The wholesale price is more than that, but we are going to dispose of them at a great sacrifice.

COME EARLY IF YOU WISH TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER

They were bought by the former publishers for premiums, but we are giving no premiums with the

FULTON EVENING TIMES

CLASS PLAY WAS INDEED GOOD

Cast Showed Little Nervousness and Much of the Acting Was of Professional Order.

Last evening was devoted to the graduating class of Fulton High School and was enjoyed by a large audience of friends and relatives. The exercises were held in the Quirk Theatre.

Too much praise cannot be given the High School orchestra, under the leadership of Mrs. L. R. Owens, for the difficult selections were rendered in a very efficient manner.

The first part of the program consisted of the "Class Prophecy", given in a very acceptable manner by Miss Katherine Sullivan, and the "Prophecy on the Prophet" was read by Miss Maizie Gorman.

Miss Florence Follan pleased the class and audience by the "Class Will." The first part of the program then ended with the codicil to the Will by Miss Mary G. Weston.

The second part of the program consisted of a three act play entitled, "What Happened to Jones." If Augustus Thomas, Austin Waly or other stage critics had been present, there are some of the students whom they would not have considered as amateurs. Due praise and credit must be given Mrs. Kesler for the achievements obtained from her coaching.

The first act opened with the scene of a living room in the home of Professor Ebeneezer Goodly, a sprightly old gentleman, who was very well portrayed by Joseph Mangeot. His wife, Mrs. Ebeneezer Goodly was depicted by Mary Carroll, who showed natural stage ability throughout the entire play. Their daughters Marjorie and Minerva were well acted by Lena Kaplan and Maizie Gorman.

The acting of Mae Roach as Mrs. Goodly's maid was well received as was the part of Richard Heatherly, by Herman Parsons. The part of Cissy, Ebeneezer's Ward, was acted very acceptably by Miss Marion Lake, while Alvina Starlight, an old maid continually longing for her sweetheart, was very well given by Merle Bartlett. In regard to the leading character Jones, a hymn book drummer, his part was portrayed by Wendell Carrier in a way the leading part would be expected to be given. Joseph Johnston as the Bishop of Ballaret was one of the most laughable characters in the play and just credit should be given him in the manner with which it was interpreted, as to Herman Robillard, Fred Johnston and Frederick King, although in supernumerary parts, they gave them much better than the usual amateurs.

The play centered around Jones, a drummer, who travelled for a hymn book house and who was forever getting into mixups by his trying to impersonate a Bishop, the brother of Professor Goodly, in order to evade the police, who were after him for attending a prize fight, at which a mob fight was started by Professor Goodly, who had been persuaded to attend by his son-in-law Richard Heatherly. Finally the mistakes were all untangled and the "Happenings of Jones ended happily." Many laughs and much applause were given to the scenes of discomfiture of Professor Goodly, the amazement of the Bishop and the quick wit of Jones.

PARKS—HOLLIDAY

Miss Clara Holliday, of No. 306 West First street, and Harry L. Parks, of Seneca street, were married today at the parsonage of the church of the Immaculate Conception, Rev. John L. Lindsman officiating.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Blanche Holliday. The groom's brother, Ovid Parks, of Syracuse, acted as best man.

A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride in West First street. After spending their honeymoon at Niagara Falls and Buffalo, Mr. and Mrs. Parks will make their home in West First street.

DIX—HUGHES.

Justin E. Dix, of South Second street and Mrs. Dolly M. Hughes, of Oakland, Cal., were married yesterday at Eastwood. They will reside in this city.

WELL CHILDREN ARE ACTIVE

If your child is dull, pale, fretful and wants to lie around, the chances are it is suffering from worms. Kickapoo Worm Killer, a pleasant candy confection, liked by all children is what your child needs. You only give one-half to one lozenge at a time and you get immediate results. Every mother should have a box on hand. 25c. at all druggists.

HARRY FRANCIS LEFT FOR THE FRONT ON TIME

Mrs. H. E. Francis, whose husband is now with the Third Regiment Co. D., explained to an Evening Times reporter this morning the circumstances by which it was made to appear that Mr. Francis had deserted his company before its departure from Oswego.

Mr. Francis was an employe of the McIntyre Home Laundry up to the time of his departure and worked there Saturday night in order to earn and leave as much money as possible with his family. Early Sunday morning, or about ten o'clock, he left his home for Oswego to join the colors. He had secured permission from the officers of the company to return home and serve as long as possible at the place of his employment. Mrs. Francis disdains the suggestion that her husband ever thought of deserting, as he was at all times eager to leave for the front.

OLD HOME WEEK PROGRAM IN FULL

Sunday, July 2nd:

Morning 10:30, services in all churches, presided over by ministers formerly stationed in Fulton.

Afternoon 2:00, Monster union religious service in tabernacle; large community chorus to sing. Priests and ministers of bygone days to preach. Fultonian old timers will march in a body to these services.

Monday, July 3rd—Flower corso, monster parade of floats, automobiles, etc., the whole a wondrous floral spectacle. Acquaintance meeting in tabernacle. Band concert.

Tuesday, July 4th—Americanization parade at 10:30 a. m. Horse races, motorcycle races, bicycle races, old time Fourth of July field day sports on Fair ground. Parade of fraternal and civic organizations and band concerts in the afternoon; evening, fireworks, dancing.

Wednesday, July 5th—Municipal and Industrial parade as well as portraying the story of the Pathfinder country, Fulton's vicinity and Oswego County. Oswego county is rich in historic lore and Fulton is the heart of Oswego county. Band concerts.

Thursday, July 6th—Water Pageant on Oswego river to Pathfinder Island. Parade of Home Comers.

Friday, July 7th—Farmers' Picnic. Water festival on Lake Neahtawanta. Parade of school children. Band concert.

Saturday, July 8th—The day and night we say "good bye." Band concert. "Home Sweet Home."

MISS M'CORMICK LEADS CONTEST

The first report on the Diamond Ring contest, and for the Queen of Old Home Week, is reported as follows:

Genevieve McCormick	219
Gfula Lewis	154
Rose Walsh	190
Trixie Dix	206
Rosella Nichols	127

The voting boxes may be found at the following stores:

The Onyx, Tom Barry's store, Hargrave's drug store (West Side), Stranahan's shoe store and Putnam's drug store.

One cent purchases a vote and all the proceeds will be turned over to the Chamber of Commerce to defray expenses of Old Home Week. This gives all citizens an opportunity to contribute for the cause.

The first day's voting was good in an unsolicited campaign, but heavy voting is expected today as citizens are becoming more and more interested in the contest. Anybody may enter by placing their name in the ballot boxes and the contest is open to everybody wishing to enter it.

Biliousness, Headache and Constipation.

Mrs. John E. Farrell, of East Rochester, N. Y., writes: "A few months ago I used one box of Chamberlain's Tablets and I am pleased to say they relieved me of biliousness, headache and constipation. They also improved my appetite and strengthened my digestive organs. I have been the means of many friends and neighbors using these tablets, and they all speak highly of them."

For Sale by all Dealers.

OLD HOME WEEK NOTES

One of the amusement concessions, a merry-go-round, has been placed on the state land side of the Plaza.

* * *

The grandstand is rapidly nearing completion; the frame work is already built and ready for the finishing work.

FORMAL OPENING

THE FULTON PHARMACY

FORMERLY KNOWN AS THE WATSON STORE

THURSDAY, FRIDAY AND SATURDAY

June 29th and 30th and July 1st

FREE SOUVENIRS FOR EVERYBODY

MUSIC AFTERNOONS AND EVENINGS

FREE! To the first 400 ladies visiting our store on Opening Days a trial size box of Boston's Delicious Utopian Chocolates.

FREE! With any 50c purchase in the Toilet Department a gold finish vanity case, hand bag size, with mirror and puff.

Talcum Powder Sale

Three Delightful Odors
Rose—Trailing Arbutus
Special at 12 cents Can

Perfume Sale

Six Choice Odors of Moorland Perfumes—Wistaria Sweet Pea, Spring Dream, Jockey Club, Violet and Lilac. Regular 50c an ounce.
Special at 39c Ounce

FREE TO THE CHILDREN Heavy Rubber Bouncer Ball with 36-inch return string. Every youngster will want one. These souvenirs can be given ONLY to children accompanied by parents.

Special A Sample Assortment of MIRRORS Black handles and backs, English bevel glass. One-fourth off the regular price.

Free A GLASS TOOTH-BRUSH HOLDER WITH METAL TOP with every purchase of a tooth brush.

Special ALL ROLL FILMS DEVELOPED FREE IF BROUGHT TO OUR STORE DURING OPENING DAYS.

Free With any purchase in the Soap Department a guest room cake of sweetly scented or medicated skin soap.

CIGAR SPECIALS

5 TEN-CENT CIGARS For 25 Cents
2 Humanas
2 Official Seal
1 Optimate

2 5-cent Cigars and 3 10-Cent Cigars For 25c
1 Cinco, 1 Black and White, 1 La Preferencia, 1 Humana, 1 La Marca.

Quality Soda

Finest quality ICE CREAM AND PURE FRUITS AND SYRUPS make our Perfect Soda

We cordially invite you to visit our store and become acquainted with our modern drug store methods, our high quality merchandise and our efficient service.

The Fulton Pharmacy

37 South First Street Free Quick Delivery Telephone 128

Fulton Keynotes

Mr. Allen Foster, formerly of this city, but now of New York, has arrived in town and is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Langdon C. Foster.

* * *

A ten pound girl was born yesterday, to Officer and Mrs. Leo Brown. The officer received many congratulations, around the city hall this morning, with a broad smile.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. Hubbard will leave tomorrow for a vacation in Canada.

* * *

The P. K. E. Club will give a dance in Davis' Hall tonight. This is the annual commencement event and the last to occur until after Old Home Week, when the class dinner will be held, the place to be announced later.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Marvin, of East Broadway, announce the birth of a son, Thomas Crockett, which occurred this morning.

* * *

The Daughters of Liberty will hold initiation and election of officers tonight. The Council will be called to order at 7:30 instead of the usual hour.

* * *

The Fulton High School Alumni Association will meet in the assembly room of the High School at 7:30 o'clock Thursday evening, to make plans for a reorganization of the last association.

* * *

Mrs. Mary Johnson Hall, of Canandaigua is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Howe.

* * *

A meeting of the Game and Gun Club has been called for tonight, at the Fulton House. Many important matters are to be decided.

* * *

The commencement exercises of the Fulton High School will be held at the First M. E. Church tonight. Prof. W. K. Wickes, of Syracuse, will give the address.

* * *

There will be a special rehearsal of the Elks' Band tomorrow evening.

* * *

F. W. Richardson, local agent for the Ontario and Western R. R., was today granted permission by the Common Council to erect a freight house in North First street.

* * *

The Board of Health will meet Friday evening.

"BUDS OF PROMISE" WILL MEET FRIDAY

The first business meeting of the Buds of Promise Class of the Congregational Sunday School, since the opening of the tabernacle meeting, will be held Friday evening, June 30 at 7:30, at the home of Miss Mildred Franklin. All members of class are urged to be present.

RECREANT DAUGHTER IS SOUGHT BY FATHER

Minnie Kliman, fifteen, who last winter was found by her father Harry Kliman, in the Chicago Jewish orphanage after a separation since infancy and brought back to Syracuse, has run away.

Miss Kliman wrote a letter to Mayor Mitchel, of New York, asking him to find her father. The mayor's heart was touched by the missive and he inserted advertisements in Yiddish papers there. Kliman saw the notice, went to Chicago and brought her home.

Today he went to newspaper offices and inserted a notice that Minnie had left his home and saying he would not be responsible for her debts. He says that she did not stay long with him, but went with her aunt, Mrs. Simon Rudolph, but got along no better there. He says the trouble arose when he tried to prevent her from staying out nights. Two days later she disappeared.

WILL MY CHILD TAKE DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY?

This best answer is Dr. King's New Discovery itself. Its a pleasant sweet syrup, easy to take. It contains the medicines which years of experience have proven best for Coughs and Colds. Those who have used Dr. King's New Dicovery longest are its best friends. Besides every bottle is guaranteed. If you don't get satisfaction you get your money back. Buy a bottle, use as directed. Keep what is left for Cough and Cold insurance.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

To Rent—8 room house, modern improvements; Fourth and Oneida; also living or office rooms in Waldhorn block. Inquire S. Waldhorn. 471

For Sale—Five Jersey Cows, all giving milk; also one all purpose mare, sound. R. C. McPherson, 1 mile South of Vermillion. 472c

Rooms To Rent—Two apartments over Geisler's store. Apply Lewis' Cigar Store. tf

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

For Sale—Presto tank for motorcycle. 209 West First Street., N. 471

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

For Sale—Seed potatoes. 834 Oneida street. 472c

Thought It Was a Joke.

The Colonel—And you actually assert that you want to marry my daughter? Fusby—Y-yes. The Colonel (staring at him unpleasantly)—You know I am English. Fusby—Y-yes, sir. The Colonel—Well, it's going to take me several years to see the point of your little joke. Good day to you.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

olume 2, No. 472. THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1916 Price, One Cent

VAR CLOUDS LIGHTENED BY RELEASE OF AMERICAN PRISONERS IN MEXICO

Pan-American Police Might Avert Trouble

(By United Press)

Washington—A Pan-American police force, composed of detachments of the army of the United States, Argentine, Brazil, Chili, and possibly other Latin-American republics to resort to measures that will not result in crushing Mexico. This is the suggestion brought to the attention of the Administration and South American officials fro mcertain quarters, which it is believed will eventually lead to the serious consideration of the project.

One Lucky Stone Sold Proved to be a Pebble

Syracuse—Estelle Lautenslager, of Brooklyn, a short time ago purchased from E. Connette Cooley alias Henry Joy an "Egyptian lucky stone" guaranteed to bring health, wealth, husband and happiness. The stone failed to work, in fact she says it was just a mere pebble. So she went to the post office authorities started and investigation and as a result Cooley, was haled before Justice George W. Ray in Federal court charged with using the mails with intent to defraud.

He read the indictments against him, told the judge he had nothing to say and his case was put over until this afternoon when his lawyer will make a plea.

Mr. Cooley, according to the indictment had thought himself competent to read the future and deliver good fortune "in loveaffairs, domestic relations and financial transactions." To such of his patrons and correspondents as purchased for a small price the "celebrated Egyptian lucky stones," of which he said he was the sole agent and distributor. In the circulars which he sent out and which were exceedingly voluminous documents he said he had not had space enough to explain the mysteries and beauties of "these wonderful little gems," but that the purchaser would feel their effects as soon as they got them.

In addition to being the purveyor of the "lucky stones" Mr. Cooley said he was a solar biologist and advertised in various newspapers he would give a reading of life and character for the small sum of ten cents together with date of birth, lock of hair and other characteristics. When the "reading" was mailed the solar biologist sent with it a letter saying that of course he could not give a complete reading for ten cents, but that for receipt of a dollar he would trace the life, characteristics, fortunate and unfortunate periods of the person benefited from the cradle to the grave.

TEXAS TOWNS PREPARE TO WELCOME N. Y. GUARDS

(By United Press)

Brownsville, Texas—The New York National Guard will be stationed at McCallen; Pharr and Mission, Texas, immediately on their arrival near the border. Such announcement was made today by General James Parker, U. S. A., on his return from an inspection trip over various camp sites. It was said McCallen would probably be made headquarters for the New York militia. Citizens of the three cities have raised $2,000 to procure camp sites for the soldiers.

* * *

Terra Haute, Ind.—Six hundred members of the 71st New York Regiment, on their way to the border, were held up here nearly an hour today when a freight train sideswiped a troop train and knocked the latter from the tracks. No one is reported injured.

War Strength of Guard Should be 237,521 Men

Under President Wilson's call for mobilization of the militia the various States are expected to furnish a minimum of not less than 129,836 officers and men, representing the aggregate peace strength of all the units called into service, and a total maximum strength of 237,521, which represents the number of men these units would have when recruited up to full war strength. These are in addition to the minimum of 5,617 and maximum of 10,493 for the National Guardsmen of Arizona, New Mexico and Texas.

Under the President's call no unit is to be accepted until it has a specified minimum or peace strength, and all units called are, if possible, to be recruited up to maximum, or war strength. The following table shows the peace and war strength, officers and men, of organized militia, including attached sanitary troops, as fixed by the War Department. and on the basis of which the movement and equipment of the National Guard units is being handled:

	Peace	War
Infantry Division	12,820	22,665
Infantry brigade	2,975	5,749
Infantry regiment	990	1,915
Infantry battalion	277	579
Cavalry regiment	991	1,306
Cavalry squadron	310	416
Cavalry troop	68	103
Artillery regiment	938	1,192
Artillery battalion	432	550
Artillery battery	138	175
Pioneer battalion engineers	217	514
Company of engineers	68	166
Signal Company	82	176
Ambulance Company	48	84
Field Hospital	38	73

Army Officers Want Gen. Carranza to Show Some Real Sincerity

(By United Press)

San Antonio, Texas—General Trevino's release of the American cavalrymen captured in the Carrizal fighting is expected to have no effect on troop movements to the border. Army officials today felt that while an actual clash has been averted temporarily, the situation between the United States and Mexico will continue to be strained until General Carranza definitely declares his attitude toward American troops in Mexico.

The War Department has been asked by General Funston to expedite the transfer of the Regular Army recruits to eastern recruiting stations.

PRESIDENT HAS POWER TO DRAFT MILITIA MEN

(By United Press)

Washington—Having eliminated all petitions for the relief of National Guard dependents, the Senate today adopted a resolution empowering the President to draft the militia into Federal service.

* * *

Washington—In 67 seconds the Senate today passed a twenty-six million dollar Urgency Deficiency Bill for the army and navy expansion. The House passed the measure yesterday after spending practically all day on it.

Casement Guilty, Says Jury in King's Court

(By United Press)

London—Sir Roger Casement was this afternoon found guilty of high treason in connection with the Irish rebellion and his attitude toward inducing Irish prisoners in Germany to desert the British colors.

The jury deliberated less than one hour. The crime is punishable by death. The sentence was pronounced immediately.

Daniel Biley, Casement's soldier confederate, who confessed to the details of the Irish rebellion and was discharged from custody, was sentenced before Chief Justice Reading directed a verdict of not guilty.

New Mexico Guards First to Cross Border

(By United Press)

Columbus, N. M.—The use of the New Mexico National Guard was made today to escort the cavalry horses out of possible danger. This was the first time that any militiamen have crossed the border into Mexico.

* * *

Columbus, N. M.—Reports that large Carranzista forces were concentrating at Guzman in a position to cut the American lines of communication resulted in several motor truck loads of New Mexican militiamen being sent into Mexico after the horses.

* * *

El Paso, Texas—El Paso made hasty preparations to welcome the twenty-four negro cavalrymen captured at Carrizal with a noisy demonstration when they crossed the international bridge at Juarez.

WASHINGTON BELIEVES WAR DANGER OVER

(By United Press)

Washington—Danger of immediate hostilities have been averted by the release of the prisoners at Chihuahua City by the Mexicans. However, there remains much to be done by the people on both sides of the border.

Last Minute News

Paris—French troops took the offensive in the Champagne region last night, and after cleaning out the German's first line of trenches west of Lemesnil penetrated the enemy's second line, blowing up several shelters, the War Office announced today.

* * *

Petrograd—Russian troops captured 221 Austro-German officers and 10,285 men in yesterday's fighting, it was offically announced this afternoon. The number of prisoners taken since the Russian offensive began to date is more than 200,000.

* * *

New York—Captain Hans Ruser, of the interned North German Lloyd liner, Fatherland, anchored at Hoboken, today said he had received a message from his company's agent in Baltimore, saying that the German undersea boat U-137 had arrived in that port.

* * *

Baltimore—Officials of the North German Lloyd Steamship Company denied today that they had an knowledge of any German submarine landing here. They just smiled when they learned of Captain Hans Ruser's statement.

* * *

Washington—President Wilson left for Philadelphia at 12:40 this afternoon, to deliver an address to the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at 4:30 this afternoon in Independence Square.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily except Sunday at the [illegible] Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1916.

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Ogdensburg News:

Yesterday our farmer friends were riding about the country in their touring cars inspecting blue-blooded herds of cattle on various farms and looking over field of clover and alfalfa. Guess there is more real merit than hot air in this "back to the farm" advice we run on to so frequently. The "hayseed" day is so far gone that even barn-storming comedy companies have cut the Rube acts from their programs.

* * *

Detroit Journal;

David Lloyd George, who is a tower of strength to his countrymen in their stress, exemplifies his broad mental scope when he pays homage to the French in these generous words: "No nation has reached the height of moral grandeur of France during the war. I set her as England's constant model. At the name of Verdun I bow before such proofs of superhuman courage."

And this is decadent France, the France who Burke said was "the natural enemy of England," the France who, because of her unparalleled gift to the human race, the French Revolution, was stigmatized as evil by the exploiters of every succeeding generation throughout the world; the France who, because of her exquisite prose, her penetrating logic and her splendid artistry, was anathema to the puritan and the conventional!

From a purely barbaric point of view any well-equipped student of history must have known that the French were fine fighting material, and capable of strange outbursts of national ambition, whether under Bonaparte, who laid Europe at his feet as a bloody butcher, or under Louis Napoleon, who cried, "On to Berlin," and got as far as Sedan.

* * *

The Utica Observer:

A great many people are talking about "the danger of Japan uniting with Mexico" just at this particular time; while others are busy retailing the yarn that German propagandists have been busy with Carranza and that he has been assured of assistance from that source.

They are nonsensical ideas, Japan has no desire or intention of attempting to secure a foothold upon this continent. Japan is a wise nation; its diplomats are observing and the home government is as well informed about foreign conditions as is any country on earth. Japan, if it has designs upon securing a foothold here would very much prefer to fight her own way than to take Mexico upon her back and attempt to carry it along. Japan knows as well as we do, and perhaps a great deal better, that it would be difficult enough to cope with the United States alone without adding the burden of Mexico to the effort. No dependence whatever could be placed upon the continued assistance of the Mexican forces, and at the most critical moment of a contest. Japan might discover that she had also to deal with the revolution, revolt, desertion or mutiny of her ally.

Nor need it be feared that Japan will engage in any quarrel with the United States while hostilities continue abroad. She is engaged in assisting her allies, and all her energies have been bent toward giving Russia such assistance as she needs in providing shell and ammunition. Japan will stay by till the end, and if necessary will go into the fray in person.

There will be no war between this country and Japan unless we are unwise enough to provoke one. The constant insults of some of the coast States, notably California, may bring on war between the two countries, but it will be our own quarrel and may be avoided by such fairness and decency in treatment as might be expected from one nation toward another.

As for Germany inciting Carranza to resistance and war with the United States, there seems to be little excuse for any such course. What Germany would gain by such an act is incomprehensible. It is said that war might prevent supplies of fuel oil from the Tampico district reaching England and France, and that thus Germany would be advantaged. The Mexicn oil territory is upon the coast and it would be the very easiest problem one can imagine to protect it from destruction or interference. The property is largely owned by English companies, and they can protect it without difficulty if the occasion arises. What Germany wants now is the friendship and assistance of countries that can send her supplies—not to hobble herself up with any more bankrupt concerns which she must finance or assist.

As for American citizens of German descent doing anything to stir up resentment and trouble for the United States in Mexico, it seems incomprehensible and utterly foolish. Their sympathies with and love for their own country takes them a good distance, but not as far as that. They would have nothing whatever to gain, but everything to lose through any such proceedings.

However, this is a silly time of year. There has been a good deal of rain this spring, and some of us may have gotten water on the brain.

* * *

New York Times:

Impatience with man's progress in socialness and a passion to perfect him suddenly are beautiful and important emotions, but both beauty and importance are relative. The world cannot help being a practical place. That is the grief of socialism. To attack nationalism, to denounce the flag that is its symbol and to preach humanity in place of loyalty, is a kind of moral and intellectual luxury the enjoyment of which in normal conditions is under no restraint.

But when a people require all their resources of loyalty and group co-operation to save the few imperfect things they are sure of, values to which they are attached by all the pains of experience, it will go hard with those who, being dissatisfied with the interior arrangements of the house, propose to let it burn. It is the only house there is. Hence the low estate of internationalism, syndicalism, and other forms of group disloyalty.

Socialists all over the world are aghast at the collapse of their creed under the stress of mass emotion.

CATHOLIC SOLDIERS MAY EAT MEAT ON FRIDAYS

Roman Catholic soldiers with the National Guard and in the regular army will be allowed to eat meat on Fridays and holidays. Announcement to this affect has been made by Cardinal Gibbons at Baltimore.

The question was put to the church officials by several members of the guard who were uncertain if the ban against meat one day of the week followed them to camp. The Chancellor of the diocese there announced that no special dispensation was necessary, as it was not in the power of the men to procure a substitute for the meat that was a part of the soldier's rations.

KEPT HANDS CLEAN AND FED THE PIGS

Bellefontaine, O.—Because he kept his face and hands clean, helped to milk the cows, feed the hogs; carried in the coal and wood and did numerous other things to show that he is a good boy to have around the house, Robert A. Cox, of Richland township, Logan county, was declared winner in the Home Credits contest of 600 pupils, staged by the county board of education.

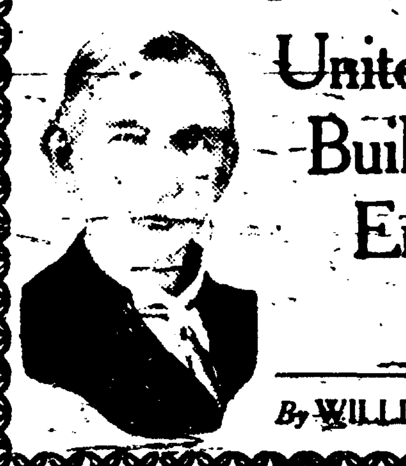
He received a total of 9,776 credit marks. His brother was close on his trail with 9,667 credits.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Days You'll Never Forget

THE SENTENCE

United States Should Build a Navy Strong Enough to Fight Any Nation



By WILLIAM J. STONE, Senator From Missouri

I THINK we could safely rely on a regular army of between one hundred thousand and one hundred and fifty thousand men, supplemented by the National guard and by our millions of patriotic people in civil life.

To my thinking there is not one chance in thousands that we will ever be called upon to defend ourselves against an invading army of any magnitude or to send an army of invasion of great size into any foreign land. I cannot believe that any benefit would come to this country FROM A GREAT STANDING ARMY THAT WOULD COMPENSATE FOR THE BURDEN OF ITS MAINTENANCE.

My belief is that if ever we are attacked by a foreign power strong enough to make the onslaught perilous it will come from the sea, not from the land; hence I am an ardent advocate, always have been, of the most complete and thorough system of coast defenses. Everything that military and naval science can devise to make our coasts impregnable I am for. Likewise and along the same line of thought I have always been and still am not only an advocate of, but, in fact, an agitator for a great navy.

I WOULD CREATE A NAVY STRONG ENOUGH NOT ONLY TO RESIST ASSAULT, BUT STRONG ENOUGH, IF NEED SHOULD ARISE FOR IT, TO TAKE THE OFFENSIVE; STRONG ENOUGH TO PROTECT AMERICAN HONOR AND AMERICAN INTERESTS ANYWHERE IN THE WORLD.

PUMPKINS vs. SQUASHES

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1916, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Ebenezer Singleton was a young man of twenty-three. He was a good and industrious young man and had acquired quite a little property thus early in his career. He had just purchased a cozy house, and the next thing needed was a wife.

Sarah Jane Scott, twenty years old, was a very nice girl, very nice. She was good at needlework, housework and other kinds of work which would have made her a treasure of a wife. She and Ebenezer met one day, and they looked good to each other. From thence sprang a courtship, and there was no one who interfered or objected. Ebenezer could support a wife, and Sarah Jane could be of great help to a husband.

There was only one trait in the character in either one that could be criticised, and that was developed to each other just at the wrong time. Ebenezer had come courting, and his mind was about made up to ask Sarah Jane for her hand when the conversation happened to touch on astronomy.

"Isn't it singular how the sun moves around the earth from east to west?" queried Ebenezer just as he was ready to go home.

"But the sun does not move around the earth," mildly protested Sarah Jane. "The earth moves around the sun, and it moves from east to west because nature arranged it to, just as it did for a tree to stand on its roots."

"Did you ever watch the sun move?" asked Ebenezer, with a very sober face.

"Never, Eben, but I have watched the earth move. The sun stands as still as a great rock, while our earth moves along. Why, Eben, don't you remember the proof given in geography of the earth's moving round the sun?"

"Well, well, Sarah, you are a queer girl. The sun certainly moves, and if you have never seen it move there is something very wrong with your eyes. It moves from east to west, but I don't see why it can't just as well move from north to south."

Sarah Jane looked at Ebenezer for a long minute to see if he was joking. She found him very earnest in this belief, and it gave her an unpleasant shock. She had never found him an ignorant man in any particular, and this was ignorance of the grossest kind.

"Eben," she quietly said, "you are not wanting me to understand that the sun moves along like a man walking? You cannot believe this against the known facts. It has been hundreds of years since it was known that the earth moved around the sun."

"People may think so, but that doesn't make it so," answered Ebenezer as the light of defiance shone in his eyes. "I say the sun moves. I have seen it move. I saw it moving along not five hours ago. My eyes are good eyes. What my eyes see I am not going back on. Are you going to believe that the sun stands still just because a lot of nearsighted men claim it does so?"

"Oh, well, we won't discuss the matter any further," said Sarah Jane, realizing that it might lead to unfortunate results.

"But we will!" exclaimed Ebenezer as he set his jaw. "You believe one way and I another. Let us decide who is right."

"But how are we going to decide?" she protested in tones which betrayed vexation.

"Why, you are going to believe as I believe."

"But I can't. You won't find one in a million people who believe with you. You can keep on believing so if you will, but I can never agree with you. However, it is a matter that we need not get angry about. We have always got plenty of sunshine whether the sun stands still or moves along, and we probably always shall. We are having pleasant weather, aren't we?"

"Sarah Jane Scott," said Ebenezer as he laid his hand on the knob of the door to go out, "when you have come to believe as I believe just send me a little note to that effect, will you?"

And Ebenezer, the very good young man, but the very obstinate young man, walked out into the darkness. He never received the note referred to, and the reader will not wonder why. He expected it for a month, and when it never appeared he was more than ever determined in his belief that the sun moved right along and left everything behind it. As for Sarah Jane Scott, she was astonished, angered and humiliated, and you can't expect that the girl with such feelings is going to give up her point of view.

It wasn't necessary that either one should leave the town. Eben lived at one end of it and Sarah Jane the other, and they seldom met. When they did there was a cold nod exchanged. Several years passed away, and one day Sarah was married to a man named Peters. Before consenting to be his wife she questioned him about the sun. He readily answered that the earth moved around the sun, and the week later they were married.

When the news of her marriage reached the ears of Ebenezer he got a hustle on him, and three months later he was also married. Previous to his marriage he likewise asked the question that Sarah had asked—does the sun move around the earth or the earth move around the sun?

"I don't care a snap which way it is," was the answer Ebenezer received. "As your wife I shall agree with you."

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M. CLARKE.

Cy Cawkins Has Discovered That He Can Get a Meal Without th' Trouble of Eatin', He Goes to th' Soup Cannery an' Inhales th' Fumes.

Poets say you cannot make a rime to
"with," you know.
An' "lispin'" Sally gently wonders, "Ith that tho!"

For a champagne party in a prohibition state "mum" certainly is th' word.

Hazing Him.

"Mr. Chairman," said the new member of the literary club. "I move you, sir"—

"I rise to a point of order, Mr. Chairman," interrupted one of the other members.

"State your point of order."

"The gentleman says 'I move you.' It is not only out of order, but utterly absurd for a man of 114 pounds to talk of 'moving' a chairman who weighs 300."

"The point is well taken!" roared the presiding officer, bringing his gavel down with a resounding thud. "The gentleman will merely 'move' or take his seat!"—Chicago Tribune.

SPELLING IS EASY.

New York Official Dispels Idea Words Cannot Be Mastered.

URGES ORTHOGRAPHY STUDY.

Assistant Education Commissioner Says Three Months of Real Work Are All That is Needed to Make Any Person of Ordinary Intelligence a Fairly Good Speller.

Albany, N. Y.—"Can we learn to spell?" the state department of education asks, and an essay on the subject by Charles F. Wheelock, assistant commissioner of education, is issued by the department showing that spelling may be easily learned. The state is to have a big spelling bee Sept. 12 on the state fair grounds at Syracuse.

"In almost every community there is found a considerable number of persons who are poor spellers and who are thoroughly convinced it is impossible for them ever to learn to spell," Mr. Wheelock says.

"It is true that, while there may be now and then a person who cannot spell because of some mental defect, in the great majority of such cases persons holding the belief that they can never learn to spell are mistaken regarding their own powers. As in every other field of endeavor, the one who starts out feeling to a certainty that he is going to fail is in a fair way to have his expectations realized.

"It seems to the writer that it is time for some one to come to the defense of the poor old English language which, while it is not perfect by any means, is still not so perfectly awful and terrifying as many writers would have us believe. It is possible to paint a fearful picture by simply referring to the words supersede, exceed, etc.

"How is it possible ever to master the spelling of a language where such things are printed? When, however, we become aware of the fact that it is necessary to learn as individuals only four of these ceed words, namely, supersede, exceed, proceed, succeed, and that all the others end in cede, the whole group is mastered without serious difficulty.

"Another group that is often referred to as being beyond the capacity of the ordinary intellect is that containing ie or ei, but the backbone of the difficulty in this group is easily broken by the old rhyme (or rime if you prefer):

Write I before E except after C,
Or when sounded as A,
As in neighbor and weigh.

"The boy or girl who will thoroughly master this rime and who will then learn as an individual the words that seem to have neither rime nor reason—either, seize, counterfeit, forfeit, surfeit, sleight, weir, leisure, height, heifer—will have no further trouble with the combination ie or ei. Certainly it does not require massive intellect or extraordinary effort to master this group, which is so often used as an insuperable difficulty of English spelling.

"A large proportion of the errors of the ordinary high school pupil is made up of failure to drop the final e, of failure to double the final consonant in derivatives, and of failure to note that the adjective termination is ful not full, all of which are matters that require for their mastery no special gift of intellect, but are easily within the reach of the ordinary fourteen-year-old pupil.

"The reason for the spelling of refer, referring, reference, once thoroughly understood, will make it impossible to misspell these words thereafter. It requires only ordinary intelligence to appreciate the difference between hoping and hopping. The student who has been fortunate enough to have been well taught in Latin will find real delight in accounting for the difference between such words as emigrant and immigrant, in explaining why there are only one s and two c's in desiccate, in the reason for the double letters in biennial, centennial, Mediterranean, innuendo, innocuous and in accounting for special features of hundreds of other words. It is possible for a spelling lesson treated in this way to become almost as interesting as a story by Sherlock Holmes. The detective instinct finds here abundant opportunity for exercise.

"Of course it must be understood that after all the classification of words and the disposal of difficulties by groups there will still remain till and until, separate, syzygy, phthisis, catarrh, hemorrhage and many other like disagreeable complaints, which fortunately are for the most part infrequent and are to be dealt with only when necessary. A list of 200 or 300 of these terrors would include all that one would need to consider, and certainly it is not beyond the capacity of the fourteen-year-old pupil to master 200 or 300 hard words. Five words a day would make 100 words a month, so two or three months at this rate would clear them all up.

"If you have acquired the notion that the difficulties of spelling are insuperable get the notion out of your head at once. If you have been led to believe that you lack the particular brain cells in which are stored the proper arrangement of letters in words get rid of that notion too. You should enter at once on the job of convincing yourself that you can do it, and remember always that there is no royal road to knowledge. Persistent hard work is the only sure way to success in any field, and about three months of real work are all that is needed to make any person of ordinary intelligence a fairly good speller of English."

HOSTESSES ROBBED AS SHE FIXES HAIR

Young Girl Is Credited With New Way of Gathering Jewels in New York.

Mount Vernon, N. Y.—A young woman who has a new method of robbery is being sought by the police of this city, New Rochelle, White Plains and Yonkers. She is a very pretty girl, about twenty years old and expensively attired.

Her method of obtaining jewels, hand bags, purses and anything else of value, which has been the same in all places, is explained by Mrs. Edgar B. Davis of 134 Eleventh avenue, Mount Vernon.

While the Davis family was at luncheon the girl called at their home and introduced herself as a friend of Fred Goodell, a cousin of Mrs. Davis, who lives in Bridgeport, and said that Goodell had sent her to Mrs. Davis to wait there until he called with an automobile and they would go for a ride.

She declined an invitation to partake of the luncheon, but asked if she could go to a bedroom to dress her hair. Mrs. Davis sent her to her own room and returned to her meal. Half an hour later it was discovered the girl had fled and that Mrs. Davis had lost $250 in jewels from her bedroom.

In each place the girl represents that she is to wait for some relative of the family who is to call for her.

HORSE IS SOLE HEIR TO $42,707 LEGACY

No Other Pets Found to Enjoy Comforts Ordered In New York Woman's Will.

New York.—The appraisal of the estate of Mrs. Edith Rogers Gellatly, who died on July 17, 1913, at 34 West Fifty-seventh street, and who was the wife of John Gellatly, an insurance broker, shows that while she left the income from stocks valued at $42,707 for the care of her horses and dogs, the only animal she owned at the time of her death was a horse at White Plains, appraised at $700.

In making the bequest Mrs. Gellatly directed that upon the death of her pets the principal of the fund and the unused income should be used by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in finding homes for animals and in preventing cruelty.

Mrs. Gellatly, who was the daughter of Columbus Rogers, disposed of an individual estate of $580,704 net, and a trust fund of $702,201, set aside for her in her father's will. She gave $1,166,271 to her husband and $80,926 to her sister, Ella A. Rogers.

HELD UP BY BEAR.

Cub Refused to Move Until Auto Went at Top Speed.

Ogdensburg, N. Y.—David Barber, a traveling salesman, was held up recently by a cub bear near Loon lake while driving from Malone to Saranac Lake. Barber thought the bear was a dog. The animal sat in the middle of the road and refused to move out of the path of the automobile.

Mr. Barber alighted from his car to see what was the matter with the animal. He approached close enough to see that it was a bear and then reversed his direction. He hastily jumped into his car and speeded up the engine, the noise of which so disturbed the bear that it ambled off into the bushes. "I wasn't afraid of the bear, but I didn't want any extended interviews with Mother Bear," said Barber.

MONEY MACHINE FAILS.

It Would Not Work After $5,000 Had Been Paid For It.

Peoria, Ill.—Isaac Deutsch and Myer Katz of West Frankfort, Ill., near here, are facing trial on a charge of operating a confidence game brought by Anton Sorchych of Depue, Ill., who claims Deutsch and Katz sold him a machine to make $20 bills, he paying them $5,000 for the outfit.

According to Sorchych, the machine was to be operated by placing a $20 bill in an aperture and turning a crank. Scores of duplicate certificates came forth. Three thousand were "made" in two weeks. Armed with a shotgun, he is said to have guarded his machine for three days after the men left. He then discovered the device would not work without more bills and brought suit.

BEES STING WOMAN TO DEATH

Attacked While Taking Honey, She Is Killed Before Aid Can Come.

Ravenna, O.—While trying to take honey from a beehive, Mrs. Elizabeth Kline of Rootstown was stung to death. She went to the hive without the customary protection of gloves and a veil and began lifting the boxes of honey from the hive.

The bees attacked her and before she could escape she was stung fatally on the face, neck and hands.

Rat Carries Away Glasses.

Evansville, Ind.—John Stark, a merchant, struck at a rat in his stable, and his glasses fell in such a position that they formed a yoke in the path of the rat, into which it ran. The glasses stuck and the rat escaped into a hole, carrying Stark's favorite lenses. Stark dug into the hole, but found no trace of his glasses and is convinced they still are being carried by the rat.

Says West Coast Defense Extends Only to Utah

By John Bartram Kelley
(Written for the United Press)

Portland, Ore.—From Montana to the Pacific Ocean there has arisen during recent months a demand, persistent and serious, that the mouth of the greatest river on the Pacific Coast of America, the entrance to the 250,000 square miles of American territory, known as the Columbia Basin and the Inland Empire, receive governmental recognition by the establishment there of a naval base of the first class, with adequate fortifications to protect this investment.

The acorn from which this mighty oak of sentiment has grown is known as the Columbia Naval Committee.

In January F. C. Harley and Wallace R. Struble started the movement in Astoria.

The necessity for the naval base was an easy matter to prove. The Pacific Coast is so helpless at this moment that our military experts say that in case of an invasion the first stand American troops could make would be in the Bear River Valley in Utah. That means the evacuation of the Pacific Northwest.

Our naval base at Bremerton is entirely unprotected from a flank or rear attack so long as there is no adequate defense at the mouth of the Columbia. Furthermore it is located 132 miles from the ocean and its entrance is dominated by territory of the greatest sea power in the world.

Strategically, the mouth of the Columbia is the key to the Northwest. From it to Alaska is open American roadstead and the shortest route.

It is the nearest point to Yokahoma.

It is the entrance to the wheat belt, to three fourths of our transcontinental lines, to a 500 mile navigable waterway, and to the only grade route to the Northwest.

These are arguments which the residents of the basin considered before making their demands.

Commercial bodies of Eugene, Salem, Portland and Astoria have endorsed the movement. In March the [illegible] uniting with the naval base committee, held a preparedness convention in which five states were represented. This convention was held at the suggestion of P. N. Bernard, of Kalispell, Mont.

Six hundred Portland business men have sent a long omnibus telegram to Washington in six sections, urging the necessity of the naval base. The present status of the campaign is considered favorable.

Secretary Daniels is considering the naval report of 1900 in conjunction with the army report of 1916.

Chairman of naval committees in the House and Senate are both friendly to the Hawley and Lane bills for the establishment of the naval base.

PENNELLVILLE.

The Gridley family held their picnic at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Garfield Gridley, Thursday the 22, there were forty-two present.

* * *

Mr. F. Demong was an over Sunday guest at A. Gregg's. Mrs. Demong and son, who have been spending the week here, returned home with him.

* * *

There was no services Sunday evening on account of the meetings at Gilberts Mills.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. George Papper, of Syracuse, were guests of Miss Edith M. Gregg.

* * *

The Ladies' Aid meet at the home of Mrs. E. M. Griffin, Thursday afternoon.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Conrad, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Nelson and Mrs. T. Nelson, went to Central Square Sunday, being called there by the death of Mrs. Conrad's brother, Mr. Peter Bourlier, who was killed by the cars Saturday.

* * *

Mrs. H. A. Sutton, Mrs. J. Van Epp, of Fulton, and Miss Neva Humphrey, of Baldwinsville, called on friends here Sunday afternoon.

* * *

Mrs. Emma Pickard returned home Sunday, from a few days' visit with her neice, Mrs. J. Van Epp, in Fulton.

* * *

Mrs. Robert Parker, and daughter, Elisabeth, of Cato, N. Y., have been spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Griffin. Mr. Parker came out Monday and they returned home Tuesday.

* * *

Mrs. Hugh Downs entertained the Up-to-date Club, Friday afternoon.

* * *

Miss Edith Gregg gave a dancing party, Friday evening, in honor of her friend, Mrs. Frederick Demong, of Syracuse, N. Y.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children
In Use For Over 30 Years
Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Orchids.

Many plants have the power to shift their quarters. The orchid can move one step every year, and, although it takes a long time to cross the meadow, if the orchid goes on long enough it would move one step forward toward finishing that long walk every year.

Wig Wearing Very Old.

The ancient Egyptians all wore wigs, and the early Christians from A. D. 427 to A. D. 917 considered a false head covering a badge of distinction—this, too, in direct opposition to Tertullian, who in vain declared them devices and inventions of the devil.

Little Words.

Out of the 267 words in Abraham Lincoln's immortal Gettysburg speech 196 are words of only one syllable. It isn't the big words that count.—New York Herald.

P. O. EMPLOYES MAY ENTER ARMY

Orders have been sent out by Postmaster General Burleson to all postmasters throughout the country authorizing the postmasters to grant leave to all members of the National Guard or other organizations on whom the president has called in the present Mexican crisis.

The order signed personally by the postmaster general is as follows:

"In connection with the president's call upon certain organizations of the militia and national guard to enter the military service of the United States, and in the event of further calls on other militia or naval organizations for like purposes, it is hereby directed that upon application such officers and other employes of the post office department who may be members of such organization, or who may enlist therein be granted (as far as possible without serious impairment of the service) leave of absence without pay. Where it becomes necessary to fill temporarily the position of any officer or other employe who is absent on such military or naval duty the officer or employe will, if necessary, be dropped from the rolls without prejudice and will be reinstated to his former position and grade in accordance with civil service rules and regulations.

"Leave of absence under like conditions will be granted upon application to the department to postmasters at offices which can be placed in charge of persons acceptable to the sureties and to the department such leave not to extend beyond the date of the expiration of the postmaster's commission."

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

Do You Know the Benefits of a Medicinal Whiskey?

Not a beverage, mind you, but an absolutely pure distillation of thoroughly malted select grain. In fact, a predigested food in liquid form—for such is Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. During 56 years, it has been a recognized standard tonic and stimulant for the sick and ailing, the weak and run down; recommended by both physicians and the laity as a wonderful promotor of health.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

taken in tablespoonful doses before meals and on retiring stimulates the mucous surfaces and little glands of the stomach to healthy action, thereby assisting digestion and assimilation. In this manner the body is made strong and fit for exercise and work. Don't say you're "Not feeling well," for many human ailments yield to the judicious use of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey where drugs and other medicines fail. Just as thousands of others do, you'll feel fit and fine if you

"Get Duffy's and Keep Well."

At most druggists, grocers and dealers. If they can't supply you, write us. Send for useful household booklet free.

The Duffy Malt Whiskey Co., Rochester, N. Y.

Beautiful Bust and Shoulders

are possible if you will wear a scientifically constructed Bien Jolie Brassiere.

The dragging weight of an unconfined bust so stretches the supporting muscles that the contour of the figure is spoiled.

BIEN JOLIE (BE-AN JO-LEE) BRASSIERES put the bust back where it belongs, prevent the full bust from having the appearance of flabbiness, eliminate the danger of dragging muscles and confine the flesh of the shoulder giving a graceful line to the entire upper body.

They are the daintiest and most serviceable garments imaginable—come in all materials and styles: Cross Back, Hook Front, Surplice, Bandeau, etc. Boned with "Walohn," the rustless boning—permitting washing without removal.

Have your dealer show you Bien Jolie Brassieres, if not stocked, we will gladly send him, prepaid, samples to show you.

BENJAMIN & JOHNES, 51 Warren Street, Newark, N. J.

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.

"CITY OF ERIE" — 3 Magnificent Steamers — "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BETWEEN

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Nov. 15th—CLEVELAND

Leave Buffalo . . . 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland . . . 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Cleveland . . . 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo . . . 7:30 A. M.
(Eastern Standard Time)

Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.

Beautifully colored sectional puzzle chart, showing both exterior and interior of The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE" sent on receipt of five cents to cover postage and mailing. Also ask for our 24-page pictorial and descriptive booklet free.

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

SEND THAT NEXT PRINTING ORDER TO THE JOB-PRINTING-DEPT. THAT WILL GIVE YOU HIGHEST QUALITY LOWEST PRICES & SUPERIOR SERVICE

WE ARE NOW READY TO EXECUTE YOUR WORK

PROMPTLY

AND WILL APPRECIATE YOUR PATRONAGE

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Telephone 45

Clocks for Gift Purposes

Every home needs a clock. The new homes of Dan Cupid's latest victims are no exception. We are showing a large line of clocks which are especially desirable for gift purposes. Every movement is guaranteed—every style is correct. Whether you prefer mahogany, oak, bronze, gold plated or white enamel, you will find styles in our store that will surely please you.

WM. C. MORGAN, Jeweler

The Hallmark Store — Quirk Theatre Building

Corso and Parade Monday Evening

It was decided at yesterday's meeting of the Flower Corso and automobile parade committee to hold the event Monday evening at 7:30 instead of afternoon as originally announced.

The change of time is the result of statements reaching R. L. McCully, president of the auto club, in effect that automobile owners would under the first arrangement be unable to properly decorate their cars in time for an afternoon parade; but that the new time—7:30—will permit everybody to decorate and get in line on the dot.

In order to correct an impression existing among many of the city's autoists, Mr. McCully would have it known that one does not need to be a member of the Automobile Club to participate in the parade, as it is desired that every car owner in this vicinity shall get into the scramble for prizes. Of course flowers of all colors will feature the decorations, and from what one hears, white petals will be the predominating color. But right here it should be made clear that it is not imperative that the cars entered in the parade shall be trimmed with blossoms, as the spirit of the week is bound to lead many people to employ flags in the work, and to all such persons Mr. McCully says, "Go to it."

The work of the judges will be simplified somewhat by the adoption of a plan to number each car by placing thereon large cards with a number printed thereon. The judges will be stationed on the reviewing stand and they will be, Mrs. L. C. Foster, A. Achilli and T. H. Webb.

The prizes awarded the contestants have been contributed by F. W. Lasher and are displayed in one of his store windows.

FIFTY PIECES BEAUTIFUL

SUMMER DRESS FABRICS

Consisting of Perfection Voile, Leed Voile, Printed Slash Voile, Silk Striped Voile and Organdie, Cluster Striped Organdie, etc. All of the highest grade sheer dress fabrics on the market this season. Values up to 50 cents a yard.

Your choice of the lot, commencing Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

For 19c

(SEE FIRST STREET WINDOW DISPLAY)

J. C. O'BRIEN

BROTHERHOOD'S STAGE EFFORT

State Street Men Promote a Playlet, But Depend Upon the Women to Provoke the Merriment.

The Brotherhood of the State Street M. E. Church, assisted by the "Old Maids," will present the laughable playlet entitled, "The Old Maids' Convention," which will be held in the church parlors tomorrow evening at eight o'clock.

The climax of the play is reached when a number of the "old maids" go through a "wonderful electric transform(her)" machine, managed by Professor Pinkerton, and come out as dashing and charming young ladies who sing and play to the delight of the audience.

The list of parts and those who will represent them are:

Selina Baxter	Mrs. Wright
Esther Snyder	Mrs. Reardon
Asenath Baker	Mrs. Thomas Dunton
Predore Bobkins	Mrs. Charles Sage
Marion Perkins	Mrs. C. Draper
Augusta Prim	Mrs. M. Bracket
Susannah Smith	Mrs. Crowell
Anxiety Doherty	Mrs. Vogelsang
Faithful Blossom	Mrs. Kellogg
Amanda Horn	Miss E. Smith
Sarah Jane	Mrs. H. McRae
Amy Little	Mrs. C. E. Meech
Miranda Price	Mrs. C. Dryer
Mary Ann	Miss Jester
Eliza Hooker	Mrs. G. Flint
Rhoda Larkin	Mrs. C. Wilson
Sophia Potter	Mrs. E. Carver
President of Convention	Mrs. William Leighton
Secretary	Mrs. LeJohnson
Treasurer	Miss L. Jones
Prof. Pinkerton	Charles Sage

With Electric Transform(her)

Boston Could Stand It.

Ralph Waldo Emerson once made a crushing reply to a man who asked him whether the people in Boston did not feel alarmed. Said Emerson, "What about?" Said the man, "Why, the world is coming to an end next Monday." Emerson replied: "I am glad of it. We can get along a great deal better without it."

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

FOR SALE

Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.

Ready for Prompt Delivery

Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W — Oswego, N. Y.

JUST RECEIVED

New Carload

GASOLINE

High Grade

HUNTER GARAGE
N. First St.

During Your Visit at Fulton
OLD HOME WEEK
Stop at
HOTEL CLARK
Fulton's Leading Hotel
L. J. McQUADE, Proprietor

THEY FEAR MONEY MAY CHEAPEN

Some Foreigners Restless In View of War Scare, and Withdraw Savings From Banks.

Russian Poles and people of Russian or Polish descent and those uneducated foreigners who have had war experiences in Europe or other countries believe in getting prepared financially to weather a war.

Scores of them have appeared in Central New York banks during the past few days and asked the bankers to change bills into silver. They are suspicious that in time of war Uncle Sam's greenback is going to deteriorate in value. One of them said that when his country went to war the paper money became almost worthless and for that reason he was not going to take any chances but wanted all his money in "hard cash."

Others are withdrawing their accounts entirely fearing financial disaster. Bankers, however, merely laugh at these few faint hearted and ignorant ones. It is stated that the banks of this part of the state are in a better condition than they have been for many years and have sufficient funds to weather almost any kind of a crisis. The only effect of the withdrawal of the money the bankers say is that the depositors lose interest, and in fact the banks make money on every dollar that is being withdrawn. This is especially true of the savings banks.

Some of the people who have withdrawn their accounts have apparently been reassured for some reason or other, and some of the bankers report they had deposited it again.

TAX LAW MAKES SOME EASY WORK

The proposed income tax increase is not expected to add any additional work to the internal revenue officials in this district. The tax is to be increased without boosting the expense.

The present plan is to lower the surtax in the income tax law without lowering the present income tax exemptions; tax of from one to three per cent. or upwards on estate transfers exceeding $50,000; in terms that differentiate this form of tax from an inheritance tax; tax of not exceeding two per cent. on the net receipts of munition plants.

The main internal revenue office in this district at Syracuse is now swamped with checks and funds in payment of all sorts of taxes due July 1. There is always an eleventh hour rush and this year's is as bad if not worse than any in the past.

Sack after sack of mail has been unloaded at the main office in the past few days and a small army of clerks and assistants are hard at work checking returns.

BIG CLAIM AGAINST STATE HEARD TODAY

Hearings in the claim of Fred J. Saroney for $1,885 damages from the state for alleged injury to his truck farm at Fort Byron will be concluded in Federal court at Syracuse today. The hearing was started in Oswego and continued for more than a week. The case is a test action of several others involving a total of about $80,000. All the claims are those of vegetable growers who have farms in the vicinity of Mr. Saroney's.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

GUN CLUB TO HOLD CONTESTS

Last night the Game and Gun Club met at Hotel Fulton and discussed fishing to some extent. A committee was appointed to look after the fishing contest, which will be held some day in the near future, the losing team to pay for a supper.

Next Saturday at the grounds of the club there will be held a beginners' shoot, open to all beginners, and any person who has never shot in a contest will have just as good an opportunity to win a trophy as his neighbor, who might be a vet, as there will be no one shooting in this event, but beginners.

There will also be a red target event, the prize to be a fine pocket knife, donated by C. Earle Foster, and another red target event for a box of "fifty-fifty cigars, donated by Boland Brothers.

the Chamber of Commerce, this grounds, as there will be many old members here to attend Old Home Week, who will be glad to avail themselves of an opportunity to shoot.

WEATHER FORECAST

Probably showers today and Friday, with light variable winds.

LIQUOR DEALERS ADOPT DRASTIC RESOLUTIONS

Syracuse—After re-electing President M. J. Quinn, the New York State Retail Liquor Dealers last night adopted resolutions insisting that the liquor traffic be divorced from any form of gambling and that liquor tax certificates shall not be permitted in any saloon or hotel catering to disolute or disorderly element. They also passed a resolution pledging earnest co-operation to officials charged with enforcing the liquor tax law; that wholesalers limit sales to those holding certificates only; reaffirmed determined hostility to prohibited persons and insisted on drastic prosecution and license forfeiture against any person selling to prohibited persons or minors.

WILSON'S BOOSTERS FIRST TO ISSUE BUTTONS

The first Wilson campaign buttons have made their appearance.

The button device carries a double scroll bound with an American flag on a field of white. On the opening scroll is the legend, "Constitution U. S. A.—Not a Hyphen in it."

Neither the name of his party or the candidate's name appears.

CITY NEEDS YOUR HORSE OR AUTO

Patriotic citizens who wish to donate the services of horses or automobiles for use in the municipal parade during Old Home Week may do so by sending their names to City Clerk C. Milton Allen, Jr., who will appreciate the favor.

It is desirable that Fulton's municipal parade shall come up to the standard set by other cities, but this cannot be done without the aid of the citizens themselves, so by contributing the use of horses or automobiles they will be helping both themselves and the city.

Former members of the city's boards or former officials who wish to participate in the municipal parade may do so by sending names to City Clerk C. Milton Allen, Jr., and transportation facilities will be provided.

QUEEN OF OLD HOME WEEK CONTEST RAGES

The results of the second day's voting in the contest for the diamond ring and queen of Old Home Week as announced by Thomas Farrell of morning was as follows:
ing was as follows:

Ruth Buchanan	885
Greta Lewis	249
Rosella Nichols	162
Genevieve McCormick	280
Rose Walsh	200
Trixie Dix	216

Hazel Ingamells is the new candidate who has entered the field of contestants. The bulletin boards will be put in place today.

CITY OFFICIALS SERVE AS COMMITTEEMEN

Mayor Lewis has announced the committee on arrangements for the municipal day parade, to be held July 5th, of Old Home Week. City Clerk C. M. Allen, Jr., is chairman. Other members of the committee are: City Chamberlain, H. W. Adkins, L. A. Richardson, president of the fire and police commission, and Frank Quirk, Sr., president of the Common Council.

Made a Part For Her.

Dion Boucicault when his first play, "London Assurance," was accepted by the manager of Covent Garden, London, refused to have the play produced in the original version because it gave no part to Mrs. Nesbit, an actress for whom he had conceived a high boyish infatuation, and rewrote the whole work in an incredibly short time so as to supply her with the role he wished.

Fulton Keynotes

The municipal parade, headed by Mayor Lewis and other city officials, will be one of the features of Old Home Week on July 5th. All the departments will wear uniforms.

* * *

It was decided by Neahtawanta Lodge, I. O. O. F., last night, to participate in the Old Home Week parade of fraternal organizations, the event to occur on July Fourth.

* * *

The Alumni of the High School will not meet tonight as announced, but on next Monday evening instead, when it is hoped to have the newly-elected president of the society, Mr. William Carr, present. The president has been unavoidably detained out of the city, hence the postponement. Every graduate of the F. H. S. is cordially invited to be present at the Assembly hall of the Fourth street building next Monday evening at eight o'clock.

* * *

Preparedness is in the air, which is enough to convince the local Scout Master, James N. Robinson, of the necessity of calling out the local troops of the Boy Scouts of America for street drill. The call reads for Friday (tomorrow) evening, and the meeting place to be at City Hall at 7:30 p. m. sharp.

* * *

There's always plenty of action when "Dad" Mead says and does something, so no one need feel surprised to learn that the genial Sixth Ward leader of political events may organize and equip anything from a company to a regiment of soldiers for border duty between the line dividing his bailiwick and the northern line of Mexico. "Dad" has many adherents who would follow him through berlud knee deep for a just and righteous cause.

* * *

L. B. Rowlee, of 717 Emery street, and Emma A. Bellows, of No. 466 South Fourth street, secured a marriage license late yesterday from City Clerk, C. M. Allen, Jr.

* * *

Dr. and Mr. W. B. Halstead will leave the city in their auto tomorrow for Binghamton, where they will attend the New York State Chiropractic Convention, returning Monday.

* * *

Many people from the rural sections were in the city today to view the parade and circus.

* * *

The grandstand for Old Home Week has been completed, and Secretary Hollenga, of the Chamber of Commerce had hard work keeping the children from climbing upon it during the time they were watching for the parade.

* * *

Many of the decorations for Old Home Week are already up, but it is learned from the official decorator that there are a number of the merchants who do not desire the decorations. If this is the case everybody should realize that to make Old Home Week a success there must be uniformity; therefore, let those who are without decorations think before it is too late.

* * *

The P. K. E. Club of Fulton High School held a dance in Davis Dancing Academy last evening immediately following the commencement exercises. It was attended by about forty couples.

* * *

Mrs. Frank McNamara, of Paterson, N. J., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McNamara, of Utica street. Mrs. McNamara was a former resident of Fulton.

* * *

Mrs. Frank McNamara and daughter, Evelyn, of Utica street, have returned from Paterson, N. J., where they visited Mr. and Mrs. Frank McNamara, Jr., who were former residents of this city.

* * *

John Welsh, of the law offices of Ray B. Smith, Syracuse, was in the city today on business.

Seed Buckwheat

Buckwheat has been a good paying crop for several years. On account of unusual weather conditions this Spring, many acres intended for oats will now be sown to Buckwheat. Seed will be scarce. Buy early. Recleaned seed—$1.00 per bushel. Careful attention to shipping orders.

GILBERT & NICHOLS CO.
Fulton, N. Y.

NO SCARCITY OF CLOTH FOR ARMY

The critical relations of the United States and Mexico, particularly in case of hostilities, were a general topic of conversation in woolen cloth circles. It was taken for granted that if war should come out of the existing situation, it would be necessary for the President to make a call for several hundred thousand volunteers, who will have to be clothed in a hurry.

Mill men said their plants were unusually well fixed at the moment to handle heavy contracts for khaki, blankets, overcoatings, hosiery, and other supplies needed for a volunteer force. While the Quartermaster's Department of the regular army has just awarded contracts on a large scale, the market understands that the goods already ordered would cut no appreciable figure in equipping half a million men.

The fact that European cloth and blanket contracts have been filled, it was said, would make it possible to turn out large quantities of clothing for the American Army with great rapidity.

"There'll be no trouble about giving the Government all the cloth it wants," was the way one mill man put it.

MANY IN FULTON TRY SIMPLE MIXTURE

Many Fulton people are surprised at the QUICK action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. This simple remedy acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel, removing such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. A few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astonishing. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. — adv.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Notice to Creditors.

In pursuance of an Order of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Eliza Birdsall, late of the Town of Granby, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at law offices of Wilson & Rice, Savings Bank Building, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 4th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 22d day of May A. D., 1916.

NELLIE E. WILCOX,
Executrix.

By ARVIN L. RICE,
Attorney.

Graduates Learn About "Studies Worth While"

The commencement exercises of the High School graduating class were held last night at the First M. E. Church. Included in the program were selections by the High School Orchestra.

The program was opened with prayer by the Rev W. J. Barrett.

The salutatory address was made by Elizabeth Sarah Royce and the Valedictory by Frederick Donald King.

The Kayendatsyona Chapter, D. A. R., prizes of $5 gold pieces were awarded to Charles Calkins, of Phillips street school; Catherine McKenna, of Erie Street School, [illegible] of State Street School, and Annabelle Spencer, of Fourth Street School.

Mr. Langdon C. Foster, president of the Board of Education, then presented the forty graduates with the High School diplomas. This is the largest class ever graduated from the High School and also contained one of the youngest pupils ever graduated here, Miss Lenora Eames, of Emery street, who is but fifteen years old.

Dr. W. K. Wickes, of Syracuse, delivered the commencement address, taking the topic "Som[illegible] Worth While." His speech in full follows:

The speaker congratulated [illegible] class upon its fine showing [illegible] gently raising the query whether they had always been prepared with their lessons.

Far be it from me to intimate that the education of this graduating class of 1916, has not been on[illegible] while." Indeed, it is fair to presume, that with such an able and devoted corps of teachers, every ready to rush to the rescue of imperilled youth (as the boy in the history class said, "Then Hooker's corpse came flying across the field") only victory could be the result!

And surely I would not for an instant—at least not here and now—suggest that modern education in general is not always, and in all ways, all that the most zealous devotee of form and theory could desire. For just think how one would feel, if after a bold attack upon the curricula of the schools, an intelligent jury should bring in the Scotch verdict, "Not Proven" or still worse, "Guilty, with some doubt as to whether this is the man!"

Moreover, it would little boot to enter upon criticism of the subjects studied in our present day schools, although I might be aided and abetted therein by many a bright lad or lass chafing under the galling collar of some burdensome theme. For just now, I am thinking of that fighting animal—a small boy—who said to me, he hoped there wouldn't be any war with Mexico, because then somebody would write a big book about it and he would have to learn it! Nor would it be of great value, here and now, to make out a list expurgatorius of subjects not to be studied, lest, alas! one or more might be left out—like the doctor who tried to tell his patient what not to eat, but unfortunately omitted roast goose. The patent ate roast goose and was ruined!

No, there is a far better way to get at my theme than to arraign any school, or subject—or system. For in education, as in other themes—

"Our little systems have their day
They have their day, and cease to be!"

Permit me, then, to call your attention to the wonderful triple nature [illegible] in man, body, mind and spirit, [illegible] needing and seeking its own proper food; each created according to that wonderful law of proportion which runs through the universe of God. Nowhere has that law been better expressed in its essence and beauty than by St. Paul, the great Apostle—"And now abideth faith, hope, charity, these three—but the greatest of these is charity." So in education. And now abideth the body, the mind and the spirit—these three—but the greatest of these, I make bold to say, is the spirit. There is also another expression well fitted to my theme—"A threefold cord is not easily broken." So then, let us consider for a moment a single part of that wonderful law of proportion, a single strand of that triple cord, namely,

The Education of the Body.

Let no one think that I am here to disparage the body, or its claim to the best training that can be given it. For the body is the good gift of God—nay, it is the temple of His indwelling. But you know as well as I, what stress is laid nowadays in our schools upon its training. Why, when I was a youngster, it never was found necessary to teach me how to play "one old cat," or "over the fence is out," or "fox and geese" or any one of many sports and games. But now, from kindergarten to college, the land is filled, like the streets of the New Jerusalem, with carefully trained young jumpers, sprinters, vaulters, baseballers and bone breaking footballers; while sometimes it seems as though Hercules was the god of the college world! Don't misunderstand me. Again I say, the training of the body is good—but I hasten to add, that the law of proportion must be kept—and that the education that depends upon a single strand, is as dangerous to its possessor, and to the state, as would be the suspended sword of Damocle!

"Yes, bodily training, the single strand, is good—but how much better the double stranded.

Education of the Mind

For the mind—if my old college professor was right—is a very wonderful thing, nothing less than "the conscious perduring of a somewhat as opposed to nonentity." However that may be—and I never had the courage to deny or dispute it—we can all agree that the thing called the "mind" is a very subtle, mysterious thing. Nor will any observant person deny for a moment, that our schools today are teeming with studies and courses, so many, so introicate, so perplexing that they call to mind Lowell's famous line—"They've gut a new High school now, where they teach the Lord knows wut!" Moreover, it is perfectly true that the complex life of today, seems to demand great variety and elaborateness—while examinations have crowded on and in so furious-fast that the examined ones are in great danger of becoming examinate ones! But again I say, let me not be misunderstood. The mind of man—the great gift of God—is altogether wonderful and its achievements beyond all telling! Take, for instance, our marvelous English literature—from the time when Chaucer went singing his light-hearted way along the dewy English meadows in the early morn of letters, down through the high noon of Shakespeare and Milton, through the sunlit afternoon of our Augustan age and clear on into the tender gloaming of the best literature of our own day! But what teacher can teach, or what student take in the whole of that splendid pilgrimage of thought? Nay, so far from it, that one sometimes longs to get back to Lowell's district school, wherein were taught, he says—

"Faith, hope, and sunthin', ef it wasn't cherrity,
'Twas want 'o guile and thet's ez gret
a rerrity."

In other words, while the training of the mind is "worth while" and double strained education is good, yet books and study will pall upon the brain; intellect never saved a State; never redeemed a race from slavery; and so we hurry on to speak of the best "worth-while" training—that "three fold cord,"

The Education of the Spirit.

Here surely is the training best worth while! For while we can hardly tell in words just what the "spirit" is, yet we get a glimpse of its nature when we read that God created man not a body, but a mind, but—"a living spirit." Again, "There is a spirit in man, and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth him understanding." And is this spirit then generally greater than the body? Incomparably, for "He that ruleth his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city." Greater than the mind? Immeasurably, for "Of making manly books there is no end, and much study is a weariness to the flesh. Fear God and keep His commandments, for this is the whole duty of man."

Why Educate the Spirit?

So, I plead for this superbest training. Can the need of it be [illegible]ed? This is a material, if not a materialistic age. And John Morley tells us that "ours is a reading, not a thinking age." In short, this is the day of automobiles and aeroplanes, of colossal fortunes, and of the giddy dance and whirl of things. But "Things" cannot save this land of ours; nor can great armies and great navies; nor can strong bodied or strong minded men—in short, in a "rugged and awful crisis," nothing will avail except the spirit of freedom, of loyalty, of sacrifice.

But as my concern just now is for this dear class before me, and I fain would have you crown your youthful vigor of body and mind, with that training of the spirit which is best "worth-while"—will best fit you for power and usefulness. I hasten to ask

How Educate the Spirit?

And here think it not strange if I say, first, by Expression. Of course I use the word in no restricted sense. I mean by it, so far as your voice is concerned, what Professor Corson meant by the phrase, "the voice in spiritual education;" that your tongue should become like "the pen of a ready writer;" that you should make your possession, the best poetry—since it wraps up in smallest compass the greatest spiritual truths; that you should cherish those twin spirits of the beautiful—imagination and idealism. And just here let me add, study Shakespeare, whom Emerson calls, "the greatest master of expression"—teaching us wondrous lessons—of character, of justice, or mortality, yea of immortality and the divine nature of man! Oh, that this "spirit of youth" in Shakesspeare which has found expression in thousands of words and phrases daily upon the lips of the English speaking race, might more and more flourish in the quiet library, in study and reading clubs, in the class rooms of our schools, on the stage—and even, as Sir Herbert Tree avers it will, in photo play and moving pictures! For Shakespeare has ministered to the finest thought and the most glowing speech of the world—a possession worth more to the human race and its progress than material wealth or armies or navies!

Again, by Charity—not that of ostentation and pride, but of humility—thus making life serene and strong by steadfast love of home, of country, of God, of love to Man. Then it may be truly said of you—

"Yours is the Earth, and everything
that's in it,
And—which is more—you'll be a Man, my son!"

Moreover, it is for you, the coming generation, to stand stoutly by "Old Glory" with its grand motto of "Liberty and Union;" to cherish every dear association of its storied history in peace and war, from Cambridge through to the Civil War and on to Cuba with its reunion of the blue and the gray—and also to emblazon on its folds that finer watchword, Peace and brotherhood—"Now and forever, one and inseparable."

And so, Class of 1916, Farewell! Neglecting not the education of the body, and pursuing, with unfaltering zeal the training of the mind—fail not, Oh, fail not, so to educate God's best gift to you, that in the flying years, out in God's great world, you may be filled with the spirit of Truth and Duty—making true in your sayings and doings the wonderful verse of the poet:

"So night is grandeur to our dust,
So near is God to Man,
When Duty whispers low, 'Thou must!'
The Youth replies, 'I can!'"

QUIRK THEATRE
Matinee 5c, Night: Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c

TODAY—
Carlyle Blackwell in Equitable Film
"THE SHADOW OF DOUBT"
in 5 Parts
Selig News.

FRIDAY—
Edwin August and Ormi Hawley
in World Film
THE SOCIAL HIGHWAYMAN
In 5 parts.
4—ACTS OF VAUDEVILLE—4

SATURDAY—
9th Episode "THE IRON CLAW"
In 2 Parts.
2nd Episode of
"THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA"
in 2 Parts
OTHERS
4—ACTS VAUDEVILLE—4

MUNICIPAL EMPLOYES IN U. S. SERVICE GET PAY

Syracuse—In response to an inquiry from the Onondaga county board of supervisors' clerk, Attorney General Woodbury has ruled that state and municipal employes are entitled to wages while absent on National Guard duties.

In regard to employes of the highway department an interesting problem arose. One man had been in the state's employ but three weeks. Mr. Woodbury held that section 245 of the military law protects state and municipal employes and officials although they are in the service of the United States, whether they enlisted either before or after President Wilson issued the mobilization call.

The ruling has been watched with interest by cities throughout the states, for practically every county and city in the state has been affected by the calling out of some of the guardsmen in municipal or county employ.

FLASHERS OF FILMS PUT UP QUEER DEFENSE

Syracuse—Work of drawing a jury in the trial of the five defendants accused of bringing fight films of the Willard-Johnson [illegible] battle across the border continued in Federal Court before Judge Fay here today. It is believed that the jury box will be tentatively filled by nightfall.

The five defendants are accused of flashing rays of light across the border, the rays being recorded on a sensitive film on the other side of the border and developed into the fight pictures. The defendants maintain that as there was nothing but light rays sent across the line they cannot be found guilty of transporting anything across the border.

The apparatus for the work was set up in a tent at Rouse's Point, N. Y., the tent being pitched directly on the dividing line between Canada and the United States.

SEES THAT PRISONERS' FAMILIES ARE CARED FOR

(By United Press)

Albany, N. Y.—While the Welfare League of Sing Sing is being much discussed today the Homer Honor System at the Great Meadow prison in Comstock is going on quietly accomplishing its reward in a host of redeemed men.

William J. Homer, warden at Great Meadow and his wife, known by the prisoners as "Our Lady of Comstock," are meeting with success because they know human nature and its needs.

"No man can be bettered in prison if his mind is ill at ease because he fears for his relatives outside," says Warden Homer today.

"Therefore, the first thing that is done when a man enters Great Meadow is to care for his family, see that it is protected and that the innocent will not suffer outside the prison walls while the guilty suffer within.

"The normal man is made out an abnormal criminal by ethical, educational, physical and spiritual methods at Great Meadow.

"If a man is physically defective he can not reform until his weakness has been obviated."

Therefore Warden Homer deals with each man as an individual. One many may need to be placed where he can live in close touch with nature, so he is given work on the prison farm, while another may may be obsessed with a desire for knowledge, he is placed at work in the prison library, or is given some sort of clerical work that will help him meet his desires.

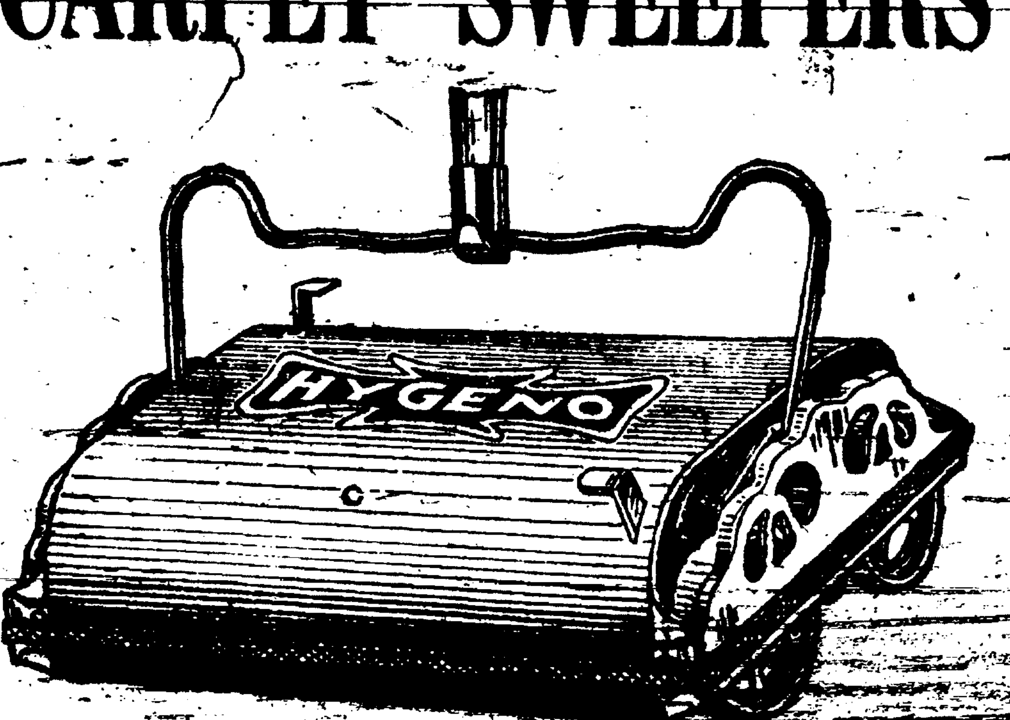
Common sense, love and charity are combined at Great Meadow and that is why 10 per cent. of its men are making parole and 97 1-2 per cent. of its graduates are making good.

HOTEL ARRIVALS

Clark House—F. B. Granby, Syracuse, N. Y.; L. M. Chase, New York City; M. B. Bedstedt, Binghamton, N. Y.; E. T. Kennedy, Batavia, N. Y.; Thomas Aton, Trenton, N. J.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

The Greatest Bargain in
CARPET SWEEPERS



We have been extremely fortunate in securing a large shipment of High Grade Steel Carpet Sweepers, exactly as illustrated. We are so enthusiastic with this practical, useful and serviceable household necessity, we have decided to make this an advertising special—profit not to be considered.

These Sweepers known as the "Hygeno" are light but very strong, with beautiful mahogany baked enamel finish and nickel trimmings. Strictly sanitary, equipped with pure rubber rollers and bristle brush.

The Biggest Household Value Ever Offered—A $3 Hygeno Sweeper for only 98c

On Sale Tomorrow Morning at 9 o'clock. Only one to a customer.

(SEE FIRST STREET WINDOW DISPLAY)

J. C. O'BRIEN

TRINIDAD'S PUZZLE

Mystery of the Island's Curious Lake of Pitch.

HOLES FILL UP OVERNIGHT.

And Great Trenches More Than Three Feet Deep Will Be Obliterated In a Week—The Great Mass Is Solid, Yet In Constant but Slow Motion.

Though disappointing at first sight to people who have the crater of an active volcano in mind, yet the famous "pitch lake" of Trinidad is remarkable enough to satisfy most thoroughly long ere the visit has come to an end.

The lake is a level plain about a hundred acres or so in extent, surrounded by low hills and dotted here and there with bushes and trees. The surface is not a shimmering black, as might be supposed, but a dull, grayish blue color, intersected with pools of shining water. Altogether it is a very prosaic looking place, giving no hint of its real interest.

One can walk where one pleases on the surface of the asphalt without any fear of sinking in, for it is quite solid enough to bear one's weight. If you stand in one place for a little while it feels hot to the feet, just like an asphalted street on a very hot day.

Much of the time a fresh breeze blows, and one remembers with amusement the stories of the imaginative writers who talked about stifling heat and oppressive atmosphere.

The digging of the asphalt is a simple operation. A mattock is the only tool required, and under its blows the pitch breaks readily. The negroes employed are very skilled in the work and break out lumps a couple of feet across, far too heavy for an ordinary man to carry.

Only a very small amount of the material gets broken into little pieces, so that scarcely any baskets are needed to carry the asphalt to the cars. A laborer simply lifts one or two lumps, puts them on his head, walks a few yards and drops them into the car.

The crude asphalt, as broken out, is somewhat brownish or earthy in color. It is usually quite wet and filled with many holes, like bubbles, measuring up to an inch or more in diameter.

The gang of barefooted workmen in one place may number thirty men, of whom half a dozen do the digging. They work on a space perhaps sixty feet long and forty feet wide, and in the course of a day they will dig down to a depth of three feet, or more in some places.

Go to that same spot next morning, and you will find it a little rough, but approximately level with the rest of the lake. The hole has been mysteriously filled up during the night, and in the course of a week all traces of the digging will be obliterated.

This does not mean necessarily that fresh asphalt has come into the lake from underground sources. On the contrary, the excavations are filled by a very slow settling or leveling of the surface asphalt. There is no such thing as "new" asphalt, by the way, for the transition from liquid petroleum to solid asphalt by nature's process involves a period of time that must be calculated in centuries.

The digging done in past years has caused the general level of the lake to sink several feet, so that it is not absolutely inexhaustible, as some people imagine. It is believed that fresh asphalt very slowly pushes itself upward into the lake from the subterranean depths, but how large a quantity is thus added annually has not been calculated.

Near the middle of the lake the material is less hard than elsewhere, and in a few places soft asphalt may be seen in small, irregular patches oozing up from below. This fresh asphalt is of about the consistency of putty and can be kneaded and pulled in the hands without soiling them greatly. In the main, however, the lake is solid asphalt.

No one knows the depths of this mysterious lake, the only information on the subject being the fact that long ago a boring was made to a depth of 135 feet without reaching the bottom. The "cores" of this and other borings show that in consistency the asphalt remains the same to a very considerable depth.

Curious as it may seem, there are many evidences that the entire mass comprising the lake is in constant but very slow motion. The surface is a series of great folds, and in the creases between these the rain water gathers. One writer has aptly compared the surface of the asphalt to the skin of a great elephant, the creases being the folds in his hide. Along the edges of the pools of water grass, bushes and small trees take root, forming green "islands" of greater or less extent.—Victor Pitt-Kethley in Wide World Magazine.

She Admitted It.

A Mrs. Malaprop said to Clara Novello, the noted English prima donna, "You will admit that there is a great deal of evil life in the theater?"

"True, indeed," replied Clara, "but on which side of the curtain?"

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

To Rent—8 room house, modern improvements, Fourth and Oneida; also living or office rooms in Waldhorn block. Inquire S. Waldhorn. 471

For Sale—Five Jersey Cows, all giving milk; also one all purpose mare, sound. R. C. McPherson, 1 mile South of Vermillion. 472c

Rooms To Rent—Two apartments over Geisler's store. Apply Lewis' Cigar Store. tf

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

For Sale—Presto tank for motorcycle. 209 West First Street., N. 471

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

Wanted—Girl for general housework. Inquire 301 So. Fourth street. 473

For Sale—Seed potatoes. 834 Oneida street. 472c

LOVE AT SIGHT

Story of a Heroic Mexican Girl and a Yankee.

By F. A. MITCHEL

The Sierra Tarahumare range of mountains runs in a southeasterly direction through the Mexican state of Chihuahua. James Jernegan, a young American engineer, was called to a certain point in these mountains to build a dam on one of its streams with a view to utilizing the water power.

The nearest house to where his work was located was the home of a Mexican woman named Cavillo. Jernegan persuaded her to take him to board during his sojourn and was thus fortunate in escaping the necessity of camping. The house overlooked an extended territory beneath, and from its veranda one might gaze on a very attractive view. The grounds were not inclosed, and the whole mountain side might be considered as belonging to the place. Everything was kept tidy and was in better condition than might have been expected of a mountaineer's residence.

On the evening of Jernegan's arrival a little table was set for him on the veranda for his supper. On taking his seat he was regretting that he must sup alone when a girl dressed in the costume of the country appeared, bringing the viands.

"Oho!" he said to himself. "If I can have no one to sup with me I can at least have this little senorita to wait upon me, and I shall contrive to keep her with me as much as possible."

The girl, who was the daughter of Senora Cavillo and whose name was Inez, laid the dishes on the table and was about to depart when Jernegan, who spoke Spanish indifferently, said to her:

"I feel much honored, senorita, at having a pretty girl to wait on me. It would be much more fitting that I wait on you. However, since you have assumed the duty I beg that you will not be beyond call, for there may be something that I shall need which is not on the table."

The girl, who had never before listened to such deferential words from a man, was too confused and delighted to at once reply. A quick succession of blushes passed over her face, her eyes sparkled, and a happy smile played upon her lips.

"Ah, senor," she said presently, "it would not be proper for you to wait upon me, and it makes me very happy to wait upon you. If you want anything I will be within call."

There is no greater danger than for a man of superior caste to go among his inferiors and become involved with one of their women folk, especially if she be an attractive young girl. Jernegan, observing the effect of his words upon Inez, felt the necessity of caution. But it is one thing to feel a necessity for resisting a temptation and another to resist. He suffered the girl to go into a room opening on the veranda, but did not let her remain long there. He called:

"Senorita!"

"I am coming, senor." And from the few seconds occupied in her appearance it was evident that she had not been far away. Indeed, she was looking through a lace curtain that covered the opening between her and the handsome American. Those who believe that love must have time to take root and grow have never seen a country girl suddenly confronted by a handsome gentleman. In such instances the girl is liable to throw up her hands in token of surrender at a glance. At any rate, such was the case with Inez.

"Could you bring me some more tamales?" asked Jernegan in a tone of voice that he would have used to a superior being.

"Yes, senor."

When she returned with what he had asked for he suggested that if she would take a chair on the veranda she would not have to tire herself by coming to him, as though she had a long distance instead of a few steps to come to him. She accepted the suggestion and sat down in a bamboo rocking chair near him.

Now, there was a swarthy young Mexican who the very evening before had secured the little girl's promise to become his wife. He was a rough mountaineer and not very clean, but he was the best Inez had ever seen, and she was sixteen, and that is a proper age for a Mexican girl to marry. Jernegan had swept her away from this man, Manuel Corall, in a twinkling. It is questionable if after coming under the influence of the former she gave the latter a thought.

Nevertheless Corall was coming to pass the first evening after his betrothal with his promised wife. Inez was so wrapt in her companion that she did not hear Manuel coming. But he saw her sitting on the veranda, saw the gringo eating at the table and Inez's eyes resting upon him with a look of idolatry. Corall saw at a glance that the hated American had swooped down like an eagle from the sky to carry off the lamb that he had supposed had belonged to himself.

Corall paused, hid himself behind a bush and looked. He had already seen enough to tell him that this being, superior to himself in refinement, in intellect, in manly beauty, had taken the heart that had belonged to him. What the gringo would do with it did not concern the Mexican. He was absorbed in vengeance. Resisting the temptation to rush upon the man who had dispossessed him, he finally slunk away, resolved to wait an opportunity to take his revenge without its reacting upon himself.

Jernegan, having finished his supper and smoked, went to the camp where the men who were to construct the dam were to begin work the next morning. There in conference with the superintendent Inez passed from his mind. It was 10 o'clock when he returned to Senora Cavillo's. The inmates were all in their rooms, but the house was open as it had been during the day, for the weather was warm, and, being remote from other places and persons, the doors were never shut at night. The only light on the main floor was one in the living room opening on to the veranda.

The engineer sat down on a bench on the veranda and was thinking of a problem that had arisen in connection with the construction of the dam when he saw the shadow of a human figure cast through a window by the light in the room behind him and heard a voice say:

"Senor, thinking you might need refreshment I have iced some wine for you."

"Ah, senorita; always kind and thoughtful! I will drink the wine on condition that you drink it with me."

Inez brought out a tray on which was a small pitcher of a beverage she had concocted, and, drawing a table before the bench, the two sat down on the bench to regale themselves.

They had been seated some time and had emptied the pitcher. Jernegan's arm was around Inez's waist. On the table before them suddenly appeared the shadow of a head, then of a pair of shoulders. Lastly a shadow of an arm rose from the rest. Inez gave a shriek and, springing up, covered her companion with the upper part of her body. A blow descended upon her, and she sank down on to the floor.

Jernegan rose, turned and saw a Mexican holding a knife in his hand from which blood dripped. From this he cast a glance at the sinking Inez and took in the situation. An intention to kill him had been thwarted by her receiving the blow that had been meant for him. Seizing the only weapon at hand, the earthen pitcher on the table, he hurled it with all his strength through the window. It struck his opponent in the temple, and he fell senseless to the floor.

Forgetting his existence, Jernegan stooped, took up Inez and held her in his arms. Notwithstanding a severe wound in her shoulder she had not lost consciousness. She looked up at him with a smile that spoke volumes. She had received the blow that might have killed the man she loved.

Her shriek brought down her mother from the floor above and others. Senora Cavillo glanced at the figure of the would be murderer stretched on the floor with the bloody knife near the hand that had held it. She recognized Corall, but he did not interest her; her concern was for her daughter, whose shriek had brought her to the scene of the trouble. Going on to the veranda, she took Inez from the American, tore away the clothing that covered the wound and began stanching the blood.

Jernegan gave a shrill call to the men in the camp, and the superintendent and several other men came to the house.

"Take that man away!" cried the engineer. "He tried to kill me. This girl threw herself in his way and received the blow."

Corall, who was still insensible, was taken up and carried to the rear of the house. Inez was supported to her room by her mother.

Jernegan thought it best to spend the night at the camp. On reaching it he told what he knew of the story. This was not much. He did not know who the man was who had attacked him, but surmised it was some Mexican—possibly interested in Inez—who hated gringoes. Those engaged with him in construction work advised him to remain in camp with them, for, since he had excited antagonism, he was liable to be murdered. He had no stomach for the scene of his tragic adventure and took their advice.

Corall, who had been struck in a vital place, remained unconscious till a surgeon removed a fractured bone and its consequent pressure on the brain. Then he recovered consciousness, and it was not long before he was about again. He expressed much concern as to Inez's condition, his first words after regaining his senses being, "Have I killed her?" When he was assured that she was living and her wound was not mortal he expressed a wish to see her. But she would not grant it. As soon as he became able to go about by himself he was sent away without a word from her.

But four hours elapsed between the meeting of Jernegan and Inez and the climax of the drama. Each endured for a lifetime the consequences of a sudden outburst of love from her and a yielding to a momentary indiscretion on his part. They never met again. Indeed, Inez was soon convinced that another meeting would not be advisable. She realized the difference in their conditions. Why had she not done so in the first place? Because the flood came upon her too violently to admit of forethought.

Jernegan, satisfied that he had better leave the locality, did so, sending another engineer to take his place. He is now a middle aged man, but is not married. Inez has long ago passed into that condition of physical decay common to women of her race. She, too, has remained single. Strange it is how condensed may be events that determine human destinies.

Days You'll Never Forget

Jacob's Cure

When Memory Returns

Up to the age of twenty-two years, when he got married and took his wife to live on a little farm, Jacob Shaw was called a hustling young fellow. He might have gone right along hustling had not his wife spoiled him. When Jacob found that she was quite willing to get up in the morning and build the fire he permitted her to do so. When breakfast was over and she went out to milk the two cows he raised no objections.

The time came when Jacob extended her field of usefulness—that is, he permitted her to hoe in the garden, trim up the fruit trees, grease the farm wagon and even to work in the cornfield. They had told Jacob that farm work was slavery, but he had not found it so. He had plenty of time to sit around and smoke and go fishing.

Then one morning Jacob's wife astonished him by remaining in bed until 11 o'clock. The breakfast was a scant one. The cows had gone unmilked and the pigs squealing. Jacob was surprised and alarmed by her attitude, but when she finished her breakfast and sat down to read a book he thought the end of the world was near at hand. With many a grunt and sigh he did the milking and the feeding, and when dinner time came and his wife was still reading on he had to be content with bread and butter. The crisis had come.

"Molly," he finally said, "what is the matter?"

"Nothing at all, except that I will do the housework after this and you will do the outdoor work. The change would have come a year ago, but I wanted to see how long you would keep it up."

Jacob was dazed and alarmed. His pleasant vacation had come to an end. He sulked and thought during the evening and arose next morning with a bright plan in his mind.

She Took Jacob by the Ear.

"Molly," he said across the breakfast table, "I don't want to alarm you, but I feel it my duty to inform you that I am losing my memory. There have been times lately when I could not remember our names. I could not remember how many hogs we have in the pen."

"Well, it is a sad state of affairs," replied Molly, "but it need not interfere with your work. Even a man who has lost his memory can plow and plant and reap. If you are in the cornfield today and forget that you live here in this house I'll come out and lead you to it."

When he started for the fields after breakfast Jacob was trying his best to look dazed and puzzled. On reaching the corn he slipped through it and made a long half circuit and struck the highway half a mile below his house and disappeared for three weeks.

Mrs. Shaw did not spread an alarm. She attended to everything needed as if she had been a widow without a hired man. She finally read in the county paper that a stranger had entered the village of Devon and had excited a great deal of sympathy because of his affliction. He had lost his memory and could not even tell his name. Mrs. Shaw smiled grimly as she read the item, and next day she took a train for the town mentioned. She carried with her the family horsewhip.

Mr. Shaw was seated on the tavern veranda, and there were half a dozen men trying to solve the mystery of his loss of memory. It was all in vain. His whole past life was a blank to the stranger. He was shaking his head when his little woman came up the steps and began lashing him with the whip. Of course her action created great surprise, but she took Jacob by the ear and gave him three or four more cuts and explained to the men:

"He is my husband, you know. He has these spells quite often, but I hope to cure him after a time. Come, Jacob."

He walked down to the depot beside her without speaking, and while they waited for the train she said: "My name is Abical Catchhim, and we are going to a farm called Hustle. There is no loss of memory on that farm. Your name is Playedout, and this horsewhip will hereafter hang on the kitchen door."

On the train going home Jacob's memory returned to him so strongly that he could remember everything back to his babyhood, including that he had a summer's work before him, and he never lost it again.

M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1916, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

A Reasonable Excuse.

Dear Teacher—Kate couldn't come today. She got wet in the a. m. and cold in the p. m. Mrs. Go.

Left Hand Salutes.

To salute with the left hand is a deadly insult to Mohammedans in the east.

VETERAN BOXMEN STARTED POORLY

But Few Old Time Pitchers Going Well This Spring.

YOUNG PITCHERS SHINING.

Markle and Mogridge of New York Yanks Making Names For Themselves—Myers of Philadelphia, Harper of Washington and Others.

The first month of the 1916 championship race in the American league has been notable particularly for the success of young pitchers and the failure of veterans who had been counted upon to do most of the winning for their respective clubs. Boxmen who ranked as stars in the campaign of a year ago are finding it a most difficult task to score victories this season, while youngsters who got little consideration from the dopesters in the winter and spring are flashing to the front with imposing performances.

In a few instances the veterans are holding their own, but the number of failures among the star boxmen exceeds the number of successes. Walter Johnson, of course, is out in front, but it was always a bit unfair to other pitchers to bring them into comparison with the Washington speed marvel.

The Cleveland and New York clubs, two of the three leaders for the Johnson pennant, have been held up this spring by young pitchers. Guy Morton of course must not be overlooked, as he is more than performing up to the expectations of the fans and dopesters, but he has received no help from any of the pitchers whom Lee Fohl can call veterans. Willie Mitchell, rated as next to Morton in the early dope, has worked poorly, while Coumbe, who got little attention in the early dope, has done well, as has Stanley Coveleski. Jim Bagby, another of the new crowd, has shown up well too. Meantime Rip Hagerman has done almost nothing.

For the Yankees the early season dope had Ray Caldwell in front, Ray Fisher next in line and Ray Keating showing every promise of sticking with the other Rays. Yet none of the three has done anything wonderful.

Cliff Markle was rated as "only a minor leaguer" in the early dope, just as many another boxman coming from the minor leagues was figured. Yet Markle has made a name for himself. Nick Cullop has done fairly well, while George Mogridge, another pitcher from the minors, has flashed about the best pitching shown in the American league this season.

Another young pitcher who has flashed to the front in the American league is Meyers, who was not rated highly when the season opened. He has already won a number of games for Connie. Joe Bush of the Athletics is one pitcher who may be called a veteran who is pitching fine ball.

The St. Louis Browns furnish other instance of the big guns failing, but unfortunately Fielder Jones has no young pitchers carrying his team along. Wellman was rated as the best pitcher inherited by Jones when he took over the Browns, and Dave Davenport was the best of Jones' Federal leaguers. None of them has shown anything worth while.

The White Sox furnish two instances of the veteran pitcher failing to do the expected. Joe Benz and Jim Scott have shown up poorly. Faber and Cicotte have done most of the work for the Sox.

Cunningham of the Tigers was not rated highly before the campaign got under way, but he has turned in as many victories for his team. Harry Coveleskie and George Dauss are not performing as well as they did last year. Dubuc has been a disappointment.

The World Series Hero.

Another pitcher from whom much was expected and little has arrived is George Foster of the Red Sox. Foster was the most talked of pitcher in the country last fall after his great work in the world series, but his work has been poor so far this season. Leonard has been one of the exceptions to the rule of veterans going poorly. He and Ruth have done most of the winning pitching for the world's champions this spring. Shore, Gregg and Pennock have been disappointing.

Harper of Washington is another of the new pitchers who have flashed considerable skill. He is not strictly a newcomer, as he had been tried out before, but he is new as a regular. Boehling has done better than was expected. As for Johnson no comment is necessary. Griffith has neither a big surprise nor a big disappointment on his staff. Every other manager has one of either class; some have both.

FORMER STARS LEAD MINORS.

New Pennsylvania League to Have Great Has Beens at Helms.

The recently formed Pennsylvania State Baseball league will have several former stars in major league society as managers.

There will be eight cities in the circuit—Reading, York, Allentown, Harrisburg, Lancaster, Altoona, Lebanon and Johnstown. The former topnotchers who will manage teams in the league are Willie Keeler, Mike Donlin, Art Devlin, Bill Dahlen, Harry Lumley and Jimmy Sheckard.

TREES AS CIVIC EMBELLISHMENTS

Climate, Nature and Conditions of Soil Must Be Considered.

THE SPACING OF TREES.

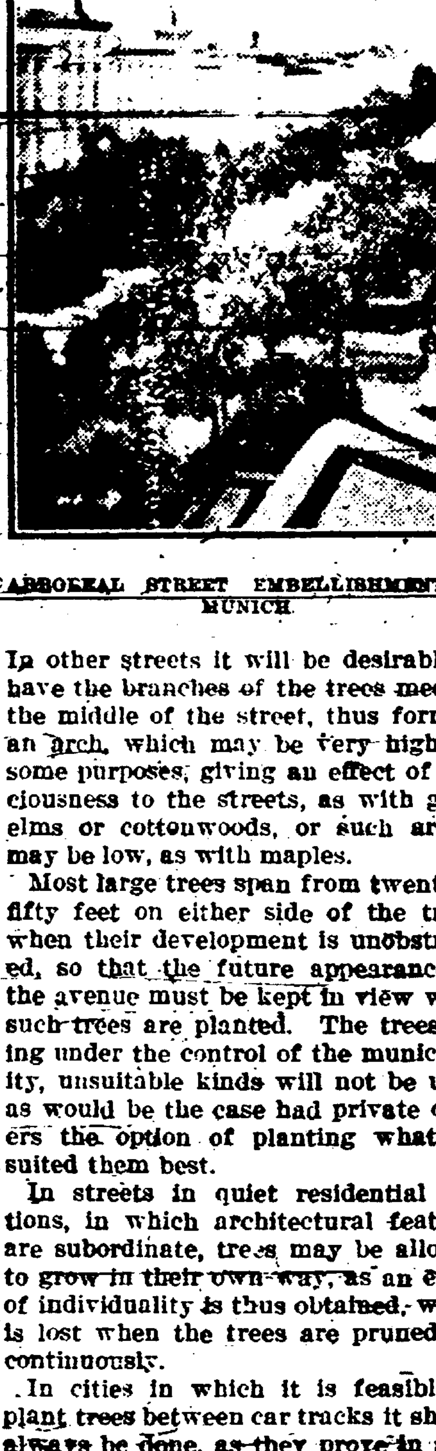
They and Other Vegetation Are Highly Desirable Features For the City Beautiful and Should Be Planted Wherever It Is Possible and Be Under the Control of the Municipality.

[By FRANK KOESTER, city planner and consulting engineer, New York. Author of "Modern City Planning and Maintenance," etc.]

Trees and other vegetation are highly desirable features of civic embellishment and should be employed wherever it is possible to utilize them. They temper the heat and the glare, afford agreeable shade, relieve the eye, improve the air, reduce the violence of the wind and limit the force of the rain, conceal defects and necessary structures, lessen the dust, improve the vistas and offer unending sources of variety and interest.

It is always advisable to have the trees under the control of the municipality and to have them planned to reenforce the character of the street.

In the denser business districts or where a rather complete view, as of some distant mountain or object, is desired the trees should be of a kind that will not grow too large. In other avenues the trees may be larger, leaving, however, an open space to the sky, as though through a wall of vegetation.



ARBOREAL STREET EMBELLISHMENT IN MUNICH.

In other streets it will be desirable to have the branches of the trees meet in the middle of the street, thus forming an arch, which may be very high for some purposes, giving an effect of spaciousness to the streets, as with great elms or cottonwoods, or such arches may be low, as with maples.

Most large trees span from twenty to fifty feet on either side of the trunk when their development is unobstructed, so that the future appearance of the avenue must be kept in view when such trees are planted. The trees being under the control of the municipality, unsuitable kinds will not be used, as would be the case had private owners the option of planting whatever suited them best.

In streets in quiet residential sections, in which architectural features are subordinate, trees may be allowed to grow in their own way, as an effect of individuality is thus obtained, which is lost when the trees are pruned too continuously.

In cities in which it is feasible to plant trees between car tracks it should always be done, as they prove in such location of exceptional value. With grass and shrubbery that side of the track is made more interesting to the passengers and the tracks are made less unsightly to the general public. The undergrowth absorbs a great deal of the noise as well. When trolley wires are used the trees conceal the poles, while shrubbery of large size serves to conceal structures of a purely utilitarian purpose.

Trees in cities must receive the best of care, as they are growing under anomalous conditions and are likely to succumb unless constantly looked after.

In selecting trees for city use, in addition to selecting those which are suited to the aesthetic purposes to be attained, the nature and condition of the soil must also be considered and suitable arrangements made for an adequate water supply. This may often be effected by blind drains laid at the time the tree is planted and regularly filled with water. The system of gutter seepage that is often employed is also useful.

Among the trees which are useful for city purposes are the following: Norway maple, sugar maple, English, Scotch and American elms, cottonwood, horse chestnut, red, white and pin oaks, ash, catalpa, linden, Kentucky coffee tree, thornless honey locust, Lombardy poplar, evergreen pines and cedar.

Natchez's Two Hundredth Anniversary.

Natchez, Miss., will celebrate her two hundredth anniversary late next fall by a gorgeous and spectacular pageant. The pageant will be the main feature of a week's celebration and will give in pantomime form the history of Natchez in seven episodes depicting the rule of the Indians, French, Spanish, English, the days of slavery, the war between the states and the days of modern progress.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

A winsome frock for a winsome maid. Select for its development chiffon taffeta, voile or crepe de chine, 5 yards 40-inch wide being required. Make the skirt short and full, gather it at the top and finish the lower edge with a deep hem and tucks. Over the underbzlouse of net or chiffon adjust a jumper, shirred at the sides and trimmed with braid, and the result will be one of the daintiest frocks for midsummer.

Pictorial Review Costume No. 6647, sizes 16 to 20 years; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

Summer Hats Take On Sunshade Line

FOR THE GARDEN GIRL.

A WIDE brimmed hat of novelty straw in natural tones is faced with pale pink crepe de chine and banded with king's blue velvet ribbon brought under the brim and falling in ends down the back. One big pink rose sits on the brim, affording the only trimming. This is youth's suitable hat and makes a charming sunshade.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

Little Coat of Blocked Silk

6821

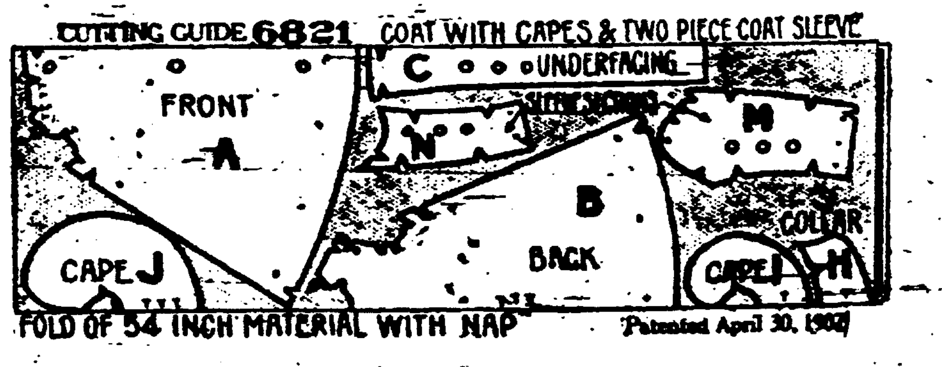
Coat of black and white silk with revers of white and collar of black. If desired double capes may be added to meet the demands of a popular fashion.

Taffeta of block or checked designs makes unusually pretty summer coats for small girls. The latest fad in trimming is to make the revers of white faille or cloth and the collar of black velvet. It is a charming combination and not unreasonably expensive. In medium size the coat shown here requires $2\frac{1}{8}$ yards 54-inch or $3\frac{5}{8}$ yards 36-inch material. The back of the design extends over the shoulders forming a yoke effect. If it is desired not to have the revers, the coat may be finished in high effect at the neck, with turndown collar. The fulness about the waistline may be gathered or smocked, and a half-belt of velvet added.

The back of the coat is laid on a lengthwise fold of material, thus avoiding a seam. The collar is placed to the right. The front, sleeves and underfacing are placed on a lengthwise thread. If the silk is only 36 inches wide, it will be necessary to cut the model from an open width of material, two widths being used at a time, laid right sides facing, so that section will be cut in duplicate.

Cape effects are so much in demand this season that the trimming has been provided in this instance. There is practically no difference in the placing of the pattern sections, except that the capes are laid on a lengthwise fold with the back and collar.

A coat of this design is charming fashioned of light colored silk with capes of organdy, of chiffon cloths. For party wear or gala occasions nothing is daintier for the miss of fourteen years or under.



—Pictorial Review Coat No. 6821. Sizes, 6 to 14 years. Price, 15 cents.

THE EMERGENCY SHELF.

How to Be Always Prepared For Unexpected Guests.

When unexpected guests arrive the hostess naturally wishes to entertain them and to get her share of pleasure from the visit, but that matter of "what to eat" makes her ill at ease. She phones wildly for this and that or rushes out into the kitchen almost as soon as the guests are seated. Later, in taking stock, she finds that she has spent more than was warranted and that the refreshments offered were needlessly lavish or sadly one sided.

The hostess backed by a well stocked emergency shelf and menus arranged to fit any occasion opens her door to the party of friends who "just drop in" with absolute joy. She comfortably visits with her guests, for she knows she can serve dainty, satisfying refreshments in a twinkling from her emergency shelf.

On the emergency shelf there should be canned fish, meats, chicken and fruits, a jar of sweet homemade cookies, packages of plain crackers, a jar of pickles, beef extract and canned soups. A small case of grape juice will answer the call of almost all emergencies for beverages and desserts. Keep a pail of pure leaf lard on hand to mix up quick pastries and to cook croquettes.

FLESH COLORED LINGERIE.

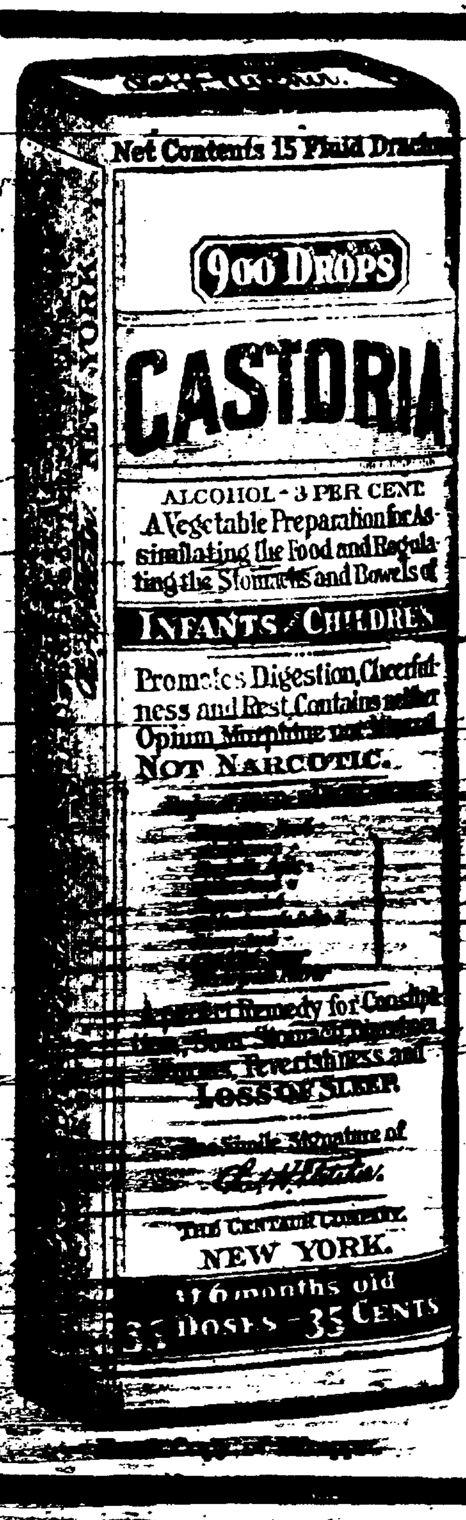
The Fad For Fine Underwear Takes on Colorful Shapes.

Such a hold has flesh color obtained on the popular fancy that even in batiste flesh color is much used for nightgowns and underwear. Flesh color batiste is very effective embroidered in white or in bright pink and pale blue. A white scallop with a dainty floral design in white is particularly attractive on the pale tinted background, and many a pretty dressing jacket, nightgown and chemise or camisole is embroidered with the white. When blue is used in the embroidery it must be used with caution and in some [illegible] white, but it is very effective [illegible] pale blue ribbon in flesh colored lingerie, whether of batiste or silk or satin, and this is being done a great deal by the specialty shops which make a point of dainty and unusual lingerie creations. The combination of pink and blue is gaining steadily in favor in this connection and is useful as well as attractive, since it allows of the garment's use with either pink or blue over finery.

On the Safe Side.

"What is a safety match?"

"Marrying a girl to escape a breach of promise suit."—Exchange.



CASTORIA

For Infants and Children.

Mothers Know That Genuine Castoria Always Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. In Use For Over Thirty Years

CASTORIA

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

King of England and France.

In the first year of the nineteenth century the king of England still bore the title of king of France. It was on Nov. 5, 1800, that the privy council, in consequence of the Irish union, decided that the royal style and title should be changed from "George III., by the grace of God, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith," to "George III., by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith." The abandonment of the title of "king of France" led to England's foreign official correspondence being carried on in English instead of French.—London Spectator.

Origin of the Saw.

According to Apollodorus, the invention of the saw came about in the following way: Talus, so the account goes, having found the jawbone of a huge snake, used it to cut through a piece of wood and, finding that it worked so well, formed an instrument of iron similar to it. The first sawmill concerning which we have any clear knowledge was erected on the island of Madeira somewhere about the year 1400. A few years later one was built at Breslau. There were no sawmills in England prior to 1663. In that year one was built there by a Dutchman, but he was forced to abandon it. Sawmills were erected near London about 1770.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WHOLESOME BREADS.

GRAHAM BREAD.—Scald one pint of milk and one pint of water, melt two tablespoonfuls of lard in liquid. When lukewarm, add one yeast cake dissolved in three-quarters cupful lukewarm water. Make soft batter by adding one quart graham flour, two tablespoonfuls sugar, two teaspoonfuls salt. Cover with doubled warm woolen cloth. Set in warm place over night. In morning add enough white flour to make stiff dough. Knead with white flour until dough will absorb no more and is elastic and does not stick to board (about ten or fifteen minutes). This makes four loaves or three loaves and pan of biscuits. Set to rise again in warm place (shelf over stove) till doubled in bulk. Bake in hot oven, 300 degrees, forty or sixty minutes. Whole wheat or rye bread can be made same way. A couple of handfuls wheat bran make it better added to sponge at night. Raisin bread can be made by halving batter in morning and adding teacupful raisins, cupful sugar and half cupful butter to one part.

Peanut Bread.—Two and one-half cupfuls flour, one-half cupful sugar, one cupful peanuts, chopped fine; two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one teaspoonful salt. Mix all together and add one egg beaten with enough sweet milk to make a stiff batter. Pour in a bread tin and bake forty minutes. This makes one loaf.

Spoon Bread.—One pint of milk heated to boiling point; stir into this one cupful of white cornmeal; cook five minutes; beat in two tablespoonfuls of butter and one-half cupful of cold milk into the mush; add two eggs, well beaten; once more add one-half cupful cold milk. Put into a well buttered dish and bake for one-half hour in rather quick oven.

Brown Bread.—Three cupfuls of meal, one and one-half cupfuls of graham flour, one-half cupful of rye flour, one scant cupful of molasses, just about a quart of milk or water, three level teaspoonfuls of soda, about a good teaspoonful salt.

Anna Thompson.

Cost of a Villa.

When the Smiths' suburban villa was completed and they counted costs it appeared that the painter's bill was $82 in excess of the paperhanger's charges, the plumber charged $30 more than the painter, the mason received $160 more than the plumber, and the carpenter, who charged $24 more than the mason, rendered a bill three times as large as that of the paperhanger. The lot cost half as much as the house, so who can tell how much the Smiths' new home cost?—Boston Transcript.

The Bridge of Boils.

Among the many works carried out by the late Sir John Aird is the most oddly named bridge in the world. This is in Peru, on the railway from Lima to Oroya, spanning a deep and precipitous chasm over 600 feet wide and resting on three gigantic piers.

Many of the men employed on the work were ex-sailors, whose training enabled them to work at dizzy heights. Although the work was necessarily of a most dangerous character, there were comparatively few accidents.

But an epidemic of bubonic plague broke out. So the bridge was officially christened Puente de las Verrugas, or Bridge of Boils, a name which it still retains.—Exchange.

Jackstones.

Most girls and some boys have played in their time the game of dibs or knucklebones or jackstones, but few of them know that the game has existed since the third century B. C. and is probably still older. How it was played in ancient days no one can tell, but the ankle joint bones of the sheep, ox, deer and pig were used, and the game was called "astragal," from the Latin word for the ankle joint. In Scotland pebbles are often employed, whence the name "chuckies." Even precious stones and gold and bronze "stones" have been used, and in some countries the bones were marked with numbers and colored to represent kings, queens, knaves and pawns.—London Globe.

Real Enjoyment.

"What's your idea of enjoying life?"

"Well, I'd like to be able to rent an office to loaf in."—Kansas City Journal.

Not Very Accomplished.

Gerald—My dog knows as much as I.

Geraldine—Why don't you get an intelligent dog?—Chicago Herald.

LADIES

We have on display in our South window a large number of Sets of

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

while they last we will sell them at

70 Cents the Set

The wholesale price is more than that, but we are going to dispose of them at a great sacrifice.

COME EARLY IF YOU WISH TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER

They were bought by the former publishers for premiums, but we are giving no premiums with the

FULTON EVENING TIMES

PRESIDENT GIVEN GREAT LATITUDE

In Drafting National Guard His Prerogatives Excel Any in History.

A difficult and in some respects an anamalous situation with respect to the federalization of the National Guard has developed in connection with the prospective enactment by Congress of the Hay emergency resolution to authorize President Wilson to draft all members of the National Guard and organized militia into the military service of the United States in the present Mexican emergency.

This law not only authorizes the president to draft any or all members of the National Guard or organized militia into the Federal service, but contemplates that the President shall appoint all the officers of the guardsmen when they have once been drafted into the Federal service. The National Guardsmen are now being sent to the border from some states officered by National Gpard officers, bpt it is made plain that none of these men can be sent across the line into Mexico without violation of the Federal constitution as construed by Attornel General Gregory until they have been drafted into the Federal service under the terms of the Hay resolution.

Nor can officers go across the frontier into Mexico in command of those troops, even the officers of the state militia, who accompanied the various units to the border, until they have been commissioned by the President.

The law provides that when the organization, the members of which are drafted into the Federal service are combined into tactical units the president may appoint the officers for units. As construed in military circles and by law officers of the government the Hay resolution means that the President must appoint the officers who will command the various units of the state militia. Under the law he may appoint these officers for the drafted guardsmen from the regular arm or from the, "members of such organizations." This means that the President may take any members of any of the National Guard units and appoint them as ojcers for such organizations when they have once become drafted into the Federal service.

It is the plan of the administration to practically call the officers of the various guard organizations whose members are drafted into the Federal service. In some instances it will be impossible to utilize the services of some of the brigadier generals of the National Guard units of certain states, because the regiments from these states, which furnish less than brigades, will be graded with regiments from other small states and the excess of brigadier generals will have to be eliminated. The vacancies in commissioned personnel will be filled by appointment by the president of regular army officers and by promotion of National Guard officers in some instances.

Officers not above the rank of Colonel will be appointed by the president without the advice and consent of the Senate. Officers from colonel upward in rank will be appointed by the President, but must be confirmed by the Senate.

When the President's call for state troops was issued the members of state organizations were members of the militia. In the mobilization camps they are now being transformed from militia into National Guardsmen as contemplated by the National Defense act of June3, but in the present capacity they are still national guardsmen and not Federal soldiers, although they have been called out by the Federal government.

Under the National Defense act they cannot become Federal soldiers until they have been drafted into the Federal service. The purpose of the Hay resolution is to authorize the drafting of the National Guardsmen into the Federal service so that they may as Federal soldiers be ordered across the line into Mexico in case war is declared. Under the terms of the Hay resolution every man responding to the call will have to be drafted. How and when they will be drafted has not been determined by the War Department. Until they are so drafted they will not be Federal soldiers.

Never before in the history of the government has there been any such plan of drafting adopted. In the Civil war men were drafted but mainly by lot. There was no attempt in the Civil war, it is said, to draft men by units. They were drafted as individuals. In the present situation the emergency resolution contemplates that every member of the National Guard, as well as the militia, may be drafted into the Federal service by the president. It provides that these men and no others be drafted.

The proposed resolution has been purposely worded so as to enable the President to draft both the militia as it existed before the enactment of the National Defense act and the National Guardsmen as they exist after they take the oath and sign the enlistment contract provided fro by the National Defense act.

When militiamen and National Guardsmen are drafted under the terms of the pending Hay resolution, they will cease to be National Guardsmen, just as they cease to be militiamen when, by taking the oath and signing the contract in the present mobilization they become National Guardsment. As National Guardsmen they are not soldiers of the United States in the full sense of the term. The process of drafting is necessary to make them such.

In this situation as soon as the Hay resolution passes, it will be incumbent on the War Department, acting under orders from the President, to make plans for drafting the National Guardsmen into Federal soldiers. and for the President to issue commissions to all the officers to be assigned to command the various units of soldiers so drafted.

REPRIEVED FIVE TIMES SAYS HE NEVER WILL HANG

(By United Press)

Murphysboro, Ill.—Ellston Scott, Illinois' most reprieved murderer, sits calmly in his cell in the county jail here, confident he never will hang for the murder of his sister-in-law at Carbondale last summer.

Scott was sentenced to hang October 16th last, but has been reprieved five times by Governor Dunne. His latest reprieve gives him life until July 14th.

The many reprieves grow out of a dispute between Governor Dunne and Sheriff White of Jackson county. Shortly before the date set for Scott's hanging here Joe Deberry, another negro murderer expiated his crime on the gallows.

Large posters, announcing that moving pictures of the hanging would be shown at a local moving picture theatre reached Governor Dunne.

He made an investigation and, according to his statement, two thousand persons, most of whom had paid $2 for their tickets, saw the Deberry hanging.

Believing the hanging of Deberry a disgrace to Illinois Governor Dunne, shortly before the date Scott was scheduled to hang, wired Sheriff White of this county to send him the specific number of persons who would witness the execution.

Sheriff White replied by stating he would comply with the law which, in this state, allows him a sufficient number of deputies t o prevent trouble.

The answer did not satisfy Governor Dunne and he reprieved Scott.

The same routine has been gone through five times. Now Scott insists he will never hang.

Governor Dunne insists he never will commute Scott's sentence to life, as the crime was "too revolting to be expiated by anything but death."

Governor Dunne is especially antagonistic to capital punishment and might see Scott still alive when his term expires next March.

THE QUIRK TODAY

"The Shadow of Doubt." John and Ned Randolph are inmates of an orphanage. Attracted by John's good looks, wealthy people adopt him. The years pass and both lads have grown to man's estate. John with his educational advantages, has become a successful lawyer. Ned is a struggling shipping clerk.

Driven to desperation Ned steals from his employers. He is imprisoned. In the meantime John has been making constant search for Ned whom he has not seen since the two were in the orphanage.

Ned, on his release, is hounded by the police. He loses one job after another. His wife becomes mortally ill and only an operation which will cost $1,000 will save her life.

John's wife, who is interested in social work learns of Ned's plight in the course of her investigations. But, Ned, on leaving prison, has changed his name to Andrews so that Alice does not even guess his identity. She is determined however to raise money for the "ex-convict."

John refuses it to her, but Herman Collins, a preyer upon women offers her the money. He tells her to come to his rooms to get it. While Alice is there John (who is a friend of Collins) enters. To avert a scene Alice invents an excuse which her husband accepts.

Ned finally obtains, through a strange coincidence, a position in John's office. Alice in the meantime is unable to repay Collins and then she learns the price he demands. The same night Ned discovers that, by mistake, he has taken John's rainmat, while John has his. In the pocket of Ned's coat is a miniature of the mother of the two men, given to Ned on her deathbed. Ned hastens to John's home to return the coat, and finds Alice beside herself at her horrible predicament. To save the good name of the woman who saved his wife's life Ned attempts to open John's safe just as John, who has missed his train, enters his home. Ned is arrested. Things look black for him but, by a turn of destiny, John learns who Ned really is. It is at this point of "The Shadow of Doubt" that the culmination of a series of startling climaxes occur bringing this remarkable photo drama to a sensational and unexpected ending.

Scene from "The Shadow of Doubt" At The Quirk Today.

HER HUSBAND'S OFFICE.

A Story For Wives Who Just Drop In During Business Hours.

"Will you please," asks a secret sufferer, "write something about wives who make unexpected calls at their husbands' offices? I am not guilty of anything, but I think that even the most innocent of men suffers acutely when his wife visits him at his office. There is no way for me to make my wife understand this unless I appear boorish and brutal. Can't you say something about it? Many wives read your column."

Yes, friend, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. We will put it in the form of general propositions, hoping thereby to step on no individual toes. We hold these facts to be proved:

That no husband ever wants his wife to call on him at his office during business hours, except upon his invitation.

That no wife can know how she upsets his routine, disorders the mental processes that go on during those hours and subjects herself to the gossip of his office mates.

That there is no easy way to make a wife see this.

We proceed from these truisms to a few observations.

A lovely creature breezes into her husband's office just because she happens to be passing. She says:

"Now, don't let me disturb you a minute—I know you are busy. Dearie, what good does that desk light do you at that angle? Don't you know you will ruin your eyes? What a mess your desk is in! Look at Mr. Officemate's—how neat it is! Well, just let me stick this little package in your lower drawer and you bring it home with you when you come.

"Well, I must run along, for you're busy. Come out to the elevator with me, dear; I want to speak to you. Who is that disreputable looking man who is waiting in the outer office to see you? Why, it's a perfect disgrace to have such callers!

"You have an appointment with him? How can you make an appointment with such a creature? Well, goodby, dear. Get your shoes shined before you come home—you look awfully sloppy."

And if husband protests against that call her eyes fill with innocent tears and she says:

"Why, I wasn't there five minutes, and you weren't working at anything when I came in! And men call on you and stay half an hour! Of course I'll never come again. Are you ashamed of your wife?"

The Bethlehem Music Festival.

The Bach festival at Bethlehem is one of the most interesting events in musical production in this country. "Musically Bethlehem, Pa., is the most remarkable town or settlement in the United States." In 1780 Bethlehem had an orchestra, probably the first in the United States. In 1901 the Bethlehem music festival was marked by the first performance in America of Bach's complete Christmas oratorio. Bethlehem has been called "the American Oberammergau" and "the American Baireuth." The music festival is held each year.—New York Times.

Pa Has a Daughter.

Willie—Pa, what comes after a million? Mr. Roxleigh—The fortune hunter, my son.—Boston Transcript.

GIBRALTAR FOR FLORIDA.

England Once [illegible] Back in a Trade.

You know [illegible] bility and [illegible] nothing [illegible]. Did you ever hear of a curious little bargain, [illegible] at the [illegible] of the Mediterranean figured as part of the price? It [illegible] to do with an important part of [illegible] own country, and yet [illegible] tioned in any of our histories.

The impregnable fortress was fought over by the Spaniards and the Moors for two centuries, and it came in for the keen interest of Oliver Cromwell, who thundered at the British the fact that if they ever hoped to become the dominating sea power of [illegible] they must control the [illegible] from Gibraltar. This [illegible] lost sight of, but a suitable pretext did not arise until the war of the Spanish succession, when England and France were at each other's throat for the mastery of Europe.

Under Admiral Sir George Rooke the British fleet made an unexpected attack on the Spanish defenses and captured Gibraltar in 1704. Presently the English sickened of their bargain. That was long before the digging of the Suez canal by the French and the Egyptians, and the cost of maintaining the rocky fortress appeared to be out of all proportion to its worth. When Spain was approached by Napoleon for the purchase of Florida as a blow at England from the western theater of the Anglo-French war, England offered Spain to trade Gibraltar for Florida. Had the trade taken place England would not now be undisputed mistress of the sea.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

SCOOPING UP WATER.

How a Fast Train Fills Its Locomotive Tank Without Stopping.

Mr. Cecil J. Allen, chief of the civil engineers' department, supplies in the Great Eastern Railway Magazine some interesting facts on "the picking up of water" by trains at full speed on long journeys. Locomotives, he says, are exceeding bibulous creatures. The engines of one large British railway alone consume some 12,500,000 gallons of water per annum. An express engine under normal conditions of running will consume from thirty to thirty-five gallons of water for every mile covered, taking a general average. On such a journey as that made by the "Cornish Riviera Limited Express," of the Great Western railway, from London to Plymouth, 225¾ miles—the longest daily nonstop run in the world—some four tons of coal are consumed against an average of no less than forty tons of water.

The troughs, Mr. Allen explains, have usually a length of just over a quarter of a mile and are laid perfectly level in the center of the "four foot." Water is taken from them by means of a movable shovel shaped "scoop" under the tender, which is lowered into the trough as the train passes over it at full speed. The sharp edge of this scoop cuts off, as it were, the "top layer" of the water, which is forced up into a large vertical pipe and delivered through a mushroom head or an elbow at the top of the tender into the water tank. As soon as the water gauge on the tender indicates that the tank is full the scoop is raised again. According to the speed at which the train is traveling, it is possible to lift from 2,000 to 3,000 gallons in about fifteen seconds.—Westminster Gazette.

Official Red Tape.

A man sent 10 cents in postage stamps to the patent office at Washington for two copies of a patent. The stamps were returned with a letter saying that currency must be sent. The man sent a dime and at the end of a week was informed that the copies of the patent were exhausted and that the treasury department would return his money. A week later the treasury department advised him that it would take three weeks to audit his account and refund his 10 cents. The man had spent 6 cents for postage and the government twice as much.—Leslie's Weekly.

Reasonably Modest.

"Isn't your friend Wiseun inclined to be just a little bit conceited?"

"Oh, not at all. He just thinks his views are bound to be right and everybody else's nearly certain to be wrong."—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

AFTER GASOLINE, WHAT?

We May In Time Learn How to Run Motorcars With Alcohol.

Must we give up motorcars altogether? Must we take back the horse? No mechanical engineer will assent to that. Motorcars we shall always have, but motorcars which will be driven by some new fuel.

What fuel? Perhaps alcohol, perhaps kerosene. Both have been the subject of experiment. If either is employed a new type of engine must be created.

Alcohol is a product of organic nature. Every blade of grass, every plant, every tree, whether dead or alive, is a source of alcohol. Not until the world has been stripped of vegetation—and that can never happen so long as there are water, sunshine and soil—will the supply of alcohol be exhausted. And when that day dawns man himself will perish.

Of alcohol we have made but little use as a source of power. Coal, oil and waterfalls have been too abundant; they need not be manufactured. But alcohol is not stored up in pockets out of which it gushes at the tap of a hammer. A mass of sawdust, a heap of potatoes—in a word, some form of vegetation—must be chemically [illegible] which is stored all the energy that the sun has poured upon the foliage of the earth. Alcohol is distilled sunshine.

As the oil supply of the world nears depletion, as the price of oil fuels and distillates increases, alcohol will drive more and more of our machinery. The [illegible] the stumpage that reckless lumbermen leave in their tracks, the dry husks of corn that farmers now burn in the fields—all these will propel the motorcar of the future, in the form of alcohol.—Waldemar Kaempffert in McClure's Magazine.

[illegible] OF THE COWBIRDS.

[illegible] Sing and Won't Build [illegible] For Themselves.

[illegible] is known by the company he keeps, so this bird is named for the cows which he follows all day. [illegible] prefers the company of the cows has always been a mystery. [illegible] he ate flies which [illegible], but recent examina[illegible] the bird's favorite food consists of weed seeds and grasshoppers. Yet he'll follow the animals all day, sometimes perching on their backs to steal a ride. You've guessed his name, the cowbird.

Farmers have learned to value this bird very highly. He destroys millions of harmful insects and quantities of weed seeds. But then he should be able to do a lot of good work for the farmer, because the bird has no family cares.

Mrs. Cowbird, you see, instead of building a nest of her own, lays her egg in the nest of another bird, usually picking out the nest of a bird much smaller than herself. She always depends, too, on the good naturedness of the owner of the nest to hatch the egg and rear the young bird.

Sometimes the owner of the home will push the strange egg out on the ground. The yellow warbler often [illegible]es to work and builds another nest over the intruder. Other birds hatch the strange egg, and then spend much time and energy feeding the young bird.

You'll know the cowbird by his brown head and neck and glossy black coat. He thinks he can sing and tries very hard, but you'll laugh at his efforts when you hear him.—Philadelphia North American.

His Method.

The little girl who was visiting at a neighbor's house had gone out to look at the horses.

"Here's one of them," she said, "that has watery eyes and coughs and hangs his head just the way papa's horse did last summer."

"What did your papa do for his horse?" asked the owner of the animals.

"He sold him," was the innocent answer.—Pearson's Weekly.

Prune Little and Often.

Much of the beauty of roadside trees and shrubs depends upon how skillfully they have been trained. Pruning should be done on the principle of "a little and often." From the start give them that little direction from time to time that will keep them in perfect form and not allow forked main branches. All cuts should be made with a saw and all wounds covered with a coat of paint or some other preservative.—S. T. Maynard in Tree Talk.

Optimistic.

Grubbs—I never realized until now what a thoroughly convinced optimist Binks is. Stubbs—What made you form your new estimate of him? Grubbs—The fact that he is trying to raise chickens, roses and two bull pups all on the same lot.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

A Large Truth.

"I wish I could earn a large fortune."

"You've got the wrong idea, my boy. Fortunes aren't earned; they're saved."—Detroit Free Press.

No Safeguard.

"That fellow is as dumb as an oyster."

"Maybe he is, but even oysters, dumb as they are, find it hard to keep out of a stew."—Baltimore American.

Macaroni.

The word "macaroni" is taken from a Greek derivation, which means "the blessed dead," in allusion to the ancient custom of eating of feasts for the dead.

PRISONERS OF WAR

In Former Times They Were Held as Virtual Slaves.

HAD TO EARN THEIR LIBERTY.

Then the System of Ransom Arose and With It Cruel Abuses and a Lawless Traffic In Captives—Rules That Govern Civilized Nations Today.

The prisoner of war in our day is the subject of an elaborate code of rules drawn up at meetings of The Hague peace conference. No property must be taken from him except arms and military equipment. He must not be kept in close confinement if that can be avoided, and if possible his parole must be accepted. He may be set to any work for which he is reasonably fitted—although officers are not bound to work—but he must be allowed a similar standard of life and credited with a similar scale of pay to that which obtains among the soldier-artificers of the conquering nation.

When set free the cost of his maintenance will be deducted and he will receive the balance in cash. He may be shot when trying to escape, but if caught alive he must not be punished except by curtailment of his liberty. These are a few of the many rules by which all civilized nations are now bound in regard to their prisoners of war.

Among savage men the destiny of a prisoner was to be eaten, massacred in cold blood or tortured for sport, until it dawned one day upon some primitive political economist that a live captive had labor value, and so arose the institution of slavery. Among free peoples like the Teutons, war prisoners were the only slaves allowed, and they might in time earn their freedom. This idea of commutation became the custom of medieval Europe, applied as "prize money" to ships and "ransom" to individuals. All officers could claim the right to offer a reasonable ransom, which went into the pocket of the captor. Sometimes officers would ransom a whole troop of their men.

Kings or great captains were ransomed by their nations. Richard the Lion Heart had a woeful time of it until England ransomed him from the Emperor Henry. King John of France, taken at Poitiers by the Black Prince, was held by England to ransom until the Duke of Anjou came as hostage while John went to raise the necessary cash. King David of Scotland, captured by Queen Eleanor, never persuaded the thrifty Scots to pay the whole of his ransom and became a dependent as a consequence.

In Froissart's engaging chronicles you may read how bands of mercenary troops quarreled with gallant and impetuous commanders, whose only object was the destruction of the enemy. The mercenaries were out to take prisoners and trade in the ransoms. This traffic gave rise to infinite abuses, including torture and all manner of dishonesty. Sir John Falstaff—Shakespeare's Falstaff—was notorious for an extensive and unscrupulous traffic in ransoms. Yet it was not until during the eighteenth century wars that an agreement to end the custom was come to between the European commanders. Even then it lingered on in practice until the eve of the Napoleonic wars, when it was swept away for the newer idea of exchange of prisoners, rank for rank.

One great change brought about by the new system was that the prisoners became a state care and responsibility. Whether this change made for greater humaneness of treatment depended in part upon the conquering nation, but even more upon the individual governor or jailer. This may be seen in the varying accounts we have of the conditions of prisoners of war in England during the long struggle with Napoleon.

Lincolnshire's fens make good centers for a military compound. George Borrow, in "Lavengro," has given a terrible picture of the conditions at Norman's Cross prison, in the fen district. "Rations of carrion meat," he writes, "and bread from which I have seen the very hounds occasionally turn away were unworthy entertainment even for the most ruffian enemy, when helpless and captive."

In these prisons the inmates made various articles of commercial utility, such as straw plait, which were bought of them by dealers for a miserable sum, the proceeds procuring them a few trifling comforts and the luxury of tobacco, or affording the bribes necessary for the smuggling out of letters.

More tolerable was the fate of those settled on parole in such towns as Chesterfield, where they endured actual confinement under guard only at night, being free within certain bounds during the day. In many cases, as time went by, prisoners who had won the confidence of their guards became virtually free in all respects, starting workshops as cabinetmakers, etc., or teaching drawing, music or French to the children of the well to do. Their geniality and politeness soon made them very popular with the blunt and serious Derbyshire folk, and quite a number of them married and settled down in the Chesterfield district, where the traces of this settlement may be seen both in local names and in olive skins and other features.—Philadelphia Ledger.

It is hard to fail, but it is worse never to have tried to succeed. In this life we get nothing save by effort.—Theodore Roosevelt.

MUTILATED ISSUES

THE FULTON EVENING T...

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2. No. 473. FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 1916 Price, One Cent

PREPAREDNESS OR NO PREPAREDNESS

All Fulton Will Parade Independence Day

Mexico Believes War Averted

(By United Press)

Mexico City—The Foreign Office has practically completed the reply to the last American note which may be given out within a few hours.

The general belief is that it will be pacificatory and will relieve the possibility of war between the United States and Mexico. The majority of well informed persons in the capital believe there will be no hostilities. They base this belief not only on their knowledge of conditions here, but on the attitude of Wall Street and London financial institutions which would be affected seriously were war to ensue.

MEXICAN ENVOY KEEPS SECRETARY WAITING

(By United Press)

Washington—Calling on Secretary of State Lansing today, Mexican Ambassador Arrabando delivered to him an official copy of the instrument which ordered the release of the American prisoners at Chihuahua, the State Department announced today following the visit.

Previous to the call Secretary Lansing announced that he expected to receive the reply soon, and when the Envoy had left the department he said that the latter had not delivered the reply to him and that he did not know when it would arrive or what its contents would be.

CHAMBERLAIN POINTS OUT WEAKNESS OF GUARD

Washington—"Had trouble threatened with any powerful aggressive nation instead of Mexico the last few days, we would have been shown the inherent weakness of the National Guard system even more strikingly than has been the case, Chairman Chamberlain of the Senate Military Committee said today in an interview with the United Press.

Last Minute News

(By United Press)

Deeming, N. M.—Four Villistas, who were in the Columbus raid last week, were hanged in the jail here early today. The men were put to death in pairs on a double scaffold. They faced each other calmly.

* * *

Ossining, N. Y.—"The Paper Box Kid," Antony Shillitanni, forfeited his life in the electric chair at 6:00 a. m. today, for the killing of four men. Governor Whitman, who was prosecuting attorney for Greater New York at the time of the killing, refused to intervene, declaring his belief that Antony was sane despite his recent running amuck in the death house and killing his keeper.

* * *

New York—Colonel Roosevelt left today for Washington where he will address the Press Club of that city at a dinner tonight.

* * *

Vera Cruz—The battleship Nebraska and the Ward liner Monterey arrived here today to take off American refugees. The Nebraska will transport 500 persons and the Monterey 300.

* * *

New York—Captain Hans Tauscher was found not guilty of the charge of conspiring to inaugurate a military movement against Canada, which had for its object the destruction of the Welland Canal.

ALL HYPHENS WILL BE OMITTED BY MARCHERS ON INDEPENDENCE DAY

It often happens that there is little consolation in looking at the question of preparedness in the face and think it is all right to go ahead in the same old slip-shod way, leaving the matter rest for some future time, and then awakening suddenly to find some one kicking us all over the lot.

In this way the people all over the country have come to talk preparedness—industrial and otherwise—mostly otherwise, hence the dissenters whose numbers are legion. But that question matters little right now, at least here in Fulton, where all heads and almost every ounce of energy are being put forth to make of the coming week one continuous round of joy, and this regardless of troubles in the southwest.

* * *

Independence Day, in the morning, will mark the date of the first step in Fulton's part in the matter of recognizing the necessity of preparedness. The hour for the big show to begin is set for as soon as possible after nine o'clock in the morning. At that hour the members of the respective fraternal organizations who will participate in the preparedness parade are expected to meet at the various headquarters, proceeding to the D. L. & W. station, in whose neighborhood the line will form.

* * *

Five Bands of Music

The Chamber of Commerce has arranged to have five big bands of music in line, viz: the Elks of this city, the Elks of Oswego, the K. of P. of Oswego, and the Masonic band of the same city. The Phoenix band of more than twenty pieces will be in line also, so that no one should have cause to complain about a lack of music.

* * *

When asked for a description of the parade, Secretary Hollenga said "It will be a silent parade, which means that no demonstration is looked for or expected. It will be simply a quiet testimonial of sober minded Americans marching for love of country—the most glorious on earth."

Continuing the Secretary conveys the information that the paraders will not comprise alone members of the secret and beneficial organizations of the city, but of every man, young and old, who desires to in that way testify to the greatness of our country, the only requirement being that the marcher shall be on hand when the parade starts.

The line of parade will be from West Broadway to East First street, to Oneida street to Fourth street and to the East Side Park which will be surrounded, countermarching to the Plaza and then disbanded.

French Retake Works In Spite of Liquid Fire

(By United Press)

Paris—The Germans last night shifted their attacks to the west bank of the Meuse and delivered several violent attacks preceded by liquid fire, between Avacourt and Hill 304, the War Office announced today. All, these attacks were repulsed, the enemy suffering frightful losses, but east of Hill 304 the Germans carried the first line of a fortified works, in which all the French occupants had been buried. The French recaptured the works by a most brilliant counter attack.

* * *

Paris—The Echo de Pris, a newspaper, declared today that the Russians have captured the important Galician city of Kolomea.

Villa Fighting is Belief of Mexican

(By United Press)

Eagle Pass, Texas—Juan Rodriguez, a Mexican resident in Texas, arrived here this afternoon from Correon, and said that General Villa has joined the Carranzistas at Mont Clova with several hundred men. He claims to know Villa well and says he cannot be mistaken.

* * *

Washington—Secretary of State Lansing today asked the Mexican Ambassador to speed up Carranza's reply to the last American demand.

GEN. PERSHING'S LINE REPORTED COMPLETE

(By United Press)

San Antonio, Texas—General Funston received a message from Colonel Gaston today, denying reports that the Carranza garrison at Ojinaga had attacked the American forces at Presidio, Texas. General Funston also denied reports of Carranza forces cutting General Pershing's line of communication with this place.

The War Department at Washington has issued orders that no information regarding troop movements shall be given out by any army men. This is a precaution against Mexicans in this country furnishing information that might result in the destruction of bridges, etc.

Senate May Act to Life of Sir Roger Casement

(By United Press)

Washington—A request that President Wilson intervene to save the life of Sir Roger Casement is made in a resolution introduced in the Senate today by Senator Martine of New Jersey.

The resolution was referred to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Chairman Stone promised it early consideration.

LITTLE MOVEMENT OF FREIGHT THESE DAYS

Freight traffic throughout Central New York, and in fact all over the state, has been badly handicapped because of the movement of troop trains. Government supply trains and trains carrying soldiers have the right of way over all other trains and this has caused some delays.

The Central, New England and New York, New Haven and Hartford have announced embargoes superceding all others which exclude all freight except live stock and perishable freight because of troop movements. Other roads, it is said, are beginning to run out of cars, although no further embargoes have been placed as yet.

Employes of the New York Central have been instructed to give government freight the right of way over all other freight. To that end cars containing different colored signs of the United States army have been distributed. Instructions are given that all cars bearing these signs be pushed to their destination without delay.

The twenty-eight hour law with regard to the shipment of livestock has been lifted insofar as it effects shipments of army horses and mules. The law is to the effect that all live stock shipped must be taken from the cars at the end of every twenty-eight hours for feeding, watering and exercise. All shipments of army horses, however, will be rushed to their destination without regard to this law being cared for as well as possible on the train.

ING TIMES

...e Grange Building, East First Street,

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

FRIDAY, JUNE 30, 1916

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Grand Rapids (Mich.) Herald:

Among Poland's heroes there is none more reverently remembered than John Sobieski (John III.), who died June 17, 1696, two hundred and twenty years ago today. In his day Poland was a nation, ruled by a King of its own choosing and a diet of its own people.

John Sobieski was the son of Jacob Sobieski, castellan of Galicia. He was the greatest warrior in Poland's history, and one of the first generals of his time. Winning honors and victories in defense of Poland, he was appointed to the supreme command of the Polish armies, and on May 20, 1674, the diet named him king to succeed Michael Wisniowiecki. During his reign, as John III., his armies were almost constantly in the field in defense of Christendom against the Turks or in efforts to regain Poland's lost territory. He achieved a profound victory over the Turks and Mongols in 1683, and raised the siege of Vienna, but jealousy among his people, the ingratitude of the Austrians, and the reopening of hostilities with other nations made the remainder of his reign an unhappy one. He died a sorrowful monarch.

With the death of the great Sobieski, Poland's glory dimmed, and the end neared. Today the descendants of men who once fought for Christianity, and to drive the Turks from Europe are nationless. Their land is overrun with the warriors of other nations, their homes are violated, their liberties restricted. Poland is no more. Yet the Poles are hopeful. Out of the present blood and wretchedness they are praying and hoping independence again will come, and in their prayers and their hopes they picture the gallant figure of the great Sobieski who braved much for his Poland.

* * *

Boston Transcript:

The power of silence to achieve received a remarkable demonstration at Chicago last week in the nomination by the Republican National Convention for the Presidency of a man who refused to say a single word in his own behalf. The conscription of Mr. Hughes came as the result of a general popular demand which could not be drowned by the speech of those who sought the nomination.

The power of silence to avenge was exercised at St. Louis when the Democratic National Convention was called to order by the chairman of the national committee, Hon. William F. McCombs, who made a speech without mentioning the name of President Wilson or his administration. The uniformity with which he ascribes to the Democratic party all the credit for what he is pleased to regard as its "great achievements" during the last four years is deliberate and significant. If the omission throughout the speech of the name of the titular head of the party escaped the notice of the convention, it will not fail to command the attention and excite the curiosity of the country. The speaker was the generalissimo of the Wilson forces in the Baltimore convention, and in recognition of his arduous labor in behalf of Mr. Wilson's nomination was made chairman of the national committee. As far as his health would permit he bore the brunt of the management of the campaign.

Whether it was his volunteer service preceding the convention, his successful generalship in the convention or the recklessness with which he risked his health in the campaign that followed, or the combination, that disqualified him in the mind of President Wilson for any association with the Administration, we hesitate to venture an opinion. Colonel George Harvey or "Marse" Henry Watterson may be able to throw some light upon the cause of that detachment from official relationship which Mr. Wilson has so frequently appeared to regard as a suitable reward of disinterested political effort of which he has been the beneficiary. Until those authorities can be heard from, however, there is a line in Mr. McCombs' St. Louis speech which possesses a pertinent ring: "Ambition is a noble attribute, but when it is adulterated with greed, a cataclysm is inevitable." The suppression or omission of the name of the President from the opening speech of the convention assembled to renominate him for re-election may not turn out to be a cataclysm. It is nevertheless an unadulterated fact, to which the opposition will be greedy to give emphasis on every platform in the coming campaign.

* * *

The Pittsburg Press:

In all the peace talk which now occupies so much newspaper space but the inspiration of which is so hard to trace, nobody seems to think of the bankers. Nobody suspects them of prompting the peace overtures or of being active in promoting peace sentiment. Doubtless it would be doing them a gross injustice to think that they are wholly indifferent to the efforts to bring the war to an end, and yet one thing is certain—the old and familiar notion that a world war could not begin without the consent of the world's greatest bankers and that even though it perchance did begin without their consent it would stop the moment they were tired of advancing funds—this notion, we say, has been contradicted most rudely by everything that has happened since August, 1914.

There is not one of the belligerent powers which is not apparently preparing for new and vast bond issues to carry the war further. If the great bankers see no further profit for themselves in this continued use of capital for destructive purposes, and if therefore they wish and hope for an early peace, they are giving no signs of it. One cannot avoid an impression, under all the circumstances, that they are swept helplessly onward by the same powerful influences which have controlled the course of the great nations of which they respectively are parts. Much as the popular imagination is inclined to set the world's great bankers even above the world's monarchs, the impression made upon careful observers is that in the tremendous convulsion in which civilization has been laboring during the last twenty-two months the potentates of finance have been playing the role of servants to their respective nations, not the role of masters.

As one of the financial reviews last week pointed out the English house of commons has passed the second credit for this year. This will last, according to present calculations, till the middle of the first week in August. It makes the eleventh credit voted since the war began, the total new debt being $11,910,000,000. This is over ten times the total debt of the United States, which is the richest country on the globe. Our informations as to German war loans is not so exact. While Germany's total since the war began is less than Great Britain's the Vossische Zeitung reports that the Berlin government is to propose early in June a bill for a new loan of about $2,500,000,000, which is over twice the national debt of the United States. Every one of the belligerents is still violently straining its credit resources.

* * *

Memphis Commercial Appeal:

Italy has been at war with Austria for a little over a year, and Italy has played a very small part in the great struggle that is destined to change the map of Europe.

The position of Italy has not been one to win the admiration of neutral nations. Italy had no direct occasion to enter the war. There had been a long standing grievance against Austria, but not of sufficient gravity to precipitate trouble.

The whole truth is that a year ago Italy thought that Austria had expended her military force; she thought the time opportune to step in and take possession. Italy remained on the auction block a long time before war was finally decided upon. Italy wanted to fight, but wanted to fight for the cause that paid her best. The result will not add to the glorious memory of Italy's past.

The recent retreat is equivalent to a determined defeat. Italy has exhausted her strength. She attempted a victory which turned to Dea sea fruit.

No one doubts the wonderful fighting ability of the Italians. They have made themselves felt many times before. They are distinguished among the brave. They have won distinction in the achievement of arms. This time Italy has not distinguished herself. She has signally failed to do what she so bravely told the world she would do. She has again been humiliated by the Austrians.

Penzance and Oxford.

A curious coat of arms, dating back to early religious times, is that possessed by Penzance. The town is called Pen Sans on the corporation seal, and the coat of arms shows the head of John the Baptist on a charger.

Pen Sans is old Cornish for Holy Head, and so that the expression might be properly shown in the arms of the town the head of John the Baptist was chosen. The date of the coat of arms of Penzance is 1614.

The most appropriate coat of arms of any town in England is that belonging to Oxford. It shows an ox and commemorates the fact that the site of the town was originally on a part of the river fordable by oxen; hence Ox-ford.

Poetry and Pleasure.

The poet writes under one restriction only—namely, the necessity of giving immediate pleasure. Nor let this necessity of producing immediate pleasure be considered as a degradation of the poet's art. It is far otherwise. It is an acknowledgment of the beauty of the universe, an acknowledgment the more sincere because not formal, but indirect. It is a task light and easy to him who looks at the world in the spirit of love. Further, it is a homage paid to the native and naked dignity of man, to the grand elementary principle of pleasure, by which he feels and lives and moves.—William Wordsworth.

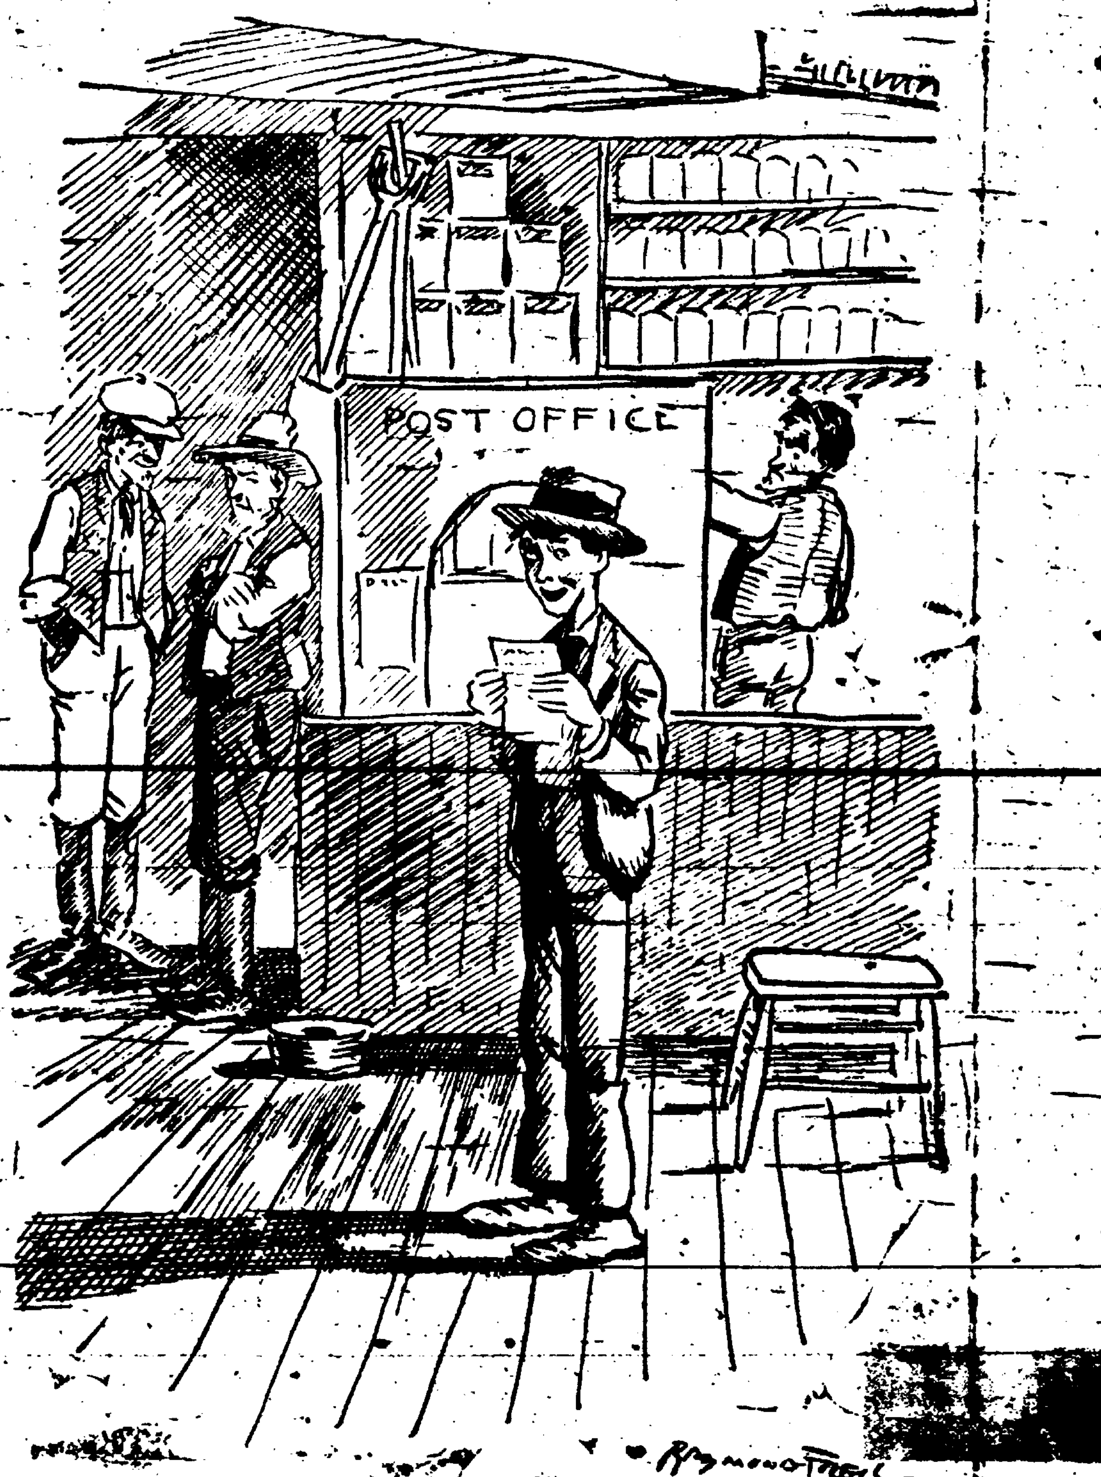
Clocks for Gift Purposes

Every home needs a clock. The new homes of Dan Cupid's latest victims are no exception. We are showing a large line of clocks which are especially desirable for gift purposes. Every movement is guaranteed—every style is correct. Whether you prefer mahogany, oak, bronze, gold plated or white enamel, you will find styles in our store that will surely please you.

WM. C. MORGAN, Jeweler

The Hallmark Store Quirk Theatre Building

Days You'll Never Forget



THE DAY YOU RECEIVED YOUR FIRST LOVE LETTER BY REGULAR MAIL

MOUNT PLEASANT.

The W. F. M. S. meeting has been postponed until July 12th, at Mrs. Charles Osborne's.

* * *

Mrs. Nada Collins and daughters visited in Syracuse recently.

* * *

Mrs. Edna Vant is visiting relatives in Michigan.

* * *

Mrs. Rockwood's circle will hold an ice cream social at the home of William Rath this evening. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

* * *

Levi Walker, of Scriba, called on old neighbors last week.

* * *

Damin Pearson and family were recent guests at O. Coles.

* * *

The trail hitters' meeting was a genuine feast to those who availed themselves of the opportunity. Forty-five were present, eight of whom were members of the Business Men's Club.

* * *

Mrs. Hazel White and Mrs. Door Calkins, Jr., and her daughter, are ill.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lewis and son, called on their sister, Mrs. Ella Dexter, in Oswego, recently and reviewed the farewell parade given the 48th Separate Company.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William Springer are entertaining their six grandsons, of Oswego.

* * *

A number of invitations have been received here to the marriage of Wilhelmina Boulier to Harry Hamlin of Euclid, at the home of the bride.

* * *

The L. A. S. will furnish a chicken pie dinner July 4th, after which a ball game will be played between a local team, captained by J. Whitney and a team from North Volney; also a nail driving contest for ladies, a potato race for girls and one for boys under twelve years; a twine race for girls, 12 years; a sack race for boys under 12, and a running race for boys over 12 and under 18, and a standing jump for men. In the evening a fine program has been arranged, consisting of chorus singing by forty voices, in national songs; solos by Evelyn Rowlee, Ross Rowlee, Ernest Simons, Anna Baldwin and Stewella Deull and Mrs. George Peckham. Recitations by Mrs. Charles Osborne, Mrs. Evelyn Pitcher, Miss Evelyn Rowlee, Mrs. Roy Balcom, Mrs. Addie Sparks, Miss Pauline Hale; after which ice cream and cake will be served.

* * *

One of Mount Pleasant's prominent farmers wishes to advise his friends who have bald spots on their heads, to be sure to put on a hat or cap when going to hive bees. He tried the alternative recently and it took the combined efforts of his wife and daughter, with tins pans, etc., to prevent about two quarts of the lively fellows from swarming on his shining pate.

* * *

Edward Durbey and wife entertained Mr. and Mrs. Sorg, of Syracuse over the week end, and and together they motored to Redfield.

* * *

Mrs. Abner Lamb is home from the Oswego hospital, partially recovered from an illness.

* * *

Miss Aleze Lockwood was a week-end guest of Mrs. Richard Vant.

* * *

John Osborne, of Constantia, spent the week-end with his brother Almon.

* * *

Ernest Springer, of the Fulton Chocolate Works, spent Monday with his parents.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wright have a new baby boy.

* * *

Edward and Albert Durfey are attending the S. of V. encampment at Utica.

* * *

Although the season is very backward, Earle Foster is marketsing some of the finest berries ever seen in these parts.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

ON COMING INTO A PLACE BY RAIL

Often Town's Worst Foot Is Put Foremost and Bad Impression Given.

To the unfortunate habit of entering cities through the slummiest, because it is the cheapest, route they can conveniently use, railways join the more or less vicious custom of making the urban and suburban regions they traverse worse than those regions were before their arrival. They effect that undesirable end by producing as many ugly noises and scattering as much grime as the law allows—at least that much—and so driving away all except the most careless of neighbors.

Only within years comparatively recent have any of the American railways seemed to mind the existence of these conditions or their own aggravation of them. Some of the roads apparently don't mind them yet and others not as much as they should.

The great majority of the railway stations seen are most miserable specimens of the builders' art. They are almost as ill kept as ill designed, and, though half-hearted attempts to improve the immediate surroundings of what most of us will insist on calling "depots" have been made here and there, too often nothing of the kind has ever been attempted and the "grounds" of the stations are brilliant examples of neglect.

Now and then the inhabitants of one of these towns—usually the women—decide that it is necessary to "do something" about the matter. They raise a little money and set about bettering things, and, sometimes without help from the railway and sometimes, as in the case mentioned, with assistance from it in the shape of labor, they clear away rubbish, sow some grass seed and set out a few flowering shrubs. That helps, but the old stations remain as bad as before.—New York Times.

SCHOOL GROUND CONTEST.

City of McAlester Offers Prizes For Improved Playgrounds.

Each ward school in the city of McAlester has a full city block for building and grounds, writes F. D. Pittman, commissioner of public works for McAlester, Okla., in the American City. A year and a half ago these grounds were very rough and rocky, and no attempt had ever been made to beautify them. At the opening of school in September, 1914, the writer inaugurated a contest for the improvement of school grounds which was to last a whole year. Six wards entered the contest, competing for a drinking fountain presented by the Fortnightly club.

The results have been remarkable. The once unsightly grounds are now beautifully parked playgrounds without a rock and bordered with flowers and vines. The high school caught the spirit, and its grounds, formerly a waste place, have been transformed into a veritable park. Trees and flowers were planted by the children and their parents, and the grounds were sodded with Bermuda grass.

PRIZE WINNING SCHOOL GROUND IN M'ALESTER.

The prize was won by the First ward, with the Second and Fourth close contestants. The cost of the transformation which won the prize was, aside from material and work donated, $18.50 for plants and $12 for fertilizer and labor. The value of the results is incalculable. The movement has spread to the homes of the city and to surrounding towns, and the towns of the entire county are awakened.

In every ward school of the city and in the high school there is an active parents and teachers' club, and the student bodies have been organized into civic associations. The work of caring for the school grounds is being carried forward this year without a prize offer in order to see how strongly our people desire civic attainment for its own sake alone. I am glad to report that almost as much enthusiasm is being shown as if a prize were at stake.

To Replan New Orleans.

The New Orleans Association of Commerce has revived the movement for a replanning of New Orleans under the direction of a scientific planning commission. A committee has been appointed to take up the study of the question where a former committee, handicapped by a lack of funds was compelled to drop it.

SUBURBAN TOWNS NOW PULL TOGETHER

Central Executive Committee of Trade Boards Being Formed.

In no section of southeastern Pennsylvania are organized boards of trade composed of representative business and professional men more active in the furtherance of community development plans than in the northern suburban section, that district lying north of Philadelphia and comprising the Old York road and North Penn districts.

More than a thousand men have affiliated themselves within the last year with organizations of this type, and half a score of growing communities are benefiting because of their activities. Boroughs that have felt the influences of organized effort are Sellersville, Ambler, Lansdale, North Wales, Quakertown, Doylestown, Perkasie, Souderton and Jenkintown.

Virtually every town in the North Penn section has its board of trade. A movement is now being furthered by H. J. Dager, president of the Ambler board of trade, for the formation of a central executive committee, to be composed of delegates from each organization. Its object will be absolute co-operation for the consummation of any movement started for the good of any single community or the obtaining of any industry for any community.

A report just issued outlines what has been accomplished in the last year. This is what has been done:

Two cleanup days established; collection of garbage and ashes inaugurated as a system; receptacles for waste placed on the principal highways; signs placed on motoring highways; an "old home week" conducted; community Christmas tree, with distribution of gifts to children; 1,500 rosebushes planted on lawns within the borough; 3,000 shade trees planted on borough property; physical training classes for both sexes established; playground movement started; practical aid offered Grand View hospital, the only institution of its type between Chestnut hill and Bethlehem; assurance of support of the movement to establish the Sellersville sewerage system at a cost estimated at $25,000; regular inspections of milk and water supplies; new industries obtained; exhibits of art work; exhibits of work of children in the public schools; co-operation in the movement to free the Springhouse and Quakertown turnpike and other toll roads in the northern suburban section.

BEAUTY INCREASES VALUES.

Trees and Flowers Planted About a Place Add In a Material Way.

A few trees, shrubs and flowers planted in appropriate places about the house and other buildings actually add to the cash value of the home and at the same time give a simple beauty and inviting appearance to the farm or town that make it a more pleasant place to live in.

F. A. Aust of the agricultural experiment station of the University of Wisconsin offers these hints on home grounds planning: First, the house is the central feature and should occupy the most prominent location; second, other buildings are best put farther from the road and should, if possible, be screened off by trees and shrubs; third, the lawn, being the foreground of the home, should look inviting and should seem to say, "Come and rest" rather than "Keep off;" fourth, shrubs are of good service, especially for filling in empty looking places and screening off unsightly objects; fifth, vines give shade and beauty to the porch and may be well used to cover fences, walks and outhouses; sixth, flowers lend variety and color, but as a rule should be made into borders rather than to occupy conspicuous places; seventh, walks, drives, etc., are best when inconspicuous; eighth, straight rows of trees or shrubs and straight walks and drives are apt to be stiff and formal; curves are more graceful and pleasing; ninth, beauty lies, first of all, in simplicity and harmony. A few shrubs and trees arranged with some plan are more effective than a multitude scattered about aimlessly. Every single plant should fit in its place and not be out of tune with the rest.

Municipal Swimming Pool.

Oakdale, Cal., is a town of but 1,500 people, with a thickly settled tributary territory. Both city folks and farmers approved the idea of a municipal swimming pool, and farmers coming in from the nearby country use the pool more freely than the city people on hot summer days.

The cost of construction and maintenance is so low that any farming community of 500 people can enoy the pleasures of a swimming pool. Completed, this pool cost $1,700, and it serves a double purpose—a place of recreation and a method of flushing the sewers.

The pool is built on a high piece of ground in the form of an ellipse sixty feet long and forty feet wide. It is not heated except by the sun's rays. The pool holds 100,000 gallons of water, and the cost of filling is about $2. It is built of concrete and ranges from one to nine feet in depth.

So successful has been the municipal swimming pool, which was built a year ago, that many western towns, both large and small, are copying the idea.

SEE WORK WRONG

Suffrage, Red Cross and Settlement Adherents Toil, She Says.

DEBUTANTE UNDER ILLUSION.

Miss Josephine Miller, Who, With Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, Established Red Cross Service In France, Finds Women Nobler Than She Thought. Sights Inspired Her.

St. Louis.—There are scores of things a woman can do these days that sound like poetry and work like prose. There's New York settlement service that Fifth avenue bridge players love to think would be "perfectly fascinating;" there's Red Cross service that suggests "reams of romance" for the debutante; there's the old reliable woman's suffrage, and it, you know, is a "wonderful cause." But, take it from a woman who has done all of these things, the fascination, the romance and the wonder lose their glamour when it comes right down to the everyday hard work.

Miss Josephine Miller, who returned from the Ambulance Americaine in Paris to represent the Arkansas Equal Suffrage league at the recent Democratic national convention, has forgotten to look for romance—she's busy loving women.

Miss Miller spent a year in New York social settlement work and found that the women of the east side were real women, and she learned to love them for their courage. Last September she sailed with Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, daughter of Cornelius Vanderbilt to establish Red Cross service in France. She was impressed with the woman's side of war. When she returned last month it was the woman's side of politics that caught her enthusiasm. And, though she is in her early twenties, she's the right hand bower of the woman's cause in Arkansas.

Photo by American Press Association.

MRS. HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY.

"I always believed Joan of Arc was a fairy tale," she said. "I always believed it was impossible for a woman to inspire men and to lead an army. But when I saw those women of France, working in the fields, running the trams, keeping the shops—when I stood on the battlefield of the Marne and saw them plowing and sowing seed among the graves of their husbands and sons I saw something finer in women, something nobler than I had ever dreamed of. They seemed to be all daughters of Joan of Arc, who in their weeds of black were leading a greater army to their faith and optimism."

When Miss Miller, with Mrs. Whitney, came to France they chose as the only available location for their ambulance an old monastery of the eleventh century. They put hot water and electricity into the monastery with its eleven foot walls; they transformed the old ruins into a modern hospital which relieved the suffering of 500 soldiers. They worked from sunup to sundown and forgot the romance as well as the horrors.

With the Vanderbilt resources they hired servants from deserted hotels and gave service and conveniences to the wounded which were not found, perhaps, elsewhere in France. They cared for the soldiers, made friends with them and nursed them back to health. Some of Miss Miller's most interesting reminiscences center about the private soldiers who are willing to give everything to their country. Many of them write letters back to the Ambulance expressing their appreciation of the kindness of the American women.

Miss Miller came back last fall, and she has been doing some live things in the suffrage work, national as well as local.

LIGHTNING IGNITES GAS.

Split In Natural Main From Storm In Indiana Brought to Light by Probe.

Anderson, Ind.—Lightning split a natural gas main in the country near Pendleton during a storm, it was discovered during an investigation of why gas pressure was so low in Pendleton.

Frank Rumler, superintendent, found that a main had been split for several feet and the gas ignited. A flame ten feet high was burning. The earth had been torn away from the pipe. Several persons living there said the flame appeared during a storm, and it was supposed the gas company knew about it in a short time.

Girl "Bums" Way; Killed.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Miss Elizabeth Huber, student of sociology, a graduate of Radcliffe and daughter of a wealthy manufacturer of Taunton, was killed recently by a train while "bumming her way" to the desert to secure magazine data.

UNIQUE BANKER.

Blind and Deaf, but Still He Runs Institution.

WORKS WITH SECRETARY'S AID

In Spite of His Ninety Years H. W. McFadden of Havana, Ill., Attends to Business With Same Vigor That Enabled Him to Build Up One of Largest Estates In County.

Havana, Ill.—H. W. McFadden, who has just returned from a surveying trip to his farms in the eastern part of Mason county, is considered one of the most remarkable business men in this part of the state. Mr. McFadden is ninety years old and is entirely deaf and almost blind. He looks after his business with the same interest and vigor that enabled him to build up one of the largest estates in the county.

All his work is done through a secretary, who must copy all of his letters. This is done with a large black marking crayon in letters two inches high. Not only does he read all his mail in this way, but he is also intensely interested in the European war, and all of the war news from the papers must be copied for him.

Mr. McFadden is a native of New York state and came to Illinois when a young man of twenty-two, without any more than a good education and a sound mind and body. He first settled in Peoria, where he served as county surveyor for six years. In 1[illegible] he came to Havana and built the first elevator here. Five years later he established the Mason County bank, the oldest financial institution in the county, of which he is now the president. A short time later he went to Peoria, where he built the Central City elevator, the first elevator to be built in Peoria. Later he established the system of elevators in Cass, Menard and Mason counties now operated by McFadden & Co., of which his sons, G. C. McFadden and B. H. McFadden, have the controlling interest.

From the very first Mr. McFadden had acquired land whenever he had an opportunity to get a good contract. He started while surveyor of Peoria county and now is the owner of about 3,000 acres in Mason county, as well as thousands of acres of the best land in Kansas, located in Coffey county. He also owns a number of store buildings in Havana, three large buildings in Chicago and extensive town and city property in Waverly and Halls Summit, Kan.

He is one of the most public spirited men in Havana and has been so all his life. He can tell interesting stories of the great political campaigns of the days before the war, when the rival political parties would erect tall poles and have great celebrations around them. Followers of each party in a community would strive to erect a pole taller than the one erected by the rival faction. Poles hundreds of feet high were put up, every man and boy in the community coming out to help.

Again, when the civil war broke uot he was a most ardent admirer of the north and tried many times to enlist, but his poor hearing, a family heritage, was against him, and he was refused. Twice he tried to slip into the ranks and go to the front anyway, but he was sent home each time. Nevertheless, he spent large sums of money for the cause in the north and encouraged all ablebodied men to go and fight for the Union.

SAYS SHRINE CURED HER.

Young Woman Who Had Been an Invalid For Years Now Well.

Lima, O.—Kathleen Daugherty, twenty-one years old, for eleven years an invalid and unable to move about except in a wheeled chair, stepped from a train here and was greeted by a crowd of fully fifty persons. She had been cured, it is said, at the shrine of Our Lady of Consolation at Carey during the annual pilgrimage.

Miss Ella McAuliffe, an aged aunt of the girl, was at the depot. She was the first one to greet the young woman. "Auntie, I'm cured!" cried the girl. The aunt, completely overcome, fainted.

The girl had been unable to move a muscle of her body since a mere child, when she was stricken with paralysis. For two years she was partially blind. She made the pilgrimage to Carey with 700 others from Lima and vicinity. She is cured and apparently permanently so. She left her wheeled chair at the shrine in Carey.

RIP IN TROUSERS ANGERS HIM

Didn't Mind Dog Biting Wooden Leg but Pants Called For Gun Play.

St. Louis, Mo.—When Mrs. Rosie Silberman's dog bit Michael Ehrhardt's leg the other day in East St. Louis Ehrhardt thought the joke was on the dog until he looked down and saw that his trousers were torn.

This made him angry, and he drew his revolver and fired two shots at the dog. Mrs. Silberman had Ehrhardt arrested for discharging firearms in the city limits.

The dog's mistake in selection took place in front of his owner's grocery store, at Sixth street and Piggot avenue. The leg he bit was made of wood.

Pigeons Influenced by Wireless.

Paris.—French scientists have decided that carrier pigeons are influenced by magnetism and that, with the growth of wireless telegraphy, much less dependence can be placed upon them.

THE TOWN [illegible]

By ELLIS M. C[illegible]

When You Shake Hands With Cy Cawkins You've Got to Do th' Shakin'.

Of course it's slang on Johnny's lips,
Those words so rudely twisted,
But on his pretty sister's—well,
I always have insisted
That even should Miss Nancy swear
She'd make a cuss word breath a prayer

Crooks are sent to prison to be straightened out.

COMPULSORY PHYSICAL TRAINING NECESSARY

By Samuel G. Dixon, M. D., LL. D., D. SC., Pennsylvania Commissioner of Health.

A great essential has been neglected in the education of the tens of thousands of young men and women who are graduating from the high schools and colleges of the country. In the majority of instances they have had mental but not physical education.

Some few have devoted themselves to a greater or less degree to competitive sports. This number is but a small fraction of those who pass through our schools. Our curriculums are often so planned that they make physical development difficult or impossible. To lay the foundation of health there should be proper physical training under the supervision of specially trained medical men beginning in the elementary school and going through the college course. A few years of training in youth and early manhood and womanhood would serve to instill habits of personal hygiene which would aid inestimably to our future welfare, individually and as a Nation.

Today Sweden is leading the world in systematic education with a resulting high average of citizens individually prepared to take their part in the defense of their homes.

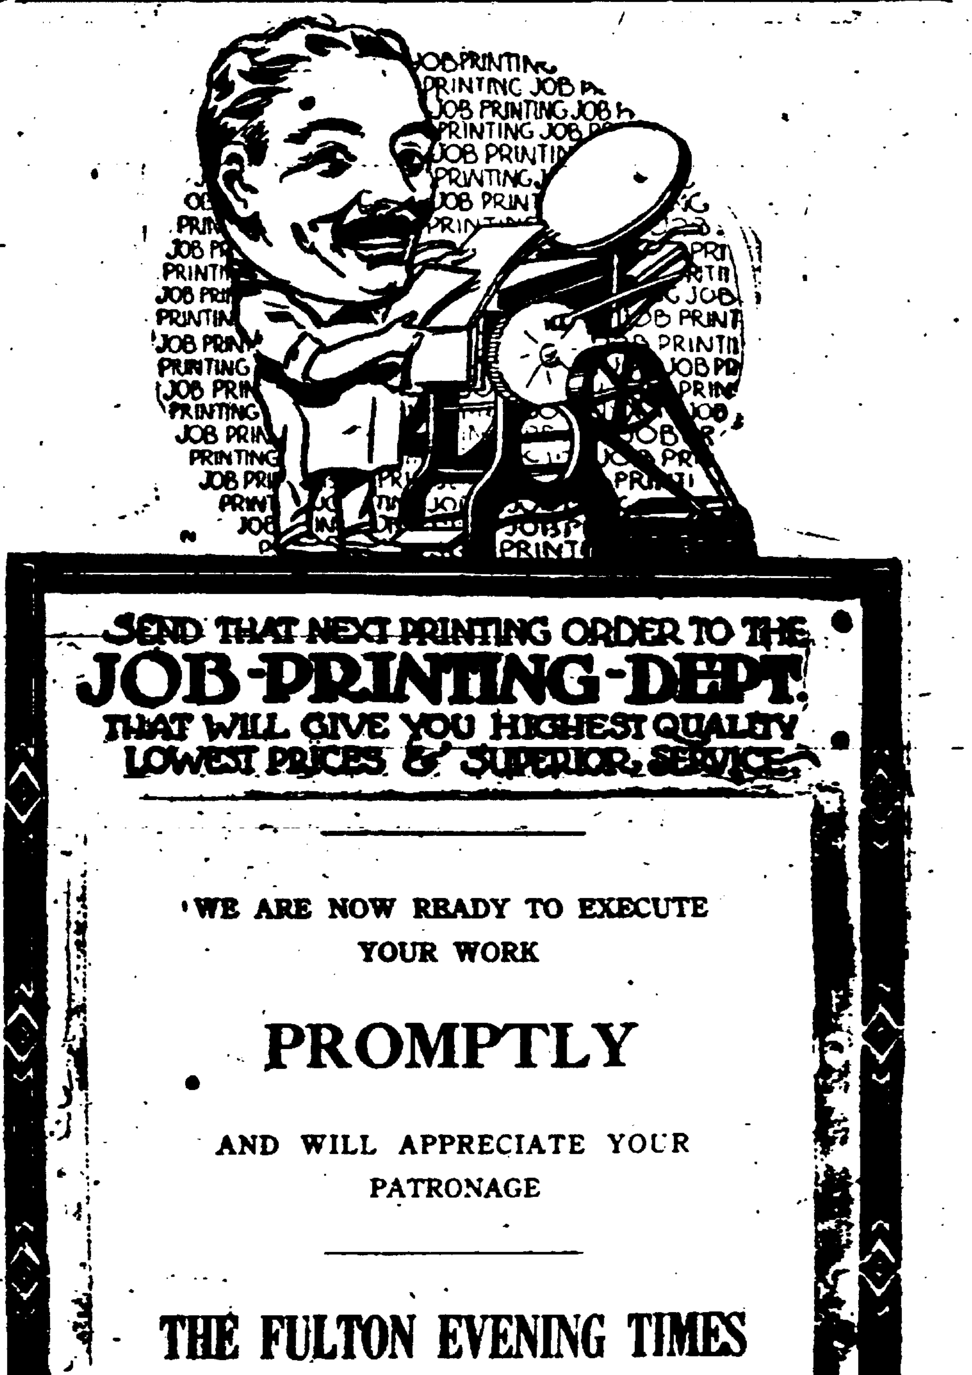
Clear, Peachy Skin Awaits Anyone Who Drinks Hot Water

Says an inside bath, before breakfast helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Sparkling and vivacious—merry, bright, alert—a good, clear skin and a natural, rosy, healthy complexion are assured only by pure blood. If only every man and woman could be induced to adopt the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place. Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls, with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking each morning, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particulary those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance, awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.



WE ARE NOW READY TO EXECUTE YOUR WORK

PROMPTLY

AND WILL APPRECIATE YOUR PATRONAGE

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Telephone 45

OF FIFTY
TIFUL
SUMMER DRESS FABRICS

Consisting of Perfection Voile, Leed Voile, Printed Slash Voile, Silk Striped Voile and Organdie, Cluster Organdie, etc. All of the highest grade sheer dress fabrics on the market this season. Values up to 50 cents a yard. Your choice of the lot, commencing Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

For 19c

(SEE FIRST STREET WINDOW DISPLAY)

J. C. O'BRIEN

CROSSING CONTINENT, HEN SITS WILLINGLY

Three Chicks Extricated When Crate Arrives at Albany, N. Y.—Other Eggs Show Signs.

Albany, N. Y.—A hen which continued to sit while traveling across the continent is the possession of J. W. Wolfrom of this city.

The hen was sitting with motherly devotion upon a nest of eggs which a friend of Mr. Wolfrom placed in a crate in Riverside, Cal., and shipped through a transcontinental express company to this city. She continued to sit, disturbed not in the least by the transcontinental trip. Her protection was a conspicuous placard on the box reading: "Sitting Hen—Eggs Expected to Hatch—Handle With Care." The warning was punctiliously observed by express employees.

When the crate arrived at its destination three downy chicks were extricated from the shells and other eggs gave forth evidences of hatching.

STEALS LOCOMOTIVE TO GO TO DANCE, THEN ESCAPES

Montana Youth Sends Engine Running Wild After Reaching Destination.

Bozeman, Mont.—"By George, I'm going to that dance at Paxton's somehow!" an unknown young man declared here when informed there would be no trains going east for some time. He walked over to a lone locomotive, entered the cab and started east, breaking through a closed switch and going out on the main line.

Engineer McVicker in a locomotive was traveling toward this city when he noticed the block system registered danger. He saw the smoke of an engine approaching and stopped his engine. His fireman jumped, and McVicker reversed his engine. Fireman Boehling caught the approaching engine, climbed into the cab, found it "driverless" and brought it to a stop a short distance from McVicker's engine.

No trace of the locomotive thief has been found. He evidently jumped when he saw the other engine approaching.

HIS PROPHECY COMES TRUE.

Tree Left Standing as Lightning Rod Is Hit, Barns Untouched.

Islip, N. Y.—A bolt of lightning, the only one in a period of two hours during a thunderstorm here recently, struck and completely demolished a huge locust tree which was more than a century old, and was a well known landmark on the farm of E. F. Davis. The tree was over a hundred feet high, and there was not a branch within forty feet of the ground.

Mr. Davis said that he not long ago refused an offer of $100 for the tree from a man who wanted the trunk for a pole. He did not sell it, he said, as his father had always argued that the tree should be left where it stood because it might some day be hit by lightning which otherwise might hit the barns close by.

ROBINS TRAVEL BY TRAIN.

Build Nest Under Car and Hatches Three Little Ones.

Vancouver, Wash.—When a box car was pulled into this city the other day for repairs it was found that a robin had built her nest under the car and had hatched three young ones.

When the car was pushed on the repair track the mother bird flew around greatly excited and could not be driven away. The men searched the car and found the nest. They put the nest in a small box, cut a hole in it and nailed it to a post.

The mother bird took possession immediately and is feeding her young numerous times daily.

LOVED HER FROM INFANCY.

Man Fifty-four Weds Girl Sixteen, For Whom He Waited.

Charleston, W. Va.—D. W. Hunt, aged fifty-four years, and Lillian Lyda Young, aged sixteen years, secured a license and were married here.

It is declared that Hunt, a neighbor of the Young family, has loved the girl since infancy and only awaited the time when she was old enough to marry. Her parents gave their consent to the marriage, it being understood almost since her birth that Hunt was to have her for his bride.

GOOD NERVES SHOWN IN WAR.

Medical Journal Comments on Absence of Epidemics.

New York.—"The present war," the New York Medical Journal says, "has brought out many surprises, one of which has been the absence, or comparative absence, of epidemics and the remarkably good health of the armies engaged.

"It is also a matter for surprise that nervous diseases have not been engendered and developed on a large scale by the appalling conditions which exist in this war."

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M' CLARKE

Cy Cawkins Has Bought an Electric Fan, an' He Gets Breath Without Drawin' It.

A girl may show a clear complexion when her conscience concerning it isn't.

As a matter of fact, th' coolin' comes before marriage an' th' billin' afterward.

A Hard Hearted People.

Filial piety finds no place in Tibetan character. It is no uncommon thing for a son to turn his father, when too old for work, out of doors and to leave him to perish in the cold. The superstition that the souls of the dead can, if they will, haunt the living drives their hardened natures to gain by the exercise of cruelty the promise of the dying that they will not return to earth. As death approaches the dying person is asked, "Will you come back or will you not?" If he replies that he will they pull a leather bag over his head and smother him. If he says he will not he is allowed to die in peace.

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE
Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

FOR SALE
Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.
Ready for Prompt Delivery
Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

During Your Visit at Fulton
OLD HOME WEEK
Stop at
HOTEL CLARK
Fulton's Leading Hotel
L. J. McQUADE, Proprietor

SPECULATION IN SUPPLIES IS RIFE

Condition Obtains Mainly in Motor Vehicles—Not Apparent Yet in Food Supplies

The strictest guard is being kept to prevent food speculation and combination of dealers to force high prices at the time when the Commissary Department of the army gets into the market. The same guard is being used against speculation in all supplies the army needs. Agents of the Department of Justice in New York, as well as those in all parts of the country, were notified from Washington to make immediate reports on all evidences of supplies speculation, and the Department of Justice intends to prosecute these cases.

It was announced from Washington that several reports of attempted speculation had been received and turned over to the Attorney General of the States. It was said at the city office of the New York Attorney General that no such complaints had been received there.

Just what opportunity there is for extra profit was shown when an order was closed for 2,000 motor transports for service on the border. Last week an order was closed for 2,000 and the Department will now advertise for bids on 400 passenger automobiles to go to the border. The price of the motor trucks varies from $2,400 to $3,300, so that since the mobilization order the War Department has invested more than $10,000,000 in motor trucks.

Although the War Department hasn't yet gone into the market for food supplies, it expects to be imposed upon. It has not yet purchased food supplies specifically for the guardsmen on the way to the border for the reason that for several months the department has been quietly storing up supplies along the Rio Grande until it now has enough in the depots to last 100,000 men for a month.

One staple of camp fare is higher than ever before—beans. The kind of beans the soldier eats were quoted at from $8.50 a hundred pounds up. A year ago they were $7 a hundred pounds, and since the mobilization order there has been a rise estimated at about 50 cents a hundred. Dealers denied that the price had gone up because of the expected demand of the army. It was said that the scarcity of the supply kept the price going up. Referring to the question of prices, one officer said:

"Of course, other reasons are given, but the price goes up and when it looks as if the Government is ready to buy much of a commodity. It was so at the beginning of the Spanish-American war, and there seems no way to stop it.

"I believe the plan put forward by some New Yorkers for the establishment of an exchange of all the large dealers in supplies is the best in sight. I would much like to see Congress designate such an organization as the source of our supplies, and I have faith enough in the patriotism of the American business man to believe that the Government would not lose.

"Under the present system the Government agent goes around to dealers in a commodity he wants and asks each for a price. It is whispered about and up goes the price. But with an exchange of large dealers, under a heavy bond to keep the rules, filling the Government's orders from reserves of all the members would protect both the army and public."

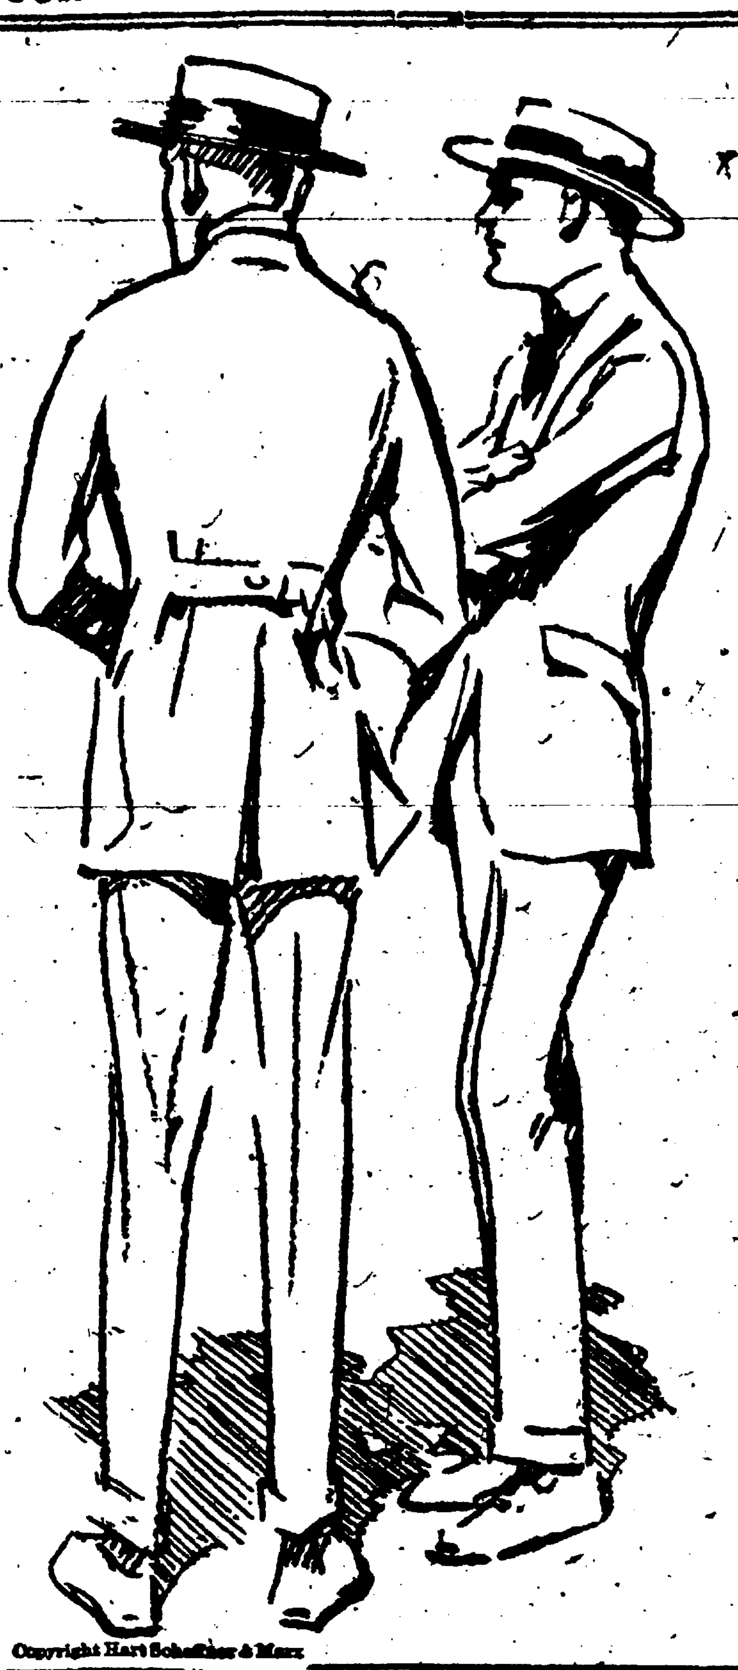
Officials of the National Guard, who have been purchasing supplies for Camp Whitman and the guardsmen at Van Cortlandt Park, say that the prices for food are higher than ever before, but that there had not been any effort to impose on them.

BEEKMAN NOT FAR AWAY, BUT IT TAKES TIME TO GO

Here is how Oswego county friends, relatives and sweethearts of the soldier boys can get to Camp Whitman.

By motor—Go to Newburgh, cross from the West Shore on the Newburgh-Beacon ferry; travel 13 miles north from Fishkill; a little northeast of Beacon, leaving the old post road at Fishkill and turning from Brinkerhoff at Hopewell Junction. Between Hopewell and Green Haven is located Camp Whitman.

By Rail—Go to a Poughkeepsie, a two hours' ride from Albany and go out daily at nine o'clock on the Central New England railroad to Green Haven and return to Poughkeepsie at 4:48 or when the train is able to get through on the overloaded tracks.



Copyright Hart Schaffner & Marx

The big argument for our $20 suits isn't the $20, it's the fact that HART, SCHAFFNER & MARX make them. You get

High Quality Fabrics
Best Styles Ever Designed Perfect Fit—All-wool Cloth

You save at least $5, maybe $10, on what similar quality would cost elsewhere.

Wash Suits for Children
Ages 3 to 8 yrs. 59c to $2

Straw Hats
Our Special Hat
$2
The Best in Town

Soft Shirts
Nobby Patterns
Fast Colors
$1 to $3.50

BVD Union Suits Munsing Union Suits
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED

S. Lipsky & Son
The home of Hart Schaffner & Marx clothes
27 First Street Fulton, N. Y.

Fulton Keynotes

Miss Lena Schwartz, of Mount Sinai Hospital, New York, and Miss Esther Field, of Yonkers, are guests of their cousin, Miss Lillian Waldhorn.

* * *

Miss Forsyth, librarian, announces a change of hours at the Public Library, effective upon the close of the Old Home Week celebration as follows: From July 10 until after Labor Day, the Library will be open from 9:30 a. m., until 1 p. m., and from 7 p. m., until 9:30 p. m. The Library will remain closed all day July Fourth.

* * *

Mrs. Mert Reynolds has been called to Rochester by the illness of her father.

* * *

Mrs. Genevieve Brown, of East Broadway, entertained the Jolly Bachelor's Club quite recently, in honor of Miss Mary Smith, who will become a bride in July. The event was in the nature of a miscellaneous shower and many useful gifts were received by Miss Smith. About fifteen guests were present and everybody enjoyed the luncheon, games and music. The dining room was decorated in green and white.

* * *

Donald Harrington, of East Syracuse, was the recent guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Smith, of 604 East Broadway.

* * *

Mrs. Daniel C. Donovan has returned to Camden, N. Y., after spending a brief vacation with their daughter, Mrs. E. W. Smith, of 604 East Broadway.

* * *

Every member of the Boy Scouts of America is expected to be in attendance at the mass meeting at City Hall tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

* * *

Pathfinder Island has been selected by the Fulton High School class of 1915 as a place of reunion, the meeting to occur next Wednesday afternoon and evening. Dinner will be served and dancing will follow. The committee of arrangements comprise Miss Erma Page, J. Harold Scholz and Marshall Penfield. As this is the first annual reunion every member of the class is expected to be present.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Barris and Mrs. W. J. Nicht, both of Syracuse, were recent guests of Mrs. C. H. Monta, of Cayuga street.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Bennett, of South First street, gave a house party last night to several friends, in their new summer home on West river road, opposite Pathfinder Island. Dancing was enjoyed and a dinner served.

* * *

The playgrounds on the West Side were opened last night by J. W. Stevenson, the donor, and hundreds of children were present. The grounds include, a ball field, slides, swings, bar and swinging rings.

* * *

A former resident of this city, Joseph DeBarber, and son, George, now of Syracuse, were in the city yesterday looking for a site for a candy factory. Mr. DeBarber once owned a confectionery store in this city, but now has a manufacturing plant in Syracuse.

* * *

Mrs. John Ketchum, of Meadville, Pa., called on friends here this week.

* * *

Miss Gladys Foster is spending several days at Fair Haven.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hill, of Phoenix, visited friends here yesterday.

* * *

Mrs. Fred Boigoel has added much to the appearance of his house by giving it a coat of paint.

* * *

Mrs. Albert Morgan is improving from an illness.

* * *

Mr. Morris Whitney has returned from Pulaski.

* * *

Word has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Foster, of Maple avenue, that their sons, Rudolph and Max are on the Mexican border. One with the National Guard, the other in the marine service.

* * *

Miss Lillian Durendorf, of Dexterville, spent yester in this city.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. George Vincent, of Morse, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. William Vincent.

* * *

Lower Oswego Falls Grange will hold exercises in its hall tonight in honor of Children's Day. A pleasing program is announced and a large audience will greet the children participants.

* * *

Clarence Schwagger waded into Lake Neahtawanta today for the purpose of catching at least one fish. He more than succeeded, for he returned home with fourteen fine specimens, one of which was a "red fin sucker" weighing six-p'n-nine; and it's every word truly true.

* * *

James Keeler has accepted a position with S. Rosenbloom & Son.

Fireworks! Fireworks!
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL AT
S. Waldhorn's 18 First St.
Salutes, Firecrackers, Sparklers, Roman Candles, Sky Rockets, Mines, Caps, Pistols, Canes, Pinwheels, Torpedoes, Balloons—all in large assortments.
SPECIALS
In Underwear, Hosiery, Oil Stoves, Window Screens, Rubber Hose, Paints, Linoleums, Oil Cloths, Window Shades, Suit Cases, Children's Dresses, Granite Ware, Crockery, Notions, 9 Bars Lenox Soap, 25c.
THE FAIR STORE

CIRCUS MEN JOIN THIS CITY'S LODGE OF ELKS

At 10:30 o'clock last night, a special initiation took place at the Fulton Lodge, No. 830, B. P. O. E. The candidates were Mr. J. J. Webb and Mr. D. L. Hartigan, both of Chicago. Mr. Webb is the owner and Mr. Hartigan treasurer of Coop & Lent's circus which played here yesterday. After the initiation and musical program a social time was enjoyed.

THE QUIRK TODAY

A woman driven to desperation was compelled to steal in order to obtain food for herself and posthumous child. What influence did this desire to steal have on the child? "The Social Highwayman" is a sociological play which is conspicuous from the general run of such plays in that it has a climax altogether different from the rest, interesting as it is novel, pleasing and original in all its dramatic details, with a sweet romance well blending with the strong melodramatic incidents of the picture. This high class World Film feature will be the attraction shown on the screen at the Quirk theatre today.

KAPLAN'S EXPRESS
Baggage, Trucking and Freight Handled Promptly, Ashes Drawn
Household Goods Moved
Prompt Deliveries Terms Reasonable
All kinds of second hand goods bought and sold
Phones Residence 1568, Business 4246
38 S. Second St., Fulton, N. Y.

FOR SALE
I BEAMS, new and second-hand all sizes. Also PULLEYS, second-hand MACHINERY, PIPE and all sizes of IRON PLATES.
Inquire of
I. ALDERMAN
Schuyler Street
Office Phone 2348 Res. Phone 1363

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Women—Sell guaranteed hosiery to wearer. Salary $24 full time, 50c. an hour spare time. Permanent. Experience unnecessary. International Mills, Dept. 40, Norristown, Pa. 473c

Rooms To Rent—Two apartments over Geisler's store. Apply Lewis' Cigar Store. tf

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

For Sale—Small refrigerator; excellent condition; cheap, 312 West Fourth Street. 474

Wanted—Competent girls for general housework. Apply 208 South Fourth Street. 475

For Sale—Wall tent, 12x14, and one horse lumber wagon. 372 Park St. Phone 4452. 474c

Teamster Wanted—Steady work winter and summer; good wages. John W. Pratt farm. tf

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

Wanted—Girl for general housework. Inquire 301 So. Fourth street. 473

Correct Use of English.

Mrs. Knicker—Do you keep help?

Mrs. Bocker—No; we keep interference—New York Sun.

QUIRK THEATRE

TODAY—
Edwin August and Ormi Hawley in World Film
THE SOCIAL HIGHWAYMAN
in 5 parts.
4—ACTS OF VAUDEVILLE—4

SATURDAY—
9th Episode "THE IRON CLAW"
in 2 Parts.
2nd Episode of
"THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA"
in 2 Parts
"WORLD WAR IN KIDLAND"
4—ACTS VAUDEVILLE—4

SUNDAY—
Marie Walcamp in "THE FLIRT"
Bluebird 5-part Feature.
Charlie Chaplin in
CHARLIE THE HEART THIEF
in 2 Parts.
5th Chap. of "WHO'S GUILTY"
Mutt and Jeff in
"THE INTERPRETERS"

ABOUT THE TOWN

During the administration of Mayor Fox, the bandstand in the East Side Park was torn down and never has it been replaced. It seems too bad that such an old land mark should have been removed and nothing more done about the matter; and now with Old Home Week approaching, if a band concert were scheduled for that park the band would have to be placed on a temporary structure, or its members suffer from cold feet.

* * *

QUEEN OF OLD HOME WEEK CONTEST

The results for the third day are as follows:

Miss Ruth Buchanan	1,001
Greta Lewis	740
Rosetta Nichols	251
Genevieve McCormack	502
Trixie Dix	416

From the results of the third day's voting it now looks as if the contest was to be very close, as the citizens are all becoming interested in their favorites.

* * *

Among the first of old Fultonians to return for Old Home Week was Mr. John J. Stevens, of Washington, D. C.

Mr. Stevens is a man of whom Fulton may be very proud, he has always taken a great interest in the city, its doing and its citizens. One of the complete histories of Fulton, giving data of the city as far back as the story of the "Patfinder," was written by Mr. Stevens.

* * *

There will be a meeting of the Sunday School Association of Fulton at the State Street M. E. Church, Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock, when plans for the organization of several Sunday schools in nearby school houses will be discussed.

All officers and Sunday School superintendents are expected to be present.

* * *

The Elks' band held a rehearsal last night at Elks Home in preparation of next week's festivities. The band will give concerts every day during the week. There is nothing definite as yet in regard to the Band taking the trip to the Elks' convention at Baltimore, week of July 10th.

PIANO FREE

Can You Solve This Puzzle?

SEND IN YOUR ANSWER TODAY

DIRECTIONS—Take any number from 7 to 15, inclusive. Do not use any number more than twice. Place one number in each of the circles so that when they are added perpendicularly or horizontally the total will be 33.

For the neatest correct, artistic answer I will give a $350.00 KIMBALL PIANO PLAYER FREE. All prize winners will be notified. All prizes must be called for within ten days of closing of the contest. But only one in a family is eligible for entry.

ALL PRIZES IN THIS GREAT PUBLICITY CONTEST WILL BE GIVEN ABSOLUTELY FREE.

REMEMBER, THIS COSTS YOU NOTHING

To the next ten who do not participate in the distribution of the above prize I will give a bonafide credit voucher for $156, which will be accepted absolutely the same as cash as part of first payment on any new piano in our house.

The Next 25, a Credit Voucher for $115.
The Next 50, a Credit Voucher for $100.
The Next 75, a Credit Voucher for $78.
The Next 100, a Credit Voucher for $56.
The Next 200, a Credit Voucher for $48.

And all contestants will be awarded a beautiful song folio of old-fashioned songs free by calling at our store.

The above prizes will be given to the correct, neatest and most artistic answers.

I am taking this means to reward you for your work in placing our name before the piano purchasing public of Oswego and vicinity, to celebrate the instantaneous success of our new 1917 Models of Grand, Player Pianos and Upright Pianos. See that your answer is mailed or brought to our store.

You will be Notified of Your Success Within 10 Days

All piano manufacturers and dealers have different ways of advertising. Some employ great artists some use expensive magazine advertising, while others use teachers to persuade people to buy, paying them commissions. We, however, believe that the best advertising is a satisfied customer.

REMEMBER! This Contest Positively Closes Wednesday, July 12th at 10:30 P. M. RUSH YOUR ANSWERS.

STATISTIC BLANK

I herewith submit my answer to your publicity campaign contest and agree to abide by the decision of the judges

Name ....

No .... STREET ....

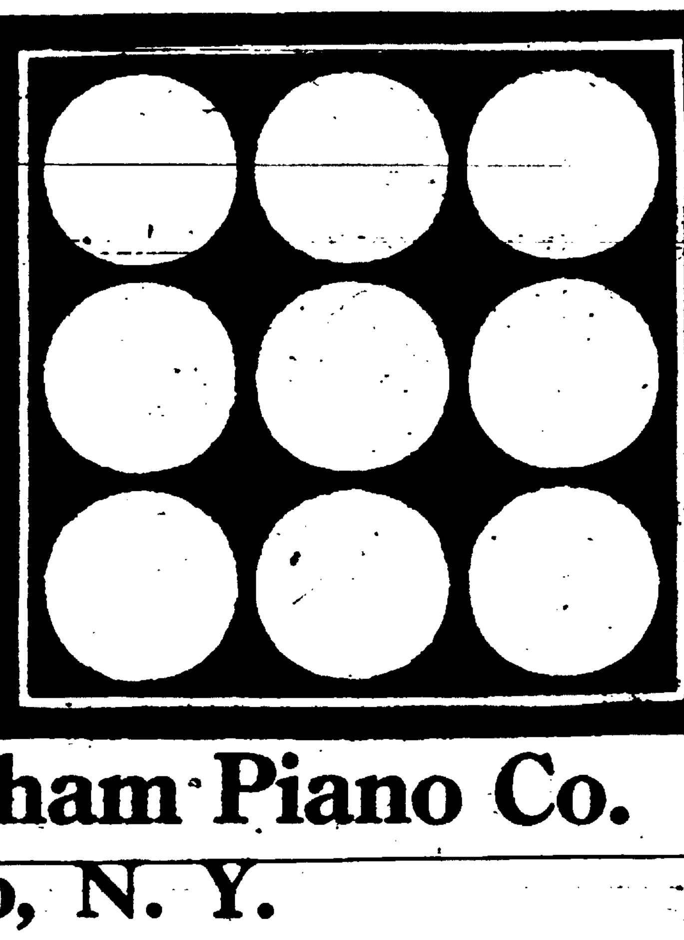
CITY .... STATE ....

(State if you have Player Piano, Piano or Organ)

....

....

Use this coupon or a separate sheet of paper.



R. S. Cunningham Piano Co.

Oswego, N. Y.

TO ATTAIN THE "CITY BEAUTIFUL"

How to Plan the Municipality For Community's Life.

MANY INTEGRATED VILLAGES

George G. Ford, Consultant to the New York City Committee on the City Plan, Gives Glowing Picture of the Future Community Center.

George B. Ford, consultant to the committee on the city plan, in his paper, "Planning the City For Community Life," at the national conference on community centers held recently in New York city, visioned the following glowing picture of the future community center. He said in part:

"Every city is composed of many more or less integrated villages. Each community has grown up by itself and gradually become woven into the neighboring villages. Often with shifting populations their homegeneity and individuality are lost. Consciously they are brought back, and a community solidarity is re-established through such agencies as the community center. Each function of life in the neighborhood focalizes on a certain limited number of places or buildings.

"Churches, lodges and clubs are scattered here and there. The local fire engine house, police station, dispensary and milk station are located wherever land is cheapest. No two functions of local life bear any consciously conceived geographical relation to one another. There is rarely even a semblance of a concerted plan for effecting co-operation among these various functions. Despite the example of the business sense that has been applied to the co-ordination of functions in "big business" or in city administration little trace of it has appeared in the way of planning the city or even its local units for efficiency and amenity.

The first constructive step in correlating such activities is bringing the playground and the school together. According to the Gary idea, they must be together. In any case, their uses are so closely related that each is much more effective if they are together, to say nothing of the decided savings in cost to be attained by having common janitor and other service. Only by such co-operation can full value be obtained from the schoolhouse at all hours of day, 365 days in the year.

The next step is to group near by various other commonly used buildings, such as the public library, the public bath, the public local market, the churches, the lodges and clubs, even hospitals and poor farms.

The following step would be to induce the local stores and business buildings and the various commercialized amusements to locate along the approaches to the center, and thus virtually all of the common activity of the community would be concentrated in one thoroughly familiar and easily accessible location. The more unconscious the habit the greater the frequency with which individuals or families would foregather. Suggestive plans for such centers were presented recently in a neighborhood center competition under the auspices of the City club of Chicago and also in the plans made several years ago for the "Soulard civic center" in St. Louis. Such grouping of public and semi-public buildings is bound to have a marked effect on the individual members of the neighborhood. They become conscious that somehow the district is a distinct entity. A local civic spirit is engendered. A distinct community life takes form.

However, grouping the various buildings and open spaces so that they operate efficiently together is not enough. We must have beauty as well. Our spiritual man craves beauty. It should mean everything to the child as he grows up to have lived in an environment of beauty. If he does not get it during his formative period he will probably never love the beautiful for its own sake. Concretely this means designing attractive yet simple school buildings and setting them in a parklike playground where children can be taught to respect and to love the growing things of nature. Well designed and set public buildings in such a neighborhood center would become an object lesson for private builders. Competition would set in until all had contributed to the charm of the district. There are few things that foster local pride more quickly than do good buildings, well set, among attractive parks and streets.

As you let your imagination play with the possibilities of the plan there gradually rises up before you the vision of the great city plan of the future—a city of many villages, all woven together, each complete and sufficient unto itself in the everyday things but reaching out beyond for the extraordinary.

To Improve Health Conditions.

A public health, hygiene and sanitation bureau has been organized by the chamber of commerce of Champaign, Ill. This bureau was created at the request of the physician members of the chamber with the understanding that all the physicians of the city are to affiliate with the organization to make a combined effort to improve sanitary and health conditions in the city.

Fou...

Spec...

Ready-to-Wear Department

$19.98 Buys the Best Suit in the store, sold for $30.00 to $40.00.

Suits sold for $15.00 to $20.00 for $7.98

Suits sold for $25.00, for $12.98

$1.00 Shirt Waists, the largest and best selection ever shown; some are worth to $1.50.

Silk and Fine Muslin Waists, worth $2.50 and $3.00; for $1.98

Wash Dresses, large stock to choose from $1.98 to $10.00

Millinery Department

Only 100 ready trimmed Hats, no two alike, sold for $5.00 to $6.50; for $2.49

A lot of Trimmed Leghorn and White Hemp Hats, sold ordinarily to $8.00, for $2.95

A GENUINE PANAMA HAT for 98c

UNTRIMMED SHAPES

$2 Value for 98c. $3 Value for $149

$4 and $5 Value $1.98

39c each for Children's Hats, sold for 75 cents to $1.00.

Hats Trimmed Free of Charge

WHY TRADE ELSEWHERE AND PAY MORE, WHEN YOU CAN BUY IT FOR LESS AT

M. KATZ & CO INC.

DAYS THEN AND NOW AT HOME

By Margaret Mason

(Written for the United rPess)

Said the poreclain dog to the china cat,
As they sat ensconced on the crochet mat;
"It's great to be back from the antiquary."
Said the China cat to the dog: "Oh very."

New York—The answer to what next, my dears, is what-not. Now what do you think of that? Nothing more nor less than the old fashioned whatnot is what we may expect if the craze for Victorian modes extends from our clothes to our homes at the rate it is spreading.

At the moment of going to press we have with us in the midst of our smartest homes today all the wherewithal to deck that atrocity of old-fashioned taste, the whatnot, so why not go the limit and drag it down from the garret, dust off its shelves and set it up in the chosen corner. Truly the poreclain dog and the china cat, the glass flowers and the framed sampler can never feel at home outside a whatnot environment.

Indeed it is only fitting that we should have a proper setting for our hoopskirts and scollops, our fichues and bell sleeves, our shoulder capes and poke bonnets; hence undoubtedly the revival of the smirking porcelain poodle door-stops, the green and yellow china parrots swaying in gilded hoops, the worsted embroidered fire-screens and foot rests that now infest the truly modern and artistic hearth and home.

The crocheted and braided rag rugs are on all our smartest floors, lying in wait for the voluminous silken skirts of the good old days to trail over them. But alas! no silken skirts can touch them now in these days of highwater ballet effects.

Daguerreotypes of grandpa as a soldier and grandma as a bride adorn the mantlepiece, sharing the honors with an unshaped potpourri jar of purple glass.

Our smartest billetdoux are penned with gay hued quills that rest as in days of yore in little painted glass jars half filled with gleaming shot.

On rush bottomed chairs we rest (?), whose high straight backs are festive with painted garlands on their painted cross pieces.

The castor and the urn-shaped knife and fork cases reign on our antique Sheriton buffets. Majolica fruit baskets, soup tureens and colored glass cake stands have broken in on our smartest tables and are being broken in our smartest kitchens.

Above stairs we spurn electric lights and grope our divers ways to bed with bayberry candles in pewter candle sticks equipped with quaint and ancient snuffers.

Crawling under the rose of Sharon patchwork quilt we fall to sleep to dream that we may yet be overtaken by a visitation of gilded pine cones, gilded rolling pins, gilded ginger beer jugs, stuffed melon pincushions, castles in the air and wax wreaths under glass for all the world like mush- in the air and wax wreaths under glass for all the world like mushrooms "sous cloche" only not so gastronmically edifying.

No doubt we'll awake screaming and jump from bed only to stumble over the poreclain poodle and the china cat.

INTERNAL REVENUE OFFICERS NEVER SO BUSY AS TODAY

More than a quarter of a million dollars was taken in by officials of the internal revenue office at Syracuse, yesterday. This not only excels any amount ever taken in before, but is nearly double the largest day ever known before.

Today is the last day for payment of income and other taxes. Hundreds of taxpayers took advantage of the last few hours and sent certified checks. A large force of extra clerks is swamped with work today, opening mail and tabulating the returns. It is believed the receipts today will nearly equal those of yesterday. Although the office did twice as much work as it did a year ago there was less trouble this year.

Payments have been coming in heavily for the last few days, but the last two days were the worst of all. Collector Brewster and his deputies are swamped.

Persons who failed to have their money sent in to the revenue office by today are liable to a penalty.

It Was Done on Practical Principle.

By ELINOR MARSH

Bob Wynkoop was the only son of a mother who doted on him and who was especially fearful that he would make a misalliance. One day Bob fell ill, and his mother was obliged to send for a nurse to attend him. The young woman was comely, and Mrs. Wynkoop was troubled.

"Doctor," said Mrs. Wynkoop when Dr. Sloane was about to leave after a visit of her son, "how is he this morning?"

"The fever has not yet left him, and he is still very weak. By the by, Mrs. Wynkoop, there is a warning I desire to give you. I know that you are particular as to whom your son shall marry. My experience is that a sick man attended by a nurse, seeing no one else, having every need gratified by her, is liable to fall in love with her. I have had many a patient who has married his nurse, sometimes—I may say usually—against the wishes of his family."

"Thank you for the hint, doctor. Miss Wadsworth is a very pretty girl, but not one whom I would choose for a daughter-in-law. I shall attend to the matter."

"In that case I would do so at once. Convalescence is the period of danger."

The doctor departed, and Mrs. Wynkoop gave herself up to thought. The wife she desired for her son was a young woman of common sense and very practical. She was not beautiful—indeed, she was considered homely—but what she lacked in beauty she made up in character. Miss Edith Tweed, the young lady referred to, had never met Bob Wynkoop, and he was unconscious of her existence. Bob's mother had considered bringing them together, but had thus far taken no steps to effect that purpose. The doctor's warning had given her an idea. She called on Miss Tweed and said to her:

"My dear, I am aware that you have no fortune and that you are looking for a position. I have one in view for you."

"What is it, Mrs. Wynkoop?"

"The wife of my son Robert."

"Good gracious!"

"I am a practical woman and so are you. I wish my son to marry and I don't wish him to marry a doll. I wish his wife to be a woman of good hard horse sense. Ten to one unless I manage to make a match for him instead of permitting him to make one for himself he'll fall into the hands of some little fool or some designing woman who will make life hot for him."

"But will your son permit you to choose for him?"

"Not by any means. I have a plan. He is recovering from an illness and about to enter the convalescent stage. The doctor has told me that men patents are prone to fall in love with their nurses. I intend to discharge the nurse who has been attending him and I desire you to take her place."

Miss Tweed, being a young woman of marked equanimity, was not as much taken aback at this proposal as was to have been expected. She made no immediate reply to the proposition, but seemed to be turning it over in her mind. Mrs. Wynkoop went on:

"Robert, I will say—being his mother I should not say it—is a very estimable young man. He has no bad habits, is devoted to his business and I sincerely believe would make any good woman an excellent husband. He has a hundred thousand dollars in his own right and will inherit a hundred thousand dollars from me."

Miss Tweed after further consideration said:

"Mrs. Wynkoop, what you are saying is very complimentary to me. This is virtually a proposition to pay me two hundred thousand dollars for—what?"

"For your character, common sense and such other qualities as will conspire to make a good wife, and the price is altogether inadequate."

One morning Bob Wynkoop found himself lying in bed with that sensation of relief which comes with the dawn of convalescence. He had been too ill to notice his nurse, and now was the first time that he had any idea of her appearance. The only thing he noticed about her was that she had no pretense to beauty. Seeing him looking at her with something akin to interest, which indicated that he was better than he had been, she went to him, gazed down upon him sympathetically, laid her soft hand on his forehead, then took his wrist between her thumb and fingers. Having made a note of his condition, she said:

"Would you like some nourishment?"

"Yes."

"What do you think would taste good?"

"A slice of rare roast beef."

"I fear that would be too hearty for you just now. Shall it be a cereal with cream, a soft boiled egg or a baked potato?"

"All three."

Miss Tweed left the room and returned with a cup of bouillon.

A week passed. One morning when a bright sun shone in through the windows Bob had had his breakfast and with his head raised on pillows was about to peruse the morning paper, ... handed him. He ... said: ... ou're a peach." ... ment before you begin ... I haven't made the record

She took his wrist in her fingers and counted the pulsations.

"I'm sure I should have died had it not been for your care," said Bob.

Miss Tweed noted his pulse and took up the body thermometer.

"You're not only a peach; you're a brick."

Miss Tweed thrust the thermometer into his mouth, thereby stopping these expressions of admiration. Nevertheless he continued to gaze upon her. When she removed the thermometer he broke loose again while she was making the record on the ruled paper used for the purpose. He told her she was the loveliest creature he had ever seen; that her cheeks were roses, her lips corals, her eyes wondrous, through which her pure soul looked from heaven.

He had got thus far when she stopped him.

"You are not saying all this," she said. "It's imagination talking. For a week you have seen no one but me. We nurses are used to this sort of thing. Every sick man we serve says the same thing. You will not have been out ten days before the scales will fall from your eyes and you will see me as I am."

"I will never see in you anything but the loveliest, purest, tenderest woman that ever lived. Haven't you been bored by artists wishing you to sit for a model for a Madonna?"

"I can't say that I have. When you have recovered you'll say, 'How could I ever have considered that girl beautiful?'"

"I'll do no such thing. To prove that I am in earnest, I ask you now to be my wife."

"And in thirty days you'll ask me to release you."

"I swear"—

"Very well. I'll promise to be your wife, but one month after you have regained your health I'll ask you to release me. You will be only too glad to do so."

"You've made me inexpressibly happy," he said, taking her hand in his. He would have drawn her to him for a kiss, but she would not permit.

"Not till you have refused to be released," she said.

"I'll never release you," he said impatiently.

Exactly one month from the day Bob Wynkoop returned to business he received a note from Miss Edith Tweed, inclosing her likeness and stating that as a mere form she asked to be released from what might be considered an engagement. She trusted that he would not consider from her writing him that she attached any importance to a proposal from a sick man to his nurse. The reason for her writing was to relieve his mind in case he felt differently from what he had a month ago about the matter.

Bob took the letter to his mother and said lugubriously:

"Mother, I'm in a hole."

"For heaven's sake, Robert, what is it?"

"That nurse I had when I was ill. I proposed to her."

"Oh, Robert!"

"I think I must have been out of my head."

"Did she accept you?"

"Yes, but with the understanding that she would ask to be released one month after I got out. She's made the request and sent me her picture. There's the note and there's the picture. She's not a Venus, is she?"

Mrs. Wynkoop glanced at the note and looked carefully at the picture.

"There's character in that face, Robert," she said.

"Do you think so, mother?" he asked, looking over her shoulder at the picture.

"I certainly do. What reply are you going to make to her note?"

"That's where I'm in the hole. I swore that I would never release her."

"Robert," said the mother sympathetically, but with a certain firmness in her tone, "I hope my boy will never go back on his word."

"Oh, mother; you don't think I'm stuck, do you?"

"That's not the way to look at it, my son. My advice to you is to write Miss Tweed admitting that a courtship under the circumstances is not a fair test of whether two persons are fitted to make each other happy, but you propose that her request to be released be postponed till both of you know more of each other."

"That will make it easier for me, won't it, mother?"

"Decidedly."

Miss Tweed assented to Bob's proposition, and Mrs. Wynkoop invited her to spend a few weeks with her as her guest. She appeared, instead of in uniform, becomingly dressed, and Bob remarked that she wasn't so homely, after all. Mrs. Wynkoop contrived to leave the two together a good deal during the visit, and they seemed to be at least quite companionable. One day Bob said to his mother:

"That girl has more sense than any woman I ever met."

"Horse sense, you mean."

"Yes, horse sense. She'll never trouble her husband, whoever he may be, with any fool notions."

"And he'll find that a great advantage."

"A woman don't keep her good looks but a few years, does she?"

"The prettiest woman in the world will have no more beauty than your mother in time."

"You don't need beauty, mother; you're just as good without it."

And Bob kissed her lovingly.

Well, the upshot of it all was that Bob married Miss Tweed. She is now forty and just as good looking as she was at twenty. Bob adores her.

The Vacation Girl Will Appreciate This Suit

OFF FOR THE MOUNTAINS.

LIGHT weight broadcloth, a deep tan, is cut with this full skirt and a slip-on jacket, which is belted, collared and cuffed with dark green suede. White pearl buttons close and trim the jacket. A tan turban has a natty band of glazed green ivy leaves lined with white kid.

A Pretty Baby Gift.

Baby coat hangers are nice gifts. Small sized frames can be purchased and covered with white satin, absolutely plain, without sign of a tuck or gather and at either end tufted like furniture covering, only instead of buttons you can use tiny velvet forgetmenots. A wreath of forgetmenots can be also wound about the hook.

That Was All.

"Did you raise anything on your promise to pay?" "Oh, yes; I raised a smile!"—Baltimore American.

An Aviation Question.

What character in the Bible ought to know most about flying?

Aaron ought.

The Arizona Kicker

"ALWAYS ON THE JUMP"

SPECIAL EXTRA — U. S. A. — SUNRISE EDITION

FAIR WARNING.

THERE will be a little bee or gathering or convention on Pawnee square Saturday evening.

Most of our prominent citizens will be there. Several of them will be supplied with ropes.

There will be committees appointed to wait on various disagreeable individuals in this town and ask them how long they intend to remain.

If longer than two hours the committee will bring them to the bee.

A CALAMITY.

There was a conflagration in the Pawnee saloon the other day, and as no water was handy the flames were dashed out with four kegs of beer.

The financial loss can be made up in time, but what of the hundred people who went thirsty for a week? Hitherto, whatever happened to the rest of the town, the saloons have always been spared.

NOT OUR FAULT.

A stranger from Utah named McRoberts was told by some of the boys the other day that we were putting on a heap of style over being elected mayor for the fourth time, and he loaded up his gun and called at the office to take us down a peg or two.

Mr. McRoberts now lies in the town hospital.

We carry no chip on our shoulder, but our wheels are always greased for business.

EASY AND PLEASANT.

TO have a personal interview with the editor of the Kicker you walk into the front door, give your name to the gentleman on duty there, and, if you have less than four guns buckled around you, he passes you into the editor's room.

He sits there smoking a fifty cent cigar and with two guns on the table before him.

He smiles you a welcome, and unless you reach behind you for a handkerchief you will get through that interview without any extra holes in your body.

NO SPACE WASTED.

The weather bureau continues to send us weather reports to publish, but we don't publish them. We use the space to publish murders and elopements instead.

There is no space wasted in this journal of progress.

A GOOD RUNNER.

Our esteemed contemporary is out with the story that an attempt was made to assassinate him last Sunday night.

He says he was fired on five times by some one concealed in Dead Man's ravine. Not being armed, he ran away.

Of course he ran away. We have no love for him, and yet we would not speak of him harshly.

He was born that way and can't help himself, and he hasn't the sand to go out and hang himself and let his wife run the concern and make a living out of it.

M. QUAD.

OUR MILITARY ACADEMY.

West Point, Where Uncle Sam's Army Officers Are Made.

It was in 1802 that congress established the United States Military academy, the training school for officers, at West Point, on the banks of the Hudson, fifty-two miles north of New York city.

Although the school for educating and training young men in the theory and practice of military science, to fit them for duty as officers of the United States army, was not established until after Washington's death, he was in a way the real founder. In 1793 and again in 1796 he urged upon congress the necessity of such an institution. The Continental congress as early as 1776 had also suggested the desirability of "a military school for the army."

Authorized in 1802, the Military academy was opened on the Fourth of July with a class of ten cadets. Prior to that time a number of students had been enrolled at the forts at West Point, where a corps of artillerymen and engineers was stationed and informal instruction had been given in the arts of war.

The first decade of the academy's existence was marked by many vicissitudes. Although congress had created the institution, the lawmakers apparently soon forgot all about it, and, lacking sufficient funds for its proper conduct, the academy authorities were hard pressed to keep it alive. At one time the school was without a single instructor. In its first ten years only seventy-five students graduated.

In 1812 President Madison brought about a reorganization of West Point. Soon 200 students were enrolled, and the institution began to assume something of its present form. It was not until 1817, however, that West Point began to receive serious consideration in the military world. Colonel Sylvanus Thayer, who has been called "the Father of West Point," was appointed to command, and it was he who introduced the uniform, the organization and rules of study. Under his control the academy gained prestige and renown. In 1833, when he resigned the command, West Point had won the respect of the military men of Europe and was counted among the world's most famous institutions of its kind.—Exchange.

"DO YOU FOLLOW ME?"

You See the Point, of Course, if You Get the Idea.

No person who values his self respect and who doesn't want to be lied to will ever say "Do you follow me?" when expounding a subject to a friend or acquaintance. There are so many reasons against the use of this interrogatory that only two or three of the best ones need be mentioned.

If you are enunciating words of wisdom the chances are nine hundred and ninety-eight out of nine hundred and ninety-nine that you are not being followed. On the other hand, if you are enunciating foolish words it makes no difference whether you are being followed or not. A still more important reason, however, is embodied in the simple but inescapable fact that no man can ever be quite sure that he understands what the other fellow is trying to express.

Therefore the proper answer to the question "Do you follow me?" is always, "I don't know." That, of course, makes the question itself absurd, and it is made still more absurd by the fact that few are honest enough to answer, "I don't know," but insist upon lying and saying, "Oh, yes; I follow you all right enough."

It is clear, therefore, that the effort is quite hopeless. If you have something to express all you can do is to pick out the most intelligent person or persons you can find, express your idea as well as you can and let it go at that. Do you get the idea?—Life.

First Footpaths In 1762.

The student of old London, noticing the whitened curbs in the streets today, is inevitably reminded that the institution of the footway is really of quite recent date. It was not indeed until after the Westminster paving act of 1762 that footways became at all general. Before that time man and beast took the same road. Many of the old iron posts, which are still to be seen in Regent street and elsewhere, showing the crown and the monogram of the Georges indicate the corners of these first footways.—Christian Science Monitor.

Curiosities of Etymology.

It is extraordinary how words for the same thing differ in even so small a country as England. Take "left handed," for example. In Gloucestershire such a person is described as "scrammy," in Staffordshire he becomes "craggy." The phrase for a left handed Yorkshireman is "gawkrodger" or "callick handed," and in the next county, Durham, he is "cuddy paw."—London Telegraph.

Aids to Greatness.

Phrenologist (enthusiastically)—Why, sir, the bump of veneration is the largest I have ever seen. Such a bump should make you a bishop. Subject (delightedly)—Is that so? Well, I'll get Paddy Nolan to give me another whack in the same place, and I'll be an archbishop at once.—Exchange.

Mean Tempered.

"Your teeth are in pretty bad shape," remarked the dentist.

"It isn't their shape that bothers me," said his patient. "It's their disposition."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Knots.

Mrs. Dearborn—What is the length of a knot? Mrs. Wabash—Well, do you mean a nautical knot or a marriage knot?—Yonkers Statesman.

SOCIALIZING OF OUR EMOTIONS

An Educator Discusses Childhood, Recommending That Women Turn Their Emotional Forces Toward Child Welfare.

DR. THOMAS D. WOOD, Columbia university, in a recent interview stated:

"To make the enormous emotional forces of women do constructive work is the problem of the future, for it is woman who will have to be the leader in social parenthood. I concede that woman has the greater genius for parenthood, but men and women alike just outgrow the ideal of tiger parenthood—the parents that fight for their own young at the expense of other young.

"Women are developing tremendously as social parents. The ideal of social parenthood, of universal mother and fatherhood, finds its expression in the Big Brother and Big Sister movement and in social settlements. Men must learn from women, and women must learn from men. I believe in woman suffrage not because I think it will work any social miracles, but because it will educate women.

"Men in the trenches in Europe today get better care than the children of America. Generally speaking, pigs and other live stock receive more intelligent treatment than children. Yet children are the greatest investment of a nation.

"The care of children is not a lost art, for the human race has never known how to care for its young. More human beings die annually from preventable diseases and accident than were killed in any year of the civil war.

"Child preservation is an art we are just finding. We have made mental education compulsory. Eventually we shall realize that the education of the body, the training of the instincts and emotions, is just as important as the cultivation of the mind.

"There are more than 20,000,000 school children in the United States today," Dr. Wood went on. "Of these three-quarters, or 15,000,000, need medical attention for physical defects which are partially or completely remediable.

"Among these defects are spinal curvature, defective vision or hearing, flat feet, enlarged tonsils and adenoids. At least 50 per cent, in some schools 98 per cent, have defective teeth, and at least a quarter of the number suffer from malnutrition. These children are the wards of the nation, more particularly the wards of its women.

"There should be some way of converting the tremendous emotional forces of women into energies which will save the children.

"But you know women can't rationalize their emotions until they decommercialize them," said the interviewer. "So long as a woman's emotions are her stock of trade, the things by which she gets a living, she can't be rational."

"I think I subscribe to that," Dr. Wood acknowledged, "but enormous creative powers are wasted in the emotions of women. I do not think there is much in the theory that women fundamentally lack creative ability. Women have spent their creative energies emotionally in forms not yet recognized as art; that's all."

Kitchen Convenience.

Keep a high wooden stool, with strong rungs, in your kitchen. When you have something to cook on the gas stove which needs continuous stirring bring it over and sit down, resting your feet on the rungs. When the cooking is done you will get up much refreshed. Use it when you have vegetables to prepare.

ATTRACTIVE FOOD.

It is not always realized that the way food is served has a great deal to do with our appreciation of it.

Color schemes often attract the eye and stimulate the appetite for a dish ordinarily refused. One Sunday night recently a certain housewife had some friends for supper, and afterward the wife of the man who had eaten most heartily of every dish said, "Well, I have a good joke on you, John." Then, turning to her hostess, she said, "You know, he never eats codfish or beets or eggs, and he has eaten all three tonight with the greatest gusto."

"Well, they looked so pretty I couldn't help eating them," John replied.

The codfish was just plain creamed, but it was prepared in the individual ramekin dishes, and the delicately browned top was sprinkled with parsley.

The salad dish was bedded with fresh, green lettuce leaves, on which rested a ring of finely chopped beets. On the inner side of this sprays of the tender little inner stalks of celery were placed, within this a round of egg yolks, also finely chopped, and in the center the whites, dotted with a few strings of watercress.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Black and white serge in block effect is used for the trig tailored skirt shown here. Three and 3-4 yards 54-inch material are needed to reproduce it. The waist is a simple design in tub silk, with round yoke, elbow sleeves and turn down collar. To make it requires 2 1-2 yards 36-inch material.

Pictorial Review Waise No. 6707; sizes, 14 to 20 years; price, 15 cents. Skirt No. 6693, sizes, 16 to 20 years. Price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

The Kitchen Cupboard

LIGHT DESSERTS.

RHUBARB MERINGUE.—Line pie plate with plain paste. Cut into inch pieces sufficient rhubarb to fill the plate and sprinkle with flour until each piece is quite white. Place the rhubarb in the pie plate, adding a cupful of sugar and a very little water. Bake slowly without a top crust and when done spread over the top the beaten whites of two eggs, into which has been stirred one tablespoonful of sugar. Brown lightly in the oven.

Rhubarb and Pineapple Jam.—To four pounds of rhubarb and five pounds of preserving sugar allow the contents of a can of sliced pineapple. Put the rhubarb, the sugar and the sirup from the pineapple in a bowl and leave to stand for twenty-four hours. At the end of that time put the fruit in the preserving pan and bring slowly to a boil. Boil for another twenty minutes or half an hour, then pot and cover in the usual way.

Soft Spice Cakes.—One-fourth cupful shortening, one-half cupful brown sugar, one-half cupful molasses, one-half teaspoonful each ground cinnamon, ginger, allspice and nutmeg, a teaspoonful baking soda, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, one-third cupful hot water, one and one-half cupfuls flour. Cream shortening, sugar and molasses together; add the spices, the salt and baking soda dissolved in boiling water; sift in the flour, mix the ingredients well and put into well greased muffin tins or gem pans. Bake in a moderate oven for twenty minutes.

Fruit of the Gods.—A scant cupful sugar, a cupful dates, a cupful pecans, three eggs separately, a teaspoonful cornstarch, one and one-half teaspoonfuls flour, one and one-half teaspoonfuls baking powder. Bake in slow oven. Serve with whipped cream.

Fruit Punch.—Pour a cupful of strong tea over a cupful of sugar and add the juice of two oranges, the juice of two lemons, a pint of ginger ale and a pint of mineral water. Strain into a punch bowl over a large piece of ice and garnish with slices of oranges and maraschino cherries.

Raisin Tarts.—One-half cupful of raisins, one-half cupful cranberries, one-half cupful water, a teaspoonful molasses, a teaspoonful cornstarch. Cook. Make tart shells and fill with mixture, serving at once.

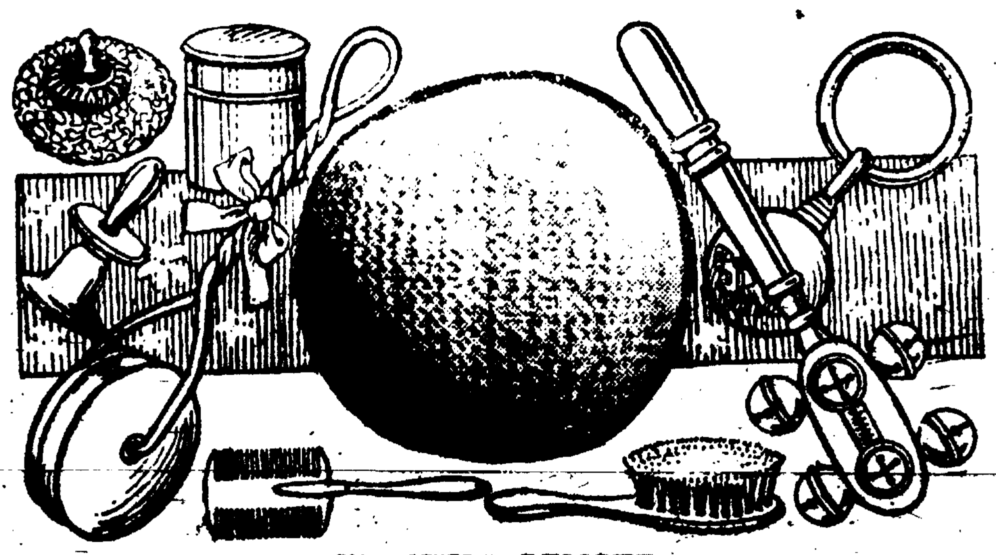
Anna Thompson

Contrariness.

"When a girl promises to marry a man, Miss Ginger, isn't it a sure proof that she loves him?"

"Not at all. She might do it just to spite another man."—Baltimore American.

Grandma Sits on the Porch And Knits Baby a Ball



INFANTILE DELIGHT.

A SIMPLE homemade toy can be knitted from any odd lengths of wool of medium thickness. Two colors should be used. The ball is formed of eight sections knitted in one piece. In this case forty loops are cast on and two needles, No. 14, have been used, but the size is optional. Generally the wool and needles should be about the same thickness or the needles slightly thicker than the wool.

First Row.—Knit to within one loop of the end of the needle: turn the work round. Apparently the wool seems in the wrong place to continue the knitting, but no notice should be taken of this.

Second Row.—Slip off the first loop (keeping a firm hold on the wool) and knit to within one loop of the end. Turn the work.

Third and Fourth Rows.—Knit to within two loops of the end.

Fifth and Sixth Rows.—Knit to within three loops of the end. Continue knitting till there are ten loops remaining unused at the end and beginning of the row. Knit to the end of the row and join on as invisibly as possible with the other color.

The same process is repeated till the eight sections are completed. Cast off, leaving an end sufficiently long to finish the sewing of the circle.

The stuffing consists of a pill box with a few beads or buttons inside to rattle and frayings of wool or ravelings or cottonwood wound round the box to make a shape to fit the knitting.

Sew up the case, leaving all ends inside the ball, and press it to assume a shapely appearance.

SNAPPY MODEL.

For Hikers Comes This Good Looking, Comfortable Suit.

For a youthful walking suit is this of king's blue wool jersey. The circular skirt gives ample comfort, and the slip-on coat, belted and made with detachable white silk collar and cuffs, is smart to a degree. Correct accessories are low heeled shoes and a turban with blue velvet maple leaves appliqued.

SO MODISH.

Bravery.

"Would you risk your life for your friend?"

"I did yesterday evening. Rather than hurt a friend's feelings, I ate what he cooked in a chafing dish."—Washington Star.

An Aid to Canned Music.

In the Woman's Home Companion a writer makes the following suggestions: "Into a blank book I copy the words of songs and operas that I buy for my phonograph and hand this book to my friends as I play the records. Understanding the words perfectly adds much to their pleasure."

His Interest.

Mrs. Quizzer—Didn't I hear that you were interested in the steel construction business? Mr. Doolittle—Oh, yes; I'm deeply interested in it. Whenever I run across a gang of structural workers I stand around and watch them by the hour.—Toledo Blade.

Do not be too credulous, yet if a sign says "Wet Paint" believe it.—Youth's Companion.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

An absorbing occupation for the children when a day indoors is in order is the making of a shadow box. The inner sides of a cardboard box are lined with black paper. Then the background of the little stage or landscape to be made is pasted to the inside bottom of the box. A colored postcard affords a good background for most scenes. Scenery, such as trees, flowers, houses and the like, can be cut from other postcards and pasted on the sides of the box. The cover of the box is then replaced by a sheet of glass the size of the box. The glass is fastened to the box by a strip of tape glued across the joint of box and glass. Small figures cut from cards and pasted in the foreground on bits of paper turned under and pasted down afford endless opportunities for composition and action. A Japanese card for background and side wings, with the tiny trees, shrubs and Japanese figures, which may be purchased so reasonably, gives a charming little scene.

Nation Should Keep Its Head and Think Clearly In Present Crisis

By Professor WILLIAM ALLEN NIELSON, Harvard University

WE as a nation stand at a critical point in our history. Our traditional policies are being called into question, and in some fundamental matters we stand at the parting of the ways. Here clear thinking is as important as it is difficult.

AT EVERY TURN WE ARE LIKELY TO BE SWAYED BY FEELINGS RATHER THAN BY FACTS AND PRINCIPLES.

We come to the verge of a foreign war, and when we ought to discuss the question of arming ourselves either for defense or for more aggressive championship of what we may decide is right we let ourselves be swayed by personal considerations, BY THE TRADITIONAL BONDS OF PARTY OR, BASEST OF ALL, BY PROSPECTS OF PECUNIARY ADVANTAGE.

I have nothing to say against those who wish to prepare themselves and offer their personal services to their country. Any of us may well be convinced that there lies our duty. But the peculiar contribution which you owe to the nation is to help her to think clearly, honestly, wisely.

Favorite Sons In Politics.

The expression "favorite son" in the politics of this country is hoary with age. As far back as 1789 Washington was called the "favorite son of liberty" by a New York city journalist. In 1825 John Randolph, the wit and orator of Virginia, was referred to as the "favorite son" of that commonwealth. From then on the terminology has been common.—Argonaut.

CHILDREN'S TEMPERATURE.

What to Do When Your Precious Has Symptoms of Illness.

Children have a great habit of running into a high fever upon the slightest provocation, and, while it is advisable for every mother to possess and to understand the use of a clinical thermometer, yet, on the other hand, the tale that is told by said instrument is likely to give the nervous parent many a qualm until she begins to realize that while a child's temperature mounts rapidly it also goes down quite as suddenly when the trouble, whatever it is, is under control.

On the other hand, when a child seems restless and peevish and heavy it is a great comfort to know by what is recorded by the thermometer whether there is something really the matter.

When the little thermometer registers between 99 and 100 degrees the patient needs watching, a good purgative being the first remedy in about every childish distemper. But if the mercury mounts over 100 degrees communicate with your doctor, and if it goes over 101 degrees have him pay a call at once.

Little children are singularly unable to tell their symptoms. They just know they feel "bad" without any clearly defined pain. Even a good sized child may have a high fever and an inflamed throat without appearing to feel anything but inertia; therefore the wise mother always examines the throat, including tonsils and tongue, and ascertains if there are signs of irritation. With this settled and the discovery of fever she is armed with answers to the first questions a physician will ask.

Rye Bread With Carraway Seed.

For one loaf made in the morning soften one cake of yeast in one-fourth cupful of lukewarm water. Mix thoroughly, then add a cupful lukewarm water, one-half teaspoonful salt, a tablespoonful carraway seeds, one and a half cupfuls white flour and enough sifted rye flour to make a dough that may be kneaded. Use white flour in kneading. Wash out the bowl, cover close and when double its bulk turn upside down on the board and roll under the hands to fit a French bread pan. Cover and when again light slash it three or four times across the top and bake the loaf about fifty minutes.

Sure Way.

"Senator, I wish you'd recommend this young man for office."

"But I know of no office I could get him."

"That's all right. I don't really want him to get any office. But he wants to marry my daughter, and if he has done anything shady in the past I'd like to have the facts brought out."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

Picturesque For Summer Wear

Costume of youthful design that may be made either of coin-dotted lawn or embroidery flouncing. If made without tucks and lace edging, none of its beauty is sacrificed.

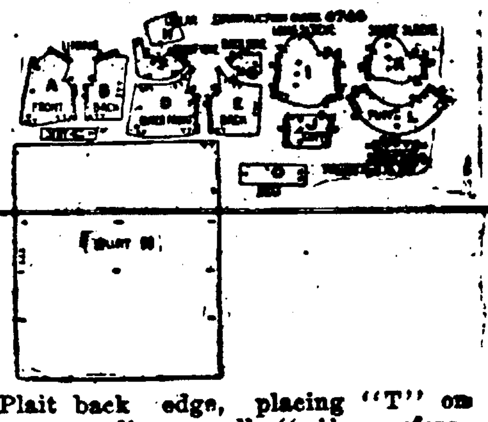
What more graceful in every line than this youthful frock of coin-dotted lawn? The skirt is trimmed with deep tucks and ruffles of lace. A simple round yoke, turndown collar, with lace frill along the edge and gathered sleeves, comprise the decorative details of the waist. Medium size requires 7⅞ yards 36-inch material, with 12 yards of edging.

The lining is made first, as always, to facilitate fitting the waist. Taking the waist neck, gather the upper and lower edges of front and back between double "TT" perforations and 2 inches above lower edge. Sew yoke to front and back, notches, center-fronts and center-backs even. Turn under front edges of front and yoke as indicated. Face collar and sew to neck edge, after which the collar and yoke may be rolled to complete the rever effect. Now, the outside of the waist is ready to be arranged on the lining by stitching the seams together.

To make the sleeve, gather upper armhole and lower edges to lining, bringing shoulder and under-arm and lower edges of sleeve puff between double "TT" perforations; sew sleeveband to lower edge as notched, close seam as notched. Close seam of sleeve as notched. Sew sleeve puff to sleeve, notches and seams even. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam easing in any fulness.

The back seam of the skirt is closed first, but only from large "O" perforation to lower edge, making provision for a placket. Turn hem at lower edge and form tucks, creasing both hem and tucks of crosslines of slot perforations. Gather upper edge, making two rows of gathers, if desired. Adjust skirt to position stitching upper edge over upper row of gathers in waist, center-fronts and center-backs even.

Use ribbon or satin for the belt.



Plait back edge, placing "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations. Adjust to position over upper edge of skirt, with plaits turning upward, center-fronts even, and close at center-back.

If the tucks are not desired, fifteen inches should be cut from lower edge of pattern before it is placed upon the goods, and 13-16 yard less material bought.

Pictorial Review Costume No. 6746. Sizes, 14 to 20 years. Price, 15 cents.

LADIES

We have on display in our South window a large number of Sets of

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

while they last we will sell them at

70 Cents the Set

The wholesale price is more than that, but we are going to dispose of them at a great sacrifice.

COME EARLY IF YOU WISH TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER

They were bought by the former publishers for premiums, but we are giving no premiums with the

FULTON EVENING TIMES

United States May Be Conciliatory Without Lowering Self Respect

By ELBERT H. GARY, Chairman of the United States Steel Corporation

WE do not approve of suggestions occasionally made in congress or elsewhere that there is imminent danger of trouble with Japan, for we understand that conflict is sometimes brought about by insinuations and insults. It is neither desirable nor necessary to have any serious controversy with Japan. WE WISH FOR NOTHING THEY POSSESS, AND WE BELIEVE THEY SEEK NOTHING THAT BELONGS TO US.

We have no feeling of envy or covetousness, and the same is true of them. In fact, the feeling of the great majority and indeed practically all of the American people toward all other nations and nationalities is one of genuine and sincere friendship.

We are in favor of peace for our nation, not at any price, but we would if necessary pay liberally for it. We would fight any other nation, but only defensively. We would fight with all our ability and vigor in defense of our country, our lives, our property and our sacred honor. However, we do not wish for war, and we believe it is not necessary to engage in it with any European nation or nations.

WE MAY BE CONSIDERATE AND CONCILIATORY WITHOUT YIELDING OUR HONOR OR LOWERING OUR SELF RESPECT. IT IS NO STULTIFICATION TO OFFER THE OLIVE BRANCH EVEN IF INSULTED.

STEAK COMES HIGH IN ENGLAND

(By United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, June 20 (by mail)—It has all happened so gradually in England that no one has particularly noticed it. But if you have been away from London for six months you find upon your return that the last half year has utterly changed the lives of Englishmen.

Suppose for instance that your town were London. What would the war have done to it? Or to your home life? And how would you take these changes?

Would you be satisfied if half the matches you bought didn't light because the sticks broke or the sulphur tips were absent? And if the price on matches went up, in spite of this?

Or how would you take it if the coal man didn't make his deliveries and you found your home coalless some raw morning?

Or suppose the government put a license tax of $95 a year on your little family automobile for which you had paid only $500? And gasoline went up to 35 cents a gallon?

Suppose your morning newspaper kept getting smaller and smaller, week by week, because the newspaper supply was getting low?

Suppose for every dollar you made you had to turn over a dime to the government for war purposes, just as an income tax, not including the many small taxes you would pay on almost everything consumed in your home?

Would you be bothered?

Strangely enough, if you had the spirit of this new England you wouldn't. Your whole idea would be to beat Germany and that idea would keep your attention so closely riveted to the battlefields that the details of home inconveniences would largely escape you.

At least, to a neutral onlooker, they have escaped the folk of London.

It is difficult for a neutral to understand this unless he is on the ground, but, if you had the new English spirit—and such a spirit has grown up within the last six months and reaches down to the very core of English life—and your town were London, you would be enduring inconveniences that appear almost unbelievable to you.

There's beefsteak, at forty-two cents a pound. Beefsteak, in your home in Missouri or Kansas, would become a luxury.

There wouldn't be many eggs for breakfast at 7 cents apiece.

Suppose as an Easter treat, you planned to have eggs anyway, and then were faced by this announcement in the newspapers:

"Please don't eat eggs for Easter; our soldiers need a million eggs."

Would you go without eggs?

You would.

If you were a suburbanite and found a government tax put on your commutation ticket so that your morning and evening rides would cost you an additional seventy-five cents a week. If telephone calls went up to seven cents from five. If your Havana cigars were not even permitted to enter the country. If your few daily drinks were raised in price from 25 to 35 per cents. If shaves went up from ten cents to fifteen cents. If your wife could buy only one pound of sugar at a time at the grocer's and then the grocer insisted that she must make other purchases at his store if she wanted him to sell her sugar—if you think that you would be annoyed by all these things you are wrong.

Britons within the last half year, are doing and enduring all these things with great satisfaction and pride.

Under like conditions folk in American towns would do the same.

Other things that are being undergone by Londoners, almost without comment, include:

Watching the birthrate fall so that nine babies are now born where ten were born before.

Riding in the street cars and buses that are so dark that you can hardly see what fare you're handing the conductor.

Cutting down of mail deliveries.

Moving about all night in pitch dark streets.

And knowing that new inconveniences are perhaps in sight in the near future, if the government discovers that they are necessary.

But London takes all these as a matter of course.

If the day's communiques from Sir Douglas Haig and Gen. Joffre are what London calls "good," London is satisfied, in spite of its home troubles.

To get the Germans licked is the main thing.

AMERICAN FLIERS IN FRANCE HONORED

Paris—Lieutenant William Thaw, of New York, was gazetted today as the recipient of the Cross of the Legion of Honor. Sergeants Kiffin Rockwell, of Atlanta, Ga., and Bert Hall, of Eagle Pass, Tex., received the Military Medal. The remaining members of the American aviation corps were promoted to sergeants. The awarding of the honors took place at the American flying base yesterday.

Hall and Rockwell also received the War Cross. The aviators promoted as sergeants are James McConnell, of Carthage, N. C.; Lawrence Rumsey, of Buffalo; Charles Chouteau Johnson, of St. Louis, and Clyde Balsley of San Antnio, Tex.

Balsley, who was injured last week, is now out of danger.

MEXICANS CUT THE THROATS OF THE WOUNDED

El Paso, Texas—By the grace of a Mexican named Carranza, the United States was enabled to claim its own today—the twenty-three American troopers and one civilian scout captured in the Carrizal fight.

"It was treachery," they cried; "we thought they were friendly. They pretended to be until they had us surrounded. Then the slaughter began. We didn't have a chance. The Mexicans even killed our wounded when the fight was over."

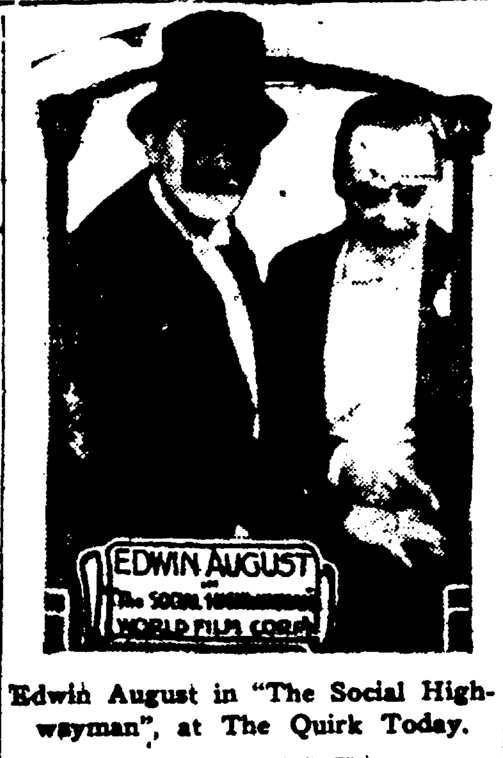
This last statement—one of the gravest charges that can grow out of civilized warfare—was corroborated by three of the American soldiers. These were Privates William D. Gibson and Luther Alexander of Troop C, and Private Archie oJnes of Troop K.

THIS GROCER SOAKED BUTTER BOATS IN WATER

St. Paul, Minn.—Now the dishonest grocer is soaking the butter boats, and making five cents per pound more on his butter. This is the purport of a warning issued today by Charles C. Neale, state commissioner of weights and measures. He says that by soaking the 3-4 ounce wooden boat, it can be made to weigh two ounces.

Pleasant.

The Host's Youngest—Don't your shoes feel very uncomfortable when you walk, Mrs. Nuryche? Mrs. Nuryche—Dear me! What an extraordinary question! Why do you ask, child? The Host's Youngest—Oh, only cos pa said the other day since you'd come into your money you'd got far too big for your boots.



Edwin August in "The Social Highwayman", at The Quirk Today.

MR. LASHER DISPLAYS PARADE PRIZES ONLY

R. M. McCully, president of the Fulton Auto Club, was quick to notice in last night's edition of this newspaper, a statement misleading to the public, in that the article referring to the Corso and automobile parade Monday evening would have prizes donated by F. W. Lasher. The article was meant to read that the prizes are exhibited in Mr. Lasher's window and were contributed by the Old Home Week committee and Mr. McCully, they being respectively as follows: First prize, $10 in gold; second, $5 in gold; third, the Automobile Blue Book, the latter the offering of Mr. McCully.

MUCKLAND FARMERS WILL DREDGE A CREEK

All the muckland owners on the Ware swamp tract, adjoining the D. L. and W. Railroad, will hold a meeting Saturday at 1:30 p. m.; in the building owned by Manton Hall.

Plans will be perfected for dredging the creek that drains the lowlands and empties into the lake.

FULTON MAN JOINS KEYSTONE STATE TROOPS

Mayor Lewis this morning received a card from Oliver Puller, formerly of this city, but now of Cole brook, Pa., stating that he had enlisted with the National Guard and was with Pennsylvania's First Regiment, Company H.

GERTRUDE M. FINCH.

The death of Gertrude M. Finch, twenty-three, occurred at Gilbertsville, Thursday morning at two o'clock, after an illness of about two months.

Miss Finch was well known among the younger people of this city and will be greatly missed by them.

She is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Finch and one brother, Charles A.

The funeral will be held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. N. Baldwin, 401 West Third street, at 2:30 o'clock. Saturday afternoon and from All Saints' Episcopal Church at three o'clock, the Rev. M. J. Peters officiating. Burial will be made in Mount Adnah cemetery.

AVERY—SEYMOUR.

A pretty, but unostentatious wedding occurred last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Seymour, in Cayuga street, when their daughter, Helen Lucille, became the bride of Mr. H. Carleton Avery of New York city.

The house was decorated profusely with flowers and the bride was dressed in a neat traveling gown. Only a few immediate members of the respective families were present at the ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Charles S. Robertson, pastor of the Presbyterian church. The honeymoon will be spent in New York, and later the young people will make their home in that city.

HOTEL ARRIVALS.

Clark House—W. D. Svans, Auburn; J. F. Stoner, Auburn; J. K. Safford, Syracuse; H. B. Jatt, Brooklyn; H. L. Staley, Utica; F. L. Feeley, Oswego; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burns, Detroit, Mich.; Richard Cuba, Ilion.

The Gordian Knot.

The famous Gordian knot was made of leather taken from some part of the harness belonging to the chariot of Gordius, king of Phrygia. It seems that this knot was so tied that the ends of the leather thong were not visible, hence the difficulty in loosening it. Many must have tried to untie it, for its fame as a "sticker" at last reached the great oracle, which declared that the lucky experimenter should be rewarded by the kingship of Persia. Alexander, trying his hand and meeting with no better success than the others, drew his sword and cut into the knot until he found the ends of it.

W. W. ASTOR'S TAX

Required to Pay More In England Than In New York.

GAVE HELP IN OTHER WAYS.

At Time Self Expatriated American Attained the Peerage It Was Estimated He Gave $5,000,000 to Various Objects In England—Donated $500,000 to Red Cross.

New York.—Not all of William Waldorf Astor's income from his American investments will be required to pay the $1,680,000 which the British government is taxing him this year.

It is a fact, however, that the tax he pays abroad is greater by several hundred thousand dollars than the amount he pays on his properties here in New York.

In the tax collection now under way Mr. Astor is required to pay $567,000 on his real estate in Manhattan. This is a semiannual payment, so that his total for the year will be approximately $1,134,000 for Manhattan. To this must be added his taxes in the Bronx, making his total payments to the city nearly $1,200,000 this year.

Mr. Astor, having expatriated himself and become Lord Astor of Hever, is not subjected to taxation here for his personal property. What he has to pay toward the expenses of the city and state which he left behind is shown therefore in his real estate taxes, plus his income tax, no figures about which are available.

Photo by American Press Association.

WILLIAM WALDORF ASTOR.

A great many estimates have been made as to the extent of the Astor real estate holdings in this city, but it has been difficult to get satisfactory information until now. Confusion has overtaken inquirers because of the extensive holdings of the John Jacob Astor estate as well as of William Waldorf Astor. Some of these properties formerly were held jointly, and Lord Astor still appears as only part owner of one of the most valuable of the Astor properties, the Waldorf-Astoria hotel.

The records of the department of taxes and assessments, however, have been worked out so carefully that it is now possible to get a definite idea of William Waldorf Astor's total real estate holdings.

Fifty million dollars, the official records show, is the approximate market value of his various properties in Manhattan and the Bronx. The bulk of these holdings, as is generally known, is in Manhattan, but Mr. Astor has in recent years added somewhat to his holdings in the Bronx until these latter properties represent about $4,000,000.

What annual income Lord Astor derives from these properties is known only to his agents here, and the estimates of outsiders vary greatly. Some of his holdings produce a high rate of income, while some are regarded as very poor earners. The opinion of real estate men as to the average income from all of the properties covers quite a wide range. Some guesses are that Lord Astor receives not more than $2,500,000 a year from these properties, while other real estate men place his annual receipts from this source at twice that amount. If his holdings bring in an average of 7 per cent, not taking taxes into account, that would represent $3,500,000 as an average year's income. Deducting from that amount the 1916 taxes, calculated at $1,250,000, there remains $2,250,000 of income upon which the Baron of Hever can draw to pay his British taxes.

Payment of taxes is not the only way by which the earnings of these Astor properties have helped the British. At the time William Waldorf Astor attained to the peerage it was estimated that he had given at least $5,000,000 to various objects in England. Since the war began he has given $500,000 to the Red Cross and $50,000 for bands to stir interest in recruiting. It also is estimated that he has spent $10,000,000 on Hever castle.

Embedded In Tree 100 Years.

Sandusky, O.—A whetstone and an ax said to be over a hundred years old were found embedded in the trunk of a tree which is known to be 115 years old by Edward Smith while cutting the tree down. It is believed that the tree once was hollow near the ground and the articles were placed in the hollow part for safe keeping and that the tree grew together.

Business Must Prepare to Meet Problems Peace Will Bring

By JOHN E. GARDIN, Noted Financier

THE problem which presses now on the manufacturer, dealer and banker alike is, What will be the business situation in this country after the war?

NOT THE LEAST TROUBLESOME AND FARREACHING OF THE PROBLEMS WILL BE THAT WHICH INVOLVES AN INEVITABLE READJUSTMENT OF LABOR.

In short, the main question is, What is going to be the result on us eventually of our present national inflation? Will it not necessarily be followed by a reaction in any particular line of industry or in all lines by a reaction that is certain and severe in proportion as the inflation has been marked in each particular line?

The only things concerning which we can now be absolutely certain are the facts of our present prosperity and that all experience of the past warrants the statement that every discussion of American preparedness should first of all present to the American business man and particularly to the American banker the necessity for getting ready now not only to meet and solve these problems when they arise, BUT TO BE ABLE TO DISCERN THEM CLEARLY A LONG TIME BEFORE THEY BECOME A MENACE AND APPEAR IN FULL VIEW OF ALL MEN.

TANZER FAINTS WHEN JURY DISAGREES

New York—After twenty-two and a half hours of deliberation the jury which heard the trial of Rae Tanzer, on a charge of perjury reported to Judge Wolverton in the Federal Court yesterday it was unable to render a verdict.

Judge Wolverton then thanked the jurors and dismissed them. Mis Tanzer was paroled in the custody of her counsel, Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler. The defendant fainted when the jury filed in.

It was said the last ballot showed the jurymen stood 9 to 3 for conviction. An early vote, it was said, was 10 to 2 for a verdict of guilty. Strong intimations were made that the jury wanted to return a compromise verdict, exonerating James W. Osborne, and saying Rae Tanzer made an innocent mistake in thinking he was Oliver Osborne.

At the conclusion of the case Miss Tanzer issued a statement bitterly attacking H. Snowden Marshall, United States District Attorney. She also said: "I have always ruthfully maintained that James W. Osborne is Oliver Osborne, and will continue to do so to my dying day."

The Slades hailed the disagreement as a victory for the young woman. Counsel for the prosecution said another trial rests entirely with District Attorney Marshall.

RETIRES AS DEAN OF COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY

(By United Press)

New York—Most important among the faculty changes effective at Columbia university today is the resignation of George W. Kirchwey as Dean. Dr. Kirchwey has been a professor of law at Columbia for twenty-five years. He was dean of the law school for ten years ending in 1910. Dr. Kirchwey was appointed acting warden of Sing Sing penitentiary at the time charges were made against Warden Thomas Mott Osborne.

David Snedden, now commissioner of education for Massachusetts assumes the position of professor of education, having a seat in the faculty of education. Vocational and industrial training is his specialty. His class was Leland Stanford, '97.

How to Remove Rusty Screws From Wood.

To remove screws and nails that have become rusted into wood so that it is impossible to remove them without damage pour a little kerosene over them and after soaking a short time the rust will give way. Nuts and bolts that have been fixed by rust for years may be made to turn by similar applications of kerosene, which soon penetrates the interstices.

WHY YOU SHOULD BEND YOUR KNEES IN A FALLING ELEVATOR.—Here is a hint for you. In case you should happen to be caught in a falling elevator, bend your knees. The other day an elevator in a sixteen story building became disabled and fell from the seventh floor to the basement. There were seven passengers in the car. Alive to the danger, the car operators shouted: "The car is going to fall! Turn your backs to the door and bend your knees!" Six of the seven passengers obeyed and escaped injury, although the car landed with a crash that sounded all through the building. The seventh rider failed to obey the order and suffered fractures of the right thigh bone and of the right knee and lacerations, because he was facing the door and the broken glass showered upon him when the car struck.

HOW To Exterminate Mosquitoes, Flies and Roaches In Summer

HOW any householder may exterminate roaches, ants, fleas, mosquitoes or flies is explained by Director Krusen of the Philadelphia department of public health and charities.

Coal oil is Dr. Krusen's recipe for killing roaches. Gasoline or benzine poured into their nest is death to ants. Keeping fleas out of the house, says Dr. Krusen, is largely a matter of keeping them out of the cat or dog. As for mosquitoes, apply a match to pyrethrum powder or sulphur, and you will generate a gas bomb that will be most efficacious.

"The approach of warm weather brings a swarm of household insects," Dr. Krusen declares. "I am therefore submitting the following directions, which will prove of great value if carried out persistently and with reasonable care:

"Coal oil is one of the best agents for the destruction of roaches and their eggs. It should be sprayed freely by means of a machine oil can into the cracks and crevices of the floors and other woodwork where they breed. Powdered borax mixed with a little sugar is also a good remedy, but in the presence of other food borax is not very effective. Crumbs should be carefully swept from the floor, all foodstuffs kept covered, and everything about the kitchen scrubbed clean.

"The best way to destroy ants is to trace them to their nest and pour into it gasoline or benzine. When using these substances remember that they are highly inflammable.

"The young of fleas live in carpets and matting, so the cats and dogs should not only be kept clean, but the sweepings from the carpets in which they sleep should be burned. A solution of corrosive sublimate, which is a dangerous poison to be handled with care, is the best spray for relief from bed bugs.

"To save clothes from moths pack them in paper bags which have been sealed and made air tight. Moth preventives in flakes or balls should be freely distributed in trunks, closets and the pockets of clothes.

"A good defense against flies is a tight garbage pail lid. Fly paper distributed through the house will also be a great help in destroying them."

USES OF KEROSENE.

Why It Is an Indispensable Article For the Housekeeper.

Coal oil will help the housekeeper out of many difficulties. A spoonful of kerosene added to a kettle of very hot water will make windows, looking glasses and picture glasses bright and clear. Use a small clean cloth, wring it dry and rub it over the glass after wiping down the framework with an oiled cloth; then proceed to the next window and treat it similarly on both sides. After that go back to the first one and wipe it dry with a large clean cloth. No real polishing is required, and the windows or glass will look clear and shiny.

Kerosene will clean your hands better than anything else after blacking a range or stove. Pour a little in the water; wash your hands in it; then wash them in tepid water and finally with plenty of soap and a stiff brush in hot water. Finish up by rubbing the hands with lemon and rosewater and glycerin.

When your kitchen sink is rusty rub it over with kerosene. Squeaky shoes are cured by dipping the soles in kerosene—enough to reach the top of the soles without reaching the upper leather.

The white spots appearing in the spring on the lining of your refrigerator will disappear if you rub the zinc with kerosene. Leave the refrigerator open several hours, then wash with water, soap and some ammonia. The refrigerator will then be clean and sweet and all spots will have disappeared.

Just a Suggestion.

Mrs. Bragge—I want to call the new house which I have just bought some name which will let people know that it belongs to me. What would you suggest, dear? Miss Witt—How would "Dun House" do?—London Telegraph.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 474. SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1916 Price, One Cent

INDEPENDENCE DAY PROCLAMATION

To the People of the City of Fulton:

By virtue of the authority vested in me as Mayor, and realizing the importance attached to the observance of that day in a full expression of American ideals and sentiments, I herewith pronounce and declare as official, the Public Demonstration to be held in the City of Fulton, N. Y., July Fourth, embodying those exercises which are consistent with the highest Aberican ideals. Therefore, I would advise that all citizens of Fulton relax from their labor or business and substitute therefore an expression of loyalty and patriotism, thereby signalizing the advent of the independence of a splendid Republic.

The Fourth day of July should inspire us to observe with reverence the principles taught and declared by our Constitution, which has been the guide to freedom and advancement.

To those citizens upon whom the duty is imposed of arranging the details of the exercises for that day, it is assured that their efforts will be repaid by co-operation of all patriotic citizens of our city.

In pursuance to the above proclamation I hereto attach my signature and the seal of the City of Fulton, N. Y., this first day of July, in the year of our Lord one thou hundred and sixteen.

VICTOR C. LEWIS, Mayor.

GERMANS RESISTING GREATEST ANGLO-FRENCH DRIVE OF WAR

London—The supreme offensive of the Allies began at 7:30 this morning, with one of the greatest Anglo-French gains on the east front since the Germans retired from the gates of Paris.

Two hours after the British troops drove forward they had captured sixteen miles of German forward trenches north of the Somme, the War Office announced in a brief bulletin.

French troops on the British right struck at the same hour. The British War Office announced that the French made equally satisfactory gains, leaving to General Joffre the honor of announcing the full extent of the French success.

The British attack was made on a twenty mile front north of the Somme, after one of the most terrific four days' bombardment the world has ever known. The German advance trenches firmly held the British who were pressing forward at 9:30 this morning. The latest dispatches said the battle was continuing with the utmost violence on the British and French fronts.

Crown Prince Captures Important Trenches

(By United Press)

Paris—The German Crown Prince has resumed his drive on Verdun with the most powerful flank attack on both banks of the Meuse. The most violent fighting in many weeks has developed on the northwest sectors of the fortress.

In a series of terrific attacks west of the Meuse, the Germans captured a series of fortified works and an element of connecting trenches in their fighting east of Hill 304. The French counter attacks later regained all of the lost ground.

Berlin Report Says Allies Are Repulsed

(By United Press)

Berlin—Repeated British and French attacks at many points on the German front were everywhere repulsed, says an official statement of the War Office today.

* * *

London—British troops captured Surre and Montaban is the semi-official announcement of the War Office this afternoon. French troops have taken the Curlu and Savier woods and have advanced about one and one-fifth miles.

Carranza Tightens Lines Along Border

(By United Press)

Brownsville, Texas—Concentration of Carranza troops just below the border is proceeding apace. Fort Brown army officers announced today they have word from Matamoras of the arrival there of General Mafarett and 800 soldiers sent all the way to Tampico. Just prior to their arrival it was said that General Ricaut, whom he succeeded, commandeered seven automobiles.

* * *

New York—The battleship Arkansas scheduled to leave the Brooklyn Navy Yard today for the south, will be unable to leave before Tuesday, it was announced today. Additional repairs to her machinery caused the delay.

CORRECTNESS OF NOTE DENIED IN MEXICO

(By United Press)

Mexico City—The Foreign Office has issued a memorandum of inquiry in reply to Secretary of State Lansing's recent note, in which the correctness of assertions in the communication from Washington were repeatedly denied. The memorandum declares that the United States has no right to maintain its armed forces on Mexican soil.

LACKAWANNA PROVIDES STEEL CARS FOR TROOPS

Extreme measures are being resorted to by the Lackawanna railroad in order to transport the troops from this and other states to the border.

Every available steel coach that can be secured is being pressed into service and some of the main line trains are being cut down to care for the rush.

At the present time the D. L. and W. is replacing all its old wooden coaches by steel cars, but it has been found necessary for the last few days to put a large number of the wooden coaches back into service in place of the steel cars that have to be used in the through traffic of soldiers.

BIG AUDIENCE EXPECTED AT TABERNACLE TOMORROW

Union Old Home Week services will be held in the tabernacle at five o'clock Sunday afternoon. Sermon or address by the Rev. W. Dempster Chase, a former pastor. Rev. Charles Olmstead will preside. Miss Belle Vickery will direct the chorus. All who sang in the tabernacle chorus are requested to take their place on the platform. Everybody bring their tabernacle song books. A cordial invitation is extended to the entire community to attend. Make the service one to be long remembered.

WEATHER FORECAST.

General to moderate shifting winds, generally fair, tonight and Sunday.

Wilson's Hopes Based on Mexican Policy

(By United Press)

Washington—President Wilson has taken his Mexican policy for a campaign issue and put it up to his political adversaries. This is the opinion of political and official Washington today, following the President's return from New York, where he spoke last night, taking up an issue which his Republican opponents had threatened to make the principal object of attack. The President had adopted it as his own campaign material.

* * *

Convinced that any hostile action which President Wilson might have to undertake with regard to Mexico would lead ultimately to a general campaign for the pacification of that country the army war college, it was learned, has prepared a detailed plan of action to that end.

Estimating that at least 150,000 men would be required the plan is understood to call for throwing into Mexico three separate columns simultaneously, made up principally of infantry, mounted infantry, cavalry, and light field artillery.

Preceded by the cavalry the infantry of each column would proceed to a reasonable distance south of the border, from which point the cavalry and mounted infantry would be fanned out to clear the country of Mexicans. This accomplished, the infantry, followed by the National Guard, would proceed further south, establishing second temporary bases from which the cavalry and mounted infantry, again fanned out in the same fashion, would continue to drive the Mexicans back toward Mexico City. The National Guard on the volunteers forces to be called out in such an undertaking would be kept always behind the regulars, guarding the lines of communications and occupying the towns.

The purpose of such plan is to keep the country back of the advance guards always free from armed Mexicans. It is further planned, when the campaign has progressed sufficiently far, to throw columns in from Vera Cruz in the same manner, always with a view to following in a general way the plan of the first Mexican war of forcing the Mexicans into a corner, where a sufficiently large body of them could be engaged to bring about a decisive action.

The general impression in army circles is that, should a plan of this size be followed, the supreme command of the American forces would be given to Major General Tasker H. Bliss, assistant chief of staff, who is regarded as the ablest strategist of the army.

10,380 RUSSIANS TAKEN IN GERMAN OFFENSIVE

(By United Press)

Berlin—German troops are continuing their successful counter offensive against the Russians, and have captured the enemy's position southwest of Sokul and Wietzyny, the War Office announced today. The Germans have captured, since the offensive began, 10,380 prisoners.

WAR COST WOULD BE PAID BY INHERITANCE TAX

(By United Press)

Washington—Income inheritance and munition factories are to pay the cost of preparedness, if there is a war.

The cost will be paid by a bond issue, shifting the burden almost entirely on accumulated wealth and big incomes.

The new revenue bill to be introduced in the House today is epoch making in the opinion of the Administration leaders who think it will establish a national income tax as a permanent part of the centralization system of this country.

CARRANZA'S REPLY MAY HAVE SOFTENED TONE

(By United Press)

Washington—Contrary to messages reported in certain diplomatic quarters, advices to General Carranza apparently indicate that the First Chief will not adopt a defiant tone in answering the United States demands made upon him.

FIRE-WORKS

SUGGEST

FIRE INSURANCE

The records show more fires to occur in July than any other month in the year.

The innocent Fourth of July Patriotism of Young America is the cause of many fires.

Protect your property with adequate insurance written right in the right kind of Companies by

WHITAKER & BOGARDUS, Inc.

All other lines of Insurance as well.

[illegible]E FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, [illegible]ton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1916

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Buffalo Evening Times:

It won't be a crackerless Fourth next Tuesday.

Popular patriotism is at so high a pitch that it is sure to find explosive and vociferous means of expression.

If the advocates of a sane Fourth mean a Fourth without fireworks and noise, they may as well shut up shop.

But we can have a safe Fourth if the people set themselves resolutely to work to co-operate with the police and the other city authorities in providing against accidents.

This question of safety depends a good deal more on individual precautions than on public warnings and official rules and admonitions.

Parents should see to it that the youngsters' celebrations be under the supervision of old and sound heads.

As for the elders, there's no excuse for any grown-up giving a Fourth of July demonstration of the saw about "a fool with a gun."

Let every one of us make it a point to do his or her individual mite to make the Fourth safe as well as exuberant.

Then we shan't have our pyrotechnic joys dashed by a list of maimings and killings.

* * *

The Country Gentleman:

[illegible] seems to us there is a vast amount of fruitless pother over [illegible]ay happen to America after the war. One statement that is much repeated is that the inrush of trained men and women will [illegible]n new competition for our people. One man writes of the new [illegible]glishmen: "These young men have escaped from the life of [illegible]res and factories and are breathing the outdoor air. They will [illegible]ver be satisfied to go inside again. Having learned freedom and [illegible]f-reliance, they will seek the country where the conditions of lib[illegible]rty and opportunity are found—and they will work for leadership."

Good for them! The sooner they get to America the more America ought to like it. That type of citizen is wanted on our farms.

We are very strongly of the opinion that the moment America ceases to mean opportunity for the good man, that moment its decadence will begin and its star of destiny will be dimmed.

Good people are always welcome in America. It is our feeling that America never meant quite so much in the way of invitation and hospitality and high motive as it does today.

* * *

Watertown Standard:

The experience of Canada shows that government ownership of railroads is not the remedy for grievances against transportation lines. The Canadian government has operated the Intercolonial for forty-seven years and the Prince Edward Island railway for forty-three years. It built and is operating the National Transcontinental. [illegible] fiscal year 1915, not one of these systems earned its operating [illegible]. While for twenty-two years the earnings of the Intercolonial were greater than its expenses the net deficit for the whole period of government operation was $9,500,000. Canadian taxpayers can find no satisfaction in these figures. The government railroads pay no taxes but last year the privately owned lines across the border paid taxes amounting to $3,049,728.

Investigations proved that there was a lot of boodling in the [illegible]ruction of the Canadian government's lines, the losses being [illegible] by the taxpayers.

* * *

[illegible] Democrat and Chronicle:

[illegible] question of compensation to the railroads for carrying th[illegible] again under discussion in Congress, this time in the Senate i[illegible] with the Postoffice Appropriation Bill. Senator Cummi[illegible] offered an amendment referring the matter to the Interstate Co[illegible] Commission to decide whether the weight or the space system [illegible] be adopted, and what would be a reasonable compensation to th[illegible]ds for carrying the mail.

The Appropriati[illegible] it passed the House contained a provision that the present [illegible]orial practice of paying according to weight should be abandoned and the space system—the system advocated by the postmaster general—adopted in its place. This scheme has been bitterly opposed by the railroads. In addition, as Senator Cummins explained, while the provisions of the House Bill fix a certain rate per mile for a given space they also give the postmaster general authority either to decrease or increase the amount. "So the legislation proposed by the House," he said, "in effect gives to the postmaster general uncontrolled discretion with respect to railway mail pay."

The House bill goes still further. The hostility of the postmaster general towards the railroads is well known; so, to forestall any rejection of the terms which he might condescend to offer, there is a provision compelling them to accept the rates tendered on pain of a fine of $5,000 a day for every day that they remain obdurate. "To me," said Senator Cummins, "a provision of this sort is more objectionable than the despotism of any country on earth. I cannot understand how it can be vindicated or justified by any one." He also ridiculed the contention of the postmaster general that the rates "for carrying the mails on the railroads should be less than those which might be fixed for commercial business."

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M. CLARKE

When It's Come His Turn to Move Cy Cawkins Generally Has Lost Interest In th' Game.

Th' opposites are sometimes made
Toys of cruel fate,
For oft a crooked action gets
A man in sorry straight.

Most of us have a hard time of it gettin' a soft snap.

Th' trouble with Lot's wife was that she was a little fresh.

Trebizond and Polo.

Polo probably came to us indirectly from Trebizond, where the Kabakmeidan, or Pumpkin square, was the site of a medieval polo ground. The game found great favor with the nobles of Trebizond and was played on horseback, much in the same way as modern polo. It produced intense excitement among the spectators, rivaling that of the hippodrome, possibly because it was dangerous as well as fashionable. Polo caused the death of one emperor of Trebizond—John I., who was killed by a fall from his horse.—Westminster Gazette.

Died Same Date, Not Same Day.

While it is true that Cervantes and Shakespeare died on the same date, they did not die on the same day. Shakespeare died Tuesday, April 23, 1616; Cervantes died Saturday, April 23, 1616. The explanation lies in the difference between the calendars in use at that time in England and Spain. As a matter of fact, Shakespeare outlived Cervantes by about ten days.—London Observer.

The Word Vaudeville.

The word "vaudeville" sprang from Vaux de Vire, the name of a hamlet in the picturesque town of Vire, in Switzerland. In the fifteenth century this town was the home of Oliver Basselin, the author of witty drinking songs. One of the best known of these songs was a merry dissertation on the author's red nose.

Insatiable.

Clarence had wearied his mother with a lot of questions. Finally, she exclaimed: "Clarence Briggs, if you ask one more question you march right off to bed."

Clarence pondered. Then he said: "When pa asks where I is will him be sent to bed, too?"—Exchange.

Too Convenient.

"We had a scheme to arrange a checking room so that lady shoppers could check their husbands."

"How did it pan out?"

"Wouldn't work. We didn't know what to do with husbands left over thirty days."—Kansas City Journal.

Wrong Position.

"You've gone and put the prizefighter's picture at the bottom of the page."

"Well, what of it?"

"If you have any regard for the fitness of things make it an upper cut."—Baltimore American.

Reliance on the right is expressed by defiance of the wrong.

Literature Cannot Be Produced Amid the City's Turmoil

By JOHN BURROUGHS, Author and Naturalist

LIVING in the city is a discordant thing, an unnatural thing. The city is a place to which one goes to do business. It is a place where men overreach each other in the fight for money. But it is not a place in which one can live.

Photo American Press Association.

JOHN BURROUGHS.

Sometimes I am worried by the thought of the effect that life in the city will have on coming generations. All this grind and rush and roar of the subway and the surface cars must have some effect on the children of New Yorkers. And that effect cannot be good.

And what effect can it have on our literature? It might produce, I suppose, in the writer's mind, a sense of the necessity of haste, a passionate desire to get his effect as quickly as possible. But can it give him sharpness of intellect and keenness of aesthetic perception? I'd like to think so, but I can't.

LITERATURE MUST HAVE REPOSE, AND THERE IS NO REPOSE IN NEW YORK SO FAR AS I CAN SEE.

Use of Violence In Self Defense Is Never Justifiable

By Rev. JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, Noted Unitarian Minister

I AM a nonresistant myself, and I do not think the use of violence or of dangerous weapons in self defense is ever justifiable.

Self defense is merely the expression of brute instinct. It is a man's highest duty to think first of others instead of himself, AND HE SHOULD CHOOSE TO SUFFER INJURY HIMSELF RATHER THAN TO INFLICT IT UPON OTHERS.

The fact that a man fears he may be in danger is not an excuse for violence. If the man would control first his own fear he would control the situation. History is rich in examples of big men who have met trying situations simply by the power of the spirit. The man who is master of himself is master of all circumstances.

A man should always be willing to die for his principles. Nonresistance is not, as some have charged, a form of cowardice, but the highest form of courage. A man should die rather than hurt another.

ON THE CONTRARY, HIS HIGHEST DUTY IS TO DIE FOR A PRINCIPLE AND TO DIE FOR OTHERS.

Photo by American Press Association.

Concentration of Wealth In the Hands of Few a Menace to the Nation

By JOHN SKELTON WILLIAMS, Comptroller of the Currency

CONCENTRATION of America's growing wealth in the hands of comparatively few men is the greatest danger threatening the nation.

Bankers and financial leaders should try strenuously to help small local industries and farmers to develop their businesses.

Such a policy would increase the aggregate wealth of the nation and would promote contentment and patriotism among the people. The rapid increase in wealth of the United States is producing AN OSTENTATIOUS LEISURE CLASS WHICH IS A DANGER EVEN MORE THAN ANGERED POVERTY.

In almost exact ratio when wealth and capital increase the bitterness against wealth and capital also increases. Not Socialism, but united action among financial forces to distribute their working capital, can prevent growth of this discontent.

THE BUILDING UP OF SMALL LOCAL INDUSTRIES UNDERTAKEN BY CAPABLE AND WILLING HANDS, THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE GREAT FUNDAMENTAL AGRICULTURAL INDUSTRY, HELPING OF THE LITTLE BUSINESS MAN WHO HAS CHARACTER, ABILITY AND AMBITION, OFFERS TREMENDOUS OPPORTUNITIES NOT ONLY FOR THE INCREASE OF AN AGGREGATE WEALTH AND POWER, BUT FOR DISTRIBUTION OF THEM, SO THAT NO WORTHY MAN MAY BE HOPELESS.

Woman's Work Must Stand Same Test of Quality as That of Man

By MARY E. WOOLLEY, President of Mount Holyoke College

IT is a grave mistake to overemphasize sex, the overemphasis, instead of making for physical health, social soundness and intellectual sanity, working against all three.

The crisis through which we are passing puts a great responsibility upon America, which is but another way of saying upon us all. "America first" is a slogan worthy of us only when it is interpreted America first in service to the world. THAT WOMEN ARE READY TO ENTER INTO THEIR HUMAN HERITAGE IS UNDOUBTED.

Out of great tragedy often comes great inspiration. Out of the world tragedy must come a new inspiration for service, service in scholarship as well as service in other more practical lines. And in the call for service, in the time of its supreme need, the world does not stop to ask whether the response comes from man or woman.

Truth to the fact of life gives no excuse for the theory that there should be one intellectual standard for the man and another for the woman.

WE HAVE PASSED BEYOND DR. JOHNSON'S POINT OF VIEW. WOMAN'S WORK TODAY MUST STAND THE SAME TEST OF QUALITY THAT IS APPLIED TO THE WORK OF MAN.

Efficiency and vision, usefulness and beauty, dogged determination without sacrifice of the finenesses, the refinements of life, conviction without dogmatism, confidence with humility, the will to succeed with courtesy and consideration, strictness for oneself and liberality toward others, stress upon the intellectual without losing sight of the spiritual—this is the kind of character and service for which we as college women must aim.

Prevention of Tuberculosis Should Be Made a National Problem

By HOMER FOLKS, Secretary of the New York State Charities Aid Association

IN the United States tuberculosis has been mainly a local problem, in small degree a state problem and hardly at all as yet a national problem. The time has come when the federal authorities should assume that degree of EFFICIENT LEADERSHIP WHICH THEY ARE EXERCISING IN THE PROBLEMS OF AGRICULTURE AND OTHER ECONOMIC INTERESTS.

Statistics collected by the National Tuberculosis association show an expenditure for the care and prevention of tuberculosis in the United States last year of $22,500,000. This is almost wholly a local or state expenditure. By means of a division of tuberculosis in the United States public health service, with a trifling expenditure as compared with this $22,000,000, the federal authorities could by wise leadership tremendously increase the effectiveness of this enormous local expenditure.

Only through the United States public health service can any degree of uniformity of method and efficiency in the tuberculosis campaign in forty-eight different states be secured. The standardization of hospitals, sanitariums, dispensaries, nursing service and home supervision and all the other elements in the tuberculosis movement can only be secured through federal action. Just as the state helps to co-ordinate the work of the localities within the state, so the federal authorities should help to co-ordinate the work in the various states.

ONLY IN THIS WAY CAN THE VITAL NATIONAL INTEREST IN THE SUPERVISION OF TUBERCULOSIS BE MADE EFFECTIVE.

GOOD FOR HIS CORN

AN old acquaintance of mine, one of those fellows who hide their air pipes the year round behind a set of blond galways, complained that the continued wet weather was certainly bad for his corn, so I gave him the name of a rattling good corn remedy which I had often used, greatly to my relief, and told him how to use it—bathe the corn before bedtime and apply the salve upon the top of said corn.

When I asked him the next morning how his corn was coming on he said:

"All right, so far as I know, but there was only enough of the stuff to go over about a half acre, and if that proves satisfactory I'll get a case of it and go over the whole field."—Zim in Cartoons Magazine.

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

CITIZEN DEFENDERS OF CLEVELAND IN CAMP

Camp Perry, O.—The volunteer defenders of Cleveland, sixth city, detrained here today for a week's manouvers and instruction in tactics of war. This citizen force of 500 will learn how to make and break camp quickly, trench digging, bomb throwing, scouting, charging, machine gun manipulation, and other things every regular of the U. S. army is supposed to know.

One of the features of the camp will be an exhibition drill of 100 Cleveland women volunteers, the auxiliary of the training school. They received instruction in Red Cross work this spring and will demonstrate their ability before Governor Frank Willis. The women will not encamp, merely visiting the national guard grounds here one day.

FRANCE STILL BUYING AMERICAN HORSES

Lincoln, Neb.—The French government is still buying American horses, having within the last two weeks placed contracts for 10,000 head, the order to be filled by July 15.

Omaha is the concentration point for this shipment. One hundred and sixty-five dollars per head is the price under the contract, making the total expenditure for this shipment $1,650,000. Most of this money will go to horse raisers in Nebraska, though some horses will be taken from Kansas, Iowa, and South Dakota.

Since the beginning of the war horses have been concentrated in this section for shipment to the allies for use in the war zone.

COLORADO, GONE DRY, WILL DRINK MILK

Denver—The report of the city's bureau of charity and correction today shows that since the Colorado prohibition law became effective January 1st the people have been drinking more milk. Prohibition did not create an unemployment problem because there have been fewer "out of works" since January than for several years. The number of families asking relief from the bureau has been about a hundred a month less than for the corresponding months last year. Grocers reported better collections.

U. S. EDUCATORS MEET IN NEW YORK

(By United Press)

New York—For the first time in its fifty-four years of existence, the National Education Association, beginning today, is holding its annual meeting in New York City.

According to Dr. David B. Johnson, of Rockhill, S. C., President, and Durand W. Springer, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, Secretary, the advance enrollment indicates an attendance of 30,000 delegates. The session opens in the baalroom of the Hotel Astor, with the meeting of the National Council of Education, Robert J. Aley, President of the University of Maine, presiding.

How to make the next generation better is the subject of the discussion led by Robert M. Yerkes, psychologist, of Boston. He advocates better personal sanitation and hygiene, better conditions surrounding work, proper recreations and closer percentage restrictions.

S. W. Strauss, President of the American Society of Thrift, Chicago, addresses the Council on "The Greater Thrift." He speaks of thrift in its relation to country life, city life, the industries, banking, the home, the labor unions, boards of trade, and chambers of commerce.

Other societies meeting with the National Education Association, July 1 to 8 are: American home economics association, American school peace league, National federation of state teachers associations, School garden association of America, National congress of mothers and parent teacher associations, League of teachers associations, Association for the wider use of school houses, National conference for the extension of education, Conference of deans of women, Modern languages conference, National conference of visiting teachers, American school hygiene association and the American Posture league.

Louise Colet and the Fever.

Louise Colet, the French poet, novelist and general writer, was born at Aix in 1810. She was better known in life than to posterity not only by her writings, but from various incidents with which she was connected. One of the most trying was when she intended to winter in the isle of Ischia, in the gulf of Naples. No sooner was she established there than an epidemic broke out. The people thought it must be the stranger who had brought the trouble. She was threatened and narrowly escaped death by the devotion of a friend who got her away in a yacht. Strange as it may seem, when the "tenth muse" had left the island the fever disappeared.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

The month of June has seen the Connecticut State Federation of Women's Clubs bring the number of state federations behind the demand for votes for women up to thirty-four.

* * *

The registration list in Nevada shows an enormous number of women registering, according to an interview in the Woman's Journal with Mr. Felice Cohn of that state.

* * *

In the department of biology in the graduate school of Yale University, men students may be seen meekly at the feet of a lecturer, Dr. Rhoda Erdman, any day in the year save election day when they are able to look down on her as a political inferior.

* * *

The editor of Reedy's Mirror notes with pleasure that the soft pedal has been put on the suffrage agitation. He advises "agitation minus fantasticalities." In one sentence he declares that what the suffrage movement needs and has not got is a "good strong opposition." And in the next he admits that its only opponent is "apathy which is the strongest force in the world."

* * *

In an interview with Mr. Hughes last week at the Hotel Astor, Miss Anne Martin, the Nevada chairman of the Women Voter's Party, presented all the arguments in favor of his endorsing the federal suffrage bill. She reminded him that in twenty states any amendment to the constitution is practically impossible; that the state of Indiana, for instance, had never been able to amend its constitution; that the equal suffrage states were largely doubtful states that could be easily won for the party that came out frankly for the federal suffrage amendment; that more and more western women were resenting laws which disfranchised them if they married foreigners or moved to an eastern state.

She declared that no section of the country was opposed to the federal amendment save the South and that if the southern politicians could be made to realize that there were 6,000,000 more white women in the South than colored their opposition would vanish. She reported Mr. Hughes as listening with evident interest; as asking many question, but reserving his opinion.

* * *

"We pledge ourselves to vote for the defeat of every party and each man who does not support the Susan B. Anthony amendment," so ran the platform of the Women Voters' Party and, according to Ida Tarbell, an entirely interested and non partisan gentleman who sat next her in the Chicago theatre where the party was being organized ejaculated, "Good Lord! They'll play the devil if they stick to that."

PRESIDENT MOHLER RESIGNS TO ENJOY LIFE

Omaha, Neb.—Warned by the untimely death from overwork of his Big Chief, Edward H. Harriman, President A. L. Mohler, of the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line railroads, today, in the prime of life, left his official desk never to return. General Manager Charles Ware did the same thing.

Both men are in the midst of the best years of their lives, around the half century mark; and they present the unusual spectacle of this age of bustle and business right down to the grave's brink, of stopping before they drop.

Mohler and Ware are in perfect health and could have retained their offices indefinitely.

Mohler will turn farmer in Colorado and Ware will travel around the world awhile. Both men say they have not quit to sit down and die; that they will keep their minds and bodies active, but they'll do it just after the manner they see fit.

Mr. Mohler was born at Ephrata, Pa., in 1850 and started as a freight clerk at Galt, Ill., at nineteen. Ware, a native of Jonesboro, Ill., started as a telegrapher for the Northwestern.

WEST COAST STARTS ANNUAL ROUND UP DAY

San Jose, Cal—Hoping to establish on the Pacific Coast an annual event that shall be to California what the Frontier Day's celebration at Cheyenne is to the Rocky Mountain region, the California Roundup association began the first annual round up here today. All the riding and roping experts in the Pacific Coast states were invited to participate and many accepted. One of the central figures in the celebration is George Wong, believed to be the only full blooded Chinese cowboy in the world.

THAT WHICH LASTS.

"The only thing that walks back from the tomb with the mourners and refuses to be buried is character." That is true. What a man is survives him. It never can be buried. It stays about the home when his footsteps are heard there no more. It lives in the community where he was known; hence we should take care to build into our character only good and beautiful things.

MUSIC AND MIRTH GALORE
BRIMMING WITH WHOLESOME FUN
CRAMMED FULL OF SATISFYING ENJOYMENT
Chautauqua Week
A Wonderful Array of Music and Entertainment
JOHN B. RATTO
ALTON PACKARD
THE MARIGOLD GIRLS
ELSIE BAKER COMPANY
THE BEN GREET PLAYERS
LOVAT'S HIGHLAND BAND
FIVE EMINENT ARTISTS
CIMERA'S BAND and LILLIAN HEYWARD
Season Tickets Are Selling Fast
Only 750 will be sold at $2.00
$2.50 after these are gone and only at the gate on or after opening day
Better Buy Your Season Ticket NOW
In Fulton, July 31st to Aug. 5th

NURSES AND AUTO MAKERS MARCH FOR PREPAREDNESS

Toledo, O.—Fifteen nurses from a local hospital marched in a preparedness parade here today. They were armed with rolling pins and carried a large "We are prepared" banner. Over forty thousand Toledoeans marched in the parade. Of that number 10,000 were Willys-Overland automobile company employes.

His Ambition Now.

"What is his ambition?"

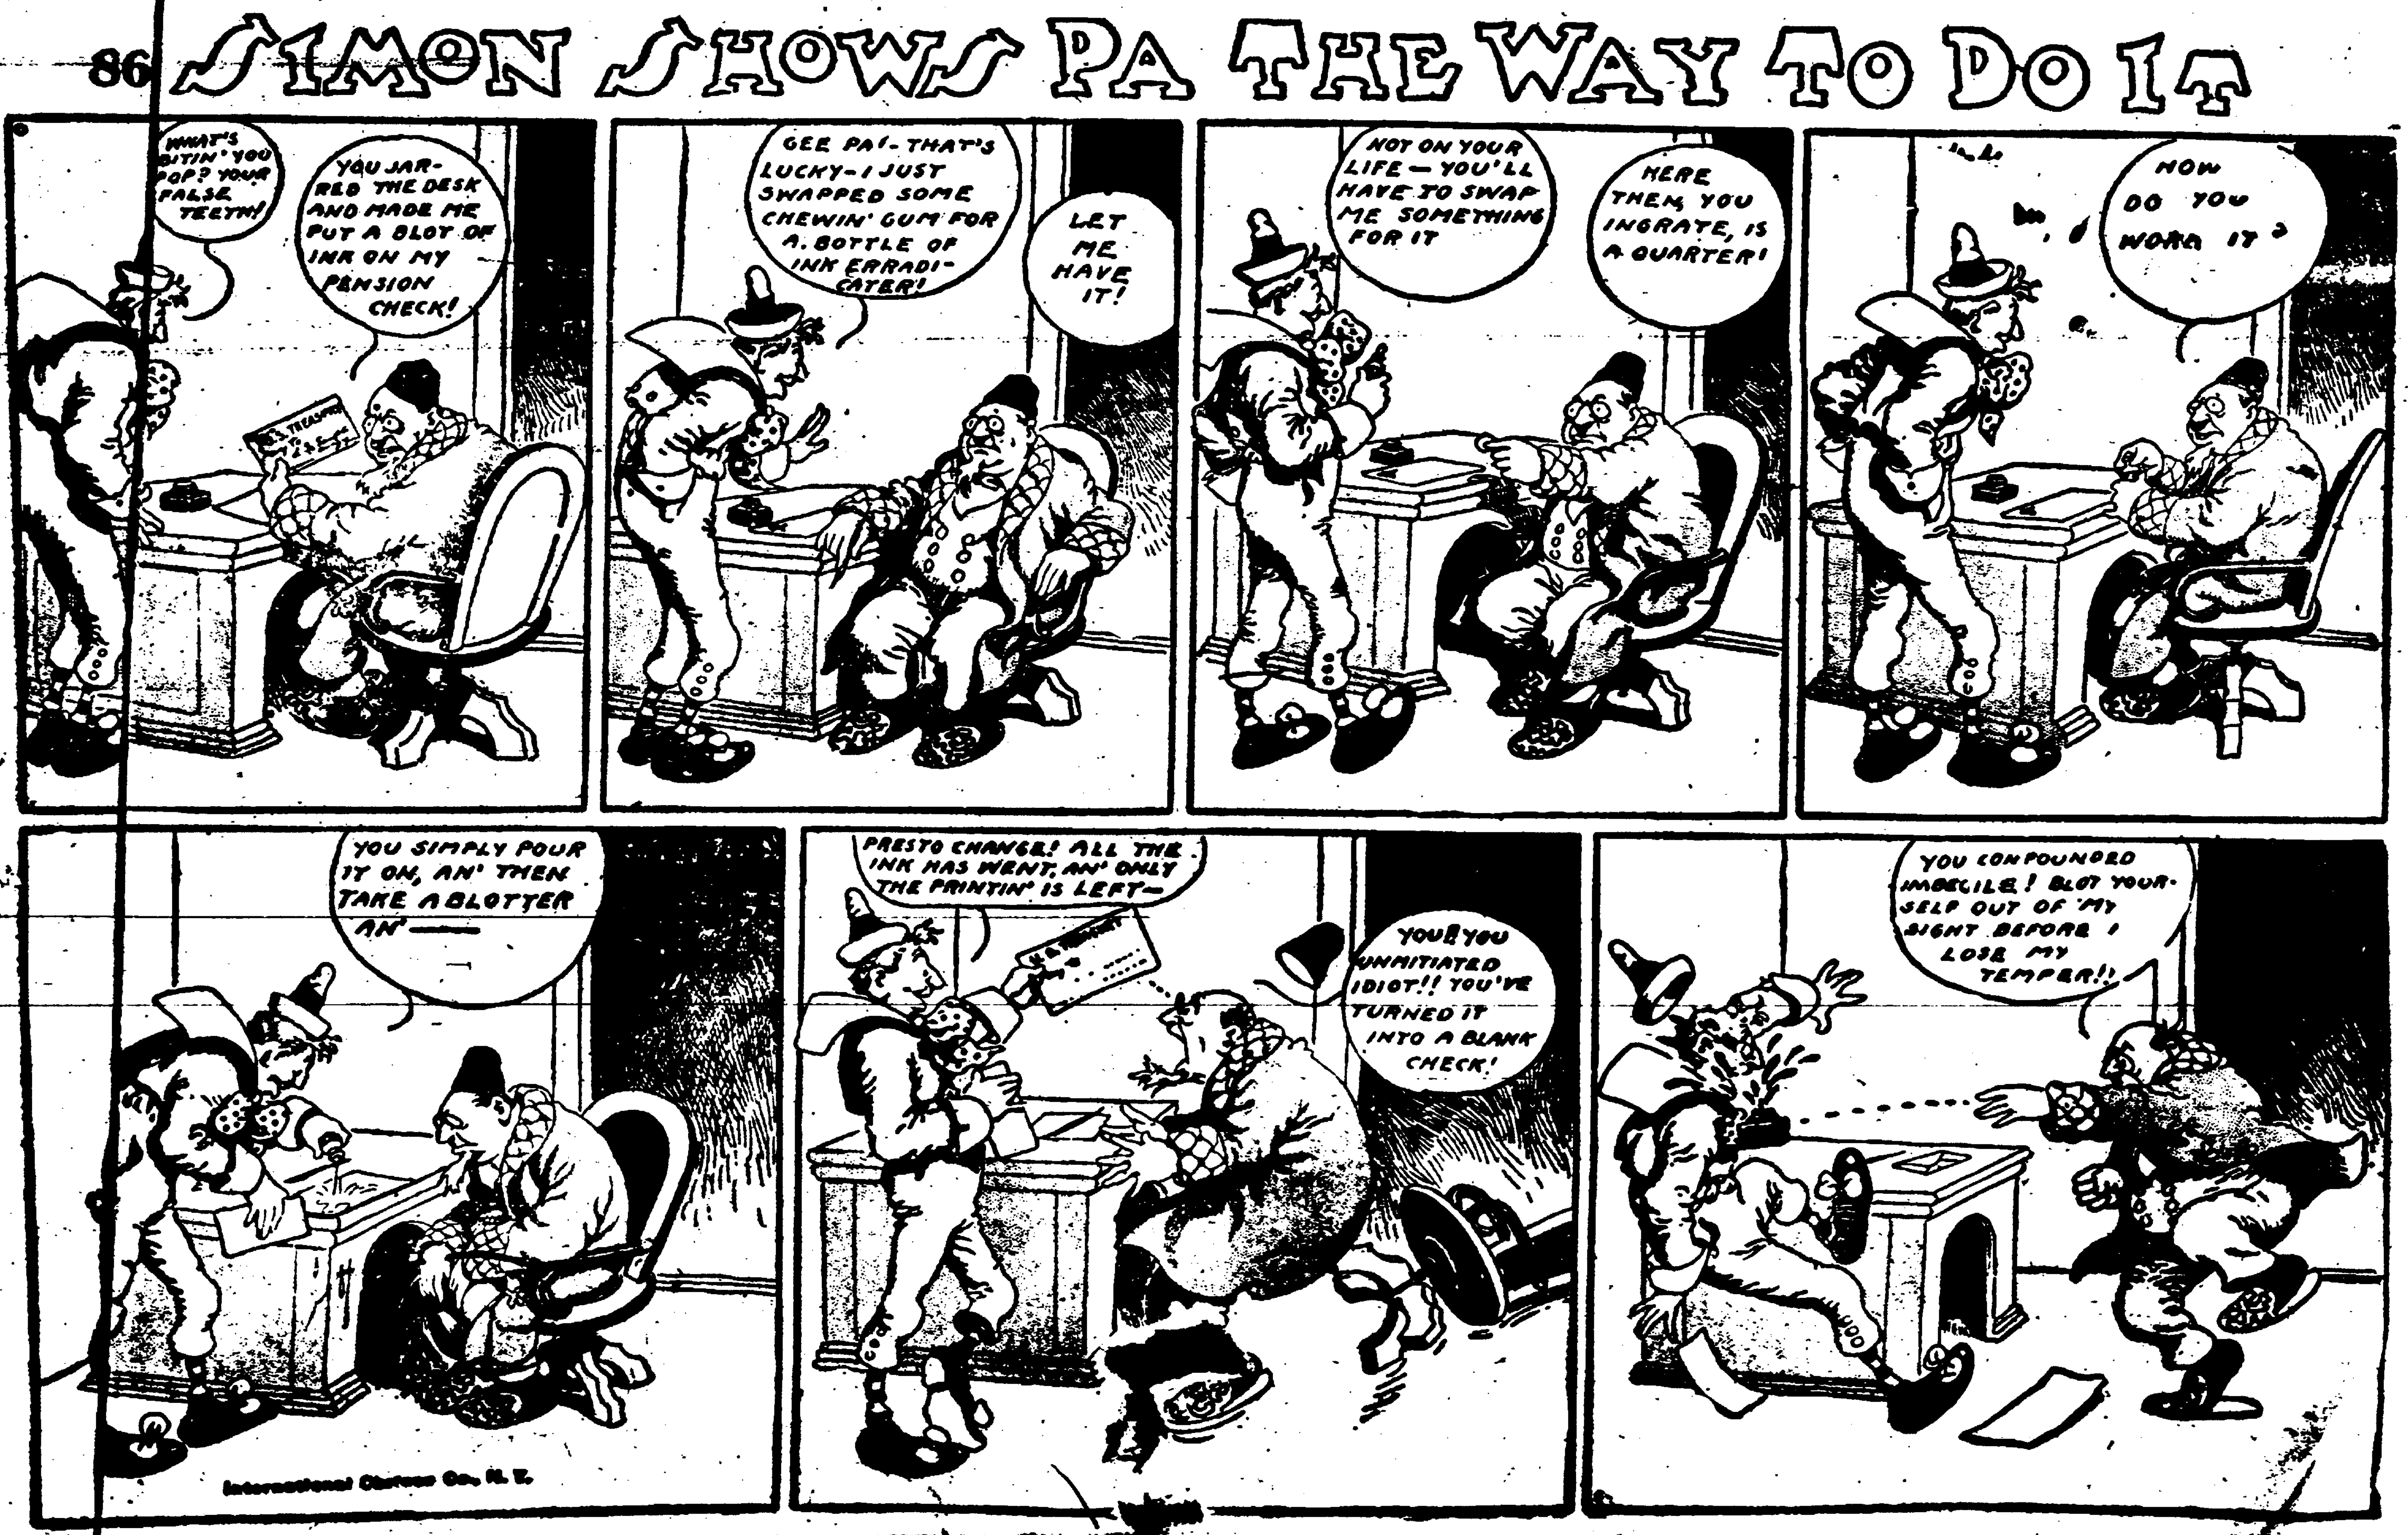
"A year or two ago he wanted to make a great fortune; now he's decided that he'll die happy if ever he makes a golf course in par."—Detroit Free Press.

ONE INSTANCE OF DRYS BECOMING PRACTICAL

Calgary, Alta.—Government golf links to absorb the time that was expended in saloons, was the proposition the drys made today following the total abolition of the sale of booze in the province last midnight.

SMALLEST CITY OPENS MUNICIPAL SALOON

Altoona, Wis.—A municipal saloon whose profits will build a water works was opened today, when the four saloons were forced out of business in this, the world's smallest incorporated city.



[illegible]E FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, [illegible]lton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, un[illegible]der Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

SATURDAY, JULY 1, 1916

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Buffalo Evening Times:

It won't be a crackerless Fourth next Tuesday.

Popular patriotism is at so high a pitch that it is sure to find explosive and vociferous means of expression.

If the advocates of a sane Fourth mean a Fourth without fireworks and noise, they may as well shut up shop.

But we can have a safe Fourth if the people set themselves resolutely to work to co-operate with the police and the other city authorities in providing against accidents.

This question of safety depends a good deal more on individual precautions than on public warnings and official rules and admonitions.

Parents should see to it that the youngsters' celebrations be under the supervision of old and sound heads.

As for the elders, there's no excuse for any grown-up giving a Fourth of July demonstration of the saw about "a fool with a gun."

Let every one of us make it a point to do his or her individual mite to make the Fourth safe as well as exuberant.

Then we shan't have our pyrotechnic joys dashed by a list of maimings and killings.

* * *

The Country Gentleman:

[illegible] seems to us there is a vast amount of fruitless pother over [illegible]ay happen to America after the war. One statement that is [illegible]uch repeated is that the inrush of trained men and women will [illegible]n new competition for our people. One man writes of the new [illegible]glishmen: "These young men have escaped from the life of [illegible]res and factories and are breathing the outdoor air. They will [illegible]ver be satisfied to go inside again. Having learned freedom and [illegible]f-reliance, they will seek the country where the conditions of lib[illegible]rty and opportunity are found—and they will work for leadership."

Good for them! The sooner they get to America the more [illegible]merica ought to like it. That type of citizen is wanted on our farms.

We are very strongly of the opinion that the moment America ceases to mean opportunity for the good man, that moment its decadence will begin and its star of destiny will be dimmed.

Good people are always welcome in America. It is our feeling that America never meant quite so much in the way of invitation and hospitality and high motive as it does today.

* * *

Watertown Standard:

The experience of Canada shows that government ownership of railroads is not the remedy for grievances against transportation lines. The Canadian government has operated the Intercolonial for forty-seven years and the Prince Edward Island railway for forty-three years. It built and is operating the National Transcontinental. [illegible] fiscal year 1915, not one of these systems earned its operating [illegible]. While for twenty-two years the earnings of the Intercolonial were greater than its expenses the net deficit for the whole period of government operation was $9,500,000. Canadian taxpayers can find no satisfaction in these figures. The government railroads pay no taxes but last year the privately owned lines across the border paid taxes amounting to $3,049,728.

Investigations proved that there was a lot of boodling in the [illegible]uction of the Canadian government's lines, the losses being [illegible] by the taxpayers.

* * *

[illegible] Democrat and Chronicle:

[illegible]d question of compensation to the railroads for carrying th[illegible] again under discussion in Congress, this time in the Senate i[illegible]ion with the Postoffice Appropriation Bill. Senator Cumm[illegible]ered an amendment referring the matter to the Interstate Co[illegible] Commission to decide whether the weight or the space system [illegible] be adopted, and what would be a reasonable compensation to th[illegible]s for carrying the mail.

The Appropriati[illegible] it passed the House contained a provision that the present [illegible]morial practice of paying according to weight should be abandoned and the space system—the system advocated by the postmaster general—adopted in its place. This scheme has been bitterly opposed by the railroads. In addition, as Senator Cummins explained, while the provisions of the House Bill fix a certain rate per mile for a given space they also give the postmaster general authority either to decrease or increase the amount. "So the legislation proposed by the House," he said, "in effect gives to the postmaster general uncontrolled discretion with respect to railway mail pay."

The House bill goes still further. The hostility of the postmaster general towards the railroads is well known; so, to forestall any rejection of the terms which he might condescend to offer, there is a provision compelling them to accept the rates tendered on pain of a fine of $5,000 a day for every day that they remain obdurate. "To me," said Senator Cummins, "a provision of this sort is more objectionable than the despotism of any country on earth. I cannot understand how it can be vindicated or justified by any one." He also ridiculed the contention of the postmaster general that the rates "for carrying the mails on the railroads should be less than those which might be fixed for commercial business."

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M. CLARKE

When It's Come His Turn to Move Cy Cawkins Generally Has Lost Interest in th' Game.

Th' opposites are sometimes made
Toys of cruel fate,
For oft a crooked action gets
A man in sorry straight.

Most of us have a hard time of it gettin' a soft snap.

Th' trouble with Lot's wife was that she was a little fresh.

Trebizond and Polo.

Polo probably came to us indirectly from Trebizond, where the Kabakmeidan, or Pumpkin square, was the site of a medieval polo ground. The game found great favor with the nobles of Trebizond and was played on horseback, much in the same way as modern polo. It produced intense excitement among the spectators, rivaling that of the hippodrome, possibly because it was dangerous as well as fashionable. Polo caused the death of one emperor of Trebizond—John I., who was killed by a fall from his horse.—Westminster Gazette.

Died Same Date, Not Same Day.

While it is true that Cervantes and Shakespeare died on the same date, they did not die on the same day. Shakespeare died Tuesday, April 23, 1616; Cervantes died Saturday, April 23, 1616. The explanation lies in the difference between the calendars in use at that time in England and Spain. As a matter of fact, Shakespeare outlived Cervantes by about ten days.—London Observer.

The Word Vaudeville.

The word "vaudeville" sprang from Vaux de Vire, the name of a hamlet in the picturesque town of Vire, in Switzerland. In the fifteenth century this town was the home of Oliver Basselin, the author of witty drinking songs. One of the best known of these songs was a merry dissertation on the author's red nose.

Insatiable.

Clarence had wearied his mother with a lot of questions. Finally, she exclaimed: "Clarence Briggs, if you ask one more question you march right off to bed."

Clarence pondered. Then he said: "When pa asks where I is will him be sent to bed, too?"—Exchange.

Too Convenient.

"We had a scheme to arrange a checking room so that lady shoppers could check their husbands."

"How did it pan out?"

"Wouldn't work. We didn't know what to do with husbands left over thirty days."—Kansas City Journal.

Wrong Position.

"You've gone and put the prizefighter's picture at the bottom of the page."

"Well, what of it?"

"If you have any regard for the fitness of things make it an upper cut."—Baltimore American.

Reliance on the right is expressed by defiance of the wrong.

Literature Cannot Be Produced Amid the City's Turmoil

By JOHN BURROUGHS, Author and Naturalist

LIVING in the city is a discordant thing, an unnatural thing. The city is a place to which one goes to do business. It is a place where men overreach each other in the fight for money. But it is not a place in which one can live.

Photo American Press Association.

JOHN BURROUGHS.

Sometimes I am worried by the thought of the effect that life in the city will have on coming generations. All this grind and rush and roar of the subway and the surface cars must have some effect on the children of New Yorkers. And that effect cannot be good.

And what effect can it have on our literature? It might produce, I suppose, in the writer's mind, a sense of the necessity of haste, a passionate desire to get his effect as quickly as possible. But can it give him sharpness of intellect and keenness of aesthetic perception? I'd like to think so, but I can't.

LITERATURE MUST HAVE REPOSE, AND THERE IS NO REPOSE IN NEW YORK SO FAR AS I CAN SEE.

Use of Violence In Self Defense Is Never Justifiable

By Rev. JOHN HAYNES HOLMES, Noted Unitarian Minister

I AM a nonresistant myself, and I do not think the use of violence or of dangerous weapons in self defense is ever justifiable.

Self defense is merely the expression of brute instinct. It is a man's highest duty to think first of others instead of himself, AND HE SHOULD CHOOSE TO SUFFER INJURY HIMSELF RATHER THAN TO INFLICT IT UPON OTHERS.

The fact that a man fears he may be in danger is not an excuse for violence. If the man would control first his own fear he would control the situation. History is rich in examples of big men who have met trying situations simply by the power of the spirit. The man who is master of himself is master of all circumstances.

A man should always be willing to die for his principles. Nonresistance is not, as some have charged, a form of cowardice, but the highest form of courage. A man should die rather than hurt another.

ON THE CONTRARY, HIS HIGHEST DUTY IS TO DIE FOR A PRINCIPLE AND TO DIE FOR OTHERS.

Photo by American Press Association.

Concentration of Wealth In the Hands of Few a Menace to the Nation

By JOHN SKELTON WILLIAMS, Comptroller of the Currency

CONCENTRATION of America's growing wealth in the hands of comparatively few men is the greatest danger threatening the nation.

Bankers and financial leaders should try strenuously to help small local industries and farmers to develop their businesses.

Such a policy would increase the aggregate wealth of the nation and would promote contentment and patriotism among the people. The rapid increase in wealth of the United States is producing AN OSTENTATIOUS LEISURE CLASS WHICH IS A DANGER EVEN MORE THAN ANGERED POVERTY.

In almost exact ratio when wealth and capital increase the bitterness against wealth and capital also increases. Not Socialism, but united action among financial forces to distribute their working capital, can prevent growth of this discontent.

THE BUILDING UP OF SMALL LOCAL INDUSTRIES UNDERTAKEN BY CAPABLE AND WILLING HANDS, THE DEVELOPMENT OF THE GREAT FUNDAMENTAL AGRICULTURAL INDUSTRY, HELPING OF THE LITTLE BUSINESS MAN WHO HAS CHARACTER, ABILITY AND AMBITION, OFFERS TREMENDOUS OPPORTUNITIES NOT ONLY FOR THE INCREASE OF AN AGGREGATE WEALTH AND POWER, BUT FOR DISTRIBUTION OF THEM, SO THAT NO WORTHY MAN MAY BE HOPELESS.

Woman's Work Must Stand Same Test of Quality as That of Man

By MARY E. WOOLLEY, President of Mount Holyoke College

IT is a grave mistake to overemphasize sex, the overemphasis, instead of making for physical health, social soundness and intellectual sanity, working against all three.

The crisis through which we are passing puts a great responsibility upon America, which is but another way of saying upon us all. "America first" is a slogan worthy of us only when it is interpreted America first in service to the world. THAT WOMEN ARE READY TO ENTER INTO THEIR HUMAN HERITAGE IS UNDOUBTED.

Out of great tragedy often comes great inspiration. Out of the world tragedy must come a new inspiration for service, service in scholarship as well as service in other more practical lines. And in the call for service, in the time of its supreme need, the world does not stop to ask whether the response comes from man or woman.

Truth to the fact of life gives no excuse for the theory that there should be one intellectual standard for the man and another for the woman.

WE HAVE PASSED BEYOND DR. JOHNSON'S POINT OF VIEW. WOMAN'S WORK TODAY MUST STAND THE SAME TEST OF QUALITY THAT IS APPLIED TO THE WORK OF MAN.

Efficiency and vision, usefulness and beauty, dogged determination without sacrifice of the finenesses, the refinements of life, conviction without dogmatism, confidence with humility, the will to succeed with courtesy and consideration, strictness for oneself and liberality toward others, stress upon the intellectual without losing sight of the spiritual—this is the kind of character and service for which we as college women must aim.

Prevention of Tuberculosis Should Be Made a National Problem

By HOMER FOLKS, Secretary of the New York State Charities Aid Association

IN the United States tuberculosis has been mainly a local problem, in small degree a state problem and hardly at all as yet a national problem. The time has come when the federal authorities should assume that degree of EFFICIENT LEADERSHIP WHICH THEY ARE EXERCISING IN THE PROBLEMS OF AGRICULTURE AND OTHER ECONOMIC INTERESTS.

Statistics collected by the National Tuberculosis association show an expenditure for the care and prevention of tuberculosis in the United States last year of $22,500,000. This is almost wholly a local or state expenditure. By means of a division of tuberculosis in the United States public health service, with a trifling expenditure as compared with this $22,000,000, the federal authorities could by wise leadership tremendously increase the effectiveness of this enormous local expenditure.

Only through the United States public health service can any degree of uniformity of method and efficiency in the tuberculosis campaign in forty-eight different states be secured. The standardization of hospitals, sanitariums, dispensaries, nursing service and home supervision and all the other elements in the tuberculosis movement can only be secured through federal action. Just as the state helps to co-ordinate the work of the localities within the state, so the federal authorities should help to co-ordinate the work in the various states.

ONLY IN THIS WAY CAN THE VITAL NATIONAL INTEREST IN THE SUPERVISION OF TUBERCULOSIS BE MADE EFFECTIVE.

GOOD FOR HIS CORN

AN old acquaintance of mine, one of those fellows who hide their air pipes the year round behind a set of blond galways, complained that the continued wet weather was certainly bad for his corn, so I gave him the name of a rattling good corn remedy which I had often used, greatly to my relief, and told him how to use it—bathe the corn before bedtime and apply the salve upon the top of said corn.

When I asked him the next morning how his corn was coming on he said:

"All right, so far as I know, but there was only enough of the stuff to go over about a half acre, and if that proves satisfactory I'll get a case of it and go over the whole field."—Zim in Cartoons Magazine.

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

CITIZEN DEFENDERS OF CLEVELAND IN CAMP

Camp Perry, O.—The volunteer defenders of Cleveland, sixth city, detrained here today for a week's manouvers and instruction in tactics of war. This citizen force of 500 will learn how to make and break camp quickly, trench digging, bomb throwing, scouting, charging, machine gun manipulation, and other things every regular of the U. S. army is supposed to know.

One of the features of the camp will be an exhibition drill of 100 Cleveland women volunteers, the auxiliary of the training school. They received instruction in Red Cross work this spring and will demonstrate their ability before Governor Frank Willis. The women will not encamp, merely visiting the national guard grounds here one day.

FRANCE STILL BUYING AMERICAN HORSES

Lincoln, Neb.—The French government is still buying American horses, having within the last two weeks placed contracts for 10,000 head, the order to be filled by July 15.

Omaha is the concentration point for this shipment. One hundred and sixty-five dollars per head is the price under the contract, making the total expenditure for this shipment $1,650,000. Most of this money will go to horse raisers in Nebraska, though some horses will be taken from Kansas, Iowa, and South Dakota.

Since the beginning of the war horses have been concentrated in this section for shipment to the allies for use in the war zone.

COLORADO, GONE DRY, WILL DRINK MILK

Denver—The report of the city's bureau of charity and correction today shows that since the Colorado prohibition law became effective January 1st the people have been drinking more milk. Prohibition did not create an unemployment problem because there have been fewer "out of works" since January than for several years. The number of families asking relief from the bureau has been about a hundred a month less than for the corresponding months last year. Grocers reported better collections.

U. S. EDUCATORS MEET IN NEW YORK

(By United Press)

New York—For the first time in its fifty-four years of existence, the National Education Association, beginning today, is holding its annual meeting in New York City.

According to Dr. David B. Johnson, of Rockhill, S. C., President, and Durand W. Springer, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, Secretary, the advance enrollment indicates an attendance of 30,000 delegates. The session opens in the baalroom of the Hotel Astor, with the meeting of the National Council of Education, Robert J. Aley, President of the University of Maine, presiding.

How to make the next generation better is the subject of the discussion led by Robert M. Yerkes, psychologist, of Boston. He advocates better personal sanitation and hygiene, better conditions surrounding work, proper recreations and closer percentage restrictions.

S. W. Strauss, President of the American Society of Thrift, Chicago, addresses the Council on "The Greater Thrift." He speaks of thrift in its relation to country life, city life, the industries, banking, the home, the labor unions, boards of trade, and chambers of commerce.

Other societies meeting with the National Education Association, July 1 to 8 are: American home economics association, American school peace league, National federation of state teachers associations, School garden association of America; National congress of mothers and parent teacher associations, League of teachers associations, Association for the wider use of school houses, National conference for the extension of education, Conference of deans of women, Modern languages conference, National conference of visiting teachers, American school hygiene association and the American Posture league.

Louise Colet and the Fever.

Louise Colet, the French poet, novelist and general writer, was born at Aix in 1810. She was better known in life than to posterity not only by her writings, but from various incidents with which she was connected. One of the most trying was when she intended to winter in the isle of Ischia, in the gulf of Naples. No sooner was she established there than an epidemic broke out. The people thought it must be the stranger who had brought the trouble. She was threatened and narrowly escaped death by the devotion of a friend who got her away in a yacht. Strange as it may seem, when the "tenth muse" had left the island the fever disappeared.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

The month of June has seen the Connecticut State Federation of Women's Clubs bring the number of state federations behind the demand for votes for women up to thirty-four.

* * *

The registration list in Nevada shows an enormous number of women registering, according to an interview in the Woman's Journal with Mr. Felice Cohn of that state.

* * *

In the department of biology in the graduate school of Yale University, men students may be seen meekly at the feet of a lecturer, Dr. Rhoda Erdman, any day in the year save election day when they are able to look down on her as a political inferior.

* * *

The editor of Reedy's Mirror notes with pleasure that the soft pedal has been put on the suffrage agitation. He advises "agitation minus fantasticalities." In one sentence he declares that what the suffrage movement needs and has not got is a "good strong opposition." And in the next he admits that its only opponent is "apathy which is the strongest force in the world."

* * *

In an interview with Mr. Hughes last week at the Hotel Astor, Miss Anne Martin, the Nevada chairman of the Women Voter's Party, presented all the arguments in favor of his endorsing the federal suffrage bill.

She reminded him that in twenty states any amendment to the constitution is practically impossible; that the state of Indiana, for instance, had never been able to amend its constitution; that the equal suffrage states were largely doubtful states that could be easily won for the party that came out frankly for the federal suffrage amendment; that more and more western women were resenting laws which disfranchised them if they married foreigners or moved to an eastern state.

She declared that no section of the country was opposed to the federal amendment save the South and that if the southern politicians could be made to realize that there were 6,000,000 more white women in the South than colored their opposition would vanish. She reported Mr. Hughes as listening with evident interest; as asking many question, but reserving his opinion.

* * *

"We pledge ourselves to vote for the defeat of every party and each man who does not support the Susan B. Anthony amendment," so ran the platform of the Women Voters' Party and, according to Ida Tarbell, an entirely interested and non partisan gentleman who sat next her in the Chicago theatre where the party was being organized ejaculated, "Good Lord! They'll play the devil if they stick to that."

PRESIDENT MOHLER RESIGNS TO ENJOY LIFE

Omaha, Neb.—Warned by the untimely death from overwork of his Big Chief, Edward H. Harriman, President A. L. Mohler, of the Union Pacific and Oregon Short Line railroads, today, in the prime of life, left his official desk never to return. General Manager Charles Ware did the same thing.

Both men are in the midst of the best years of their lives, around the half century mark; and they present the unusual spectacle of this age of bustle and business right down to the grave's brink, of stopping before they drop.

Mohler and Ware are in perfect health and could have retained their offices indefinitely.

Mohler will turn farmer in Colorado and Ware will travel around the world awhile. Both men say they have not quit to sit down and die; that they will keep their minds and bodies active, but they'll do it just after the manner they see fit.

Mr. Mohler was born at Ephrata, Pa., in 1850 and started as a freight clerk at Galt, Ill., at nineteen. Ware, a native of Jonesboro, Ill., started as a telegrapher for the Northwestern.

WEST COAST STARTS ANNUAL ROUND UP DAY

San Jose, Cal—Hoping to establish on the Pacific Coast an annual event that shall be to California what the Frontier Day's celebration at Cheyenne is to the Rocky Mountain region, the California Roundup association began the first annual round up here today. All the riding and roping experts in the Pacific Coast states were invited to participate and many accepted. One of the central figures in the celebration is George Wong, believed to be the only full blooded Chinese cowboy in the world.

THAT WHICH LASTS.

"The only thing that walks back from the tomb with the mourners and refuses to be buried is character." That is true. What a man is survives him. It never can be buried. It stays about the home when his footsteps are heard there no more. It lives in the community where he was known; hence we should take care to build into our character only good and beautiful things.

MUSIC AND MIRTH GALORE
BRIMMING WITH WHOLESOME FUN
CRAMMED FULL OF SATISFYING ENJOYMENT
Chautauqua Week
A Wonderful Array of Music and Entertainment
JOHN B. RATTO
ALTON PACKARD
THE MARIGOLD GIRLS
ELSIE BAKER COMPANY
THE BEN GREET PLAYERS
LOVAT'S HIGHLAND BAND
FIVE EMINENT ARTISTS
CIMERA'S BAND and LILLIAN HEYWARD
Season Tickets Are Selling Fast
Only 750 will be sold at $2.00
$2.50 after these are gone and only at the gate on or after opening day
Better Buy Your Season Ticket NOW
In Fulton, July 31st to Aug. 5th

NURSES AND AUTO MAKERS MARCH FOR PREPAREDNESS

Toledo, O.—Fifteen nurses from a local hospital marched in a preparedness parade here today. They were armed with rolling pins and carried a large "We are prepared" banner. Over forty thousand Toledoeans marched in the parade. Of that number 10,000 were Willys-Overland automobile company employes.

His Ambition Now.

"What is his ambition?"

"A year or two ago he wanted to make a great fortune; now he's decided that he'll die happy if ever he makes a golf course in par."—Detroit Free Press.

ONE INSTANCE OF DRYS BECOMING PRACTICAL

Calgary, Alta.—Government golf links to absorb the time that was expended in saloons, was the proposition the drys made today following the total abolition of the sale of booze in the province last midnight.

SMALLEST CITY OPENS MUNICIPAL SALOON

Altoona, Wis.—A municipal saloon whose profits will build a water works was opened today, when the four saloons were forced out of business in this, the world's smallest incorporated city.

86 SIMON SHOWS PA THE WAY TO DO IT

ANNOYING KIDNEY ILLS

Make Life Miserable for Many Fulton People

There's nothing more annoying than kidney weakness or inability to properly control the kidney secretions. Night and day alike, the sufferer is tormented and what with the burning and scalding, the attendant backache, headache and dizziness, life is indeed, a burden. Doan's Kidney Pills have given peace and comfort to many Fulton people. Profit by this Fulton resident's experience.

Mrs. Mary A. Knapp, 207 Buffalo st., Fulton, says: "I suffered from kidney trouble. My body bloated and my feet swelled so badly that I could not get on my shoes. My kidneys did not act properly and my back was lame. I doctored and tried several medicines, but nothing helped me until I used Doan's Kidney Pills. They regulated the action of my kidneys and made me feel better in every way."

Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Knapp had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y. adv

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Rooms To Rent—Two apartments over Geisler's store. Apply Lewis' Cigar Store. tf

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

For Sale—Small refrigerator; excellent condition; cheap. 312 West Fourth Street. 474

Wanted—Competent girls for general housework. Apply 208 South Fourth Street. 475

For Sale—Wall tent, 12x14, and one horse lumber wagon. 372 Park St. Phone 4452. 474c

Teamster Wanted—Steady work winter and summer; good wages. John W. Pratt farm. tf

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

JOHN A. CHUBB MAKES COMPENSATION CLAIM

Syracuse—After thinking about it two years John A. Chubb, of Fulton has made application at the local office of the State Compensation bureau for damages alleged to have been received when he fell off a wagon.

Chubb's complaint goes on to say that he was a former employe of N. M. Guile, of Fulton, and that the accident occurred October 14, 1914. He says he suffered a nervous shock and is still disabled.

A date for the hearing will be set by Commissioner Richards within a few days.

Not All Her Own.

A young woman who does a bit in the line of verse recently received the following note from a magazine editor:

"Dear Madam—The verses entitled 'The Kiss' are extremely clever. Can you assure me that they are original?"

Whereupon the fair writer answered: "Sir—Not quite. 'The Kiss' was a collaboration."—New York Times

[illegible]RK THEATRE

Continuous 2 to 10:30
Matinee 5c, Night: Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c

TODAY—
9th Episode "THE IRON CLAW" in 2 Parts.
2nd Episode of "THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA" in 2 Parts
"WORLD WAR IN KIDLAND"
4—ACTS VAUDEVILLE—4

SUNDAY—
Marie Walcamp in "THE FLIRT" Bluebird 5-part Feature.
[illegible] "WHO'S GUILTY"
[illegible] and Jeff in [illegible]TERPRETERS"
[illegible]OTHERS

MONDAY—
Grace Elliston in "THE BLACK FEAR" 5 Part Metro Feature.
Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in "THE SWOONERS"

MORE REVENUE FROM ESTATES

New Law Increases Tax on Inheritances Above $5,000 in One Class, Reaching 5 Per Cent in Another.

Altered more than forty times since its original enactment in 1885, the law fixing the state transfer tax on estates of deceased persons was again changed at the last session of the Legislature. Providing stiffer rates than those which have been in effect for five years, it is not unlikely that the new schedule, effective May 15, will double the revenue from this source.

The new set of rates is somewhat more complicated than the old and for the purposes of comparison both are shown below:

For bequests to direct relatives, the old law provided $5,000 exemption from tax. For the next 50,000, one per cent.; next $250,000 two per cent.; next $1,000,000, three per cent., and the balance, four per cent.

Under the new arrangement, bequests to a father, mother, husband, wife, or child, still have the $5,000 exemption, but the next $25,000, comes under the one per cent. rate, instead of $50,000 as heretofore. The next $75,000 pays two per cent.; the next $1,000,000 three per cent. and the balance, four per cent.

Non-relatives and collaterals under the old law had $1,000 exemption from tax. The next $50,000 was taxed at five per cent.; the next $250,000, six per cent.; the next $1,000,000 seven per cent., and the balance, eight per cent.

The provisions under the new act are as follows:

Bequests to an adopted child, $5,000 or under not taxable. Over $5,000 one per cent. on the entire sum. Greater sums are graded the same as "father, mother," etc.

Lineal descendants (grandchildren and great-grandchildren), $500 or under, not taxable. Over $500, one per cent. on all. Greater sums graded same as "father, mother," etc. The foregoing two sets of rates are in what is known as the "one per cent class."

In the "two per cent. class" are bequests to a brother, sister, wife or widow of a son, husband of a daughter, and persons standing in the mutually acknowledge relation of parent and child. (In the latter case, the child must have been taken before the age of 15 years and must have resided with the acknowledged parents for ten years.) In this class $500, two per cent. on all up to $25,000; three per cent. on the next $75,000; four per cent on the next $100,000; the balance, five per cent.

The "five per cent. class" takes in nephews, nieces, cousins, aunts, uncles, non-relatives, and all other bequests. In this class, $500 or under is not taxable. Over $500, five per cent. on all up to $25,000; six per cent. on the next $75,000, and eight per cent. on the balance.

Another clause, effective April 26, taxes an entire bank account or property held jointly, when a survivor takes descendant share. It reads as follows:

"Whenever property is held in the joint names of two or more persons, or as tenants by the entirety, or is deposited in banks or other institutions, or depositaries in the joint names of two or more persons, and payable to either or the survivor, upon the death of one of such persons, the right of the surviving tenant by the entirety, joint tenant or joint tenants, person or persons, to the immediate ownership or possession and enjoyment of such property shall be deemed a transfer taxable under the provisions of this chapter in the same manner as though the whole property to which such transfer relates belonged absolutely to the deceased tenant by the entirety, been bequeathed to the surviving tenant by the entirety, joint tenant, or joint tenants, person or persons, by such deceased tenant, by the entirety, joint tenant or joint depositor by will."

Big Sale of City Lots

Wilber Park, Fay Street, Fulton, N. Y.

To settle up the F. Palmerton Estate, I will place on sale the remaining unsold lots in this tract.

There are now about fifty lots fully paid for and deeded. Many fine residences now on the tract and many more under consideration.

Terms $1.00 Down and $1.00 per Week. No Interest or Taxes for Two Years

Do not miss this opportunity. It is not often that you can buy lots at ORIGINAL price after part of the tract has been sold and partly built up.

The following lots are offered in this sale to close the estate:

Block 203, lot 12; block 204, lots 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 8, 10, 12, 13, 15; block 202, lots 3, 4, 5, 7; block 220, lots 1, 2; block 211, lots 10, 12; block 212, lots 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 9, 11, 12, 13, 14; block 221, lots 1, 3, 5, 10, 12; block 222, lots 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10; block 230, lots 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8, 9, 14, 15, 16; block 240, lot 3.

The sale will begin July 3, 1916 and continue for 30 days. I will be at the Clark House during the first week. Pick out your lot and write me here at Holley, N. Y. I will hold it for you as these are too good bargains to last long, only a short time and they will double in value.

CALL AT THE CLARK HOUSE AND ENQUIRE FOR MAP

F. W. Church, Administrator

Holley, N. Y.

"TELEPHONE" CURES THIRST.

French Soldier Confesses, and Penalty Is Cut In Two.

Paris.—A court martial at the front. The presiding officer, speaking with a distinctly kindly intonation to the accused:

"Now, now, admit that you telephoned."

"No, my colonel, I did not telephone."

"If you confess you will only have half the penalty."

"Well, then, yes, my colonel, I did telephone."

All the court laughed and a nominal sentence was pronounced.

The civilian should not imagine that the use of a telephone is a crime in the French army. To "telephone" in army slang is to bore a little hole in a full barrel of wine, to fit a rubber tube thereto and apply the mouth to the other end.

VALUES HIS HOUNDS.

Hiawatha (Kan.) Resident Places Their Worth on Tax Rolls at $2,000.

Hiawatha, Kan.—On the assessment rolls of Brown county the name of F. E. Kelley, who lives on the Kickapoo Indian reservation, is down for $3,510 worth of property.

Mr. Kelley's hogs, cattle and implements are valued at $1,510, and twenty dogs are valued at $2,000. Kelley insisted on valuing the dogs at $100 each. They are hounds. County Clerk John Mathewson thought there was a mistake in entering the assessment and took the matter up with Kelley. The owner of the twenty dogs insisted on standing pat on his returns, and in addition to paying personal tax on the twenty hounds he will also have to pay the regular dog tax.

TEMPLE OF DISHONESTY.

It Will Have the Form of House, and All the Parts Are Stolen.

Los Angeles.—Somebody is building a temple of dishonesty in the form of a house, of which all the component parts are stolen.

Now the thieves are stealing the doors. The last case of such thievery was reported to the police recently by Mrs. W. H. Hill of 1414 Fedora street. When Mrs. Hill left home the other morning the back door was locked safely on its hinges. When she returned two hours later the door was gone. Other house parts have been stolen in other neighborhoods recently.

The police are wondering what the thieves will do when they get around to making a basement and cement walk for their homes.

FOUND $60 IN OLD CLOTHES.

Owner Gave Salvation Army Captain Part of It as Reward.

Portland, Ore.—They were sorting old clothes at the Salvation Army Industrial home the other day, with never a thought of hidden riches in the frayed and spotted garments that had been given to charity. Yet the task was enlivened when a handbag dropped from a bundle of clothes before the workers. They opened it to discover six ten-dollar bills.

The woman who had contributed the bundle was at once sought and located. To Captain Andrews, who returned the money, she expressed her gratitude by presenting one of the bills to the Salvation Army.

Gasoline and supplies. Van Wagenen, Inc.—Adv.

INCOMES IN NEW YORK INCRREASE 77 PER CENT.

New York—Three thousand persons paid income taxes at the Internal Revenue offices in the Custom House yesterday. They handed over the counters, to clerks already weary of counting money, $6,925,335.27. The previous day 2,500 settled up with the Government.

Four long lines formed, the scene resembling a championship game at a ball park. Everybody was in a hurry, for those who did not get the money in yesterday will have to pay a fine.

The total for the year, including individual income, corporation income and ordinary revenue taxes in the Second District, is $42,433,114.02. The like ttotal in 1915 was $26,800,246.36, and in 1914, $20,029,403.21.

These figures makes the Second District far and away the banner district, both in the amount of collections and in the increase in collections. The chief financiers of the country do business and pay taxes in this district, which includes lower Manhattan to Sixth avenue, Twenty-eighth street and the Bowery. It is Mr. Rockefeller's district.

SINGER KISSES OFFICER FOUND NOT GUILTY

New York — Lieutenant Hans Tauscher was acquitted of a charge of conspiracy by a jury in the Federal Court yesterday.

He was accused of violating the neutrality laws of the United States by furnishing arms and dynamite for a "military expedition against the Welland Canal in Canada."

It was alleged he had conspired with Captain Franz von Papen, former military attache of the German Embassy, and others. He is the American agent for the Krupps.

Mme. Gadski, wife of Lieutenant Tauscher, and their daughter, Miss Lotta, were in court when the verdict was announced. They showered kisses on him and congratulated Felix Levy and Herbert C. Smyth, attorneys, who won the acquittal.

Lieutenant Tauscher, who was all smiles, shook hands with the jurors and with Assistant District Attorney Roger B. Wood, who had prosecuted the case. Then he declared:

"I knew I could depend on the justice and fairness of the American courts."

In his charge Judge Hand warned jurors not to let questions of nationality influence the verdict. The only issue was whether Lieut. Tauscher had knowingly participated in a conspiracy.

DUMA MAKES BAN ON ALCOHOL PERMANENT

Petrograd—The Duma has passed the bill permanently prohibiting the sale of drink containing more than one and one half per cent. of alcohol.

The measure must be passed by the Upper House and signed by the Emperior before becoming a law.

MEMBER OF GOULD FAMILY WRITES PLAY

Lakewood, N. J.—Miss Gloria Gould, ten year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George J. Gould, made her debut as playwright and actress at Georgian Court here yesterday when she produced "The Lost Child" before a large audience. It was for the benefit of the American Red Cross. The play was written entirely by Miss Gould, and she alone coached her small assistants.

The piece was given in the beautiful rose garden at Georgian Court, the Goulds' estate.

The leading lady was Miss Gloria in the role of the Queen. Miss Edith Drexel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel, Jr., assumed the character of the lost child. Anthony, the other child of the Drexels, was the Prince. Several young friends filled the roles of courtiers.

TAMMANY PLANS TO "RECOMMEND" TICKET

An old fashioned Democratic State Convention to "recommend" a State ticket and United States Senatorial nominee is planned by Tammany leaders.

Friends of Samuel Seabury who desire his nomination for Governor are said to oppose this. They believe his chances better at the primaries without urging from a convention.

GOVERNOR IS ASKED TO OUST MITCHEL

New York—Residents of Greenpoint, at a meeting in O'Loughlin's Lyceum, No. 26 Henry street, last night, amid applause and cheers, passed a resolution calling on Governor Whitman to suspend from office Mayor John Purroy Mitchel as a result of the recent "wire tapping" disclosures.

The resolution, introduced by former Assemblyman Thomas E. Willmot, was unanimously passed. It also asks that Charities Commissioner John A. Kingsbury, indicted as a result of the scandal, be suspended pending his trial.

The meeting was called to protest against the invasion of rights of the home by indignant citizens of Greenpoint and surrounding sections.

During Your Visit at Fulton
OLD HOME WEEK
Stop at
HOTEL CLARK
Fulton's Leading Hotel
L. J. McQUADE, Proprietor

FOR SALE

Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.

Ready for Prompt Delivery

Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING AND HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second St.

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

CHICHESTER S PILLS

THE DIAMOND BRAND.
Ladies! Ask your Druggist for Chi-ches-ter's Diamond Brand Pills in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with Blue Ribbon. Take no other. Buy of your Druggist. Ask for CHI-CHES-TER'S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS, for [illegible] years known as Best, Safest, Always Reliable.
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

Savings Bank Deposits Rec'd on or Before July 13, will Draw Interest from July 1.

Drop a Postal for Our Booklet "U. S. Mail for Banking"

4% INTEREST

Paid Since 1908

ALBANY CITY SAVINGS INSTITUTION
100 STATE ST., ALBANY, N.Y.

TO THE FORE WITH CAMP COOKERY

Don't Eat Indigestibles Merely Because You Live In a Tent—Try Chicken a la Cowboy and Beans Baked In a Hole.

IN a permanent camp the fireplace may be built of flat stones, with an opening three feet above the ground, and this kind of fireplace eliminates the backaches that come from bending over a low fire. The log cooking stove is most convenient and is made by placing two green logs, their upper surfaces flattened, on the ground in a long, narrow V, the fire being built between them. The point of the V should be left open some three or four inches, the opening at the wide end being not more than nine inches. The coffeepot can be placed on a narrow end, and kettles may be hung on improvised cranes. A folding portable grate will be convenient.

Never start to cook until your fire is reduced to live coals, and to secure the proper bed of coals the original fire must be made of hard wood, as the embers from hemlock, pine or spruce lose their heat in a very short time. If you have a folding baker the bread, biscuit and cakes may be baked in it. Otherwise you will have to place the dough in a greased pan and cover it with another pan of equal size. This kind of baker is buried in the hot embers, care being taken that there are plenty of hot coals on the top of the pan as well as underneath.

Prepared flour is almost a necessity in camp, as it only requires wetting with milk or water to make delicious biscuit or pancakes. However, if you haven't this flour biscuits are also easily and quickly made by mixing two pints of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt and a piece of butter or pork fat the size of an egg, with sufficient milk to make a dough soft enough to roll out and cut into shape. Bread is made in the same way, except that the dough is thinned to form a batter which will just pour, and it must be baked in deeper pans. To make good old time southern hoecake mix one quart of cornmeal, one teaspoonful of baking powder and one teaspoonful of salt, with enough cold water to make a thin batter. Let it rise, then stir it well and bake. This is delicious eaten either hot or cold with butter or sirup. Toothsome flapjacks, which are the traditional fare of all outdoor people, are made by adding to two pints of flour two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt and one egg, sufficient milk to make a batter which will pour easily. Cook in a well greased frying pan over a hot fire.

The auxiliary oven or bean hole is the fireless cooker of the camp, and in it chicken, chowders, fish, stews, green corn (unhusked), potatoes in their jackets and many other good things may be cooked. In it you can cook the best baked beans you have ever eaten. Soak the beans overnight, and in the morning parboil them in fresh water until the skins crack when you blow on them. Put half the quantity of the beans in the pot, add a good sized piece of salt pork, the remainder of the beans and another portion of pork. Add two tablespoonfuls of molasses and cover with hot water. See that the lid fits on tightly. Slices of onion may be added if you care for the flavor. The oven in the meantime has been made ready by keeping up a continuous fire until the stones are hot.

If there should be a farm near the camp where you can procure a fat, yellow legged pullet to cook as the cowboys do you will find it greatly to your taste. Dress it carefully, dust the inside with salt, pepper and flour, adding a slice or two of sweet bacon. Treat the outside in the same way, putting a slice of bacon under each wing and across the breast and tying the wings down; then wrap it tightly in a napkin made from flour sack muslin and tie well. Drop the chicken into cold water, wrap another napkin around it and dip again. Then wrap in many thicknesses of newspapers, wetting very thoroughly each time. Rake the coals of the fire aside, cover the space with cold ashes to prevent the live coals from touching the chicken; then put in the well wrapped pullet, dust with cold ashes, pile on the hot coals and leave undisturbed for an hour. Remove the coals and charred paper carefully at the end of that time and from the inner napkin deftly turn out upon a dish the baked chicken.

THE GOING AWAY GOWN.

The bride is apt to be most deeply concerned about her "going away" and traveling costume after the vital matter of the wedding gown has been settled. Blue seems to be a favored color for "going away" gowns this season, and a few smart models in coffee tone have been recorded. One [illegible]ide of important social stand[illegible] appeared in a citron colored t[illegible]a and citron cloth topcoat to [illegible] goodby to her assembled frie[illegible]. Since hat and buttoned boo[illegible] were black, the effect is very s[illegible] indeed, but citron is a shade t[illegible] admits no rivals in color along[illegible].

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

A pointed feature of this checked taffeta is the belt, which emphasizes the side drapery of the full skirt. The jumper waist is worn over a blouse of crepe Georgette, which is used also to trim the collar of taffeta. Most interesting effects are attained in the new skirts by simple draperies and lately the French dressmakers are not wiring them, in order to preserve their soft effect. This design calls for 4 yards 40-inch taffeta and 2 yards crepe Georgette.

Pictorial Review Costume No. 6672. Sizes, 16 to 29 years; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Departmen store, Fulton.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

EGGS ARE CHEAP.

EGGS WITH MUSHROOMS.—Slice canned mushrooms into halves. stew ten minutes in a little butter seasoned with pepper and salt and a very little water. Drain, put the mushrooms in a pie dish, break enough eggs to cover them; pepper, salt and scatter bits of butter over them, strew with breadcrumbs and bake until the eggs set. Serve in the dish.

Pineapple Omelet.—Cook together two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, add a cupful of grated pineapple, sugar and salt to taste. Add the well beaten yolks of five eggs. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of five eggs, cook two minutes in a buttered pan, dry in the oven, fold, turn into a hot platter and dust with powdered sugar. Serve with grated pineapple.

Egg Timbales.—Beat five eggs slightly, mix with one cupful of milk, season with salt and pepper, add two cupfuls of chopped cooked ham, put into buttered custard cups and bake in a pan of water until firm. Serve garnished with curly parsley.

Egg Jelly.—Half a pint of water, half an ounce of gelatin, the rind of half a lemon, two eggs and two ounces of sugar. Place the gelatin and water in an enameled pan, add the thin yellow rind of the lemon and let them soak until the gelatin is soft. Strain the lemon juice into the pan, add the sugar, bringing to boiling point, stirring all the time, till the gelatin is perfectly dissolved. Cool slightly, add the well beaten yolks and cool till the yolks thicken, then strain into a large basin. When the jelly is nearly set add the whipped whites of eggs and whisk all together till jellied. Serve in a glass dish.

Egg Curry Balls.—After stewing a chicken mix four hard boiled eggs, some finely grated breadcrumbs, fresh butter and a little curry powder, moistening it with the well beaten raw yolks of two eggs. Form into dainty balls and drop into the stewed chicken about five minutes before removing it from the fire.

Curried Eggs.—Fry an onion in butter, add milk and a teaspoonful of curry powder. Cut hard boiled eggs into halves, arrange on a dish, pour the curry cream mixture over them and put boiled rice around the dish. A tiny sprig of parsley put between the eggs gives the dish an inviting air. To six eggs use a cupful of milk and two teaspoonfuls of flour or cornstarch. If more eggs are used make the dressing accordingly.

Anna Thompson.

A Stranger In a Strange Land

He Found a Strange Custom, but Was Equal to It.

By ALAN HINSDALE

A man left an eastbound train passing through a region west of the Missouri river and inquired for transportation to a point out of the line of travel. He was unmistakably English in the appearance both pertaining to himself and his clothes. But instead of the rugged physique of many Britishers he was rather small, and his pale cheeks gave evidence of ill health.

There was a difference of opinion as to how he could best reach the point he was aiming for. Some said the road was rough and the gentleman did not look as if he had the strength to stand the jolting of a wagon. Others said that if he went on horseback he would be equally shaken up. The wit of the locality suggested that there were road agents along the line of travel and it was as much as a man's life was worth to pass over it. In saying this the joker nudged the man next him, as much as to say, "Reckon I'll skeer him out of it."

The stranger listened to these suggestions with evident interest, except the one about the road agents, this not seeming especially to interest him.

He succeeded in hiring a team to take him to his destination and was driven by the owner, who, wondering at an Englishman wearing apparel by no means like any other in that region, was inclined to question him as to why he was there. But the gentleman was taciturn and gave him no satisfaction. Indeed, after the driver had abandoned his attempt to pump the stranger the Englishman asked a few questions for himself.

"I've heard," he said, "that out here there's what they call 'gun play,' that there are men who think no more of putting lead into a fellow than into a dog."

"Oh, that sort o' thing used to be practiced out here," was the reply, "but we're civilized now and don't do it any more. At least it's not practiced near the railroad, where the country has been settled and court law has taken the place of gun law. But away from the railroads there are spots where the rough element has congregated, and there's still more or less free shooting. This region where you're going is one of that kind. I wouldn't advise any man to go there without a couple of revolvers slung under his coat."

"They say," remarked the stranger, "that when there is shooting going on it's the man who 'gets the drop,' as you say out here, on his enemy and shoots quickest who comes out ahead."

"That's about it," said the other.

The stranger turned from the use of the revolver to the products of the country and learned that horses were raised there and the point he was making for was a center of a horse raising territory, from the fact that it comprised fine grazing lands. The stranger asked about the price usually paid for an average horse and the best way of getting horses to market and seemed interested in getting all the information on the subject that was to be had. But he didn't admit that he was personally interested in horseflesh.

On reaching their destination—a hamlet of half a dozen houses—they drew up before a store building which was the only one in the place that was not occupied for dwelling purposes except a saloon. As the Englishman alighted he attracted the attention of a couple of men standing on the porch of the saloon.

"Just look at that, Pete," said one of these men, referring to the stranger. "Did you ever see anything so purty in your life? Do you ketch on to the glass eye—and the hat?" The Englishman wore a helmet. "Just think o' you or me sportin' sich a lookin' thing as that on our heads. And see the yaller things on his shoes, all buttoned up so ladylike."

"Shouldn't wonder if we could get some fun outen him, Bill," said the other. "Let's ask him in for a drink."

Meanwhile the Englishman was making inquiries for a man he had come to meet. The two men on the saloon porch approached him, and Bill addressed him in this wise:

"My friend, I don't know who you are or where you come from, but it's the custom o' this place to treat all strangers hospitable, and me and this yere gent invites you to step into the saloon and have somethin'."

"Your kind attention is appreciated, I assure you," said the Britisher, "but seeing that I don't drink I must ask you to take the will for the deed."

"That's somethin' we never do in these parts," was the reply, "especially when a man's invited to drink. Perhaps you're not aware that with us refusin' to liquor when invited is considered an insult."

"Oh, you mustn't take it that way. I'm not in good health, and my doctor has forbidden my drinking spirits."

"Your doctor don't know what fine whisky we have in this yere country and how much good it'll do a sick man. Come on, stranger; we'll give you the best dose o' medicine you ever tuk in your life."

"I reckon, Pete," said Bill, "that seein' the stranger is a shriveled, mis'able specimen we'd better let him off. It ain't no credit to force sich a ladylike purson as don't appreciate true hospitality."

"Well, then, suppose he sings us a song!"

"I'm no hand at singing," said the Britisher.

"There's nothin' about singin'," Pete persisted, "to hurt a man's insides even if he's sick. Now, see here, stranger; you give us a song mighty quick."

He took a revolver from his hip, cocked it and brought it to bear on the Britisher, who, seeing that he must either sing or get shot, began to do the best he could in giving "Britannia Rules the Waves." He had scarcely given a stanza before Pete put a bullet so close to his ear that he stopped at once.

"See here, young feller," thundered Pete, "we don't want any such song as that! Give us somethin' American."

"I don't know any American songs," replied the Britisher. "I might teach you some money making tricks. I know one or two that you could practice on your friends to a profit."

The prospect of getting something by which he could "do" a friend caught Pete's attention. He asked what kind of trick the stranger meant and was told that the best explanation would be to show the trick.

"Have you got a coin about you?" he asked.

Pete fumbled in his pocket and pulled out half a dollar, which he tossed to the Britisher. The latter put it in the palm of his right hand.

"You see," he said, "that it's in the palm of my right hand. I put it up my sleeve this way. Now I take it out of my sleeve and put it in the palm of my left hand. I now put it up my left sleeve and take it out and put it in my left hand."

While he was doing this he was fumbling up his right and left sleeve. After placing the coin for the second time in his left hand he pulled his cuffs down over both hands; then, with fists closed, he extended one fist toward Pete and the other toward Bill.

"Which hand is the coin in?" he asked Pete.

"The left," was the reply.

"What do you say?" Bill was asked.

"Left."

Something cracked in the stranger's right hand, and Pete fell forward on the ground.

"Hands up!" to Bill.

Bill's hands went up in a hurry.

"Would you oblige me," said the Britisher to the man who had driven him, "by relieving the gentleman of his weapons?"

The driver acceded to the request and handed two revolvers to the Britisher.

This ended the episode. Pete was picked up, dangerously but not mortally wounded. Bill agreed to call the affair, of which he had not approved, quits, shook hands with the Britisher and was handed back his weapons.

At that moment a man rode up on horseback and, seeing the stranger, asked:

"Major Hollester?"

"Yes, Mr. Grierson."

"Well, let's proceed to business."

The two men withdrew from the others and after half an hour's conversation returned to them.

"Gents," said Grierson, "this is Major Hollester of the British army. He was wounded fighting the Turks and has since been in poor health. So they sent him over here to buy horses for the British army. I have just contracted with him for a thousand head."

"I'm sorry," said Major Hollester, "to have put lead into one of your number. I've seen enough of that at Gallipoli and don't want any more of it."

"How did you get the drop on Pete and Bill?" asked a witness to the shooting.

The crowd seeming more interested in an explanation than in the apology, the major explained. Pulling up his sleeves, he showed slung to each arm by an elastic strap a Derringer pistol.

"You see," he said, "when I shoved the half dollar up my sleeve and pulled it down again I pulled one of these little barkers with it, so that when I extended my hands I had one of the weapons in each hand. I was ready then to fire, but so disliked hurting any one that I delayed a moment, as if carrying out the trick, asking this man Pete and then the other which hand held the coin. I wouldn't have thought of carrying arms in this peaceful country, but Mr. Grierson wrote me that there were some lawless characters about this location and it was the custom to wear arms. I have found the Derringer the best weapon for short notice and fixed a pair in my sleeves."

"What's the cross you wear on your watch chain, major?" asked a looker on.

"Oh, that's what they call the Victoria."

"What's that?" asked several persons at once.

The major looked abashed and, turning, walked away toward the conveyance in which he had come.

"I think," said Grierson, "that I can explain what that is. I received a letter stating that Major Edgar Hollester, V. C., would visit me for the purpose of buying horses for the British army. Noticing the V. C. tacked to his name, when I wrote my correspondent again I asked what it meant. The reply was that it stood for Victoria cross, a decoration given by the British government for bravery. I was also informed that Major Hollester had especially distinguished himself at Gallipoli and had been decorated therefor."

Major Hollester, having completed his contract for horses, was driven to the railway station and proceeded northeastward, entering Canada.

Nor had the last of them disappeared before Mrs. Scanlon was telling him the tale.

"I had some words wit' that Brennan woman next door when I was hangin' out the clothes this mornin'," said she.

Timmy, looking at her set lips and hard eyes, felt uncomfortable premonitions, but he said nothing.

"Cruel, hard words she used," Mrs Scanlon went on; "words no lady would 'a' thought of usin'. And—and the upshot was that I told her yer wouldn't do a thing to that fat Eddie of hers if he went to tootlin' that trumpet of his again."

Timmy said nothing as he took his lamp, his green eyeshade and his books from the kitchen shelf and went upstairs.

Tonight, as if in insulting defiance, the cornet's blasts began as soon as Timmy's light showed in his bedroom.

Something seemed to snap in Timmy's tortured head. He had no intention of doing what he did.

Nor did he stop to count the hazards when he tore out of the room and down the stairs, while Mary Scanlon's eyes glowed and her breath quickened and the color came and went in her cheeks.

Ten minutes later Timmy was back—that is to say, what was left of Timmy was back.

And there it all might have ended had not Mr. Brennan, by way of fittingly celebrating his triumph, come out on the tiny veranda directly beneath the suffering Timmy's windows and shattered the peaceful air of the night with great and crashing excerpts from "Killarney," played noisomely with the full power of his mighty lungs behind them.

This was too much for the O'Shaughnessey blood in Mary Scanlon.

Forgotten was Timmy and his cuts and bruises. Forgotten everything save that Eddie Brennan was there on the next piazza sending forth his brazen notes of victory and challenge.

Never was there an O'Shaughnessey who could have stood that.

Blindly she groped down the stairs, blindly she caught up the broom behind the door, blindly she tore out of the house and straight toward those hateful sounds.

At the same time an arm brushed her aside.

"This is no affair of yours, mother. Go home, and leave him to me," said a cool, calm voice behind her.

"Yer didn't suppose I could stand it to hear him crowin' over me like this any more than you could, did you?" he asked. "Maybe he did lick the Scanlon half av me, but he ain't trimmed the O'Shaughnessey half yet, and he never will, neither."

"Wot?" cried Eddie Brennan, his face black with wrath as he stepped to the edge of the veranda. 'Ain't yer had enough?"

"We ain't even begun yet," said Timmy pleasantly and jumped on to the porch.

Stepping back and clutching the pickets of the dividing fence with both hands, Mrs. Scanlon gave voice to shrill and involuntary little squeals of delight as Timmy grabbed the mooted cornet, wrung it from Eddie Brennan's fingers and sent it crashing to the floor of the porch.

Locked tight in each other's clutches they swayed and staggered and stamped about the porch, but even in the stress of those crucial moments Timmy did not forget the hated instrument.

Over it they trampled time and again to a fine accompaniment of bending metal and breaking valves. And anon Timmy would manage to land a heel upon it with sufficient force to materially further its rapid progress toward the scrap heap.

Brennan, seeing Timmy's game, let out a bellow of rage.

Also the sight of the broken and twisted instrument did not tend to calm him.

With a mighty effort he managed to break from the clinch, stepped back and shot a straight arm left at Timmy's face, which Timmy sidestepped as it went past his ear with ominous and all too suggestive proximity.

The force of the blow, misspent as it was, whirled Brennan to the very edge of the porch. Before he could recover his balance Timmy had unloosed his right with a force he never dreamed it possessed.

It caught his opponent flush on the left cheek.

He shot off the porch, landed on his stomach in a last year's petunia bed, and before he could struggle to his feet Timmy, with a flying leap, was on his shoulders, his fingers ruthlessly clutching his foe's ears and driving Eddie Brennan's nose deeper and deeper into the straw and the loam of the petunia bed.

"Say ye've had enough!" raged Timmy.

"Enough!" panted Brennan's mouth, buried somewhere in the straw.

"Say it again," howled Timmy, "and say it louder. It sure sounds good to me!"

"Aw, be decent about it, Timmy!" pleaded Mrs. Scanlon, stepping forward from the fence. "L'ave the poor, licked lad up and come away. Don't rub it in no more. Remember—he's your neighbor!"

Mrs. Scanlon, carrying up a well filled breakfast tray to Timmy's room next morning, smiled proudly at the scarred and battered countenance on the pillows.

"Take a look out here, Timmy, [illegible]" said she, setting down the tray [illegible] stepping over to the window to [illegible] the drawn shade, "and give a hurroo for the O'Shaughnesseys as ye look. Ye can study yer lessons in peace after this. There's three furniture vans backed up next door. Them Brennan folks is movin'."

FOR CLUBWOMEN.

An Army of Them Gathers In New York City.

"SERVICE" IS THE KEYNOTE.

The National Convention, Under the Presidency of Mrs. Pennybacker and Twenty Thousand Strong, Assembled From Forty-eight State Conventions.

The greatest organization of women in any nation of the world, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was born in New York twenty-six years ago.

For the first time it returned to its birthplace, to hold its thirteenth convention. So complete, well manned and vital is the organization that the entire body responds to the pressing of the button or by a wireless that extends to every remote section of every state in the Union. It has working departments in every line of activity—art, civics, civil service reform, conservation, education, home economics, industrial and social conditions, legislation, literature, library extension, music, drama, public health, and subdivisions of these committees to include child labor, woman suffrage, mothers' pensions, peace, preparedness, food sanitation, housing, prison reform, minimum wage, political science, tuberculosis, child welfare and hygiene, Americanization and current events and progress in every department of activity in national life. State federations, city federations and the clubs themselves are completely officered along this same organized line, all tributary to the General Federation.

MRS. PERCY V. PENNYBACKER.

The president of this huge activity, Mrs. Pennybacker, in a recent interview said of the first biennial she attended in Los Angeles fourteen years ago:

"The very immensity of the convention was an inspiration. There were women from every state in the Union, representing every phase, every group of our national life. While some feel that the General Federation must be reorganized so as to bring about a smaller attendance, let us never forget that a part of the inspiration comes from the bigness. History has never yet fully written the chapter as to the part the General Federation has played in wiping out sectional feeling. One reason why there is in this dear land of ours today so little north, south, east or west is because the women of all sections meet, counsel and labor together. When we learn to know each other appreciation comes and misunderstanding disappears. When we work together for some great cause petty differences drop from us like wornout garments.

"It was also a delight to see that beauty had its place in this great gathering of women. No one has forgotten the 40,000 calla lilies which were used as decorations the first two days, followed by carnations, they in turn giving way to numberless roses of every hue.

"Everywhere one felt that the women took their work seriously and with the conviction that it is truly worth while. On the last night this earnestness developed into a spiritual climax. We closed in a moment of ecstasy as we sang 'God Be With You Till We Meet Again,' while from the galleries the fair hands of the California women let flutter down millions of rose petals, covering us with fragrance.

"Is it not significant that these impressions make of themselves the one word 'service,' which is the keynote of our entire federation life?"

Cream Salad Dressing.

Mix one-half tablespoonful salt, two and one-half tablespoonfuls melted butter, one level teaspoonful flour, a shake of pepper and two egg yolks together until smooth. Add three-fourths cupful of thin cream. (You may take the top of the milk in the bottle and have the rest of the milk to use for something else.) Then add slowly one-fourth cupful vinegar or lemon juice, stirring as you add it. Cook over hot water until thickened. If too thick after standing to cool, thin with cream or milk.

A Fashion Tip.

The neck line of the modish summer frock is much wider and therefore much more becoming than was last year's—that is, the frock is cut away at the sides of the throat as well as in front, showing something of the shoulder line.

ELIZABETHAN COOKING RECIPES

Shakespeare's Era Was Redolent of Delicious Foods That May Have Redounded to the Stratford Bard's Genius.

AS a matter of fact, a very casual research into the food of Shakespeare's time shows a bewildering variety and an overwhelming quantity of viands, ranging from peacocks stuffed and roasted and sent up to table with outspread tails, and swans also served in their feathers, to lampreys, such as proved the death of at least one over-indulgent monarch, while the wines of France, Spain and the Rhine were imported in large quantities.

In the reign of Richard II. there was a cookery book issued called the "Forme of Curry," in which we find recipes that in vagueness and variety of spices and flavors are without parallel. So pungent and numerous are the condiments required that we are forced to the conclusion that the people of the time must have had very tough palates and the digestion of the proverbial ostrich.

Take, for example, these recipes, typical of the rest and quite sufficient to make us understand why the soldiers and buccaneers of the "Virgin Queen" were so universally victorious, for surely men that assimilate these dishes could triumph over anything on earth!

Conger In Sauce.—Take the conger and scald him and smite him in pieces and seethe him. Take parsley, mint, pellitory, rosemary, sage, bread, salt, a little garlick and of cloves a little. Take it and grind it well. Strain it in vinegar through a cloth. Cast the fish in a vessel, add the liquor and serve it forth.

Tartee.—Take boiled pork. Hew it and pound it, and add thereto eggs, raisins, sugar, powder of ginger, white grease and small birds there among. Take prunes, saffron and salt and make a crust in a dish. Put the mixture therein, bake it well and serve it forth.

At the wedding banquet served for [illegible]e of France the [illegible] was served: [illegible]ake Greek or [illegible]honey clarified therewith. Take flower of rice, powder of ginger or pepper and cinnamon, cloves, saffron, sugar, mulberries and sandalwood and mix all together. Boil it and salt it and look that it be stiff.

Some irreverent beings declare that some of our best advertised breakfast foods are like sawdust and chopped hay. Well, even if it were true, you see here a kingly precedent, when royal brides feasted on sandalwood. But in the time of Henry V. the tables seem to have begun to acquire some foreign graces, so perhaps Kate revolted and introduced some of the airier dainties of her native land, which even in those far off days was renowned for its cookery.

At Henry V.'s wedding we read there was a jelly ornamented with the flowers of the columbine and a white cake garnished with hawthorn leaves and their shining red berries; two decorations consisting of figures of St. Katherine, the bride's patron saint, and, crowning feat, "a subtlety of a tiger looking in a mirror." History telleth not of what this "subtlety" or the figures were composed nor whether, like his descendant of Limerick fame, there was "a smile on the face of the tiger."

Coming to Shakespeare's time, we find a sauce that was in great demand under the name of "Sauce Madame." Here is the recipe, and certainly it sounds like a rather substantial dish:

Sauce Madame. — Take sage and parsley, hyssop and savory, quinces and good pears, peeled; garlic and grapes. Take geese, cleanly washed, and fill the geese therewith and see that none escapes. Keep the grease that drops while roasting; roast it well. Take the grease and put it in a pipkin. When the geese are done enough take them off the spit and smite them into pieces. Take that which is within, hew it small, put it in the pipkin, add thereto a little wine, currants, powdered ginger and cinnamon and let it boil. Put the geese on platters, pour the sauce over all and serve it forth.

To Wind Yarn Unaided.

We all know that it is difficult to wind wool or yarn of any kind if there is no one to hold the skein. To overcome this difficulty put two flatirons on the table a sufficient distance apart to allow the wool to be tightly stretched. This will answer just as well as some one holding the skein.

QUAINT PARASOLS.

The summer season will be conspicuous for the novelty and charm of its parasols. Among the novelties we may expect will be sunshades of all kinds of queer and quaint and unusual shapes, many of them having stripes that radiate from the sticks. Stripes will be a great feature, whether the parasol be dome shaped or pagoda shaped. Many of them will be copied from the sunshades of our grandmothers, which were covered with multitudes of miniature frills.

For Hot Weather Wear Try This Picturesque Sunshade

THE small hat will always be a hallmark of certain types of good dressing. Meanwhile summer suns are calling out a variety of huge brimmed hats, especially for sports. The one pictured is especially chic for beach wear, a novelty straw faced with salmon pink crape and banded with a wreath of padded leaves, glistening berries and pastel flowers.

The Suicide of Hannibal.

Defeated at Zama, Hannibal fled to the east to avoid falling into the hands of the Romans and found temporary security in the dominions of Mithridates. He incited this monarch to engage in a Roman war, and, his advice as to its conduct being rejected, the war proved unsuccessful, and Mithridates was required as one of the conditions of peace to deliver up Hannibal to his enemies, the Romans.

The unfortunate Carthaginian heard of his approaching fate, swallowed the poison which for years he had carried about his person and expired just as the envoys arrived to take him away as a prisoner.

Wind Pressure.

In meteorological terms a strong wind is anything from twenty-four to thirty-seven miles an hour, a gale from thirty-eight to fifty-five miles and a storm from fifty-six to seventy-five miles. Beyond that it may be described as a hurricane. In the convulsion which destroyed the Tay bridge in December, 1879, the anemometer registered gusts of wind which exceeded 100 miles an hour. The connection between the velocity and the pressure of the wind is not yet known with absolute certainty, but roughly speaking a wind of forty miles an hour produces a pressure of eight pounds to the square foot and fifty-one miles a pressure of thirteen pounds.—London Chronicle.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper
By Pictorial Review

A Combination of Distinction

6797

Distinctive in line and proportions is this combination of corset cover and open drawers. Two outlines are furnished for the neck and lower edge of the model.

There is always a place for garments of individual style in the wardrobe of the well-dressed woman. For that reason this combination will be wanted. It consists of a corset cover and open drawers, the corset cover having a round neck, though a square effect may be used instead. The model is equally dainty developed in nainsook, fine lawn or lingerie satin. Delicate colors are used as much as white this season in making smart underwear. Two and five-eighths yards of material, with 9 yards of insertion and 8 yards of edging are required to make this combination.

Two widths of the material are laid, right sides facing, on the cutting board before the various pattern sections are placed upon them. Each section occupies almost the entire length of the goods. The front comes in the first row, then the side back, arranged a little to the right of the front. The back is placed on the third row, with the shield to the right, while the side front takes up the remaining space. A careful survey of the cutting guide shows how impossible it is to waste material or make errors in the cutting.

It case the straight upper edge is preferred for the corset cover, as so many women like this outline, with ribbon shoulder straps, cut off upper edges of front, side front, side back and back along crosslines of small "o" perforations. The small "o" perforations at the lower edge of the drawers also show how the straight line may be obtained in place of the round effect.

A bit of embroidery is essential on all fine underwear this season, even where lace is used. The delicate sprays used here are quickly worked, satin and outline stitches being employed for the purpose.

Pictorial Review Combination No. 6797. Sizes, 34 to 46 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

Embroidery No. 11751. Transfer pattern only, 6 yards and 4 corners, price 15 cents.

Jews of America Must Become a Component Part of the Nation

By JACOB H. SCHIFF, Noted Banker

HUNDREDS of thousands of the three million Jews in America feel that a Jew has no other duty than to be a Jew—not a Jew through attachment to religion, but a Jew through the living of a separate life and in not being a component part of the American nation.

Photo by American Press Association.

J. H. SCHIFF.

If hundreds of thousands of Jews in America insist that our tongue—I do not mean the Hebrew, but Yiddish—must be retained not only in their homes, but in public assemblages and in schools, it will bring dire misfortune to our people. We will, indeed, remain a separate people.

We must have none of this. We must recognize that we are Americans, and we must want our children to be Americans.

WE WANT OUR CHILDREN TO LOVE OUR RELIGION, BUT WE MUST WANT THEM TO SPEAK IN ENGLISH, TO READ IN ENGLISH AND TO ADAPT THEMSELVES TO AMERICAN WAYS.

Music.

It by no means follows that the person able to play a piece of music accurately is able also to sing correctly. Tune, like genius, is a gift of the gods, and many who are fine players, having mastered the notes mechanically, would cut a most ridiculous figure should they attempt to sing offhand even the commonest song, just as many who can sing with beautiful tune are quite unable to play on the instruments according to the scales.—New York American.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper
By Pictorial Review

Dinner Frock With New Neckline

Pink is exceedingly fashionable this year and when it appears in crepe combined with lace as illustrated here, it is irresistible. The oval shaped neck is a feature of the gown.

One cannot resist the beauty of this dinner frock in pale pink crepe and lace. In medium size the design requires 4 yards 36-inch crepe and 7 yards all-over lace 16 inches wide. Pink silk is used to hem the flounces at the side of the skirt.

Particular attention is directed toward the waist, however, because of its charming simplicity. This will make it a favorite for independent wear during the season.

To gain the oval shaped neck, it is necessary to cut out the upper part of the front and back along indicating small "o" perforations. Finish with bands of silk, stitched to the front and back, center-fronts and back edges even.

Sew the sleeve to armhole edge of front and back as notched. Close under-arm and sleeve seams as notched and gather lower edge of front and back between double "TT" perforations and 2 inches above. Adjust stay to position underneath gathers, center fronts and back edges even, small "o" perforation at under-arm seam.

The large "O" perforations on the peplum indicate the center-front. Close the center-front seam and sew to lower edge of waist as indicated.

Makers of smart fashions think in terms of capes this season, so that there are very few ultra-modish frocks which do not accommodate themselves to this shoulder trimming. A cape is provided for this blouse, if desired. A study of the construction guide shows how it is to be plaited at the upper edge, then attached to the back of the waist, somewhat in jabot effect. The cape is finished from the center-back to the edge (on the left side) for a closing. Although designed for the height of summer these capes frequently are lined with marabout or fur.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6801. Sizes, 34 to 42 inches bust. Price, 15 cents. Skirt No. 6823, 22 to 30 inches waist. Price, 15 cents.

The Hungry Walrus.

It takes about fifty pounds of fresh fish a day to supply the appetite of a six-months-old walrus.

He Knew.

"He's a man of fixed ideas."

"Yep. A polite way of calling him bull headed."—Exchange.

LADIES

We have on display in our South window a large number of Sets of

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

while they last we will sell them at

70 Cents the Set

The wholesale price is more than that, but we are going to dispose of them at a great sacrifice.

COME EARLY IF YOU WISH TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER

They were bought by the former publishers for premiums, but we are giving no premiums with the

FULTON EVENING TIMES

ar Department Able to Steer State Troops Clear of Camp Ills

Elaborate steps have been taken by army officials to care for the health of the New York state troops at Camp Beekman as well as those of other states at their respective mobilization camps by the federal authorities.

Precautions have been taken to eliminate the mistakes made in the Spanish American war and assurances are given that there will not be any recurrence of the unsanitary conditions or outbreaks of preventable diseases which occurred then.

During the period since the Spanish war the medical department of the army has been largely employed in the study of disease prevention on a vast scale and the most gratifying results have been attained by the investigation into the cause of disease and practical sanitation supplied by army medical officers in Cuba, Panama and the Phillipines.

As soon as the state troops are mustered into the federal service a regular army medical officer is assigned them as sanitary inspector.

With respect to typhoid fever which was the great source of sickness in the camps during the Spanish-American war, this disease now gives relatively little concern as a result of the effective protective inoculations worked out by the medical department and systematically carried out on all regular troops on enlistment.

While anti-typhoid inoculation has not yet been required of the militia every effort has been made to bring it about in the past through the protection or orgaaizations formed for that purpose. As soon as they are mustered into the federal service they will be given the full course of three anti-typhoid inoculations extending over a period of twenty days.

One of the diseases that has given the armies in Europe great concern during the present war is typhus fever, which has raged with especial violence in Servia. This disease is epidemic in Mexico and the most serious widespread epidemics have occurred there during the past few years. It is now known that the disease is transmitted by the bite of a body louse and that by theavoidance of these offensive parasites the disease will not occur.

Effective preventative measures consist of cleanliness of person and destruction of insect parasites on clothing and bedding. Should there be occupancy of Mexican territory a few cases might be developed as a result of the soldiers coming in contact with a verminous civil population, but no outbreak of any degree of seriousness is anticipated.

Some mobilization camps in the United States are in the malarial zone. It is known that malaria is transmitted by mosquitoes. Each soldier is supplied with a mosquito bar and orders require that it be used.

While small pox is rare in the United States it is common in Mexico, which has a very large unvaccinated population. Every soldier is vaccinated immediately on enlistment and re-vaccinated as often as may be necessary to secure protection.

A special campaign against flies by destruction of their breeding places and food material by poisoning and otherwise destroying the adult flies will be vigorously carried on in every camp.

Source of Diamonds.

Patience—It is said that diamonds have been discovered in fallen meteors. Patrice—But a fallen meteor is cold, and I'm looking for a diamond from a warmer proposition than a fallen meteor.—Yonkers Statesman.

Proof.

"I guess the wife is home all right."

"What makes you think so?"

"I've been trying to get the house on the phone for three-quarters of an hour and the line has been busy all the time."—Detroit Free Press.

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"
The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.
"CITY OF ERIE" —— 3 Magnificent Steamers —— "CITY OF BUFFALO"
BETWEEN
BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Nov. 15th—CLEVELAND
Leave Buffalo 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Cleveland 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo 7:30 A. M.
(Eastern Standard Time)
Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.
Beautifully colored sectional puzzle chart, showing both exterior and interior of The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE" sent on receipt of five cents to cover postage and mailing. Also ask for our 24-page pictorial and descriptive booklet free.
THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

NOT MANY TROOPS UNFIT FOR DUTY

About Ten Per Cent Fail in Physical Test—Rush to Border Abates.

New York state troop movements are practically at a standstill and there is a decided slowing up in movement of troops in other sections of the country.

No commands of New York state men entrained yesterday and but fragments of commands are under orders for movement today.

The two reasons for the slackening of troop activities are the release of the American prisoners held by the Mexicans and the fact that the commands still in camp or at armories have shown that more time must be allowed for equipment and preparation. Not one of the commands now on the way to the border is actually fit for hard service, officials have admitted, but all of them are better equipped and better trained than the commands that have not moved.

It is the belief in army circles that General Wood will now insist that few more militia regiments or organizations of any sort be sent to the border until they have been put through a stiff course of training at home mobiliziation camps. There is an impression abroad that General Wood would like to have six months in which to drill the men to make them real soldiers.

It is possible that General Wood's hopes will not be realized as there will be complaints almost certainly made from politicians that the militia are being kept "idle" on the border or at the home camps. The heads of the regular army, however and the National Guard officers will insist that the present opportunity for the training of men in large bodies working together as regiments, brigades, and even divisions is too excellent to be thrown away. An effort will be made to hold at the border all of the militia now entrained for the field and to hold at Camp Whitman all the militia assigned there.

Medical examinations of the guardsmen at Camp Beekman have been under way for some time and medical reports show that about ten per cent. of the ordinary strength of the militia commands have been rejected by the examiners. The ten per cent. estimate, it is said, is conservative and applies to the New York troops. In some states the rejections have been appallingly large. In the state from thirty to forty per cent. of the troops were rejected because they were physically unfit.

SOLDIERS' FOOD IS ALL RIGHT

The problem of supplying food to the New York and other State troops en route to the border from the Eastern Department is entirely in the hands of Major General Leonard Wood and the Department Quartermaster.

The department commanders can buy anything in the way of food supplies that is required. There is no excuse for any lack of food of the proper quality.

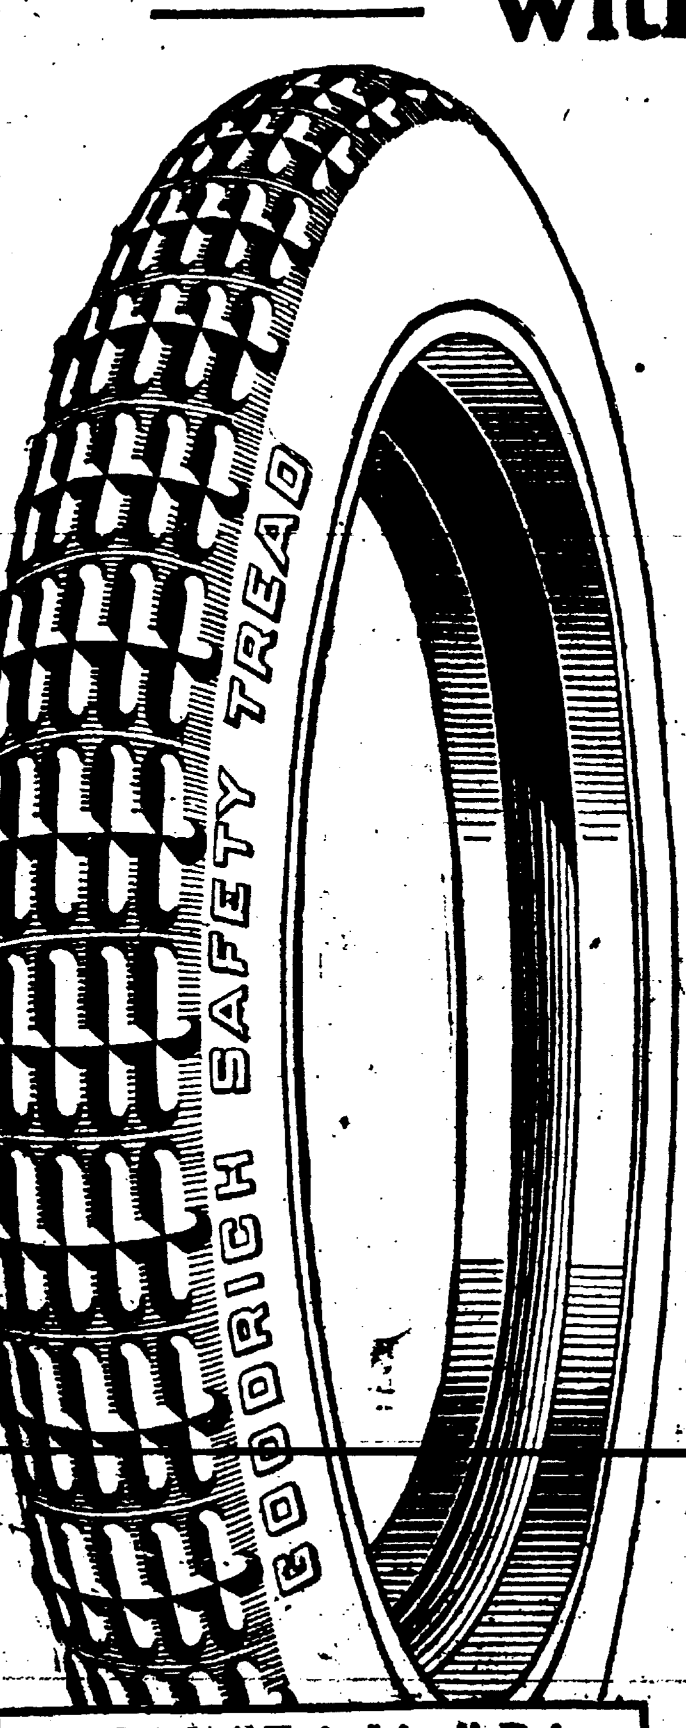
It is possible that the cooks going with the State troops are not competent, and complaints of the food supplied may be due to poor preparation rather than poor quality.

Arrangements have been completed to see that an ample supply of fresh meat and vegetables is on hand at all times for the troops now going to the border. So long as they remain on American soil they will have an abundance of fresh food. If it becomes necessary to cross into Mexican territory, food that is more readily transported and preserved will have to be utilized.

Until the State troops are mustered into the Federal service the State authorties are responsible for the food supply. Just as son as they are formally mustered in the burden passes to the Federal Government.

In connection with the food supply, army officers called attention to the fact that no complaint has been heard from men in the regular army on duty on the border or in Mexico as to the quality or quantity of food supplied them. They are given ample quantities of wholesome food, the ration being proportioned scientifically to maintain them in the best physical condition.

Why Spend your Money,—"with a Spade"?



THRIFT does not mean Penuriousness!
Its first principle consists in getting FULL VALUE for each Dollar of Income expended.
Getting less is not complimentary to the intelligence of even a Millionaire.
Being liberal and generous, in affairs where it is proper and deliberate to be so, differs widely from being thriftless, thoughtless and careless in buying things, on a business basis.
A habit of "Jumping at Conclusions," instead of Thinking out these Conclusions, costs many a man a lifetime of Un-success.

TOO many Americans indolently act upon the shallow theory that an article "must be" WORTH more, merely because it Costs more.
They are thus taxed a heavy price, all through life, for such an indolent habit of Thought.
They work hard, industriously and intelligently, to acquire money.
Then (for their personal needs) they "Spend it with a Spade."
Is this complimentary to the judgment of even the Wealthiest?
Do people become Wealthy who acquire the careless HABIT of "Spending Money," instead of intelligent, thoughtful BUYING with it?

MONEY cannot make BETTER Fabric Tires,—at ANY price,—than Goodrich 47-Year Experience,—300,000,000 lbs. Purchasing-Power, and Deliberate Intention, are now producing.
No Rubber Concern in the world could afford to offer the low Fair-List Prices here quoted, on Fabric Tires (for such HIGH quality) without the enormous Goodrich VOLUME, which so reduces Cost as to make these lowest prices possible.
When, therefore, you pay MORE than these Goodrich Fair-List prices for ANY Fabric Tire, you are NOT getting "better" Tires.
Test out Goodrich Tires,—and see!
THE B. F. GOODRICH CO.
Akron, O.

Goodrich "Fair-List" Prices
(SAFETY-TREADS)
30 x 3 - Ford Sizes - $10.40
30 x 3½ - Ford Sizes - $13.40
32 x 3½ - $15.45
33 x 4 - $22.00
34 x 4 - $22.40
35 x 4½ - $31.20
36 x 4½ - $31.60
37 x 5 - $37.35

GOODRICH "Black-Tread" TIRES

"TEXTAN"—The New Goodrich Shoe Sole (for your Feet).
—Does for your SHOES what the black "Barefoot-Rubber" Tread does for Goodrich Tires.
—Wears longer than Leather! —Is Waterproof! —Is Non-slippery! —Is Lighter than Leather! —Is more Flexible than Leather! —Is EASIER on your Feet!
Ask your Shoe Dealer, or Shoe Repairer, for Textan Soles on your next pair of Shoes.

PROGRESSIVISM.

Progressivism, aside from the political aspects of the case, is playing a tremendous part upon the stage of present day municipal, state and national life. The trend of the times is improvement in every branch of government, civic and institutional. Organization is the battle cry. Community betterment is and ought to be the local watchword. No better spot for planting the germ of civic improvement can be selected than chambers of commerce and boards of trade throughout the country. Centered there is, or should be, the best interest of the very best element of every community, large or small, no matter where located. Example is better than precept. Then let the prominent man of business in every city and town throw off his cloak of ultra-conservatism, roll up his sleeves and by his own determination to do and to dare set an example that every other citizen will gladly follow.

This is progressivism that means something!

Water at Gibraltar.

There is so little water on the rock of Gibraltar that the supply is increased by condensing dew.

FARMERS' COUNTRY CLUB.

Schoolhouse Utilized For Social and Business Meetings.

A steam heating plant had just been installed in the large, well equipped district school in a Wisconsin community. Two young farmers, says C. J. Griffing in the Farm and Home, conceived the idea of a country clubroom in the schoolhouse. When the furnace was started in the fall it cost very little more to turn the heat on for evening use.

The clubroom is open every evening in the week. The evening from 6 to 9 o'clock is spent in reading and from 9 to 11 p. m. in discussing agricultural matters and in social intercourse. Except during this period none may speak without recognition from the chairman of the club, otherwise he is fined. Thus order is maintained, and an air of seriousness is established without which it could not continue.

The fact that the originators of the plan are farmers who take many prizes each year at both the state and county fairs gives them a well deserved leadership in the community. When they get up and express their opinion of those farmers who allow their buildings to run down and take no pride in the general appearance of their stock and farms certain men sit up and take notice, and soon a marked change is seen.

Socially the club is a grand success, as all get to know and trust their neighbors better. A common interest draws them all closer together. The women no longer complain of the restraints of farm life and, knowing that the club is for progress and not for gossip, are greatly benefited by it. The young people of the neighborhood are brought up to realize the possibilities of farm life and are never guilty of even a thought of leaving for the city.

The schoolteacher claims that her success is half due to the fact that the parents have become intimate with her through this medium and that she now has their co-operation, which is the greatest aid to a teacher in her work. It would be hard to reckon just the amount of good this club has done. Every one is wiser and happier, and it has greatly increased the sum of human satisfaction to its members.

The average daily attendance is from fifteen to twenty in a village of about 3,000 inhabitants. The annual fee is $1, payable quarterly. The officers are president, secretary, treasurer and marshal. The teacher or president acts as librarian.

Throwing the Dart.

Throwing the dart is a picturesque custom which is observed in Cork, Ireland. Every third year the chief magistrate proceeds to the mouth of Cork harbor in full state. Following immemorial custom, he throws a dart into the sea—a dart with a head of gold and a shaft of mahogany—saying, "I cast this javelin into the sea and declare that as far around as it falls extend the right and dominion of the corporation of Cork to and over the harbor as well as the rivers, creeks and bays within the same."

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 475. MONDAY, JULY 3, 1916 Price, One Cent

Auto Parade Tonight Free-for-All Event Long Line of March

Nothing but a deluge administered by old Pluvius will interfere with tonight's parade of automobiles, the line of march of which is described as follows:

Start at D. L. & W. Station, West Broadway, and adjoining streets; east crossing upper bridge to East First street, to Oneida street; crossing lower bridge to West First street, to Hannibal street, to Worth street, to West First, to Schenck, crossing lower bridge on Oneida, to Third to Broadway, to Fourth, to Buffalo, to Third, to Cayuga, to First, to Oneida and then over lower bridge to West First to Oak, to West Third to Broadway and east over upper bridge to Third, to East Side Park and disband.

The parade will be in charge of R. L. McCully, H. F. Van Sanford, F. H. Morin and H. H. Bristol.

Each contestant will be given a number which he is requested to display each time his car passes the judges' stand at the East end of the lower bridge.

Every automobile owner, whether a resident of Fulton or not, is requested to join the parade, and if it is found inconvenient to trim the car with flowers, it will be perfectly proper to decorate it with flags, as tonight will be the eve of July Fourth and flags will be in keeping with the spirit of the occasion.

Mrs. Hettie Green, 83, is Dead in New York

New York—Mrs. Hettie Green, known as the richest woman in the world, died at her home in this city this morning, in her eighty-third year.

Mrs. Green had been ill for several weeks. It was reported a week ago that she had suffered a stroke of paralysis in March. This was declared to be slight, however, and the physicians said she was doing as well as could be expected considering her advanced years.

Mrs. Green died at the apartments which had been fitted up for her in 97th street. For the past few weeks four trained nurses have been attending her; also, Colonel Green, her son, whose mother's physician declared the aged woman's illness would prove serious. It was known that she was steadily becoming weaker, partly through inability to get proper sleep. Persons working near the apartments said Mrs. Green was wheeled to the window in her sick chamber before dawn today. Where she sat for an extended period looking through the glass, too weak to rise from her chair.

BRITISH CAPTURE 4000 IN SUNDAY FIGHTING

From Headquarters of the British Armies in France—Pressing on east of Albert, British troops have occupied a higher position near the fortified position of Fricourt, which was taken from the Germans yesterday afternoon, the number of prisoners captured was 4,000.

North of the Antre valley the situation is unchanged. On the remainder of the front the situation is described by returning officers as promising.

* * *

Berlin—English and French attacks north of the Somme last night were without event, the enemy being repulsed with bloody loss, the War Office announced today. South of the Somme the Germans withdrew from their second line under a heavy French attack.

FRENCH ADVANCE FIVE MILES, TAKING VILLAGE

Paris—In a brilliant night attack that threw the Germans back on a wide front, French troops last night captured the village of Harbecourt, advancing within five miles of the heart of Peronne, one of the immediate objectives of the allies' defensive.

* * *

Paris—German troops early this morning captured the Damloup works, northeast of Verdun, in a violent attack, but were repulsed by a French counter-attack, it is officially announced by the War Office this morning.

* * *

Berlin—The Russians made unsuccessful attempts to stop the German advance in Belhtynia by attacks last night, east and southwest of the fortress of Lusk, the War Office announced today. The attacks were repulsed.

ONE MARINE KILLED AND THREE WOUNDED BY REBELS

Washington—Three marines were wounded and one killed in two fights with rebels in San Domingo, the Navy Department announced today. The Department was informed by radio and the dispatch was dated Saturday. Private Mills of the Thirty-first company was the man killed.

BACK TO THE OLD HOME TOWN

Back to the old home town again
 The heart grows warm at the thought;
Yet still in its warmth comes a chill of pain
 At the changes time has wrought.
For, ever the old gives place to the new
 And age still follows youth
And the old town whispers sadly true,
 The tale of Time's biting tooth.

Back to the old home town, I see
 The progress and thrift of the years,
The pride of its growth and its industry
 And the triumphs that labor rears;
And I greet thee, old home town! I joy
 In thy well earned thrift and peace,
I share in thy pride with an unalloy,
 And I pray for thy rich increase.

Back in my old home town to hear
 The story of life retold,
To smile through the mists of a glistening tear
 At the tale of the ages old;
At the same old human tale of life,
 Told through eternal years
Of triumphs, of failures, grief and strife,
 Of hopes and smiles and tears.

And so in the old home town—ah me!
 What but to smile and weep,
For joy with its shadow of sorrow must be,
 And Death will his harvest reap.
So here as I linger and ponder it all,
 In my old home town today,
The evening comes on and the shadows fall
 And the old town fades away.

But e'en as it fades, a vision I see,
 A new birth born of the old;
A far spreading branch of the old parent tree,
 A Commonwealth fair to behold;
A great city sprung as a spirit from clay,
 In the dawn of the future's fair morn,
The heir to the virtues and thrift of today,
 The home town of children unborn.

D. MACLURE,

Fulton, June, 1916.

LAWLESSNESS ALLOWED TO EXIST IN IRELAND

London—The findings of the Royal Commission which investigated the rebellion in Ireland, made public today, sharply attacked the previous administration in Ireland. The main cause of the outbreak, the commission held, was that lawlessness was allowed to grow without being checked. For several years past the administration authorities in Ireland, says the commission, found it was the safer policy to permit violations of the law.

STATE DEPARTMENT HAS NO RESPECT FOR CHIEF

Washington—"For the moment the United States Government will not trust Carranza to answer its demands for a statement as to his attitude on American-Mexican relations." The State Department announced this today, saying the situation is in status quo for the present, especially in view of the relief of tension by Carranza's surrender of the prisoners at Chihuahua City.

* * *

Washington—Following a conference with President Wilson today regarding the program for the rest of the session, Senator Kern predicted the conference would not adjourn before August 20th.

3 GENERALS COMMAND SOUTHERN DEPARTMENT

Washington—The War Department announced today the division of the Southern Department of the army in three sections under the command of General Funston, General Pershing and General Bell.

The reorganization is said to be preliminary to appointing a supreme commander for the three departments.

General Wood, now commander of the Eastern department, has asked for a position commensurate with his rank, and it is possible he will be the man selected.

* * *

San Antonio—The three troops of the 78th Cavaury under Captain Leroy Elgboge, which crossed the Rio Grande river into Mexico, near Fort Hancock, late last night, in pursuit of Mexican raiders, lost the trail and returned to the American side, according to dispatches received here today.

Fulton Will Provide Fourth of July Fun for Thousands of People

Fulton will have one of the largest Fourth of July celebrations of any city, outside of New York, in the Empire state. The Elks' band, one of the best musical organizations in Central and Northern New York, and of which Fulton may feel mighty proud, will give concerts morning, afternoon and evening. At ten o'clock in the morning the fraternal and civic organizations of the city will present one of the best and largest parades ever seen in Fulton. There will also be four other bands here to participate in the parade and the day's events. In order to promise plenty of music for the day, the Masons, the Knights of Pythias and Phillips bands of Oswego, with the Phoenix village band, have been secured.

The Independence Day oration will be delivered by the Rev. F. W. Betts, of Syracuse, at two o'clock in the afternoon, on the Fair Grounds.

A fine horse racing program of three classes, has been arranged by M. E. Reynolds, Birney Clark, and Charles Jones. The program follows:

Free for all trot and pace Lancer, 2:19 owned by C. F. Jones; Mary Cliff, trial, 2:12, owned by Edward Jones; Reuben D., 2:15, owned by Garrett Brothers.

2:25 Trot and pace—Topsey King, owned by Judd Loveland; Maudy Lee, owned by Curtis DuBois, of Minnetto; Frances Audubon, owned by Frank Burns, of Oswego; Melba, owned by Melvin Lattrell.

2:25 Trot and pace—Fulton Boy, owned by James Decker; Oliver Direct, owned by Frank Engel, of Hannibal; Bobby, owned by Edward Jones; Phoenix Boy, owned by a Phoenix man.

Besides these races there will be a match race between Rabbit, owned by Charles Terpening; Tony Texas, owned by William Burr Gaylord, and Cristia B., owned by William Brodt, all of Lysander. This race was to be held at a private place, Tuesday, but the owners decided to race at the local track.

In addition to the horse racing, two ball games are scheduled for the afternoon on the Fair grounds. The first game between the High School and the Maccabee nines, and the second between the Red Men and the New York Central Shop team of Oswego.

Fireworks and dancing in the evening will finish the day's events.

INCOME TAXES SHOW INCREASE

Income taxes of this district will be this year more than $600,000, an increase of $100,000 over 1915, while the total internal revenue receipts from this district for the fiscal year ending June 30, is $4,841,982.50. The aggregate receipts from all sources are $5,634,184.34.

The month of June was the best month of the year as $1,154,362.15 was collected. In the same month last year less than one million was collected. June 1915, also showed a large increase over June, 1914.

Collector Brewster and his assistants in the main office at Syracuse have been very busy during the last few days of June receiving and checking up an enormous number of checks taken in during the last few days of the month. Several large corporations and persons paying a large tax always wait until the eleventh hour before paying. Thousands of letters were received daily during the last week.

Under the terms of the new revenue bill which has ben introduced in congress the tax is removed from several things now assessed. Telegrams and telephone calls, deeds, mortgages, and perfumes are exempt under the terms of the bill. This may work to cut down the work of the officials to some extent.

NOTICE!

Fire Chief Waugh desires to call especial attention to the closing and repairing of cellar windows and all openings in the business section through which a firecracker or rocket might find its way, causing fire. All debris should be removed and kept removed.

WEATHER FORECAST.

Partly cloudy today and Tuesday; moderate north to northwest winds.

PAPER CO.'S CASE WINS IN COURT

High Canadian courts have upheld the lower court rulings in favor of the bond holders of the Battle Island Paper Company, of this city, against Canadian interests, the court holding that alleged liens held against timers lands in Canada by the Chicautimi Pulp Company were not servitudes upon the property.

The bondholders will now get the benefit of all the property of the company in Chicoutimi, Canada, 150 miles north of Quebec comprising 25,000 acres of freehold and about 75,000 acres of leasehold lands.

The litigation had to do with property covered by a $500,000 mortgage by the Columbia Trust Company, of New York, as trustee for the bondholders. The trust company withdrew its objections to the claim of $87,500 held by the Chicoutimi Pulp Company and the bank with which it was interested so that to this extent there is a lien prior to the mortgage.

The case has been hanging fire in the courts for a year or more and hearing after hearing has been held in the Battle Island affairs before Judge Ray, in Syracuse, Norwich and elsewhere.

POLICE COURT BUSY TODAY

Judge Wilson's Court was crowded this morning by offenders, who were given hearings and treated as follows:

Allen Mahaney was arrested upon a charge of public intoxication. He was fined $10 by Judge Wilson.

Richard Barry was arrested upon the same charge and received the same fine from the Judge.

Hobart Van Buren, who was arrested for drunkenness and fighting was sentenced to six months in Oswego County jail.

Andrew Livingston arrested upon the charge of drunkenness was given a fine of $10 and suspended sentence of three months.

Vance Lawton and Harold Sheldon were arrested for fighting in a public street and were each given a fine of $10.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

MONDAY, JULY 3, 1916

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Pitsburgh Gazette-Times:

"Steal the Republican campaign thunder" is the policy of Wilson. Get the Progressives into the Democratic party is the immediate aim of the President. So he rolls himself in the American flag, shouts Americanism, and strives to outdo Theodore Roosevelt in imitation of that leader's vigorous patriotism, and insists on a suggestion of Protection in the party platform through a commission to cheat those who may be deluded into believing the Democratic mule can be disguised by a blanket of claims and promises. "We have kept the faith," says the Democratic platform; but there is no truth in a party that repudiates its cardinal one-term plank of 1912. Wilson and Marshall make up the same ticket that was elected four years ago because of the schism in the Republican party. It is no stronger than it was then, but if it plays its game adroitly, as Mr. Wilson may be expected to do, it will prove no mean antagonist.

The party platform challenges "comparison of our records, our keeping of pledges, and our constructive legislation with those of any party of any time." Well, the challenge will be achieved, never fear. "Our revenues have been sufficient in times of world stress," boasts the platform of the party's domestic policies. Whence came the revenues which, by the way, have not been enough to maintain a safe surplus in the treasury? Why? The Democratic Tariff having failed, they have come from direct taxes that are repugnant in our country, and from war imposts levied in time of peace. And then the Democrats repealed the free sugar clause of the Underwood Tariff law, not because they had been converted to the Republican policy of Protection, but because the Democratic theory of Free-Trade had failed to yield revenue.

* * *

Indianapolis Star:

The decision of the diocesan board of education in Chicago that all Catholic children in the parochial schools of that city shall use only English text-books when schools open in September and that all foreign text-books shall be banished, is a step greatly to be commended and likely to have salutary results.

Foreign books have been extensively used in these institutions because of the large proportion of foreign-speaking children among the 115,000 pupils attending these schools. Probably this is true in New York also and perhaps other cities, though no mention is made of this. But it seems likely that the bad effect of thus retaining the native speech in delaying and hindering the Americanizing of these children has been borne in upon the church authorities by recent events.

Schools are one of the most effective agencies in the making of Americans, but the American language is essential to the process. The importance of effecting this transformation of immigrants as soon as possible after their arrival and of making it thorough has been made impressively evident by the war, and it can best be accomplished through the children. The Chicago parochial authorities are wise.

* * *

Columbia (S. C.) State:

Somewhere in Louisville, Kentucky, a good old city that is not yet too big nor in too great a hurry, dwells Mr. T. R. Gilmore, president of the "Model License League," and onesuspects that his comfortable home is in a quiet block of a respectable street in the residential section and that not in two hundred yards, possibly not in a mile, is a licensed barroom. In other words, Mr. Gilmore probably lives in a street or part of a street from which the liquor traffic is prohibited. "License towns" always have prohibition districts—the prohibition resting on statute or the custom of the property owners which is usually stronger than state.

Once in a year or two, one fancies, a drunken man staggers along the street by Mr. Gilmore's home and is perhaps arrested and carried before the recorder. Does Mr. Gilmore, as president of the "National Model License League," send a letter to the newspapers describing the incident and pointing out the failure of the "license system," in so far as that under it a man may become drunken and disturb the tranquility of a gentleman's home in the cosy and quiet parts of Louisville? But directing with emphasis public attention to the consumption of whiskey in Maine is not exulting at the failure of Maine's prohibition statute.

The truth is that prohibition is found everywhere. The self-respecting liquor man is an uncompromising prohibitionst when it comes to having a barroom placed next door to the home in which his wife and daughters live. If the people of a State prefer to extend prohibition from the residential street to the ward and then have it apply to the city, the county and finally to the whole State—if the people who constitute the State resolve that the State shall act as a unit in the matter of the whiskey traffic—whether that be wise or unwise—what have the people of other States to do with it.

When the Louisville man contends that whiskey is sold in Maine or in South Carolina and that therefore the law forbidding it ought to be repealed, his interest being that it be repealed, it is asking too much of the average man to distinguish between his mere observation of the fact of law breaking and his exultation of the spectacle. If no whiskey be sold in prohibition territory the cause to which Mr. Gilmore is devoted is lost—is the public to believe that Mr. Gilmore points with sorrow to the unlawful sales? Yet if he does not look upon this lawbreaking with sorrow, the fact that the National Model License League, the National Wholesale Liquor Dealers' Association and kindred organizations, through their departments of publicity, are continually writing to the press about it is convincing evidence that they rejoice at it.

In the nature of things they must. The man whose business is outlawed is South California scarcely can be expected to be enthusiastic over the enforcement of the statute—yet if he opens his mouth about its successful infraction he is almost necessarily the applauder of law-breaking. Consequently if advocates of the liquor traffic would avoid being classed as friends of law breakers they will keep their mouths shut about the enforcement or non-enforcement of the law in prohibition States. It is the only course consistent with respect for law that they can take. We do not expect them to take it; as between law and liquor man is against law. He is incapable of respecting the will of the people when it is expressed in a prohibition statute.

* * *

Hartford (Conn.) Post:

Pretty nearly everybody is able to agree that there are too many churches and that the multiplicity of religious bodies attempting to exist as independent units constitutes a great economic weakness of the church as a whole. An evidence of this is found in the experience of a Glastonbury minister who finds himself unable to support his family on the meager salary allowed him and resigns to go to work as a bench hand in a factory.

This man was apparently well trained for his profession. He graduated from Exeter academy, from New Hampshire college, from Yale, Yale Divinity School and a post graduate's course at Hartford seminary. Yet a man who received all this training after six years of service in his first and only parish commands but $750 a year, of which the church itself pays only $550, the remainder coming from a missionary society which helps struggling parishes.

Ordinary day laborers, men who shovel dirt in the streets, many of them unable to speak a word of English, are being paid in Hartford at present at the rate of more than $850 a year, yet here is an institution which engages a man of self-evidently expert training and pays him only $550 a year, a little more than $10 a week after six years of service.

Obviously a church whose pastor is in such a predicament must be barely struggling along in other ways, and a church which is obliged to struggle with its finances continually and strenuously, cannot be able to accomplish much else. It is small wonder that so many men are urging elimination of denominations and of church organizations and the concentration of church effort in fewer bodies each better able to stand on their own feet and fight their battles. The church has too many units, many of them so weak as to be able to do little effective fighting against a common foe.

Deadly Insult.

Among the offenders huddled in the dock before a police magistrate was a most respectable looking grocer. He was charged with assault.

"Why did you strike this man?" was the first question the magistrate put to him.

"Well, your honor," said the grocer, "what would you yourself do if you kept a grocery store and a man came in and asked whether he could take a moving picture of your cheese?"—New York Times.

Nothing Serious.

The man with the beetling brows waited upon the editor.

"Well?" said the busy man with the pale face and rumpled hair.

"I am from police headquarters. I want to call your attention to the fact that in your morning paper you called me 'the chief of defectives' instead of"—

"Merely a typographical error, I assure you; no mistake in facts. Good morning, sir!"

And the editor went on blue penciling.

Days You'll Never Forget

HOW TO KEEP CUT FLOWERS FRESH IN THE HOME FOR DAYS.—

In many five and ten cent stores there are brown baskets to be had, some with a little metal container, and you cannot imagine how pretty the bright golden flowers or the despised weed and its graceful serrated leaves look against the russet weave. A few withered seed vessels of last year's asters, a budding bramble or branch—in fact, anything that grows—will brighten the dullest, dreariest room. But most of us can afford an occasional quarter for more pretentious blooms, and it is well to know the best methods for keeping them fresh for as long a time as possible. In the first place, cut off all foliage that will go below the water. If the green leaves are rotting you cannot expect the water to keep sweet and pure. Then if the stems are woody, like roses, for example, slit them up for about an inch to allow the moisture to suck up more freely. The next consideration is the kind of water. Do not ever put flowers into icy cold water, but temper it so as to resemble the warm summer showers. If they are a little wilted plunge the stems into boiling hot water for a second and then into cool and you will be astonished to see how they will revive.

A little salt or a lump of charcoal added to the water will keep it pure for a longer time. In the hot weather the water should be changed every day and the vases scalded with very hot water; then cut a tiny scrap off the end of each stem and remove all leaves or blossoms that are withered before returning to the vases.

With these little attentions flowers will last for several days, but it is better to pay a little more and get fewer in a reliable florist's where you can be certain that they are really fresh than to buy many from the less expensive stores or stands which are frequently supplied with the day or two day old flowers from the better class dealers.

Weighing Instead of Counting.

No longer is it regarded as good management to count uniform pieces one by one in manufacturing plants. Scales especially constructed for the purpose are employed for counting material of like units. Not only is the weighing machine more accurate because it substitutes simple manual operation and the highest degree of mechanical precision for the complicated mental figuring and inaccuracies of other systems, but it counts from 100 to 1,000 per cent faster than the time worn methods.

PRUNING SHEARS.

How to Use Them In Orchard Pruning of Trees.

Double cutter shears used in orchard pruning give good satisfaction when used upon limbs smaller than three inches in diameter. When care is taken to cut through the bark all around the branches to be removed the wounds heal over much better than when the growing layer of bark and young wood are crushed by being squeezed from opposite sides without being cut around first. One caution is necessary in using this implement:

When making cuts of forking limbs it is necessary to avoid bearing down, because the main branch to be left is likely to split, and a heavy load of fruit the following summer is almost sure to break the limb at this point. Effort should always be made to lift when making such cuts. Indeed, it is a good plan always to cut off the branch a foot or so beyond the point where the crotch is and then to remove the stab with a second cut.

How to Carry Two Liquids In One Bottle.

In a one quart patent bottle two different liquids of the same temperature may be carried by the following method: The opening of this size bottle is about one inch in diameter. Hence a test tube three-quarters of an inch in diameter and ten inches long, holding about eight ounces, or one-half pint, may be filled with one liquid, sealed with a cork dipped in melted paraffin and inserted in the patent bottle, into which the other liquid has already been poured. In this way lemon juice, for example, may be carried in the same bottle with milk.

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M. CLARKE.

Cy Cawkins Has Discovered That th' Easiest Way to Get Out of Bed Is to Fall Out.

Th' trouble with fathers, so say th' sons,
An' you'll find I am right as th' average runs,
Is that they expect Tom, Dick an' Harry
To deliver more goods than th' daddies carry.

Th' editor who clips his hot stuff ought to use sixs-ers.

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

MOTOR BOATISTS SCOOT TO MEET THROUGH WATER

(By United Press)

St. Paul. Minn.—A large number of the boatsmen contestants in the races and delegates to the meeting of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association who arrived here today for the opening of the meet, made the trip from their home ports to the regatta city by cruising up the Mississippi river. The many tributaries to the Mississippi served as good pathways for the boats—and overland shipping difficulties were eliminated.

Races begin today and activities will continue for a week. On Wednesday the annual meeting will be held.

Delegates from seven states, representing nearly fifty motor boat clubs with a membership of 8,000 are here.

About a hundred speed boats are darting about in the Mississippi river awaiting the word to start in the big ninth annual regatta of the Mississippi Valley Power Boat association.

"Miss Detroit," a cup winner from the Michigan city whose name it boasts, went thirty miles this afternoon against "Miss Minneapolis," a boat of exactly the same dimensions. Both were guaranteed for fifty-five miles an hour. Both were built by the same concern. "St. Paul," which was to represent this city in the race, was not completed in time for use.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

PROHIBITIONISTS TO INSIST ON STATE BALLOTS

St. Paul, Minn.—Formal decision to insist upon the placing of the names of Prohibition party candidates on every state ticket in the union at the fall elections despite opposition of other local Prohibition officials today. The meeting was preliminary to the Prohibition national conventon here July 18. Pitts is secretary of the national Prohibition headquarters at Chicago.

Thirty eager, zealous and enthusiastic young men today are being taught how to kiss babies, shake hands, slap backs and do other practical campaign tricks. Tomorrow they will be mounted on bicycles, and sent wherever man lives to press agent the convention.

District headquarters is being established today at Wilmar, Minn., as a central point for the cordial cyclists.

UNIONTOWN GIRL SAILS TO WED NOBLEMAN

Uniontown, Pa.—Among the passengers on board the Scandinavian-American liner Oscar II bound from New York to Sweden today, was Miss Julia May Moran, daughter of James Moran, of this city.

Miss Moran's engagement to Count Casimir Zichy, Hungarian nobleman, was recently announced. Shortly after her arrival in Europe Miss Moran will go to Ujfalu, Hungary, where the wedding will take place.

The nuptials will not culminate a war romance in this case, but a friendship formed when Miss Moran was a student abroad.

A CUT WORK HINT.

How to Make This One of the Prettiest Embroideries.

When doing cut work, if the design is very elaborate and there are a great many bars, baste on the back of the linen a piece of plain, heavy net; cluny is the best to use. Embroider the design through both materials, but omit all the bars. When the work is complete cut out on the right side along the purled edge. This will leave a net background, where bars are usually worked. The net holds the design together and is a splendid as well as unique substitute for the little bars.

The net should be very carefully basted to the linen or it will bulge in places after the material is cut away. If you transfer your designs the safest method is to first launder both the linen and net before sewing them together. Then there will be little danger in the future of one material shrinking more than another. If a good quality of net is used it will be found more lasting than the bars. The latter have a tendency to break when laundered unless they are carefully worked with very strong thread.

How to Remove the Odor of Onions From Pots.

To remove the odor of onions from the pots in which they have been cooked, boil them in a weak solution of sal soda and afterward rinse well in warm water. To prevent the odor of onions from adhering to the hands always peel and slice them under cold running water.

How to Wrap Papers For Mailing.

In using a homemade paper wrapper for mailing purposes cut a triangular section from each end of it before applying the paste or mucilage, says the Popular Mechanics. This prevents the adhesive from oozing out at the edges and sticking to the paper it incloses. This also permits the easy withdrawal of the paper.

The Sixth Sense.

Naturalists have long held that there is no magic about it if we postulate the existence of a sixth sense—a relational sense, a topographical sense, a sense of distance and direction, such as resides on a very small scale in a snake's tongue and the antennae of ants. Such a sense must reside, too, in migrating birds, in homing pigeons.—London Standard.

Fill your home atmosphere with exquisite lasting fragrance—

ED. PINAUD'S LILAC

The great French perfume, winner of highest international awards. Each drop as sweet and fragrant as the living Lilac blossom. A celebrated connoisseur said: "I don't see how you can sell such a remarkable perfume for 75 cents a bottle"—and remember each bottle contains 6 oz.—it is wonderful value. Try it. Ask your dealer today for ED. PINAUD'S LILAC. For 10 cents our American offices will send you a testing bottle. Write today.

PARFUMERIE ED. PINAUD, Dept M — ED. PINAUD Bldg., New York

Insure Your Teeth

Better than the dentifrice you are using now

25c

VIVAUDOU'S Peroxide Tooth Paste

PRESIDENT WILSON PARADING

The president leading the Flag day preparedness parade along Pennsylvania avenue, Washington.

THE PLANNING OF A PARK SYSTEM

Municipalities Should Pay More Attention to Open Spaces.

VARIETY IS A NECESSITY.

The Number of Parks in a City Should Be Large, Particularly as Regards the Smaller Ones and Playgrounds For Children.

By FRANK KOESTER, city planner and author of "Modern City Planning and Maintenance."

American cities, as a rule, are not sufficiently appreciative of the necessity and desirability of adequate park systems. They are usually satisfied with a few meager, dust covered squares scattered in the business section and certain large acreages in inaccessible locations principally useful for athletic and picnic parties.

The park system of a city, however, should receive the same care and attention in its design and execution as is given to the civic centers and other portions of the city. It should be laid out in a broad spirit and with liberality, and space should not be spared. In the growth of a city a thousand excuses will be advanced for encroachments on parks, and should they be found to be planned on too large a scale it will always be found easy to reduce their size, while increases can never be accomplished except at large expense.

CITY PARK IN DUSSELDORF.

The park system of a city should be laid out in a systematic manner and should consist of parks of varying sizes and design, each more or less particularly adapted for certain purposes. In a general way the parks should increase in size with the increase in distance from the business center, and there should be four or five classes of parks.

Those of the smallest class should be located in the most congested portions of the city to relieve the pressure of business, but they should not be so large as to have a disorganizing effect or cause undue inconvenience to traffic and the dispatch of business.

Parks of the next largest size should be in the crowded residential and tenement districts, and they may be of varying sizes, from one to four blocks or more in area.

Parks of the third class should be located on the outskirts of the residential portions and may be of large extent, from twenty to several hundred acres in extent. These should be the principal parks of the city and should be connected by boulevards and parkways.

The fourth and largest group of parks may properly consist of large undeveloped areas of land purchased by the city and rented out partially for farming uses and partially held as forests, from which the wood may be cut and sold in such quantities as will not deplete its growth.

The system of parks should thus be laid out in the most comprehensive manner and with a long view into the future.

In the planning of a park system many important considerations must be taken into account, among which are, in addition to the ample sizing of the parks, their number, their proper locations, the nature of the land to be utilized, their organization into a system, their relation to waterways and boulevards, the purposes for which they are to be utilized, their environment, their accessibility and their internal design.

The latter depends on size, location and uses and may be either of a formal or a rural character or a composite.

The number of the parks of a city should be large, particularly as regards the smaller parks, and an important principle of park design is to have the number and location such that every portion of the city is within easy walking distance of at least a small park.

In location parks should be so placed as to be part of a system and not merely set down at haphazard and wherever room may be made. They afford excellent terminal points for streets and avenues, and when organized into a proper system add unity and variety to a city's plan.

PUT BRAINS BEHIND BROOMS

To make your town worth while you must put brains behind your brooms. You must plan clearly with thoughts beyond present conditions. You must build your civic house with the future of your children and your children's children clearly before you. You must do hard things now in order that more abounding prosperity and civilization may come after you.

If I were asked what are the essentials of town planning I should write the list thus:

Cleanliness.
Godliness.
Industries.
Care for the children.
Development of community spirit.
General usefulness.—Richard J. Beamish.

Post Laureate.

The office of poet laureate practically begins with Chaucer, who assumed the title about 1385. After Chaucer the office was more or less in the shadow, but from Spenser in 1599 the line of poet laureate is pretty well filled down to the present time. The office is largely honorary and has not always been held by the greatest of English poets. Dryden, Wordsworth and Tennyson being the most illustrious of its holders.—London Saturday Review.

HOW

To Keep Eggs Fresh For a Long Period

WHY not save 10 cents on the dozen of eggs? If eggs are 20 to 25 cents a dozen then by the time carrier, postage and preservation are paid when one lives in the city 8 to 10 cents a dozen must be added to the cost of a dozen eggs, making them 30 to 35 cents a dozen as compared to 40 to 45 cents during the winter months.

There is a place not so very far from one city in the first parcel post zone where fresh eggs were sold for 18 cents a dozen recently. Why were they so cheap when we were paying from 28 to 34 cents in the city? This particular small farm is off from the main road, and the hucksters that gather the eggs do not go there, and the country store is a long distance from the farm, but the farmer could send his eggs in the small four dozen carrier with the rural parcels delivery at 12 cents for the carrier of four dozen eggs. Two quarts of silicate of soda, liquid glass, will do up thirty dozen eggs.

Be sure that the eggs are not cracked and pick the dark shell eggs for preserving. The white shell eggs can be used at once in the home.

Put the eggs in earthenware crocks, wooden lard or butter tubs, cover and set in cool place.

Following is the way to prepare the silicate of soda:

One quart of silicate of soda (water glass), ten quarts of water. Boil and cool the water, add silicate of soda, put in earthenware crock or crocks or wooden tub. Examine the eggs, being sure there are none cracked. Eggs can be added; it is not necessary to fill the crock at once. When there are as many as one wants to do up paste or tie a piece of muslin over the top and wet with the solution before putting in cool place.

Now, this would not pay if the housekeeper had to buy a stone crock, but most housekeepers have a stone crock, and some have large glass jars; others have wooden pails which can be used for this purpose.

A managing housekeeper who has a very large household recently stated she did up thirty dozen eggs last year which she bought from her butter and egg man and that every one was good. She says that she is going to do up ninety dozen this year, as she uses twelve to fifteen dozen a week.

How to Repack the Stuffing Box of Your Car.

In order to eliminate the leaking of a water pump stuffing box, the box nut should be unscrewed and the old packing taken out. New packing in the form of heavy string or a wick should be wound around the shaft and the nut screwed back to its proper position. The grease cup should be screwed down each day. Unless the valve cups leak because of a crack or the cylinders are cracked, it is probable that the water might run into the crank case because of improper washing of the car.

How to Remove Iron Mold From Linen.

A solution of salts of lemon and warm water will remove iron mold from linen. The article should be well rinsed afterward in clean water and allowed to dry.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

A gingham whose appropriateness calls forth no question for the coatless days of summer. The skirt is plaited to the long blouse waist and the belt is cut on the bias, with the edges finished with linen braid. A deep collar turns back from the square neck. Three yards of gingham and an equal quantity of braid, costing less than three shillings, make the dress.

Pictorial Review Dress No. 6676, sizes 6 to 14 years; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

THIS IS SPLASH WEEK IN NEW YORK CITY

New York—This is splash week here. The drowning of 485 non-swimmers in New York city last year led Borough President Marcus M. Marks, to declare this Splash week to encourage everyone to learn to swim. Hundreds of experts will give free instructions and exhibitions at the municipal pools all week.

DR. EDWARD AMHERST OTT

"The Purposeful Orator"

Will deliver one of the inspiring lectures in his series on "The Art of Living" the last night of

CHAUTAUQUA

If you have heard Dr. Ott before you will know what this means. If you have never heard him, there is a rare treat in store for you.

The people of fifty towns last summer demanded the return of Dr. Ott on this program. THERE'S A REASON

Hear Him! Hear Him! Hear Him!

In Fulton, July 31st to Aug. 5th

Special For Old Home Week

A $3.00 G. E. TOASTER For $2.11

Make clean crisp toast right at your table. Just connect to a light socket. 16 slices of delicious toast for 1 cent.

We have a full line of Electric Hot Weather Helps.

THE ELECTRIC COMPANY

Phone 144

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

OUR DEPOSITORS KNOW

that the First National Bank gives the most careful attention to their financial interests and desires in every way to show its appreciation of their patronage by making its service more useful.

CHECKING ACCOUNTS ARE INVITED

BOYHOOD CHUMS GET ACQUAINTED

Washington dispatches one day last week told of the strange reunion of two Oswego boys in China, relatives when neither was aware of the presence of the other. The dispatch said:

"The world is a pretty small place after all. Two Oswego boys are the latest to attest to the old saying. Arthur T. Todt was was graduated from Boston Tech two years ago and accepted a position as district manager of the Standard Oil company in the far East. Three months ago he was detailed to take charge of the company's station on the Yangsekiang river in China, the mouth of which is one of the great foreign international commercial ports in the Far East. The nations of the world maintain gunboats, one to each nation in the world for the observance of customs, exactions, protection from river pirates and other purposes. Todt went there a short time ago and found that he and the naval officer commanding the island were the only two Americans for miles around. Then the officer was relieved and went home on leave. For a month Todt was lonely and one day two weeks ago he heard that the relieving officer was coming. The officer arrived and that same evening Todt got his launch and went to pay his respects to the new commander. Imagine his surprise to find the officer to be his cousin, Ensign Edmund Burrough, who was brought up with him in the Doctor Todt home in Oswego since childhood. Ensign Burrough recently spent several weeks in Oswego and was ordered to the Far East with the belief that he would be on the Phillipine station. Neither he nor Todt knew of the other's whereabouts."

THE QUIRK TUESDAY

"A Modern Thelma." Sir Phillip Bruce Errington, a wealthy English Baronet, visits Norway, where he falls in love with Thelma, daughter of Olaf Guldmar.

His suit is favorably received by Thelma and her father.

Charles Dyceworthy, an unscrupulous merchant, has long loved Thelma, and when he hears of her betrothal to the Englishman his fury knows no bounds. Awaiting a day when father and lover are away on a sightseeing trip, Dyceworthy decoys Thelma to his home and threatens her with violence if she does not promise to marry him.

His Housekeeper, Ulrika, in gratitude for many kindnesses done her by Thelma and her father, seeks out Sir Phillip and warns him of his sweethearts danger.

The English peer, after a mad dash down the mountain side, arrives at Dyceworthys house in time to save the honor of Thelma and to deal out to the contemptible merchant well deserved punishment.

Soon after this Thelma and Sir Phillip are married and the pair leave for London.

Lady Winsleigh, a beautiful and socially powerful member of Phillip's set, is secretly in love with the young nobleman.

To gain her ends she endeavors to compromise Sir Phillip in the eyes of his bride, and finally, with the aid of a disreputable actress, she succeeds in her scheme.

Thelma, convinced that her husband no longer loves her, suddenly departs for her old home in Norway.

Sir Phillip, delaying only long enough to secure proofs of the plot against him, follows her and a speedy and happy reconciliation is brought about.

Also, Hearst International News Pictorial No. 50.

San Francisco.—The yacht Mah-Pe wins the Lipton Cup Race on San Francisco Bay with the Presto finishing close behind.

War Section.—British soldiers fighting near Salonika, use anti-aircraft guns mounted on motor trucks, to clear the sky of hostile aeroplanes.

Fashion Section.—Miss Society appears garbed in the latest Paul Poiret evening gown of gold and silver metallic brocade.

Educational Feature.— Delicious cantaloupe are cultivated by thousands in the Imperial Valley of California, and special trains bear the most select of the melons across the continent to eastern markets.

Cambridge. Mass.—Huge war balloon sails above this university city and the Hearst International News Pictorial cameraman obtains some remarkable pictures of Boston and Cambridge from the basket of the gas bag.

In War Swept Mexico—United States troops continue to operate below the border in spite of the Mexican demand that they withdraw. Col. Sibley, Major Langhorne, General Funson and General Carranza are pictured in this release of the Hearst-International News Pictorial, together with intimate views of the troopers of he 10th U. S. Cavalry, who clashed with Carranza's soldiers ninety miles south of Juarez.

Fireworks! Fireworks!

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL AT

S. Waldhorn's 18 First St.

Salutes, Firecrackers, Sparklers, Roman Candles, Sky Rockets, Mines, Caps, Pistols, Canes, Pinwheels, Torpedoes, Balloons—all in large assortments.

SPECIALS

In Underwear, Hosiery, Oil Stoves, Window Screens, Rubber Hose, Paints, Linoleums, Oil Cloths, Window Shades, Suit Cases, Children's Dresses, Granite Ware, Crockery, Notions, 9 Bars Lenox Soap, 25c.

THE FAIR STORE

ABOUT THE TOWN

The Evening Times will not be published tomorrow, July Fourth, but on Wednesday the paper will appear as usual.

* * *

Mr. John Atwood, of Chester, Pa., is at his Fulton home for a few days.

* * *

One very amusing and peculiar incident was expressed by an old home comer this morning. Above the City Hall is a sign which reads, "Fulton Bids You Welcome," and on the right side of the front entrance to the City's Chambers is another which reads "Police Station." It is not supposed that the signs have any connection.

* * *

Dr. H. M. Doane left Saturday, and will be absent from the city on a three weeks' vacation.

* * *

One of the interesting sights of Old Home Week is a display in the store window of Mayor V. C. Lewis. In the window are pictures of twenty-five or thirty old Fultonians, with their old time nicknames affixed.

* * *

Donald Cavanaugh, of Syracuse, has returned for Old Home Week.

* * *

Mr. George B. Deuel will return to Ilion tomorrow evening, after spending the days since Saturday with his family.

* * *

Mrs. E. F. Whitney and daughter, of Chatham, N. Y., are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hope.

* * *

The results of the contest for Queen of Old Home Week and for the diamond ring, for Saturday and Sunday, are as follows:

Ruth Buchanan 2664
Greta Lewis 1677
Rosella Nichols ....
Genivieve McCormack 790
Trixie Dix ....

Miss Ruth Buchanan has withdrawn from the contest.

* * *

Mrs. Fred Schneider is visiting relatives in Oneida county.

* * *

Mr. William Gorham and son, Howard, of Mohawk, are visiting friends here.

* * *

Mr. J. D. Wadsworth, of Syracuse, spent Sunday with Frank Wadsworth.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Buen and son and Mrs. Rich and Mr. and Mrs. Leach, of Cupnum, Conn., are visitors with Mrs. Sarah Brown, of West Third street during Old Home Week.

* * *

Mrs. Lucy Pratt, of Mexico, is visiting friends here.

* * *

Miss Gladys Foster is spending the week at New Haven.

* * *

Secretary Hollenga, of the Chamber of Commerce, announces that the popularity contest will not close tonight, but will close Friday night of this week. If in accordance with the desire of the chosen Queen, that young lady will be in parade Saturday evening.

* * *

Miss Evver Lawton, of Ilion was a Sunday guest of friends here.

* * *

Miss Marie Keller has returned from her school duties at Syracuse.

* * *

Home comers are requested to register at the Chamber of Commerce office. The first name signed was Prof. C. M. Underhill, a former Fultonian, who was at the head of the Falley Seminary when that school was open.

* * *

Miss Alice Tucker is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Tucker, of South Fourth street.

* * *

A tent show has been erected opposite the Quirk Theatre, alongside of which is a shoting gallery. Ice cream and Coney Island stands have been erected on the Plaza and a merry go round has been placed on the state land side of the Plaza.

* * *

Messrs. Tom and Kearney Owens are the guests of their mother, Mrs. Owens, of this city.

* * *

Mr. Clarence Hewitt, who is engaged in the real estate business in Geneva, is visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hewitt, of Cayuga street.

* * *

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Lee Memorial Hospital is postponed for one week and will be held, Thursday, July 13th.

* * *

The plans for the municipal parade are nearly completed. All of the ex-mayors have been heard from and will be in the parade. The women's auxiliary of the hospital will also be in line. There will be many floats, such as the hospital and library, in the parade. All former city officials are requested to send their names to C. Milton Allen, Jr., City Clerk, if they intend to participate in the parade, so that transportation facilities may be made for them.

* * *

Mr. F. W. Church, of Holley, N. Y., is in this city, selling the Palmerton Estate, a large tract of land located on Fay street, where he has about fifty more lots to sell.

* * *

The Knights of Columbus will meet in their rooms tomorrow morning at nine o'clock in preparation for the parade.

* * *

Columbia Circle will have no meeting tomorrow on account of Fourth of July.

* * *

Rev. Dempster Chase, of Utica, a former pastor of the First M. E. Church, spoke in the Tabernacle yesterday at the opening exercises of Old Home Week.

* * *

Mrs. Sarah Spencer, of Gilbert Mills, spent last week with Mrs. Newton Johnson and family in West Broadway.

* * *

Mrs. Maude Highriter, of New York, and Mrs. Blanch Aubery, of California, arrived here yesterday, called by the illness of their brother, W. J. Boomer, of Rochester street.

* * *

H. Fred K. Jones, manager of the Franklin automobile company sales-house, New York, is visiting his mother, Mrs. F. K. Jones, of Cayuga street.

* * *

Dr. Hiram Conklin, of Passaic, N. J., is the guest of his mother, Mrs. Jane Link, of Second and Utica streets.

* * *

One of the best things that has yet been done for Old Home Week is the large electric sign that has been placed over the City Hall, bearing the words, "Fulton Bids You Welcome."

* * *

It is too bad that the weather man came along yesterday afternoon and tore down the Japanese lanterns which had been placed along the streets of the business section. They looked very pretty and would have helped out with the decorations.

TOO MUCH RAIN HURTS HAY CROP

The past week of warm and dry weather has saved the hay crop for Central New York, according to farmers from all over this section.

It is declared that from now on if the weather continues only fair that an average crop will result, although the continued wet spell of a few weeks ago has killed off all hope for a bumper yield this fall.

Up to ten days ago farmers were disconsolate. The protracted rains had caused the seed to rot in the ground and many farmers lost even their second planting. During the past week, however, considerable hay has been cut and more will be harvested this week. Alfalfa is as good as in past years and clover and timothy promise to be fair. Wheat apparently has not been injured to any great extent by the wet spell.

Corn, however, has suffered. This crop in many cases is only two or three inches high when it should be almost large enough to cultivate at this time of the year. Many fields of corn have been ruined by the rain and others are overgrown with weeds.

Potatoes, held back by the rain, have begun to show signs of life and are coming good. Cabbage will probably be short this year, because of the scarcity of plants. Oats and other spring grains have been badly injured by the rains and will be a month or so behind.

WOODMEN TO PARADE IN THEIR FULL STRENGTH

All local and visiting members of the Modern Woodmen of America, are requested to meet at headquarters tomorrow morning at 9:30 sharp, to participate in the Preparedness Parade.

Members of the order living on the West Side are requested to meet in front of the J. R. Sullivan store, Broadway and West Second street, where the East Siders will join them. An especial appeal is made to Woodmen to join the line of march, as it is the desire of the committee on parade to swell the ranks to the bursting point.

OLD HOME WEEK

Palmer-Hope Hardware Store

For

SCREEN DOORS, HAMMOCKS, OIL STOVES, BOYS' CARTS

All patrons may leave their packages with us and they will be carefully looked after. Make our store your headquarters.

The Ever-Ready Storage Battery Service Station

Uses the battery that is guaranteed—a storage battery to fit any car. Recharging and repairing of batteries given prompt attention.

We have the largest recharging plant in the city.

DUTCHER MACHINE CO.

4 NEW PRIESTS BEGIN DUTIES

Four new priests in the Syracuse diocese of the Catholic Church entered upon their new duties yesterday following their appointment by Bishop Grimes.

The Rev. Gerald F. Dunn, Binghamton, entered upon his work at St. Anthony de Padua, Syracuse, as an assistant to Rev. Francis J. Quinn. Rev. Dunn succeeds Rev. Charles F. McEvoy who today entered upon his duties as superintendent of schools of the entire diocese. He will pay visits to the parochial schools in Oswego, Fulton, Cortland, Binghamton, and all others throughout the diocese. Between now and the time the schools reopen he will spend his time in special preparation for the work and at the same time will assume some of the duties of an assistant in the Cathedral parish at Syracuse.

The Rev. C.A. Gordon, who has been assistant at St. Paul's church, Whitesboro, for some time, has started upon his new duties at St. Agnes church, Utica, as assistant to the Rev. Albert J. Hayes. Father Gordon's place at Whitesboro was filled by the Rev. Francis Brennan, of Pompey.

The Rev. Clement D. Shaughnessy, of Binghamton, assumed his duties as assistant to the Rev. Edward N. Pendergast, of Norwich and the Rev. John Powers, of Jamesville, is in Fulton, as an assistant to the Rev. John Lindsmann.

RELIEF COMES TO CLERKS OF SUPERVISORS' BOARDS

Clerks of the Boards of Supervisors throughout the state have been relieved of the duty of filing annual reports with the State Comptroller's department relative to the town transactions as has been the custom for many years past.

Comptroller Travis, himself, made this announcement at the recent conference of the clerks of the Boards of Supervisors. He said that it has been found that the system of reporting was entirely impracticable and that they would not be needed this year.

Supervisors in recent years have found this task about the hardest part of a job of being supervisor for it entailed many days of strenuous work compiling statistics that were not always available.

Notice to Creditors.

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Warren H. Loomis, late of the Town of Schroeppel in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber, at the law office of Floyd S. Spangle, 15 South First street, Fulton, New York, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 20th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 12th day of June A. D., 1916.

GLENN R. LOOMIS,
Administrator.

FLOYD S. SPANGLE,
Attorney for Administrator,
15 South First Street,
Fulton, N. Y.

ELKS' BAND CONCERT ON CITY PLAZA TONIGHT

An excellent program of music has been arranged for tonight's concert by the Elks' band, which occurs on the City Plaza, at Oneida and First streets. The program will be as follows:

March—Imperator ..... Christensen
Medley
Overture—Rewicks Hits, No. 16.. Rewick
Overture—Lustspiel ...... Kela Bela
Waltzes—Premier Amour .... Holzemann
Selection—Prince of Pilsen ...... Luders
Popular Hits—
(a) One Step—"Listen to That Dixie Band" .... Cobb
(b) One Step—"Molly Dear It's You I'm After." .... Pether
Medley Overture—Grand Slam .... Witmark
Selection—Chin Chin .... Caryll
Fox Trot—Kangaroo Hop .. Morris
March—The Commander ...... Hall

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children

In Use For Over 30 Years

Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

This Business Property For Sale at a Bargain. Inquire of M. LOUISE, Agt., 37 South Second Street, Fulton, N. Y.

EDUCATORS MEET IN NEW YORK

Home and Farm Economics Subjects of National Leaders in Uplift Movements—Cooperation Desired.

New York—The National Education Association, in session here since Saturday, was addressed this morning by Mrs. John M. Glenn, on Home Economics. She said in part as follows:

In an impassioned letter written by Elizabeth Robbins and published recently in one of the New York dailies, she says in speaking of the war situation, "There is no safety under heaven except in voluntary co-operation." In the home itself there is an unpremeditated coming together in order that the business of conducting life may be furthered with mutual advantage; in the home the lesson can be learned without conscious tuition of difficult it is to combine; in the home it can be realized, without the effort to put one's mind to the task, how essential it is that one be a co-operator. There, too, one may gather wisdom to grasp the fact that organization of itself does not push our world forward. We move forward not through the logical application of our theories, but through the play of our minds on situations. This play of the minds on actual situations is what stands out for me as our present special need.

The burden of what I have said is: The material values of the home must be seen in relation to the spiritual values. The home itself must be used as the testing ground of our efforts. The principle of co-operation must be nourished in and extended through the home. The home itself must win out through its own power to absorb the lessons that the departments of home economics wish and are ready to teach.

The Rural Home.

At this afternoon's general session David Bancroft Johnson, president of the National Education Association, said in part as follows:

The rural home has much to do with the condition of the rural school.

The rural educational problem is wrapped up with the rural home and community problem.

The needs of the rural home have been overlooked and the farm woman has been forgotten in all of the progressive movements for rural betterment until comparatively recent years.

The farm home is the beginning and the end of every day's work. It differs from the town home in this respect. The farm home is an essential part of the farm business. If the farm home and the farm woman are not what they should be, the farm business cannot be what it should be.

If the farm woman's health and strength are conserved by time saving and labor lightening conveniences and she is given the requisite time and training, she can make life in the rural home interesting, wholesome and satisfying, as indeed she has done already in so many instances. She could do much to promote the health, happiness and mental and spiritual well-being of her family, to enrich country life and make it attractive and thus to free us from farm tenancy, one of the greatest obstacles of the day to farm progress. The country has more natural advantages over the city for making home life what it should be, and it only remains for these advantages to be made the most of.

The work is of such magnitude and importance that it can be done thoroughly and satisfactorily only through national agencies and I earnestly hope President Wilson will appoint a National Commission to study the problem of the farm home and the farm woman as he has been asked to do by those having this matter very much at heart.

Easy to Secure Comfort.

It is not sufficient to give the farm woman all of the conveniences of a model home. Country life must be made socially satisfying.

In order for country life to be financially and socially satisfying the people must have education and own their homes, and must co-operate with each other in rural community activities and must have rural community organization for the promotion and support of an educational, religious, social, business, and intellectual community life. Some are of the opinion that the whole rural problem is "practically the problem of the country school." The country school, which is to improve agricultural conditions and keep good citizens on the farm, must relate its work to the community life of the people served by it, must educate the children for country life instead of away from it, and must relate universal elements of education to the country community needs, must train the children for their future work in the home, on the farm and in the social life around them, must be a "community center of education, instructing both children and adults in terms of country life and pointing the way to community prosperity and welfare," must concern itself with the business and social life of the people promoting helpful and profitable cooperation and neighborliness. It cannot neglect the health, the recreation, nor the social ideals or the people.

Of greater importance than the question of the "high cost of living" is that of the "high cost of wasting," but of greater importance than both of these is that of the "high cost of ignorance." One of the best remedies for the poor home is the teaching of home economics in all of its phases.

Of all the agencies, the neighborhood teacher, with agricultural and home economic training and the right spirit of civic service ought to be the most effective. I rejoice that two-thirds at least of our normal schools are contributing effectively to the solution of this farm woman and rural life problem by giving their students training in home economics.

The home economics extension work of normal schools and colleges for rural communities is producing gratifying results. The Smith-Lever bill offers great promise for the development of home betterment work for the country. The Rural Credits Act recently passed by Congress will do much to better rural conditions and rural homes. On the whole, I think the outlook for the betterment of rural life conditions is full of hope. Our people are waking up to the vital importance of the rural problem to thefare of the whole country, as never before in our history, and are girding themselves for a great intelligent and united effort to give help where it is most needed. I think we can thank God and take courage.

QUIRK THEATRE

Continuous 2 to 10:30
Matinee 5c. Night: Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c

TODAY—
Grace Elliston in
"THE BLACK FEAR"
5 Part Metro Feature.
Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew in
"THE SWOONERS"

TUESDAY—
Vivian Martin and Harry Hillard in
"A MODERN THELMA"
5-Part Fox Feature
and
International News No. 50
Right up to date, showing, among other views, the 10th CAVALRY IN MEXICO.
See reader in another column.

WEDNESDAY—
Marie Empress in
"LOVE'S CROSS ROADS"
5-Part Equitable Feature.
Hearst-Vitagraph News.

MISS HUBBARD'S PUPILS RECITE

The pupils of Miss Hubbard, daughter of Mr. W. C. Hubbard, of Bowen's Corners, gave a piano recital Saturday afternoon, before an audience comprising mainly the parents and a few invited guests.

The program was as follows:

Angel's Serenade ...... Sydney Smith
Francis Slee
Little Boy Blue ...... H. Engelman
Jane Rogers
Shepherd's Dream ...... Carl Heins
Alta Dyer
Dance of the Wild Flowers ......
Percy Wenrich
Ola Barnard
Sweet Flowers ...... Harold Spencer
Belle Baker
Bohemian Girl ...... Eug. Ketterer
Viola Weiss
My Papa's Waltz ...... R. Streabbog
Elsia Saephan
Love and Flowers ...... F. Aldrich
Margaret Lewis
Picking Cherries.... Harold Spencer
Manda Robilard
Simple Confession... Francis Thorne
Ruth Quirk
Dancing Shadows .. Dolly Connolly
Roberta Coleman
Under the Elms .... Eug. Mock
Fred Cockrin
Thoughts of Home..... Henry Zeiler
Marie Hollenbeck
The Voice of the Heart ......
Henri Van Gael
Helen Green
Love Message .... F. R. Kimball
Ralph Dolbear
Spring Song .... Mendelssohn
Catherine Tromblay
Grandpa's Schottische . R. Streabbog
Mollie Alderman
Rustic Dance .... C. R. Howel
Florence Falardeau
Nodding Daisies .... J. S. Fearis
Harold Blake
Two Larks .... Leschetizky
Virginia Cox
Flowers Song .... Gustave Lange
Eva Chetney
A Ride on the Camel... J. DeLancey
Leona Rathburn
Blue Eyed Violets .... Abbie A. Ford
Frank Carl
The Flower Dance .. Corey Davison
Lulu Porter
Alice .... F. Streabbog
Virginia Cox
Two Little Shoes ...... R. Streabbog
Margaret Neligan
Thine Own .... G. Lange
Martha Hollenbeck
Faust .... Leyback
Elizabeth Maeghar
Love's Oracle .... C. Bohm
Gladys Ballard
Fra Diavolo .... Sydney Smith
Clara Smith

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

THOUSANDS WILL PLEDGE LOYALTY

Syracuse—With guests present from Oswego, Fulton, Cortland, Auburn, Geneva, Norwich, and a score of other cities a mammoth patriotic demonstration is being planned for tomorrow night at the state armory in this city.

Four thousand citizens will renew their pledge of loyalty to the United States at the Americanization day exercises while several speakers of nation wide repute will deliver patriotic addresses.

Every one present it is expected will renew their allegiance by taking this oath:

"I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

Dr. Peter Roberts, founder of the Americanization idea, Vant Dodge, vice commander of the G. A. R.; Newell B. Woodworth, past president General of the G. A. R., and Mayor Walter R. Stone, will deliver addresses.

Every patriotic organization in Syracuse will be present with flags and standards while the armory will be a mass of bunting, flags and floral decorations.

Backers of the plan say it will be the greatest patriotic demonstration ever held in Central New York.

TROOP TRAINS MADE UP OF CARS SOLD TO MEXICO

Syracuse—American soldiers are being moved to Mexico, perhaps to fight Mexicans, in railroad coaches owned by the Mexican government and bearing the names of Mexican railways.

This curious condition comes about through the fact that several months ago the Carranza government purchased from the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad upwards of a hundred wooden coaches, discarded by the D. L. and W. when it started equipping its lines with steel coaches. The wooden coaches were repainted, renovated, repaired and the name of the Mexican railway line for which they were intended emblazoned on the sides. They were ready for shipment when President Wilson called out the nation's National Guard.

These trains were immediately put at the disposal of the government in moving American troops to the border and are being used in large numbers. When they reach the border they may be turned over to Carranza as per contract or they may be used in other troop movements of the American forces as the government sees fit.

REGULARS GET EXTRA PAY FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.

Central New York's regular soldiers, who have been assigned for duty in Mexico or on the Mexican border will receive the extra pay allowed for foreign service under a decision from Controller Warwick, of the Treasury Department. Enlisted men will receive twenty per cent. additional and officers ten per cent.

The Controller also gave the opinion that government employes who enlist in the National Guard are entitled to full pay from their civil service position for thirty days of their service except that the combined salaries of officers shall be subject to the $2,000 limitation provided by law.

CARRIES THE COIN WHOSE FLIP NAMED PORTLAND

San Francisco, Cal.—As a pocket-piece, F. W. Pettygrove, of San Francisco carries a copper cent, dated 1835, which was flipped to decide whether Portland, Ore., should be named "Portland" or "Boston."

It was Mr. Pettygrove's father and Amos L. Lovejoy who did the flipping.

It happened in the summer of 1845. Each man held out for the principal city of his native state.

"Best two out of three," said Lovejoy.

First it fell "Portland." Then it fell "Boston."

On the third toss oPrtland, Oregon, became the namesake of Portland, Me. But Portland, Oregon has long since outgrown her god mother in size.

THE FORUM

Make wide the doorway of the school
Around whose sill the millions wait,
The cradle of the common rule,
The forum of a stronger state.

Make broad the bar, and big appear
The questions clamorous to be tried,
And let the final judges hear,
Themselves, the causes they decide.

Write bold the text for age to read
The lesson not discerned by youth;
And raise the altar of a creed
Whose only article is Truth.

Though fair and dear the ancient mold,
Wherein the burning thought was cast,
Pour not the New World's glowing gold
Into the patterns of the past.

Whatever channels lead apart,
The currents of the lives of men,
The blood that left the Common Heart,
Shall leap with common pulse again.
—Wendell Phillips Stafford.

Washington—Miss Margaret Wilson can feel she has the law with her in her fight to establish community forums throughout the country.

The above poem read by her at a forum here had that significance, since it was written by Justice Wendell Phillips Stafford of the District Supreme Court.

This court appoints the very school board that has refused to allow the use of District Public schools as meeting places. In a way, the learned Justice administered a rebuke to the school board.

GLYCERINE AND BARK PREVENT APPENDICITIS

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-i-ka, astonishes Fulton people. Because Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astonishing. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. adv.

HOTEL ARRIVALS.

Clark House—W. F. Van Allen, Elmira, N. Y.; H. F. Mace, Auburn, N. Y.; J. E. Whitehead, New York city; D. W. Hadin and wife, Oneida, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Straw, Canton, S. D.; Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Wedett, Canton, S. D.; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Reed, Syracuse; J. E. Veghter, Buffalo; C. M. Miterdirte, Buffalo.

Seed Buckwheat

Buckwheat has been a good paying crop for several years. On account of unusual weather conditions this Spring, many acres intended for oats will now be sown to Buckwheat. Seed will be scarce. Buy early. Recleaned seed—$1.00 per bushel. Careful attention to shipping orders.

GILBERT & NICHOLS CO.
Fulton, N. Y.

During Your Visit at Fulton
OLD HOME WEEK
Stop at
HOTEL CLARK
Fulton's Leading Hotel
L. J. McQUADE, Proprietor

FOR SALE
I BEAMS, new and second-hand all sizes. Also PULLEYS, second-hand MACHINERY, PIPE and all sizes of IRON PLATES.
Inquire of
I. ALDERMAN
Schuyler Street
Office Phone 2343 Res. Phone 1343

FOR SALE
Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.
Ready for Prompt Delivery
Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

KAPLAN'S EXPRESS
Baggage, Trucking and Freight Handled Promptly, Ashes Drawn
Household Goods Moved
Prompt Deliveries Terms Reasonable
All kinds of second hand goods bought and sold
Phones Residence 1568, Business 4246
38 S. Second St., Fulton, N. Y.

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE
Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

CHICHESTER S PILLS

THE DIAMOND BRAND.
Ladies! Ask your Druggist for Chi-ches-ter's Diamond Brand Pills in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with Blue Ribbon. Take no other. Buy of your Druggist. Ask for CHI-CHES-TER'S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS, for 25 years known as Best, Safest, Always Reliable
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Lost—A small purse containing two keys attached by red string. Return to Foley's Restaurant, and receive reward. 475c

Wanted—Good bright boy, over 16 years of age, to learn the printing trade. Apply at the Evening Times. tf

Wanted—At No. 216 Utica street, a girl for general housework. No washing or ironing. tf

Rooms To Rent—Two apartments over Geisler's store. Apply Lewis' Cigar Store. tf

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

Wanted—Competent girls for general housework. Apply 208 South Fourth Street. 475

Teamster Wanted—Steady work winter and summer; good wages. John W. Pratt farm. tf

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

25 BIRDS THE LIMIT AT SATURDAY'S SHOOT

The results of the shoot at the Fulton Game and Gun Club grounds Saturday was as follows:

Keeler, 18; Kennedy, 11; Trumble, 23; Watson, 18; Friedenburg, 14; Wise, 20; Ashe, 17; Dilts, 15; Filley, 13; Padgett, 22.

The Evening Times will not be published tomorrow, July Fourth, but on Wednesday the paper will appear as usual.

Beads From Head to Toe

FOOTGEAR still runs to the fantastic, and it's a daring woman who ventures out without silk stockings these days. Those pictured are bronze colored to match bronze kid slippers daintily beaded. Colonial pumps are again the vogue, with leather, silver and metal buckles.

• • •

A girl in an ivory white glazed kid motor coat, with a saucy hat to match, is very sure of her smartness as she trips from her car into a restaurant. These new coats of soft kid fit beautifully, and there are a richness and luster about the glazed kid surface that are handsomer than the handsomest broadcloth. Of course there are colored kid coats, but in a white kid coat and hat there is particular allurement.

• • •

One of the new veil fashions is the frill—really a loose floating veil attached to the crown of the hat. It should be worn only by a woman with a well poised head.

• • •

Lavender, with a dash of emerald green, composes a fascinating color scheme.

ANNA MAY.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper
By Pictorial Review

A Lingerie Model Both Dainty and Practical

6746

Dressing Sacque of cotton crepe embroidered with silk polka dots and trimmed with lace. A practical design for general wear.

Cotton crepe trimmed with polka dots worked in silk of a contrasting color makes a dressing sacque that is dainty and practical. It is always dressy in effect, yet costs so little that one can wear it at any time without having the conscience chide one for extravagance. In medium size this design requires 3⅝ yards 36-inch material, with ⅞ yard of beading and 5½ yards of lace. The collar is a turn-over affair, pointed at the back and at each side of the front.

The sacque develops quickly even under the touch of the inexperienced dressmaker, if she follows directions carefully and consults the construction guide frequently.

The first thing to do is form a box-plait in the right front of the sacque, turning under the front edge at notches and taking up a tuck on line of slot perforations near center-front; stitch both sides of box-plait ⅜ inch from folded edges catching front edge in with tuck. Turn under front edge of left front 1½ inch for a hem. Close shoulder seam as notched and form tuck, creasing on line of slot perforations in front and back; stitch 1¼ inch from folded edge. Close under-arm seam as notched. Gather lower edge of front and back betwen double "TT" perforations.

The center-front of the pepium is indicated by large "O" perforations. Close center-back seam. Sew to lower edge of front and back between dou- and center backs even, large "O" perforation at upper edge of peplum at under-arm seam. Adjust belting 2 inches wide to position underneath waist; stitch lower edge of belting along the seam, joining the waist and peplum.

For the pointed collar, sew to neck edge, center-backs even, and along indicating small "o" perforations in front, single large "P" perforations even.

Adjust the pocket to position, upper edge of pocket between small "o" perforations. Close the sleeve seam as notched. Gather lower edge of sleeve between double "TT" perforations. Close sleeveband as notched, sew to sleeve, seams even. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing in any fulness.

This sacque may be developed as fancifully as desired. It is lovely in soft batiste trimmed along the edge of the front and about the peplum and sleeves with deep lace ruffles.

Pictorial Review Dressing Sacque No. 6746. Sizes, 34 to 44 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Sleepy Time Story Adapted From an Old Highland Legend.

SHREWD REYNARD OUTWITTED

Little Cock and Hen Prove Too Smart For the Wily Beast With a Bushy Tail—Things of Interest to Little Folks—A Maid and Her Pet Dog.

Now, kiddies, said Uncle Ben, I'm going to tell you a story about

SLY FOX AND HIS DEFEAT.

Once upon a time Master Red Fox was walking along, searching for a dinner, for he had eaten a very scant breakfast.

Soon he spied a cock and hen scratching around in a field.

"The very thing I need," said he to himself. "They will make a fine meal for me."

So he stole along very quietly until he had almost reached the two birds.

"There's many a slip 'twixt cup and lip," says the old proverb, and just as Red Fox had put forth a paw to grasp the cock the hen chanced to see him, and, with a loud "cluck, cluck," to warn the cock, up she flew into a tree near by, closely followed by the cock.

The fox was a cunning fellow, however, and began to converse with them in very friendly terms.

"I hope you are not afraid of me, my dear?" he called up. "I feel so very friendly. I was just coming to ask you to take a walk with me; it is such a beautiful, fine day."

"You are very kind," answered the hen, and the fox was sure he heard her chuckling to herself, "but we prefer flying to walking. We have so much more of an outlook."

For a long time they sat thus until the hen became very anxious to go home, but was afraid to venture for fear of being pounced upon by the fox.

"My dear," she exclaimed at last to the cock, "please look over there by the roadside and see if that is not our master with his gun and his dogs."

"It is, indeed, my dear," answered the cock, "and they are coming straight toward us."

"Oh, indeed," said Master Red Fox. "Then must I go. It is getting late, and if I wait until the dogs come I fear I will be detained too long. They are so very agreeable."

And away trotted the fox and never stopped until he reached his den.

The cock and hen then flew down and soon sought their home in the barn.

But the fox, weary and hungry and angry, lay in his den, thinking hard.

"I wonder if the master and the hounds were coming?" he said to himself. "It would be like those saucy birds to deceive me. Never will I trust them again."

Pretty Girl and Small Dog.

The sweet little maiden in the picture, like many other young folks, is fond of dogs. Especially she adores the little Pekingese which won first

Photo by American Press Association.

MISS ELEANOR M'ALLISTER.

prise at a dog show held at Belmont park, New York. The girl is Miss Eleanor McAllister, and her dog is named Tse Sheu of Meridale—quite a long name for such a mite of a creature.

What Am I?

That I'm the center of gravity I'm sure you'll allow;
Invaluable, being first in victory, all will avow.
A capital position in Vienna I hold;
Always in voice, though out of tune, behold!
Invisible, though in the midst of a river seen.
Oh, there are three in love with me, I ween,
Although I've three associates in vice, you say.
It is vain to seek me, for let me tell you, pray,
That I've been in heaven since ages have gone by,
And embalmed in the grave even now I lie.

Answer.—The letter V.

TWO BIRD GIRLS.

Aviation Is Said to Be Woman's Coming Profession.

"IT'S SUCH FUN TO FLY."

Already Two Women Are Making Exhibition Flights, and One Family, Two of Them Girls, Has Founded a School of Aviation In Texas.

Dressed in riding breeches and a natty Norfolk jacket and armed with (harmless) bombs, which she dropped over Manhattan, Miss Vera Pearce, accompanied by F. C. Millman, recently flew from Mineola, N. Y., over New York and around Battery park in a biplane.

Miss Pearce has a rival in this new field of enterprise for young women, Miss Katherine Stinson.

At Sheepshead Bay speedway this young lady, not yet twenty-one years old and weighing only 104 pounds, recently made two long, loose circles of the speedway. On the third time around, when she was about 2,000 feet above the imitation fort they were building for the flying exhibition, she made a swallow's smooth downward curve, then sheered up and back over her own path, her head and the upper part of her machine downward toward the ground. For a moment the engine stopped; then the tune of it began again. Katherine Stinson for the several hundredth time had looped the loop, and three minutes later she landed without even a jolt. She had been up less than ten minutes.

Photo by American Press Association.

MISS VERA PEARCE.

Miss Stinson wears no elaborate aviation wardrobe.

Ofter she doesn't even tuck her curls under her close fitting hood. She wears a short khaki skirt, high heeled boots and the two warmest coats she can find. Sometimes she wears riding breeches, but she doesn't in the least object to a skirt. She never allows wind or clouds to interfere with her flights. "But I don't like rain," she confessed. "It hurts. It feels exactly like sleet when you fly in it."

Besides looping the loop, she has carried United States mail, dropped bombs, made night flights, flown with her plane upside down and performed a number of other "stunts." "They always want some fancy thing thrown in at the exhibitions," she admitted carelessly.

"My sister Marjorie is only eighteen, and she's a flier. My brother Edwin is twenty-three, and he flies. In San Antonio, Tex., we three are running the Stinson school of aviation. I have another brother fifteen years old, but he wants to go to West Point. My people on both sides fought in the civil war.

"And if America went to war tomorrow I'd be an army scout," Miss Stinson added stoutly. "I tried my best to make Pershing and Funston let me go to Mexico. But they wouldn't."

For the Creeping Baby.

Here is an interesting suggestion for the young mother with the active, creeping baby: Get a good sized gray blanket, preferably woolen. Cut out the pictures from a cloth nursery picture book and sew them to the blanket. The bright pictures will attract baby's attention, and he will pat and pick at them by the hour and keep perfectly contented on his soft, warm, creeping rug. This idea may also be used in connection with the baby fence, for baby may be left inside the fence with his pictorial floor covering and run no risks of falling on sharp playthings.

Boston Could Stand It.

Ralph Waldo Emerson once made a crushing reply to a man who asked him whether the people in Boston did not feel alarmed. Said Emerson, "What about?" Said the man, "Why, the world is coming to an end next Monday." Emerson replied: "I am glad of it. We can get along a great deal better without it."

Mr. Bowser Purifies Politics

By M. QUAD

MR. BOWSER had been very quiet for a week. His face had worn such a serious, solemn look that Mrs. Bowser had become anxious. So after dinner she asked him if he were worrying about politics.

"I am, Mrs. Bowser," he solemnly responded. "The country is being stolen blind. There doesn't seem to be a man with a clear conscience left. It is graft, graft, graft! It is trickery! It is what they call influence. We pretend to be a free country, but we are under the domination of men who ought to have been in prison long ago! If I had a hundred men at my back I would either reform politics or smash the constitution of the United States. All it needs is a leader and a movement would take place such as was inaugurated by the immortal George Washington, John Hancock and other patriots in 1776."

"And won't such a leader come forward?" instantly asked Mrs. Bowser.

"By jiminy, but he will!" shouted Mr. Bowser as he bounded from his chair. "That leader will come forward, and his name will be Samuel Bowser. Right around here are a dozen corrupt politicians. I am going to begin on them and let the movement spread until it covers the whole of North America. I am going out now and get the good work started."

Two minutes later Mr. Bowser dashed into the plumber's shop and shouted, "I have come here to tell you that the sovereign people have found you out at last and that you have got to go!"

"Where have I got to go?" smiled the plumber.

"Into obscurity!" was shouted.

"What have I been doing, Mr. Bowser?"

"I will tell you plainly, Mr. Plumber. They say you have made $5,000 in the last year as a politician. You couldn't have made it honestly."

"Well, Mr. Bowser, I want to say to you that you are a grafter. When that side street sewer was to be built you used all your influence to get the bid of a certain contractor accepted, but at the same time you knew that he was not an honest man. It was whispered about that you were to get a divvy. When they paved your street three years ago, Mr. Bowser, you had the contractor fill up a great hole in your back yard at the expense of the city. Would you call that graft?"

"SIR, YOU BELONG TO THE COFFIN TRUST."

Mr. Bowser changed the subject to the weather and made his escape, but his duty was not yet done. He went down to the undertaker's and said:

"Sir, under this corrupt government you belong to the coffin trust, and you and your fellows have swindled the people out of millions of dollars! Do you know that there has got to be an end of this or the people will rise up in open rebellion?"

"There, there, old man," soothingly replied the undertaker as he rose up to pat Mr. Bowser on the shoulder. "Please don't preach me any sermons on trusts. I am told on the best authority that you hold $1,000 worth of stock in a cold storage trust and that your dividends last year were 20 per cent. You have no case against me, my friend, and you might as well walk on to the next place."

Mr. Bowser walked. He went to a wholesale butcher whose wagons generally occupied half the street in front of his place and who had been complained of several times without avail, and, walking up to the proprietor, he said to him:

"Sir, if it wasn't for political corruption you could not maintain that nuisance out there a day longer."

"You bet I couldn't," was the frank reply. "And if it wasn't for corrupt politics you couldn't have kept the land you stole from the city ten years ago."

"What do you mean, sir?" was demanded.

"I mean that your front fence occupies a foot too much of the street, and you have two feet at the back of your lot which belongs to the alley. How much has it cost you, Mr. Bowser, to tip off inspectors?"

Mr. Bowser looked at him with half open mouth for half a minute and then went on. As he came in Mrs. Bowser asked:

"Did you purify the politics of this country in such a short time? Why, you have hardly been gone an hour."

But instead of answering her Mr. Bowser lighted his cigar and went out and sat down on the front steps, which had been built of wood instead of stone, as the city ordinance directed. No one had ever asked him why those steps had been allowed to remain, but several persons had their own opinions about them, and their opinions included five dollar bills.

Copyright, 1916, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

HIS NATIONALITY

REVIEWING his Calcutta days as secretary for the acting governor of Bengal, Stanley Coxon relates an anecdote of a dinner in honor of the executive.

On assembling in the room our host remarked:

"Yes; I think we are all Irishmen, but I'm a bit doubtful about that fellow Coxon."

I was not at the time quite sure what I was. My reply, however, gave me away entirely and delighted the heart of our genial host. In the most innocent manner I remarked:—

"No, sir; I'm afraid you can't claim me. I was born there, but I've never been there."

I have worn the shamrock ever since.

Different Ways

THERE are different ways of doing things,
A casual glance discloses;
Some girls turn up their sleeves at work,
And some turn up their noses.

The Summer Girl

THE summer girl brings down the house
This year, it may be said.
She wears an awning for a skirt,
A screen upon her head.

—New York Sun.

A Gown For the Good Old Summer Time

THIS model clever women may copy at home. It is developed in white net, tiny ruffles climbing up a skirt that has four embroidered net panels that fall like aprons. The surplice waist drape is held with white crochet buttons. White taffeta ribbon girdles the waist line, and the bishop sleeves are ruffled four times at the wrist. This makes a charming house gown for hot days.

• • •

You must wear your coat without a blouse. Fill in the opening in front with a vest of white organdie.

ANNA MAY.

HER NEW JUMPER.

A Delectable Gown For the Small Girl's Vacation Days.

[illegible] frock is cut with short [illegible], huge pockets, button [illegible]. The fabric is a gray and white striped chambray. A quaint jumper vest of white pique is laced in front, breaking the striped effect and matching the cuffs. This simple model clever mothers can duplicate in any colored cotton material and is smart for summer wear.

VERY PROUD.

Made a Part For Her.

Dion Boucicault when his first play, "London Assurance," was accepted by the manager of Covent Garden, London, refused to have the play produced in the original version because it gave no part to Mrs. Nesbit, an actress for whom he had conceived a high boyish infatuation, and rewrote the whole work in an incredibly short time so as to supply her with the role he wished.

The Kitchen Cupboard

VARIOUS ICES.

TO make half a gallon of mint ice take half a pound of stick mint candy, pink and white striped (which gives a delicate pink shade to the ice). Soak candy in three pints of sweet milk until soft, and when ready to freeze add sugar to suit taste. When almost frozen add the beaten white of an egg, which makes the ice light and fluffy. Freeze well. A little essence of peppermint or fruit coloring may be added if more color or a higher flavor is preferred.

Red Raspberry Sherbet.—Boil together for three minutes two cupfuls of water and a cupful of sugar. Soak a tablespoonful of granulated gelatin in a quarter cupful of cold water and when soft pour the hot sirup over it. Stir well, and when dissolved add a quart of berries mashed well and juice of two lemons. Strain and when cold fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Freeze very solid, repack and let stand for two hours to ripen.

Orange Ice.—A pint of orange juice, a pint of sugar, grated rind of a lemon, quarter pint of lemon juice, grated rind of an orange. Serve in glasses. Freeze and make a sirup of the sugar and water. Boil fifteen minutes and add the orange juice, lemon juice, orange peel and lemon rind.

Sherbet a la Marguerite.—Take as many sherbet glasses as needed, fill half full with plain vanilla ice cream. Have the following mixture in a bowl: Six sliced bananas, a can pineapple (cut up), canned peaches or raspberries —in fact, any fruit you wish. Pour this on the ice cream, then decorate with whipped cream on top. Sprinkle with powdered cocoa. Finish with either creme de menthe cherries or maraschino cherries.

Trilby.—A cupful of cranberry juice, juice of four oranges, juice of three lemons, four and a half cupfuls of sugar dissolved in juices of lemons, oranges and cranberries. A gallon of fresh milk is poured slowly in above mixture, stirring rapidly as you pour. Color pink with fruit and freeze.

Pineapple Sherbet.—Five quarts of milk, six large cupfuls of sugar, a cupful of lemon juice, a can of grated pineapple. Mix sugar, milk and pineapple together. Do not add lemon juice until the mixture begins to freeze.

Anna Thompson.

The Best Kind of Woman to Marry.

You take a tip from me, son. When you marry, marry a home woman—a woman who's willing to hang a "God Bless Our Home" sign on the wall without making funny cracks about it. —E. C. Ranck in American Magazine.

SUMMER PORCHES

The Luxury of Living Outdoors In Hot Weather.

WHAT PAINT WILL DO.

Get Out Your Old Chairs, Buy Two New Wickers, Give Them a Green Coat and Then Dress Them Up In Gay Chintzes.

It seems a pity that all country homes are not built with roomy, spacious piazzas. After all, the principal reason that any one has for living in the suburbs and going through all the trouble of commuting is because he wants to live in the country. Of course six months in the year it is too cold to sit out of doors, but when spring comes the suburbanite wants to enjoy the country to the utmost. He cannot do this by sitting indoors, certainly. He wants to read his paper and smoke his pipe where he can see nature's beauties spread all out before his eyes—namely, on the porch.

Modern architects are realizing more and more the need for big porches, no matter how small the house. Of course the suburbanite who owns his own home can always add to the porches if he wishes. But the others must make the most of what they have and do the best they can to make their piazza cozy and comfortable, no matter how small it may be.

You women who live in the country will find that a can or two of paint and a bolt of pretty chintz will do much to transform your porch furniture. If you have no comfortable chairs for piazza use do buy one or two. They need not be expensive pieces, but be sure they are comfortable and have pretty lines.

The wicker or reed furniture is really the most attractive for verandas, and it is not at all expensive.

You need not worry if you have two or three pieces of one kind and a couple of pieces of another variety. After you have given them all a coat of the same paint and made chintz cushioned seats and backs for them they will look enough alike to fool any casual eye. Besides, no one expects rigid formality in porch decorations.

If your house is white or gray you will find that green porch furniture will look best. Give all the chairs, tables and settees a coat of green paint and one of green enamel paint. The chintz for green furniture should contrast with it, and a figure with a good deal of red in it will be found most effective.

It may be wisest to have a cheap upholsterer make the seat cushions and backs if you are afraid to tackle so tricky a job. Have them made with some white goods as a cover. Then you can yourself make slip covers of the chintz for them. The reason why it is better not to have the chintz put right on as the first cover of the cushions is because it may soil very quickly, being where the street dust can easily reach it. If the chintz is made into slip covers they can be removed and washed when soiled.

If your house is any other color except white or gray brown porch furniture is prettiest. So you can paint your furnishings brown and use almost any gayly colored, pretty bright chintz for cushions.

THE NEW BAG.

All Sorts of Beaded Reticules Come to Match Frocks.

Gowns take wrist bags made of a piece of their material. This one illustrated is of old rose silk, quaintly embroidered in silvery beads. The top closes with a ribbon drawstring, and the pendants are beaded balls and tassel. Many such bags are made on small lines.

A DAINTY RETICULE.

Shrimps St. Jacques.

Two cans shrimp, cut in small pieces after looking over carefully and rinsing. Fry in a tablespoonful butter with an onion chopped fine. Add a cupful milk, salt, pepper and yolk of an egg. Stir, but do not let boil. Pour into buttered dish or ramekins or shells, cover with breadcrumbs and bake until brown. Set ramekins or shells in pan with a little water. Serve with slices of lemon.

THE LATIN QUARTER.

This Picturesque Outfit Reminds Us of Art Students.

Quaintness itself is this fetching garb, a black velvet jacket over a white satin skirt. The bobbed coat round collar and huge tie are characteristic, while the cartridge pockets are particularly interesting. A white panama hat takes huge black poppies appliqued as crown trimmings.

A SAUCY MODEL.

The Great Trouble.

"It is every woman's duty to keep young as long as possible," she said.

"Yes," he admitted, "but the great trouble is that so many young women insist on keeping young after it is impossible."—Chicago Herald.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic, all Teething Troubles and Diarrhoea. It regulates the Stomach and Bowels, assimilates the Food, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years

The Kind You Have Always Bought

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Such a Change!

"Your daughter seems to have acquired a fine polish at that finishing school she attended."

"Yes," answered old Mr. Gadder thoughtfully. "But I'm afraid her health is not what is used to be."

"That's too bad."

"Before she went away she was a strong, husky sort of girl and able to wait on herself. Now she can't even dress without the assistance of a French maid."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Cactus Stems.

The thick stem of the cactus is a provision of nature to reduce the loss of water by evaporation to a minimum.

LOOK FOR THE GOOD.

We find what we look for in the world. I have always been looking for the nobler qualities in human beings, and I have always found them. There are great souls all along the highway of life, and there are great qualities even in the people who seem common and weak to us ordinarily.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

A Regular Attendant.

"Do you go to church regularly?"

"Yes, regularly once a year."—Detroit Free Press.

LADIES

We have on display in our South window a large number of Sets of

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

while they last we will sell them at

70 Cents the Set

The wholesale price is more than that, but we are going to dispose of them at a great sacrifice.

COME EARLY IF YOU WISH TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER

They were bought by the former publishers for premiums, but we are giving no premiums with the

FULTON EVENING TIMES

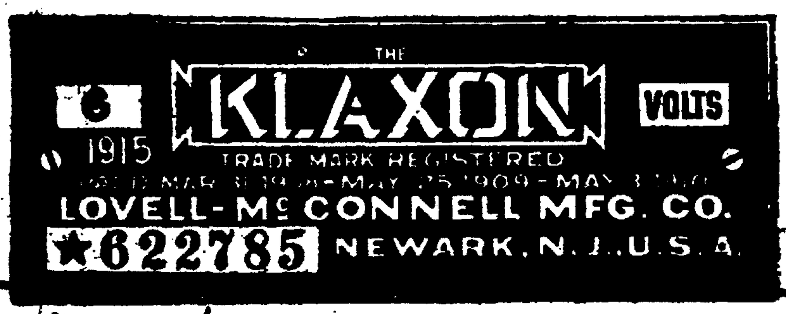
Warning!

JUST as the Klaxon warns PEDESTRIANS, we would warn MOTORISTS.

We would say—and as emphatically as the Klaxon says it—"LOOK OUT."

Look out for horns that LOOK like Klaxons but are NOT Klaxons.

The only way to be sure you are getting a genuine Klaxon—with the famous Klaxon note and the Klaxon guarantee of PERMANENT satisfaction is to find the Klaxon name-plate:—



—"the only sign of a perfect signal."

WE know auto horns. We have to. It's our business.

We know the stuff that goes into them; and the sound that comes out.

We know why the Klaxon is the most widely used auto horn in the world.

Because it is MADE right. Because it always WORKS. Because it is always HEARD. Because it LASTS FOREVER.

There is no signal that can compare with it in warning-power, carrying-power and dependability. Once let us put one on your car and you will never drive without it. It's the modern means of safe and satisfactory motoring.

THE VAN WAGENEN, Inc.

LOCAL SALES AGENCY

A Few of the 24 Klaxon Models:—

BOOM TOWN CELEBRATES

Nederland, Colo.—With a boxing exhibition every night and daily contests in the water, on horses and on the diamond, the boom city of Nederland opened a three day "Tungsten Celebration" this afternoon. A masked carnival July 5 will end the festivities.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

MOTORMAN WILL RECOVER FROM SEVERE BURNS

Syracuse—Robert Leahey, Empire United Railways motorman of this city, is recovering today from injuries received Saturday night when he received a severe electrical shock and was thrown from the roof of a car when making repairs.

The accident occurred near Stop 14, Baldwinsville. The trolley pole had become disarranged and he climbed to the roof to repair it. As he was placing one of the poles in the base the other end came in contact with the wire forming a direct current. There was a flash and he was hurled off the car. He fell on his face along side the track.

Taken to St. Joseph's hospital in this city it was found that his feet and hands were burned and that he had suffered bruises on his face. It is believed that about 500 volts passed through his body.

The Evening Times will not be published tomorrow, July Fourth, but on Wednesday the paper will appear as usual.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 476. WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1916 Price, One Cent

MEXICAN SITUATION CONSIDERED FRIENDLY

(By United Press)

Washington, D. C.—United States government is willing to continue negotiation with Carranza government in view of the latter's desire to maintain friendly spirit, as expressed in note received today, officially made known by the State Department, after it had considered the English translation of the message. Though whether it will be done by mediation or direct communication between the two nations was not revealed.

* * *

Columbus, New Mexico.—Among the military men here, the feeling is growing that the order will be given for withdrawal of American troops from Mexico providing Carranza makes no hostile moves.

* * *

Washington, D. C.—Complete pacificatory terms in the Carranza note answering the two American communications to Mexico, was sent to Secretary Lansing today by Mexican Ambassador Arriendondo. The reply is brief and it emphasizes the signs of immediate relief of American prisoners taken in Carrizal fight, as the indicative of Carranza's sincere desire to work with the United States. It was signed by Foreign Minister, Acquitar.

The note formerly announces the de-facto government's favorable attitude toward mediation as suggested by Latin-American countries, but leaves to the United States to say whether this or direct negotiations will be relied upon. No demand for withdrawal of American troops from Mexico is made.

* * *

Eagle Pass—General Nurgura was today reported to be moving several Mexican troops opposite here, through railroad town forty miles south. No motive is known for such a move.

* * *

Washington, D. C.—Unless unusual events develop militia men stationed on the border will probably be back to their homes within the next four months. How to fill their places is a problem which President Wilson and army men are giving serious consideration. Men in touch with Mexican situation say that when the glamour of prospective war wears off as it now seems to do, military men will seek to avoid drudgery of camp life and return to their respective employments.

EUROPEAN WAR IS BECOMING MORE INTENSE

(By United Press)

London—British troops are making much progress at different points, in heavy fighting. This was reported by the British Commander-in-Chief.

At Thiedbald, north east of Albert, two enemy attacks were repulsed.

* * *

Berlin—The German unit from the Verdun front have appeared in action against the British north of Somme, who have been transferred to stem the Allies' defense. A German countermarch at Siebald was repulsed, several German officers rushed up to th British line, surrendering 100 men. "We are of more use to Germany alive after the war, than dead," they said.

* * *

London—Hand to hand fighting is continued between Antris and the Somme, said supplemental official bulletin from General Hagen at five o'clock yesterday. It also reported the capture of 500 men.

* * *

Petrograd—In pursuit of the retreating Austrians, the Russian army has reached spurs of the Carpathian Mountains and is engaged with the enemy's rear guard official statements announce Russian successes against Austrian Germans.

TRANSPORT MONTEREY IS REPORTED SAFE

(By United Press)

New York—The Ward Line announced this afternoon, receipt of a cable from Havana. "The transport Monterey, of which there has been considerable anxiety, arrived safely at that port at six o'clock this morning.

New U. S. Post Office.

Fulton may feel mighty proud of this gift from Uncle Sam, as it is the best equipped Post Office in Central New York.

Mayor Victor C. Lewis.

Mr. Lewis was born and reared in Fulton. He is the son of Thomas D. Lewis, who was once a potent factor in Oswego County, and state politics. His son bids fair to equal his father's record. He is the youngest mayor the city has ever had and has built about him the most efficient administration in years.

AUTO HITS TROLLEY POLE

A five passenger touring car, the driver of which is unknown, nicely avoided an accident early this morning. The car approaching the city from Oswego on the East River road met the trolley freight car as it turned the corner to gout on the bridge. The driver not noticing the sharp turn proceeded on until the trolley car made the curve. Immediately the autoist turned toward the bridge to avoid trouble, but in so doing crashed into the iron trolley pole. Fortunately the auto escaped serious damages, receiving only a shaking up and proceeded on its way.

The witnesses of this accident claim that the escape from injuries was miraculous, owing to the rate of speed at which the driver was going.

PUBLISHERS TO MEET SATURDAY

On Saturday July eighth the Central New York Newspaper Pubishers' Association, will meet in Fulton. This is the first time the city has been honored by the presence of such a competent fraternity. Notifications have been sent to all members and a large delegation is expected. The following is the program:

Headquarters are to be made at the Elks' Home.

Dinner will be served at the Clark House.

The local Chamber of Commerce has arranged an auto ride to Oswego, at which place they will make a brief visit to Congressman Mott. Fort Ontario will also be inspected by the party.

THE RED MEN LOST FAST GAME

Yesterday afternoon the Le Moynes, of Syracuse, crossed bats with the Red Men's team, of Fulton. The game was fast throughout and considering the material of the opponents, the Red Men displayed a great game. Milne took the mound for four innings and held them to one hit. He became wild, however, and was relieved by Painter. The latter had the Salt City boys buffaloed and it was only in the sixth that they were able to bunch hits. In this inning three runs crossed the plate, which placed to game on ice. The fielding of M. Y. Collum was spectacular making five put outs, four assists an one error. "Tommy" came through with a hit at an opportune time that scored a run.

Fultonians will recognize the names of Dunn, "Tad" Gaughn, and Eddie Barry. The former occupied the position of second base in the Syracuse State League lineup. "Tad" Gaughn played creditable ball for Fulton during the old Empire League days; he also will be recognized as one of the best semi pro players in Syracuse. Eddie Barry last year's shortstop for the Ryans, also is no beginniner, his playing yesterday was worthy of mention.

The summary:

Le Moynes	AB.	R.	H.	PO.	A.	E.
Tubbert, c. and rf.	4	2	1	12	1	1
Barry, ss.	3	1	1	2	2	0
Burns, 1b.	4	0	1	10	0	0
Dunn, 2b.	4	0	0	1	3	0
T. Gaughn, rf. and c.	4	0	0	1	0	0
Ryan, p.	1	2	0	0	3	0
Dutcher, lf.	3	0	0	1	0	0
Hart, 3b.	3	1	0	0	0	0
W. Gaughn, cf.	4	1	1	0	0	0
Totals	30	7	4	27	9	1

Red Men	AB.	R.	H.	PO.	A.	E.
Dingle, cf.	5	0	1	1	0	0
H. Ingamells, 2b.	4	1	0	3	2	0
Hayes, 1b.	2	2	0	10	1	0
M. Y. Collum, ss.	3	0	1	5	4	1
F. Brown, 3b.	4	0	2	2	0	0
W. Ingamells, lf.	3	0	0	2	0	0
E. Brown, rf.	2	0	1	0	0	0
Briggs, c.	4	0	0	4	0	2
Milnes, p.	1	0	0	0	2	0
Painter, p.	3	0	0	0	3	0
Totals	31	3	5	27	18	1

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Le Moynes	1	0	1	2	0	3	0	0	0	7
Red Men	1	0	0	0	0	1	1	0	0	3

D. S. Hollenga

Present Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, who has supervised the Old Home Week Celebration.

Two base hits, Dangle, Burns, W. Gaughn and Tubbert; sacrifice hits, Dunn, Dutcher; hits off Ryan, 5, off Milnes 1, in 4 innings, off Painter, 3, in 5 innings; stolen bases, Barry 4, Dunn, Ryan, Hart, H. Ingamells 2, McCollum 2, F. Brown; double plays, McCollum to Hayes, McCollum to H. Ingamells; struck out by, Ryan 12, Painter 2, Milnes 1; hit by pitched ball by, Ryan 6, Milnes 6; wild pitch, 2; passed ball 1. Time of game, two hours. Umpire, Church.

CAR COLLIDES WITH ROADSTER

A high powered seven passenger touring car driven by Edmond Young, of Minneto, collided with a light roadster driven by Lawrence Trask, of Volney Center, late last night.

The accident happened on the corner of Oneida and Second streets, fortunately the occupants of both cars escaped injury, although receiving a slight shakeup.

The smaller car was badly demolished and from appearances will be entertained at one of our local motor hospitals, to undergo serious overhauling.

THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE WITNESS BIG CELEBRATION

One of the longest, largest and best parades ever seen in Fulton, took place yesterday morning and was witnessed by about thirty thousand people.

The first fraternal body in the parade was the Oswego Elks, who dressed in white duck trousers and blue coats and carried purple and white umbrellas. Then came the Red Men with their white hats across which was spelled Utoka, 420. These were followed by the Italian Club of this city, the Italian society of Oswego, the Masonic Band of Oswego and the Fulton Knights of Columbus. Phillips' Band of Oswego followed, behind which cames the Citizens' Club, and Odd Fellows. The Phoenix Band led the K. O. T. M. Society and Sons of Veterans. Then came one of the best spectacles of the parade, the Elks' Band of Fulton, dressed in their new uniforms of white serge, trimmed with purple brade, with white hats and patent leather peaks across which were the numbers of the lodge, 830. The B. P. O. Elks, No. 830 followed, led by the big Elk John W. Stevenson. The Elks were dressed in white and twelve of the members carried a large American flag. The Boy Scouts brought up the end of the parade.

The crowds that thronged the streets, applauded again and again as each fraternal body went by.

Each train and trolley car that came into the city was crowded with visitors. About the largest crowd ever before seen in Fulton.

At night the Elks' band gave a concert, on East First street, near the Plaza and at 9:30 o'clock one of the best displays of fireworks ever seen in this city took place on the Plaza.

ILLEGAL OPERATION RESULTED IN DEATH

Salem, Mass.—Ex-Representative Carrol H. O'Connell, of Peabody and twelve other men were arrested early today on charge of being accomplices to an illegal operation which resulted in the death of Marjorie Ward, aged thirty. The body of the dead woman was discovered upon the floor of the automobile in which the men were riding, by Patrolman Hody, who was attracted by the suspicious way in which the car was driven.

OLD HOME WEEK REMARKS

The Old Home Week celebration will be continued today and tomorrow with the following programs:

TODAY.

Industrial and municipal parade, depicting events of the various decades of Fulton's history, as well as portraying the story of the Pathfinder country, Fulton's vicinity and Oswego County.

Oswego County is rich in historic lore and Fulton is the heart of Oswego county.

Fireworks. Band Concert.

Line of March for today's parade:

Form on West Broadway at D. L. & W. Station, West Broadway to West First street, West First to Lower Bridge, Lower Bridge to Oneida and Third, counter march to East First, East First to Cayuga, Cayuga to Third, Third to Buffalo, Buffalo to Fourth, Fourth to Broadway, to First, First to Plaza, disband.

TOMORROW.

Thursday, July 6th—Water Pageant on Oswego River to Pathfinder Island. Parad of Homecomers.

FELL DOWN SUBWAY STAIRS.

A man giving his name as Norton, fell down the steps of the "Subway Cafe" last night and received a deep laceration in the back of his head. He was removed to the City Hall where the incision was closed. When visited this morning he was suffering from no pain and will be able to return to his duties within a few days.

THROWN FROM CARRIAGE.

Mrs. Hettie Foster, fifty-two years of age and living about five miles north of the city, was thrown from a carriage on the Whittaker road yesterday afternoon. The accident was the result of a balky horse.

Mrs. Foster is the mother of ex-alderman Myron Foster, of this city. Mrs. Foster received several bruises and it was necessary for her to return to the home of her daughter for the night. She was taken to her home this morning and her condition is not considered serious.

CITIZEN'S CLUB RECEPTION

A large reception is planned by the Citizen's Club to be held Friday night at their home. Vocal selections will be rendered by Theodore Foster.

HAD HIS EYE BADLY BURNED

A boy by the name of William La Beef, four years old, and residing at 108 South Seventh street, has his left eye badly burned by a match. Dr. Hall attended the case and stated this morning that there was no danger of losing the sight.

INJURED AT GAS WORKS.

Joseph Avery, living at 1047 Fay street, while working at the Gas Works in the employ of the Fulton Fuel and Light Company, was struck by a belt flying from its shaft, yesterday afternoon. The missile struck the man on the right thigh and inflicted minor injuries. With the exception of the contusion and shock Mr. Avery is resting comfortably and will be able to return to work in a few days.

The Present City Hall.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

WEDNESDAY, JULY 5, 1916.

NOW A NEW YORK PUBLISHER

D. J. Robbins, Veteran and Progressive Newspaper Man, Secures Control of Fulton Daily Times.

Fulton, N. Y.—Dwight J. Robbins, an old time publisher who has been known in the newspaper field as an active and progressive worker for over 25 years, recently acquired the Fulton Daily Times. He has moved the plant into a new up to date building and is installing new machinery necessary to give to the people of Fulton a creditable daily. The office is now centrally located, has attractive plate glass front and is excellently lighted throughout.

Mr. Robbins has published papers in Erie and Girard, Pa.; Orlando, Fla.; Schoolcraft, Mich., and recently disposed of a plant in Byesville, O. His varied experience in the work is a valuable asset to him and he has a reputation of having always "made good" with every office he has handled, notwithstanding the fact that he has taken over more than one office that required careful executive ability to bring it up to the standard where it belonged.

His keen insight as to a field for a newspaper is apparent and, because of his ability and experience, he always secures results. Mr. Robbins will give to the people of Oswego county a newspaper that will be a credit to the community and one that will be well patronized by the home people.—The Publisher's Auxiliary.

THE GARDENER'S FRIENDS.

Why Birds as Well as Toads Should Be Guarded and Encouraged.

All successful gardeners know that toads are their best friends, but all of them do not know the value of birds as insect destroyers. The department of agriculture has reported that the annual crop loss to the United States from insect pests is over $795,000,000. An expert has estimated that certain larvae will consume 200 times their original weight in twenty-four hours. If an infant did as much as some caterpillars, he would weigh forty tons at maturity.

All investigators agree that the song and game birds are the best of agents for destroying insects. One authority says that it is more than likely that successful agriculture would become impossible, if all the birds were to be exterminated. The work of the friendly flicker, who likes the city almost as well as the country, is a good example of what an energetic bird will accomplish if unhindered. Certain flickers that were subjected to a survey were found to devour 5,000 ants a day while two orioles feasted on 3,500 plant lice at a single meal. The amateur gardener usually comes to his first grief in consequence of his ignorance of the ways of plant lice. By encouraging birds as well as toads to live in his garden he can reduce his troubles with insects to a minimum.

WEEDS IN THE GARDEN.

Why You Should Destroy and Not Board Them.

Without weeds the kitchen gardener's life would be a much easier one, but he would not get as much exercise.

A weedless garden is usually profitable. That is true not so much because the weeds have not eaten the plant food which should go into vegetables, but because it shows the gardener has spent a lot of time digging in his garden.

Don't wait until the weeds get a start, for then the exercise you can get pulling or hoeing them is hard work, and that takes a lot of ambition out of the gardener. Do a little weeding every time you get near the garden.

Chopping off weeds is one way, but the better way is to pull out roots and all. A hoe may be used between rows in digging up the weeds, but the hand is necessary to get at weeds growing in between the plants in the row, for a hoe might injure the stems.

If weeds haven't gone to seed throw them on your compost heap, covering them with manure and a layer of earth.

One last word—don't board any weeds in your garden this summer.

How to Sterilize Old Muslin as It Is Being Used In the War.

To sterilize old soft linen or muslin so that it may be used for bandaging or in the sick room, place it in a steamer and steam for from twenty-five to forty minutes, according to amount. Remove from the steamer and dry thoroughly in a warm oven. Be sure the oven is not hot enough to scorch the linen.

Roll in bundles and wrap with antiseptic gauze, with an outer wrapping of heavy paper securely tied, and keep in a dry place, or, better still, keep in sterilized screw top jars.

How to Clean Tinware With Milk Where Washing Is Preferred.

Some housewives advise a system of dry cleaning for tinware for the reason that it insures a surface free from rust which is less liable to burn. Where washing is preferred, however, a little milk added to the water proves more satisfactory than either soap or soda, for its peculiarly solvent effect upon grease obviates all necessity for hard scouring, which latter will wear the tin coating and gradually cause the article to become useless for holding food and more apt to rust into holes.—Popular Science.

Pa Has a Daughter.

Willie—Pa, what comes after a million? Mr. Roxleigh—The fortune hunter, my son.—Boston Transcript.

YOUR TYPEWRITER.

How to Clean and Care For This Modern Necessity.

Many million people use typewriters and a great many of them leave the typewriter uncovered most of the time when not in use.

There is one great economy in covering a typewriter—in the saving of the ribbon. Of course a cover also keeps out dust and dirt and keeps other people from using the machine, but by far the greatest direct saving is in the ribbon.

The liquid ink on the ribbon will evaporate just like any other liquid and if it has the whole room to evaporate in a great deal more will come off than when it is confined in a small space. As science puts it, a liquid will evaporate continually until the space around the liquid is saturated with its vapor.

This saturation point rises with the temperature, so on a hot day more ink evaporates than on a cold day. But when a space is saturated with the vapor the evaporation ceases, and so if the space be made small, by means of a typewriter cover, a minimum amount of the ink will be lost. A proof of the matter is found in the pronounced odor a typewriter gives off when the cover is taken off after a period of rest.

Exactly the same thing happens with a bottle half full of water. Leave this bottle open and in a few days all the water has evaporated. But close the bottle with a stopper and only enough water will evaporate to fill the space between the water surface and the stopper, thus saving practically the whole contents for further use.

Why Birds Must Have Water For Both Drinking and Bathing Purposes.

"Water is just as important to the birds as food," says a writer in the Woman's Home Companion, "and sometimes is harder for them to find. Any plans for attracting birds must include some sort of water supply both for drinking and bathing. It is almost impossible to let an apartment to these tenants without a bathroom.

"A bird bath can be made a very attractive feature of the garden. All the taste and money one has can be lavished on it. I often wonder whether the birds appreciate the Carrara marble and the bronze sculptures provided for them. I rather think they do. Practically, however, they get on very well with a cement pool. It should be shallow, with a slowly shelving rim and a rough bottom, and it should be in a somewhat secluded spot, for, as I've already said, birds are shy."

How to Make Hop Beer at Home and Easily.

Take five quarts of water, six ounces of hops, boil it three hours, then strain the liquor, add to it five quarts of water, four ounces of bruised ginger root, boil this again twenty minutes, strain and add four pounds of sugar. When lukewarm put in a pint of yeast. Let it ferment; in twenty-four hours it will be ready for bottling.

WHY WE SHOULD AVOID MOISTENING STAMPS AND ENVELOPES WITH THE TONGUE.—Sometimes, if we think of it, we use a little sponge to moisten the back of the postage stamp or the gummed flap of the envelope, but more often we touch it with the tongue. If we would always bear in mind the fact that the glue used on the stamps and envelopes is made from refuse products, which consist mainly of bones and hoofs of animals that may have been diseased, we would think twice before touching it with the tongue. The stamps and envelopes themselves are made from rags and in the process of their transformation into paper are handled by all sorts of people.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FISH DAY MENU.

FRIDAY—BREAKFAST.
Stewed Figs.
Boiled Cereal of Choice.
Creamed Salt Mackerel.
Rolls or Toast. Jam or Jelly.
Coffee or Cocoa.
LUNCHEON.
Sliced Meat. Pickled Beets.
Peanut Butter Sandwiches With Bran Bread.
Tarts. Tea or Cocoa.
DINNER.
German Onion Soup.
Broiled Haddock, Egg Sauce.
Baked Potatoes.
Escaloped Tomatoes.
Dandelion Salad.
Lemon Meringue Pie.
Coffee.

Tasty Fishes.

ESCALOPED FISH.—One and one-half pounds of fish, a cupful of fresh breacrumbs, a cupful of cream sauce, a teaspoonful of grated onions, two tablespoonfuls of finely cut parsley, two teaspoonfuls of salt, an eighth teaspoonful of white pepper, a quarter teaspoonful of paprika, a teaspoonful Worcestershire sauce (if you have it) and a teaspoonful of butter. Put the fish in a shallow pan and cover with boiling water, adding a teaspoonful of salt. Boil twenty-five minutes, removing all skin and bone. Brush earthenware dish or agate pie plate with butter, sprinkle with half the breadcrumbs, then the fish and the balance of the breadcrumbs. Cover with the cream sauce, to which you have added the onions, salt, pepper, paprika, half the paprika and Worcestershire sauce. Bake uncovered for thirty minutes in a moderate oven. Sprinkle with parsley. Cream sauce is made as usual. This mixture can be put into scallops or clamshells and baked in oven.

Fish Loaf.—Flake the remnants of any baked fish. There should be two cupfuls; if not fill out with chopped clams. Add a cupful of stuffing left from fish or a cupful of coarse breadcrumbs moistened with melted butter and a beaten egg. Season well with salt, pepper and a teaspoonful of finely minced pickle. Turn into a small bread pan or quart mold, cover with buttered paper, place in pan of hot water and cook in moderate oven about one-half hour. Unmold on a hot platter and serve with white sauce.

Creamed Finnan Haddie.—Cook a teaspoonful of chopped green pepper for five minutes in one-quarter cupful of butter, stirring constantly. Stir in one-third cupful of flour, then add gradually two cupfuls of rich milk. Cook and stir until smooth, season with one-half teaspoonful salt and one-quarter teaspoonful of paprika, add one and one-half cupfuls of flaked cooked finnan haddie and three chopped hard cooked eggs, cook five minutes longer and serve on toasted bread.

Anna Thompson.

Origin of the Saw.

According to Apollodorus, the invention of the saw came about in the following way: Talus, so the account goes, having found the jawbone of a huge snake, used it to cut through a piece of wood and, finding that it worked so well, formed an instrument of iron similar to it. The first sawmill concerning which we have any clear knowledge was erected on the island of Madeira somewhere about the year 1400. A few years later one was built at Breslau. There were no sawmills in England prior to 1663. In that year one was built there by a Dutchman, but he was forced to abandon it. Sawmills were erected near London about 1770.

SHOULD SLOAN'S LINIMENT GO ALONG?

Of course it should! For after a strenuous day when your muscles have been exercised to the limit an application of Sloan's liniment will take the soreness and stiffness away and get you in fine shape for the morrow. You should also use it for a sudden attack of toothache, stiff neck, backache, stings, bites and the many accidents that are incidental to a vacation. "We would as soon leave our baggage as go on a vacation or camp out without Sloan's Liniment." Writes one vacationist: "We use it for everything from cramps to toothache." Put a bottle in your bag, be prepared and have no regrets.

HOW TO SPRAY WHILE WATERING THE GARDEN PLANTS.—Spraying is perhaps the least interesting work in connection with our gardens and therefore is likely to be the last to be done. Nevertheless it is very necessary, and much money and effort have been wasted in the garden through want of spraying.

You can do your spraying while watering, and this is accomplished by various small devices which screw to the faucet and to which one end of the hose is fastened. In these bowls or sprayers insecticide soaps of various kinds may be placed. Thus while watering or syringing a mild solution of insecticide is also applied.

This method of spraying has been tried for several years and is remarkably efficient, particularly in the sense of prevention. If the sprayer is used consistently from early spring to late fall, which can be done at trifling expense, very few bugs will find that garden a comfortable habitation.

Not All Her Own.

A young woman who does a bit in the line of verse recently received the following note from a magazine editor:

"Dear Madam—The verses entitled 'The Kiss' are extremely clever. Can you assure me that they are original?"

Whereupon the fair writer answered:

"Sir—Not quite. 'The Kiss' was a collaboration."—New York Times.

TOWN'S BEST ADVERTISING.

A Municipality Without Flies Is a Desirable Place to Live.

"A town without flies is the best advertising a town can have," said a business man the other day. And when he was asked why he thought so he replied: "There are several reasons. First, everybody knows that a town without flies is a clean town, a healthful town, where health matters receive due attention. You would expect to find in it clean streets and alleys, clean food shops and markets and clean grocery stores and restaurants. It is where you would feel easy to sit down and eat without feeling suspicious about the food that is served you.

"In the second place, it is a town that has no filthy, fly breeding stables and open surface closets. It takes care of its sewage and garbage and deems the health of its citizens worth protecting. For this reason you feel that such a town is a good place in which to live.

"In the third place, it would be a town practically free from typhoid fever, infantile diseases, cholera and other fly born diseases, to say nothing of other improved health conditions and the comforts brought about by cleanliness and the absence of flies."

"But how are you going to have a flyless town?" the speaker was asked. "By going after the stables first," said he, "and then by cleaning up the rest of the town and keeping it clean. To afford flies no place to breed," said the speaker, "is the only way not to have flies. Towns that have succeeded in controlling the fly menace went straight for the stables first and then for the open closets and other dirty places where flies find breeding places. Dr. L. M. McCormick, the fly fighter of Asheville, says, 'There is no royal road to freedom from flies, but clean up and keep clean is the winning slogan.'"

Superstitious.

"What! Did you let the examinations go by again, Carl?"

"I'll tell you, father. On the way to the college I met an old woman, and then I turned back again."—Fliegende Blaetter.

PLOW BY NIGHT ON FARM.

Tractor Equipped With Searchlight Works Continuously For Two Days.

Lansdale, Pa.—Plowing at night by artificial light is an innovation on the farm of the Lansdale Mushroom company at Lansdale. The late spring made it necessary to devise some means to catch up in the work, and the plowing by night idea was hit upon.

The plowing was done by a tractor engine equipped with an acetylene gas tank and powerful searchlight. Three shifts worked continuously for forty-eight hours. Ten acres of land were plowed in twenty-four hours.

Gander Plays Mother Goose.

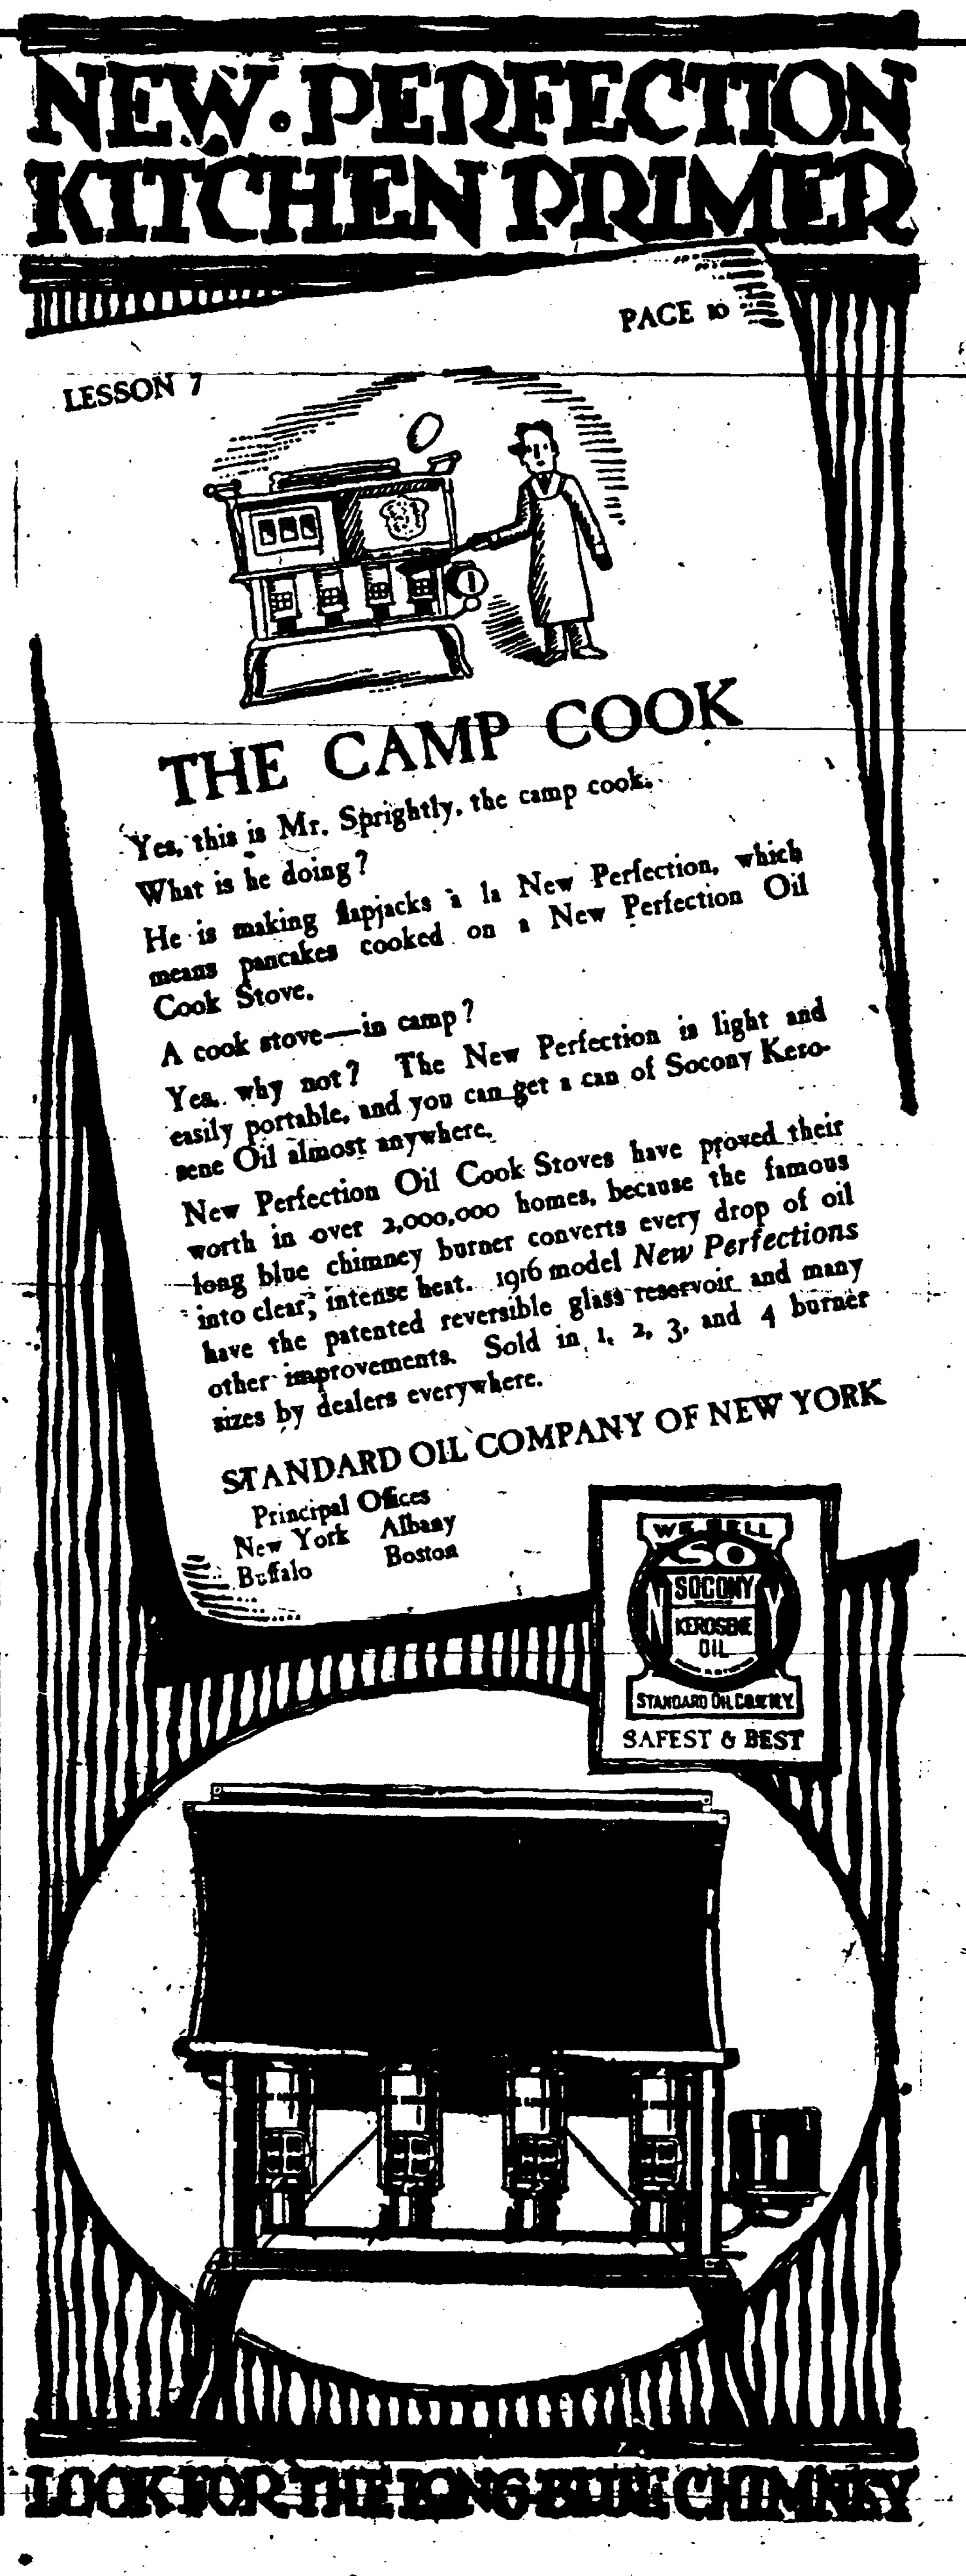
Brazil, Ind.—Hobart Brewer, a farmer near Center Point, has a gander that believes the duties of the housewife should be shared. When a goose was set on a number of eggs the gander made it evident that he also desired to sit, so he was provided with a nest of eggs. The gander stuck faithfully to his task and hatched out a number of little ones.

Making Beds.

To make up a bed so that it will be smooth, tuck the clothes in, one piece at a time, at the sides, and complete the work all but tucking the clothes in at the foot. Now draw the clothes down, one piece at a time, as taut as possible and tuck them in at the foot. The bed will be far nicer looking than would be otherwise possible. If the bed is of iron or brass, which does not permit of tucking in the coverlet, tuck in the other clothes as directed, placing the coverlet over all.

Silk Fiber Sweaters.

Some call them sport coats, and for summer they are just the thing. They come in copenhagen blue, green, salmon, rose, rose striped with white and purple with white. At $3.95 they have a half sash which is only in the back, and at $4.98 they have a full sash that ties in front.



PUT ON YOUR THINKING CAP!

Realize what it means to have a Home Daily giving you the Latest

LOCAL & TELEGRAPHIC NEWS SERVICE

---later by Three Hours than you can get in any newspaper circulating in this city, and you don't have to wade through a mass of reading to get what you want.

You get what you want in tabloid form in---

FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

A little sailor he would be and wear this suit of blue galatea trimmed with white braid. The long trousers look very smart above white shoes and the middy blouse does credit to the most seasoned salt. Three and one half yards 36-inch material, with 2 yards of braid, make the suit.

Pictorial Review Boys' Suit No. 6671, sizes, 3 t 8 years; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Departmen store, Fulton.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Citation On Settlement.

The People of the State of New York:

To Robert E. Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Elmina Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Cyrus Frederick Phillips, Rochester, N. Y.; Ross Phillips, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Asa Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Grace Phillips Bryant, Akron, O.; May Wood Taylor, St. Josephs, Mo.; All Saints' Church (formerly Zion Episcopal Church), Fulton, N. Y.; Mount Adnah Cemetery Association, Fulton, N. Y.; Minnie Wood Douglas, Nutley, N. J.; Charles Shaw, Kansas City, Mo.; Frank Barnes, Fulton, N. Y.; Hiram Barnes, Little Falls, N. Y.; Nellie Barnes Huntly, Colosse, N. Y.; Harriet A. Phillips, Denver, Col.; Charles R. Phillips, Youngstown, O.; Fanny Barnes Burt, Hannibal, N. Y.; Edith Barnes, Fulton, N. Y.; Hattie Hurlburt, Natural Bridge, N. Y.; Ella Reed, Russell, N. Y.; Mary Curtis, Hermon, N. Y.; Anna Phillips Nagle, Minneapolis, Minn.; Leonard T. Haight, Syracuse, N. Y.; William B. Phillips, Toledo, O.; Thurber C. Phillips, Long Island City, N. Y.; Mary Helen Winegar, Syracuse, N. Y.; Ruth Winegar, Nutley, N. J.; Josephine Broadwell, Fulton, N. Y.; Mary A. Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Eleanor Barnes Tamlyn, Custer City, S. Dak.; George H. Phillips, Stockbridge, Mich.; Cyrus W. Phillips, Rochester, N. Y.; Florence C. Boddy, Rochester, N. Y., and to all other persons interested in the estate of Julia A. Broadwell late of the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, deceased, either as creditors, legatees, next of kin or otherwise, Send Greeting:

Upon the petition of Arvin Lewis Rice, of the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, the executor of said Julia A. Broadwell, deceased:

You and each of you are hereby cited to show cause before the Surrogate's Court of Oswego County, New York, at the Surrogate's Office in the City of Oswego, in said county, on the 31st day of July, 1916, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why the account of Arvin Lewis Rice as executor of said deceased should not be judicially settled and allowed, and such of you as are under age of twenty-one years are required to appear by your general guardian, if you have one; or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed; or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a special guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate's Court to represent and act for you in the proceeding.

In Testimony Whereof, We have caused the seal of the Surrogate's Court of the County of Oswego to be hereunto affixed.

(L.S.) Witness, Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of our said County of Oswego, at the City of Oswego, in the said County, the 26th day of June, A. D., 1916.

H. E. HINMAN,
Clerk of the Surrogate's Court.

This Summer "Vacation Land" means the

New England or Long Island Coast

Whether your vacation is "two weeks" or all summer, you'll enjoy every minute at the seashore. The noisy surf, the passing boats, the bathing, the sports—why not this year?

Through cars to New York and Boston, the gateways to Long Island and New England Resorts.

LOW SUMMER EXCURSION FARES

For information about tickets, time of trains and low excursion fares, and frequent 15-day excursions to Boston at one way fare plus $3 for round trip, consult local ticket agents.

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

For the Public Service

TO SERVE WITH DUCK.

The apple sauce which is served with the ducklings should be made from tart apples, cooked down until they are thick, but whipped until they are perfectly smooth and free from all lumps. The squash, after boiling, should be mashed and well seasoned with plenty of butter. The spinach may be cooked in the usual way, only do not cover it while boiling, as that fades it. After it is cooked it may be chopped, drained carefully, seasoned and panned, then served on a hot plate garnished with slices of hard boiled egg. The Maryland sweet potatoes are prepared in the usual way.

STRAWBERRY SHORTCAKE.

Sift together one pint of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, four teaspoonfuls of baking powder (level) and chop in two tablespoonfuls of butter. Wet with milk for a soft dough (about one-half cupful usually). Bake twelve minutes.

Split and butter and put the following between and on top: One cupful of crushed strawberries, one cupful of sugar, one beaten egg white. Beat all together until firm. Trim the top of cake with whole berries or some cut in halves and pour thick cream over the top.

WINE JELLY.

Directions How to Make This Delicacy For Your Dinner Dessert.

Half pint of lemon juice, one-fourth pint of sherry, one and one-fourth pints of water, one-half pound of cube sugar, one and one-half ounces of gelatin (unless in warm weather; then two ounces), whites and shells of two eggs. Peel the rind of the lemons very thin and put them in a clean saucepan which has been rinsed out with boiled water and not dried. Put in the sugar, gelatin and two-thirds of the liquid and stir gently until all are dissolved. Take the whites and shells of the eggs, the shells slightly crushed, add the rest of the liquid and whip until there is a froth on top. Then mix in with the gelatin and continue whipping until the whole froths well, but be sure to stop beating before it comes to a boil. Let it continue boiling gently for about five minutes, then leave to settle before straining. If you have not got a regular jelly bag strain through a double fold of cheesecloth, but whatever you use be sure to scald it well by pouring boiling water through before putting in the hot jelly. Empty the bowl under the jelly bag, drain well, but do not clog. Ladle the jelly into the cloth very gently, and do not do the straining in a cool place or in a draft, as it must be kept hot. If it is not quite clear at the first straining let it run through a second time.

75 years ago everyone wore homespun—and, likewise, everyone used hand-mixed paint. To-day, when machine-spun cloth is so much better and cheaper, no one would think of wearing homespun. Many people are still using hand-mixed paint, however, because they do not know that

DEVOE
THE GUARANTEED
LEAD AND ZINC PAINT
FEWER GALLONS – WEARS LONGER

will save them money and labor. Devoe Lead and Zinc Paint is simply made of the same ingredients the old-time painter used: Pure White Lead, Pure White Zinc, and Pure Linseed Oil. The only difference is that Devoe is mixed by machinery, 500 gallons at a time. Therefore, it is always absolutely uniform in strength, color and covering capacity.

We guarantee Devoe Lead and Zinc Paint to be pure. We know it contains no whiting, silica or other worthless materials. Stop in and ask for Color Card.

L. P. SMITH COMPANY
PLUMBING, TINNING, WINDOWS, DOORS, LEHIGH VALLEY COAL
FULTON, N. Y.

OUR DEPOSITORS KNOW

that the First National Bank gives the most careful attention to their financial interests and desires in every way to show its appreciation of their patronage by making its service more useful.

CHECKING ACCOUNTS ARE INVITED

Ninetieth Semi-Annual Statement of the

FULTON SAVINGS BANK

Fulton, New York

July 1, 1916

ASSETS

Market Value

Real Estate Mortgages	$1,587,514 71
Bond Investments (market value)	682,996 74
Banking House	28,687 50
Money on hand and deposited in other banks	263,635 05
Accrued Interest	46,923 81
Other Assets	5,560 00
	$2,615,317 81

LIABILITIES

Deposits	$2,426,733 98
Other Liabilities	20 00
Guarantee Fund	188,563 83
	$2,615,317 81

Money deposited with us by July 5th will draw dividends from the 1st.

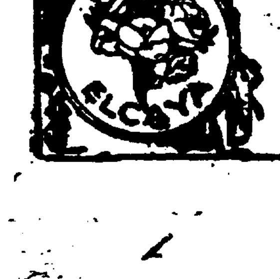
Old Home Week Novelties

Although Old Home Week will soon be ended, the recollections of friendships renewed will remain fresh for years. What could be more appropriate for the occasion than a gift of some small, jewelry novelty from among our large and varied stock?

We are showing lockets, bracelets, pendants, scarf pins, shaving sets and countless others. The quality is unquestionable and the prices very reasonable.

WM. C. MORGAN, Jeweler

The Hallmark Store — Quirk Theatre Building



A Skin Like Velvet smooth, clear, free of wrinkles

Use the exquisitely fragrant cream of the beauty flower of India and be complimented on your complexion. Your dealer has Elcaya or will get it.

CRÊME ELCAYA

About the Town

Miss Mary Mayo, of Geneva, has returned to her home after spending several days visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hewitt, 314 Cayuga street.

* * *

Mr. Clarence Hewitt has returned to his home in Geneva, after spending the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hewitt, of Cayuga street.

* * *

Mr. Ralph Waught, of Chester, Pa., is home for a few days.

* * *

Mr. Clinton Himes, of Detroit, Mich., is home for the week.

* * *

Mrs. Ben E. Paige, of Kansas City, Mo., has arrived to make her home in this city.

* * *

Mr. Roy Van Alstyne, of Detroit, Mich., is home for the week. Mr. Van Alstyne was identified with its Independent baseball team of this city for some time.

* * *

Mr. Ralph Seymour is home from Groton, N. Y., where he has been connected with the Corona Typewriter Co.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Finch left for Springfield, Mass., this morning where they will be permanently located. They were called here by the death of thir daughter, Miss Gertrude Finch.

* * *

Mr. James Connors, of Detroit, Mich., is visiting friends here.

* * *

Mr. Harold Distin, of Syracuse, is visiting friends here.

* * *

Mr. Harold Caffrey has arrived home from Princeton Preparatory school.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Plumb, of Detroit, Mich., are visiting Mrs. Mattie Barker, of Rochester street.

* * *

Mr. Julius Kamp returned yesterday from a visit with friends in Utica, N. Y.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewis, of Homer, celebrated the Fourth at the home of his sister, Mrs. Grank Kellogg.

* * *

Miss Ruth Sylvester, of Syracuse, is spending a few days with Miss Mildred Kellogg.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Croake, of New York city, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Youmans. Mr. Croake is an old Fultonian, having lived here twenty years ago. Since then he has been in the employ of the New York Amrican Newspaper.

* * *

Miss Rena Burt and Miss Mae Scott, of Hannibal, were the guests of friends yesterday.

* * *

ex-Assemblyman I. K. Smith and family, of the third district, of Syracuse, are the guests of Mrs. James Keeler, of Oneida street.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Patrick, of North Rose, are spending a few days with their parents in this city.

* * *

Mr. Charles Finch left for Springfield, Mass., yesterday, where he will be permanently located.

* * *

Mr. Albert La Porte and daughter, Helen, from Springfield, Mass., are guests of Mrs. William LaPorte, of Hannibal street.

* * *

Mrs. Sarah Brown, of West First street, gave a house party yesterday at which her son Frank Brown and wife of Syracuse attended.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Newman Ellis, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Bennett, of Oneida street, have returned to Buffalo today, making the trip by auto.

* * *

Miss R. Sylvester, of Syracuse, is visiting Miss Marjorie Pratt, of Pratt street.

* * *

Mr. William Taft has returned from the Forest Ranger school at Wannekenna, N. Y., where he has been located.

* * *

Mrs. Georgetta Foster Shaver, of Syracuse, N. Y., is the guest of friends in this city.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Darrow, who is now residing at Syracuse, was entertained by friends yesterday in Fulton.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dolbear, of Syracuse, are now visiting in Fulton.

* * *

Raymond Clapp, a former Fultonian, is the guest of friends during Old Home Week.

* * *

Miss Sarah Hill, who has been the guest of Miss Lucile Stanley, left today for Baldwinsville, where she will spend a few days with Miss Mary Wells.

* * *

Ralph Waugh returned yesterday to Chester, Pa., to resume work.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Cary, of Buffalo, are the guests of relatives this week. Mr. Cary stated that he had difficulty in motoring here owing to the large quantity of rainfall which occurred in that section.

* * *

The numerous friends of Thomas Sullivan, probably better known in Fulton as "Timmie," will be pleased to learn that he has resigned his position with the Standard Oil Company and has returned to the United States. Mr. Suulivan has purchased a half interest in a musical comedy show and is making good. The show consists of one hundred people and played last week in one of the prominent theatres in Buffalo.

* * *

Mrs. Willis Dutcher and daughter, Antoinette, of Phoenix, are visiting relatives in Fulton.

* * *

Miss Ethel Fried, of Yonkers, N. Y., has returned to her home from a visit with friends in Fulton.

* * *

Miss Lena Schwartz, of Mount Siani Hospital, of New York, has returned home from a visit with Miss Lillian Waldhorn.

* * *

Miss Fannie Weiner, of Oswego, is the guest of friends here during Old Home Week.

* * *

Robison E. Adkins, of Pine Hill is in Fulton spending Old Home Week with his brother, H. W. Adkins, City Chamberlain.

* * *

Sanford Davis, of Ilion, N. Y., spent the Fourth of July with his parents.

* * *

Raymond Clapp, of New York city, is in the city for the week.

* * *

LOCAL ....

The many friends of Mrs. Hattie Elliott will be pleased to learn that she has recovered from her recent illness.

* * *

Miss Marguerite Zahm, of Syracuse, daughter of Michael Zahm, head of the Haberle Brewery of Syracuse, and Miss Mary Mahaney, of Oswego, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. James L. Jones, of Rochester street, for Old Home Week.

* * *

Rufus LaBeef, of Seneca Falls, is the guest of his mother in this city.

* * *

Miss Hazel Hart, of Utica, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Hart, of South Seventh street.

* * *

Mrs. A. L. Hall and Mrs. William Pierce, spent yesterday in Syracuse.

LOOK GOOD—FEEL GOOD

No one can either feel good nor look good while suffering from constipation. Get rid of that tired, draggy, lifeless feeling by a treatment of Dr. King's New Life Pills. Buy a box to-day, take one or two pills tonight. In the morning that stuffed, dull feeling is gone and you feel better at once. 25c. at your druggist.

SHIPPER—McCOLLUM.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Margarite Marie McCollum, to George H. Shipper, of Midvale, N. J., which took place June 28th.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McCollum, of 366 Park street, and is a graduate of the Fulton High School and the state normal school, of Oswego, and has been a teacher in the New Jersey schools for the past three years. The groom is the son of Dr. Shipper, of Midvale and an electrical engineer. After an extended honeymoon going by automobile through the Berkshires, they will make their future home in New York.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Cure fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

BUNDY'S CROSSING.

Mrs. Jane Wells is spending some time at Sandy Creek.

* * *

Mrs. Blanch Echard and daughter, Catherine, Mrs. Carrie Dodge, Mrs. Bell Cavalier and Mrs. Claude Echard called on Mrs. Byron Wells the past week.

* * *

Mrs. Fannie Dodge is suffering from a slight stroke.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Simons were at Mrs. C. J. Echards, on Sunday.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Claude Echard autoed to Sandy Creek on Sunday.

* * *

Mrs. Byron Wells is able to be out again.

* * *

Mrs. Alice Coe called on Mrs. Allen Dewey the past week.

* * *

Mrs. Carrie Dodge and Clarabell Congdon were in Fulton on Thursday.

* * *

Some from here are picking berries at Byron Porter's in Scriba.

* * *

Mr. Benjamin Congdon is going to begin picking his bed on Monday.

* * *

A number from here attended the circus at Fulton on Thursday.

* * *

Mr. Lee Kennedy, of East Minetto and Edith Dodge spent Sunday with Mrs. Lottie Reickert.

Bowel Complaint in Children.

Mrs. Margaret Perry, Utica, N. Y., says, "When my son, now grown, was four years old he had a dreadful attack of bloody dysentery, and was so sick that the doctors gave him up to die. A neighbor who knew what a wonderful medicine Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is advised me to give it to him. It is a great medicine and can certainly be relied upon in cases of bowel trouble."

For sale by all dealers.

GRANBY CENTER.

Haying has commenced.

* * *

Mr. Charles Allen is home from Chicago, where he has been visiting his daughter.

* * *

Mr. James Murphy's children are ill with mumps.

* * *

The ice cream social which was held on the church lawn on Friday last was largely attended. The proceeds were over forty dollars.

* * *

Mrs. Della Darrow is ill.

* * *

The Ladies' Aid Society will meet with Mrs. Walter Bush, Friday, July 7.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse King and family spent Sunday with friends in South Hannibal.

* * *

During the severe electric storm of Sunday afternoon the blacksmith shop was struck by lightning and one side demolished.

* * *

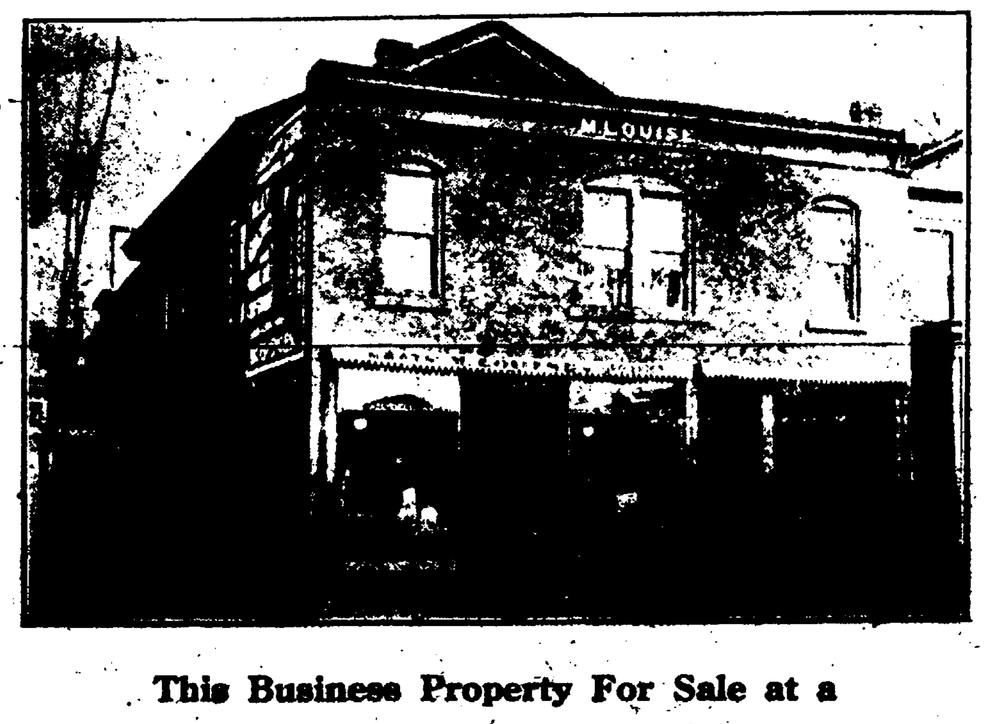
Mr. Edward Davis and bride and Mr. Claire Stringer, of Bay City, Mich., are visiting at Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Davis.

The Ever-Ready Storage Battery Service Station

Use the battery that is guaranteed—a storage battery to fit any car. Recharging and repairing of batteries given prompt attention.

We have the largest recharging plant in the city.

DUTCHER MACHINE CO.



This Business Property For Sale at a Bargain. Inquire of M. LOUISE, Agt., 37 South Second Street, Fulton, N. Y.

"Onyx" Hosiery

You Get GOOD Value at ANY Price—Silk, Lisle or Cotton 25c to $5.00 per pair

Emery-Beers Company, Inc.

WHOLESALE 153-161 EAST 24th ST. NEW YORK

For Sale by C. A. BECKWITH, Shoes
FULTON, N. Y.

SOUTH GRANBY.

After two or three days of nice weather we are once more having showers and we certainly had some of them Sunday. About six o'clock it was very dark and we had wind and rain, but not as much rain as went around us, but the wind did considerable damage, but probably not as much to the crops as it would later, but broke limbs from trees.

* * *

Mr. Franklin Jierce and family arrived from Olean Friday, to visit Mr. Elmer Fisher.

* * *

Mr. James Blakeman moved a week ago today into the house vacated by Mr. Pingree, and Mr. Brice moved into Mr. Sperbeck's house Saturday. Mr. Sperbeck's goods went last week and they expect to follow today for Detroit.

* * *

Mr. Hume Hunter and family left last week for Detroit.

* * *

A surprise party was tendered to Mrs. Minnie Wybson, last Thursday evening, it being her birthday. When about fifty of her friends came in with refreshments to spend the evening with her.

* * *

A picnic was held at Alonzo Hannon's Saturday, it was an ideal day and was in honor of Mrs. Anna Foster and Mrs. Emma Stebbins' birthday. A table was set under the trees on the lawn and a chicken pie dinner with lots of extras followed by cake, one with twenty-nine candles, all lit came on the table; another trimmed in flags. Strawberries and cream came on with other fruit and a very enjoyable time was had by all. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Hannum, her sister, Mrs. Jennie Freenfield and her father, Mr. S. E. Rowlee, Mr. and Mrs. Myron Foster and son, Leon; Mrs. Emma Stebbins and her sister, Mrs. Maude Blake and husband, Mr. David Blake, Mr. John Rowlee, wife and little grandson, Wilson Vanwie, Mr. Raey Austin and family and his mother, Mrs. H. Austin and others.

* * *

Mrs. Anna Dickenson is driving a new Maxwell car.

* * *

Miss Essie Wilcox attended the graduating exercises in Baldwinsville last week, when her cousin, Doris Garrett graduated.

* * *

Mrs. Mary Brennan and her daughter, Mary, visited at Fred Andrews one day last week and Leattie Andrews accompanied them home.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Burt Greenfield are visiting Mr. A. L. Hannum.

* * *

Mr. James Howard is spending a few days at Fred Andrews.

For old sores of any kind apply Hanford's Balsam. It will reduce the inflammation and the sore will gradually disappear. Use it for the hard cases.—Adv.

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

INGALL'S CROSSING.

Mrs. O. J. Dexter was called to Jordan, Monday, to attend the funeral of her aunt.

* * *

Walter Waffle is home from Massachusetts.

* * *

Jennie Smith, who has bten spending a year with her uncle in Barnesville, Ohio, came home this morning.

* * *

We were visited by a severe electrical storm Sunday afternoon accompanied by wind and some hail, at six o'clock one needed a lamp lighted to see.

* * *

L. B. Babcock is able to ride out a short distance on pleasant days.

* * *

Cora Morehouse received a letter from her brother Levi S. Morehouse, Monday morning, he joined the militia of Tennessee and has been promoted to first sargeant. They are stationed at Nashville and drilling at present, expecting to be called to the border any time. His many friends here hope he will not be called to the front.

* * *

E. M. Hopkins and sons, Raymond and Glen visited the former's father, at Wellwood, Thursday.

* * *

E. T. Henry entertained friends from out of town over Sunday.

* * *

Mrs. Sarah Chamberlain, of Canada, is visiting her brother Walter Waffle.

* * *

Mr. A. Churchill and family are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Barnes and son and daughter from Canton, St. Lawrence County.

* * *

Merle Scudder, of Fulton, was an over Sunday guest of his cousin, Gerald Davis.

The Bane of Prosperity.

About the time the average family merges into prosperity the older members begin to be troubled with indigestion and constipation. J. W. Spencer, Chittenango, N. Y., writes, "When I get bilious, have headache and feel out of sorts, I take two or three of Chamberlain's Tablets and they fix me up all right."

For sale by all dealers.

Boys, Look Out For Green Apples

Lester Wolroth had a very severe attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating green apples. His mother, Mrs. Pearl Wolroth, Herkimer, N. Y., says, "I was advised to give him Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which I did, and the relief from the first was very great. After taking three doses he was all right."

For sale by all dealers.

JACKIES SANNOT LAND TO SPEND MONEY IN CANADIAN PORTS

(By United Press)

For William, Ont.—Merchants here and at Port Arthur today bumped up against a new hardship of the European war. Under military regulations, they found when navigation opened, the gay sailor lads from the U. S. A., docking here, are not allowed to land. Thus thousands of dollars formerly spent in these Canadian ports by the boys will go to Duluth and Superior.

U. S. PAYS A MILLION AND GETS TITLE TO ALASKAN RAILROAD

(By United Press)

Washington—One more big step was taken in the development by Uncle Sam of Alaska today when he paid the final $1,000,000 for title to the Alaska Northern Railroad.

Five hundred thousand dollars of the million and a half purchase price was paid last February.

Today's payment marks the transfer of the title to the property from the original owners to the American government. From the time of the first payment until the final payment today the title has been in the hands of a trust company here.

This final payment is the forerunner of the actual opening of the coal lands of Alaska to settlers this fall.

Secretary of the Interior Lane doesn't know exactly when this opening will be announced, but it is expected to be before early winter sets in.

The Matanuska coal fields of Alaska are among the richest in the world; and the small miner is to be given a chance to make a living and a competence from small claims Uncle Sam will parcel out.

The government has carefully guarded these coal lands from monopolization by big holding companies. In stopping the development of all claims, regardless of who held them, just to be sure to keep the lands from being monopolized, Uncle Sam has stood up so straight he has bent over backward. Hundreds of small investors will welcome the opening of the fields.

Work begun on the extension and improvement of the government railroad line to the heart of the coal fields is being rushed to completion by thousands of laborers. Some of these groups of workers have built new towns on their way up the line.

The line should be completed by the end of this year from Anchorage to Matanuska. From there it is to be pushed on up from Matanuska river through the Susitna valley.

Secretary Lane said today he considered the Alaska Northern a good investment at $1,500,000 because the actual value of the property; it's cost, that is to say, to the men who built it originally, was $2,750,00.

Mrs. Morris Finds a Cure for Rheumatism

"I suffered from rheumatism in my knee for over a week last winter," writes Mrs. Frank Morris, Jamesville, N. Y. "It kept me awake at night and the pain was sometimes dreadful. I obtained a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment. After the second application I rested comfortably all night, and by applying it for a few days I was cured."

For sale by all dealers.

CLERGYMEN, AUTHORS, DOCTORS ASK WORK OF EMPLOYMENT BUREAU

(By United Press)

San Francisco—Clergymen, authors, doctors and consular agents are among those who apply for "any kind of work" at the State Free Employment bureau here.

Dr. Edwin Fishet, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania and former practitioner of medicine and dentistry, is on the rolls as asking for clerical employment. He got a taste of writing while translating some oriental works and does not care to go back to doctoring.

Another strange case is that of Rev. Charles L. Hyde, of Niles, Cal., who wants to give up his pastorate at the First Congregational church there and go to work as a farm hand or on a poultry ranch.

G. Levy, Mexican vice consul here when Madero was president of Mexico, now seeks a job as a clerk, and Professor T. R. Holmer, of Oakland, "human science expert," author of books telling how to fit a man to a vocation, now seeks work as a common laborer.

UNCLE SAM THROWS OPEN 350,000 ACRES OF LAND IN RAFFLE

(By United Press)

Spokane, Wash.—Land offices were thrown open today for those who want to participate in one of Uncle Sam's last great land raffles.

Approximately 350,000 acres, comprising the south half of the Colville Indian reservation, will be divided into 160 acre ranches and turned over to settlers who hold the lucky numbers after the drawing July 27.

Registration books opened today in Spokane, Wenatchee, Wilbur, Republic, Omak and Colville, Wash. They will close July 22, and a week later the lucky numbers will be drawn out, entitling the holder to a choice of 160 acre tracts.

The Colville reservation is less than fifty miles from Spokane. It extends from the Columbia river on the east and south to the Okanegan river on the west. It is about seventy miles east and west, and forty miles north and south.

The elevation varies from 1,000 to 6,000 feet.

Stock raising probably will become the greatest industry of the land thrown open to entry.

THE QUIRK TODAY.

Inez Valenti, a beautiful Spanish woman, is the niece of Grant Thorne, who runs a gambling house, and acts as a lure for her uncle. Barry King becomes infatuated with her, and this gives her a violent aversion to the life she has been living "behind closed doors." Elsa Montfort, daughter of the judge, is saddened by King's attentions to the Spanish woman. Thorne also becomes jealous of King, they fight in the gambling house, Thorne is shot, and King throwing the pistol away, runs, but is caught. Elsa has seen the affair and tells her father who takes her to the police station, where she identifies Barry among the other prisoners. Inez is in despair when she learns that there was a witness of the affair whom the State has in charge, and refuses to leave the city while he is in danger.

She sends for Elsa, and tries to bribe her to keep silent, but on refusal offers her a glass of wine which has been drugged, but Elsa breaks the glass and escapes.

Inez tries to get Barry to jump his bail, but Elsa pleads with him to stay and fight it out. This he agrees to do, and writes to Inez telling her he loves Elsa. Inez in despair, writes out a full confession of her life, and declares that she and not Barry killed Thorne, Barry having kept silent as to having taken the pistol from her in order to avoid incriminating her. Elsa is again called to the house of mystery, and reads the confession. When she has finished reading she phones to the District Attorney and together they go to Inez's room in the house of mystery and find her a suicide.

TELLS EDUCATORS NEGRO RACE NEEDS VOCATIONAL TRAINING

(By United Press)

New York—Preparedness for war and peace, the education of negroes and alien population are the key notes of today's session of the National Education Association here. G. Stanley Hall, president of Clark University, Worcester, Massachusetts, addressed the association on "The Present War and Education." He declared that the training which best fits for efficiency in times of peace should be emphasized in our programs of education. Fanny Fern Andrews, secretary of the American school peace league, Boston, advocated peace with honor at any price.

She declared "Nothing is more conspicuous in the present war than the sensitiveness of the belligerents to the charges of violations of treaties and the established laws of nations.

"The combined action of modern powers represented generally by the head conferences has developed this sense of responsibility—a great step in world progress. On those who administer education in this critical time rests the responsibility of preserving and advancing those ideals for which all civilized nations are striving, and especially have the teachers of this nation an important part to play."

Hollis B. Frissell, principal of the Hampton Normal and Industrial Institute, Hampton, Virginia, spoke on "The Education of the Negro" in which he especially emphasized the need of specific vocational train as the secret of educating the negro race. "The Education of the Alien" was discussed by John H. Finley, of New York, state commissioner of education. Dr. Finley advocates the teaching of languages, efficiency in trades and occupations, better home conditions, and the emphasis of the highest American ideals. Homer H. Geerley, president of the Iowa State Teachers College of Cedar Falls, advocated national aid for all forms of vocational education.

Other associations meeting today with the National Education Association are: American school hygiene association; federation of state teachers association; the league of teachers associations; the American home economics association; the national council of the teachers of English and the American posture league. Eight hundred leading educators of the association were guests at the luncheon given at the Waldorf Astoria in honor of David B. Johnson, president of the association, by the Department of School Administration.

E. B. Hall, of Wellsville, N. Y., has sold Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh for forty-five years. Several other druggists have handled it from thirty to fifty years.—Adv.

Scene From "LOVE'S CROSSROADS" at The Quirk Theatre Today.

A HACKING COUGH WEAKENS THE SYSTEM

Don't suffer with a hacking cough that has weakened your system—get a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, in use over 40 years, and benefiting all who use it, the soothing pine balsam with tar heal the irritated air passages—soothes the raw spots, loosens the mucous and prevents racking the body with coughing. Dr. King's New Discovery induces natural sleep and aids nature to cure you.

COMMON COUNCIL MEETING

President Frank Quirk presided at Monday night's meeting of the Common Council, in the absence of Mayor Lewis.

Only two business items were transacted, one in regard to the advertisement for the sale of bonds and the other a vote of thanks to J. J. Jordan in furnishing electricity for lighting the "Fulton Bids You Welcome" sign on top of the City Hall.

MISS LEWIS IN THE LEAD

According to the latest report, Miss Greta Lewis is said to be leading the contestants for the position of "Queen of Old Home Week." A close race is assured as all the young ladies entered are very popular.

Liverymen recommend Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh as a valuable remedy to be always kept on hand.—Adv.

ADVERTISED LETTERS

The following letters remain uncalled for at the Post Office, July 5, 1916. Inquirers will please say advertised.

Men—Oliver Comstock, James Davis, Eugene Jefferson, Polly LaRue, Frank Lathrop, C. C. Rogers, Charley Sturdevant, Arch. Tompkins, George Wolf, E. D. Wisner, William Youngs.

Women—Miss Lena Barker, Miss Margie Congdon, Miss Pearl Holmes, Mrs. Ira Cobb (2), Mrs. E. A. Davis, Mrs. Charles C. Dwight, Mrs. Ellen G. Shute.

Adrian Garcia, Thomas Kapuscinski.

About the Town

On display in the window of Hulett and Taft's Paint and Picture store, on Oneida street, are found the pictures of members of the Masonic Lodge which were taken about fifty years ago. They are known as Fulton Chapter F. and A. M., No. 167.

* * *

Miss Dorothy Allen has been confined to her home on account of sickness.

* * *

Much credit should be given our local police force in their success at handling the crowd yesterday. Fully fifteen thousand people thronged the public thoroughfare and the efficiency which the traffic squad and patrolmen handled the situation was excellent. Not an accident occurred to mar the day. Plain clothesmen and special police were in action and all deserve credit for their good work.

For mosquito bites and any poisoned wound, apply Hanford's Balsam to kill the germs. Always have it on hand.—Adv.

Catching on to Dad.

Eddie—Let's sneak round behind the barn an' smoke a cigarette.

Sammy—Too likely to get caught. Ever since dad swore off he's been sneaking around there to smoke his own.—Judge.

THOSE PTOMAINES

What a Housewife Should Do to Prevent Them.

GIVE PERFECT REFRIGERATION

Dangers That Lurk In Food Left Standing on the Kitchen Table—Shellfish and Clams Make Especially Good Poisons In the Summertime.

The hot and often muggy days of summer seem just the ones to develop in certain foods definite bacteria which cause symptoms of pain, chilliness, subnormal temperature and thirst. These may continue for a somewhat extended period and are particularly dangerous because the after effects of the poisoning are often severe.

Ordinary colic or intestinal fermentation is not the true poisoning, which is due to fermentation or imperfect digestion.

There are certain foods especially susceptible to the development of ptomaines, such as meat, game, fish and milk or its products. Shellfish, and particularly clams, are possibly the most common cause.

But the development of ptomaines (which, by the way mean "derived from a dead body") is not due to any qualities in the foods themselves, but to lack of care in handling them. Some persons think that contact with tin or galvanized surfaces is the cause, as in ice cream. This has not been definitely settled. The chief and accepted cause is change of temperature in food products before they are used and careless storage either on the part of dealer or housewife.

In spite of all that has been said on the subject of care of the refrigerator, sanitary handling and cleanliness, many of us are not 100 per cent rigorous in the way we treat foods before they reach our table. Probably the reason why shellfish are most frequently the cause is because these are very seldom subjected to complete refrigeration, but are allowed to stand about in bags in whatever temperature happens to prevail.

In order to prevent the development and danger from ptomaines we must first oversee and insist on state and municipal strictness in all handling of food products, particularly milk. The second step is so to handle food when it is within our own four walls that our own home conditions cannot encourage this poisoning.

Food left lying even a half hour on the kitchen table, a refrigerator which registers above 50, unclean utensils—any one of these may be the cause of the ptomaine developing. Especially with all canned goods and canned and smoked meats should we exercise the greatest care. Remove the contents from a can as soon as it is opened. Place at once in refrigerator or, better, allow the can to stay in the refrigerator for some hours before it is opened.

It is worth noting that the bacteria that develop the ptomaines do not always develop putridity or decay—that is, we can eat a food in a high state of preservation and still be subject to ptomaines. Scrupulous care and as perfect refrigeration all the way from the time the food was first handled until the last are the only preventives.

ENTERTAINED AT LUNCHEON

Miss Morgan Uses Novel Method of Announces Engagement.

Miss Ruth Morgan entertained a few of her intimate friends at luncheon July 4th. The suspicions of the guests were aroused when they entered the dining room which was a bower of pink roses. Suspended over the center of the table was a pink basket from which white ribbons extended to each guest's place. When the ribbons were drawn, they revealed tiny double hearts, containing snap shots of the hostess and her fiance, Mr. Curtiss Austin. At the same time Miss Morgan was found to be wearing a beautiful solitaire.

HOTEL ARRIVALS YESTERDAY

Clark House—F. L. Mook, Syracuse; D. N. Elder, Syracuse; A. R. Wey, Monerson, Pa.; P. McFarland, Hannibal, N. Y.; M. E. Brown, Hannibal, N. Y.; James H. Senden, Oswego; H. E. Toomey, Syracuse; Batt Johnston, Richland; William F. Galvin, Providence, R. I.; W. E. Doty, Rome, N. Y.; Paul Nugent, Seneca Falls; George Farrell, Seneca Falls; F. Fibbens and wife, Skaneatlas; H. E. Ward, Oneida; D. Thomas, Potsdam; Miss Helen Winters, Kansas City, Mo.; A. M. LaPorte, Springfield, Mass.; Helen LaPorte, Springfield, Mass.; Emil David, Consul, Fnrich, Switzerland; L. R. Adams, Ira, N. Y.; J. B. Burt, Yonkers; Gene Ryan, Utica.

The Pepper Vine.

The most common and widely used of all spices is pepper. It is a native of the East Indies, but is now cultivated in various parts of the tropical belt of this hemisphere. The plant is a climber and has a smooth stem sometimes twelve feet long. The fruit is about the size of a pea and when ripe is of a bright red color. In cultivation the plant is supported by poles. In some localities small trees are used instead of poles, for the best pepper is grown in a certain degree of shade.

QUIRK THEATRE
Continuous 2 to 10:30
Matinee 5c. Night: Balcony 5c. Main Floor 10c

TODAY—
Marie Empress in
"LOVE'S CROSS ROADS"
5-Part Equitable Feature.
Hearst-Vitagraph News.

THURSDAY—
Bruce McRae and Gerda Holmes in
"THE CHAIN INVISIBLE"
5-Part Equitable Feature.
International News No. 51

FRIDAY—
Kitty Gordon in
"AS IN A LOOKING GLASS"
5-Part World Feature.
4—ACTS VAUDEVILLE—4

FOR SALE
I BEAMS, new and second-hand all sizes. Also PULLEYS, second-hand, MACHINERY, PIPE and all sizes of IRON PLATES.
Inquire of
I. ALDERMAN
Schuyler Street
Office Phone 2242 Res. Phone 1368

FOR SALE
Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.
Ready for Prompt Delivery
Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

INSURANCE — REAL ESTATE
Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING AND HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second St.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Lost—A small purse containing two keys attached by red string. Return to Foley's Restaurant, and receive reward. 475c

Wanted—Good bright boy, over 16 years of age, to learn the printing trade. Apply at the Evening Times. tf

Wanted—At No. 216 Utica street, a girl for general housework. No washing or ironing. tf

Rooms To Rent—Two apartments over Geisler's store. Apply Lewis' Cigar Store. tf

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

Wanted—Competent girls for general housework. Apply 208 South Fourth Street. 475

Teamster Wanted—Steady work winter and summer; good wages. John W. Pratt farm. tf

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

For Sale Cheap—A small white cobb, saddle and driving horse, weight 825 pounds, safe for ladies and children to ride or drive. Mrs. G. W. Briggs, North East River Road. Phone 2237.

Young Men Wanted to learn the restaurant business. Those who have had experience in some kind of clerking preferred. Employment in our New York restaurants, $7 or $8 per week with board to start. Railroad fare erimbursed after having been in our service for six months. Good opportunity for the right young men to become managers in a reasonable length of time. Apply in person or by mail to H. Morris, Supt., care of Thompson's Restaurant, Grand Central Station, New York city.

Where They Excelled.

He—I don't see why you are always bragging about your family. Its members have never done anything. She—Well, even that helps some. The members of your family have done everything.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

A Painted Eye

It Was Too Expressive For Its Natural Mate.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Far back in the days when the king of England claimed to be king of France, and when as a consequence the French and the English were at continual warfare, there lived on French soil in what is now the department of Mayenne a gentleman and his wife of the name of Castilleux. There was born to this couple a son who from his earliest infancy was a very beautiful child. Even when he was between one and two years old he attracted the attention of all who saw him. His most noticeable feature was a pair of large expressive eyes of heaven's own blue. In those days artists were painting pictures of the Madonna and child, and for many such studies little Gaston Castilleux served as a model.

When Gaston was fourteen years old he was out hunting one day with a party of boys, and one of his companions, seeing his brown doublet through a break in the leaves of the trees, mistook it for a deer and let fly an arrow, which struck Gaston in one of his eyes. So severe was the wound that the surgeon who attended him decided the eye must be taken out.

Great was the grief of the boy's parents at having the beauty of their son thus marred. Until the wound had healed he wore over the place where the eye had been a patch. Then his mother bethought herself of providing an artificial eye for her darling. That was a time before the remarkable work in glass and pottery of the present day had been achieved, and the only way to procure a glass eye was to have the glass molded or ground in proper shape and painted. Indeed, there was an advantage in this because an artist could the better match the real eye.

Mme. Castilleux announced that she would give a prize of a thousand louis d'or for the best coloring of a glass eye for her son. Artists were as poor in those days as they are now, and there were a great many of them competing for the public favor. Such a prize was coveted, and artists came from far and near to compete for it. There were so many of them that only those who had achieved a name were granted a sitting, for of course the object was to reproduce the real eye.

Among the throng of men who applied for permission to compete for the prize was a girl in the garb of a peasant. In those days women did not do men's work, and painting was considered a man's profession. Furthermore, the peasant girl could not claim to have achieved any reputation as an artist. Mme. Castilleux was about to send her away when Gaston came into the room where his mother was receiving candidates. Whether it was distress at the marring of such beauty or pity for him or some other reason, the maiden gave him a look so full of sympathy that he was determined she should compete for the prize. Turning to his mother, he expressed his desire. Mme. Castilleux was much concerned at this, for she had always been careful to keep her son from falling under the influence of any woman except of high rank, since she feared a misalliance. Besides, under the coarse peasant's garb the girl wore was a rare beauty. The mother took her son aside and protested against a woman, one of such low degree and of no artistic reputation, being permitted to compete for the prize, but failed to move him, and the girl was accepted as a competitor. Her name was entered on the list as Clochette Boyer, and since sittings were given in order of application and Clochette was the last accepted she was to be assigned the last sitting.

Ten artists were to compete for the prize, and Mme. Castilleux chose three experts to award the prize, reserving the right, if she differed with them, to buy the work of any other artist. Though the sittings were not usually very long, Gaston tired at having to go through the process so many times. Then, too, several artists made two or three different attempts—they were not limited in this respect—and by the time the last competitor's turn came the subject was tired out. Of the earlier efforts the first was the best. After that Gaston began to weary and showed his weariness in the eye that was serving for a model, so that every attempt showed a more worn expression than the one before. Strange to say, the ninth was the best of all. The truth is Gaston was enduring all these tiresome sittings waiting for the peasant girl to try her hand. At the ninth sitting he was happy in the thought that the strain was nearly over and at the next he would have the companionship of the girl who had given him that welcome look of sympathy.

At last Clochette appeared with her brushes and palette. The change in Gaston's expression was marvelous. He forgot his weariness; he forgot his misfortune in the loss of his eye; he forgot everything except the girl who was looking alternately from her canvas to his face. She was not sufficiently experienced in her art to call out a pleasing expression by conversing with him on subjects that interested him, but she needed no such experience, for he chatted with her from the moment the sitting began until it ended. And when she had finished and he looked at the result of her work he said to her:

"It is excellent, but I think you can do better. Try again tomorrow."

When Mme. Castelleux was told that another sitting was to be granted the girl the next day she took fright at once, for Gaston told her that it was he who had suggested this. But Gaston had always been accustomed to having his own way, and, although his mother saw plainly that her son was falling in love with a peasant girl, she could do nothing to prevent it. She began to regret that she had brought about this ill fated competition.

At the next sitting Clochette did improve on what she had done the day before. Gaston was much pleased with the result of his suggestion and told her that he wished her to try every day until it became evident that she could do no better. When he informed his mother of this the poor woman was in despair. She had seen her son's beauty marred; now she saw him passing into an infatuation for a peasant girl. Knowing his strong will, she felt sure that a second misfortune no less to be dreaded than the first would befall him and his family.

Clochette painted a new eye every day, and every eye was better than the last. When Gaston was as much in love as it was possible for him to be there was no improvement in the work, and he told his mother that he was satisfied.

Then came the inspection of the work by the experts. Gaston was required to hold the artificial eyes in turn beside his real eye, beginning with the first eye painted. As he went down the list a tired expression appeared and increased until the ninth eye was reached, which showed an expression of relief. None of the eyes was satisfactory for this reason and one other. In Gaston's eye there was no tired look to match that in the artificial eye. Indeed, not one of the painted eyes was satisfactory.

Gaston, who regarded all this as preliminary to the remarkable work done by Clochette, was impatient to show the experts what she had accomplished. Clochette was present and as eager as he for the exhibition of the eye which she and Gaston had selected to compete for the award. Gaston at last was permitted to hold the eye next his own. A singular expression came over the faces of those who looked at him. While the painted eye expressed the quintessence of love, his real eye expressed triumph. The audience began to laugh when Clochette, seeing what neither she nor Gaston had seen before, attracted his attention to herself. Instantly the real eye as well as the false one looked love.

There is no expression in the human face that is more engaging than love. For the time being at least Clochette's work was a marvelous success. The two eyes matched not only in color, but in expression. The peasant's work, therefore, was the best, and the experts had no choice but to award her the prize. What was the astonishment of all when she declined to receive it, but expressed a wish that it should be given to one of the competitors, who was starving. When Gaston found that he could not persuade her to take it herself he respected her wish, and the money was given as she had indicated.

Then Clochette withdrew.

Gaston spent a month of misery trying to forget the peasant girl whom he loved, but whom it was not meet that he should marry. At last he could stand it no longer; he must at least have one more sight of her. He inquired among the neighbors as to where she lived, but none of them could inform him. Mounting his horse, he set out to look for her. He did not find her.

Now and again for weeks he went in quest of the girl he loved, always to return disappointed. One day he stopped at a chateau to ask for a little refreshment. A lady advanced to meet him who filled him with astonishment. She was Clochette.

And Clochette was as much surprised to see Gaston as he was to see her. They stood looking at each other for a time; then the girl's face broke into a smile.

"I had seen you," she explained after the first greetings, "and, having a taste for art, when I heard of the prize offered I wished to compete for it. Not wishing to do so as myself, I adopted the garb of a peasant."

"And why did you desire to help me? You would not accept the prize after you had won it."

A blush told the story far more effectively than words.

When Gaston returned to his home and announced to his mother that the peasant competitor for her prize was a lady and lived in a chateau Mme. Castilleux was as much astonished as he had been. Not only was she astonished, but relieved. She had noticed her son's dejection and believed that sooner or later he would find Clochette. Now she was not only pleased that he had found his love, but was not averse to the two making a match.

Marriage, especially in high life, in those days was arranged by the parents of the contracting parties. One day M. Castilleux drove up in his coach to the chateau of M. Latrobe and asked for the hand of his daughter, whose real name was Louise, for his son Gaston. Louise had already settled the matter, and all her father had to do was to give his consent and arrange for the settlements.

After the marriage young Mme. Castilleux painted an eye for her husband which matched his real eye under ordinary circumstances, and this eye he was obliged to make serve, for since no artificial eye can change with the expression of a real one, this one was not perfect.

FOR YOUNG FOLKS

A Sleepy Time Story That Is Both Interesting and Instructive.

DISCOVERY OF TREE PRUNING.

How a Wise and Hungry Old Animal Performed a Good Deed and at the Same Time Acquired a Square Meal. Interesting Items For Small People.

I am going to tell you tonight, said Uncle Ben to Polly Ann and little Ned, a story about

THE WISE DONKEY.

There was once a farmer who had a donkey, and, like most people who own donkeys, his master did not have a great deal of respect for his wisdom. One day the donkey showed him that he knew a great deal more than he was given credit for. At any rate, after this occasion the farmer thought him far wiser than a whole forest full of owls, who have ever been regarded as the wisest of feathered folk. But to begin at the beginning:

The hero of this tale—the donkey—was very hungry. His master, thinking him only a donkey, thought he did not know the difference between eating prickly thistles and something better. The donkey was very tired of thistles, and his stomach felt like the "old scratch" because of them. He gave a loud bray and before he got to the end of it—not farther than b-b-r, in fact—he saw the gate into the orchard was open. The donkey had always longed to go into this forbidden place, but the gate had been kept securely locked. His master could not lock the smell of the apples and pears from reaching the donkey's nose, though, and this smell made the donkey long more and more after the good things which grew there.

The donkey could scarcely believe his eyes or nose either, but the second glance showed him that his eyes had not deceived him. The gate was open; consequently the donkey was invited into the orchard. Once inside, he lost no time in sampling the fruit of a fine apple tree. You know how fond your pet pony is of a nice juicy apple. Well, you can imagine how a donkey who had been raised on thistles would regard a tree full of them. He ate and ate until no pig would have recognized him. Branch after branch came off the tree in Mr. Donkey's attempt to get the delicious apples. All went well until his master returned. When he saw what the donkey had done, poor donkey got the worst whipping that he had ever received in his life. The master almost cried, for his tree was ruined, and the apples were the finest ones he owned.

The year following, what was his surprise to see that the tree he had looked upon as ruined bore double as many apples as any other tree in the orchard. Besides this, the apples were finer and larger than any he had ever grown. He was ashamed of the way he had treated the donkey for his part in the scheme. He gathered a large basket of the apples and himself carried it to the poor donkey. Ever after this the farmer pruned all the trees in the orchard, and from so stupid an animal as a donkey the valuable process of pruning trees was discovered.

Jumbled Dinner.

"Oh," said Ruth, "I know what we will have at grandma's. There will be plapes, knipmup and cemni pies; yetruk, of course, with plenty of gyarv; reelcy and skiecoo, with ocfefe and drice to drink."

Answer.—Apples, pumpkin, mince, turkey, gravy, celery, cookies, coffee, cider.

One Summer Day.

Little rabbits in a row,
All dressed up, no place to go.
Said the tiny, frisky one:
"Let us go and take a run."

"Let's sit still," said t'other rabbit,
He who had the lazy habit.
"I know what to do," said Creepy,
"Sweet be our dreams, I'm sleepy."

A Pair of Pretty Boys.

The two young lads in the picture were snapped at the Piping Rock horse show, on Long Island, New York.

Photo by American Press Association.

JOHN AND KEMBLE TUCKER.

They are Masters John and Kemble Tucker of Newport, R. I., and they were gazing at a horse race when the photograph was taken.

A DOMESTIC ONE.

An Actress Expert at Cake Making and Salesmanship.

HOW SHE MADE LOVEBIRD PIE

For 25 Cents Miss Hedman Sold a Slice of Pastry to the Greatest Fletcherizer In the World at the Allies' Bazaar.

One of the many actresses who helped the allied bazaar at the Grand Central palace, New York, was Martha Hedman, the Swedish star.

Miss Hedman, who is the only actress who ever baked a cake in a glass dish, sold a piece of the delicacy to an elderly man who visited her booth, next to the authors and artists' booth. He was a little man with a fringe of hair as white as the serge suit he wore. A single medal stood out in bold relief on his left breast. He had given his quarter for the slice of cake so

Photo by American Press Association.

MISS MARTHA HEDMAN.

eagerly that Miss Hedman began extolling the virtues of a lovebird pie, a flaky crust over a glass bowl in which were two live birds, urging him to buy the pie and throwing in such an inducement as an autographed picture of herself. As she talked merrily on her visitor munched his cake, masticating each small bit thoroughly. At the end of several minutes he was still eating calmly, and as Miss Hedman glanced at the portion that remained undevoured there may have been just a suggestion of impatience in her eye. At any rate, her customer handed her his card, which read, "Horace Fletcher, A. M., Food Economist." Then it rushed across the actress' consciousness that the man fletcherizing his cake was he who had taken the joy out of life—and probably putting much health into it—for many by scaring them into eating slowly.

Baby Things.

In the craze for quilts baby's interests should not be neglected, as he will perhaps have more use than his elders for such a comfortable, even during the warmer months. A most effective modern version of the old time quilt is made of blue chambray, with a white band near the edge, which crosses at the corners. In the center of the quilt are three saucy bedtime babies in nighties, not forgetting the caps, and each carries a lighted candle. White chambray is used to depict this and is appliqued to the blue background. Extra touches of color are put in with embroidery outline. Below the figure runs the legend, "The Sandman Is Coming."

A toy that the baby will probably take to bed as well as play with in the daytime is a linen doll made by joining two tinted and embroidered pieces of material together to form the front and back of the doll and inclosing beans, for the character doll is really a bean bag.

Secret of French Frying.

The secret of successful French frying is to have the lard so deep that it entirely covers what you wish to fry and so hot that it will instantly form a crust over the entire surface of the article that is immersed in it. If further cooking is necessary the heat should immediately be reduced.

The best frying is done by plunging the article entirely in boiling fat. All too often French fried potatoes are merely slices softened in grease. Boiling grease does not enter articles plunged into it, but forms a crust on the surface which keeps out the fat. A well fried article, prepared in the French manner, will hardly soil the napkin on which it is laid. Either lard or drippings may be used for this purpose. Test the heat with a bit of bread an inch square. If it browns in one minute the heat is right.

Corn Chowder.

Fry a half pound of diced salt pork in a big saucepan until brown. Add one sliced onion and cook until light brown. Then add four sliced potatoes that have been parboiled ten minutes, a can of corn or corn cut from cob and a pint of boiling water. Cook until the vegetables are tender, then add a quart of rich milk, pepper, salt and a half dozen crackers which have been soaked in a little milk. Serve with a cracker on each dish of soup.

HOW

To Remove Painful Substances From Your Eye

Dust, cinder or other foreign matter may be removed sometimes by grasping the upper eyelashes and drawing the eyelid downward, allowing it in returning to come in contact with the lower lashes so that they may act as a broom or brush. If the foreign body is on the ball this will not remove it.

Frequently it is sufficient to rub the other eye vigorously. Thus by causing sympathetic movements of the injured eye an increase of tears may help to wash out the offending particle. Do not in any case rub the injured eye.

Some make a practice of inserting a flaxseed in the eye, the seed moving around and removing the foreign matter.

The best way to remove foreign matter is to hold a toothpick over the upper lid with one hand and with the other grasp the upper eyelashes and lift and bend the eyelid sharply back over the toothpick so that the inner pink surface is in plain sight.

Sharp eyes and good light, with perhaps the assistance of a magnifying glass, should defect the intruding particle, which should be removed by some sterile body if possible, such as sterilized gauze.

Occasionally for some time after the object has been removed there will be an irritation, giving the impression that the object is still there.

Swab the eyes with a solution of witch hazel and boiled water, equal parts, and this sensation soon passes.

REMOVE FACE BLEMISHES

Pimples, Blackheads, Acne, Tetter, Ring Worm and that dreaded Eczema can be permanently removed from your face and body by Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment. It is no longer necessary to go around with an unsightly complexion and suffer the pain and annoyance that goes with unsightly ailments. Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment is a time tried, guaranteed remedy, good for infants, adults and aged who suffer with skin ailments. Buy a box to-day, start using at once. Money back if not satisfied. 50c. at your druggist.

LOVE AND RESPECT.

The most essential thing in marriage is respect. It is above love, above compatibility. Respect will bring one through the most trying disagreements with no bruise on the soul, whatever wounds there may be in the heart. Therefore, men and women, never, never marry any one you don't really respect, however passionately you may love.

REDUCED FARES
NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

Alexandria Bay 2.50
(Including Tour of Islands)

Round Trip. Every Wednesday, Saturday, Sunday and Holiday to August 30th. Return limit same day.

Consult local ticket agents for time of trains and other information.

LEGAL NOTICES

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

State of New York, Office of the State Commission of Highways, Albany, N. Y.—Pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 30, Laws of 1909, as amended by Chapter 646, Laws of 1911, and Chapter 80, Laws of 1913, sealed proposals will be received by the undersigned at their office, No. 55 Lancaster Street, Albany, N. Y., at one o'clock p. m., on Wednesday the 12th day of July, 1916, for the improvement of the following highways:

Oswego County—Road No., 5408; name of road, Fulton City: East First Street; approximate length, 0.36.

Also on Friday, the 14th day of July, 1916, for the improvement of the following highway:

Road No., 1413; name of road, Hastings-Parish; approximate length, 2.04.

Maps, plans, specifications and estimates may be seen and proposals forms obtained at the office of the Commission in Albany, N. Y., and also at the office of Division Engineer, William M. Acheson, 433 So. Salina St., Syracuse, N. Y.

The especial attention of bidders is called to "General Information For Bidders" in the itemized proposal, specifications and contract agreement.

Proposals for each road or contract must be presented in a separate sealed envelope, endorsed on the outside with the name and number of the road or contract for which the proposal is made. Each proposal must be accompanied by cash or a certified check payable to the order of the State Commission of Highways for an amount equal to at least five per cent. of the amount of the proposal which such cash or check accompanies.

This cash or check will be held by the Commission until the contract and bond are duly executed.

The successful bidder will be required to give a performance bond for fifty per cent. of the contract, and a maintenance bond covering the wearing surface of all roads; except waterbound macadam and cement concrete pavements for twenty per cent. of the contract price of the items which comprise the wearing surface, such bonds to be executed by a surety company to be approved by the Commission; or a bond secured by the deposit of collateral securities to be approved by the Commission.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

EDWIN DUFFEY,
Commissioner.

I. J. MORRIS,
Secretary.

Notice to Creditors

IN PURSUANCE OF AN ORDER of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Bridget Gibbons, late of the City of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his office, No. 24 White Memorial Building, Syracuse, in the County of Onondaga, New York, on or before the 15th day of October, 1916.

Dated this 27th day of March, A. D., 1916.

EDWARD L. MOORE,
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of Bridget Gibbons, deceased.
WILLIAM H. BAMERICK,
Attorney for Executor,
24 White Memorial Bldg.,
Syracuse, N. Y.

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Sarah Hancock, late of the City of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at the law office of Claude E. Guile, 35 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 1st day of September, 1916.

Dated this 7th day of February, A. D., 1916.

Alden M. Hurd,
Executor.
Claude E. Guile,
Attorney for Executor,
35 South 1st st., Fulton, N. Y.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Clark Butts, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his law office No. 59 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 15th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 29th day of May A. D., 1916.

JAMES R. SOMERS,
Attorney for Administrator

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of D. P. Morehouse, jr., special Surrogate of the County of Oswego, N. Y., notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Frank R. Caldwell, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his office in the Village of Central Square, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 15th day of September, 1916.

Dated this 6th day of March, A. D., 1916.

HENRY D. COVILLE
Executor.

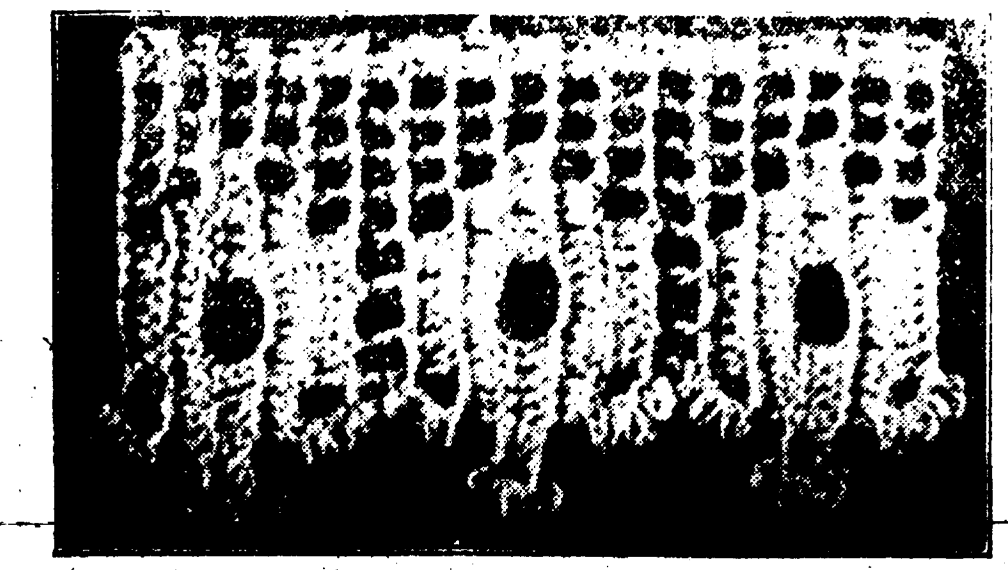
Notice to Creditors

In Pursurance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Clara A. Fredenburg, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at No. 59 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 23rd day of October, 1916.

Dated this 24th day of April, A. D., 1916.

JAMES R. SOMERS,
Attorney for the Administrator of the Estate of Clara A. Fredenburg, deceased.

A Simple Lace For Pickup Work This Summer



A VARIETY OF USES.

ABBREVIATIONS: ch., chain; d.c., double crochet; tr., treble.

Materials: Crochet cotton No. 24, and a No. 4½ steel crochet hook will make an edging 1½ inches wide.

Commence with 30 ch.

1st row—1 d.c. into sixth chain from hook, 5 ch., 1 d.c. into top of double crochet just made, 5 ch., 1 d.c. into top of last double crochet made, 2 ch., miss one stitch on foundation chain, 1 tr. into each of the next nine stitches; * 2 ch., miss two chain, 1 tr. into next; repeat from * three times; 1 tr. into each of the next two chain, 3 ch., turn.

2nd row—Miss one treble, 2 tr. on next two treble, 2 ch., 1 tr. on next treble, 2 ch., 1 tr. on next treble, 2 ch., 3 tr. into next hole, 9 tr. on nine treble, 3 tr. under loop of two chain before the three picots at end of previous row, 7 ch., turn.

3rd row—1 d.c. into fifth chain from hook, 5 ch., 1 d.c. into double crochet, 5 ch., 1 d.c. into double crochet last made, 3 tr. under the two chain immediately beside the triple picots, 1 tr. into each of the next five treble, 5 ch., miss five treble, 1 tr. into each of the last five treble, 3 tr. into adjacent hole, 2 ch., miss the treble beside hood, 1 tr. into next, 2 ch., 3 tr. at end of row (two on two treble and one into top of chain that turned), 3 ch., turn.

4th row—Miss one treble, 2 tr. on next two treble, 2 ch., 1 tr. on next treble, 2 ch., 1 tr. into first treble of group, 2 ch., miss two treble, 1 tr. into each of the next five treble, 5 tr. under loop of five chain, 1 tr. into each of the next five treble. 5 ch., turn.

5th row—1 d.c. into top of last treble made, 5 ch., 1 d.c. into double crochet, 5 ch., 1 d.c. into last double crochet made, 1 ch., miss three treble, 1 tr. into each of the next nine treble, 2 ch., miss two treble, 1 tr. into next, * 2 ch., 1 tr. on next treble; repeat from *; then 2 ch., 3 tr. at end, 3 ch., turn.

6th row—Miss one treble, 2 tr. on next two treble, * 2 ch., 1 tr. on next treble; repeat from * three times; 2 ch., miss two treble, 1 tr. into next, 2 ch., miss two treble, 1 tr. into next, 2 ch., 1 tr. into the one chain at end of group, 3 ch., turn.

7th row—1 d.c. into top of last treble made, 5 ch., 1 d.c. into double crochet, 5 ch., 1 d.c. into last double crochet made, 2 ch., 3 tr. into first space, 3 tr. into next space, 3 tr. into next space, 2 ch., miss the treble beside last group, 1 tr. into next, * 2 ch., 1 tr. on next treble; repeat from * then 2 ch., 3 tr. at end, 3 ch., turn; and repeat from commencement of second row.

Polka Dots Are Now Rivaling Stripes and Checks

HER HOUSE GOWN.

THIS quaint frock is especially appropriate for the season. The fabric is foulard, a cinnamon brown on a deep cream background. A bodice of rather old fashioned design has full sleeves, an organdie collar and ribbon girdle. What looks like braid on the full skirt is really an organdie piping outlining the polka dots.

Penzance and Oxford.

A curious coat of arms, dating back to early religious times, is that possessed by Penzance. The town is called Pen Sans on the corporation seal, and the coat of arms shows the head of John the Baptist on a charger.

Pen Sans is old Cornish for Holy Head, and so that the expression might be properly shown in the arms of the town the head of John the Baptist was chosen. The date of the coat of arms of Penzance is 1614.

The most appropriate coat of arms of any town in England is that belonging to Oxford. It shows an ox and commemorates the fact that the site of the town was originally on a part of the river fordable by oxen; hence Ox-ford.

Ancient Assyria.

Assyria, history tells us, was a purely destructive nation, a Hun of the ancient world, existing merely to ravage and contributing nothing to civilization, being therein quite the opposite of the Babylonians. Isaiah described Assyria as God's ax and saw to do the rough hewing that providence needed for the shaping of the race.—Indianapolis News.

Better Expressed.

"Truth will out."

"What's happened now?"

"This piece I'm reading meant to say 'the halls of legislation,' and the printer has it 'the hauls of legislation.' "—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

HOW TO FORETELL FINE WEATHER AND BECOME A PROPHET.

HOW TO FORETELL FINE WEATHER AND BECOME A PROPHET.—If you want fine weather look for fine weather signs. Here are some of the most reliable, for they are based upon scientific facts:

When the sun sets in a sea of glory—that is, when the sunset sky is red—you may expect clear weather on the following day.

At night when the moon is clear and shows clean edges, with no halo or ring of mist surrounding it, there is little danger of rain.

When the wind blows steadily from the west the weather will continue fair. It very rarely rains in most of the states with the wind in the west.

Watch the smoke from a chimney or from your campfire. It is a good barometer. If the smoke rises high it means clear weather. The smoke will also show you from which direction the wind is blowing; so will a flag on an upright flagstaff.

A gray early morning, not a heavy, cloudy one, promises a fair day.

A heavy dew at night is seldom followed by rain the next day. Think of it this way and you will remember: Wet feet, dry head.

If there are no clouds at the western horizon you need not worry about others.

Animals are said often to show by their actions what the weather will be, and there is reason in this. Some of them certainly have a knowledge of coming storms. We are told that spiders are especially sensitive to weather changes and when they make new webs the weather will be fair; if they continue spinning during a shower it will soon clear off.—St. Nicholas.

MOTH PREVENTION.

How to Keep the Pests From Destroying Carpets.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," so now is the time to send out all your scouts in search of the troublesome moth. If you fear that they are at work at the edge of your carpets it will sometimes suffice to lay a wet towel over them and press well with a flatiron, but the best way is to take the carpet up, clean it and give a good deal of attention to the floor. Look in the cracks, and if you discover signs of moths wash the floor with benzine and scatter red pepper on it before again putting your carpets down.

Heavy carpets sometimes do not require taking up every year unless in constant use. Take out the tacks from these, fold the carpets back, wash the floor in strong acids with a tablespoonful of borax dissolved in them. Dash insect powder or lay tobacco leaves along the edge and retack. Turpentine is also very good. Mix the turpentine with water in proportion of three tablespoonfuls to three quarts of water and then, after the carpet has been well swept, go over each breadth carefully with a sponge dipped in the solution and wrung nearly dry. Change the water as often as it becomes dirty, and the carpet will be nicely cleaned as well as disinfected. All moths can be kept away and the eggs destroyed by using these means.

How to Pack Books to Take on Your Vacation.

Vacation time is coming, and not a few of us will want to take books along for pleasure or study. There is a wrong as well as a right way to pack books. Pack in small packing cases, stand the parcels on end with the edges next to the sides of the case and the back of the bindings pointed toward the inward, placing crumpled newspapers between them to ease the pressure on the round part of the books, which may be otherwise pressed flat. Line the case with wrapping paper, place a thickness of paper over the top and fasten on the cover with screws in preference to nails.

How to Tell if the Valves of Your Car Are In Good Shape.

The fit of the valve head and the valve seat is usually tested by coating the valve head with Prussian blue pigment and pressing it in place against the seat. The valve is then turned about one-fourth of a revolution and removed. If the valve and seat are a proper fit the entire seat will show blue, though if the valve head and seat do not fit only the high spots or ridges on the valve seat will receive a coating of blue. In such an event the grinding process should be continued until the valve head has an even bearing all over the seat.

How to Adjust Gas Mantles Without Puncturing Them.

You should learn to adjust your own gas mantles instead of sending for a man and paying anything from 30 to 50 cents for them. They can be bought for 10 cents and are easily adjusted. After fitting the mantle over the burner the principal thing to do is to "burn" the mantle as soon as it is adjusted. Apply a match and don't be startled when the whole mantle flames up. The coating is simply burning off—a necessary operation.

How Windows Can Be Frosted by the Householder.

Make a clear solution of gum arabic, dissolve enough epsom salts to make a strong solution and add to the gum arabic. Apply this mixture to the glass with a small brush.

UMBRELLA SEMAPHORE.

New Apparatus For Traffic Policemen Has Given Great Satisfaction.

In conjunction with Master Mechanic Lee of the New Orleans fire department the writer has designed an umbrella semaphore apparatus for traffic policemen which is giving great satisfaction in this city, says Harold W. Newman, commissioner of public safety for New Orleans, in the American City.

The semaphore is an adaptation of those in use in other cities, but is considered to be in some respects an improvement. It is constructed in this wise: A steel rod set in a stand holds an umbrella eight feet above the head of the traffic policeman. The umbrella is quartered red and green. There is also a switch lamp with red and green lights at the top of the umbrella. Cross arms extend from the umbrella rod just between the umbrella cloth and the switch lamp. One of these arms bears the word "Stop" and the other "Go." The rod which carries the umbrella, cross arms and switch lamp is operated by a short lever and so constructed that it cannot be stopped halfway, but must be turned the entire distance when operated. It is also ball bearing, making it durable and easy to operate.

THE UMBRELLA SEMAPHORE.

When vehicles are to go north and south, in addition to giving the whistle signal, the officer turns the umbrella so that its red side—and at night the red light also—is athwart the direction of travel east and west. The cross arms then show the word "Go" to the traffic going north and south and the word "Stop" to the traffic east and west. When the traffic is to proceed east and west the umbrella is turned.

Whenever there is a sudden danger to traffic, such as a runaway or a fire alarm, the semaphorist drops or closes the umbrella and at the same time whistles the continuous signal to stop all traffic. At night, as the semaphorist is not on duty, the umbrella is folded and set aside.

Local Option In Taxation.

Under the tax reform provision of the constitutional amendment adopted by the state of Maryland last November the legislature has passed an act granting local option in taxation for local purposes to all incorporated towns in the state. The act confers on the towns the power to determine the classes of property which shall be the subject of taxation for local purposes within their respective jurisdictions. Existing charter restrictions as to taxation are superseded, for the act gives the municipalities the right "to change the tax rate fixed by their respective charters upon the property taxed to the extent of covering any loss of revenue in case they may determine upon the exemption or partial exemption of certain classes or subclasses of property."

Napoleon.

Napoleon, who rose to be a general of brigade after only eight years' connection with the French army, was shortly after shorn of that honor when Robespierre fell. Yet so adroit a politician was he that by 1795 he was the head of the forces of the convention, though nominally an aid-de-camp to Barras as commander in chief and actually the most effectively powerful man in France.

Twenty Dollar Gold Pieces.

The value of the gold in a twenty dollar gold piece is $20. Copper is used as the alloy, and the intrinsic value of the twenty dollar gold piece would, therefore, be $20 plus the copper used, which, in proportion to the quantity of gold, is one to nine.—New York Times.

Greatest Stimulus to Song.

"Just what, indeed, is the connection between water and melody science has never explained, but a fact it is that the most unmusical soul in the world has only to enter a bathroom to let loose heavenly sounds."—Philip Curtiss in American Magazine.

Appropriate.

Willis—Do you wear any insignia on your golf coat? Gillis—Yes. During the winter the moths laid out a complete eighteen hole course on it.—Judge.

Man thinks and at once becomes the master of beings that do not think.—Buffon.

HOW TO START STRAWBERRY PLANTS SO THEY WILL FLOURISH.

HOW TO START STRAWBERRY PLANTS SO THEY WILL FLOURISH. It is often advised to cut off first runners of strawberry plants; also not to cover the crowns. The first is altogether wrong; the second is wrong in some cases. If the first runners are cut off, the second crop of runners is larger and more vigorous, but valuable time has been lost in the growing. Those first runners would have made plants (with good food and care) large, vigorous and well rooted specimens before the second lot of runners got down to business.

Don't cover the crowns of plants when you set them out or they will rot. But when the runners form plants (to insure rooting quickly) space them carefully about the mother plant and completely cover the little fellows with a large handful of dirt and let it stay. It will not hurt them, but it will hold them in place and, acting as a mulch, draw the moisture up to the plant, when it will strike root at once. Then new leaves will thrust the dirt aside.

Some tell us to thin the plants from the matted row. But, if large berries that will sell themselves are wanted, feed well to make tops to shade the berries. A berry is nearly all water, and a plant pumps water in a berry until it begins to color and then stops so far as that berry is concerned. Much sunlight hastens opening. The largest berries are found where they are well shaded.

Queer Errors.

The error in one biographical dictionary in which it is said that from 1898 to 1900 Roosevelt was "president of New York" reminds the Philadelphia Ledger of the fine old typographical error that crept into one of Horace Greeley's editorials. "There is no barn in Guilford," asserted the editorial, Greeley having written, "There is no balm in Gilead."

To Clean Jewelry.

Gold rings, brooches and other articles of jewelry that are set with precious stones can be cleaned with warm water, white soap and a very little ammonia. Use a soft old toothbrush to get in between the setting and the stone. For rings set with turquoises and pearls the water cleansing should be avoided, but for the hard, transparent gems it is allowed. Polish the rings and pins with a soft chamois and they will be wonderfully bright and sparkling.

LADIES

We have on display in our South window a large number of Sets of

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

while they last we will sell them at

70 Cents the Set

The wholesale price is more than that, but we are going to dispose of them at a great sacrifice.

COME EARLY IF YOU WISH TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER

They were bought by the former publishers for premiums, but we are giving no premiums with the

FULTON EVENING TIMES

He thought he had a Klaxon on his car

He didn't notice particularly—it looked like a Klaxon—the car salesman said it was a Klaxon—when he touched the button, in the salesroom, it sounded well enough.

But later when he sounded it on the road; when he compared it with the signal on his neighbor's car (which was a real Klaxon); when he heard the difference in warning-power, carrying-power; saw the difference in finish and appearance; learned how much less current the real Klaxon consumed; then he realized that his was not a Klaxon at all but, instead, a cheap imitation.

Like all standard articles that have achieved big reputations, Klaxons are widely imitated. The only way to be sure you are getting the famous Klaxon note—that carries and is always heard—in city traffic, on country roads; the only way to be sure you are getting the Klaxon guarantee of permanent satisfaction is to look for the Klaxon name-plate:

"the only sign of a perfect signal"

Klaxons are not high in price—although they have that reputation from being associated with the high-priced cars on which they are always found as regular equipment.

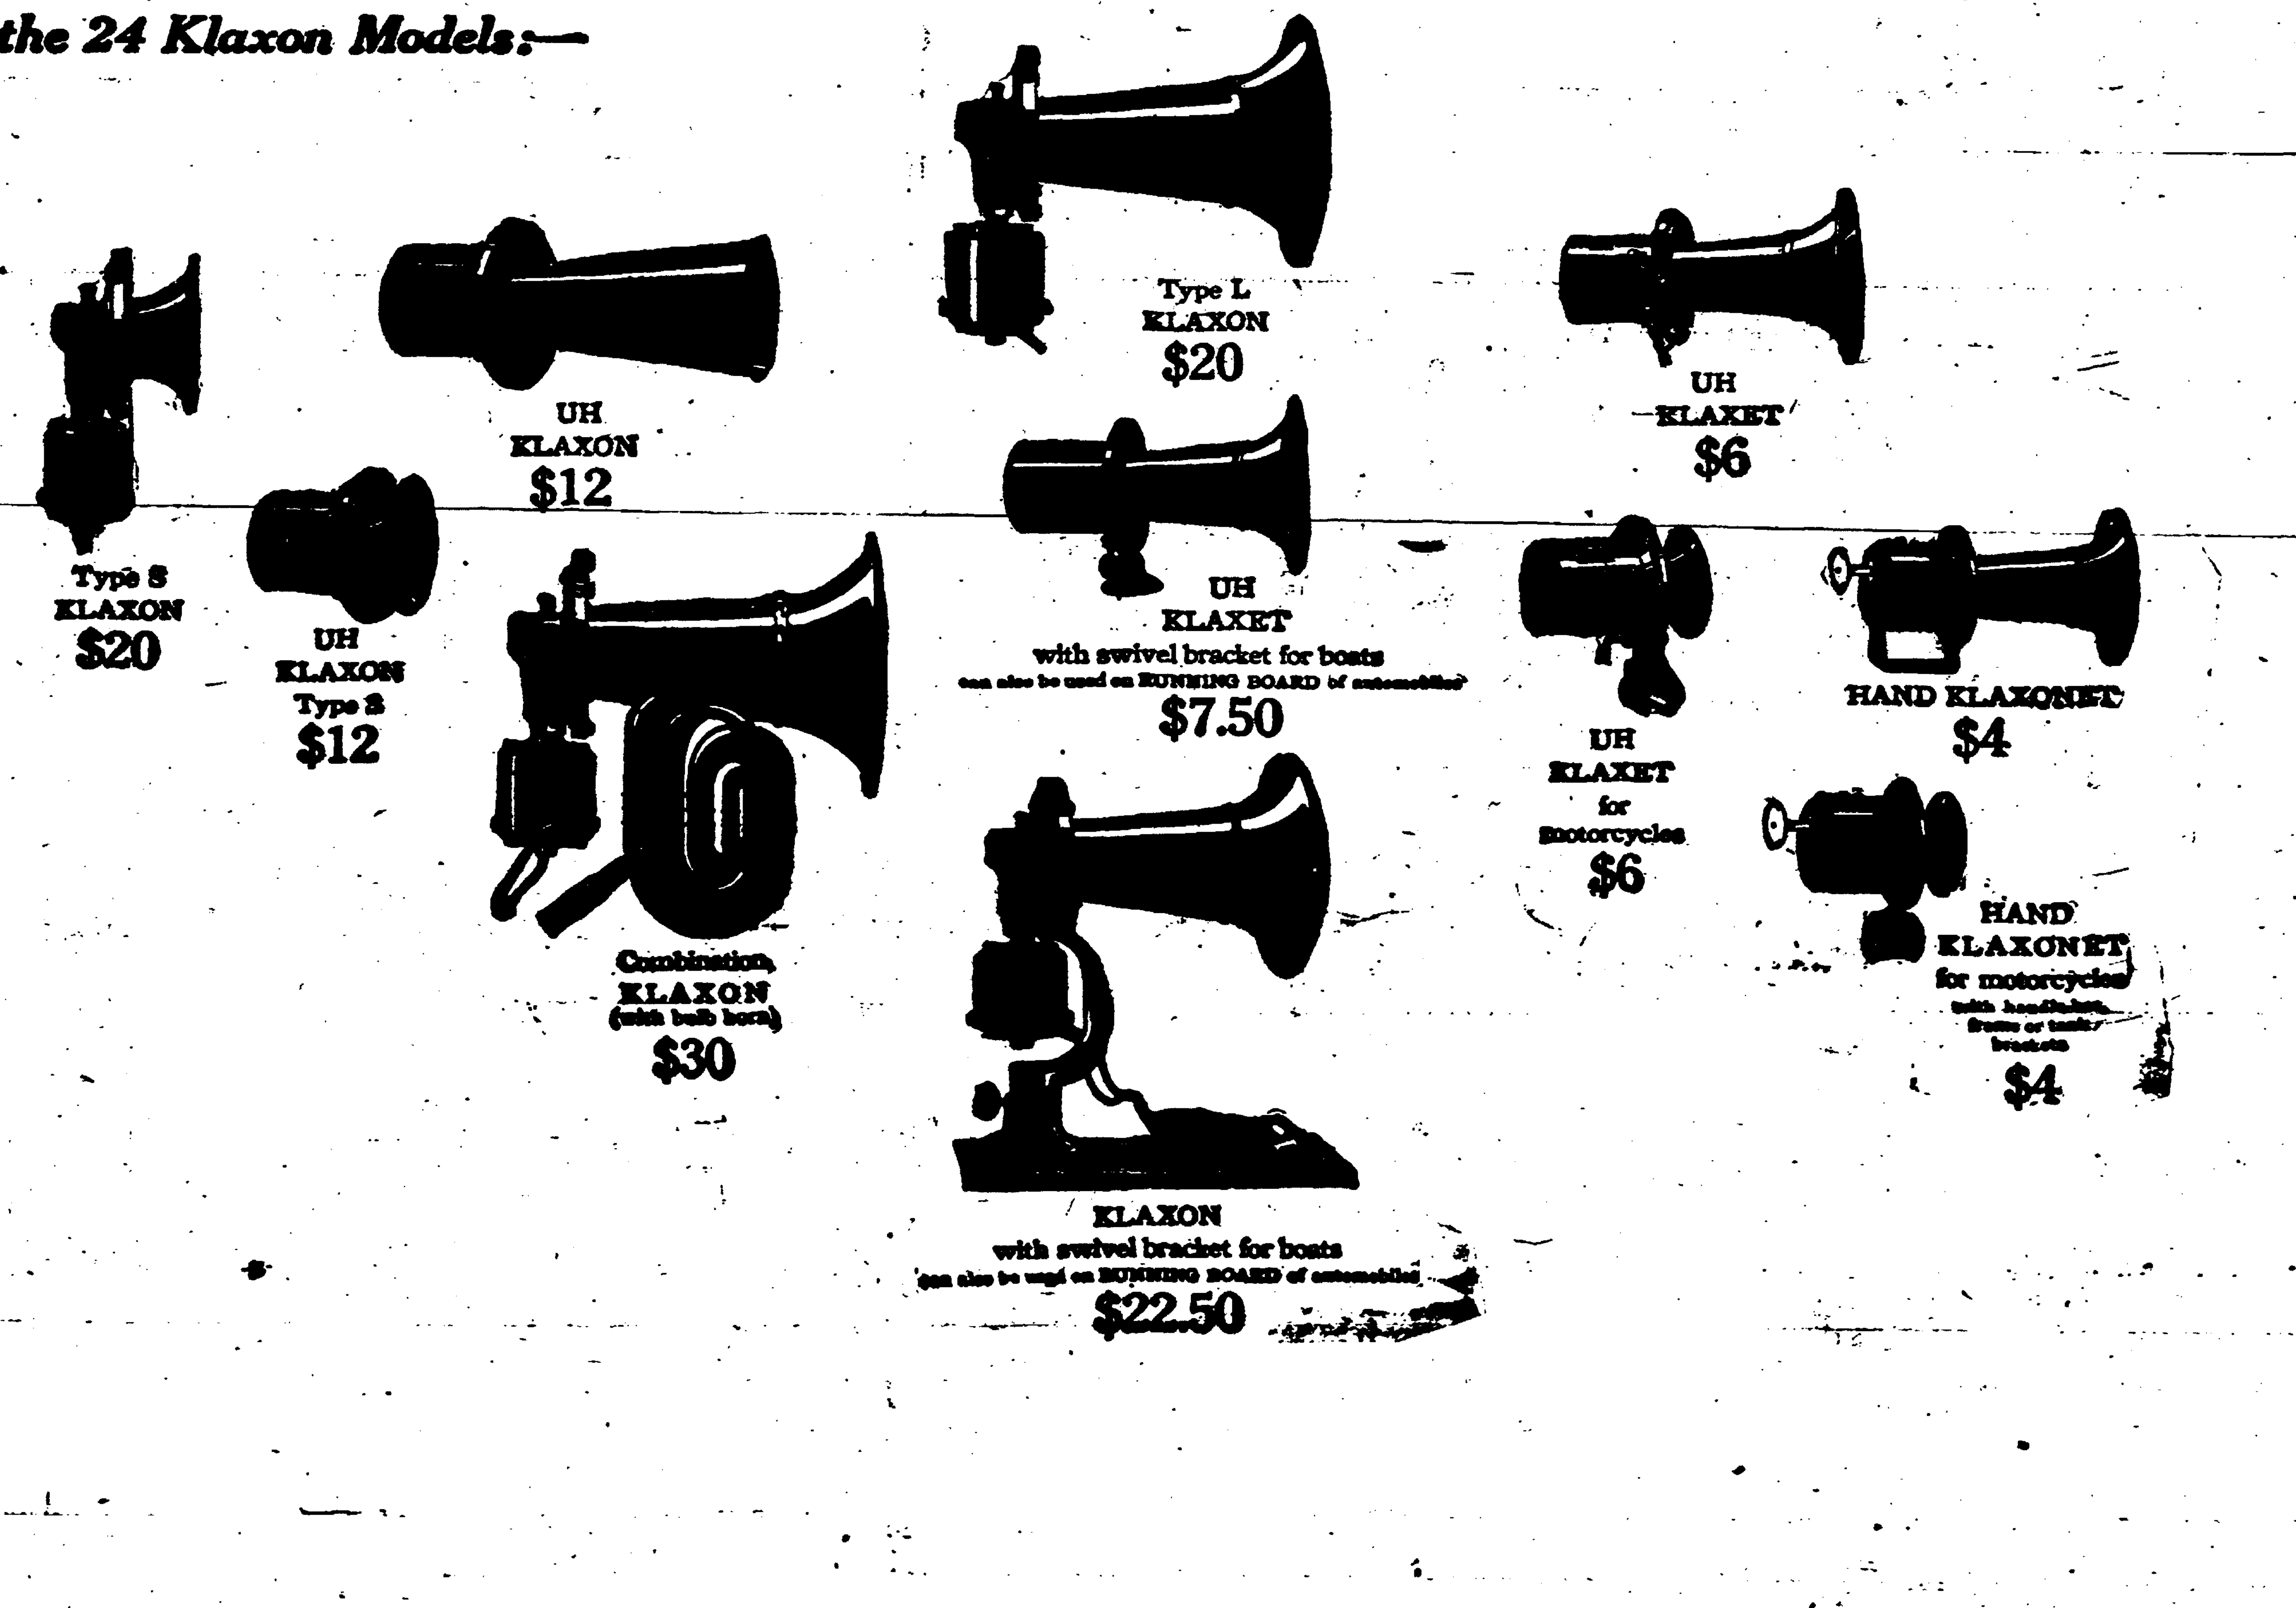
We will put a Hand Klaxonet on your car for $4; the Klaxet is but $6; the U. H. Klaxon, big and powerful, is $12; and the big Klaxon is but $20.

Each has the true Klaxon note; the Klaxon permanent guarantee; each is finished in smart "Klaxon Black."

THE VAN WAGENEN, Inc.

LOCAL SALES AGENCY

A Few of the 24 Klaxon Models:—



THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 477. THURSDAY, JULY 6, 1916 Price, One Cent

THE MUNICIPAL PARADE WAS A BIG SUCCESS

The municipal parade given yesterday afternoon by the city officials, in connection with Old Home Week, was well received by the crowds that lined the streets. The parade was headed by John Youngs as marshal.

The members of the Police Department were in the first part of the parade headed by Chief Dyer, then came the Elks Band followed by Postmaster Conley and the Post Office force, including the carriers, clerks and R. F. D. men. The city's police patrol came next followed by the newspaper men of the city.

The fire department led by Chief Waugh riding in an automobile was next. In the fire department display were the three hose wagons, the hook and ladder wagon and the steamer.

Next came the executive and administrative body. Included in this automobile were the Mayor, City Chamberlain and Secretary Hollenga of the Chamber of Commerce.

Then came the department of weights and measures with a float, depicting the various ways to do away with short weights and measures.

Next in line were the board of assessors, followed by all the former mayors and former city officials.

Then came more automobiles carrying the hospital nurses and the board of governors of the Lee Memorial Hospital, followed by a hospital float which brought applause all along the line of march. The float showed a little child lying on a hospital cot with two nurses attending her. Everything was in white on the float except the green flowers banked along the bottom.

The plumbing board followed the hospital float and the civil service board then followed on.

The next part of the parade consisted of the Fulton Public Schools. The first of the schools was the manual training float, which displayed a large mission table about six and one half feet high and ten feet long under which were boys working at benches where different articles are made. Then came the educational board followed by a commercial department float and a Fulton High School Art Department float.

Then came the library float showing many children sitting at tables reading, depicting the great facilities for reading and studying at the library. This was followed by the Public Health Department and the Milk and Meat Inspector followed that department.

The supervisors came next and the Public Works department were last in line showing the sprinkling wagons, street cleaning wagon and street sweeper.

All in all the parade was a huge success and much credit must be given the city officials and committee for the way in which they all responded for the parade.

C. Milton Allen, Jr.,
City Chamberlain, chairman of the Committee for the Municipal Parade which took place yesterday.

WATER CARNIVAL TONIGHT TO BE PRETTY SPECTACLE

The Water Carnival to be held tonight on the Oswego river will be one of the largest and prettiest spectacles of Old Home Week. The program follows:

The Band will occupy a float on the river.

Boats will be furnished by the Chamber of Commerce to all young couples, who wish to participate. These boats will be already decorated and any [illegible] motor boat enthusiast should endeavor to make this a success.

All boat owners can get their boats through the big lock at 7:00 p. m.

The Band will parade from the Plaza up South First street and down the driveway at Rochester street, to the municipal dock where they will board their float.

A large searchlight has been erected on the plant of the Fulton Light Heat and Power Company, opposite Foster Brothers' Knife Works, and will show its rays upon all the boats in the Carnival.

The Carnival will start at 8:30 p. m.

The factories and industries along the river should help in this by the blowing of whistles when the carnival starts.

Tomorrow Night's Program.

Industrial and School children's parade. The school children are requested to meet at East Side Park at 7:00 o'clock sharp. Also business girls, which includes clerks and office girls, the Elks Continentals, Boy Scouts, all manufacturers and business organizations are requested to be represented.

Moonlight dance on Cayuga street, between First and Second streets. The street will be roped in and all those desiring to dance can do so. The band will play from a platform in front of Harry Allen's Clothing store.

PUNITIVE EXPEDITION NOT TO BE WITHDRAWN

Washington, D. C.—The American punitive expedition will not be withdrawn from Mexico on strength of Carranza's friendly note. Indications were, however, that it would pave the way for border patrol by both countries.

Following a conference with President Wilson, Secretary of State Lansing said a reply would be sent from the government to Mexico soon.

In absence of Secretary of State Lansing, whose vacation starts tomorrow, Counselor Frank Colk will handle all affairs to come before Secretary Lansing.

Washington, D. C.—Though convinced that the danger of war with Mexico has passed. The war department stood by the intent to send all of the Militia men called to the border.

* * *

El Paso, Texas.—The bodies of Captain Boyd and the seventeen troopers that were killed in the Carrizal fight were brought to Juarez today by undertakers from El Paso. These bodies will be delivered to army officials on the International bridge this afternoon.

WAR KEEPS CANADIAN CHORUS FROM DAKOTA SANGERFEST MEETING

(By United Press)

Grand Forks, N. D.—The Norwegian-Canadian chorus was the only one in the organization not represented today when the national Norwegian Singers association choruses came here for the annual meeting and sangerfest.

Eight hundred singers picked from the 3,000 delegates will sing in Scandinavian and English during the three days' session which opened today. Delegates came from Minnesota, both the Dakotas, Nebraska, Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, New York, Rhode Islands, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

The Canadian contingent of Winnipeg is, almost to a man, in the trenches of fighting Europe.

Prof. J. H. Flaaten, Duluth, Minn., will direct three monster choruses which will sing during the meeting. Julius Jaeger, Chicago, president of the association is here.

PROHIBITIONISTS TO DISCUSS JOINING OTHER FACTIONS UNDER NEW NAME

(By United Press)

St. Paul, Minn.—A widespread move within the ranks of the Prohibition party to change the name threatens to cause at least one hot scrap when the Prohibition national convention meets here July 17 to 21, it was learned today.

The younger element especially favors renaming the party in order, they say, to do away with a name "not broad enough to encompass all policies of the party," a name which is "against, rather than for something."

"The Prohibition party is for a good many things and not always against something as the name sometimes leads people to believe," one in favor of renaming the party, declared today. The names American, Liberal, Federal and others have been suggested.

But not all Prohibitionists want to do away with the name which they say signifies their stand on "the greatest issue before the American people—the liquor traffic." The party name has come to be looked upon with honor and respect and it would be folly to change it now, they say.

Those favoring renaming the party admit that one of their purposes is to catch vots. to take over the new Women's party vote bodily, to adopt the progressive party, and to draw votes from any and all other parties.

Re-christening of the Prohibition party will come in for a share of the discussion at the St. Paul convention when on Tuesday, July 17, a giant "get-together" meeting of men and women representing every reform movement in the United States will meet to talk over "consolidation."

The trend of the debate will be:

1. That the liquor question is the greatest issue before the American people, requiring immediate settlement.

2. That the issue can be settled only by electing to power a political party in favor of nation wide prohibition. Only in this way can nation-wide prohibition be enacted and enforced.

3. That it is impossible to expect a solution of the issue through the "Republican elephant, the Democratic donkey, or the decapitated Bull Moose."

4. What political party then shall be put in power to settle the issue, the Prohibition party as such, or a thorough new party similar to the prohibition party, but seeking votes under a different name.

To this get together meeting the Prohibitionists have invited the Progressive national committee and other party leaders and 15,000 other reform workers, both men and women, throughout the United States.

Chief Edward Dyer

The efficient head of Fulton's Police Department, who led the department in the Municipal Parade yesterday.

WOULD PROVIDE COTTAGE HOMES FOR RURAL TEACHERS

(By United Press)

New York—National aid for state normal schools, higher salaries and better pension systems for teachers and better means of safeguarding women in co-educational colleges, were the problems discussed by the National Education Association in Madison Square Garden here today.

President J. W. Crabtree of the State Normal School, River Falls, Wisconsin, insisted that schools and colleges of education have been unable to meet the demand for trained specialists because they have been "hound and gagged by college practices, traditions and prejudices." The normal school he declares is a national asset even more so than the state agricultural college and should be so treated by the national government in the distribution of national aid for education.

President Joseph Swain of Swarthmore College advocated a reasonable salary increase and a joint teacher assessment and public taxation plan of pensioning public school teachers. Josephine Corlie Preston, superintendent of public instruction of the State of Washington, outlined a definite plan by which cottage homes for teachers may be provided in every rural school district.

The progress in Chinese education was discussed by V. K. Wellington Keo, ambassador from China to the United States. Mary Beal Housel, dean of women, Mt. Union College, Alliance, Ohio, in an address before the conference of deans of women, advocated as close supervision of the recreation hours of women as of their study hours in co-educational institutions. The nominating committee elected by the delegates from all states, will report the officers for the ensuing year at the general session tomorrow.

Charles M. Geyer, of Syracuse, was in town today, on business.

* * *

Charles F. Adams, of Syracuse, visited Fulton today.

BRITISH AND FRENCH GAIN IN EUROPEAN WAR

(By United Press)

Berlin—The German War Office officially admitted that the French have captured trenches near Berloy eu sauterre, south of the River Seine and that the Germans have also evacuated the Village of Hein. It is also announced that the British have made great progress around the Theobald district.

* * *

London—A further slight advance of the British troops was reported by General Haig. The British took several prisoners when occasional raids were made on the enemy trenches.

* * *

Petrograd—At least one half million Austrian troops have been killed, captured or wounded since the Russians began their sweep. That number will be unavailable for the summer and fall campaigns of the Central Powers.

* * *

London—At request of the minister of munitions the Scottish Miners will not held their annual holiday this month.

* * *

KAISER ON THE FIRING LINE.

London—The Kaiser is reported to have established headquarters on the fighting line near Cambray and opposite the British front. Great bodies of German troops are being gathered near the Somme to stem the British advance.

BLOOMER GIRLS HERE TOMORROW

Tomorrow afternoon the Star Bloomer Girls will cross bats with the Red Men's Baseball team on the Fair grounds at 3:30. There are reports around that the girls could not put up a good game. These reports are not true. Recently they defeated the Polish ..ationals of Buffalo by a score of 5 to 3. The Polish Nationals are playing the Linda Arrs and Simon Pures for the amateur championship of Buffalo.

They play some very fast teams such as the town teams of Lyons, Caledonia, Holley, Albion and the Maltops of Rochester. A short time ago they played a close game at Livonia where the merchants declared a half holiday so that everybody could see the game. From here they go to Oneida to meet the All Oneida team and from there to Rome to play the Windsors. The Star Bloomer girls bring with them a ten fot canvass fence which will be erected around the playing field so that everybody will have to pay to see them play. A close game is assured. The price of admission is 25 cents for both men and women. The line up of the teams will be as follows.

Star Bloomer Girls—Etta Davis, lf; 1b; Carrie Nation, 3b; Marie Dierl, cf; Herbert Beach, c: Delia Carol, 2b; Nellie oJhnson, rf; Margaret Cunningham, p; All Walmsley, p; May Fay, Harriet Murphy and Elizabeth Pull, substitutes.

Red Men—Dingle, cf; F. Brown, 3b; McCollum, ss; A. Paige, 1b; H. Ingamells, 2b; W. Ingamells, lf; E. Brown, rf; Briggs, c; Milnes, p.

Postmaster P. T. Conley

Who marched at the head of the Post Office Force in Fulton's Parade

CANDIDATE FOR GOV. HIRES EXPERT DISPLAY ADV. MAN FOR MANAGER

(By United Press)

Cleveland, Ohio—Ohioans are witnessing something new in the way of political stunts this summer in the gubernatorial campaign of display advertising used by George W. Shaw of Cleveland. Shaw, lawyer and business man, is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, against Governor Frank B. Willis.

"One of the greatest advertising men in America is helping me," said Shaw. "This man has made a certain paint a household word."

"I stand for certain definite reforms in government. We're advertising to the people of Ohio my brand of politics. If they like what I stand for they can vote for me; if they don't like it, they can vote for Governor Willis. I have no political organization.

"I'm running for Governor because I don't have to work all the time to make a living," said Shaw. Shaw, in his college days was famous as a half back on the Western Reserve football team.

WHY ENGLAND FOLLOWED GERMANY'S LEAD IN SAVING DAYLIGHT

(By United Press)

London.—About the only objection to the recently adopted Daylight Saving scheme now being agitated in America was that it was made in Germany. But England isn't so touchy on that point as she used to be. She has learned lots of things from Germany in the last two years. Why, they even make Frankfurter sausages right here in London these days, and serve them with Teutonic style potato salad and sauerkraut.

Germany began robbing darkness in favor of daylight on May 1, by setting all the clocks in the Empire ahead an hour. Great Britain followed by doing the same thing. On October 1 the clocks will be turned back again.

There is a yearly gain of 154 hours of useful daylight, equivalent to 17 working days of 9 hours each.

Gas bills are much lower, both in the home and in the factory. The total yearly saving in this item alone is estimated at $12,500,000.

Railway companies will save about $500,000 a year in cost of lighting, and will benefit by increased passenger traffic.

A longer period of leisure before sunset is afforded the woman and girl workers.

Tired business men are able to play golf an hour longer in the evening.

Eyesight especially will benefit, daylight being better than artificial light.

The scheme was introduced by having every public clock, on churches, town halls post offices, railway stations, etc., set forward one midnight to one o'clock.

The change makes the difference between clock time in London and New York six hours, instead of five as at present.

FULTON MAN'S WATCH AND MONEY STOLEN

(By United Press)

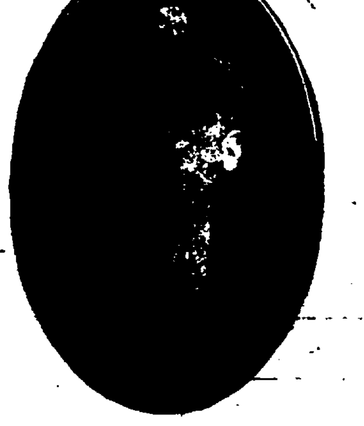
Edward Waterhouse, of this city, went to Syracuse yesterday and met two companions. He and his companions had some drinks together and then he invited them to his room to spend the night.

The companions awoke first a nd got up. When Waterhouse awoke his gold watch and chain together with four dollars were gone. The case was reported to the police.

HOTEL ARRIVALS.

The following are enrolled at the Clark House for the remainder of Old Home Week:

J. L. Kennedy and wife, Watertown, N. Y.; C. M. Geyer, Syracuse, N. Y.; H. J. Reed, Syracuse, N. Y.; Thomas R. Simson, Seneca Falls, N. Y.; A. B. McCormick, Syracuse, N. Y.; James Bough, Oswego, N. Y.; William L. Burke, Oswego, N. Y.; E. A. Countryman, Syracuse, N. Y



Chief Harry Waugh

Of the Fulton Fire Department, who also participated in yesterday's parade.

EPIDEMIC OF PARALYSIS IS STILL GROWING

(By United Press)

New York — Twenty-four new deaths from the epidemic of paralysis have been reported to the Health Department here today. This makes a total of 174 deaths since the first case was reported and the cases were all babies or children under seven years of age. Thirty-three new victims have been reported on Staten Island.

PLANNING TO DEFEAT THE PRESIDENT'S BILL

(By United Press)

Washington, D. C.—Plans were made today to defeat two measures of President Wilson which he considers vital. One is the Bill of Child Labor control and the other in regard to establishing a merchant marine.

There were numerous prophecies that either the President or Congress would have to yield or Congress will be in session late into the fall, possibly until election day.

The business places of the city have agreed to close their various establishments, Wednesday afternoons, during July and August. Only saloons, confectionery stores, smoke shops, barber shops and some offices will be open.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

THURSDAY, JULY 6, 1916

SCIENCE—INDUSTRY.

Standard Barrel Law.

The new federal law on barrels becomes effective July 1. This law specifies that barrels used in the sale of fruits and vegetables must contain 7,056 cubic inches, which means 105 quarts, or approximately three bushels. No dimensions of the barrels are specified, but they must hold the proper cubical contents. Fines of $500 or imprisonment for six months are penalties provided for violations of the law. Officials in New York and other markets are sending out notices that the new law will be strictly enforced. The standard barrel under the New York net weight container law need not be marked in terms of weight, measure or numerical count. Wherever a barrel is more or less than the capacity fixed by the law it must be marked in such terms.—Market Growers' Journal.

New Gasoline Process.

A patent on a process for the manufacture of gasoline by what the inventor calls a recomposition method has been granted to C. S. Palmer, Ph. D., a fellow in the Mellen Institute For Industrial Research of Pittsburgh. The Palmer process consists of extracting gasoline from petroleum residues which have practically no volatile matter below a temperature of 300 degrees C. When they are subjected to this temperature under conditions prescribed by the process about 75 per cent of their composition becomes volatile, and of this about 20 per cent is gasoline. The basis of the process is said to be the interrelated control of temperature, pressure and time, these factors being so applied that recomposition of the elements in the petroleum residue results, one of the recompounded products being gasoline.

Production of Bauxite.

The bauxite industry in the United States had a banner year in 1915. The production of bauxite was 297,041 long tons, valued at $1,514,834, an increase of 77,723 long tons, or 35 per cent in quantity, and of $445,640, or 41 per cent in value compared with 1914, according to a statement issued by the United States geological survey. This abnormally large increase in bauxite production is due to the greatly increased activity in the aluminum industry. The quantity of foreign bauxite used during the year was exceedingly small, for obvious reasons, and out of a total consumption of more than 300,000 tons only slightly more than 1 per cent was imported. Arkansas produced more than 90 per cent of the domestic production, and Georgia, Alabama and Tennessee contributed the remainder.

Inkstand Made of Paper.

Drawings are not infrequently ruined by the spilling of ink, which might have been averted by the use of the simple inkstand cut from a sheet of heavy paper, as shown in the sketch, says Popular Mechanics. The upper illustration shows the method of cutting the paper to fit the ink bottle and stopper and to produce a pen rack. The device will be found especially useful when materials for drawing are used away from a place especially fitted for the purpose, since the inkstand can be made in a few minutes from material readily available.

SIMPLE INKSTAND.

Output of Silica.

The silica (quartz) sold in 1915 for pottery, tile, glazes, paints, wood filler, wood polish, abrasive soaps, fine filters and other uses, as reported to the United States geological survey, amounted to 243,340 short tons, valued at $1,270,835. This product was obtained from quartz veins, pegmatites, quartzites, sandstones, sand, tripoli and diatomaceous earth.

Checking a Rip In Tire Tubes.

It is often difficult to prevent a small rip in an inner tube of a tire from becoming longer, even though a patch has been applied, says Popular Mechanics. An effective remedy is to punch a small, round hole at each end of the rip before applying the patch. This stops the tendency to rip further when pressure is applied.

Belt Dressing.

About as good a belt dressing as can be had is made by melting beeswax in neat's foot oil in proportion of one-half pound of wax to one-half gallon of the oil. To secure a good mixture melt the wax first, then add the oil slowly, stirring constantly to get it thoroughly compounded.—Blacksmith and Wheelwright.

Fireproofing Wood.

Interior woodwork may be made proof against ordinary flame by coating it with silicate of soda, known as water glass.

Cause of Blue Exhaust.

A blue exhaust indicates the burning of oil which has passed the piston rings and worked into the combustion chamber.

Your Uncle Sam'l Speaks

My temper is not a hair trigger.
I bow to the gentleman's law.
Because I am stronger and bigger
I don't slap a little man's jaw.
But, son, if some fellow
Believes I am yellow
And thinks that with safety I'm kicked,
Just take it from Sam'l, your old Uncle
Sam'l, that some one's about to be licked!

If any durned, pesky muskeeter
Keeps buzzing just out of my touch
I say, "There are songs that are sweeter;
But, pshaw! You don't bother me much!"
But, son, if that creature
Should bite any feature,
Believe me, it will not be rash
To bet that old Sam'l, your stung Uncle
Sam'l, will flatten that skeeter ker-smash!

Of glory I never go raving
Or swearing belligerent oaths.
The banner I seldom am waving,
Though sometimes I use it for clothes.
But, son, if a greaser
Who thinks he's a Caesar
Throws mud on that flag of my pride,
Just take it from Sam'l, your hot Uncle
Sam'l, that soon I'll be tanning his hide!

—John O'Keefe in New York World.

AMERICAN TROOPER TELLS OF KILLING MEXICAN GENERAL

First Shot Downed His Horse and Second Ended Life of Gomez.

Bill Harris, first class marksman, Troop K, Tenth cavalry, is the man who fired the shot that killed General Gomez, the Mexican leader who lured the Americans into the trap at Carrizal. Here is the soldier's story:

"There was a corporal on my right. We were flat on our bellies. The corporal had shot six Mexicans.

"'Mighty hot, ain't it, Bill?'

"'Hotter'n hades,' I said.

"'Yes, boy,' the corporal said, 'but it ain't half as hot as it's going to be. Look yonder! That's a flankin' party, Bill. Sure they're goin' to wipe us out—clean out of this climate!'

"Then he reloaded. I didn't pay much attention to him for the next few minutes. The Mexicans were sure shooting right at us—right at my head. The sand looked like rain was hitting it. Then the corporal got plugged.

"Then I got my sight fixed for 250 yards. Through it I could see the Mexican general galloping toward us, but a little to the right. I plugged his horse. First shot, down he went. The general went down with him. I got him just as he was scrambling to his feet. He just doubled all up, then doubled all down again, slow like, to the sand.

"A spent bullet hit me in the arm, and my rifle was knocked out of my hand. I then drew my revolver and fired until some mounted Mexicans came riding furiously down at us. I ran. The Mexicans came forward cursing, and one shouted and asked me what I was fighting them for. I said: 'I ain't fighting you. I've done quit.'

"They made me a prisoner and began to search me. They took my money, my clothes and a ring, and then they fought over the stuff. They tied me with a rope and took me with the other prisoners to Villa Ahumada and then to Chihuahua. They tied all the prisoners with ropes and took us south in a cattle car.

"They bandaged our wounds after we reached Ahumada, and they gave us water that night. They also gave us some of the same food they were eating. Some of the Mexicans at Ahumada threw rocks at us and cursed us, and some said they would hang us.

"This also happened when we reached Chihuahua. The officers and our guards, however, treated us fairly well. They did not kick or abuse us, and they gave us food and water. Aside from taking our clothes, which the Lord knows they needed badly enough, they did not hurt us."

ANXIETY.

What does your anxiety do? It does not empty tomorrow of its grief, but it empties today of its strength. It does not make you escape the evil; it makes you unfit to cope with it if it comes.
—Ian Maclaren.

TRAGEDY AND SADNESS MINGLED WITH FUN AND COMEDY AS GUARDSMEN LEFT

Touching Little Incidents That Marked Departure of Various Companies to the Mexican Border.

Some Mothers Sorry to Have Sons Leave While Others Are Proud That They Can Fight For Their Country.

WHEN the militiamen began entraining for the Mexican border in the several states there was much sadness of farewell as the mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts bade goodby to the departing sons of Uncle Sam. Tragedy was mixed with comedy. Pathos reigned on one hand, while on the other frivolity was the rule.

Little did the men seem to realize the difficulties they will face before they return home; little did they realize the hardships that are the lot of any soldier. But all were anxious to go, to give whatever was necessary for their country. The following little stories gathered at the various points from whence the men departed, are filled with appeals that reach direct to the heart.

Put His Mother First.

If you had to choose between your mother and your sweetheart—which?

This is the proposition that was put up to Edward W. Petersen, a private in the Illinois national guard. Colonel Garrity had given orders that each member of the regiment was entitled to receive a visit from one woman friend, but he deprecated the appearance of a bevy of half a dozen girls for every guardsman. So when Petersen appeared with three women he found the guard lines strictly drawn and stern sentinels opposing his entrance. Petersen appealed to Captain John L. Lavin of his company.

"Who are the ladies?" said the captain.

"My mother, my sister and my fiancee," said Petersen.

"You can take in only one," said Lavin. "It's up to you to choose."

Petersen looked around at the faces of the three women, who were closer to him than any others in the world.

"Mother," he said simply.

"Some One Cared."

One chap in khaki stood dejectedly in a corner of the First regiment armory, Philadelphia, watching sweethearts, wives and mothers bidding farewell to the boys of Company G. He was in Company G, but no one had come to bid him goodby. A little old woman had been watching him out of the corner of her eye. With her were two girls.

"Hain't no one come?" she asked as she edged up to him. He shook his head mournfully. Then the old woman kissed him. And not only that, but the two girls kissed him, and the little old woman's son, who was the brother of the two girls, who witnessed the incident, smiled knowingly. As Company G swung out the despondent one carried himself more erectly than any one in the company.

"Some one cared."

His Mother Gave In.

A young New York man went into the recruiting station of the Sixty-ninth infantry armory one Sunday with his mother. She gave her consent to his enlisting, and when he was led away for his physical examination she turned to one of the men standing at the desk and said:

"He's been begging me since last Monday to let him go—him and his father too. Between the two of them little is the peace I've had. I staved them off for awhile. 'The boy smells powder,' his father says. 'Sure,' I tells him, 'there's none on me, and he don't run with that kind of girls.' 'He wants to be off with the boys,' he says. 'Sure,' I tells him, 'he'll learn that quick enough right here at home from you.'

"But they kept after me, and this morning after we came home from church I gave in. I had to. There's no living with the men these days. They're all for putting a uniform on their chests and a gun on their shoulders. But I'm hoping now you don't give my boy a uniform. He was going to college this fall. He says he'll be back in time to go just the same. Do you think so?"

Soon the young recruit rushed into the room and threw his arms about his mother's neck. "They took me!" he cried. "They took me!"

Tears were in her eyes, but she turned to the man again. "Ain't he a fine, strapping lad?" she asked. "Do you get them any better than that? It's got to be, I suppose. Well, if you're going, boy, I'm sorry it's only Mexicans you'll have to shoot to save them from themselves. And to think you've got to shoot another man, too, for his own good!"

Old Veterans Rejuvenated.

Noticeable in the crowds about a New York armory, and treated with extreme respect by the men of the regiment, have been a number of civil war veterans. They pass slowly about on their canes, giving each man a handgrip or a word of cheer or gather a group of "boys" together to talk things over. At one such gathering there was present a civilian more than six feet tall and built proportionately.

"Looks like a pretty slim and undersized crowd of boys to me," he volunteered.

The veteran's eyes snapped a moment as he eyed the stranger. "Slim—little, did you say? They're the finest lot of soldiers I ever saw, bar none. And I'd seen plenty of them before you mustered your bottle. Little? Well, maybe they aren't as big as you, but I guess they'll do just the same. You just watch the next Memorial day parade and see which are the ones left—the big or little ones.

"There were a lot of big men in our company, and after we'd gone south and were getting real marching and fighting it got to be a joke with us about waiting for those big fellows to straggle into camp at night two or three hours late. Of course they were all right in a little while, and I'm not saying anything against the big men. But don't you say anything against these wiry young cusses here. They'll stand the gaff, don't you worry about that.

"Say, why don't you enlist? Are you over size? In three days they'd have you dropping off that flesh by chunks and crawling into your dog kennel at night with your tongue hanging out."

But the stranger had slunk away as the old man's speech grew warmer.

"Well, boys," the veteran said, "I guess he's gone—to enlist, I hope. But for you, I'm proud of you, and if you go to Mexico it's God bless you—every one of you."

This Is Real Bravery.

"Will all these men be able to go? Some of them will have families dependent on them, won't they?" one of the New York men was asked.

"They'll go. Take my case. I've got a father, eighty-six years old, and a wife and two children looking to me. I gave up a good job as foreman to do this, and they told me not to come back to the job afterward. But I ain't a coward. And the old man and my woman both said to me: 'You go ahead. We'll take care of ourselves and the kids somehow.' I guess that's the real bravery, ain't it?"

Denver Giant Ready.

Denver, patriotic to the core and ever ready to step into the breach when the rest of the country needs salvation, has sealed the doom of the Carranzistas in Mexico, for it was written on the enlistment books of Battery B, Denver's artillery troop in the national guard that Carl Reuben Sandell stands ready to go.

And who is Carl Reuben Sandell?

He is the well known giant—he of the towering longitude.

And it is no ordinary record this human tower, who is seven feet five inches in his shoes and who wears 19½ collars, takes with him into the militia. He was color bearer for the First Colorado in the fuss in the Philippines in 1898. He has been a hunter of big game and a plainsman of many thrilling experiences. He is better known to children in Colorado than any other western hero, and his picture has been pasted up by more school children than have thus honored any other idol.

Old Men Plead to Go.

There were old men, gray haired and decrepit, who begged Colonel Donnelly of St. Louis to take them along with him.

"We know more about war than these boys," said one of them in a pathetic appeal. "We can shoot. We have been at Wilson's Creek under Lyon, and there are several of us who were with Grant before Vicksburg. Let us go with you."

Tears came to the eyes of the colonel and of Mrs. Donnelly, standing by his side, when he told them he was powerless to give them the opportunity they craved.

A young girl after a hard fight obtained admittance to Colonel Donnelly and implored that a young looking recruit be exempted from duty.

"He is only seventeen now," she pleaded, "and he is the whole support of the family."

"How did you get in?" the colonel asked him.

"I just passed the physical examination and said I was eighteen."

"I am sorry, little one," said the colonel. "The case will have to go up to the war department, and your brother will be under a charge of false enlistment." And then there were tears.

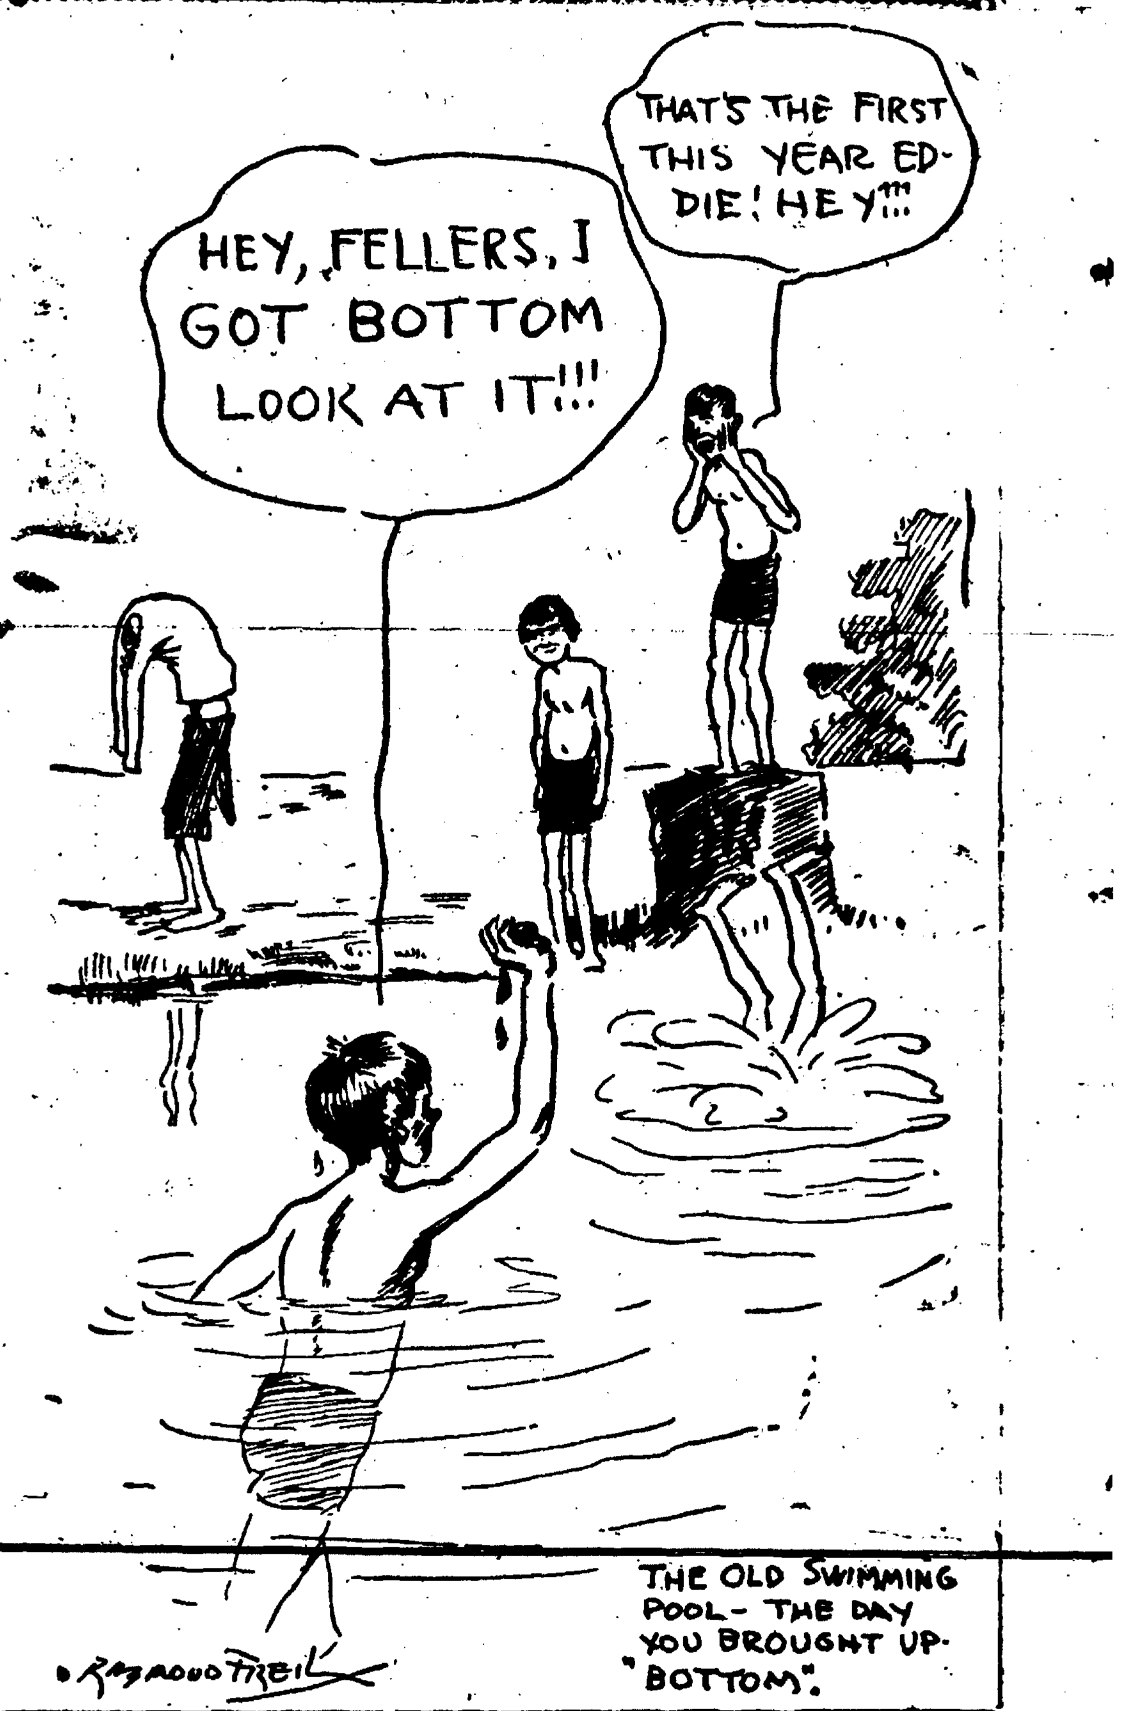
The mother of Captain Edmund J. McMahon of Company H bravely blinked away tears as she saw her three sons going to the front. They are the captain, Lieutenant James J., just about to be married, and Sergeant William J. Their home is in St. Louis.

Wrist Watches Popular.

Now, please don't smile, for the wrist watch already has proved its serviceability with the army officer, but in view of the alleged prejudice of the wits a telegram addressed to all officers of the national guard in St. Paul and signed by an enterprising jeweler savors more or less of alleged humor. Here it is:

"Every minute counts with the alert American army officer. Your high position demands you be punctual, and

Days You'll Never Forget



IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Buck Weaver, Chicago White Sox Infielder.

Photo by American Press Association.

George D. (Buck) Weaver, who so far this year has been covering third base for the Chicago American league team, is one of the best infielders in the game. He is a veteran player and last year played shortstop with the redoubtable Eddie Collins on the other side of the diamond. These two stars formed the backbone of the defense of the Chicago infield. Weaver is a sensational fielder and a strong and accurate thrower. Last year his fielding average was .939 and he batted .268.

Holding In Football.

Holding is prohibited by the rules because it does not belong to the game of football. It is unfair play. It eliminates skill. The slowest man in the world could make a forty yard run in every play if the rest of his teammates would hold their opponents long enough. The game is to advance the ball by strategy, skill and speed without holding your opponent.

Perhaps a good game could be invented the object of which would be to advance the ball as far as possible with the assistance of holding your opponents, but it would not be football. It would probably become a team wrestling match and, unless drastic rules rigidly enforced prevented it, a free fight. If your coach cannot show you how to gain distance without holding your opponents get another coach. It is fair to assume that he does not understand the strategy of the game.—Football Rules Committee.

The Football Code.

For the benefit of those who are just beginning to learn the game, the football rules committee has decided to publish in the official book of rules the following suggestion, among others:

"You may meet players, and even coaches, who will tell you that it is all right to hold or otherwise violate the rules if you do not get caught. This is the code that obtains among sneak thieves and pickpockets. The crime in their code is getting caught.

"The football code is different. The football player who intentionally violates a rule is guilty of unfair play and unsportsmanlike tactics, and whether or not he escapes being penalized he brings discredit to the good name of the game, which it is his duty as a player to uphold."

Willie Kolehmainen to Live Here.

Willie Kolehmainen, the great professional distance runner, brother to Hannes, recently arrived in this country from Glasgow. Willie Kolehmainen has been absent from the United States about four years, most of which time he has spent in the British isles, competing in professional races there. He won the Powderhall Marathon, the greatest professional race in the world, in 1914; he was second in 1915 and again second this year. He plans to remain in this country indefinitely.

The Double Umpire System.

The use of two umpires in a game was a gradual development, and it was not until 1907 that the major leagues finally decided that two men should be used in each game. Previous to that time extra umpires had worked in partnership with regulars for several years, while other umpires worked alone. The advantages of the double umpire system are many. As the game grew in speed and strategy one could not handle all the plays.

Hahn Retained as Brown Coach.

Archie Hahn, former Michigan athlete, twice winner of the dashes at the Olympic games and coach of the Brown university track team this year, has been re-engaged for a long term, according to announcement by Professor F. W. Marvel, head of the athletic department. Mr. Hahn went to Brown last fall from Whitman college, Walla Walla, Wash. Norman Taber, holder of the world's record for the mile run, is to assist in the coaching.

Mike Doolan a Giant.

Manager John McGraw of the New York Giants recently signed Mike Doolan, the veteran shortstop, who started the season with the Chicago Cubs and was released to Atlanta of the Southern association. Doolan was shortstop and captain of the Philadelphia Nationals for many years before jumping to the Baltimore Federals in 1914. He is the sixth Federal league player signed by Manager McGraw.

Spruce Beer.

Allow an ounce of hops and a tablespoonful of ginger to a gallon of water. When well boiled strain it and put in a pint of molasses or a pound of brown sugar and one-half ounce or less of the essence of spruce. When cool add a teacupful of yeast and put into a clean, tight cask and let it ferment for a day or two; then bottle it for use. You can boil the sprigs of spruce in place of the essence.

Lemonade Spoons.

Long handled spoons for stirring lemonade are made with spiral stems, topped with a fruit in enamel—cherries, lemons, grapes, oranges and some of the other fruits that go into the making of tempting beverages. These spoons cost $1.50 each.

PUT ON YOUR THINKING CAP!

Realize what it means to have a Home Daily giving you the Latest

LOCAL & TELEGRAPHIC NEWS SERVICE

---later by Three Hours than you can get in any newspaper circulating in this city, and you don't have to wade through a mass of reading to get what you want.

You get what you want in tabloid form in---

FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

RECALLS WAR OF 1846 WITH MEXICO

Veteran Tells of Ambush That Caused Hostilities.

FLED AT A BAYONET CHARGE

Santa Anna's Troops Wouldn't Fight Onslaughts of Americans—Not a Gun or Flag Was Lost During the Two Years' Struggle—Call For 30,000 Volunteers Was Issued.

War between the United States and Mexico in 1846 began as the result of a skirmish similar to the unprovoked attack by Mexicans upon the detachment of General Pershing's forces, it was recalled by a veteran of the first Mexican war, Colonel Charles J. Murphy of New York, who is the youngest survivor of that conflict. Colonel Murphy also was a staff officer in the civil war. On June 3 he was eighty-four years old. Colonel Murphy, commenting on the fight at Carrizal, said:

"The news of the first battle in Mexico reminds me that the war with Mexico in 1846-8 commenced in a similar way on April 24, 1846, although there was not a formal declaration of war between the two countries. Like the recent fight, it was an ambuscade for the Americans, and similarly the Americans were attacked by superior forces of probably four to one.

"Captain Thornton, United States army, marching at the head of seventy men of the Second dragoons in Texas, fell into an ambuscade of Mexican regular troops on April 24, 1846, numbering between 300 and 400. After a gallant resistance he was killed, with sixteen members of his command, and thirty-eight were wounded. The remainder of the force were taken prisoners. In this fight, as in that of the other day, it may be noted that apparently the approximate numbers of the slain and wounded were the same on both sides.

It was six days later when the Mexicans attacked Fort Brown and were repulsed, said Colonel Murphy. On May 8 General Taylor defeated the Mexican army of Generals Ampudia and Arista at Palo Alto.

"It is a noteworthy fact that these battles were fought without a declaration of war on either side," continued the colonel. "Indeed, no declaration of war was ever made by either of the two contending republics."

Thirty Thousands Volunteers Called.

These conflicts were followed by a call for 30,000 volunteers by President Polk. More than 65,000 volunteers responded promptly. As a comparison of the quotas furnished by each state with the present mobilization of the militia on President Wilson's call, these figures are given by Colonel Murphy:

Alabama, 2,981; Maryland and District of Columbia, 1,372; Arkansas, 1,274; Florida, 289; Missouri, 6,441; Georgia, 1,987; North Carolina, 895; Illinois, 3,791; South Carolina, 1,120; New York, 1,890; Indiana, 4,329; Ohio, 5,334; Iowa, 229; New Jersey, 420; Kentucky, 4,094; Louisiana, 7,341; Pennsylvania, 2,117; Michigan, 1,072; Tennessee, 5,394; Massachusetts, 930; Texas, 7,394; Mississippi, 2,235, and Wisconsin, 146.

At that time Mexico had a regular army of 50,000 and had called into the field an additional force, chiefly volunteers, of nearly 200,000 men.

Colonel Murphy reviewed the details of some of the later battles to show, he said, the tricky act of General Santa Anna in using a flag of truce and a messenger to General Taylor for the purpose of giving his army time to escape the Americans at the Rancho Buena Vista. General Scott, too, later found that Santa Anna had violated an armistice of twenty days, fortifying his position and re-enforcing his army. Speaking of the final big battles of that war and the taking of the City of Mexico Colonel Murphy recalled these impressions made upon him at the time:

"It was no holiday war. It was replete with toilsome marches, with blistering and bleeding feet, through hot sands under a tropical sun, over jagged rocks and snowy mountain ranges where horses and riders perished with cold and exposure. It abounded with nameless tragedies both in bloody fields near many a smoking gun and in the deep gloom of fever stricken hospitals

"In that memorable war of two years we fought seventy battles and engagements without the final loss of a single gun or an American ensign. Engaged always against heavy odds, we bore the honor of our great republic triumphantly on our ever advancing swords and bayonets.

"I must not forget to mention that the soldiers of the Mexican armies throughout the whole war were never known to stand a single charge of bayonets.

"Blended with patriotic reflections, we proudly recall the fact that we marched nearly 3,000 miles through the country of an enemy alien to us in race and language and performed no act to wound the modesty of women. The flames of no defenseless homestead lighted up our line of march, and no matin hymn or vesper bells were silenced by our coming.

"What has been the result of that victorious war? It acquired for us the vast territories of California, Nevada, Colorado, New Mexico, Idaho, Arizona and Utah, thus adding 1,000,000 square miles, or 640,000,000 acres, to the United States, nearly doubling its area."

FURNITURE IS NOW BEING PAINTED

Peasant Styles Being All the Rage, Get Out Some Castoff Pieces and Treat Them to a New Coat of Paint.

BECAUSE it is of humble name do not imagine that painted furniture is always cheap. Manufacturers of some of our finest furniture turn out a greater number of peasant styles than of almost any other kind, and they go their way into very fine homes. Even Marie Antoinette liked to play at being a shepherdess when it suited her fancy to drop the dignities of royalty. So why should not my lady of fashion nowadays, when she flies to the country for a relaxation of social duties, furnish at least one bedroom in the picturesque manner of the French or Flemish, Dutch or Italian peasant?

And as for the rest of us, who can neither afford to pay for the finest of quality and workmanship plus the smartest of smart ideas in painted summer furnishings nor yet to invest our money in cheap furniture that is cheaply built in imitation of the better thing, what shall we do about it? Why, do for ourselves and by ourselves if needs be and as best we can what a group of decorators are doing for a steadily growing clientiele, who bring to them all sorts and conditions of old and ugly pieces of furniture to be given a new lease of life with the aid of a few carpenter's tools and a paint box.

In one of these remodeling shops was recently seen a charming bedroom set in a dark yet rather brilliant French blue, touched up here and there with a bit of old gold, and still further enriched with an oval of lighter ground on which was painted a basket of old fashioned flowers, inset on the front of the bureau, the foot and head boards of the bed, the chair backs and the center top of the table. The general style of the pieces was colonial. The charm of them was not alone the charm of ravishing color, but their simplicity.

A photograph showed the transformation of this set. Every piece had been of a different kind or color of wood and every one had belonged to that age of horrors which we speak of in whispers as Victorian. With scraping and pruning and trimming until they were all reduced to unfinished wood and shorn of their jigsaw ornaments and then with coat after coat of paint the miracle had been worked.

It is not to be thought for a moment that any woman can from her attic bring discarded beds and chairs and things and then with paint and patience perform like miracles at home or transform hideous pieces of yellow oak and dismal black walnut furniture into pieces as beautiful as those just described, for that takes perfected art and experience. But any woman can who will scrape and sandpaper the bad finish off of any piece of furniture whose possibilities she sees, have a local carpenter bereave it of absurd ornaments, if she cannot also attend to this part of the work herself, and turn out from an improvised workshop in basement or attic really wonderful transformations by the aid of paint and good taste.

BELL-ANS

Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

SONS IN MANY ARMIES.

Six Nationalities Share In Distribution of a Large Estate.

Six nationalities—American, French, German, Russian, Italian and English—will figure in the distribution of the estate of Mrs. Eleanor K. O'Connor, who died in Paris March 11 last.

Mrs. O'Connor was eighty-five years old at the time of her death. She was born in Danbury, Conn.; went to California with her father, who was a forty-niner, and after the death of her husband in 1875 went to Paris with her five daughters, who married gentlemen of five different European countries. The son, John F. K. O'Connor, lives in New York.

The five daughters mentioned in Mrs. O'Connor's will, which has been filed for probate, are Mrs. Ellie Vallette, wife of Colonel Vallette, now in the French army with his son; Mrs. Margaret Cambiaggio, whose husband was a member of the Italian foreign office at Karlsruhe, Germany, and is now connected with the Italian army; Mrs. Sara K. Griffin, wife of a physician living at Wimbledon, England; Mrs. Fannie Krumpel, wife of Rudolph Krumpel of Moscow, a colonel in the Russian army, and Agnes Klipfel, who died recently in Muenster, Germany. Her husband is in the German army, and their son was recently killed in an aeroplane flight.

Culture's Climax.

"Public health work," says Dr. W. T. Sedgwick of Boston, "should not be left to every Thomas, Richard and Henry."

Military Training Would Teach Boys Respect For Authority

By GEORGE ADE, Author and Playwright

ALL through the middle west the people are thoroughly aroused to the necessity of adequate preparedness.

It is criminal to be indifferent to the needs of the nation. Personally I am in favor of the Swiss system of military training. I WOULD MAKE MILITARY SERVICE UNIVERSAL AND COMPULSORY. I WOULD HAVE THE TERM SHORT.

Let me tell you that, while the youth of this country has a lot of "pep," it has come to have an appalling lack of respect for authority. You see it particularly in small towns all over the country—contempt for their elders, contempt for the laws and for institutions. That creates a dangerous possibility.

IT IS MY BELIEF THAT SOMETHING LIKE MILITARY TRAINING IS ABSOLUTELY NECESSARY TO KEEP THESE BOYS AND YOUNG MEN WITHIN BOUNDS.

ORIGIN OF CRISIS WITH CARRANZA

Refusal to Withdraw Troops Rapidly Led to Warning.

THEN THE CALL FOR MILITIA

Actual Hostilities Came Less Than a Month After First Chief Asked President Wilson to Order United States Troops to Return to Border—History of the Exchanges.

Carranza's demand that the United States consent to immediate withdrawal of its troops from Mexico was presented to the state department on May 31 last. Saying that Mexico's purpose was to avoid war if possible, the note charged the American government with bad faith, accused President Wilson of sanctioning a state of affairs grossly inconsistent with his protestations of good will, said that the true purpose of sending soldiers across the border seemed to be the invasion of Mexico and asserted that if the United States had properly protected its frontier there would have been no occasion for the expedition into Mexico.

On the following day, June 1, President Wilson let it be known that, although he had no intention of keeping the troops across the border longer than necessary to enable the Carranza authorities to end the operations of bandits, the United States would not yield to the demand of Carranza.

Many Washington officials believed that the de facto president of Mexico had drafted his remarkable note principally for home consumption. Ambassador Arredondo said he did not regard it as an ultimatum. The cabinet in Washington met on June 6, but the reply to the Carranza note was delayed.

United States Consulate Stoned.

Meanwhile General Pershing and the Mexican general, Gavira, had a conference, and the American consulate in Chihuahua was stoned. Rapid spread of anti-American sentiment, which the Carranza authorities were reported to be encouraging, was evident throughout northern Mexico.

On June 10 it was reported from San Antonio that a Mexican band had raided a Texas ranch and that Captain Bell, with one troop of the Fourteenth cavalry, had crossed the line in pursuit. On the same day General Trevino, acting governor of Chihuahua, was represented as urging all Americans to leave, as he could not guarantee them protection against the rising resentment of the Mexicans.

On June 11 Secretary of War Baker ordered 1,500 additional regulars to go to San Antonio for border patrol service. This action was induced by a report from General Funston telling of Mexicans firing on an American patrol near New Hatchet, N. M., and wounding Private Lee W. Saunders of the Twelfth cavalry. General Funston asked for more men for the patrol.

On June 13 Secretary Lansing sent a preliminary representation to General Carranza calling his attention to the fact that a Mexican raider killed by American soldiers following a raid on Coleman's ranch near Laredo, Tex., was positively identified as Lieutenant Colonel Villareal, a Carranza officer.

On June 15, following conferences in Washington between Secretary Lansing and certain members of the diplomatic corps, it was reported that some of the other powers had offered their friendly assistance in solving the Mexican problem without war.

On June 16 Washington heard unofficially that General Jacinto Trevino, acting under instructions from General Carranza, had informed General Pershing that any further movement to the east, south or west would be regarded as a hostile act and a signal for warfare. Following the entry into Mexico of American troops near Laredo notices were posted in Juarez inviting all Mexican citizens to meet every day to receive military instruction.

Fighting Near Brownsville.

On June 17, while Secretary of War Baker was in conference with President Wilson, word was received of serious fighting on the Mexican side of the border near Brownsville, Tex. General Ricaut announced that the American soldiers in Mexico would be attacked unless a punitive expedition that chased marauders across the line on June 16 was withdrawn at once.

On June 19 President Wilson called out the militia of every state for border duty. On the same day the American punitive expedition that had crossed near Brownsville was withdrawn after being fired upon, with the result that one Mexican was killed and three wounded. General Obregon, Carranza's minister of war, replied to President Wilson's summons to the militia by calling upon all Mexicans to be prepared to defend the country in case of a rupture of relations with the United States. General Pershing's description of the situation as regards his expedition was, "More tense."

On June 20 Secretary Lansing sent the long delayed note to Carranza. It summed up at great length Mexican outrages upon American life and property and warned Carranza that the United States would not recede from its determination to remove the border peril and that the execution of Carranza's threat to attack American troops if they did not retire "will lead to the gravest consequences." Then followed on June 21 the attack on American soldiers at Carrizal, Mexico.

DOPESTERS WORK ON 1916 ELECTION

Vote of 1912 Basis For Figuring on the Results.

BOTH SIDES SEE VICTORY.

Wilson Received Popular Vote of 6,293,019 to 7,604,463 For Taft and Roosevelt, but He Got 435 Electoral Votes to 96 For Roosevelt and Taft. New York's Vote Important.

Now is the time to begin your figuring on the national campaign. Use the election returns for 1912. There are a number of people in the country who believe that the events of the past are the best guide to the future.

Hughes supporters have added together the popular vote received in 1912 by Taft, 3,484,596, and by Roosevelt, 4,119,507, comparing that total, 7,604,463, with the vote that Wilson received, 6,293,019, and summing up the process with the argument that as Wilson's vote was 1,311,444 less than the combined Taft-Roosevelt vote four years ago, why, a united Republican party this year is simply going to "walk away," etc.

Wilson supporters poohpooh popular vote analyses and invite scrutiny of the electoral college vote in 1912, with Wilson's 435 compared with 96, the sum of Roosevelt's 88 and Taft's 8.

The Wilson prophets are absolutely confident that there's to be no political turnover next November such as will so depreciate Wilson's strength in the next electoral college as to give him less than 267 votes, the number necessary to elect a president. In 1912 Taft carried Utah and Vermont, each with four electoral votes. Roosevelt carried California, Michigan, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Washington—six states. Wilson carried forty of the forty-eight states.

Analysis of Vote.

Take New York state's popular vote in 1912 as a specimen for analysis. Wilson received 655,475 votes; Taft, 455,428; Roosevelt, 390,021; total of Taft and Roosevelt's vote, 845,499, or 189,974 more than Wilson's vote. Then come the questions: "Can half of this number of voters, 95,000, be turned from the Republican candidate of 1916 to Mr. Wilson? Has the latter's popularity so increased that in the pivotal Empire State, with its forty-five electoral votes, Wilson can be counted upon to attract 95,000 more votes than gave him their ballots in 1912?"

If Mr. Wilson can get 750,000 popular vote in New York state, then it would seem that his re-election is assured. Whether Wilson's popularity has increased and whether there will be a lessened interest in the Hughes candidacy as compared with the Republican factional animosities that inspired activity in 1912 will be made plain in November.

Take Wilson's own state of New Jersey for analysis. That state gave Taft 88,835, Roosevelt 145,410 and Wilson 178,289. The Taft-Roosevelt total was 234,245, or 55,956 more than Wilson's vote. Wilson partisans in New Jersey are content to say that the candidate whom the state has given to the Democratic party can easily run up his 1912 vote twenty-five to thirty thousand, which, with a reduced Republican-Progressive vote due to lessened party fervor with the cessation of factional disputing, will mean New Jersey, with its fourteen electoral votes, safely carried for Wilson.

The total vote cast in 1912 was 15,036,542, of which the Socialists, it is interesting to note, cast not quite 1,000,000, or less than 7 per cent. The Prohibitionists cast less than 2 per cent of the total vote.

CONTROL OF THE SENATE.

Terms of Seventeen Democrats and Fifteen Republicans Expire In 1917.

Control of the United States senate is another important matter the voters will be called upon to decide at the polls in November. Terms of thirty two senators expire, and both Democrats and Republicans are going to make every effort to supplant members of the opposite political party.

The senators whose terms expire on March 3, 1917, are:

Democrats.

Ashurst of Arizona, Bryan of Florida, Chilton of West Virginia, Culberson of Texas, Hitchcock of Nebraska, Johnson of Maine, Lea of Tennessee, Lee of Maryland, Martine of New Jersey, Myers of Montana, O'Gorman of New York, Pitman of Nevada, Pomerene of Ohio, Reed of Missouri, Swanson of Virginia, Taggart of Indiana and Williams of Mississippi.

Republicans.

Catron of New Mexico, Clapp of Minnesota, Clark of Wyoming, Du Pont of Delaware, La Follette of Wisconsin, Lippitt of Rhode Island, Lodge of Massachusetts, McCumber of North Dakota, McLean of Connecticut, Oliver of Pennsylvania, Page of Vermont, Poindexter of Washington, Sutherland of Utah, Townsend of Michigan and Works of California.

Thirteen Lucky For Him.

Born on the 13th, the thirteenth child, a runaway at thirteen years, married on 13th, made fortune in 1913, bought 1,300 acres of land and his auto number 1313, Howard Grimes of Oregon thinks 13 his lucky number.

About the Town

Miss Helen M. Gomon, of Solvay, is the guest of Mrs. M. W. Johnson.

* * *

Mr. George W. Moody, William Moody and wife, of New Castle, Pa., toured from their home to Fulton, to visit friends and relatives during Old Home Week.

* * *

Mrs. B. Kellogg and daughter, Miss Bessie Kellogg, of Chittenango, N. Y., are visiting friends and relatives in this city.

* * *

Mr. W. W. Hewitt and wife, of Jackson, Mich., were old home week visitors in this city.

* * *

Mr. H. W. Cook and family, of Mexico, N. Y., were the guests of friends and relatives in this city.

* * *

The 1915 high school class reunion was held yesterday at Pathfinder Island.

* * *

Mrs. Mott Smith, of Phoenix, was the guest of Mrs. Monroe Skeel yesterday.

* * *

Miss Janet Cameron, of Rochester, is the guest of Mrs. M. E. Young.

* * *

Mrs. Arthur Wolever, of Oswego, is visiting relatices in Fulton.

* * *

Mr. Clarence Roy arrived home yesterday from Chicago, Ill., where he has been located in business.

* * *

Mr. Joseph Boland reaped a good harvest on Lake Neahtawanta yesterday, bringing home a pickerel, five bass and a string of perch.

* * *

Mr. Arthur Murphy has accepted a position with the Citizen's National Bank.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Crandall returned yesterday from their honeymoon trip.

* * *

Edward Carroll left yesterday to attend summer school at Columbia Uuiversity.

* * *

Mr. William Cullen is the guest of his uncle, B. J. O'Grady.

* * *

Mr. Vincent LaPorte, of Plainfield, N. J., is visiting his uncle Mr. William Bogue.

* * *

The Meridan Athletic Club will play tphe Modern Woodmen some time in the near future. This is sure to be a close game. Teams desiring games with the Woodmen notify Walter Kuppy, 707 Utica street.

* * *

Mrs. F. I. Van Wagenen, of New York city, is the guest of friends in this city.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. Halstead spent the Fourth with relatives in Cato.

* * *

"Big Bill" Edwards and a party of friends from Oswego motored to this city yesterday and was entertained by Messrs. Thomas McCollum, Leon Taggart, William Cullen and George Hill.

* * *

Ruth and Susan Kezer, of South Fourth street, are visiting relatives in Chicago, Ill., and Stevenson, Mich.,

* * *

Mrs. W. J. Barrett has returned to Watertown, where she was summoned by the illness of her sister. for a few weeks.

* * *

Mildred Schuyler, of Syracuse, is visiting Miss Florence Holmes.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kimball and children, are guests of their relatives in this city.

* * *

Misses Clara and Kathleen Montgomery and the Miss Mary and Gladys Barsto have left for their home in Oswego, from a brief stay with Mr. and Mrs. Harry Montgomery.

* * *

Miss Ella Creake, of Syracuse, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. James Waugh.

Mrs. Fred Gardner and daughter, Janet Hoat Gardner, of Los Angeles, Cal., are the guests of J. W. Stevenson. Miss Gardner has in her possession a small horned toad which she has carried with her across the states for about two months. It is a peculiar specie and can be found only in extremely warm climates.

* * *

Miss Fannie Weiner returned to her home in Oswego from a week's visit with Miss Lillian Waldhorn.

* * *

Florence Griffin, of Syracuse is the guest of Georgianna Koch.

* * *

Friends of Eugene Cushman were surprised to hear that he is now located on the battleship Vermont and is now at Hong Kong, China.

* * *

Dr. H. M. Doane and Miss Dickerman have motored to Ashyille, S. C., to be gone two weeks.

* * *

The funeral of Martin Salsbury took place this afternoon at 2:00 o'clock at State Street M. E. Church. The Rev. Mr. Holmes officiating. Burial was made at Mount Adnah Cemetery.

* * *

City Clerk Allen stated this morning that for a summary of the report for the month of June there were twenty-four births, 12 deaths, 16 marriages.

* * *

Miss Myrtle Chauncey is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Marshall.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Matott, of Oswego, were the guests of Hewson Matott, of this city.

* * *

Mr. Glen Borst, of Syracuse, returned for Old Home Week.

MANY IN FULTON TRY SIMPLE MIXTURE

Many Fulton people are surprised at the QUICK action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. This simple remedy acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel, removing such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation; sour stomach or gas. A few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astohishing. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. adv.

PENNELLVILLE

C. D. Hess has moved his family to their new home near Three Rivers.

* * *

Mrs. C. A. Ten Broeck have returned home from a week's visit at Smyrna, N. Y.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Woodruff, who have been attending Camp meetings at Oneida have returned home.

* * *

Charles Jarvis, of Fulton, has been visiting his aunt, Mrs. his aunt, Mrs. George Johnston.

* * *

The Social Hour society meets with Mrs. George Garrison, Wednesday afternoon, there was about thirty present.

* * *

Mr. William Peacock died at his home Friday morning. The funeral was held at the home Sunday afternoon he leaves a widow, three sons and one daughter, also one brothrer and two sisters.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Phillips, of Oswego, called on friends here Saturday.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jarvis and children, of Fulton, visited his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Jarvis, Sr., Sunday.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hirt spent the Fourth of July with her sister, Mrs. Smith in Syracuse.

The L. A. sold ice cream on the church lawn Tuesday, the Fourth. They took in $18.00. The Brotherhood gave the sports of the day including a ball game, greased poll, swimming match and other sports. The auto parade was very nice. Mrs. Arthur Sherwood took first prize.

* * *

Because of a financial arrangement made between Mrs. Mahlah G. Borst and her husband, William, both of Phoenix, the latter was not mentioned in her will which has just been filed with Surrogate Sadler in Syracuse.

"The reason that my beloved husband is not mentioned is that we have made an arrangement between ourselves and I feel that he is amply provided for," read the will. The nature of the arrangement has not been disclosed.

Mrs. Edna Grimes, a sister, of Mrs. Borst, receives the life use of the $4,000 estate in personal property. At the death of Mrs. Grimes $300 is to be paid to Anna Davis, a cousin and the resisdue goes to grand neices and grand nephews.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

NEWS OF THE BIG ELK.

Word was received yesterday by Past Exalted Ruler F. M. Cornell of B. P. O. Elks of this city that the big elk which was used in Fulton during the Elks' carnival, two years ago, is now being erected in Butte, Montana. The big Elk, which is sixty-two feet high will be faced entirely in copper ore.

The base on which the elk stands will be made of peacock ore, giving it the appearance of a greensward. About $12,000 worth of ore has been loaned for the purpose.

The Ever-Ready Storage Battery Service Station

Use the battery that is guaranteed—a storage battery to fit any car. Recharging and repairing of batteries given prompt attention.

We have the largest recharging plant in the city.

DUTCHER MACHINE CO.

This Business Property For Sale at a Bargain. Inquire of M. LOUISE, Agt., 37 South Second Street, Fulton, N. Y.

BIG SALE OF 50 DOZEN WALDORF SHIRT WAISTS

Direct from the manufacturers, including Silk Stripes, Striped Voiles and White Lingeries, Waldorf Waists, made to retail at $1.00 and $1.25;

On Sale SATURDAY morning at nine o'clock, your choice 59c

(SEE FIRST STREET WINDOW DISPLAY)

J. C. O'BRIEN

DON'T

Forget to purchase one of our G. E. Toasters at this week's sale. A $3.00 Toaster for $2.11. Sixteen slices of clean crisp delicious toast for one cent.

KEEP COOL

With an Electric Fan. Special this week 9-inch Crocher-Wheeler Fan, for $8.90.

A full line of Electric time and labor saving appliances at our office, 103 Oneida street.

THE ELECTRIC COMPANY

Phone 144

Old Home Week Novelties

Although Old Home Week will soon be ended, the recollections of friendships renewed will remain fresh for years. What could be more appropriate for the occasion than a gift of some small jewelry novelty from among our large and varied stock?

We are showing lockets, bracelets, pendants, scarf pins, shaving sets and countless others. The quality is unquestionable and the prices very reasonable.

WM. C. MORGAN, Jeweler

The Hallmark Store — Quirk Theatre Building

Beautiful Bust and Shoulders

are possible if you will wear a scientifically constructed Bien Jolie Brassiere.

The dragging weight of an unconfined bust so stretches the supporting muscles that the contour of the figure is spoiled.

BIEN JOLIE BRASSIERES put the bust back where it belongs, prevent the full bust from having the appearance of flabbiness, eliminate the danger of dragging muscles and confine the flesh of the shoulder giving a graceful line to the entire upper body.

They are the daintiest and most serviceable garments imaginable—come in all materials and styles: Cross Back, Hook Front, Surplice, Bandeau, etc. Boned with "Walohn," the rustless boning—permitting washing without removal.

Have your dealer show you Bien Jolie Brassieres, if not stocked, we will gladly send him, prepaid, samples to show you.

BENJAMIN & JOHNES, 51 Warren Street, Newark, N. J.

He Knew.

"The man is best governed who is least governed."

"That's a man's theory," spoke up a henpecked husband. "The women have never subscribed to that as yet."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

First and Foremost.

"My wife has a great deal to say to me about her first husband."

"Nonsense! Your wife was never married before."

"I know it. That's what makes her reflections so painful."—Puck.

BIG FIRE NEAR BOWENS CORNERS

A barn belonging to Mrs. Gere Briggs, of Bowen's Corners, burned to the ground last night. The fire started early in the evening and was well under way before help could arrive from surrounding fire fighters; the barn was destroyed. Agricultural implements and a new cutter was all that suffered from the flames. Fortunately there were no live stock in the building at the time.

Mrs. Briggs stated this morning that the cause of the fire was unknown. The fire attracted many people from that vicinity and the flames could be seen from this city.

NEW DESIGNS ON NEW COINS

The new designs of quarters, dimes and half dollars made their appearance in this section recently. Under the law the Secretary of the Treasury may change the design of coins after twenty years. This is the first time since 1891 that any of these coins have been changed. According to treasury officials the half dollar has fallen into disuse recently. One purpose of the design on that coin is to revive its former popularity.

All the designs are considered more artistic. Adolph A. Weinmann designed the new half dollar and dime pieces. Herman A. MacNeil designed the new quarter model. On the face of the new half dollar is a full length Liberty with an American flag background. Liberty stands facing the dawn of a new day, carries laurel and oak branches, symbolic of civic and military glory. The reverse side shows an eagle perched on a mountain crag with wings unfolded. From a rift in the rock grows a sapling of mountain pine, symbolic of America.

On the new twenty-five cent piece is Liberty, full length, stepping toward the country's gateway, bearing upraised a shield. The right hand carries an olive branch of peace. Above the head is the word "Liberty." and below the date, "1916." The reverse bears an eagle in flight, wings extended, and the inscriptions, "United States of America" and "E. Pluribus Unum." The phrase "In God We Trust" is on both coins.

On the dime is Liberty with a winged cap, on the observe side, and on the reverse a design of a bundle of rods and a battle ax, symbolical of unity.

SEARCHLIGTTS FOR LOCOMOTIVES

Railroad safety and the lives of the traveling public are involved in a sweeping change of locomotive headlights all over the United States that will soon go into effect, unless court action intervenes to prevent it.

High power electric "searchlights" have just been ordered installed on all locomotive under a rule adopted by the inter-State Commerce Commission. This decides a controversy over the relative safety of different headlights that has raged for several years and has engaged the attention of railroad operators, engineers and the mechanics everywhere.

The new rule adopted reads as follows: "Each locomotive used in road service between sunset and sunrise shall have a headlight which will enable persons with normal vision in the cab of the locomotive under normal conditions, to see a dark object the size of a man for a distance of 1,000 feet or more ahead of the locomotive." Only an electric light will practicably meet this test.

Labor leaders, comprising the highest officers of the four train employes' organizations—the brotherhoods of engineers, conductors and trainmen—personally conducted the fight for compulsory universal adoption of the "searchlight," as a safety measure. Operating chiefs, master mechanics and light experts of the railroads protested against the high power lights, as a dangerous experiment.

Safety was the main issue around which the controversy revolved, and accident records were exhaustively analyzed in the evidence presented.

The question will now be put to a practical test on all railroad trains of the country, and the final verdict will be written in the resultant increase or decrease of deaths and injuries due to train accidents, unless court action prevents.

The "Safety First" movement has been given such primary importance in all railroad operation during recent years that tremendous interest has followed the progress of the controversy over headlights, an interest out of all proportion to the expense and mechanical difficulties that the radical innovation would involve.

Operating chiefs of the railroads have been a unit in their opinion regarding the electric "searchlights" pronouncing them, especially dangerous in dence traffic on multiple-track track lines, where many trains are constantly passing one another and engineers must be governed wholly by the colored signal lights of the modern block systems. More than 150 railroad campanies, operating 210,000 miles of trackage, joined in the formal opposition. The railroads based their case on tests and experiments with all types of headlights extending over several years.

The Master Mechanics association, through a special committee of seven experts, conducted exhaustive tests from 1912 to 1915 a score of experts devoting many months to testing every existing type of headlight under varying conditions in different localities. They reported all tests agreed in showing that incorrect reading of colored signals by engineers was increased by the high power headlights; that the dazzling glare produced confusing reflections, shadows and false signals; and that engineers were practically blinded to signals when they were caught between two opposing searchlights, as would frequently be the case in congested east-ern traffic.

There were 67,869 locomotive headlights in use in the United States last year of which total 42,213 were oil-burners; 22,120 were electric arc; 632 electric incadescent, and 2,904 acetylene. The electric headlights in use are confined principally to southern and western territory. The estimated cost to the railroads for new equipment under the rule is upwards of $6,000,000, this not including labor expense in making the change.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

VISITORS REGISTERING.

The following visitors in town registered at the Chamber of Commerce Office, yesterday:

Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Bradshaw, Meriden, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Dada, Syracuse, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs William B Fuller, Syracuse, N. Y.; John J. Stephens, Washington, D. C.; Mrs. Lois K. Smith, Phoenix, N. Y.; Mrs. Grace Smith Dutcher, Phoenix, N. Y.; Miss Grace Antoinette Dutcher, Phoenix, N. Y.

THE COST OF MOVING MILITIA

It will cost the United States government between $1,500,000 and $2,000,000 for transportation alone when all the regiments and units of the New York State National Guard called out by President Wilson are mobilized on the Mexican border.

At the present time about five regiments of infantry have reached the border while a field hospital, ambulance corps and two squadrons of cavalry are due there. The cost of moving thesse units is about $475,000.

The cost of mobilizing the New York troops on the border is based on figures from division headquarters of the National Guard, where it is explained that a fair estimate of the cost of transporting one soldier from New York city to the border is $50; one horse or mule $12 and each transport wagon or field piece $12.

Using these figures the cost of moving a regiment of infantry together with wagons and animals will be $94,145, when recruited at war strength, 1,836 officers and men; 175 animals and 22 wagons.

Moving a regiment of cavalry consisting of 1,236 men, 1,347 horses and mules and 26 wagons on these figures would cost $78,244, while a regiment of field artillery consisting of 1,128 officers and men, 103 animals and 35 wagons and field pieces would cost $69,181.

THE STORY OF THE DISGUSTING FACE

By Wilbur S. Forrest
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

London, June 27 (by mail)—The story of the Disgusting Face, or a personal feud in the trenches in Northern France, was told here today in a letter from a British officer. The letter is divided into three chapters as follows:

I

"The disgusting face, trimmed with blond bristles, surmounted by a grey, peaked forage cap which appeared to be more than half filled with some edible matter then in process of mastication, stuck itself over the German parapet in front of my observation station two mornings ago.

"I received the full shock of its ugliness. There the brute stood, squirming his pudgy nose about in enjoyment of the pure morning air and utterly disfiguring the pretty landscape.

"I grabbed the infantry outlook's rifle and pumped five shots at the face as quickly as I could pull the trigger and work the lever. The face withdrew.

II

"Something like an hour later I was again surveying the smiling valley. The Disgusting Face was gone; but in its place a new arrangement of sand bags on the trench parapet and the presence of a sheet of boiler plating attracted my attention—very nearly fatally.

"There was a sort of wink from the middle of the boiler plate, a sharp crack and then my cap skidded from my head and rolled in the mud at the bottom of the trench.

"Before I had collected my thoughts sufficiently to duck, something said 'Phew' right in my ear. Then I ducked—smartly. I got a periscope and saw something look over the top of the boiler and down again, quick as a lizard. The Face again.

III

"Half an hour later the infantry sentry's periscope was smashed. I got another place in the trench and tried to get sight of the brute from that. Within five minutes he had spotted me and shot at me again. A pound or two of gravel went down the back of my neck and I ducked again.

"Later in the day he smashed another periscope. Then he out-Hunned himself by potting the dog. The dog was the mascot of the regiment—a dirty, dusty, doormatty dog, but quite a gentlemanly old beast. Lived on bread and bacon and used to drink tea out of the men's dixies. For some unknown reason he hopped over the parapet and—'crack' went the sniper's rifle and the poor old dog was shot through the leg.

"After the shooting of the dog something had to be done. I hunted up a trench mortar officer and we arranged that he should put in four trench bombs while I threw high explosive and shrapnel alternately at ten second intervals.

"So at 4:25 precisely I and the trench mortar fellow began. And we avenged the poor old doormat. My second H. E. blew the sniper's boiler plate to blazes: the trench bomb followed almost on top and then I shrapnelled the whole trench for fifty yards on either side. And the trench mortar, by a really glorius fluke, dropped forty yards left of its target, right through the roof of an unsuspecting dug out and sent the whole sky high—occupants included.

"Altogether the doormat, the periscopes and my hat were pretty well avenged."

NEW YORK'S MILITIA LOYAL

Fewer New York State National Guardsmen refused to take the Federal oath of enlistment in proportion than any others according to records from Camp Whitman and other mobilization camps throughout the country.

However, there were so many men who refused to subscribe to the oath that in event of actual hostilities with Mexico it may be possible that the government will be forced to draft them.

The men who refused to take the oath, it is disclosed, form a large contingent of the guard now on the border. In many instances companies or other units, include many men who would not take the oath.

The latter are now on the border in the status of militia. They can be kept there only until the term of their enlistment in the guard expires. If a crisis came within a few hours these militiamen could not be ordered across the border without a draft act by Congress.

Those who make known this inconsistency in the enlistment of the National Guard organizations assert the action was taken with the knowledge of officials at Washington.

It is said that a large majority of the Empire State's guardsmen took the oath of allegiance with the three year clause without objection. In some eastern and western states, however, as many as fifty per cent. of the various commands have been allowed to proceed to the border as militiamen not in the Federal service.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

The Girl at Clancy's Ball

She Had One Short Romance.

By CHARLES ALBERT WILLIAMS

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

John Harmon of the Morning Bulletin puffed abstractedly upon his cigar and gazed around the tumultuous hall. It was the night of Boss Clancy's ball.

The dancing floor was crowded with rotating men and women. Girls of the shop and factory swayed and gyrated in the clasp of men, coarse featured and unintelligent.

Harmon roused from his contemplation of the noisy scene and turned to his companion, Mowbray of the Recorder.

"If anything's going to break here tonight let it come soon," he remarked. Mowbray shrugged indifferently.

A young girl, her face flushed from the last dance, hurried toward the reporters' table. She was a frail little creature of twenty, blue eyed and blond. Frequently as she approached she looked back and fluttered a frightened glance at a man following her.

"Excuse me," she said half breathlessly, halting before the newspaper men and addressing Harmon. "Help me out of this, please. This man has been annoying me—wants me to dance with him. I'm afraid of him."

"Sit down," Harmon said crisply.

He faced her and affected a conversation.

The man came up presently and, pausing only to glare belligerently at Harmon, reached over and seized the girl's arm.

"Never mind your dandy dude friend," he blurted; "spiel this with me." The girl drew back and shook her head.

"Come on," the stranger insisted, retaining her arm.

The girl made a sudden, violent movement and wrenched herself from his grasp. He leaned forward to clutch her, but Harmon caught his hand.

"What's the use?" he remarked, laughing. "You can't make the girl dance. Don't insist. You'll cause a scene."

The stranger turned to Harmon, his mouth drawn into a menacing snarl.

"Don't mix in this unless"— He waved his hand threateningly. "Well, you don't want to be sorry, do you?"

He became enraged at Harmon's cool glance.

"Who are you, anyway?" he bawled. "Know who I am? I'm one of Clancy's men."

Harmon smiled. "I'm not at all interested in your pedigree," he said. "It seems to me you might let her alone in spite of it."

A malignant light glowed in the stranger's eyes.

"Say," he said, "I do things my own way." His voice rose to a shout. "An' this is my gal, see!"

He placed his hands upon Harmon's shoulders. Before the reporter could rise from his chair he was hurled backward, but he caught the edge of the table and escaped a nasty fall.

With lips compressed in an effort to control an outburst, he scrambled to his feet and stood silent a moment considering what he might best do to avert the fellow's violence and yet assist the girl.

He opened his lips to speak, but was interrupted by the cry of "A fight!" which went up from a nearby table.

There was a scuffling of feet, and a group of eager eyed expectant men and women gathered about them. Mowbray stepped between the two men.

"Steady, John," he said. "This sort of thing is hardly"—

Harmon felt a ringing blow upon his head, then suddenly he went blind and unconscious.

Later, in the hospital, he opened his eyes wide and staring. He stirred uneasily and rolled his pounding head upon the pillows.

Somewhat indistinctly he saw the many cots and heard the heavy breathing of those about him. He was bewildered for a space, but sensations of dull, pulsating pain assured him he was back in a real world.

He wondered just what had occurred, but, contenting himself with the reflection that he would soon learn all from Mowbray, he fell asleep.

He awoke in a world of sunshine and less pain. Save an occasional intermittent numbness and throbbing at the temples he was comfortable.

From the nurse who brought him breakfast he learned that it was almost midday.

"A young woman called to see you early this morning," the nurse told him as he handed her the tray.

"A young woman?" he asked.

The nurse nodded. "She said she'd be back."

Young woman? Harmon was plunged into perplexity by the incident and [illegible] to the consideration of this new phase of his adventure.

Of the many young women of his acquaintance he could think of none who might call upon him in his present predicament. One would doubtless visit him upon hearing of his plight, but she had left the city only the preceding afternoon to visit her people in Chicago.

Though he abandoned the enigma after fruitless musings, it recurred to him several times as he lay glancing idly over the morning newspapers.

He was pleased to see that they had omitted any reference to the incident at the ball. For this he mutely thanked Mowbray.

In the evening as the lights were being switched on the nurse announced the return of his visitor.

A few moments afterward she appeared in the doorway. Harmon recognized her in one sweeping glance as she approached his cot—the girl at the ball.

"Well?" he said, repressing his astonishment. She looked timidly down at him.

"You know me?" she asked in a frightened tone. He nodded and smiled to put her at her ease. There was an embarrassed pause.

"I felt I ought to come and thank you," she broke in. He made a careless gesture.

"Quite unavoidable, Miss"—

"Rogers—Sadie Rogers," she prompted, a touch of color appearing in her thin, white cheeks.

Harmon lifted his head and bowed an awkward acknowledgment.

"What happened to me?" he asked.

"No one seemed to know anything about it," she explained, "except that you were hit with a bottle. They couldn't find out who did it. I'm glad, anyway, nobody was arrested. I'd have gone, too, I suppose."

Harmon nodded comprehension.

"How did you find me?" he went on.

"Your friend told me who you were and where they had taken you," she replied, smiling.

She had been standing with her hands behind her as they chatted. Suddenly she made an impulsive little movement and thrust forth a small cluster of roses.

"Will you take these? They help me say 'thanks,'" she said.

Harmon looked at her in surprise and for the first time observed closely her appearance. There was no health in her cheeks, and she looked worn and weary.

The cheap finery of the previous evening had vanished, and in its place had come a coarse black skirt, an ill fitting blue jacket and a broad, flat hat that seemed to accentuate her pale, blue eyed wistfulness.

"It's nice of you," he said at length.

A queer little smile flashed across her face, and she placed the flowers in his hand.

Sadie, faint voiced and diffident, called at the hospital each day thereafter. Her visits were brief and uneventful. She remained for a few moments to exchange the usual commonplaces with Harmon. Always, despite his protests, she brought a cluster of fresh roses.

In the beginning Harmon had decided not to permit her to continue to see him, but she sounded a sympathetic note in his nature, and he found himself unable to send her away.

Though she seemed a poor, pitiable bit of drift, she revealed traces of uncultivated intelligence and refinement and he became interested in her. In the end he resolved to learn more about her and, if possible, to help her.

"You are going home tomorrow?" she asked on the evening of the last day.

"Not really home," he replied, laughing. "I hail from the country." Her tired face brightened.

"Indeed! I'm from up state myself."

"You're all alone here?" he inquired.

She nodded slowly.

"Tell me about coming here—everything," he invited.

She plucked at a jacket button and seemed reluctant to answer, but after a moment said: "Well, father wasn't a much account man, so when mother died I hired out. We had folks up from New York, and I heard so much about the city I thought it was a great place. So I came.

"I'm not a fool," she continued, with a dispirited smile. "Up in the country I went to school as long as I could, but when I got down here it didn't help me any.

"What could I do? I didn't know anything about offices. I wasn't a type writer, and there wasn't much time to decide, so I went into one of the big stores.

"What I make just about goes round for room and meals and something to wear. Once in awhile there's a moving picture show.

"Clancy's ball was free, so me and a couple of girls went there. But I'll know better next time.

"You know, I'd like to do better, to learn something that'd help me. I tried night school, but I couldn't stand it after working all day. And I can't learn from library books," she concluded, sighing.

Harmon was intent upon every expression of her face.

"Wouldn't it be better if you married soon?" he asked.

She shrugged her shoulders wearily. "I've thought a lot about that," she said slowly, "and I don't think I can marry the kind o' men I meet."

Harmon looked at her in thoughtful silence.

"Suppose I could help you in a way," he said directly, "would you let me?"

"How?" Her glance was quizzical.

"A young woman at one of the settlements—she's money and could help you that way. She'd fix it so you'd have time to study. Later on you could get a place in an office, and then better things would be possible."

Sadie's wistful blue eyes shone with sudden interest; then she frowned her doubt.

"You're sure she could do it?"

He nodded. "Yes, she's soon to be married and give up her work. She'd be delighted."

"She's going to marry you, maybe?" she asked, dropping her eyes.

"Yes," he answered.

Her voice fell to a whisper. "Oh, I see," she said. She bowed her head and stared at the floor. Then she raised her face and, smiling, extended her hand. "Goodby," she said.

QUIRK THEATRE

Continuous 2 to 10:30
Matinee 5c, Night: Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c

TODAY—

Bruce McRae and Gerda Holmes in
"THE CHAIN INVISIBLE"
5-Part Equitable Feature.

International News No. 51

FRIDAY—

Kitty Gordon in
"AS IN A LOOKING GLASS"
5-Part World Feature.

4—ACTS VAUDEVILLE—4

SATURDAY—

10th Episode THE IRON CLAW
In 2-Parts.

3d Episode of
"THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA"

"CHIP"
Juvenile Comedy.

4—ACTS OF VAUDEVILLE—4

FOR SALE

Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.

Ready for Prompt Delivery

Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

INSURANCE — REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

Seed Buckwheat

Buckwheat has been a good paying crop for several years. On account of unusual weather conditions this Spring, many acres intended for oats will now be sown to Buckwheat. Seed will be scarce. Buy early. Recleaned seed—$1.00 per bushel. Careful attention to shipping orders.

GILBERT & NICHOLS CO.
Fulton, N. Y.

KAPLAN'S EXPRESS

Baggage, Trucking and Freight Handled Promptly, Ashes Drawn
Household Goods Moved
Prompt Deliveries Terms Reasonable
All kinds of second hand goods bought and sold
Phones Residence 1568, Business 4246
38 S. Second St., Fulton, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Wanted—Men to work on State highway. Inquire of W. F. Hill & Co., 310 Gansvoort St., City. 479

Wanted—Middle aged woman for general house work. Good wages, no children. Apply at5 North Third street, city. tf

Wanted—Good bright boy, over 16 years of age, to learn the printing trade. Apply at the Evening Times. tf

Wanted—At No. 216 Utica street, a girl for general housework. No washing or ironing. tf

Rooms To Rent—Two apartments over Geisler's store. Apply Lewis' Cigar Store. tf

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

Wanted—Competent girls for general housework. Apply 208 South Fourth Street. 475

Teamster Wanted—Steady work winter and summer; good wages. John W. Pratt farm. tf

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

Young Men Wanted to learn the restaurant business. Those who have had experience in some kind of clerking preferred. Employment in our New York restaurants, $7 or $8 per week with board to start. Railroad fare reimbursed after having been in our service for six months. Good opportunity for the right young men to become managers in a reasonable length of time. Apply in person or by mail to H. Morris, Supt., care of Thompson's Restaurant, Grand Central Station, New York city.

CHICHESTER S PILLS
THE DIAMOND BRAND

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

TREACHERY MARKS MEXICAN WARS; CAPTAIN TELLS OF CARRIZAL FIGHT

Morey, Wounded, Thought First of His Duty and Expended His Last Strength In Writing Full Report to Superior.

Alamo Disaster Recalled. How 200 Americans, Refusing to Surrender, Were Killed by Army of 5,000 Mexicans.

WOUNDED and he believed dying beneath the blazing sun of the Mexican desert, his command scattered and no relief within fifty miles, the one thought of Captain Lewis S. Morey of Troop K, Tenth United States cavalry was of his duty.

Shot through the shoulder in the one sided battle of Carrizal, Captain Morey devoted all his energies to writing a report of the action which should tell General Pershing of the fate that had overtaken the scouting party and intrusted it to three unwounded troopers who were with him.

Text of Morey's Letter.

Captain Morey's letter follows:

To Commanding Officer at Ojo Frederico—My troop reached Ojo Santo Domingo at 5:30 p. m., June 20. Met C troop under Captain Boyd. I came under Captain Boyd's command and marched my troop in rear for Carrizal at 4:15 a. m., reaching open field to southeast of town at 6:30 a. m.

Captain Boyd sent in a note requesting permission to pass through the town. This was refused; stated we could go to the north, but not east. Captain Boyd said he was going to Ahumada at this time.

He was talking with Carranza commander. General Gomes sent a written message that Captain Boyd could bring his force in town and have a conference. Captain Boyd feared an ambush. He was under the impression that the Mexicans would run as soon as we fired.

We formed for attack, his intention being to move up to the line of about 120 Mexicans on the edge of the town. We formed, C troop on the left in line of skirmishers, one platoon of K troop on right of line and another K troop platoon on extreme right, echeloned a little to the rear.

When we were within 300 yards the Mexicans opened fire, and a strong one, before we fired a shot. Then we opened up. They did not run. To make a long account short, after about an hour's fire, in which both troops had advanced, C troop to position of Mexican machine gun and K troop closing in slightly to the left, we were very busy on the right keeping off a flank attack. A group of Mexicans left town, went around our rear and led our horses off at a gallop.

At about 9 o'clock one platoon of K troop, which was on our right, fell back. Sergeant said he could not stay there. Both platoons fell back about 1,000 yards to the west, and then, together with some men of C troop who were there, these men scattered.

I was slightly wounded. Captain Boyd, a man told me, was killed.

I am hiding in a hole 2,000 yards from field and have one other wounded man and three men with me. MOREY, Captain.

JUST as treachery marked the fighting in Mexico in the recent encounter, it marked it in all previous wars. The Mexicans seem a treacherous lot; they like to take advantage of the weakness of the enemy. In this connection it is interesting to recall the fight at the Alamo.

Since 1822, when Mexico threw off the yoke of Spain, the few American colonists in Texas had endured much at the hands of the new government. A climax was reached when Santa Anna seized Mexico City, overthrew the Constitutionalists and made himself dictator. He was the particular enemy of the Americans and ordered the arrest of some of the most prominent among them. This brought about clashes between them and the Mexican soldiers. Friends came from Missouri and Louisiana to help, until finally they organized a little army and, with Ben Milam at their head, marched upon San Antonio. After a stubborn house to house fight they took the town on Dec. 7, 1835.

Here they were joined by Davy Crockett and others, and here they awaited the coming of the enraged dictator, fortifying themselves as best they might in the old mission church and its outbuildings.

Attacked by 5,000 Mexicans.

When Santa Anna arrived at the head of his 5,000 men he summoned the 200 Americans shut up in the Alamo to surrender. Their only reply was a shot from the cannon that William Travis commanded. The Mexicans immediately laid siege to the old church and for ten days pressed it with vigor. Its defenders, hopelessly outnumbered and with no chance of re-enforcement, prepared to fight to the death. On March 6, to the sound of the "Deguillo" (No quarter), the Mexicans advanced for the final assault.

Their ammunition exhausted, but fighting with clubbed muskets or anything else that they could find, the heroic band of Americans fought on until, little by little, they were killed to a man. Travis athwart his cannon, Crockett upon a heap of Mexican soldiers in front of the main church door, Bowie, sick upon his cot, defending himself with his famous knife. So "Remember the Alamo" became the watchword of Texas freedom.

DEAD AMERICAN AIR MAN HAILED AS HERO BY FRENCH

"Bravest of Fliers," Papers Say of Chapman—His Devotion to Cause.

The French papers all published sympathetic notices regarding the death of Victor Chapman, the American aviator who was killed in an aerial battle with two German aviators. The papers point out that it was by Chapman's heroism that his comrades were able safely to return to the French lines.

Kiffin Rockwell, a fellow student in the aviation school and Chapman's roommate at the front, writes:

"I was on guard duty, so did not go out when Captain Thenault, Norman Prince, Lufbry and Chapman went reconnoitering over the German lines, where they attacked five Germans. The first three returned, and we were beginning to get anxious about Victor when a pilot telephoned that he was present during the fight and saw one machine suddenly dive straight down and then break to pieces in the air, as if its cables had been severed by bullets.

"Unquestionably Victor had more nerve than all of us put together. We often begged him to be more prudent. He would engage every German he saw, regardless of the conditions and odds. I am sure he was wounded, if not killed, in the air. Several saw him right atop a German shooting at him, but always within the German line.

"There is so much fighting here it is impossible always to tell when a machine is brought down. Victor's wound in the head was not healed, but he insisted upon flying and refused to rest. Since going to the Verdun front he had been twice recommended for citation in the army orders and for the military medal."

BEWHISKERED CANDIDATES.

Hughes and Fairbanks Break Precedent of Many Years.

Hughes and Fairbanks form the first fully bewhiskered presidential ticket in many years. Garfield wore a full beard, but Arthur, his vice president, while reveling in luxuriant side whiskers, had a bare chin.

If he is elected Charles Evans Hughes will be the first Baptist president. There have been eight Episcopalians in the White House, eight Presbyterians, four Unitarians, three Methodists, two members of the Dutch Reformed church, one member of the Church of the Disciples, and two were members of no church.

CIVILIAN SAILORS WILL HAVE AN EASY TIME

Practice Cruise Will Not Include Shoveling Coal and Rough Work.

In view of the fact that the men who are enrolling for the civilian naval training cruise this summer are invariably men of brains and above the ordinary average of intelligence, it has been thought useless to inflict on them the menial duties of a sailor which any untrained man can perform.

"It would be silly," said Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, "to take up the four weeks those men are on shipboard in teaching them how to shovel coal, for instance. We expect the men who go on this cruise will nearly all be capable of some day being petty or commissioned officers, and it would be a waste of time to set them to washing dishes or doing similar labor."

Generally speaking, it is intended to organize, mess, berth, etc., these volunteer men after the methods employed with the midshipmen on practice cruises and get them into the habits of ship life as far as seems necessary; also to drill and instruct them at the lighter guns of the ship batteries as well as in signaling, boating of all kinds, fire control and torpedo defense stations, quartermaster's duties and marine electrical engineering, including radio work.

It is also intended to have frequent emergency drills, such as fire quarters, general quarters, and to have sufficient field artillery and naval drills on shore to give them a rudimentary knowledge of the handling of arms.

An effort will be made to have naval officers of long experience deliver talks to the volunteers on subjects bearing upon the navy's work during the period between Aug. 29 and Sept. 5.

The whole idea of the cruise is not to inflict hardship upon the recruits, but to make it as interesting to them as possible. To that end the navy department has decided to cut down the number allowed on the different ships so that there will be no overcrowding or discomfort in the way of hammock room or delay in serving food. While the regular crew of the ships will be only 40 per cent of sailors, the commissary department, including the cooks, messmen, etc., will be 100 per cent civilians. This will insure good cooking and quick service.

It was at first thought that 4,000 men could be taken on the nine ships, but that would make an average of nearly 500 men to a ship, which would result in severe crowding. The department has now decided to limit the entire number taken to 2,500, and certainly not over 3,000.

MRS. HETTY GREEN

Richest Woman In World, Always Quiet and Always Attentive to Her Business.

Photo by American Press Association.

WANT A SONG WITH PEP FOR SOLDIERS ON BORDER

"Mexico" Favorite, but Other Suggestions Are Coming In.

What will be the army's song along the Mexican border?

The stirring songs and marches that have aroused the patriotism of fighting men all over the world throughout all the years have been long remembered as outstanding features of a hundred campaigns.

In our own country the earliest songs of the Revolution have come down through the years and have been sung by the people long after those whose steps were livened and whose exhausted bodies were straightened to new endeavor by the music had passed away. Every one knows the refrain of "Yankee Doodle," the earliest of the soldier songs of the republic, and then came the "Star Spangled Banner" after the war of 1812, which later was accorded the honor of universal acceptance as the national anthem.

The civil war brought its scores of songs that every one knows and sings yet and appreciates for their lively marching rhythm and the stirring choruses, "The Girl I Left Behind Me," "We Are Coming, Father Abraham," "Marching Through Georgia," "John Brown's Body," "Dixie," "Maryland, My Maryland," and all the others. The Spanish-American war made "A Hot Time In the Old Town" thrill with patriotism.

The question has caused much speculation. Scores have suggested favorite songs with a swing and a rousing chorus that would serve to cheer the men and keep them marching. Attention of most of the men seemed to have centered upon "Mexico," "America, I Love You," and "It's a Grand Old Flag."

The men who had learned the verses of "Mexico" were enthusiastic in their belief that it fits the present conditions and will provide lots of pep and swing for the men.

The words of the song are:

They're get-tin' ready, they're get-tin' ready;
We've had a row, and now they're going to war.
They've got their orders to sail the waters.
With heavy heart they start for a foreign shore.
They're not excited; they're just delighted
To go and shake them, make them stand up and roar
Like they never did before.

CHORUS

They're on their way—to Mexico;
Just see those Yankee fighters, foe exciters,
Gettin' ready to go.
They're on their way—to win the day;
Just take a look at those Yankee brothers
Waving to their gray haired mothers.
Goodby, they're leaving; goodby, stop grieving.
Don't cry; they're glad to go.
They'll make them run like a herd of cattle.
They'll know they've had some battle,
Way down in Mexico.

Come over near them, come on and cheer them;
They've got a right to fight this battle because
They've been invited to go and fight it,
And so they're in to win, and they'll never pause
Until they take 'em, and then they'll make 'em
With head erect respect America's laws.
Give three cheers for them because.

HARVEST HANDS NEEDED.

Western States Call For Laborers to Aid In Gathering Crops.

Bumper grain crops in the west are demanding labor for the harvest. The labor distribution bureau of the United States department of labor has been advised that in Oklahoma 1,000 men will be needed in what is known as the "Panhandle district" and that in Kansas from 35,000 to 40,000 men will be required.

Wages in Oklahoma range from $2 to $3 a day with board. In Kansas ordinary hands will get from $2 to $3 a day with board; stackers, $3.50 to $5 a day; enginemen, $3.50 to $6 a day, and men with teams, $4 to $7 a day. Harvest in Oklahoma was started about June 18 and in Kansas about June 15.

HETTY GREEN'S BUSINESS CODE

Richest Woman In World a Peculiar Character.

HER TEN COMMANDMENTS.

Loathes a Fool, Newspaper Man, and, Most of All, a Lawyer—Says It Isn't Half as Hard to Earn Money as to Spend It—Her Advice to Women Is That They Should Work.

HETTY GREEN'S TEN COMMANDMENTS.

Be careful of your health.
Save your pennies.
Study not how you can spend the money you have earned, but how you can make more.
Watch the people who want to take your money from you. The more money you get the more such people there will be.
Keep on earning money. If you stop earning, your fortune will shrink, as your arm does when you don't exercise it.
See that your head isn't lame. It doesn't matter about your legs.
Learn to know good people from bad.
Take good care of your money. It isn't half as hard to earn it as it is to take care of it.
Be sure not to put all your money eggs into one basket.
Be reliable. That's the golden rule of business.

Hetty Howland Robinson Green, known to a few as "Ready Money Hetty," without doubt the richest woman in the United States, whose income is roughly judged at $5 a minute and who hates a newspaper man, despises a fool and loathes a lawyer—what a character! Columns have been written about her, volumes could be written about her, and yet the interest in this remarkable woman could not be exhausted—received at the courts of Europe, yet wearing a $2 bonnet that will last her a couple of years; clinging closely to a dollar, yet paying $12,000 for a red automobile; full of energy, aggressive, grasping, epigrammatic, honest, fearless, clear headed, suspicious, relentless, yet an advocate of the gentler qualities in woman, a firm believer in the Bible—a Quakeress.

Hetty Green's fortune now is conservatively estimated at $80,000,000. Some persons say she is worth $125,000,000, and they may not be far from right. Her known investments foot up an enormous sum. For instance, she has in real estate, bonds, mortgages and notes on Manhattan security to the amount of $25,000,000; in western railroads, Florida lands and coast investments she has $20,000,000; in stock investments, including industrial shares, she has $15,000,000, and in farming lands throughout the west and in Chicago holdings she has $20,000,000. She put $20,000,000 in western railroads that her son, Edward H. R. Green, might become a railway magnate, a man of affairs, and have a chance to succeed in life.

An interview with Hetty Green is like five minutes in a shower bath—it is invigorating. Her sharp, decisive speech, her pungent remarks, ready wit, her scathing passages regarding all she disapproves, her approving grunt which goes as an indorsement, form quite a contrast to the commonplaces interviewers usually have to endure. But Mrs. Green is not an easy woman to reach. She has not seen many newspaper men in her life. She hates them. And what is more, she is not backward in saying so. If she is in the midst of some litigation she will see a newspaper man. He becomes harmless beside lawyers. Not that she hates the newspaper men less, but that she hates the lawyers more.

As you approach Mrs. Green she will turn sharply and grasp her famous reticule in which she carries her keys, handkerchief, a few other oddments and frequently some securities worth a couple of millions of dollars. You will notice she signs her checks with a common steel pen. Every one else in the bank uses the usual bankers' gold pen, but one of the ordinary schoolgirl stripe is good enough for Mrs Green.

Now, let us ask the complex creature to what she owes her business success. Here is her answer:

"My business creed is sound, and, best of all, it is put into practice. It is not a theory to be ignored. If you owe a man a dollar pay him a dollar, a good dollar, on the day it is due. Don't pay him a dollar and a quarter, and don't try to pay him 99 cents. Then he will know you are neither a knave nor a fool. If you find a dishonest man in your employ get rid of him quietly if you can, but let him go. This is not harsh. It is justice to honest men and proper justice to men who violate their faith. If you have a fool around you let him go. I can't abide a fool, and I have no use for a crook. There may be some about me, but most of the time I know it."

"What about women, Mrs. Green?"

"I have told you every woman ought to work. If women worked more we would see fewer divorces. But what can you expect? Some women never learn to keep house. They get married, and their sole ambition is to wear fine clothes, bleach their hair and wear fine ribbons and laces. Home is the last place they want to think of. They go parading around with their vulgar style and think they are beauties. Poor things! They never get sense."

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic, all Teething Troubles and Diarrhoea. It regulates the Stomach and Bowels, assimilates the Food, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS
Bears the Signature of
Chas. H. Fletcher

In Use For Over 30 Years
The Kind You Have Always Bought
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WEEK END MENU.

SATURDAY—BREAKFAST.
Stewed Fruit of Choice.
Boiled Hominy.
Shirred Eggs. Toast.
Orange Marmalade.
Coffee or Cocoa.
LUNCHEON.
Codfish Balls and Bacon.
Raisin Bread.
Strawberries. Drop Cakes.
Coffee.
DINNER.
Sirloin Steak, Rice Balls.
Creamed Spinach. Radish Salad.
Strawberry Sherbet.
Coffee.

Seasonable Vegetables.

STRING BEANS WITH BACON.—Materials: A pint of string beans, four slices bacon, a small onion.

Directions.—Cook beans until tender; drain. Cut bacon into small bits and fry with the onion, which should have been minced. Cut the beans in one inch pieces, add the bacon and heat all together.

Peas With Mint.—Boil young garden peas, adding plenty of butter and seasoning. Sprinkle lightly with finely chopped mint. Very nice with spring lamb.

Eggs In Spinach Nests.—Take six pieces of toast, cover with chopped spinach about half an inch deep along the edges and hollowed out in the middle. Drop an egg in the middle of each piece of toast. Put in a hot oven and cook until eggs are firm. Sprinkle with a dash of paprika and garnish each portion with a strip of bacon.

Stuffed Onions. — Carefully remove the outside skins from six large onions. Cut the root and stalk ends even. Remove centers except four or five of the outer coats, being careful not to cut a hole in the bottom. Chop six ounces of any cooked meat (leftovers in this way can be used), mix in a bowl with three cupfuls of grated bread, add three teaspoonfuls of flour, three tablespoonfuls of milk and salt and pepper to taste. Fill onions with this mixture and put on the lids. Lay onions in pan, pour in two cupfuls of stock or water and cook gently for an hour.

Candied Sweet Potatoes.—Boil, pare and slice eight medium sized sweet potatoes. Into a hot skillet put a cupful of sugar, turning it about until light brown all over. Add to this caramel a tablespoonful of butter, half a cupful of hot water and cook a few minutes; then pour over the sliced potatoes. Put the baking pan into a hot oven for about five minutes and serve with meat of any kind.

Anna Thompson

Cost of a Villa.

When the Smiths' suburban villa was completed and they counted costs it appeared that the painter's bill was $82 in excess of the paperhanger's charges, the plumber charged $30 more than the painter, the mason received $160 more than the plumber, and the carpenter, who charged $24 more than the mason, rendered a bill three times as large as that of the paperhanger. The lot cost half as much as the house, so who can tell how much the Smiths' new home cost?—Boston Transcript.

Boss of the House.

Caller—Is the master of the house in? Proud Father—Yes. He's asleep upstairs in his cradle.

FOR SCHOOL.

The Always Modish Way to Make a Small Girl's Gown.

Gray chambray is the material used for this one piece, but any preferred

SATISFIED WITH IT.

color in linen, drill, madras or gingham is suitable. Two box plaits are laid under the pointed yoke and extend to the skirt bottom.

Two Bad Diseases.

The failure of the mortality rates of measles and whooping cough to show a reduction during the past fifteen years is due to the fact that these diseases are highly communicable in their early stage, when diagnosis is most difficult.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Notice to Creditors.

In pursuance of an Order of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Eliza Birdsall, late of the Town of Granby, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at law offices of Wilson & Rice, Savings Bank Building, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 4th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 22d day of May A. D., 1916.

NELLIE E. WILCOX, Executrix.

By ARVIN L. RICE, Attorney.

His Undesirable Inheritance

A Clergyman's Efforts to Get Rid of It.

By BARBARA PHIPPS

The new rector, Mr. Chiverly, or, rather, his wife, had moved his effects into the rectory, made vacant by his predecessor, and he was in his study, the furniture still disarranged, struggling with his next Sunday's sermon. Mrs. Chiverly came up from the basement. She had been much worn by moving and had struck the usual number of snags in that irritating process. Judging from her expression, she had now come upon a new one of the most exasperating character.

"Well, my dear?" said the rector, looking up from his work inquiringly and anxiously.

"What do you suppose?"

"I give it up."

"The basement is full of empty bottles."

"What kind of bottles?"

"Whisky bottles, brandy bottles, gin bottles, wine bottles, siphons—all kinds of bottles that should never be in the house of a clergyman, especially one who has preached total abstinence."

"Send them away," replied the rector, turning again to his sermon.

"What! Send them away! How could that be done without publicity? And publicity you know very well would result in an awful catastrophe to us. The town would ring with your condemnation. Your parishioners would be obliged to condemn you, innocent or guilty. Your resignation would be demanded."

Mr. Cheverly was evidently moved by such unjustice.

"But, my dear, these bottles have not been brought here by us. They were left here by Dr. Parkinson, who has just vacated the rectory."

"Not by Dr. Parkinson alone, but by a number of his predecessors. Quite likely some incumbent needed a stimulant and started the pile. The next added to it. The next, being confronted by the problem now before us, took no action, and so the tide of bottles has been steadily rising. Quite likely it started in the cellar. It has climbed to the basement. We cannot let it remain where it is, for we need the room. Besides, if discovered it would prove our ruin."

The rector cast his eyes up to the ceiling for a solution of the momentous problem. He had been struggling successfully with the ancient theological problem of foreordination, but this one of empty bottles staggered him.

"I'll tell you what you do," he said, his expression lighting up—"get rid of a few of them at a time."

"How?"

"To a junkman."

"Have a junkman calling every few days and seen by the neighbors carrying out empty bottles? Oh, James, how impractical you are!"

"How would it do to box them up and ask our grocer to call for them? Mr. Wilkins is very kindly disposed toward me. I will explain the matter to him."

"And he will explain it to Mrs. Wilkins, and she will explain it to her dearest friend, and the dearest friend will spread it broadcast."

Mr. Chiverly heaved a sigh. His wife continued:

"There is but one way out of it. They must be sent to another town to some intimate friend or relative of ours who will dispose of them without risk to us. Your brother Edward would be a good person to receive them. Once in his hands, he can easily dispose of them. But we must pack them so that no one will suspect what the cases contain."

"We might put on them 'Glass: handle with care.'"

"Oh, James! How stupid you are!"

"It would give the impression that they were tumblers and such things."

"Do you suppose our neighbors, who are ever on the lookout, seeing these boxes marked glass, would not at once suspect?"

"I'll order the cases sent, and next Monday you can begin the packing."

Mr. Chiverly heaved a sigh that his weekly day of ease after a hard Sunday's work should be devoted to so unattractive and laborious a service, then resumed his work on his sermon, while his wife went out to continue the arranging of the disordered furniture. In due time the cases arrived. Mr. Chiverly did the packing and the marking, and they were ready to be shipped. A wagon came to the door, the goods were carried out, and Mr. and Mrs. Chiverly fell into each other's arms in transports of relief.

"Thank heaven!" said Mr. Chiverly. "They're gone."

"Oh, James, you've no idea what a load is lifted from my shoulders."

"Do you think any of the neighbors took notice?"

"No; I was looking between the slats of the window blinds and saw no one watching."

"Good. Edward will receive them and dispose of them. And now I must settle down to my legitimate work. Please see that I am not disturbed in my study."

A month passed. One morning at breakfast Mrs. Chiverly remarked to her husband that it was strange they had heard nothing from his brother about the cases sent him. Mr. Chiverly, who was about to raise a cup of coffee to his mouth, stopped short and seemed to be trying to recollect something.

"What is it, dear?" asked his wife somewhat anxiously.

"N-n-nothing. I was trying to remember about writing Ed."

"Surely you wrote him?"

"Of course. That is, I wrote the letter. What I was trying to remember was posting it."

Mrs. Chiverly frigidly rose from the table, went to the study and after a few minutes' search came back with a letter addressed to Edward Chiverly Esq., Cheltenham. The rector looked surprised and crushed.

"I wrote it the day I was packing the bottles," he said lugubriously. "I intended to take it out and post it the same evening, but I was so tired that I went to sleep on the sofa."

Mrs. Chiverly did not deign to reply. She sent their oldest boy out with the letter and, rising from the table, went upstairs without a word to her husband. She had scarcely done so when there was a ring at the doorbell. Mr. Chiverly answered the summons, and there stood a man with an express company's receipt book.

"Sign here, please. Seven dollars and fifty cents."

The rector cast a glance at a wagon standing by the curb and recognized the boxes he had packed a month before.

"W-w-what's this?" he stammered, paling.

"Goods returned, uncalled for."

Mr. Chiverly caught at the doorpost for support. As soon as he recovered his voice he asked the man to wait a minute and, staggering back into the hall, called his wife.

"What is it?" she asked, aghast.

"The bottles."

"What about them?"

"They're at the door."

"Oh, my goodness gracious! What's happened?"

"Edward, not receiving any explanation about them, probably refused to receive them or pay for them."

"Didn't you put on them who they were from?"

"No."

"Why didn't you?"

"I dare not. If they had fallen into the wrong hands it would have been a dead give away."

"Oh, James, what shall we do?"

"There's nothing to do but pay all charges—$7.50—and send them again."

"We can barely scrape enough money together to pay the $7.50."

"Well, then, pay it."

Mrs. Chiverly gathered all the money in the house, even borrowing from her son's savings bank, to make up the required amount. Mr. Chiverly had a dollar bill in his vest pocket besides. Taking it to the express driver he bribed him to take the boxes to his home, promising that they would be called for the same night.

"What are you going to do?" asked his wife on his return to her.

"I'm going tonight to take them and dump them in the river."

"You will do no such thing."

"Why not?"

"Suppose any one should see you doing it."

"I shall be dressed as a cartman."

"That won't help the matter. You will be traced the same as if you were seen trying to get rid of some one you had murdered."

"I'm going to risk it. We can't stand this business any longer. I'm going to get rid of the bottles if I have to swing for it."

Mr. Chiverly's blood was up. His wife's efforts to dissuade him were in vain. When night came he shaved off his whiskers, appropriated a suit of old clothes intended for a poor man he had befriended and started for the house of the expressman. On the way he tried to hire a wagon, but could find no one who would trust him with his team without going with him. So he changed his mind and decided to rely on the expressman.

"See here my man," he said on reaching the house. "I want you to go with me and get rid of these cases. Have you a box opener handy?"

The man brought the tools and opened one of the boxes.

"You see," said the clergyman, "what they contain. Will you go with me to the river to throw them in?"

"There's no need to do that," replied the man. "I'll get rid of them by selling them."

"Do so," cried Chiverly rapturously, "and pocket the proceeds."

"All right. You're sure there's no skulduddery about it?"

"None in the least. These bottles were accumulated by other persons than myself. I simply wish to get rid of them."

"All right. I'll send you anything there is over or above half the profits, less cartage."

"Please don't," urged the rector imploringly.

The man consented. Mr. Chiverly then wrung his hand gratefully and hastened home. Once there he doffed his old clothes, put on his nightgown and went to bed.

For weeks, indeed months, never was there a ring at the rectory doorbell but Mr. and Mrs. Chiverly started as though they were expecting an arrest for murder. And whenever a cart was was heard stopping before the door the lady would peep through the blinds to assure herself that the bottles were not back again before answering the summons.

However, in time the dread wore away and the pair finally found comfort. They remained in peaceful possession of the rectory till Mr. Chiverly was made a bishop.

"What an awful difference, dear," said his wife, "it would have made had the secret of the empty liquor bottles got out."

YOUNG FOLKS' CORNER

Odd Water Cooler.

When a native woman of one of the broiling hot little villages of interior Nicaragua wants to cool some water she sets about it in a way little calculated to cool herself. The average native woman looks frail and listless, but there is no suspicion of listlessness about her process of water cooling. She fills a half gallon earthenware jar about two-thirds full. The jar is made of baked clay and, not being glazed, is partially porous, so that it soon becomes moist on the outside.

By means of two leathern straps firmly attached to the neck of the jar, the woman causes the same to rotate swiftly in the air. The mouth is wide open, but centrifugal action keeps the water from flying out. The endurance exhibited by the native women is marvelous.

When the operator thinks the water is sufficiently cooled she stops the movement by a dexterous twist of her wrist and hands the jar to the man who has been waiting to quench his thirst.

Usually he takes a mouthful, gulps it down and growls, "Moocha calora," which is a native patois for "wretchedly hot," and she patiently resumes her task of describing pinwheels. It is said by this process tepid water can be reduced to the temperature of a cool mountain spring.

Hints For Campers.

Following are two recipes used for waterproofing tent canvas: Before applying the mixture, the material must be washed to remove all starch. When dry immerse the cloth in a solution of one part soap and five parts water; then dip it into another solution of one part copper sulphate in five parts water and let it dry.

Another preparation is made as follows: Boil three ounces of yellow soap in one pint of water and while it is hot add two and one-half pounds of yellow ocher, one ounce terebine and three pints of boiled oil. Apply as a paint.

A fact worth knowing is that matches can be made waterproof, without injury, by dipping them in very hot paraffin. Allow them to cool and they are ready for use. The paraffin does not interfere with their use in the regular way, and they are absolutely protected from dampness.

Don't Bathe Too Long.

It may be taken for granted that most boys and girls are now looking forward to that great treat which summer has in store for them, "going in bathing." A doctor had this to say the other day to a little boy (you will not want to hear it, perhaps, but you had better listen, as it is tiptop advice to the would be bather):

"You know that after awhile you begin to feel the water getting warm. That is the time to get out. The water is not getting any warmer; it is you that are getting colder. Your body has become reduced in temperature, and so the water seems to be getting warmer Fifteen minutes is long enough to stay in the water unless you are on a swim and keeping your body so briskly in action that you are not reducing its temperature."—Brooklyn Eagle.

About Greenbacks.

Not a great many people have taken the trouble to find out why Uncle Sam's banknotes are printed with green backs. The great drawback to paper currency is the likelihood of counterfeiting, and this danger has been the chief reason for the constant study of experts, who constantly seek a plan whereby bills cannot be copied.

Stacy J. Edson was the man who, in 1857, invented the green ink which Uncle Sam uses, and this he patented. It is anti-photographic—that is, it cannot be photographed, nor can it be moved with alkalis by counterfeiters working to get a facsimile of the notes. The secret of the ink's ingredients, of course, is carefully kept.

Riddles.

Why is a fender like Westminster Abbey? Because it contains the ashes of the great.

Why must a fisherman be very wealthy? Because he has all net profits.

Who was the straightest man in Biblical times? Joseph, because he was made a ruler.

What Grand Army man wore the largest cap? The man with the largest head.

What goes around the house, yet never walks? The garden path.

When is a small fish pond like a bird cage? When it has a perch in it.

Transformations.

By changing a single letter turn a stately lady into one reward of greatness, arrived, an amusement, part of a harness, crippled, what one is known by, not different, domesticate.

Answer: Dame, fame, came, game, hame, lame, name, same, tame.

First Day at School.

On Margie Moore's first day at school
She seemed to take it very cool.
I heard her tell the Johnson kid
She knew as much as teacher did.

Next day we had our spelling bee,
And Margie Moore was left with me.
The teacher gave us every word
That kids like us had ever heard.

But when they lengthened out a bit
That Margie Moore near had a fit.
"Humiliation," teacher said,
And Margie's face grew very red.

When Margie failed she hid her face
To hide from us her dire disgrace.
When school was out I kissed the kid
Who knew as much as teacher did.

—Philadelphia Record.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

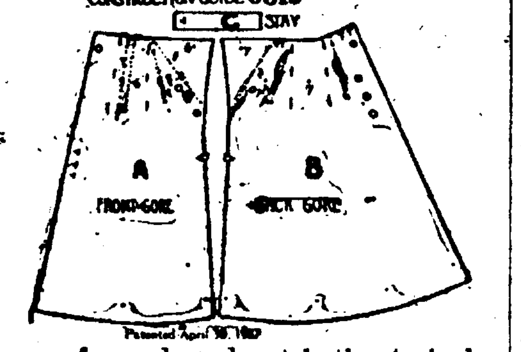
A Graceful Back View.

A lovely frock of satin crepe featuring a three-piece skirt with cascade drapery at the sides, and a bodice with surplice back.

Nothing more graceful could be conceived than this frock in satin crepe with draped skirt and fitted blouse, the back of which is lapped in surplice style. The front of the waist is shirred below a round neck and finished in a point below the waistline, the belt appearing only at each side. The sleeves have inset puffs of lace to match the guimpe. In medium size the design requires 6 yards 44-inch satin crepe, 1¼ yards 36-inch all over lace for guimpe and sleeves and 1 yard 36-inch lining for the waist.

The skirt will be taken up as the subject of today's home dressmaking lesson, because of the great demand for a draped effect that is simple enough to be generally worn. It is a three-piece model, closing to the left of center front under the plain and may be in clearing or shorter lengths. For the stay ⅞ yard belting will be required.

The actual process of making is not difficult. First, study the construction guide, because this is always important. Now, taking the sections which have been carefully cut, slash the front gore to the left of center front along line of double "oo" perforations; finish edges for a placket. Form plaits in gores, and bring folded edges to corresponding lines of small "o" perforations. Stitch along folded edges. Join gores as notched, and leave the seam free above large "O" perforation in front gore. Bring the side edges of the gores (above the side seam) together and stitch through both gores along line of small "o" perforations. If the drapery be desired tacked together, throw the drapery forward, and catch the 4 single small "o" perforations marked 2, 3, 4 and 5 together (see construction guide) to give the desired draped effect.



If the drapery be desired separated as illustrated, line the gores from the side edges to ½ inch inside of line of small "o" perforations; stitch through the gores along line of small "o" perforations: form a plait under the drapery bringing "T" to corresponding single large "O" perforations in front and back gores; and tack. Bring small "o" perforations near the corners marked 6 and 7 (see instruction guide) to corresponding perforations in gores and tack. Gather upper edge of back gore between double "TT" perforations; and make 3 rows of gathers below upper edge ⅝ inch apart. Turn hem at lower edge of skirt on small "o" perforations.

When the skirt is finished, adjust stay to position and add the buttons.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6793. Sizes, 34 to 44 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

Skirt No. 6815. Sizes, 22 to 32 inches waist. Price, 15 cents.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

The woman who cares even a little bit for fashion will want this jumper and blouse, the latter fashioned from charmeuse satin and worn with a guimpe of net, and the latter developed in tub satin. They are in the most fashionable shades of pink, rose and shell. For the jumper, 1 3-4 yards 36-inch material will be required; for the guimpe 1 1-2 yards 36-inch net. The blouse calls for 2 1-4 yards 30-inch silk.

Pictorial Review Guimpe No. 6135; sizes 36 to 44 inches bust. Price, 10c. Jumper 6650, sizes 32 to 44 inches bust, price 15 cents. Blouse No. 6695, sizes, 34 to 44 inches bust, price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Departmen store, Fulton.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children
In Use For Over 30 Years
Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

LADIES

We have on display in our South window a large number of Sets of

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

while they last we will sell them at

70 Cents the Set

The wholesale price is more than that, but we are going to dispose of them at a great sacrifice.

COME EARLY IF YOU WISH TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER

They were bought by the former publishers for premiums, but we are giving no premiums with the

FULTON EVENING TIMES

SAVE YOUR WASTE PAPER

The response of the American people made to the appeal by Secretary of Commerce Redfield to save waste paper and rags has exceeded the expectations of both Mr. Redfield and the paper manufacturers of the country. Word is being received daily at the Department of Commerce from the various paper mills, saying that the amount of waste paper and rags used in the making of new paper is rapidly increasing.

Even with this increase, Secretary Redfield is not satisfied. He appreciates the fact that in a number of American homes there remains a large accumulation of waste paper and rags. He has put his assistants to work to get this material to the factories. The plea of the department to the American people to save their waste paper and rags went out more than a month ago. This plea, however, failed to tell clearly how to dispose of the saving. And it is this problem that the department is now wrestling with.

It is expected that a general notice will go out from the department in a day or so, telling people how to dispose of old paper and rags to advantage. The various chambers of commerce and board of trades are being asked to co-operate with the Secretary. The new notice will advise all who have saved waste paper to write to their nearest chamber of commerce or board of trade asking for a list of junk dealers, any of whom will buy the paper and rags. Where there are no civic bodies, the notice will advise the request being sent to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce in Washington. This bureau is busily engaged in compiling a list of all the junk dealers in the United States.

A bulletin on the subject of saving waste paper was published by Mr. Redfield a month ago. The first edition of the bulletin has been exhausted. A new one will be out some time next week. In this bulletin American housewives are told what kind of material to save, how to assort it, and how to dispose of it.

Under the heading "What to Save," the bulletin enumerates the following materials:

Clean white cotton or linen rags and clean unbleached cotton and linen rags, scraps and small pieces being just as suitable as much larger pieces; cuttings from fancy shirtings, table damasks, toweling, cotton and linen dress goods; soiled white rags, both new and used rags; soiled and dirty rags, except the blue and dark colored ones, including old canvas, awnings, sail cloth and all kinds of soiled rags.

No light colored rags can be too dirty to be used. Black rags, especially old black stockings, should be saved. Woolen rags of all kinds are of value.

All kinds and grades of rags and old papers should be saved. White clippings and shavings from book papers, bond papers, ledger papers and writing papers are especially valuable. Printer's waste, consisting of paper damaged in printing, paper used to clean ink from the inked forms and rollers of printing presses and other soiled printing waste is available for remanufacture into many different grades of paper.

White and colored writing papers are suitable for remanufacture; clean wrapping papers are valuable; old books, magazines, periodicals, account books, etc., can be remanufactured into book papers of excellent quality. Clean folded newspapers is suitable for a number of paper products and is in demand. All grades of cardboard, strawboard, corrugated box board and soiled wrapper papers, newspapers, etc., are suitable and in demand for remanufacture into cardboard required to make containers for packing crackers, cereals and other food products. Burlap bagging and manilla rope are also of value in the production of strong wrapping paper.

In speaking of how to dispose of the waste paper and rags, the Department of Commerce says:

"The disposal of collected waste paper and rags may be handled in any one of several ways:

"By requesting some charitable society to call and receive them.

"By writing a dealer in waste paper or junk to call weekly or monthly.

"By collecting large amounts and then securing prices from local junk and rag dealers.

"By securing the co-operation of one or more large collectors and buyers of this material, who will establish branch agencies throughout the country, and who will also assist in carrying on a general publicity campaign."

Secretary Redfield would like to have his department establish branch agencies for the collection of the saved material, but he is without the authority.

Where there are no junk dealers, such as in small communities or rural districts, it is suggested by the bulletin that a letter be addressed to the Chamber of Commerce of the nearest city, with the request for names of nearest dealers in waste material. The atention ogf storekeepers in small rural towns and villages is called to the possible benefit to themselves by acting as the local collection agency for waste paper and rags brought in by those living in the surrounding community. Fifteen or twenty years ago the collection and sale of old paper and rags was considered a very profitable branch of the business of the country store. Storekeepers buying such waste material from the surrounding community would in turn bze aple to dispose of it in larger quantities to the nearest junk dealers.

It is surprising how quickly a pile of newspapers will reach the hundred pound mark. A woman wrote to the editor of a New York paper recently, saying that she had a great quantity of paper and rags of which she could not dispose. If that woman were a resident of Brooklyn, she would find many a junk dealer who would be glad to call for the waste, weigh it, and pay for it. Nowhere does the business prosper more than in this borough.

What becomes of the material after it is sold to the man with the push cart? He delivers it with other waste to a wholesale house. There are several wholesalers on Third avenue, Brooklyn. The floor is covered with great bales weighing from 700 to 800 pounds. These are packed by great electric presses. Then they are tied, loaded on wagons and carted to the mills. Upstairs is found every kind of paper, cloth and rag scattered on the floor. These must be sorted and packed before being sent away. At the mills the material undergoes a chemical process. Newspaper is made into cardboard and much of our paper comes from white rags. Coarse rags are made into roofing paper. Woolen cloth is treated chemically and clothes are manufactured from it.

THE QUIRK TODAY

"The Chain Invisible." This photodrama from the pen of the celebrated novelist and literary light, Richard Le Gallienne, deals with the fortunes of James Wadsworths. (played by Bruce McRae) and Anne Dalton, (Gerda Holmes). Wadsworth's primitive passions lead him to abduct Anne from a liner in mid ocean. During a fog he spies some wreckage drifting by and seizing Anne in his arms he plunges overboard. After a futile search the steamer proceeds and the half demented Anne and Wadsworth drift ashore on a palm fringed island.

The Daltons, urged on by Sir Richard Towne, who is in love with Anne, start a search. In due course their yacht (after many adventures) sights the island where Wadsworth and Anne are castaways. In the meantime Anne's revulsions for Wadsworth has turned to love; but Sir Richard succeeds, by a crafty plot, in persuading her to leave Wadsworth behind on the desolate speck of land while Anne is carried off on the yacht. Some time later Wadsworth is in turn rescued from the island by a naturalist on a cruise in those little frequented waters. Embittered against all womankind by the belief that Anne basely deserted him and married Sir Richard, Wadsworth lives a lonely and soured life.

But the links of "The Chain Invisible" bring him face to face with the culmination of his destiny in a startling and breath catching scene in which Mr. McRae and Miss Holmes rise to tremendous heights of true artistry and the subtle bond that has held Anne and Wadsworth in the past proves true after the test of years.

One of the few photodramas of the century entitled to be termed really "great."

About the Town

Miss Mattie Parkhouse and Mrs. George Conklin, of Fruitland Park, Florida, are visiting their sister Mrs. W. S. Taft and neice, Mrs. O. S. Bogardus.

* * *

CASEMENT'S HEARING SET FOR JULY 15TH

(By United Press)

London—The hearing on Sir Roger Casement's appeal was today set for July 15th. Five judges will preside over the trial.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEE HEAD

Vance C McCormick, former mayor of Harrisburg, Pa., selected by President Wilson to succeed William F. McCombs as chairman of the Democratic national com[illegible]

KHAKI

Forth go the men in khaki,
Drab as the soil beneath them,
Matched with the stretch of desert,
One with the great waste spaces
Melting away in distance.

Under the soldier tunic
Beats in each man a spirit,
Matched with the mighty purpose,
One with the will eternal
Over creation brooding.

Then when the ranks of khaki
Break on the blinded foeman
He shall behold with terror
That which from sight was hidden—
Earth and the whelming judgment!
—McLandburgh Wilson in New York Sun.

HISTORY ECLIPSED BY THE BATTLE AT VERDUN

Men Fighting and Dying as Never Before, Declares Observer.

In a description of the Verdun fighting Ferri Pesani, special correspondent of the Turin Stampa, thus speaks of the fury of the struggle and the heroism of the French soldiers. He writes in part:

"It is the right of the soldiers to have their sufferings described, to have their many dead comrades honored and to have their heroic deeds told in all details. Avocourt, Melancourt, Dead Man Hill, Crows' Wood, Vaux, Douaumont—only the name changes; the hell is the same everywhere.

"The first arduous task is that of the detachments who are to replace the survivors in the foremost trenches. To 'get there' is an almost superhuman task. The positions of the reserves lie five kilometers (three and one-eighth miles) behind the front, sometimes six or seven. And this whole zone is bathed by the constant terrific fire of the German artillery. The five, six, seven kilometers must be covered in half shattered communication trenches, on roads and paths that are swept continually by shells, on fields dotted with deep holes, under trees that are no protection, but merely form so many more targets for the German shells.

"To cover these five, six, or seven kilometers often takes more than four hours and always costs 10 per cent of the reserve detachments. Arrived at last, the soldiers must remain in their positions seven days, cut off from all the world. For a whole week they must forego all hope of being supplied with fresh food or ammunition. As much as they can carry they take along with them.

"Sometimes they find in the badly shattered communication trenches a little ammunition, but rarely something to eat. Then it is a question of holding out. What have they to hope for? As if on a storm whipped island, they are cut off from all aid and supplies for seven days. Depending entirely upon themselves, no matter how small their number grows, they must hold out and resist the enemy onslaughts.

"If something goes wrong with the machine guns no mechanician can be called, not even some one who could bring necessary instruments to repair the damage. They must help themselves as well or as badly as it is possible.

"For seven days the thundering hail of steel sweeps without pause over their heads, and often a missile buries itself a few feet from them. In the midst of the rain of fire totally enveloping them their heroism is their only support. If only half of them survived that is in itself a wonderful result, which can, however, be achieved only if in the course of one day they have had to repulse not more than three German attacks."

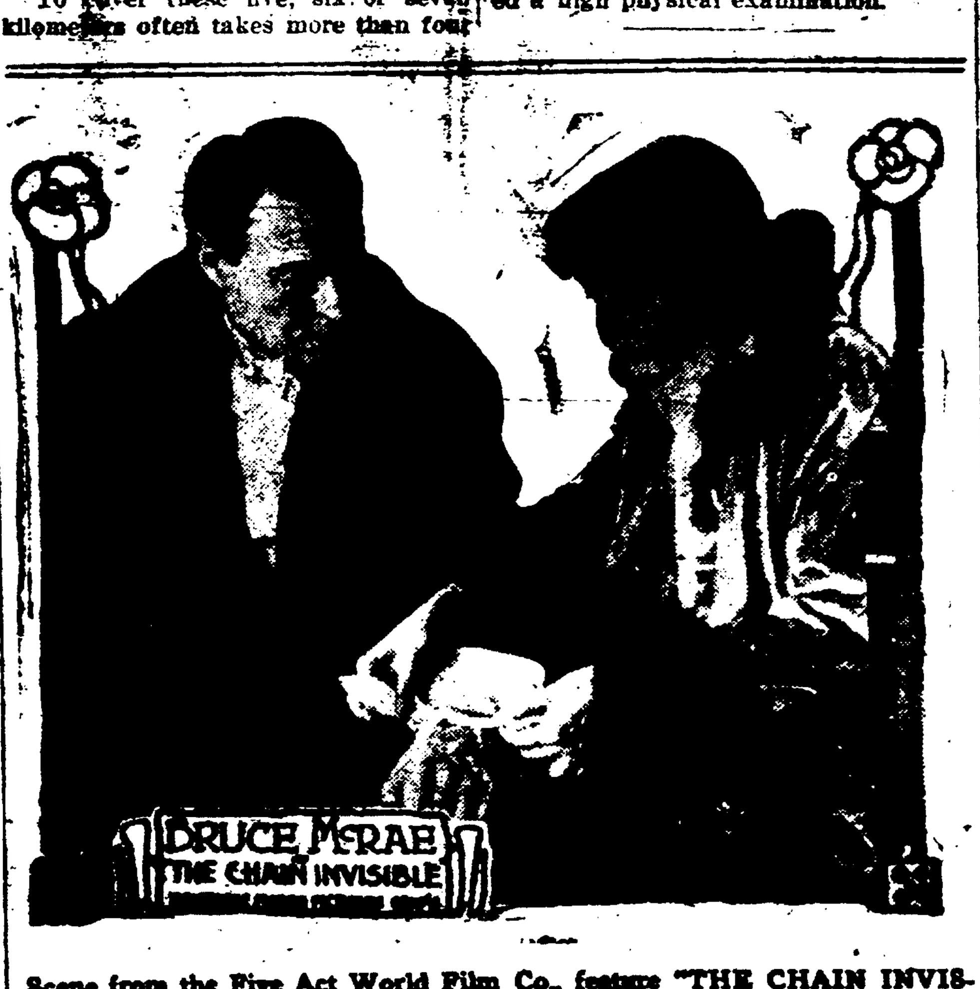
MILLIONAIRE IN WAR.

H. S. A. Stewart, Jr., Private in Pennsylvania Regiment.

"The millionaire kid" of Pittsburgh has joined the colors. He is H. S. A. Stewart, Jr., whose father is a banker, capitalist and director in half a dozen big corporations.

"The kid," reputed to be worth $2,000,000 in his own right, enlisted as a private in Company E, Eighteenth regiment.

He is keeping step with the butcher, baker and candlestick maker. Few knew that the good looking, erect young fellow could have equipped the whole regiment and transported it to the mobilization camp without making even a dent in his pile. He passed a high physical examination.



Scene from the Five Act World Film Co., feature "THE CHAIN INVISIBLE" one of the Photoplays at the Quirk Theatre Today.

INCREASE OF INCOME TAX

Reports from Secretary of the Treasury, McAdoo, show that New York state in its six internal revenue districts has paid info the government $45,230,679 for income taxes. Of this amount, this district, the Twenty-first, with its home office in Syracuse, paid in $916,047.41. Of this amount $443,589.64 was corporation and $472,456.77 was individual.

This shows an increase in this district of $300,000 in round numbers as the receipts for last year were about $607,000.

The second and third districts were as usual the banner districts. These comprise Greater New York. The second is the downtown district and it showed $9,000,000 corporation, and $14,000,000 individual. The third, the uptown district showed $2,000,000 corporation, and $10,000,000 individual. The first district is Brooklyn, the Fourteenth Albany and the Twenty-eighth, Buffalo.

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M. CLARKE.

When Cy Cawkins Expectorates He Does It With th' Wind So's He Won't Have to Spit So Hard.

Just why they call it "hallowe'en" I really cannot say.
There's nothin' very hallowin' about th' pranks they play.

It doesn't require much pull to lead some men into temptation.

Why the Sunflower Is an All Around Valuable Plant.

The pith of sunflower stalks is by far the lightest vegetable substance. Dried sunflower pith, in fact, is ten times lighter than cork, while the pith of the elder tree is three times as light as cork. The sunflower is cultivated to a great extent in central Russia, where every part of the plant is put to some use. The pith in particular is carefully removed from the stalk and used in making life saving appliances. A sufficient quantity can be carried on a person to keep him afloat, and it is so light he will never notice its weight.

End of the Flirtation.

Jack (bitterly)—I suppose you consider it quite a triumph to make a fool of a man.

Edith—Why, no. A triumph means something accomplished that was very difficult.—Boston Transcript.

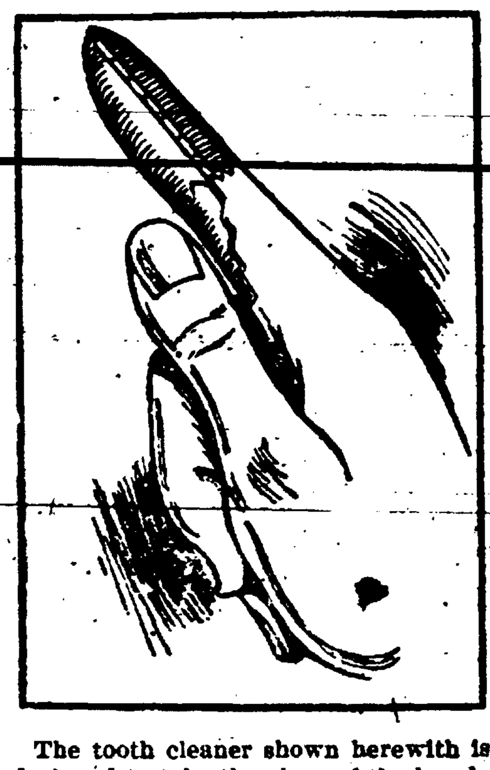
Enough.

"My dear, do you want to go to the movies tonight?"

"No. I've got enough of the movies. I've been watching two families go out of the block this morning and three coming into it."—Baltimore American.

HINTS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Toothbrush Substitute, to Be Discarded After Use.



The tooth cleaner shown herewith is designed to take the place of the brush. It is claimed to be more sanitary because it may be discarded after use once or a limited number of times. The cleaner is made of fabric and shaped like a finger nail to fit over the end of the forefinger. One side of the device is, of course, open weave, which is permeable to tooth powder, which is contained in a tiny pocket back of the fabric. The other side is of closer material designed to rub the teeth with after an application of the powder has been made. Thus one side of the tooth cleaner carries the powder and after a few rubs with that side the finger is reversed and the cleansing proceeds with the other side. The under side of the tooth cleaner is supplied with an extension by which it may be held firmly in place on the finger while in use.

Cream of Onion Soup.

Allow for each person two medium sized onions, one teaspoonful of granulated tapioca, one cupful of milk and one or two tablespoonfuls of butter. Peel and slice the onions, cover with cold water and put on the stove. Bring to a boil and boil five minutes. Pour off water and drain and chop onion and put on to cook till tender in the frying pan with the butter. Cook gently for about five minutes, then add the milk and tapioca cold, the tapioca wet up first in a little milk, and cook and stir the whole for fifteen minutes over a small fire after the boiling point is reached.

Green Pea Soup.

Shell one quart of peas, reserve one cupful of them and put the rest on to boil in a little boiling water; when done, mash them through a fine colander, water and all, return to the fire, add the cupful of peas, a head of tender lettuce chopped fine and a quart of water. When peas are soft, season with salt, pepper and sugar to taste, thicken with one tablespoonful of flour blended with two of butter, let boil until the flour is well cooked and serve with a spoonful of whipped cream added to each dish.

Early Symptoms.

"I'd like to see that office boy of mine thirty years from now."

"Why so?"

"He ought to make a wonder as a tired business man."—Kansas City Journal.

ARE THEY YOURS?

Have a heart that never hardens, and a temper that never tires, and a touch that never hurts.—Charles Dickens.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 478. FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1916 Price, One Cent

CARRANZA TO SUGGEST MEANS TO AID MEXICO

(By United Press)

Washington — President Wilson proposes to allow General Carranza himself to suggest the best means by which this country can aid Mexico to solve her difficulties. This, it was said, is the most important feature of the note from Secretary Lansing to Mexican foreign secretary Aguilar, accepting the latter's proposal for direct negotiations. The note in complete form was gone over by the President and his cabinet in a long session today. It is expected to be forwarded to Mexico City by Ambassador Arredondo tomorrow night. It is very brief, occupying but two typewritten sheets.

* * *

Washington—General Pershing's punitive column will not only remain within Mexico for the time being but it may even go further south to take a wack at the Villa band reported to have practically annihilated a Carranza garrison near Jiminez, Wednesday. This was learned on high authority today following a formal notification of the Villista success by Mexican Ambassador Arrendondo to the State department.

* * *

Mexico City—General Carranza today decreed that Sunday, July 9, should be observed as a national holiday in view of the proximity of the first centennary of the independence of the Republic of Argentine. This holiday is declared, Carranza said, as proof of the sincere friendship of the Mexican people for the people of the South American Republic.

Washington—State Department rumors of Villa and Villistas mobbing northward in considerable force, Secretary Baker said this afternoon, had been confirmed by similar stories from border sources. He had not, however, received Arrendondo's recital of the Carrizal fight until he returned from the Cabinet meeting. The Cabinet determined that the border situation does not yet warrant withholding any of the militia now in state concentration camps nor any present proposal for replacing militia by an increase of the regular army.

* * *

Washington—Mexican Ambassador Arrendondo acting upon instructions from Mexico city, notified the state department that a large Villista band which has been attacking Carranza garrisons at Corralito, might take to the desert and Carranza has asked the State Department to have the American border watched on the American side to prevent a raid. Carranza has promised to do his utmost on the Mexican side to intercept such an attempt if made.

The Phillips Street School, on Phillips Street between West Third and West Fourth Streets.

SCHOOL AND INDUSTRIAL PARADE TO BE TONIGHT

All school children are requested to be at East Side Park tonight at 7:00 o'clock sharp to participate in the School Children's Parade. The children will be looked after and protected by the Elks. All children bring flags. Elks' Band in new uniforms will lead the first division. Knights of Pythias Band of Oswego will lead the second division, which will include all Industrial Floats and representatives of the several Business Concerns of the city.

Dancing will follow immediately after the parade, on Cayuga street, between First and Second streets. The Elks Band will play for the dancing and some lively numbers are promised.

The Committee in charge of tonight's parade is: Harry M. O'Brien, sealer of weights and measures; Herbert W. Adkins, city comptroller.

Special.

Speaker Sweet, of Phoenix, will be in the line of march with the Elks of Fulton.

FIRST DIVISION

Formation of Parade

Flag Bearer
Banner Bearers
Marshall, E. P. Coie and Aides
Elks' Band in new uniforms
Elks and School Children of Fulton

SECOND DIVISION

Aids on Horses
Knights of Pythias Band, of Oswego,
Boy Scouts of Fulton
Fulton Continentals
Industrial and Civic Floats
Representatives of local business houses

LINE OF MARCH

From the Park on South Third street to Oneida street, across the lower bridge to West First street, to West Broadway, across the upper bridge to South First street, to Plaza, where parade will disband.

BRITISH RESUME OFFENSIVE AGAINST THE GERMANS

Paris—The lull in the fighting on the French front on both sides of the river Somme where the Allied offensive is under way, continued throughout last night. The war office today reported utter calm on the Somme front.

* * *

Paris—The open town of Lure was bombarded by a German air squadron and eleven women and children killed, and three wounded. The War office announced today that the French reserve reprisals until later.

* * *

London—British troops resumed their great offensive against the Germans at dawn today with simultaneous smashes against the German line on a wide front. An official statement from General Haig given out at 2:45 this afternoon announced a striking British success east of La Boiselle, where one thousand yards of German trenches have been taken and the capture of several important tactical positions.

WAR ODDITIES.

London—The Metropolitan water board for the City of London announces that streets will not be sprinkled this summer on account of the war.

* * *

Liverpool—Over 800 men employed on government work here were discharged enmasse and replaced by invalid soldiers.

* * *

London—The Bishop of Derby was fined $5 for allowing a bright light to shine from his study window at midnight, thus violating the anti-Zeppelin darkness law.

WATER CARNIVAL WAS A BEAUTIFUL SPECTACLE

Thousands of people from all parts of Oswego County and the state lined the banks of the river last night for the water carnival, which was the feature of the fourth day of the Old Home Week celebration. Canoes, motorboats and small craft of every description dotted the stream, and myriad electric lights and large searchlights playing on the water, mingling with the rays of the moon, contributed to the beauty of the spectacle. The boats were decorated with flags, lanterns and flowers, and a large barge, decorated with lanterns, was anchored near the Rochester street pier. The Elks' band occupied the barge and rendered an excellent musical program during the evening.

Fireworks, including sky rockets and Roman candles were set off at Rochester street. The weather was ideal and in every respect last night's pageant was the most beautiful of the celebration.

MARCHERS WILL MEET AT EAST SIDE PARK

"The biggest parade of the week" is the slogan of those in charge of the Old Home Week celebration program for tonight. C. Milton Allen and Harry M. O'Brien are at work arranging for the contingent of schol children who will appear in tonight's parade. Mayor Lewis is lining up the business men, and a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce is in charge of the industrial division. Every fraternal organization, business house, manufacturing company and school will be represented in the line according to the plans of those in charge and the marchers will meet at East Side Park at seven o'clock. The Knights of Pythias Band, of Oswego, and the Elks' band of this city, will furnish the music for the event, and there will be a number of floats, including many beautifully decorated automobiles, in line. The line of march will embrace the business section and several of the east and west side residential streets.

GREEK "BAD MEN" IN TOILS

Charged with having dangerous weapons in their possession, Harry Sareklis and Steve Contogianakis, two Greeks, employed at the Victoria Paper Company, were arrested by Chief of Police Dyer last night, and will be arraigned before Judge Wilson in City Court today.

A fellow employe at the Victoria Company, who works in the same room and shares a coat closet with them, missed a roll of $113 yesterday yesterday afternoon when he started for home, and suspecting the Greeks, re notified the police. Chief Dyer rounded up Harry and Steve and subjected them to a two hour grilling at headquarters. Both men denied that they had stolen the money but their suspicious actions earlier in the day and the evidence at hand convinced the chief that the men knew something of the job.

Taking another officer with him, the Chief went to the Waldhorn block and searched the room occupied by the men. In a rolled up sheet, he found a ten inch stiletto in a scabbard, which Steve admited was his property. In a trunk, the search revealed a 38 calibre hammerless revolver, with a cartridge belt containing sixty-seven loaded cartridges. Sariklis, after a long lengthy denial, finally confessed that he owned the weapon, and also that he had no license for it. Both men stated that the weapons had never been taken from the house and were simply a form of protection against intruders.

OSBORNE REINSTATED AT SING SING

New York—Thomas Mott Osborne is going back to Sing Sing, reinstated as Warden, with a free hand to carry out his ideas of prison reform.

This was announced last night by State Superintendent of Prisons James M. Carter, in a written statement which began with the news that Warden Kirchway, formerly Dean of Columbia University, had resigned his post at Sing Sing.

But the Prison Department is not to lose Mr. Kirchwey's services. At State Superintendent Carter's invitation he is to become the department's adviser in all matters relating to the improvement of the prison system.

Warden Osborne will resume his duties on July 16. With a new State Superintendent in sympathy with his ideas, he will have every opportunity to build up the Mutual Welfare League and go on with the other progressive movements which earned for him the enmity of politicians.

GOMPERS WANTS SCHOOLS TO TEACH RESPECT FOR WORKING MEN

(By United Press)

New York—The Gary plan of school administration, the obligation of educational systems to union labor and peace had their innings in the discussions of the National Education Association meeting her today.

William A. Wirt, superintendent of the city schools of Gary, Ind., discussed the Gary plan as organized in his home city and as administered in twelve of the leading public schools in the Bronx, New York City. The Gary plan, he declared, has extended in some form or other to most of the leading city school systems in the country.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American federation of labor, advocated training in the schools for efficient work and the teaching in the schools of the doctrine of respect for the rights of the man who carries a dinner pail. Dr. John Dewey, professor of education Columbia University, addressed the association on "Nationalizing Education." Simeon D. Fess, member of Congress from Ohio, advocated the establishment of a national university at Washington.

One of the really belligerent meetings is the meeting of the American school peace league. Fanny Fern Andrews, secretary of the league, insists that public school training must finally make for peace at any price. Delegates to the peace league and prominent educators who are guests at the annual banquet in the Hotel Astor differ as to the educational program to best lead to the establishment of peace with honor.

"The formation of an effective world peace court, so nearly accomplished at the second Hague Conference, declared Miss Fern Andrews, "should be emphasized as an ideal for which the world has hoped and wait ed."

3,000 SKATTERS TO SKAT FOR THE NATIONAL SKAT CHAMPIONSHIP

Milwaukee, Wis.—Three thousand skatters will silently sit down in a large hall here tomorrow for the first three games of skat that will decide about $6,000 in prizes and the national skat championship. Silently the skatters will skat in this Saxon card game that resembles whist, for three hours. The first of the eighty deals will be made at 2-p. m. Saturday and Monday the skatting will be repeated. Then the prizes, of which the first is $1,000 will be awarded.

MID WEST GOLFERS CAN'T GET FAR WEST FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

(By United Press)

Chicago, July 7.—The 1917 Western Amateur golf championship probably will go to the far west. Golfers of the middle western states, including the present title holder Chick Evans, cannot make the trip to the Del Monte, Cal., course where the championship play will take place, because of the great distance and the amount of time needed.

Evans announced some time previous to the qualifying rounds, scheduled for July 17, that he could not defend his title because of the action of the association in choosing the far western golf course as the battle ground.

Only two men of championship calibre in the Chicago district, which has produced champions for the last seventeen years, are among the scheduled contestants. They are Ned Sawyer, Wheston and E. Hoover Rankard, Midlothian.

As a result of the disadvantages in the Western Golf association championship contest, most of the Chicago stars will journey to Philadelphia in August to play for the national amateur championship.

BOA CONSTRICTOR OUT FOR AN HOUR

A boa constrictor, ten feet long, the property of a ten show menagerie at Rochester and South First street, escaped from its cage last night at midnight. When the owner of the show made his final rounds about one o'clock, he discovered the empty cage and with his assistants he immediately started a hunt for the snake.

Fortunately, the reptile lacked strength after its long confinement, and was only able to reach the lower lock before the showman and his helpers located it. Two ropes were thrown around the snake, and it was carried back to the cage in a bag.

Dominicnas Reported Quiet.

Washington—United States marines were expected to enter Santiago, San Domingo, last night or this morning, without opposition. A radio message to the Navy Department today from Admiral Caperton said, "Dominicnas reported quiet." The Navy Department believes there will be no more fighting.

NEW OILSILK COATS SHIELD FROM RAIN

By Margaret Mason.
(Written for the United Press)

Oh she is a rain dear,
In oil silk chapeau
And slick coat of oilsilk
From neck to her toe.

New York—Ducks aren't the only creatures that love to take a promenade on rainy days. All the dear feminine creatures of the human race are just crazy about summer showers now that the swagger new rainy day sets of oilsilk coat and hat are for sale. No wonder, for they are awfully ducky too.

Each sweetheart, wife and mother finds she is a little rain dear in these slick new outfits, but alas, every husband and father finds the rain a little dear for him also.

He disagrees with the soothsayers who advise you to put a little away for a rainy day. Father finds it wiser to put away a lot against the coming of this 1916 rainy season.

These new transparent raincoats of brilliant hued oil-silk that look like isinglass we had with us in limited quantities last season, but this summer they have burst forth in profusion and variety and are topped off with the most perky of little slouch hats to match.

These hats come in two models, one fashioned solely of the oilsilk with a stitched brim and a fold and pump bow of the same around the soft crown. The other is a little soft shaped affair of the oilsilk lined throughout with the same shade of taffeta that pulls down snug on the head and allows the floppy brim to turn up or down or every which way to suit your face or your fancy. A narrow band of the taffeta passing through oilsilk straps ties in an adjustable and fetching bow on the left side and thus regulates the headsize.

These desirable rainday outfits that are as serviceable as they are charming come in all decorative colorings of vivid green, Mediterranean blue, amber, cerise, purple and white as well as sober black and grey—both pearl and Oxford.

When you once glimpse the new umbrellas you'll spend all your time praying for rain. They are chunky and stubby and adorable and also dear.

They are called sun umbrellas and can be carried equally well in rain or shine, but they really are more rainy looking.

They come in black, purple, green, red and blue and all have stocky little clubby handles with either a loop of braided leather like a cowhide whip to slip over your wrist or else they have stunning white ivory rings for the same purpose.

These with the white bracelet effects have their little blunt stub ferules tipped with the white and, also the ends of their ribs.

Others not quite so stubby but most attractive have handles of amber and tortoise and there are also some with handles of white capped in green or blue and some with handles of black and white stripes.

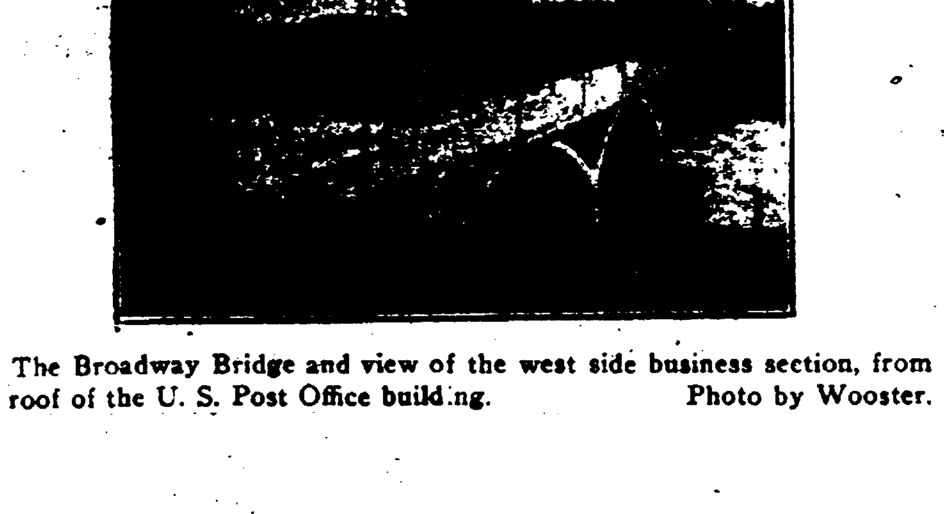
Truly the rain is a blessing to bring out not only nature's flowers, but all the fair human Roses, Pansys, Myrtles, Daisys and Ivys so smartly hatted, coated and umbrellaed.

The Storm Kills Twenty.

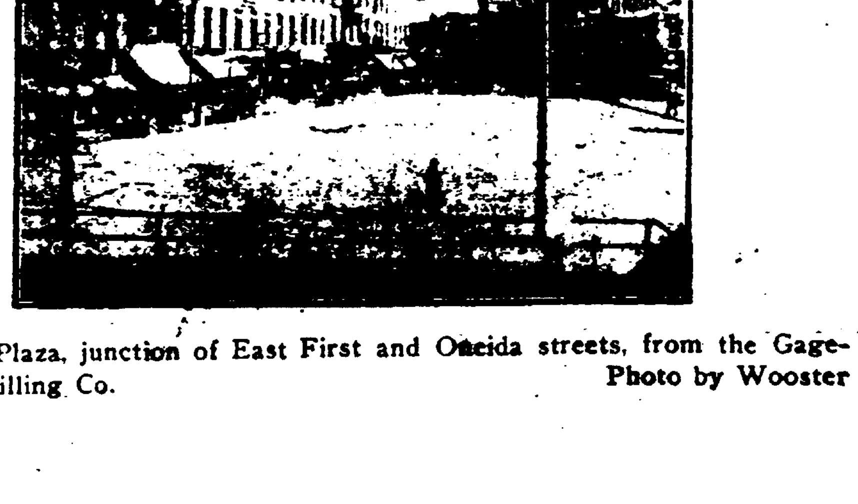
Jacksonville, Fla.—Twenty dead and several million dollars property damage was today's estimate here of the toll taken by the storm which ravaged the coast of Alabama, Louisiana and Florida for two days. Most of the dead are negroes.

A CORRECTION.

An article in last Evening's Times read: "All stores will close Wednesday p. m., during July and August." But nevertheless some of the LEADING stores will remain open.



The Broadway Bridge and view of the west side business section, from the roof of the U. S. Post Office building. Photo by Wooster.



The Plaza, junction of East First and Oneida streets, from the Gage-Elwell Milling Co. Photo by Wooster

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

FRIDAY, JULY 7, 1916

SNAPSHOTS OF NOTABLE PERSONS

Vance C. McCormick, Wilson's Campaign Manager.

Vance Criswell McCormick, new chairman of the Democratic national committee, was the personal choice of President Wilson to manage his campaign for re-election.

A native of Harrisburg, Pa., the new campaign leader is forty-four years of age. He is of Scotch-Irish ancestry and is noted as a hard fighter in whatever field of endeavor he enters, be it sports, civic reform or party reform.

Soon after he left Yale, where in 1892 he was captain of the university football team, he entered politics in his native city as a member of the common council. An independent city councilman, a reformer, he was the reform mayor of his city at the age of twenty-nine, and his performance exceeded his promises. He didn't backslide. He was just as much of a reformer by his acts in office as he was by his words during his candidacy. He was known even by many of his political opponents as "the best mayor Harrisburg ever had."

The Democratic nominee for governor in 1914, he made a brilliant campaign, in which he had the support of many Progressives.

Mr. McCormick is extensively interested in agricultural development. With A. Mitchell Palmer he broke up the old Democratic machine and was one of the leaders at the Baltimore convention who made the selection of Woodrow Wilson possible.

He succeeded William H. Taft as a trustee of Yale and is chairman of the athletic reorganization committee of that university. Mr. McCormick was also a director of the federal reserve board of Philadelphia, from which position he has resigned.

Trade Commission's New Head.

In accordance with the practice of the interstate commerce commission to observe annual rotation in election of chairman the federal trade commission recently selected Edward N. Hurley as its head in succession to Joseph E Davies.

The new head of the federal trade commission is a native of Galesburg,

EDWARD N. HURLEY.

Ill., where he learned the trade of machinist as a boy. From his home he went to Chicago, became a locomotive fireman and before he was twenty-one an engineer. Then he became a salesman of railroad supplies and later went into business for himself with the idea of developing his ideas for making pneumatic tools. The tools began to sell in great quantities. Next he went to England and erected another factory there.

The opportunity came to sell out at a big figure, and he retired to his country place at Wheaton, Ill., where he farmed and bred prize stock. Several years later he went into other business enterprises in Chicago and built up another fortune. Naturally a leader, he became president of the Illinois Manufacturing association. This position and his directorates in railroads and financial institutions he resigned when appointed to the federal trade commission early last year.

CRITICAL DATES IN UNITED STATES CLASH WITH MEXICO.

March 9.—Francisco Villa raided Columbus, N. M.

March 15.—American punitive expedition entered Mexico below Columbus.

March 16.—Colonel Dodd's famous "flying column" entered Mexico below Hachita.

March 27.—Villa reported wounded at Guerrero.

March 27. — Villistas murdered three Americans and two other foreigners at Minaca and Guerrero.

March 29.— Colonel Erwin's detachment routed Villistas at San Geronimo, killing sixty. Four American soldiers wounded.

April 1.—Colonel Brown's detachment defeated Villistas at Aguas Calientes, killing thirty.

April 10.—Citizens of three Mexican towns ambush Howze's detachment, killing one American trooper and wounding two.

April 12. — Parral citizens and Carranza soldiers attacked Major Tompkins' detachment, killing two Americans and wounding six. Americans killed forty Mexicans.

April 12. — Carranza requested withdrawal of American expedition.

April 13.—Major Howze and his detachment reach farthest point south of any American troops, in sight Durango line.

April 22.—Dodd scattered Villistas at Temochic, killing at least two and wounding four.

April 29.—Carranza General Obregon and American General Scott began conference at El Paso.

May 5. — Bandits raided Glenn Springs, Tex., killing four Americans

May 10.—Major Langhorne's cavalry squadron entered Mexico south of Marathon, Tex.

May 11.—El Paso Obregon-Scott conference concluded without formal agreement.

June 18.—President Wilson ordered mobilization of national guard.

June 20.—American note replying to Carranza's demand for withdrawal of American forces dispatched refusing withdrawal and threatening Carranza with "grave consequences."

June 21.—Troopers of the Tenth United States cavalry ambushed near Carrizal. Twelve American soldiers were killed and seventeen captured.

EARNESTNESS.

If we cared wisely and deeply everything in the world would straighten itself out. We should be amazed in the change in ourselves. Then we should marvel at the change in the people about us.

How to Repack the Stuffing Box of Your Car.

In order to eliminate the leaking of a water pump stuffing box, the box nut should be unscrewed and the old packing taken out. New packing in the form of heavy string or a wick should be wound around the shaft and the nut screwed back to its proper position. The grease cup should be screwed down each day. Unless the valve cups leak because of a crack or the cylinders are cracked, it is probable that the water might run into the crank case because of improper washing of the car.

How to Remove Iron Mold From Linen.

A solution of salts of lemon and warm water will remove iron mold from linen. The article should be well rinsed afterward in clean water and allowed to dry.

TRAGEDY AND SADNESS MINGLED WITH FUN AND COMEDY AS GUARDSMEN LEFT

Touching Little Incidents That Marked Departure of Various Companies to the Mexican Border.

Some Mothers Sorry to Have Sons Leave While Others Are Proud That They Can Fight For Their Country.

Wrist Watches Popular.

Now, please don't smile, for the wrist watch already has proved its serviceability with the army officer, but in view of the alleged prejudice of the wits a telegram addressed to all officers of the national guard in St. Paul and signed by an enterprising jeweler savors more or less of alleged humor. Here it is:

"Every minute counts with the alert American army officer. Your high position demands you be punctual, and this you cannot accomplish without an accurate timepiece. Officers under colors in foreign lands speak volumes of praise for the wrist watch. Prices, $3 to $25."

That the wrist watch is seriously considered as an important part of the soldier's personal effects is indicated by the fact that many guardsmen, particularly the officers, already are equipped with the bracelet timepiece.

Sick Wife Wants Him.

Albert E. Pierce of Chicago left a sick wife and a four-year-old boy.

"My wife doesn't want me to go," he said, "but what's a man to do? I don't want to go for my personal amusement. This is something that comes before even a fellow's own, according to my belief."

"The Italian government issued a call for me," said Frank Bilotta, assistant bandmaster, who was for seven years in the navy, "but I refused. They can't have me. My home is here, my wife is here, my three little sons are here. So I fight for Uncle Sam any time he calls me."

How They Leave.

One thing in connection with the Illinois First cavalry's manner of going to war is worthy of observation: Either the I—me—my correspondents who report the departure of European troops are successful fakers or the technique of the First is woefully in need of repairs. The European war is more picturesque, more heroic. A kiss for the wife, a tear for the baby, a prayer for the fatherland and a curse for the foe is the way he goes to win his honors.

But in other fashion do the swashbucklers of the roaring First march forth. If the Mexicans could have heard what their oncoming enemies had to say of them it would take a hardy self respect on their part to survive it. The men of the First scarcely mentioned them. They couldn't be annoyed by them at all. There was too much else to occupy their attention.

"Go to It," Says Dying Father.

Lieutenant A. C. McDonald of St. Louis has a father dying, but is answering the call to arms.

"Go to it, my boy," whispered his father when the boy thought of asking for a discharge. "The country is above everything, and I am only an old man. I wish I could get up and fight for the flag."

As a matter of patriotism a St. Louis man who had passed the age limit—an old soldier who had served through two campaigns—enlisted as assistant cook.

"If I can't do anything else I surely can cook for the boys," he said.

It Didn't Work.

Captain Thomas P. Octigan, adjutant of the Illinois Seventh, was giving instructions to a subordinate when a young woman, sobbing, bearing a child in her arms, approached him.

"I am Mrs. Arthur Karafte," she wailed, "and I came for my husband, who left me to starve and support this infant. He is a private in your regiment."

When Private Karafte admitted his wife had spoken the truth and that he was willing to return Captain Octigan was ready to furnish transportation money to the guardsman and let him return home. The captain looked up the enlistment papers to make out a report when he discovered the man had sworn he was single.

Needless to say the private, who, the captain says, is a good soldier, remained in camp, and the "wife," after admitting she was his sister, went back to Chicago.

Jackstones.

Most girls and some boys have played in their time the game of dibs or knucklebones or jackstones, but few of them know that the game has existed since the third century B. C. and is probably still older. How it was played in ancient days no one can tell, but the ankle joint bones of the sheep, ox, deer and pig were used, and the game was called "astragal," from the Latin word for the ankle joint. In Scotland pebbles are often employed, whence the name "chuckies." Even precious stones and gold and bronze "stones" have been used, and in some countries the bones were marked with numbers and colored to represent kings, queens, knaves and pawns.—London Globe.

Preferences.

Most men like to see themselves in print, but women don't. They prefer silk or satin.

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M. CLARKE.

Sometimes Just by Bull Luck Cy Cawkins Manages to Climb a Tree.

To do our neighbors good is what
We all should strive for, pard;
To be th' Johnnies on th' spot
An' do 'em good an' hard.

Tact is keepin' th' other feller from knowin' what you really think about him.

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M. CLARKE.

When Cy Cawkins Goes Walkin' He Picks a Down Slope. How He Gets Up I Dunno.

"Do the winds of Kansas blow all the time?"
Asked a visitor from an eastern clime.
Said the native: "Stranger, th' average gale
Blows half a week an' then turns tail
And, tho' you may reckon th' labor vain,
Blows its bloomin' self all back again."

NEW YORK MILITIA READY TO USE ARMORED CA[R]

Photos by American Press Association.

Armored auto which is part of equipment N. Y. N. G. will use in Mexico in case of intervention.

Days You'll Never Forget

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

Union Suit For Men Or Boys.

Shapely in line and comfortable to wear is this union suit for men and boys. It may be made with or without sleeves.

It is not always a simple matter to find a union suit that is entirely satisfactory to the men of the family, but here is one that will not fail to please. It is comfortable and cut upon good lines to insure shapeliness.

To produce this model in average size requires 2¾ yards 36 inch material. If made with sleeves, however, 3⅛ yards will be needed.

There are many women who will not attempt to make a man's garment, no matter how successful they are with their own clothes. This design may be attempted without any fears because with the aid of the construction guide every part can be studied before it is put together.

The facing is first stitched to the front edge of the front and this is about 1½ inches deep. The line of small "o" perforations indicate the center front of the suit. When the underfacing is finished, sew the back band to lower edge of the back, then sew under back section to lower edge of the back band.

Now, close the shoulder seam as notched and underface the neck of front and back about 1¼ inches deep. Lap the left front on the right, center-fronts even, and stitch to position from single large "O" perforation at front edge to lower edge.

CONSTRUCTION GUIDE 6780

Next, close center-back seam of drawers and gather upper edge between double "TT" perforations and 1 inch below. Adjust stay to position underneath upper edge of drawers (on right side) and under gathers. Sew upper edge of drawers to lower edge of back band from center back to the left under-arm edge. Close the left under-arm seam as notched; paying no attention to the perforations below back band.

Close the right under-arm seam as notched leaving the edge of drawers free. Close the side seam of drawers from single large "O" perforation in front section to the lower edge. Sew lap to the right side edges of drawers, matching corresponding notches; fold lap through center, fell remaining edge over seam; turn lap underneath back of drawers and tack at upper edge. Tack upper front end of lap to position on under-back section. Close with buttons and buttonholes as illustrated. Turn hem at lower edge of leg on small "o" perforations.

Instead of buttons frogs may be used to fasten the suit, if preferred.

Pictorial Review Union Suit No. 6780. Sizes, 28 to 48 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

Patronize Times Advertisers

PUT ON YOUR THINKING CAP!

Realize what it means to have a Home Daily giving you the Latest

LOCAL & TELEGRAPHIC NEWS SERVICE

---later by Three Hours than you can get in any newspaper circulating in this city, and you don't have to wade through a mass of reading to get what you want.

You get what you want in tabloid form in---

FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress!"

FOR CLUBWOMEN.

An Army of Them Gathers In New York City.

"SERVICE" IS THE KEYNOTE.

The National Convention, Under the Presidency of Mrs. Pennybacker and Twenty Thousand Strong, Assembled From Forty-eight State Conventions.

The greatest organization of women in any nation of the world, the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was born in New York twenty-six years ago.

For the first time it returned to its birthplace, to hold its thirteenth convention. So complete, well manned and vital is the organization that the entire body responds to the pressing of the button or by a wireless that extends to every remote section of every state in the Union. It has working departments in every line of activity—art, civics, civil service reform, conservation, education, home economics, industrial and social conditions, legislation, literature, library extension, music, drama, public health, and subdivisions of these committees to include child labor, woman suffrage, mothers' pensions, peace, preparedness, food sanitation, housing, prison reform, minimum wage, political science, tuberculosis, child welfare and hygiene, Americanization and current events and progress in every department of activity in national life. State federations, city federations and the clubs themselves are completely officered along this same organized line, all tributary to the General Federation.

MRS. PERCY V. PENNYBACKER.

The president of this huge activity, Mrs. Pennybacker, in a recent interview said of the first biennial she attended in Los Angeles fourteen years ago:

"The very immensity of the convention was an inspiration. There were women from every state in the Union representing every phase, every group of our national life. While some feel that the General Federation must be reorganized so as to bring about a smaller attendance, let us never forget that a part of the inspiration comes from the bigness. History has never yet fully written the chapter as to the part the General Federation has played in wiping out sectional feeling. One reason why there is in this dear land of ours today so little north, south, east or west is because the women of all sections meet, counsel and labor together. When we learn to know each other appreciation comes and misunderstanding disappears. When we work together for some great cause petty differences drop from us like wornout garments.

"It was also a delight to see that beauty had its place in this great gathering of women. No one has forgotten the 40,000 calla lilies which were used as decorations the first two days, followed by carnations, they in turn giving way to numberless roses of every hue.

"Everywhere one felt that the women took their work seriously and with the conviction that it is truly worth while. On the last night this earnestness developed into a spiritual climax. We closed in a moment of ecstasy as we sang 'God Be With You Till We Meet Again,' while from the galleries the fair hands of the California women let flutter down millions of rose petals, covering us with fragrance.

"Is it not significant that these impressions make of themselves the one word 'service,' which is the keynote of our entire federation life?"

Cream Salad Dressing.

Mix one-half tablespoonful salt, two and one-half tablespoonfuls melted butter, one level teaspoonful flour, a shake of pepper and two egg yolks together until smooth. Add three-fourths cupful of thin cream. (You may take the top of the milk in the bottle and have the rest of the milk to use for something else.) Then add slowly one-fourth cupful vinegar or lemon juice, stirring as you add it. Cook over hot water until thickened. If too thick after standing to cool, thin with cream or milk.

A Fashion Tip.

The neck line of the modish summer frock is much wider and therefore much more becoming than was last year's—that is, the frock is cut away at the sides of the throat as well as in front, showing something of the shoulder line.

TO THE FORE WITH CAMP COOKERY

Don't Eat Indigestibles Merely Because You Live In a Tent—Try Chicken a la Cowboy and Beans Baked In a Hole.

IN a permanent camp the fireplace may be built of flat stones with an opening three feet above the ground, and this kind of fireplace eliminates the backaches that come from bending over a low fire. The log cooking stove is most convenient and is made by placing two green logs, their upper surfaces flattened, on the ground in a long, narrow V, the fire being built between them. The point of the V should be left open some three or four inches, the opening at the wide end being not more than nine inches. The coffeepot can be placed on a narrow end, and kettles may be hung on improvised cranes. A folding portable grate will be convenient.

Never start to cook until your fire is reduced to live coals, and to secure the proper bed of coals the original fire must be made of hard wood, as the embers from hemlock, pine or spruce lose their heat in a very short time. If you have a folding baker the bread, biscuit and cakes may be baked in it. Otherwise you will have to place the dough in a greased pan and cover it with another pan of equal size. This kind of baker is buried in the hot embers, care being taken that there are plenty of hot coals on the top of the pan as well as underneath.

Prepared flour is almost a necessity in camp, as it only requires wetting with milk or water to make delicious biscuit or pancakes. However, if you haven't this flour biscuits are also easily and quickly made by mixing two pints of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt and a piece of butter or pork fat the size of an egg, with sufficient milk to make a dough soft enough to roll out and cut into shape. Bread is made in the same way, except that the dough is thinned to form a batter which will just pour, and it must be baked in deeper pans. To make good old time southern hoecake mix one quart of cornmeal, one teaspoonful of baking powder and one teaspoonful of salt, with enough cold water to make a thin batter. Let it rise, then stir it well and bake. This is delicious eaten either hot or cold with butter or sirup. Toothsome flapjacks, which are the traditional fare of all outdoor people, are made by adding to two pints of flour two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt and one egg, sufficient milk to make a batter which will pour easily. Cook in a well greased frying pan over a hot fire.

The auxiliary oven or bean hole is the fireless cooker of the camp, and in it chicken, chowders, fish, stews, green corn (unhusked), potatoes in their jackets and many other good things may be cooked. In it you can cook the best baked beans you have ever eaten. Soak the beans overnight, and in the morning parboil them in fresh water until the skins crack when you blow on them. Put half the quantity of the beans in the pot, add a good sized piece of salt pork, the remainder of the beans and another portion of pork. Add two tablespoonfuls of molasses and cover with hot water. See that the lid fits on tightly. Slices of onion may be added if you care for the flavor. The oven in the meantime has been made ready by keeping up a continuous fire until the stones are hot.

If there should be a farm near the camp where you can procure a fat, yellow legged pullet to cook as the cowboys do you will find it greatly to your taste. Dress it carefully, dust the inside with salt, pepper and flour, adding a slice or two of sweet bacon. Treat the outside in the same way, putting a slice of bacon under each wing and across the breast and tying the wings down; then wrap it tightly in a napkin made from flour sack muslin and tie well. Drop the chicken into cold water, wrap another napkin around it and dip again. Then wrap in many thicknesses of newspapers, wetting very thoroughly each time. Rake the coals of the fire aside, cover the space with cold ashes to prevent the live coals from touching the chicken; then put in the well wrapped pullet, dust with cold ashes, pile on the hot coals and leave undisturbed for an hour. Remove the coals and charred paper carefully at the end of that time and from the inner napkin deftly turn out upon a dish the baked chicken.

BELL-ANS

Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

THE GOING AWAY GOWN.

The bride is apt to be most deeply concerned about her "going away" and traveling costume after the vital matter of the wedding gown has been settled. Blue seems to be a favored color for "going away" gowns this season, and a few smart models in coffee tone have been recorded. One bride of important social standing appeared in a citron colored taffeta and citron cloth topcoat to bid goodby to her assembled friends. Since hat and buttoned boots were black, the effect is very smart indeed, but citron is a shade that admits no rivals in color alongside.

He Stuck to the Show.

"Did you follow the plot of the musical comedy?"

"No. I stayed in my seat and watched the performance. The plot left the theater right after it was introduced."—Detroit Free Press.

LOVE AND RESPECT.

The most essential thing in marriage is respect. It is above love, above compatibility. Respect will bring one through the most trying disagreements with no bruise on the soul, whatever wounds there may be in the heart. Therefore, men and women, never, never marry any one you don't really respect, however passionately you may love.

About the Town

Willis Morin, president of the Chamber of Commerce announced today that the rumor prevalent yesterday confirmed today the report that D. S. Hollenga had resigned as secretary of the Fulton Chamber of Commerce. Mr. Hollenga has left the city and his present whereabouts is unknown.

* * *

The Old Home Week celebration passed through a trying crisis yesterday, shortly after the resignation of Mr. Hollenga was handed to the Chamber of Commerce directors. The secretary had been one of the leading figures in the celebration, and his exresult. Mayor Lewis, however, after a conference with President Morin, announced that all plans would be carried out and a committee of business men joined with the Chamber of Commerce to complete the work. Additional subscriptions to defray the expenses so far undergone are being solicited today and both committees report generous donations.

* * *

The Police Department has certainly established an enviable record thus far during the celebration. Although crowds of fifteen and twenty thousand people have jammed the streets during the past few days, normal traffic conditions have been maintained and there has been no disorder of a serious nature. Some ten arrests have been made since Monday, most of them for public intoxication. The department, and its efficient head are to be complimented on their work.

* * *

Fred Feeley, city stenographer, who classes with the best pitchers in this section of the state will twirl for the Rowans of Oswego against the Red Sox of Pulaski today.

* * *

Harry Chadwick, an employe of The Hunter Arms company caught his hand in a machine at the Arms plant yesterday afternoon and suffered a badly crushed forefinger. Dr. Cusack was called and the injured digit was treated. The physician said an amputation would not be necessary.

* * *

Dr. Hall, city health officer, has received a circular communication from the State Board of Health relative to the infantile paralysis epidemic, which is sweeping the southern part of the state and New York city in particular. The State Board announces that a strict quarantine and the isolation of all peculiar cases of sickness among infants and young children is the only sure means of preventing the spread of the disease.

Accordingly, the city health officer requests all citizens to take every precaution in this regard, and asks that all suspicious cases of sickness among infants be reported to him at once.

THE QUIRK TODAY.

"As in a Looking Glass." Details with realistic and unsparing power the lives of Society men and woman of today.

It deals with a trap set by a scheming and surpassingly lovely woman for a man who, too late she realizes she loves with a burning passion that halts at nothing.

How does she save him from the masked fate she herself has planned for him?

Notice to Elks.

All Elks are requested to meet at Elks' Home tonight at 6:45, to participate in the parade this evening.

JUDGMENT AGAINST G. L. PRATT RETURNED

An unsatisfied judgment, amounting to more than $13,000, against George L. Pratt, of South First street, this city, has been returned to Buffalo, by deputy-Sheriff Fred Collins. The Buffalo plaintiff, who is represented by Hubert L. Gilman, and whose name is withheld for the present, states that the sum represents borrowed money, Mr. Gilman said today.

According to the plaintiff's attorney, Mr. Pratt declared the judgment valueless, and stated he was unable to pay it. The plaintiff intends to renew the action in the Oswego county courts.

MADE 7 TRIPS TO EUROPE

Capt. A. B. Scott of the steamship Monteregan, now in New York harbor, has been the guest of his friend, L. J. McQuade, proprietor of the Clark House of this city for the past few days. Captain Scott is an experienced mariner, and in the past twelve months has made seven trips to Europe, principally for the purpose of transporting munitions, both to the Allied and Central powers.

A Stranger In a Strange Land

He Found a Strange Custom, but Was Equal to It.

By ALAN HINSDALE

A man left an eastbound train passing through a region west of the Missouri river and inquired for transportation to a point out of the line of travel. He was unmistakably English in the appearance both pertaining to himself and his clothes. But instead of the rugged physique of many Britishers he was rather small, and his pale cheeks gave evidence of ill health.

There was a difference of opinion as to how he could best reach the point he was aiming for. Some said the road was rough and the gentleman did not look as if he had the strength to stand the jolting of a wagon. Others said that if he went on horseback he would be equally shaken up. The wit of the locality suggested that there were road agents along the line of travel and it was as much as a man's life was worth to pass over it. In saying this the joker nudged the man next him, as much as to say, "Reckon I'll skeer him out of it."

The stranger listened to these suggestions with evident interest, except the one about the road agents, this not seeming especially to interest him.

He succeeded in hiring a team to take him to his destination and was driven by the owner, who, wondering at an Englishman wearing apparel by no means like any other in that region, was inclined to question him as to why he was there. But the gentleman was taciturn and gave him no satisfaction. Indeed, after the driver had abandoned his attempt to pump the stranger the Englishman asked a few questions for himself.

"I've heard," he said, "that out here there's what they call 'gun play,' that there are men who think no more of putting lead into a fellow than into a dog."

"Oh, that sort o' thing used to be practiced out here," was the reply, "but we're civilized now and don't do it any more. At least it's not practiced near the railroad, where the country has been settled and court law has taken the place of gun law. But away from the railroads there are spots where the rough element has congregated, and there's still more or less free shooting. This region where you're going is one of that kind. I wouldn't advise any man to go there without a couple of revolvers slung under his coat."

"They say," remarked the stranger, "that when there is shooting going on it's the man who 'gets the drop,' as you say out here, on his enemy and shoots quickest who comes out ahead."

"That's about it," said the other.

The stranger turned from the use of the revolver to the products of the country and learned that horses were raised there and the point he was making for was a center of a horse raising territory, from the fact that it comprised fine grazing lands. The stranger asked about the price usually paid for an average horse and the best way of getting horses to market and seemed interested in getting all the information on the subject that was to be had. But he didn't admit that he was personally interested in horseflesh.

On reaching their destination—a hamlet of half a dozen houses—they drew up before a store building which was the only one in the place that was not occupied for dwelling purposes except a saloon. As the Englishman alighted he attracted the attention of a couple of men standing on the porch of the saloon.

"Just look at that, Pete," said one of these men, referring to the stranger. "Did you ever see anything so purty in your life? Do you ketch on to the glass eye—and the hat?" The Englishman wore a helmet. "Just think o' you or me sportin' sich a lookin' thing as that on our heads. And see the yaller things on his shoes, all buttoned up so ladylike."

"Shouldn't wonder if we could get some fun outen him, Bill," said the other. "Let's ask him in for a drink."

Meanwhile the Englishman was making inquiries for a man he had come to meet. The two men on the saloon porch approached him, and Bill addressed him in this wise:

"My friend, I don't know who you are or where you come from, but it's the custom o' this place to treat all strangers hospitable, and me and this yere gent invites you to step into the saloon and have somethin'."

"Your kind attention is appreciated, I assure you," said the Britisher, "but seeing that I don't drink I must ask you to take the will for the deed."

"That's somethin' we never do in these parts," was the reply, "especially when a man's invited to drink. Perhaps you're not aware that with us refusin' to liquor when invited is considered an insult."

"Oh, you mustn't take it that way. I'm not in good health, and my doctor has forbidden my drinking spirits."

"Your doctor don't know what fine whisky we have in this yere country and how much good it'll do a sick man. Come on, stranger; we'll give you the best dose o' medicine you ever tuk in your life."

"I reckon, Pete," said Bill, "that seein' the stranger is a shriveled, mis'able specimen we'd better let him off. It ain't no credit to force sich a ladylike purson as don't appreciate true hospitality."

"Well, then, suppose he sings us a song!"

"I'm no hand at singing," said the Britisher.

"There's nothin' about singin'," Pete persisted, "to hurt a man's insides even if he's sick. Now, see here, stranger; you give us a song mighty quick."

He took a revolver from his hip, cocked it and brought it to bear on the Britisher, who, seeing that he must either sing or get shot, began to do the best he could in giving "Britannia Rules the Waves." He had scarcely given a stanza before Pete put a bullet so close to his ear that he stopped at once.

"See here, young feller," thundered Pete, "we don't want any such song as that! Give us somethin' American."

"I don't know any American songs," replied the Britisher. "I might teach you some money making tricks. I know one or two that you could practice on your friends to a profit."

The prospect of getting something by which he could "do" a friend caught Pete's attention. He asked what kind of trick the stranger meant and was told that the best explanation would be to show the trick.

"Have you got a coin about you?" he asked.

Pete fumbled in his pocket and pulled out half a dollar, which he tossed to the Britisher. The latter put it in the palm of his right hand.

"You see," he said, "that it's in the palm of my right hand. I put it up my sleeve this way. Now I take it out of my sleeve and put it in the palm of my left hand. I now put it up my left sleeve and take it out and put it in my left hand."

While he was doing this he was fumbling up his right and left sleeves. After placing the coin for the second time in his left hand he pulled his cuffs down over both hands; then, with fists closed, he extended one fist toward Pete and the other toward Bill.

"Which hand is the coin in?" he asked Pete.

"The left," was the reply.

"What do you say?" Bill was asked.

"Left."

Something cracked in the stranger's right hand, and Pete fell forward on the ground.

"Hands up!" to Bill.

Bill's hands went up in a hurry.

"Would you oblige me," said the Britisher to the man who had driven him, "by relieving the gentleman of his weapons?"

The driver acceded to the request and handed two revolvers to the Britisher.

This ended the episode. Pete was picked up, dangerously but not mortally wounded. Bill agreed to call the affair, of which he had not approved quits, shook hands with the Britisher and was handed back his weapons.

At that moment a man rode up on horseback and, seeing the stranger, asked:

"Major Hollester?"

"Yes, Mr. Grierson."

"Well, let's proceed to business."

The two men withdrew from the others and after half an hour's conversation returned to them.

"Gents," said Grierson, "this is Major Hollester of the British army. He was wounded fighting the Turks and has since been in poor health. So they sent him over here to buy horses for the British army. I have just contracted with him for a thousand head."

"I'm sorry," said Major Hollester, "to have put lead into one of your number. I've seen enough of that at Gallipoli and don't want any more of it."

"How did you get the drop on Pete and Bill?" asked a witness to the shooting.

The crowd seeming more interested in an explanation than in the apology, the major explained. Pulling up his sleeves, he showed slung to each arm by an elastic strap a Derringer pistol.

"You see," he said, "when I shoved the half dollar up my sleeve and pulled it down again I pulled one of these little barkers with it, so that when I extended my hands I had one of the weapons in each hand. I was ready then to fire, but so disliked hurting any one that I delayed a moment, as if carrying out the trick, asking this man Pete and then the other which hand held the coin. I wouldn't have thought of carrying arms in this peaceful country, but Mr. Grierson wrote me that there were some lawless characters about this location and it was the custom to wear arms. I have found the Derringer the best weapon for short notice and fixed a pair in my sleeves."

"What's the cross you wear on your watch chain, major?" asked a looker on.

"Oh, that's what they call the Victoria."

"What's that?" asked several persons at once.

The major looked abashed and, turning, walked away toward the conveyance in which he had come.

"I think," said Grierson, "that I can explain what that is. I received a letter stating that Major Edgar Hollester, V. C., would visit me for the purpose of buying horses for the British army. Noticing the V. C. tacked to his name, when I wrote my correspondent again I asked what it meant. The reply was that it stood for Victoria cross, a decoration given by the British government for bravery. I was also informed that Major Hollester had especially distinguished himself at Gallipoli and had been decorated therefor."

Major Hollester, having completed his contract for horses, was driven to the railway station and proceeded northeastward, entering Canada.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well. what a glorious condition to attain, and yet, how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.

HOW TO FORETELL FINE WEATHER AND BECOME A PROPHET.

—If you want fine weather look for fine weather signs. Here are some of the most reliable, for they are based upon scientific facts:

When the sun sets in a sea of glory—that is, when the sunset sky is red—you may expect clear weather on the following day.

At night when the moon is clear and shows clean edges, with no halo or ring of mist surrounding it, there is little danger of rain.

When the wind blows steadily from the west the weather will continue fair. It very rarely rains in most of the states with the wind in the west.

Watch the smoke from a chimney or from your campfire. It is a good barometer. If the smoke rises high it means clear weather. The smoke will also show you from which direction the wind is blowing; so will a flag on an upright flagstaff.

A gray early morning, not a heavy, cloudy one, promises a fair day.

A heavy dew at night is seldom followed by rain the next day. Think of it this way and you will remember: Wet feet, dry head.

If there are no clouds at the western horizon you need not worry about others.

Animals are said often to show by their actions what the weather will be, and there is reason in this. Some of them certainly have a knowledge of coming storms. We are told that spiders are especially sensitive to weather changes and when they make new webs the weather will be fair; if they continue spinning during a shower it will soon clear off.—St. Nicholas.

MOTH PREVENTION.

How to Keep the Pests From Destroying Carpets.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," so now is the time to send out all your scouts in search of the troublesome moth. If you fear that they are at work at the edge of your carpets it will sometimes suffice to lay a wet towel over them and press well with a flatiron, but the best way is to take the carpet up, clean it and give a good deal of attention to the floor. Look in the cracks, and if you discover signs of moths wash the floor with benzine and scatter red pepper on it before again putting your carpets down.

Heavy carpets sometimes do not require taking up every year unless in constant use. Take out the tacks from these, fold the carpets back, wash the floor in strong acids with a tablespoonful of borax dissolved in them. Dash insect powder or lay tobacco leaves along the edge and retack. Turpentine is also very good. Mix the turpentine with water in proportion of three tablespoonfuls to three quarts of water and then, after the carpet has been well swept, go over each breadth carefully with a sponge dipped in the solution and wrung nearly dry. Change the water as often as it becomes dirty, and the carpet will be nicely cleaned as well as disinfected. All moths can be kept away and the eggs destroyed by using these means.

MANY IN FULTON TRY SIMPLE MIXTURE

Many Fulton people are surprised at the QUICK action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. This simple remedy acts on BOTH upper and lower bowel, removing such surprising foul matter that ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. A few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astonishing. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. adv.

How to Pack Books to Take on Your Vacation.

Vacation time is coming, and not a few of us will want to take books along for pleasure or study. There is a wrong as well as a right way to pack books. Pack in small packing cases, stand the parcels on end with the edges next to the sides of the cases and the back of the bindings pointed toward the inward, placing crumpled newspapers between them to ease the pressure on the round part of the books, which may be otherwise pressed flat. Line the case with wrapping paper, place a thickness of paper over the top and fasten on the cover with screws in preference to nails.

How to Tell if the Valves of Your Car Are In Good Shape.

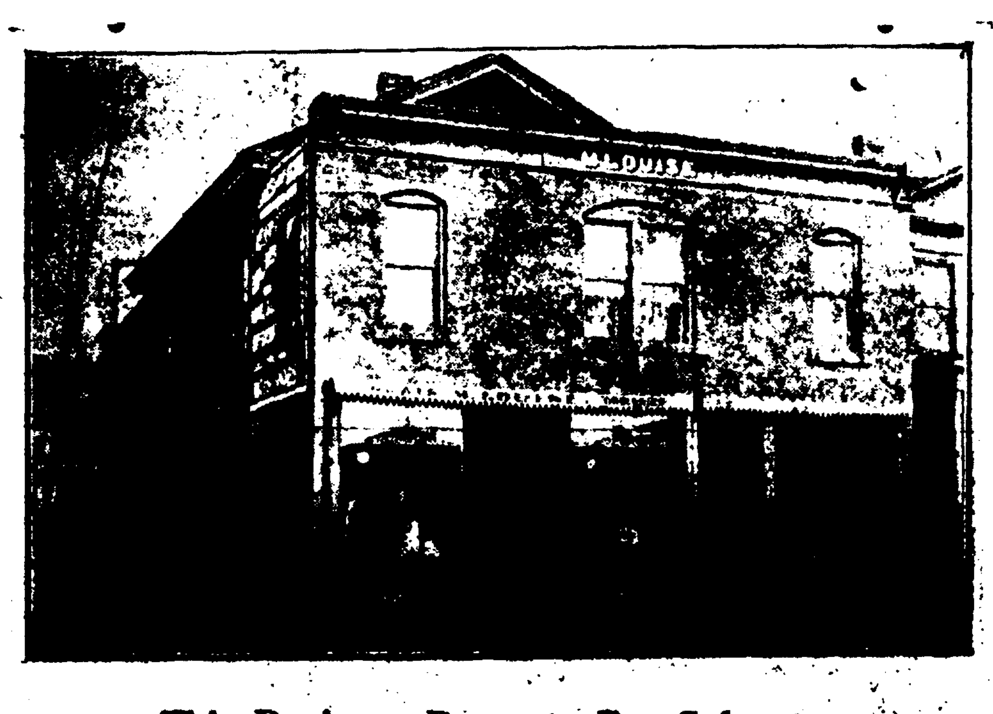
The fit of the valve head and the valve seat is usually tested by coating the valve head with Prussian blue pigment and pressing it in place against the seat. The valve is then turned about one-fourth of a revolution and removed. If the valve and seat are proper fit the entire seat will show blue, though if the valve head and seat do not fit only the high spots or ridges on the valve seat will receive a coating of blue. In such an event the grinding process should be continued until the valve head has an even bearing all over the seat.

The Ever-Ready Storage Battery Service Station

Use the battery that is guaranteed—a storage battery to fit any car. Recharging and repairing of batteries given prompt attention.

We have the largest recharging plant in the city.

DUTCHER MACHINE CO.



This Business Property For Sale at a Bargain. Inquire of M. LOUISE, Agt., 37 South Second Street, Fulton, N. Y.

DON'T

Forget to purchase one of our G. E. Toasters at this week's sale. A $3.00 Toaster for $2.11. Sixteen slices of clean crisp delicious toast for one cent.

KEEP COOL

With an Electric Fan. Special this week 9-inch Crocher-Wheeler Fan, for $8.90.

A full line of Electric time and labor saving appliances at our office, 103 Oneida street.

THE ELECTRIC COMPANY

Phone 144

Old Home Week Novelties

Although Old Home Week will soon be ended, the recollections of friendships renewed will remain fresh for years. What could be more appropriate for the occasion than a gift of some small jewelry novelty from among our large and varied stock?

We are showing lockets, bracelets, pendants, scarf pins, shaving sets and countless others. The quality is unquestionable and the prices very reasonable.

WM. C. MORGAN, Jeweler

The Hallmark Store — Quirk Theatre Building

TOMORROW

WE PLACE ON SALE 50 DOZEN

WALDORF SHIRT WAISTS

These waists known so well for their perfect fit and tailoring, come to us direct from the manufacturers. This lot consists of silk stripes, striped voiles and white lingeries, made to retail at $1.00 and $1.25.

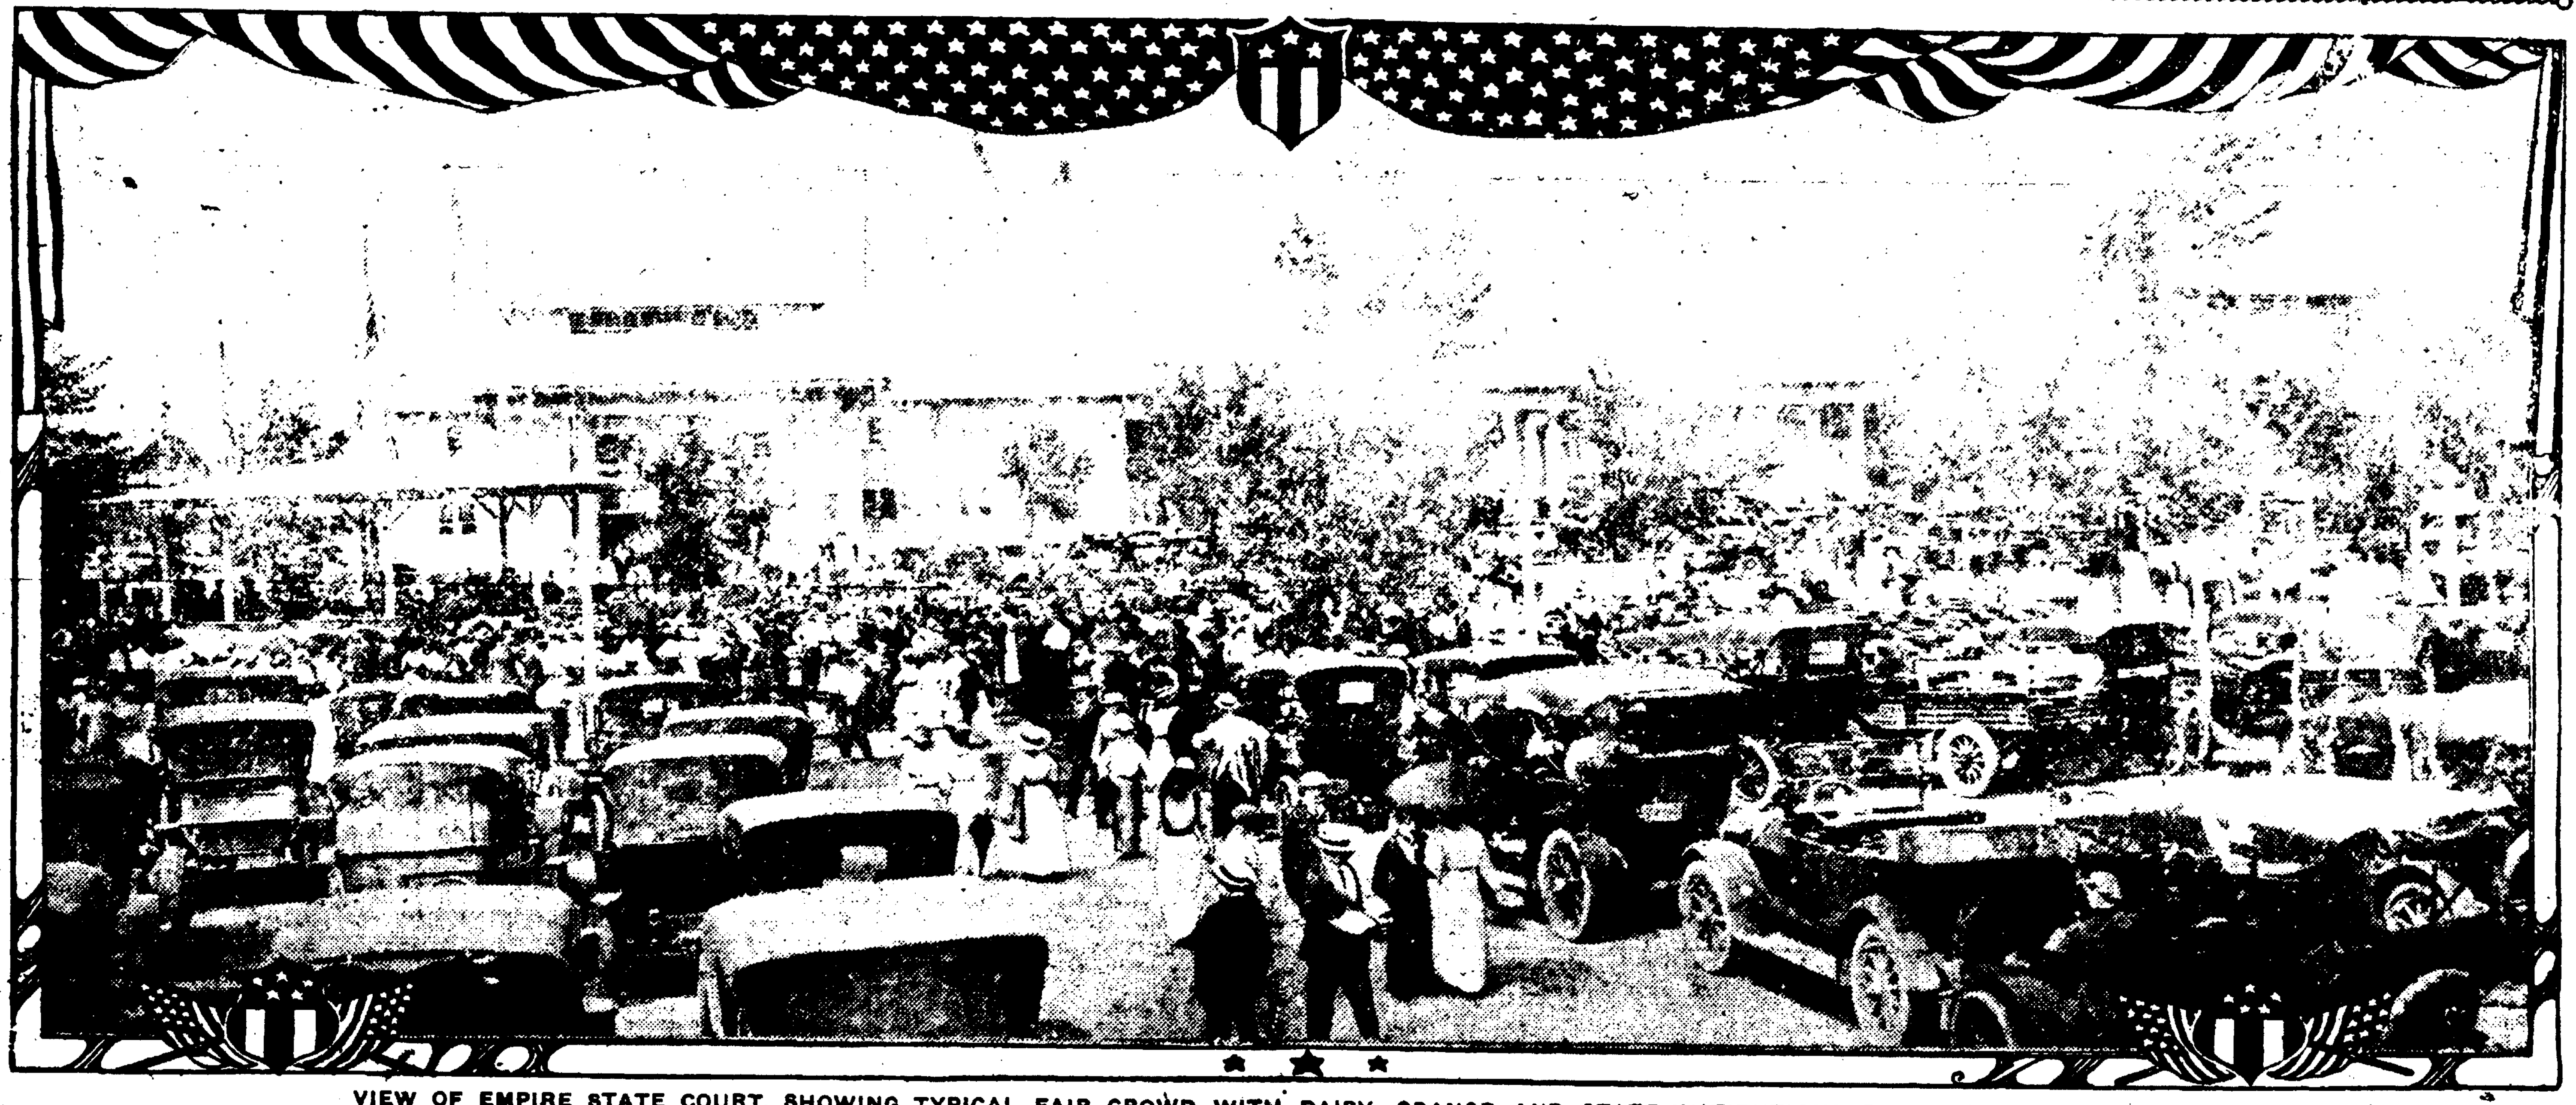
Sale commences TOMORROW MORNING at NINE o'clock.

YOUR CHOICE 59c

(SEE FIRST STREET WINDOW DISPLAY)

J. C. O'BRIEN

Characteristic Scene at the New York State Fair



VIEW OF EMPIRE STATE COURT, SHOWING TYPICAL FAIR CROWD WITH DAIRY, GRANGE AND STATE INSTITUTIONS BUILDINGS IN BACKGROUND

NEW YORK STATE RICH IN AGRICULTURE

And Home Markets Are Calling For Greater Production

Interesting Object Lessons Promised at State Fair—Educational and Entertainment Features on Elaborate Scale Planned by Whitman Commission.

who is willing to give labor and intelligent care to his farm.

This is where the State Fair comes in and performs an important function for the state. Instead of simply pointing a way back to the farm, it takes the man interested in the agricultural industry through a series of lectures and demonstrations which leaves no doubt about the success that attends intelligent effort in farming. Also realizing that if New York farmers are to compete with farmers of western states they must have the advantage of the most modern implements and machinery, it provides a farm machinery exhibit second to none in the land.

The State Fair with its experts and authorities shows the correct way to farm and demonstrates the proper machinery and implements for farm use. The finished article is represented by the magnificent exhibits.

The State Fair Commission does not intend that the men and women who visit the Fair shall devote all of their time to study. While the numerous educational features will leave no doubt as to the original purpose of the exhibition, there will be plenty of opportunity for relaxation and entertainment.

This is presidential year, and the Fair will not only have a governor as a guest, but it will undoubtedly have a president. Governor Whitman will not limit his activity at the Fair Grounds to the formal address of the state's chief executive, but he will make a complete inspection of the exhibition to determine whether the new commission named by him has done its part toward fulfilling the Whitman pledge of honest and intelligent public service.

President Woodrow Wilson is expected to honor the Fair with a visit, as is the Hon. Charles Evans Hughes, presidential nominee of the Republican party. More than ordinary interest will be attached to the visit of Justice Hughes, for it was he who, while governor of New York, proposed the permanent Fair plant and signed the appropriations for the first buildings which have done so much to give the New York State Fair a place with the country's important annual expositions.

There will, of course, be the horse races, and they will be of the Grand Circuit caliber, which means the best in the world, and then there will be the horse show, with its high steppers and high jumpers and a background of brilliant color supplied by the smart sets of New York, Boston and Newport.

The Fair will have its aviator and the best who has survived the dangerous sport in this country. He is Al Smith, the young man who dazzled the crowds at the Panama-Pacific exposition and more recently the sensation of the orient.

The Midway and band concerts, and all that goes to make a regular Fair have been provided for, and there will not be a dull moment during the week.

The city of Syracuse, following its custom, will look after the entertainment of Fair visitors in the evening with a free carnival which costs the city $50,000 and which has been pronounced the Mardi Gras of the northern states.

The farms of New York state are now producing annually approximately $500,000,000, and the home markets are calling for double the output. About 377,000 persons are engaged in the farming industry within the state, and there is room for as many more.

These interesting facts will be used in a series of demonstrations and object lessons and extensive exhibits at the New York State Fair, which opens at Syracuse Sept. 11.

Governor Whitman, working with the agricultural authorities, points out that New York offers advantages to the farmer in moderate priced farms of good soil and home markets, easily accessible by rail, water or highway, for his products unequalled in any other part of the United States, and he sees no good reason why New York should not have a permanent place in the very front rank of agricultural states. The Governor is impressed with the advantage of an educational campaign dealing with agricultural interests, and the State Fair Commission, headed by Lieutenant Governor Edward Schoeneck, will do its part with what promises to be the most interesting and instructive exhibition in the history of the State Fair, now in its seventy-sixth year.

Lieutenant Governor Edward Schoeneck, President of State Fair Commission.

State officers are aware that there has been a healthy growth in all branches of agriculture, as indicated by the statistics in the Agricultural Department and reflected in the marked development of the State Fair, which has come to be regarded as one of the most important institutions of its kind on the American continent. But they say that there is much room for further improvement and that the growth will be still more rapid once the people become impressed with the true agricultural situation and learn something about the profits that await the man

FARM BOYS' CAMP.

Youthful Agriculturists From All Counties to Be Guests of Fair Commission.

For the past five years a hundred and more farm boys from all parts of the state have had a week of instruction each year in practical agriculture as the guests of the New York State Fair. In 1911 the State Fair commission, acting upon the experience of a farm boys' camp which was originated in 1906 in Illinois, established its first boys' camp. It is probable that the first boys' camp held in this country was that of 1896 which was held on the farm of Hon. A. T. Grout of Worcester, Ill., in which 138 boys from seven counties of Illinois spent a week under the direction of experts from the University of Illinois. The work was so successful that in 1907 it was moved to the Illinois State Fair Grounds and has been continued successfully since.

The camp of 1915 was named after Governor Whitman. Camp Whitman, as with previous camps, was made up of something over a hundred boys representing almost every county in the state. That the boys might be thoroughly organized and somewhat accustomed to the Fair Grounds and the military discipline those who attended Camp Whitman were asked to come on Friday previous to the Fair. By Saturday noon practically all of the boys were in camp. Previous to their coming the boys had sent in their measurements, and uniforms were at hand, so the boys were formed into companies and given two days' drill before the opening day of the Fair.

Camp Schoeneck is to be the rallying point for the Farm Boys of 1916. Already Commissioner Huson of the Fair Commission is selecting boys from counties throughout the state, and it is probable that the boys of this year will be asked to report to the camp on the Friday previous to the opening of the Fair. Adjutant General Stotesbury at Albany has expressed himself as very much interested in the development of Camp Schoeneck, and he will again assign National Guard officers and equipment unless, of course, the trouble with Mexico should prevent. Anyway, the boys will be housed in tents on the Fair Grounds and an agricultural program worked out similar to the programs of previous years.

For the boys of Camp Schoeneck especial attention will be paid to practical demonstrations in the various exhibits throughout the Fair Grounds. For the afternoon work the boys will be divided into squads of from twenty to twenty-five and, under the direction of a trained specialist, will visit the dairy exhibits, the various animal exhibits, forest exhibits, etc., and will go through in so far as possible practical demonstrations connected with these various exhibits. It is believed that the agricultural program of previous years can be strengthened by adding to the amount of demonstration given to the boys.

As in previous camps, the boys will be uniformed in a simple outfit of khaki, and this uniform, amounting to about $5, will be the only expense of the camp to the boys. During the entire week the boys are the guests of the State Fair Commission, and their transportation and board are taken care of entirely by the commission.

The Fair of 1915 was pronounced the most interesting in point of attractions ever held within the state. In fact, authorities declared it had more striking features than were ever produced in one week in this country. Therefore in promising to eclipse last year's exhibition the State Fair Commission has undertaken a big contract, but it feels equal to it.

LARGE ENTRY FOR FAIR CLASSIC

Pick of the Country's Best Stables in $10,000 Stake Race.

RARE TREAT IS IN STORE.

Racing Authorities Agree That Field Is Highest Class Ever Attracted to a Big Race and Predict Most Exciting Contest In History of the "Big Ring."

Of the original thirty-four nominators in the $10,000 Empire State stake for trotters eligible to the 2:08 class, the feature event of the State Fair Grand Circuit meeting, but three have been withdrawn, which insures a big field of the country's best trotters for this race. The entry is larger than has been obtained for any of the other large stakes opened by Grand Circuit associations, and a rare treat is in store for the lovers of the light harness horse who visit the fair.

In the list of nominators are no less than seven trotters which last year were capable of a mile in better than 2:05, and, with the promise of several new sensational performers in the trotting ranks, the prospects are for a struggle which will go down in turf history as the most exciting of the year.

Among the great horses named are Peter Mc, the fast son of Peter the Great, owned by the Beau Ideal Stock farm of West Park, O., and which showed a trial at Lexington of 2:03½; Ima Jay, the wonderful race mare owned by Harvey Ernest of Kamms, O., that trotted a trial mile in 2:04; Mable Trask, the daughter of Peter the Great, in the Cox stable, which trotted in 2:04½; Trampright, the Murphy candidate, which showed a trial in 2:04¾; Bonnington, the Geers entry, credited with a mile in 2:04¼, and The Eno, from Nashville, Tenn., which trotted a mile in a race in 2:04¼.

In addition, the stake has two fast performers from California. One is Spriggan, from San Francisco, winner of the $20,000 race at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, and the other Virginia Barnette, owned by W. G. Durfee of Los Angeles, which has trotted in 2:05¼. Then there is Peter McCormick, which won a heat in a race in 2:05¼ and is eligible to the 2.08 class through the fact that he failed to win the race.

Besides all of the fast trotters of the Grand Circuit, the big stake has attracted the stars of the half mile tracks, including Director Todd, Al Mack, Bronson and Harry J. S., which have shown ability to beat 2:10 over a half mile track.

Racing authorities agree that the field is the highest class ever attracted to a big race and predict the most exciting contest in the history of the "big ring."

A total of $25,000 has been offered for the seven early closing events and approximately $4,000 for the two Messina Springs colt races, which are open to amateur drivers only.

The entry, totaling 210, represents an average constituting a record for the year. This is an unusual distinction for the State Fair when it is considered that the historic "big ring" includes the tracks controlled by the powerful racing associations of Cleveland, Columbus, Detroit and Lexington. The patrons of the State Fair will be afforded a chance to witness races between the fastest trotters and pacers of the year, handled by the world's greatest drivers, including the veteran "Pop" Geers, Murphy, Cox, McDonald, Rodney, Durfee, Pitman, White and McMahon and all leading amateur reinsmen of the country.

The State Fair course is one of the fastest in the country, it being credited with more world's records than any other track, which, when considered with the size and character of the entry, gives promise of a meeting second to none.

On Aug. 29, it is announced by Race Secretary H. S. Nealley, the association will offer ten class races for purses of approximately $1,200 each. The program will also include the Inter-city Matinee races, which will bring together crack amateur horses of the big clubs of Boston, New York, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Goshen and Syracuse. This will round out a race program such, it is contended, as has never before been attempted.

High Jumping at State Fair

SOME OF THE BEST HUNTERS ENTERED AT THE FAIR ARE HANDLED BY MEMBERS OF THE FAIR SEX. ABOVE IS SHOWN ONE OF NEWPORT'S SOCIAL SET PUTTING HER MOUNT CLEANLY OVER THE PICKET FENCE JUMP.

PLANTING OF TREES.

Instructive Exhibit at State Fair For People Interested In Reforesting the Land.

That those who visit the State Fair annually may see just how easy it is to grow trees from seed and then plant these trees in the form of forests the College of Forestry maintains an outdoor exhibit in the Peristyle between the Dairy building and the State Institutions building. Here one may see the seed beds in which the evergreen and hardwood trees are grown from seed and the transplant beds in which the little seedlings are placed after a year or two of growth in the seed bed. Evergreens must be grown for the first year under shade as nature grows them in the forest.

Therefore in this miniature forest nursery at the Fair, as in the larger nurseries, the seed beds are covered with screens and protected from birds so that the largest number of seeds may have opportunity of germination and growth. Often in a small bed 4 feet wide by 12 to 16 feet long there are 10,000 to 15,000 and sometimes as high as 20,000 little trees growing at one time.

After the little trees have been grown in the forest nursery for a year or two and in the transplant beds for a year they are then sturdy and strong and ready to be put out into the field.

The college has exercised great care in arranging its exhibit, and in it will be seen representatives of most of the common trees which can be grown to advantage in New York state. On one side of the Peristyle will be seen the seed beds and the transplant beds, and on the other will be seen a miniature plantation, showing how the trees are to be put out in rows in the fields or in the woods in the establishment of a forest. There will be a forester at the exhibit to explain how the seed is sown, how the seedlings are produced, transplanted and finally put out into plantations.

JUMPING CLASSES.

The State Fair Horse show, which now has a national reputation and attracts as much attention as the Newport, Mineola, Boston or Philadelphia shows, promises to break all records for the number of Irish jumpers and hunters shown. All of the big stables exhibited at the Fair last year, with several additions, are being prepared for the exhibition at Syracuse, and the competition will be of the exciting order.

State Fair Commissioner W. A. Harriman, in charge of this department, offers assurance of big fields in all of the classes and a special contest on Saturday of the Fair in an attempt to establish a new high jumping record. The support of the best riders of the country has been secured in the effort to make this event a success.

The show will again be notable for the large number of expert women riders participating in the dangerous sport.

WAS THE WOMAN NEARER RIGHT?

Two Persons Made a Similar Mistake.

My chum, Charlie Fisher, soon after taking his degree in medicine was appointed house physician at the Merton Asylum For the Insane. One day he wrote me that there was to be a dance at the asylum for the milder patients and asked me to come up. Curious to witness such a gathering, I accepted the invitation. I arrived just in time. Charlie took me into the dancing hall and said to me:

"These patients are only insane on some one subject, and we don't consider them dangerous. You can speak to any of them without an introduction."

I chatted with several patients, but could not detect anything wrong with any of them. At last I noticed a very attractive looking woman apparently about twenty-eight, who excited my interest. Her face wore a "high cast of thought" expression, and it seemed to me as I gazed upon it that sympathetically she was capable of taking in the whole world. I joined her and invited her to dance. She accepted, and I fancied she did so fearing she would hurt my feelings if she declined. After the dance we took seats together.

"You have a nice place here," I remarked.

"Yes. When did you come? I have not seen you here before."

"I came up this afternoon."

"Yes," she went on, "we think it a very nice place. I'm much pleased with it." Then she added, more to herself than to me, "in spite of the cost above the contract."

"You seem to know all about it."

"So I should. I built it."

"Indeed!" I said aloud. Then to myself, "At last I have found one whose weakness is apparent."

"How much did you put into it?" I asked after a pause in order to draw her out.

"It cost a hundred thousand. The contract called for ninety thousand."

"Are you very rich?"

"I have enough to make many people happy."

"How much are you worth?"

"About a million."

I was surprised at the moderate estimate she put on her possessions.

"What is your occupation in life?" she asked me presently.

I informed her that I was a scientist, and when she asked me what investigations I was then engaged in I confessed that I was struggling with the problem of producing conditions similar to or the same as life.

"What success have you had?" she asked.

"I think I have produced the life principle of the lowest order of plants."

She drew a sigh and, rising, said with great kindliness: "I must leave you now. I have a great deal to do. The responsibility of this affair rests wholly on me."

I took her into supper and, having provided for her refreshment, concluded I would go on to the piazza and smoke. While looking for a match I heard voices in the next room.

"I tell you he's as sane as you or I."

"How can a man be sane who is trying to reproduce life?"

The voices were those of Dr. Fisher and the lady who had told me she had built the asylum. At her reply Fisher chuckled. "That's good—mighty good—insane because he's trying to reproduce life. You women will be the death of me. Why, don't you know there are scientists trying to do that very thing?"

"I don't care if they are. They are as crazy as this one."

While I listened a sudden succession of thoughts struck my brain as shots from rapid fire guns. The patient had thought me insane. I had thought her insane.

"Very well," continued the lady. "If he is sane he is certainly not a gentleman. He asked me how much this place cost me and how wealthy I am."

This was too much. I could endure it no longer. I rushed into the room where they were and stood facing them, my cheeks burning.

"Billy," said the doctor, "you've been making a guy of yourself. Let me introduce you to Miss Merton, to whose munificence we are indebted for this institution. You have taken her for a mild case, and she considers you an incurable. I confess that of the two she is the nearer right. A man with as wild scientific notions as you should be caged."

"I humbly crave Miss Merton's pardon," I said abjectly. "I should never have presumed to ask her the questions I did had I not"—

"Considered her as crazy as yourself. You do her injustice. She is remarkably sane. The only evidence of insanity she has ever displayed was when she said yours was such an interesting case. No case is interesting that is incurable."

Miss Merton blushed slightly and apologized for her estimate of me. I gave up my smoke, and she and I went back among the patients, and I found that she knew every one of them and the especial failing of each. "Theirs are all harmless delusions," she said.

"Whereas I, a searcher for the causes of life, you consider incurable."

"At any rate you are not dangerous," she replied, "and my curiosity has been excited by the bare mention of your attempt. You must come and see me and tell me about it."

And I did. Miss Merton has now the same mania as myself.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

MIDWEEK MENU.

WEDNESDAY—BREAKFAST.
Strawberries.
Fricassee of Chipped Beef.
Cereal Waffles, Maple Sirup.
Coffee.

LUNCHEON.
Bluefish au Gratin
(Fish From Last Night's Dinner).
Vegetable Salad.
Brown Bread Sandwiches.
Rhubarb Tarts.

DINNER.
Clear Tomato Soup.
Stuffed Fore Quarter of Lamb.
Browned Potatoes. Mint Jelly.
Peas and Young Carrots.
Chicory Salad. Coffee Mousse.

SUMMER DESSERTS.

CHOCOLATE BLANCMANGE.—Mix one-half cupful of sugar, three level tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, one square unsweetened chocolate (grated), one and a half cupfuls of milk. Put one and one-half cupfuls of milk in a double boiler. When hot add slowly the first mixture and cook ten minutes after it has thickened. Add one-half teaspoonful of vanilla and pour into cups that have been rinsed in cold water. Serve with powdered sugar and cream.

Fairy Pudding.—To one and one-half cupfuls of strawberry juice, either fresh or canned, add half a cupful of water and put over the fire. When boiling add half a cupful of sugar and two heaping tablespoonfuls of cornstarch dissolved in a little cold water and let boil until the starch is well cooked. Remove from the fire and while still boiling hot beat in the stiffly whipped whites of two eggs. Serve cold with whipped cream. If the juice of canned fruit is used that has already been sweetened less sugar will be required.

Lemon Tarts.—Line muffin rings with pastry and bake a delicate brown. For the filling take yolks of five eggs and whites of two. Beat well together and add two cupfuls of sugar, the juice of two lemons and the grated rinds of three lemons. Put on the stove and cook till thick, stirring constantly. Fill pastry cups with mixture and heap on top meringue made from three remaining whites and brown.

Fruit Sherbet With Plums.—A delicious fruit sherbet is made with plums. Cut these without peeling and then warm them. Remove the stones, add the juice of a lemon, one cupful of water to one pint of the plum pulp and sweeten with a little sugar and water sirup. Press through a sieve when hot, but not boiling. Cool and add the beaten whites of four or five eggs and freeze. Serve a small plate of plums at each cover with this course. Lady fingers or macaroons are the cake accompaniments.

A RUN ON APPLES.

APPLE SAUCE.—Pare and slice four pounds of apples. Put them on the fire with two cupfuls of water, one-half pound of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, a dash of cinnamon and the juice and grated rind of a lemon. Stew until soft. Remove from the fire and beat with an egg beater until smooth and light. Keep in an ice box, and it will last, the appetites of your family permitting, for several days.

Southern Apple Fritters.—Into a cupful of milk beat two eggs. Add two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, a pinch of salt and a dash of ground cloves or of cinnamon. Thoroughly mix and then stir in two cupfuls of flour, into which have been sifted two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Mix with this four apples that have been well chopped. Fry in butter or olive oil. After removing them from the frying pan sprinkle thickly with powdered sugar.

Stewed Apples.—Peel and core six large apples. Place them in a boiling sirup made of two cupfuls of water, the juice and grated rind of a lemon and a quarter of a cupful of sugar. Cook the apples in this sirup until they are tender, and when done remove them with care so as to preserve their shape. Strain the sirup and pour it over the apples.

Apple Pudding.—Mix a third of a cupful of butter with a pint of flour, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a large pinch of salt. Beat one egg into a cupful of water and add to the dough. Spread the dough in a well buttered pan. Pare, core and quarter four large apples and spread over the dough, sprinkling with a half cupful of sugar. Bake from twenty minutes to half an hour. Serve it with hard sauce or with cream and sugar.

Apple Nut.—Dice four large apples. Chop a cupful of dates. Prepare half a cupful of the kernels of any favorite nuts. Stir apples, nuts and dates well together and serve with a dressing made as follows: Stir together half a cupful of apple juice, the juice of a large lemon, half a cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of cornstarch and the whites of two eggs. Heat in a double boiler, stirring continually while it thickens.

Anna Thompson.

Sentences Her Husband.

Reading, Pa.—In police court recently Mrs. Isaac Shade was told by the judge to sentence her husband, whom she charged with intemperance and nonsupport. She promptly designated five days in jail, and the judge meted out the punishment as suggested.

GRANDSON OF CHARLES EVANS HUGHES

Photo © by American Press Association.

This tot is a year and a half old. His father, who is the only son of the Republican candidate for president, is now at the Plattsburg (N. Y.) training camp for business men. The boy's name is Charles Evans Hughes 3d.

A Good Looking Cow — Money and Matrimony

THE Widow Thompson, poor, but honest, with her beautiful daughter, lived in a cottage having a mortgage just about due, carried by a hard hearted old man named Bennett, who was never known to do a merciful act in all the sixty years he had lived. Bennett had just called at the cottage to say:

"Widder Thompson, this mortgage is due sixty days from today. If you are not ready to pay it off then I will have to sell the house which covers you."

At the time of the old man's call Miss June Thompson, the daughter spoken of above, was out, and when she returned she was told of what had occurred.

"The old human hyena!" was her ejaculation. "Heaven may strike him dead before he proceeds to do such an awful thing as to turn us outdoors. Let us live in hopes it will. Cheer up, mother."

Next day Bennett called again, with a smile this time, and his voice was as soft as the fur of a cat, and he began:

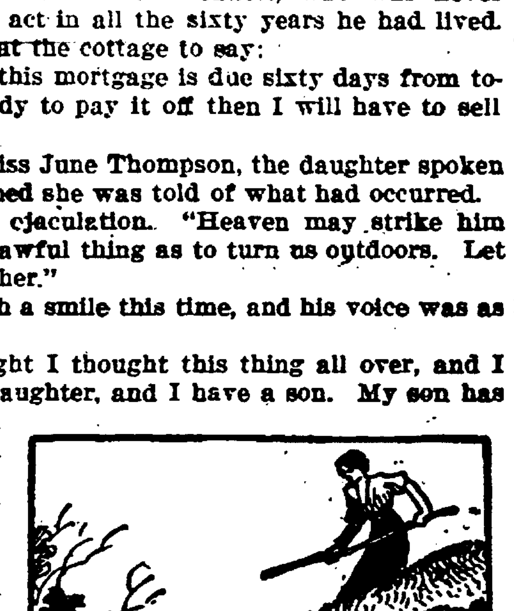
"Widder, when I got home last night I thought this thing all over, and I saw a way out for you. You have a daughter, and I have a son. My son has been away for the last three years and has just come home. Why not have a marriage between them and sweep away this mortgage and all live happy forever more?"

The above words were uttered in the presence of Miss June, and while the old man was showing admiration for her in his looks the girl heard him through and then drew herself up as haughtily as a duchess, and, pointing her beautiful forefinger at the door, she commanded in imperious tones:

"Get out of this! I am not for sale. If you had five mortgages instead of one I would still scorn your pug nosed son. Take this as my final answer." And Bennett got out in a rage.

"What have you done; oh, what have you done?" wailed the mother as the daughter tried to console her.

"Why, mother, I could no more give my heart to such an ogre than I could jump down the well. Say no more about it, but wait for Providence to act."



Part of the Bank Gave Way.

Providence took hold of the job of the two Thompsons at an early hour the very next morning. Miss June was up and out before sunrise to milk the cow. The cow was frisky, started on a gallop and led the girl a chase of a quarter of a mile and then ran down a steep bank that stopped short at a little creek. As she ran a part of the bank gave way and tumbled after her, and five iron bound boxes slowly followed the dirt and bushes from the top of the bank where she had halted. Miss June was amazed to behold those boxes and the letters "B. G." painted on their sides.

"It must be that long lost treasure which people have been talking about for the last 100 years!" she gasped. "The letters 'B. G.' must stand for British gold. It was very dear when the British had to retreat from this part of the country in the war for liberty, and here it has remained ever since to be brought to light by the heels of an old cow. How can I get this great treasure home? It is all in gold, and I couldn't begin to lift one box."

"I will get it home for you if you will let me," said a pleasant voice from a few feet away.

Miss June looked up in a startled way, and just across the creek she beheld a young man with black eyes, curly hair, Grecian nose and a drooping mustache.

"If you'll be so kind," she murmured as she cast her eyes down.

"It will give me the greatest pleasure," he said, "but I will have to go to my father's house first and get our wheelbarrow. There is at least $25,000 in each box, and you have my sincere congratulations. Permit me to introduce myself as Horace Claudius Davenport Bennett, and you, I believe, are Miss June Thompson."

When the girl heard that the young man who stood before her was the son of the old human hyena who held the mortgage she never batted an eye. She had fallen in love with him at the first glance. She smilingly encouraged him, and after the box had been taken to the house and opened and the gold pieces counted she expected he would ask for her hand. He was business, that young man was. He asked for her hand and got it and was such a hustler that they were married in three days.

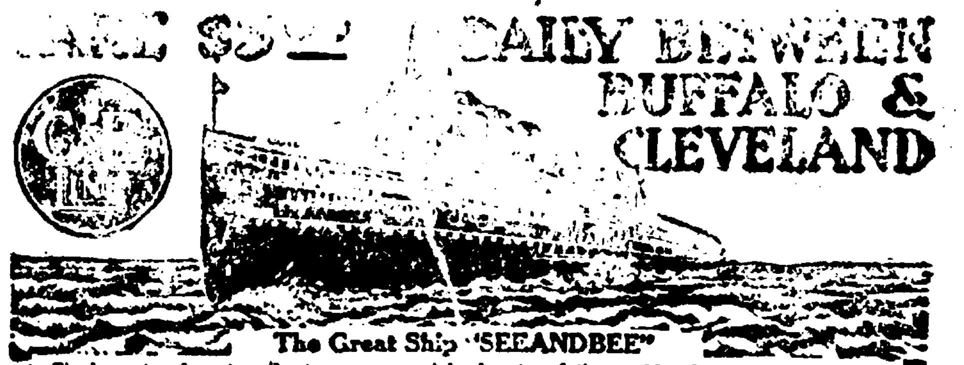
And the bliss and joy and happiness that came to the young couple and the mother were so glorious that the town lights were blown out almost every night by the wind creating it. Put your trust in Providence.

M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1916, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Times Advertising Brings Results Every Time

DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND



The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.

"CITY OF ERIE" —— 3 Magnificent Steamers —— "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BETWEEN

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Nov. 15th—CLEVELAND

Leave Buffalo 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Cleveland 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo 7:30 A. M.
(Eastern Standard Time)

Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.

Beautifully colored sectional puzzle chart, showing both exterior and interior of The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE" sent on receipt of five cents to cover postage and mailing. Also ask for our 24-page pictorial and descriptive booklet free.

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

SEND THAT NEXT PRINTING ORDER TO THE JOB-PRINTING-DEPT. THAT WILL GIVE YOU HIGHEST QUALITY LOWEST PRICES & SUPERIOR SERVICE

WE ARE NOW READY TO EXECUTE YOUR WORK

PROMPTLY

AND WILL APPRECIATE YOUR PATRONAGE

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Telephone 45

Pilgrim Joe — He Meets With Reward of Virtue

THE other morning soon after the summer sun came up I found myself riding between the towns of Lost Hope and Cheer Up, bound for the latter place, where I expected a warm welcome, for I had been there before and taken many tintypes at 10 cents a take and left many friends who bade me come again. As I drove along the principal street no one seemed to know that I had arrived in their midst. When I called on the mayor for my license to take more tintypes he replied to me:

"Sir, we do not license old scoundrels like you! You had best drive on before some of the boys get a rope around your weather-beaten neck."

"But, sir, explain to me of what I am guilty," I demanded, with innocence sticking out all over my face.

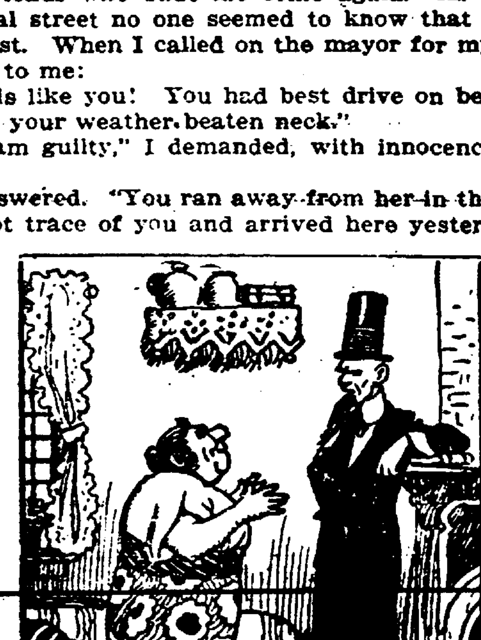
"Why, that old wife of yours," he answered. "You ran away from her in the state of Iowa years ago, but she has got trace of you and arrived here yesterday. She is at the house of a citizen, and he is anxious to see your body dangling from a limb."

"Mr. Mayor," I said, "no living woman can claim to be my wife. I did live in Iowa. I had a wife. She died and went to heaven and is one of the angels there now."

"Dare you face this woman who claims to be your wife?" he asked.

"Face her! Aye, face her, aye. Bring us face to face without an instant's delay, and I will prove her a fraud."

When Mariah saw me she uttered a little scream of surprise. She knew me at a glance. Although many years had passed I recognized her. "It is my Joseph!" she cried out. "My long lost Joseph!"



"My long lost Joseph!"

She attempted to throw her arms around my neck, but I backed off and explained: "Woman, you have made a sad mistake. I am not your Joseph. I may have taken your tintype somewhere in the past, but I did not make love to you nor ask for your hand."

As I started to leave the house she grabbed me by the hair and went out with me, and at the gate she said: "Joe, you know me and I know you. You are a liar and a fraud, and if you don't settle this thing with me I will dog you to the ends of the earth."

"How much, Mariah?" I asked.

"A thousand dollars, old man," she replied. "You'll have to give it to me or they will hang you."

"I will give you a hundred," I said. "I can outlie you three to one and keep a more innocent look while I am doing it. Will you take the hundred and try to catch another husband?"

She thought for a minute or two, and then she let go of my hair and whispered: "Joe, you blamed old fraud, you don't love me and I don't care a cent about you, but I need money in my business. Pass over the roll and go your way."

And thus was the little affair settled, and as I went about the putting up of my tent Mariah was going out of Cheer Up on foot and at a gait of five miles an hour, and she had my plunks in her hand and was holding them tightly. And as I finished putting up the tent and got my wonderful remedies ready to be sold at 25 cents a bottle and my machine ready to take tintypes at the trifling sum of one dime each I said to myself:

"The innocent may be put in a hole by circumstances, but he will come out top dog in the end and glow the brighter for his having undergone the trial."

M. QUAD.

Copyright, 1916, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

HER SMOCK.

The Popular Garment For Hot Weather and Sports.

White linen with king's blue collar and cuffs gives this smock, which takes a low belt, square patch pockets and white pearl buttons. The smocking is done in featherstitching rather than the usual diamond and dot pattern. Smocks are ideal for girls in their teens.

THE FAVORITE.

HOW TO LIVE.

That Is, How to Live Cheaply and Well.

Most Americans wonder how on earth people can live on the wages paid in some foreign countries, and when we see people coming over here in the steerage and raising large, healthy families on small wages we wonder also how that can be done. If the truth were known, it is largely a matter of soup and porridge. What is more, the American pioneer had a few tricks of the same kind, now almost forgotten. In every country there is some national dish which is cheap, nourishing and savory, and it is usually a soup or stew.

The Italian has his minestrone and his macaroni cooked with meat or vegetables or both. The French housewife has a hundred or so good soups, notably petite marmite, soup a la bonne femme and pot-au-feu. The Scotch have their cockaleekie and barley broo. The Hungarian has his goulash. And so it goes. Old fashioned New England farmers cherished their "boiled dish" and hash and let no scrap of pork or veal or beef go to waste. On the southern plantation, where food was perhaps more abundant than anywhere else in the early days of America, soups were made of a variety of materials, cooked long and slowly. The soup kettle is the good fairy of any well managed household—a brown and squat fairy, but that is no matter. And to do the work properly it should be of good heavy enameled ware, easy to keep clean, and suited to sit on the back of the stove or the simmering burner for seven or eight hours. The great secret of any soup or stew is long, steady, slow cooking. Tough meat, mature vegetables, stale bread, bones (most particularly bones), remnants of oatmeal, macaroni, rice or potatoes, left in the dish after a meal and unappetizing warmed over, and such cheap foods as barley, rice and other forms of cereal, all improve a soup that is properly started, and the long, slow cooking with the cover on keeps in the flavor. Soup stock made in this way will make almost any sort of dish more palatable. With tin cooking dishes these forms of cookery are practically impossible, but as tin gives place to the unrustable, unbreakable, durable enameled kettles the soup and the stew are coming back into their true place.

Petticoat Styles.

The petticoat of the present is a very important garment, with its cordings, rufflings, pipings and flounces. The silk, mercerized and other cottons are very attractive, as are also the new fabrics, such as cotton net, cotton crape, sateen, twill, pique, lawn, embroidery and lace.

Mercerized petticoats, with dark grounds and pompadour bouquets in bright colors, are practical and inexpensive. A taffeta skirt in block design has a deep plaited flounce with three tiny ruffles on the edge. A yoke model has a deep flounce of six corded ruffles. Another design has a deep flounce, cluster, tucked and plaited, with a tiny ruffle on the lower edge. Sometimes a deep scalloped flounce is trimmed with narrow ruffles.

Length of Life of Children.

In the American Magazine Dr. Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, says:

"Contrary to the public belief that the first born child is apt to be short lived, I have found that the first born reaches the average age length, which is 34.6 years. The second born children come up to the average also. But here's a curious thing—the third and fourth born have an average life considerably longer than the average. As a general proposition, the children born after ten years of married life are short lived."

ABOUT VEILS.

An Expert Tells How to Manage This Accessory.

Most of us when we pick out a veil choose one that we have admired on some one else or the mesh most becoming in the saleswoman as she holds it up, regardless of whether it suits us, and let it go at that.

"Some women wear the prevailing mesh of the moment without a thought as to its becomingness," says a veil expert. "Take the square or fillet mesh recently worn. Despite its popularity, there was never a mesh that accentuates wrinkles as it does. It gives most faces a hard line that makes many women look older than they really are.

"On the other hand, the commonplace hexagon in a large, fine mesh is perhaps the most youthful of all. Despite its cheapness, many well dressed women find it so becoming and satisfactory that they rarely wear anything else.

"Most women can wear a wide range of veilings, however, provided they keep a few general hints in mind. For instance, the woman with a long, slender face or sharply defined features should avoid heavy meshes or large designs or lines, for they accentuate the features. Simple thin meshes with small figures or designs have a softening effect that she will find far more becoming.

"It is usually the woman with high color that looks best in the more pronounced veiling, especially if her face is round and full. But then the woman with a full round face can generally wear anything.

"In putting on a veil with large, sprawly figures in the design care should be taken in placing them on the face. In spite of the chic which such a veil can give to a commonplace hat nothing is more disfiguring than designs so placed across the features that they look like facial blemishes. Keep the figures as far away as possible from the eyes and if possible away from the corners of the mouth.

"In picking up a veil to put on the hat take it by the corners and after shaking it to straighten it out place it against the face on the hat. Most people then draw the veil back snugly and tie it on the hat before pinning the lower edges in place behind the ears.

"The way I recommend is to hold the veil over the hat as described before the mirror and then as the first step after getting the veil the correct length at the chin, lightly pinning at the top in the center of the brim. Then pin the lower edge snugly behind the ears with a small invisible hairpin before even gathering the ends together to tie the knot. In this way you have the face section perfectly adjusted before the pull or strain of tying it in the back. Being already held in place, lightly tying the veil does not affect it, and then, too, it eliminates that unsightly pulled effect over the nose and eyes.

"Veils should never be rolled, despite the embroidered holders that come for that purpose. Keep them flat, with as few creases as possible. Never rumple into tight little pinned wads, as I have seen otherwise fastidious women do.

"To wash a veil use lukewarm water and a small amount of castile soap. Lightly swish it about the soapy water and rinse several times in lukewarm water. Squeeze with great care and lay out flat to dry, pinned in shape like a curtain on a curtain drying frame."

AGAIN LEGHORN.

A Tip Tilted Hat For the Blithe Summer Girl.

Leghorn straw au naturel is trimmed with shot blue wide satin ribbon, bunched in the back and held fore and aft with clusters of small pink flowers. Gainsborough and Watteau effects are popular in London, whence came this model for the good old summer time.

Unfermented Grape Juice.

Wash the grapes, free them from the stems, reject all that are not sound and place in a kettle. Add only enough water to cover, bring slowly to the boiling point, cook until the fruit is well softened, then drain as for jelly. Place the drained juice in an earthen dish and keep well covered in a cool place. The next morning bring to a boil, let it boil up well, then drain through a jelly bag. Continue this for three successive mornings, rejecting all sediment each time. The last morning measure the juice and to each quart allow a pound of granulated sugar. Boil four minutes, strain through a cheesecloth, bottle, cork and seal immediately. Dilute with water when ready to use and serve in glasses half filled with cracked ice. This is not only very refreshing, but very nourishing as well. Seltzer water can be used instead of the clear water with most excellent results.

BUTTONS TO BOOT.

Taffeta All Held Together by Owl's Eye Shoe Fasteners.

A Frenchwoman saw some brown pearl shoe buttons on brown Russian leather with tan broadcloth tops. She liked them enough to design this frock of brown and tan taffeta to go with the shoe buttons. Behold them parading, breast to breast, up the front and cuffs of the gown. Even the ruffled wrist bag is adorned with owl's eyes.

UP TO DATE.

SUMMER DIET.

Why Overfeed the Body In Hot Weather?

Change of diet is just as essential to good health, once the warm weather arrives, as a change of clothes. No one would think of dressing in heavy woolens, furs and velvets with the thermometer soaring. Why, then, feed the system during the hot days with the same sort of heavy food which makes up the winter menu?

Too few housewives realize that the body craves change of diet once the warm weather sets in. They go on serving in summer hot soups, steaming meats, heavy desserts, just as though it were the middle of winter, and then wonder why their families do not seem to relish their food.

Begin now to serve summer meals, for warm weather is here and a change of diet is necessary to good health. Make the first change in the appearance of the table. If you have been in the habit of using cloths use doilies during the summer season, as they give the appearance of coolness and summer comfort. They are, too, a great saving of labor during the warm weather season. It is no idle task to wash out a big tablecloth once a berry stain mars its pristine beauty, but if a doily becomes soiled how easy it is to take this single piece and dip it into the tub. During the berry and fruit season, when so many spots are apt to appear, no matter how careful the diners, this labor saving scheme should be given consideration.

Some housewives go so far as to substitute the paper doilies for the linen ones, throwing them away as they become soiled. These come in so many pretty designs and are so inexpensive that this form of table adornment is both pretty and economical.

WITH THE ROAST.

How to Dress Up Your Meats Most Appetizingly.

The proper accompaniments for various roasts as laid down by one well known cook are as follows:

Roast beef should be garnished simply with sprigs of parsley and with freshly scraped horseradish. A more elaborate garnishing would include small baked tomatoes, whole mushrooms and braised vegetables, such as celery, button onions, salsify and the like. A rich brown gravy should be served with it, and small, neat squares of Yorkshire pudding garnished with sprigs of parsley and either mushrooms or horseradish.

Roast mutton should be garnished with daintily cooked tomatoes or mushrooms, or both, arranged alternately with a sprig of parsley between each, and red currant jelly should be served as an accompaniment.

Roast lamb should have a properly prepared cucumber garnish and should be served with a good brown gravy and cucumber sauce. Another and more elaborate garnish would include fried potato croquettes, cauliflower sprigs dipped in hot butter and lightly sprinkled with salt, pepper and finely minced parsley. Of course the simplest of all dressings is the traditional mint sauce.

Butter Squares.

To cut butter in small, even squares for the table use a coarse, wet thread, as this leaves no ragged edges.

For Small Fry Prepare Growth Building Suppers

PUTTING IT AWAY.

[Prepared by the department of agriculture.]

BESIDES milk, it is highly important that the child also get plenty of good, well cooked bread and other cereal foods, enough meat, fish, poultry, eggs or meat substitutes, such as thoroughly cooked dried beans, butter and other wholesome fats, and particularly vegetables and fruits. Sugar also is valuable, and the child should get simple sweets, but not between meals or at times and in such quantities that it will interfere with his appetite for normal food.

Milk, being a liquid, is sometimes classed with water, tea and coffee simply as a beverage by those who do not understand its value as food. This is a great mistake. If all the water were to be driven off from a quart of tea or coffee almost nothing would be left, and the little that remained would have little or no value as food. If, on the other hand, the water were driven off from a quart of whole milk there would be left about half a cupful of the very best food substances, including butter fat, a kind of sugar not so sweet as granulated sugar and known as "milk sugar," and also materials which are needed to make muscles, bones, teeth and other parts of the body. All these valuable food substances are ordinarily either dissolved or floating in the water of milk.

Besides all this nourishment, milk contains a very small amount of a substance or substances now thought to help the body of the child to make good use of other foods. For this reason milk is often called "growth promoting." Apparently nothing can serve so well as the basis for the diet of the healthy child.

Compared with most other foods milk contains much lime, but very little iron. Spinach and other green vegetables and egg yolks are, on the other hand, very rich in iron. This is one reason why combinations of egg yolks and milk and of vegetables and milk are recommended so often for children's diet.

When milk is given to babies the chill is usually taken from it. It is safe to do this for all young children. Teach your child to take a quart of milk daily. When milk is used as a drink it should be sipped, not gulped down.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

No monarch seated on her lofty throne so proud as the young lady with the parasol. She wears a little Empire frock of flowered dimity, a mite of a thing, made from 1 3-4 yards 36-inch material. The bows of pink satin add to the gaiety of her feelings.

Pictorial Review Child's Dress No. 6651; sizes, 1 to 8 years; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Departmen store, Fulton.

His Type of Beauty.

"This yur young man Hollar that's sorter running for the legislature," said Mr. Gap Johnson—"well, I can't presizely describe him to you further than to state that I reckon he is the only one of the kind ever born in captivity. His head is so narrow that his eyes are on the north and south ends of his countenance and he has to come at you sideways."—Kansas City Star.

Looking For Trouble.

"Why do you dislike your teacher?" asked the puzzled parent.

"I don't dislike her," replied the youthful prodigy. "All I ask is that she get the job of teaching the boys I don't like."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

LADIES

We have on display in our South window a large number of Sets of

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

while they last we will sell them at

70 Cents the Set

The wholesale price is more than that, but we are going to dispose of them at a great sacrifice.

COME EARLY IF YOU WISH TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER

They were bought by the former publishers for premiums, but we are giving no premiums with the

FULTON EVENING TIMES

Local and Personal

Band concert on West Side tonight at corner of West Second street and Broadway, besides the one on the East Side.

* * *

Miss Grace Smith, of Amsterdam, and Mrs. Edith Bostwick, of Utica are the guests of Mrs. Ella Wolever, of this city.

* * *

Andrew Crowe, of Syracuse, was the guest of friends in this city yesterday.

* * *

Henry Cohen, of Rochester, is enjoying the celebration as a guest of David Richardson, of this city.

* * *

Miss Dorothy Wallace, of Phoenix, visited friends in this city yesterday.

* * *

Albert N. LaPorte and daughter, Helen, of Springfield, Mass., have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. William LaPorte, of this city during the celebration.

* * *

Francis Coates, of New York city, a former resident of Fulton, returned for the Old Home Week celebration. Mr. Coates is now a director of the Wright and Ditson Company.

* * *

Rev. and Mrs. M. J. Peters have returned from Fair Haven, where Mrs. Peters has been convalescing from a recent illness.

* * *

Miss Alice Croake has returned from Fair Haven, where she spent the two weeks.

* * *

Miss Ada Saunders, of Red Creek, is spending Old Home Week at her home in this city.

* * *

The Modern Woodmen will play the Meridian Athletic Club, on the fair grounds July 15th, and another game will be played at Meridian on July 22.

* * *

Mr. John O. Dickinson, aged eighty-three, died at his home in South Granby this afternoon. Mr. Dickinson has been a resident of this town for the past forty years. He is survived by his widow and two sons, Floyd D., and Ernest T., of South Granby; one brother, Eugene, of Messengerville, and two sisters, Mrs. Harritt McKee, of Messengerville, and Mrs. Thomas Leach, of Cortland.

* * *

Rev. Charles S. Robertson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church announces the following program of Sunday services for July 9, as follows:

Morning service, special sermon on the Bible. Students of the Bible classes are especially invited to attend.

* * *

P. E. Schaeffer, of Rochester, was the guest of John Ward, day clerk of the Clark House during yesterday.

* * *

Mrs. Dora Munger, of South Fifth street, who has been in Southern California for the past year, has returned to her home in this city.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Zahm, of Syracuse, were the guest's yesterday of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Jones, of Rocheseter street. Mr. Zahm is head of Haberle Brewery at Syracuse, where he has been Brew master for about thirty years.

* * *

Burdette Wallace has returned to this city after spending the past two months in New York city and Bridgeport, Conn.

CHAUTAUQUA COMING HERE.

The Chautauqua, which in former years has pleased the citizens of Fulton, will be held in this city July 31 to August 1.

STEVENSON'S HORSE WON.

Word was received last night that Crescent Todd, a green pacer, owned by J. W. Stevenson, of this city, won the 2:28 class race at Sage Park, Windsor, Conn., yesterday afternoon. The horse did the distance in the good time of 2:14.

PALERMO.

Mrs. Everett Stewart spent the past week at the home of her father, Mr. John Green.

* * *

Mrs. T. D. Johnston is visiting several weeks with her son, Clarence Johnston, at Volney Center.

* * *

Mr. Fred Parsons and son, Neal, spent Saturday at Syracuse.

* * *

Mr. Henry Satterlee, an old resident of town died suddenly, Saturday morning, at home, where he had lived for many years. He is survived by his widow, two sons and one daughter.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. James Greene, of Fulton, were Sunday visitors at Everitt Stewarts.

* * *

The funeral of Mrs. Mary Jewett, was largely attended by friends and relatives at her home Saturday afternoon.

* * *

Mrs. George Vincent and family were Sunday visitors at William Vincent's at Volney.

* * *

Mrs. Sarah Spencer has been a recent visitor of friends in Fulton.

COL. ROBINSON, OF COLT CO. DEAD.

Newport, R. I.—The sudden death of Colonel Charles L. F. Robinson, of Hartford, Conn., president of the Colt Patent Firearms Manufacturing Company, of that city, was announced in a wireless message received here today. It said only that Colonel Robinson, who was widely known in yachting circles, had died aboard his yacht while bound from Woods Hole, Mass., for this city. The message added that the vessel was proceeding here with the body.

Colonel Robinson was born in Sayville, L. I., and was graduated from the Sheffield Scientific School at Yale in 1895. The following year he married Miss Elizabeth H. J. Beach, niece of Mrs. Samuel Colt, now deceased, who was the wife of the founder of the Colt company.

Besides being the president of the Colt company, Colonel Robinson held a similar position with the Gatling Gun Company and the Maryland Coal Company. He was a director in several institutions in Hartford and other cities. He was a member of several clubs.

Colonel Robinson was a supporter of Yale rowing activities, having given the crews several shells.

SOLDIERS GRUMBLE AT POOR ACCOMMODATIONS

Chicago—After the Twenty-third Infantry had been shunted back and forth half a day by the Erie and Chicago Great Western railways the "silk stockings" got away this evening on the second stage of their journey to the border.

In a good humor as far as Chicago, despite poor treatment, the men leave the Windy City very tired, very dirty and in a very bad temper. To-night finds the regiment still in the dirty and dilapidated day coaches in which they left Jersey city.

The Chicago Great Western has no new coaches for them, and its officials here know of no plan to shift the men to better accommodations when they reach Kansas City, where they switch to the Frisco line for Denison, Texas.

Doomed apparently to finish their 2,500 mile trip in the dinky day coaches, the men are grumbling and dispirited. These Erie coaches are of the old fashioned high waisted, hunchbacked type. Their aisles are narrow and the back of their seats are low.

GREEK LETTER MEN PROMINENT IN CAMPAIGN

New York—Greek letter fraternities, say college boys, are playing strong in college politics. Perhaps they have jimmied their way into the national game.

Charles Evans Hughes, the G. O. P. presidential candidate, belongs to the Delta Upsilon crowd.

Frank Hitchcock, the man who "did it," also wears the Delta U. emblem.

Major Crossett, major domo at Hughes headquarters, is a national officer of the Greek letter organization which Hughes is a member of.

It may be that the whole thing was plotted at some mystic hour in the chapter "tomb."

ELECTROCUTED FOR MURDER OF AGED RECLUSE

(By United Press)

Trenton, N. J.—Emil Swentamin, thirty, convicted of clubbing John Boston, of Garmingdale, an aged recluse, to death, died in the electric chair here today. Swentamin beat Boston to death two weeks after being acquitted of the murder of Jane Acker, another aged recluse near Farmingdale.

State Flower of Washington.

A movement to make the apple blossom the state flower of Washington has been inaugurated by the Spokane (Wash.) chamber of commerce. Every commercial organization in the state is being asked to assist in the plan to change the state flower from the rhododendron, which, it is urged, is not representative of the state because it blooms in less than one-third of the state.

HETTY GREEN DID NOT REALIZE HER LIFE AMBITION

Hetty Howland Robinson Green was a woman with a purpose. She aspired to be the richest woman in the world. Her love for piling up dollars dominated the thought and action of her entire career. She gave up society, quarreled with her family, antagonized her business associates, lived misetly, made money and talked religion. She died a tremendously wealthy woman, but not the richest woman in the world.

Mrs. Green's fortune exceeded $100,000,000. How much it exceeded that is not now known. Both Mrs. Marshall Field and Mrs. E. H. Harriman possess greater wealth than that. Neither of the last named women, however, built up their fortunes. Mrs. Green added more than $90,000,000 to the $10,000,000 her parents left her. Before she got the $10,000,000 she had built up quite a comfortable fortune of her own from the neucleus of a $25 savings account deposited to her credit by her father.

No one ever questioned that Hetty Green was the world's greatest woman financier. As such she reigned supreme for fifty of her eighty odd years. She was Hetty Howland Robinson, of New Bedford, Mass., where she was born November 21, 1835. Her parents were of old New England stock, tracing their ancestors back to the Mayflower.

From the moment Hetty Robinson got the $25 savings account until the moment of her death the accumulation of money was the ruling passion of her life.

In the early days of her career, when she was a society belle and heiress of New York, Saratoga and Newport, she lived fashionably and luxuriously. Even then, however, she interspersed her social activities with frequent visits to her father's counting rooms, becoming eventually his secretary and financial adviser. Market reports and investments became a mania with her. She read, thought, talked and dealt with little else. It was upon her advice, gained from her study of conditions, that her father invested in Chicago real estate in the early days, later netting $5,000,000 profit from the venture.

Until Hetty Robinson was nearly thirty she devoted her time to society and money making. Then Edward Green, for twenty years U. S. Consul at Manila and interested in a big silk importing house in which he had made several millions of his own, publicly announced at a New York dinner that he proposed to marry the wealthiest heiress in America. Hetty Robinson, he was told, was that person. Green obtained an introduction and made good his brag. They were married July 7, 1867.

It was rather a coldblooded proposition however. Miss Robinson agreed to marry Green only after he signed a contract pledging himself never to touch a penny of her fortune and to support both herself and any children there might be, from his own funds.

The Greens had two children, Sylvia and Edward Howland Robinson Green. In 1909 Mrs. Green married off Sylvia to Matthew Astor Wilks, a man with more than a million of his own. Financially Sylvia unmarried was a dead loss to Hetty Green and the wedding ceased the debit side of Hetty's ledger.

It was the boy, "Eddie" as his mother always called him despite his 350 burly pounds of huskiness, that found the soft spot in Hetty Green's heart. Eddie was the only human being to whom Hetty Green never openly begrudged money. She evidenced her affection for him by devoting the last thirty-five years of her life to an attempt to make him the richest man in the world. She sought with business craft and cunnings in hundreds of ways to accomplish this. But she failed. Just as in her ambition to be the richest woman in the world, she failed.

Shortly before her marriage to Green, Hetty Robinson inherited the $10,000,000 from her parents. Just about that time Sylvia Howland an aunt, also died. Sylvia, Hetty always understood, was going to leave her her estate of $2,500,000, but the will showed half of it left to charity and the income from the other half left to Hetty. A month later, after learning this Hetty Robinson came forward with what she said was a later will, leaving her the whole fortune. In the sensational legal battle that raged up and down the Robinson and Howland line after that Hetty was charged with serious offenses, one of them being forgery. It was one of the most bitterly contested will fights in American legal history. Hetty fought like a tigress. She wanted that money. She got it.

The will case settled, Hetty Robinson was married and for seven years the Greens lived abroad, being received at the court of England and royally entertained on the continent. Eddie Green was born abroad.

Upon the return to America, however, Mrs. Green at once began her career of parsimonious money making which in the end broke up her family and closed only with her death. Green, a luxury loving connisseur of books and art, was the first to give in to her new policy and, separating from his wife, took up his residence at the Union League club where he lived until his death.

Meantime Mrs. Green began selling the horses, the more expensive furniture and dispensing with the servants and everything that in any way entailed a cent of cost. It was at this time that she is declared even to have sent Edward, the son, into the street each day to sell the evening paper, after the family had finished reading it in order to turn another honest penny.

Green lost most of his own millions in Wall street. Mrs. Green, however, consented to a beggarly allowance and on this he lived until he died, not seeing her during the last seven years of his life until she came to his death bed in 1902.

Once fully launched on her career of finance, Mrs. Green's parsimony and iron handed methods made her a world wide figure. She lived for years in a tenement where a dollar a day was sufficient for her table. She wore the same old hat and gown for years.

Personally Hetty Green was very eccentric. She always went to her office and worked on her birthday. She thought the wasting of a whole day on anything but business was a crime. Her favorite odd habit was to boil an onion every day and carry a piece of it around in her pocket, nibbling it while she worked. She did this regularly for nearly a quarter of a century.

Each day—she walked usually to save carfare—she appeared at her office in the Chemical National Bank in New York. There she made the kings of finance bow to her. She loaned them ready cash, of which she always had plenty, on only the most gilt edged securities and at the highest possible rate of interest of which she never failed to exact from them the utmost farthing. In reply to a Chicago minister who wrote her that she would be lost to heaven if she insisted on her money from a $50,000 mortgage on his church, she said: "You had better pray for my soul then, because I'm going to foreclose within thirty days," and she did.

Examples of her methods are numberless, but one is typical of them all. Once a New York banking house that had served her faithfully for twenty years and to which at one time her husband had been indebted for many thousands of dollars, was threatened with failure. She rushed to the office and demanded the $475,000 she had on deposit, as well as the millions in securities that were held for her. She was told that such a withdrawal meant failure for the bank and ruin to thousands of depositors. But she did not leave until her last penny was paid. The bank went to the wall.

To avoid paying taxes on her enormous wealth, she always maintained a legal residence in Vermont. There she never was taxed on more than $100,000.

The above are examples of her parsimony in big matters. In little matters the same spirit was shown

Once, it is said, she quarreled with her wash woman because she would not reduce the amount of the bill. As a compromise, Hetty ordered that in the future when the woman washed the petticoats she wash the lower half of them. This would reduce the labor and would enable her to reduce the bill.

When she bought Eddie a railroad in Texas—the Texas Midland—and made him the president, it was openly admitted that her one motive in so doing was to get him away from the big eastern cities where his expenses were a little too high.

The last few years were spent in lonesomeness and practical meagre living. It was always Mrs. Green's one motto that "There are all kinds of people in the world, but I am a kind all by myself. I live as I like to live and always shall." She died the same way.

"AS IN A LOOKING GLASS" at the Quirk Theatre Today. Scene From "AS IN A LOOKING GLASS"

Cauliflower Salad.

Wash well in cold water. Boil in plenty of salt water until the vegetable is soft. Drain off the water. Break the vegetable into flowerets, season with salt, pepper and a little vinegar and oil. Pile them in a pyramid on a dish and pour over them a white mayonnaise. Arrange around the base a border of carrots or beets cut into dice or fancy shapes to give a line of color. Place a floweret of cauliflower on the top.

Cement For Glass.

Tumblers, fruit dishes, lamp chimneys, globes and other similar articles can be mended when broken with the following preparation: Take five parts of gelatin to one part of a solution of bichromate of potash. Cover the broken edges with this and press together, then place in direct sunlight for a few hours. The mended article will not come apart even if washed in boiling water, nor will the break show.

Mayonnaise Dressing.

Two eggs, three tablespoonfuls of cream, one-fourth cupful of water, one-fourth cupful of vinegar, one teaspoonful of mustard, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Beat eggs, add cream, mix balance thoroughly and add slowly to cream and eggs, stirring continually. Cook in double boiler, stirring until thick.

Renovating a Skin Rug.

To clean a white skin rug make a very strong lather by boiling soap in a little water; mix this with a sufficient quantity of water—rather more than lukewarm—to wash the rug in, and rub boiled soap on those portions of it which may require additional cleansing.

To Stiffen Eggs.

When the whites of eggs for a meringue will not stiffen, either from a little of the yolk being mixed with them or any other reason, add a small quarter of a teaspoonful of baking powder and whisk again. The result will be a firm white snow.

A Darning Hint.

When darning stockings baste a piece of netting over the hole, then proceed to darn in and out of the net. The result will be a neat patch.

A Revival.

Brussels net is returning to the popularity it enjoyed a decade ago. It is to be found in black, white and pastel shades, and it is amusing to see how the narrow ribbon bandings which were also popular in the nineties are following hot upon its track.

Willie Kolehmainen to Live Here.

Willie Kolehmainen, the great professional distance runner, brother to Hannes, recently arrived in this country from Glasgow. Willie Kolehmainen has been absent from the United States about four years, most of which time he has spent in the British isles, competing in professional races there. He won the Powderhall Marathon, the greatest professional race in the world, in 1914; he was second in 1915 and again second this year. He plans to remain in this country indefinitely.

The Double Umpire System.

The use of two umpires in a game was a gradual development, and it was not until 1907 that the major leagues finally decided that two men should be used in each game. Previous to that time extra umpires had worked in partnership with regulars for several years, while other umpires worked alone. The advantages of the double umpire system are many. As the game grew in speed and strategy one could not handle all the plays.

Hahn Retained as Brown Coach.

Archie Hahn, former Michigan athlete, twice winner of the dashes at the Olympic games and coach of the Brown university track team this year, has been re-engaged for a long term, according to announcement by Professor F. W. Marvel, head of the athletic department. Mr. Hahn went to Brown last fall from Whitman college, Wa...

QUIRK THEATRE

TODAY—

Kitty Gordon in
"AS IN A LOOKING GLASS"
5-Part World Feature.
4—ACTS VAUDEVILLE—4

SATURDAY—

10th Episode THE IRON CLAW in 2 Parts.
3d Episode of "THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA"
"CHIP" Juvenile Comedy.
4—ACTS OF VAUDEVILLE—4

SUNDAY—

Violet Mersereau in "THE GREAT PROBLEM"
5-Part Bluebird Feature.
Mutt and Jeff in "THE INTERPRETERS"
5th Chap. of "WHO'S GUILTY"
Charlie Chaplin in CHARLIE THE HEART THIEF

FOR SALE

I BEAMS, new and second-hand all sizes. Also PULLEYS, second-hand MACHINERY, PIPE and all sizes of IRON PLATES.

Inquire of

I. ALDERMAN
Schuyler Street
Office Phone 2242 Res. Phone

FOR SALE

Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.

Ready for Prompt Delivery

Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

INSURANCE — REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

Seed Buckwheat

Buckwheat has been a good paying crop for several years. On account of unusual weather conditions this Spring, many acres intended for oats will now be sown to Buckwheat. Seed will be scarce. Buy early. Recleaned seed—$1.00 per bushel. Careful attention to shipping orders.

GILBERT & NICHOLS CO.
Fulton, N. Y.

KAPLAN'S EXPRESS
Baggage, Trucking and Freight Handled Promptly, Ashes Drawn
Household Goods Moved
Prompt Deliveries Terms Reasonable
All kinds of second hand goods bought and sold
Phones Residence 1568, Business 4246
38 S. Second St., Fulton, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Wanted—Men to work on State highway. Inquire of W. F. Hill & Co., 310 Gansvoort St., City. 479

Wanted—Middle aged woman for general house work. Good wages, no children. Apply at5 North Third street, city. tf

Wanted—Good bright boy, over 16 years of age, to learn the printing trade. Apply at the Evening Times. tf

Wanted—At No. 216 Utica street, a girl for general housework. No washing or ironing. tf

Rooms To Rent—Two apartments over Geisler's store. Apply Lewis' Cigar Store. tf

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

Teamster Wanted—Steady work winter and summer; good wages. John W. Pratt farm. tf

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

Young Men Wanted to learn the restaurant business. Those who have had experience in some kind of clerking preferred. Employment in our New York restaurants, $7 or $8 per week with board to start. Railroad fare reimbursed after having been in our service for six months. Good opportunity for the right young men to become managers in a reasonable length of time. Apply in person or by mail to H. Morris, Supt., care of Thompson's Restaurant, Grand Central Station, New York city.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 479. | SATURDAY, JULY 8, 1916 | Price, One Cent

PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION MEETS HERE TODAY

The Central New York Publishers' Association met in this city today for an informal outing as guests of the Fulton members of the association. Members of the association began arriving at the headquarters at the Elks' Home early this morning, some in automobiles from nearby points, and others by train and trolley from distant parts of the state.

After a "get together" session at the Elks' Home, the guests went to the Clark House, where a five-course luncheon was served at one o'clock. Several members of the association made short addresses and Mayor Victor C. Lewis made an address of welcome to the visitors.

Following the luncheon, the members of the association were taken on an automobile trip through the city, and thence to Oswego along the west river road. The delegation was met at the Oswego city line by a committee from the Oswego Chamber of Commerce, and taken on a tour of the city, and Fort Ontario. The party will return to this city early this evening.

VILLA BANDS PLAN RAIDS ON BORDER

(By United Press)

El Paso—The Villistas are rushing towards the Big Bend country to raid American towns, according to information received here today. Creeping across the Chihuahua wastes from Palomir toward LaMula pass, a band of Villistas of unknown strength is reported to be moving toward Ojinaga, and the small American settlements in the Big Bend country.

* * *

Washington—Unsupported rumors were again received today of the presence of Villa at a place called Canutillo on the Rio Florida, west of Parral, said a war press bureau announcement.

Washington—Decision not to report the resolution urging President Wilson to intervene to save the life of Sir Roger Casement was reached today by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

* * *

New York—Ten thousand New York citizens, members of the Home Defense League, were called out today by acting Police Commissioner Leon T. Dodley, in the fight being waged by government and municipal health authorities against the infantile paralysis epidemic.

* * *

Cleveland—John D. Rockefeller celebrated his 77th birthday at his Forest Hill estate today by playing a foursome of golf with his cronies.

Washington — President Wilson will make no effort to rehabilitate Mexico with American money until General Carranza requests it. Administration officials have been informed that any offers of financial assistance now would meet with rebuff. This is not due to the fact that Carranza does not need money, but to fears among Mexican officials that full trust cannot be placed in this country. Carranza has said in the past that any foreign loan would mean right of intervention as a loaning power to collect its interests. Up to the present Carranza has refused to consider borrowing from any foreign country.

* * *

Peekskill—Practically every member of Company E, 47th Regiment of Brooklyn, was placed under arrest today on charges of insubordination following an outburst of protest over the food served for breakfast. The trouble started at six a. m., when the men were served with their usual meal of rice, bacon, coffee and bread. The infantrymen started to shout "We want meat or we won't work!" Four of the men were placed in the guard house while the rest of the rest of the company were marched out to do cleanup work under fixed bayonets. The militiamen say they have been given insufficient food and that it has not been properly cooked.

EVERYBODY CAN JOIN IN DANCING TONIGHT

The west-side business section will be the scene of the second community dancing party tonight, and the brick paving in the vicinity of Second street and Broadway will be thoroughly cleaned and flushed today. Corn meal will be sprinkled on the paving early in the evening, the space for the dancers will be roped off and a squad of policement will be on hand to handle the crowds.

The Elks' band will furnish the music, and Mayor Lewis will lead the grand march which will open the dance. Miss Greeta Lewis, Queen of the carnival, and her maids of honor, will be in attendance, and several friends of the Mayor, as well as the members of the city administration will participate.

It is the earnest desire of the Mayor and the committee in charge that all present who are physically able should dance, and that the older people in particular should join in the fun. The dance is for the entertainment of the public at large, and these in charge will appreciate a display of community spirit on the part of the people in attendance.

The Cayuga street paving, which was the scene of last night's dance was in a fair condition, despite the many rough spots. The Broadway paving is probably the best in the city and after the corn meal treatment, it should be in excellent condition for dancing.

The dance will begin at eight o'clock, and will continue until eleven o'clock. Vocal soloists will entertain the crowds between the dance numbers.

INSTALLATION.

Monday Night, the Installation Ceremonies of Kiowa Council, Degree of Pocahontas Will Take Place.

Kiowa Council, Degree of Pocahontas, No. 132, desires all members to be present on Monday evening, July 10th, for raising their chiefs and refreshments.

The following chiefs are to be raised to their respective stumps: Prophetess, Mary Hilling; Pocahontas, Edith Althouse; Wenona, Kate Wheelhouse; first scout, Maude Dingle; second scout, Mrs. Delaney; first runner, Mrs. Lulu Weisgrave; second runner, Mrs. George Hill; first warrior, Mrs. Cramer; second warrior, Pearl Nelligan; third warrior, Emma Chetney; fourth warrior, Cassie Johnston; first councillor, Frances Stewart; second councillor, Mae Sellman; guard of tepee, Emma Halstead; guard of wigwam, Maggie Austin.

THANKS TO THE MAYOR

While Mayor Lewis would have everyone believe that the success of last night's parade was due to the efforts of others, and modestly disclaims all credit for himself; those who worked with him in the affair are unanimous in stating that its success was due directly to the Mayor's efforts. The Mayor started the ball rolling yesterday morning, and with C. Milton Allen, solicited subscriptions from the business men of the city to pay the the cost of engaging the two visiting bands. Practically every merchant in the city subscribed to the fund, and the names of all will appear in this paper Monday evening, at the request of the Mayor.

The Times takes this opportunity of expressing the thanks of the public at large to Fulton chief executive, whose efforts produced the greatest public spectacle ever witnessed in this city.

PARADE WAS GREATEST IN HISTORY OF CITY

That the monster parade which marked the climax of the Fulton Old Home Week celebration last night was the greatest spectacle ever seen in this city was the unanimous opinion of the thousands who lined the streets as the line of floats, automobiles and marchers passed. The line, in close formation, extended over one mile, and was replete with novel features which brought forth storms of applause from the citizens of the city and the visitors who crowded the streets.

Mayor Victor C. Lewis was the central figure in the affair and the wonderful success of the event was directly due to the work of the city's chief executive and his administration.

There were more than one hundred automobiles, business wagons and decorated floats in line, and practically every important business firm and manufacturing plant in the city was represented. With but four exceptions, every vehicle of any kind in the parade was decorated, either with flowers or with the national colors.

The Elks' band of this city led the line, and the Knights of Pythias ban and the Phillips band of Oswego also furnished music for the marchers. The Elks' famous musical organization has a worthy rival in the K. of P. Band of Oswego, and although the Fulton musicians probably eclipsed all previous efforts, the Oswego visitors were accorded great applause. The Knights of Pythias band members carried small storage batteries, connecting with small electric lamps on their caps, and they presented a fine appearance as they marched along.

It was almost eight o'clock before the parade got under way from East Side Park, where the Elks and school children had gathered, as the floats and automobiles lined up along South Third, Academy, South Fourth and Buffalo streets. The parade started at the corner of South Third and Buffalo streets, where the Elks' band took the lead, followed by the members of the Fulton lodge, in marching costume. About 150 school children, carrying flags, and marshalled by Donald O'Brien, John Reynolds and Francis Baker, followed the Elks, and the long string of floats, after making the circuit of the park, then swung into line.

The marchers proceeded through South Third street to Oneida and then turned west. On each street corner crowds of from one to five hundred people viewed the parade, and all of the floats were accorded well earned applause. The balcony of the Dr. Marsh house on Oneida street was crowded with people, and a crowd of at least one thousand thronged Oneida street between Second street and the lower bridge.

The line crossed the bridge and turned south into West First street, thence to Broadway, where the line turned to the [illegible] counter-marching at West Fourt[illegible] street. The streets of the west s[illegible] business section were packed wi[illegible] who cheered the marcher[illegible] an[illegible] [illegible]auded the novel floats.

The Knights of Pythias band left the line at this point a[illegible] remaine[illegible] on the west side f[illegible] [illegible] balance of the evening, where [illegible] gave a band concert at the corner o[illegible] West Second street and Broadway. Two thousand residents of that section listened to the excellent pro[illegible] rendered by the Oswego organization [illegible] to judge from the applause, [illegible] feature of the evening's entertainment was greatly appreciated by th[illegible] west siders.

Meanwhile, the main parade continued across the Broadway bri[illegible] to South First street, where the line turned north into the bu[illegible] [illegible]tion. (The Elks' band did [illegible] the "Rock Road to Dublin" [illegible] proceeded along South Fir[illegible]

At the Plaza the line dis[illegible] and the Fulton band marched to [illegible] Cayuga street, which had been [illegible] garnished and plentifully sprinkled with corn-meal for the community dancing party on the pavement.

The Floats in The Parade.

There may have been one or two floats overlooked by the newspaper representatives, but as the line left the park, the following order prevailed:

The Fire Department apparatus, in charge of Chief Waugh and Assistant Chief Rude, floral decorations. The Onyx Confectionery, decorated automobile float; American Woolen Co. four horse team, with large wagon of raw wool, in which were seated 12 children, dressed in white and carrying flags; William Woodward, automobile insurance float, beautifully decorated with roses and white bunting; Fort Stanwix Canning Co., passenger automobile carrying company executives, and large wagon float, displaying products of the company, with several of the women employes, dressed in white; The Turf cafe, E. J. Schem, automobile float, decorated with flags; L. P. Smith Co., automobile float, floral decorations, Miss Clara Gaffney as queen; Electric Company, automobile float, in charge of Frank Hare, with young ladies demonstrating electric appliances; Morin Brothers Lumber Co., float, entilted "Castle or Kennel"; William Burritt, automobile float, floral decorations; Whitaker and Bogardus, two automobiles, floral decoration; Gage-Elwell Milling Co., float, displaying poultry, poultry feeds and other products of the company, floral decorations; Syracuse Post-Standard float, W. L. Woodbury, decorated with flags and copies of the newspapaper; William Sylvester, automobile float, flag decorations.

Also Freeman Boat Company float, with large canoe, flag decorations; Boland Brothers, automobile float; Henderson-Thomson, three business wagons decorated with flags and bunting; C. M. Allen, Inc., displaying excelsior products of the company, flag and floral decorations; Monarch Knitting Mills, one of the most novel floats in the parade, displaying knitting machinery, with several employes of the company, flag and floral decorations; Fulton Sand and Gravel Co., flag and floral decorations; Harold Hunter, decorated automobile, with floral bows; Palmer-Hope Hardware Co., decorated automobile float; Dutcher Machine Company float, displaying two completed engines; The Fulton Pharmacy, automobile float, floral decorations in pink and white; Mrs. May Willard, prize Overland of the automobile parade, with floral and flag decorations; American Express Co., business wagon, with flag decorations; Mehegan Brothers, business float, with small boy riding in large bath tub, floral and flag decorations; Victoria Paper company, four passenger automobiles, with executives and employes, and large wagon float displaying products of the company, flag and floral decorations; Streeter and VanSandford, automobile insurance, with VanWagenen towing truck, hauling badly damaged Ford car, one of the most original ideas in the parade; Setz and McCormick, automobile, flag decorations; John R. Sullivan, Victrola float; Massaro Baking Co., automobile float, flag decorations; Dolbear's Grocery two business floats, flag decorations; Scudder Grocery, flag decorations; Van Buren Furniture company, decorated victoria, with executives and employes of the company; J. C. O'Brien, business wagon, flag decorations; R. L. McCully, decorated automobile, with employes of Van Wagenen, Inc; A. Z. Wolever, decorated automobile float; H. Amdursky, automobile float.

The Fulton Continentals, led by Judge H. J. Wilson, with forty members of the famous marching organization in line; Peters' Chocolate Co., large float, with flag and floral decorations; Hulett-Taft, automobile float, decorated with flags and bunting, carrying company employes; Fulton Cleaning Co., automobile, flag decorations; Granby Paper Company, wagon float, displaying products of the company; Hunter Arms float, with large gun mounted, and employes of the company with shot guns; Morrill Press, automobile and wagon floats, with company employes, flag and floral decorations; Volney Paper Co., products displayed on decorated wagon float, and others.

Queen of the Carnival Rides With Attendants

The queen of the carnival, Miss Greeta Lewis, with her maids of honor, Miss Helen Nichols, Miss Marion Lewis, Miss Rosella Nichols, Miss May Burke and Miss Rita Hardwick, rode near the head of the line, in John W. Stevenson's National Automobile, which was decorated with flowers and bunting. Miss Lewis was seated on a large throne in the tonneau of the car, and wore the prize diamond ring, valued at $150, which

(Continued on Page Two)

PRODUCE ASSOCIATION REQUESTS WERE DENIED

Secretary J. E. Day of the Fulton Vegetable Growers' Association, announced this morning that the Adams' Express company service on the Lackawanna Railroad this year will not meet the requirements of the local lettuce shippers, according to the final plans now submitted by the company. The company declined to accede to the request for additional facilities for lettuce shipments, and only two express cars will be attached to the morning train from this city. The association asked for better service, and since the Adams' company has announced that it cannot offer better service on the Lackawanna road, most of the Fulton shippers will probably use the Ontario and Western or New York Central lines.

The Lackawanna Railroad has not as yet reported what action it will take on the request of the association for better freight service from this city to the New York markets, but an answer is expected before the next meeting of the association.

Small shipments of lettuce have been started during the past week, but the main shipments will not begin before July 20. The association will hold an important meeting July 18, and every member is urged to be present.

THE FRENCH ARMIES RESUME OFFENSIVE

(By United Press)

Paris—French troops broke the lull in the fighting south of the Somme last night, with slight advances against the German line southwest of Caronne. In fighting near Veloy-en-Sanderre the French captured 350 prisoners in the course of a bold stroke made Friday evening, the War Office stated today.

East of the village of Estrees the French made progress with grenades in a German trench and captured 50 prisoners. Bad weather generally hindered operations on the Somme Front throughout the night.

* * *

London—British troops engaged in the great Allied offensive, spent the night in improving their position north of the Somme, rain having interfered with other operations, General Haig reported this afternoon.

Petrograd—Russian troops have captured three villages in the region of Kolti in hot bayonet fighting the War Office announced today.

* * *

Berlin—Austrian troops have retreated from their advanced line in the bend of the Styr river in Volhynia, before greatly superior Russian forces, said an official statement from the Austrian War Office today.

* * *

Berlin—On both sides of the Somme, numerous repeated enemy attacks were repulsed with sanguinary losses, said an official statement this afternoon on the Anglo-French offensive. The heroism and tenacity of our troops prepared the enemy for a day of delusions.

CITIZENS CLUB DANCE AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR

Thirty members and guests of the Citizen's Club enjoyed an informal dance at the South First street club house last evening, following the municipal parade. Reynolds orchestra, which was stationed on the back veranda of the club, furnished the music.

The lawns and garden of the club were beautifully decorated with Japanese lanterns and American flags, and tables were placed underneath the trees, where refreshments were served to the dancers during the evening. Parker Vanburen sang several popular hits between the dance numbers.

The committee in charge comprised Harold H. Bristol, A. E. Gwynne, Theodore Foster, Russell Forsythe and Frank Flanders.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Victor C. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Gwynne, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Fairgrieves, Dr. and Mrs. L. Fowler Joy, Dr. and Mrs. L. F. DeForrest, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Rogers, Mrs. Robert Hunter, Mrs. F. D. VanWagenen, Miss Mary Webb, Miss Marjorie Fairgrieves, Miss Helen O'Brien, Miss Ethel Washburn, Miss Ruth Allen, Miss Marion Bullis, Miss Elizabeth Nelson, Miss Zelma Allen, Miss Zetta Babcock, Miss Blanche Babcock and Harold O'Brien, Charles O'Brien, Harold Hunter, Donald Hunter, Donald Allen, Raymond Clapp, Theodore Foster, Russel Forsythe, Bruce Steele, Vincent LaPorte, Harold Bristol, Frank Flanders and Parker Van Buren.

AN APPRECIATION.

Through the columns of the Fulton Times, Mayor Victor C. Lewis wishes to express the thanks and appreciation of the committee in charge of yesterday's parade to all who assisted in any manner in making the affair the wonderful success that it was. The Mayor announced today that he would attempt to thank each exhibitor personally, and said the credit for the organization of the affair should be given principally to the following: Herbert W. Adkins, and Harry M. O'Brien, who originated the parade of the school children, C. Milton Allen, Frank Rumsey, Edward Cole, John Painter and Edward Rugg, all of whom assisted in organizing the parade, and in securing the co-operation of the business men of the city; John W. Stevenson, who also aided materially in securing floats for the parade, the members of the G. A. R., who rode in the parade; to the Fulton Continentals, to the parents of the school children who marched—in short, to all who aided in any way.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

The engagement of Miss Clara Dessum, of the West River road to George Ward, of 59 North Fourth street, has been announced. The young couple, who are very popular here, will be married next Thursday at the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

265 North Seventh Street—A good seven room house, furnace, gas, city water, good sized barn and hen house, lot 4x8. In addition there are two lots 4x8. One covered with fruit, the other used for early gardening. The whole three parcels for $2,700.00 It's cheap.

205 West Fourth Street—To close the estate of John Gibbons, this large, well located house on full sized lot is offered at a special price. See us.

109 West First Street—Seven rooms, nearly new, every convenience, large veranda, paved street. $2,300.00. Would be cheap at $2,500.00.

40 Acre Farm—Near Lysander, will exchange for larger farm.

WHITAKER & BOGARDUS, Inc.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

SATURDAY, JULY 8, 1916

BEST PARADE IN HISTORY OF CITY

(Continued from Page One)

was awarded her as the winner of the contest. After the parade, Her Majesty and her maids were entertained at the Elks' Home and a reception will be given the royal party by the committee in charge early next week.

Community Dancing on Cayuga St.

The Elks' band occupied a large platform on the south side of Cayuga street at the First National Bank building, and after a short lull in the proceedings, while some of the members of the band journeyed to the Elks' Home to get the music, the dancing began. The crowds had pressed forward into the space reserved for dancing, and the police found it necessary to get ropes to keep the onlookers back. As a community dance, the affair was a fine band concert. For the most of the young people it seemed to be a case of "If someone else will start it, I'll dance," and the result was that few couples cavorted over the pavement, notwithstanding cordial invitations from Herbert W. Adkins, who urged all present to join in the dancing. The dance continued until eleven o'clock, when the program closed with the singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" and one of the greatest evenings in the history of Fulton came to a fitting finale.

GIRLS' TEAM LOST GAME

The "baseball game" between the Bloomer Girls, a traveling baseball team, and the Red Men of this city, at the Fair Grounds yesterday afternoon, reminded those present of some of the good games of the past—it was so different. The Bloomer Girls qualified as first class umpire baiters, but as baseball players, they would make good department store clerks.

The final score, in favor of the Fulton team was 7—2, but that does not represent the wide margin by which the locals outclassed the widely heralded visitors. After several innings devoid of anything resembling a base hit from the Bloomers, Painter started lobbing the ball over the rubber, and the visitors did manage to cross the platter twice.

Minnie Midge, of Punxatawney, Pa., right fielder for the Bloomers, walked to the pitcher's box when the game beegan, evidently with the intention of pitching. After "Min" had failed to reach the catcher's mitt after several attempts, the captain of the visitors consumed a half hour of time in arguing that the distance from home plate to the box was six feet longer than the standard distance. A male member of the Bloomer team then took up the pitching burden, and although he had plenty of stuff, his support was wretched and the Fultonians had little difficulty in piling up seven runs.

THE CITY POLICE DEPARTMENT

Fulton has one of the finest police departments in the state of New York, and in the hustle and bustle of the past week, the members of the local department have surely proven their worth. Under the able direction of Chief Edward Dyer, the policemen have patrolled the city, handling the large crowds, maintaining order and normal traffic conditions, and the hearty thanks of the public is hereby accorded them. During last night's parade in particular, the work of the department was an outstanding feature. In spite of the large crowds which thronged the streets there was no disorder of any kind and not a single arrest was made.

MEDICAL WORLD MARVELS AT SOLDIER WITH SHRAPNEL IN HEART

(By United Press)

London, June 26 (by mail)—The proudest wounded "Tommy" in London today is Private Henry Pierce.

Some days ago Pierce had a shrapnel bullet in his heart. Today the bullet is neatly mounted on wood and occupies a place of honor on a table by Pierce's bed in a London hospital.

British surgeons who have marveled at two similar operations in French hospitals are studying the London case at close range. Pierce has more learned visitors than any hundred other wounded "Tommies."

An Australian surgeon, on temporary duty in England, performed the operation. He found the shrapnel lodged in the pericardium. Making a tiny incision he picked the metal out with his fingers.

The patient is rapidly recovering.

A DOMESTIC ONE.

An Actress Expert at Cake Making and Salesmanship.

HOW SHE MADE LOVEBIRD PIE

For 25 Cents Miss Hedman Sold a Slice of Pastry to the Greatest Fletcherizer In the World at the Allies' Bazaar.

One of the many actresses who helped the allied bazaar at the Grand Central palace, New York, was Martha Hedman, the Swedish star.

Miss Hedman, who is the only actress who ever baked a cake in a glass dish, sold a piece of the delicacy to an elderly man who visited her booth, next to the authors and artists' booth. He was a little man with a fringe of hair as white as the serge suit he wore. A single medal stood out in bold relief on his left breast. He had given his quarter for the slice of cake so eagerly that Miss Hedman began extolling the virtues of a lovebird pie, a flaky crust over a glass bowl in which were two live birds, urging him to buy the pie and throwing in such an inducement as an autographed picture of herself. As she talked merrily on her visitor munched his cake, masticating each small bit thoroughly. At the end of several minutes he was still eating calmly, and as Miss Hedman glanced at the portion that remained undevoured there may have been just a suggestion of impatience in her eye. At any rate, her customer handed her his card, which read, "Horace Fletcher, A. M., Food Economist." Then it rushed across the actress' consciousness that the man fletcherizing his cake was he who had taken the joy out of life—and probably putting much health into it—for many by scaring them into eating slowly.

Photo by American Press Association.

MISS MARTHA HEDMAN.

Baby Things.

In the craze for quilts baby's interests should not be neglected, as he will perhaps have more use than his elders for such a comfortable, even during the warmer months. A most effective modern version of the old time quilt is made of blue chambray, with a white band near the edge, which crosses at the corners. In the center of the quilt are three saucy bedtime babies in nighties, not forgetting the caps, and each carries a lighted candle. White chambray is used to depict this and is appliqued to the blue background. Extra touches of color are put in with embroidery outline. Below the figure runs the legend, "The Sandman Is Coming."

A toy that the baby will probably take to bed as well as play with in the daytime is a linen doll made by joining two tinted and embroidered pieces of material together to form the front and back of the doll and inclosing beans, for the character doll is really a bean bag.

Secret of French Frying.

The secret of successful French frying is to have the lard so deep that it entirely covers what you wish to fry and so hot that it will instantly form a crust over the entire surface of the article that is immersed in it. If further cooking is necessary the heat should immediately be reduced.

The best frying is done by plunging the article entirely in boiling fat. All too often French fried potatoes are merely slices softened in grease. Boiling grease does not enter articles plunged into it, but forms a crust on the surface which keeps out the fat. A well fried article, prepared in the French manner, will hardly soil the napkin on which it is laid. Either lard or drippings may be used for this purpose. Test the heat with a bit of bread an inch square. If it browns in one minute the heat is right.

Corn Chowder.

Fry a half pound of diced salt pork in a big saucepan until brown. Add one sliced onion and cook until light brown. Then add four sliced potatoes that have been parboiled ten minutes, a can of corn or corn cut from cob and a pint of boiling water. Cook until the vegetables are tender, then add a quart of rich milk, pepper, salt and a half dozen crackers which have been soaked in a little milk. Serve with a cracker on each dish of soup.

TO TIMES READERS

On account of a necessary shift of machinery in the Times plant today, it was found necessary to restrict today's publication to four pages, if the policy of an early Saturday edition was to be carried out. On Monday the paper will resume its usual eight page form.

ILL-GOTTEN AUTO WRECKED BY CAR

Syracuse—Eastman and Becker local agents for an automobile firm received a distinctly phoney check for $650 in payment for an automobile sold to one Edwin P. Kennedy, of Onondaga Valley; a car on the Oswego division of the Empire United Railways bagged the automobile near Long Branch, and detective William Hoehm got Kennedy on a charge of grand larceny. So Hoehm and the motorman of the Oswego car are the only ones to have profited by the deal.

The police have been on the lookout for Kennedy when the check on the Onondaga Valley bank, was returned to the auto agents as worthless, but had no clue as to his whereabouts until the wreck of the machine was found near the trolley tracks.

Kennedy is out on parole from Elmira Reformatory and according to Chief Cadin an effort will be made to return him there to complete the term shortened by "good time."

BELL-ANS

Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

When Miss Dottie Dainty goes for a stroll she slips over her linen frock this little coat of dark blue taffeta, with round shoulder yoke and wing pockets. The full skirt is gathered to a long blouse waist, and the long sleeves are gathered at the wrist to form their own finishing frills. Braid outlines the collar, sleeves, pockets and belt, three yards being needed for the purpose. Two and one half yards 36-inch silk make the coat.

Pictorial Review Coat No. 6681; sizes, 2 to 10 years; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. De-

NATIONAL EDUCATION ASSO. CLOSES CONVENTION

(By United Press)

New York.—The closing sessions of the National Education association convention here today were held by the Child Hygiene Association and the national conference for extension.

D. P. MacMillan, director of the department of child study in the public schools of Chicago, in an address showed how the correction of physical defects increases the rate of promotion of school children.

D. B. Armstrong, director of the department of social welfare of the New York association for improving the condition of the poor, insisted that medical inspection of school children, school feeding, sanitary conditions in the home and other forms of preventive medicine, are the best forms of community investments. More than thirty thousand teachers were enrolled at the fifty-fourth annual session of the association.

MILLIONS LESS FOR MEN'S CLOTHES IN ENGLAND THIS YEAR

(By United Press)

London, June 20 (by mail)—About $2,500,000 less will be spent for masculine summer clothes on account of conscription. This estimate is made by prominent London tailors who are wearing long faces. It is worse, they say, because the estimate represents the value of the cloth alone and does not include the profit of the tailoring.

The tailor trade was dead weeks before conscription passed, the tailors say, because the bulk of ordinary buyers were making old raiment do until they found out whether the government would furnish their next suit of khaki. It will—and the tailors are blue.

INSURANCE — REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER

Phone 122

FURNITURE IS NOW BEING PAINTED

Peasant Styles Being All the Rage, Get Out Some Castoff Pieces and Treat Them to a New Coat of Paint.

BECAUSE it is of humble name do not imagine that painted furniture is always cheap. Manufacturers of some of our finest furniture turn out a greater number of peasant styles than of almost any other kind, and they go their way into very fine homes. Even Marie Antoinette liked to play at being a shepherdess when it suited her fancy to drop the dignities of royalty. So why should not my lady of fashion nowadays, when she flies to the country for a relaxation of social duties, furnish at least one bedroom in the picturesque manner of the French or Flemish, Dutch or Italian peasant?

And as for the rest of us, who can neither afford to pay for the finest of quality and workmanship plus the smartest of smart ideas in painted summer furnishings nor yet to invest our money in cheap furniture that is cheaply built in imitation of the better thing, what shall we do about it? Why, do for ourselves and by ourselves if needs be and as best we can what a group of decorators are doing for a steadily growing clientele, who bring to them all sorts and conditions of old and ugly pieces of furniture to be given a new lease of life with the aid of a few carpenter's tools and a paint box.

In one of these remodeling shops was recently seen a charming bedroom set in a dark yet rather brilliant French blue, touched up here and there with a bit of old gold, and still further enriched with an oval of lighter ground on which was painted a basket of old fashioned flowers, inset on the front of the bureau, the foot and head boards of the bed, the chair backs and the center top of the table. The general style of the pieces was colonial. The charm of them was not alone the charm of ravishing color, but their simplicity.

A photograph showed the transformation of this set. Every piece had been of a different kind or color of wood and every one had belonged to that age of horrors which we speak of in whispers as Victorian. With scraping and pruning and trimming until they were all reduced to unfinished wood and shorn of their jigsaw ornaments and then with coat after coat of paint the miracle had been worked.

It is not to be thought for a moment that any woman can from her attic bring discarded beds and chairs and things and then with paint and patience perform like miracles at home or transform hideous pieces of yellow oak and dismal black walnut furniture into pieces as beautiful as those just described, for that takes perfected art and experience. But any woman can who will scrape and sandpaper the bad finish off of any piece of furniture whose possibilities she sees, have a local carpenter bereave it of absurd ornaments, if she cannot also attend to this part of the work herself, and turn out from an improvised workshop in basement or attic really wonderful transformations by the aid of paint and good taste.

FOR SALE

Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.

Ready for Prompt Delivery

Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

Savings Bank Deposits Rec'd on or Before July 13, will Draw Interest from July 1

Drop a Postal for Our Booklet "U. S. Mail for Banking"

4% INTEREST

Paid Since 1908

ALBANY CITY SAVINGS INSTITUTION
100 STATE ST., ALBANY, N.Y.

Which costs most—painting or waiting?

After your house needs painting, every year you wait it will require more paint and more labor to put it in good condition. And every year you wait, your house is worth less. A little paint-money is good paint-insurance.

Just as soon as your house needs painting, come in and let us show you how little it will cost you to use DEVOE.

We say "DEVOE" because it's absolutely pure.

That's why DEVOE takes fewer gallons, wears longer—and costs less by the job or by the year.

And that's why we guarantee Devoe without reserve.

L. P. SMITH COMPANY

PLUMBING, TINNING, WINDOWS, DOORS, LEHIGH VALLEY COAL

FULTON, N. Y.

TOMORROW IN THE CHURCHES

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

(Rev. Charles Olmstead, pastor)

The theme for the morning service tomorrow will be "The Best Security." The evening subject will be "Where to Look." The Brotherhood will meet at the church next Monday evening.

The Woman's Missionary Society Union will meet on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Jerome Burns, 260 West Second street. A cordial invitation is extended to all ladies.

Several members of the Christian Endeavor Society will attend the State Convention of the Society in Syracuse next week.

The society will meet on Sunday evening at 6:30 o'clock.

The Sunday school picnic has been arranged for July 26.

* * *

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

Episcopal

(Rev. Minor J. Peters, rector)

Sunday, July 9th. Third Sunday after Trinity.

Holy Communion at 8:00 o'clock.

Matins and sermon at 10:30 a. m.

All the seatings are free and visitors are cordially welcomed at all services.

* * *

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

The services tomorrow will be held at 10:45 a. m. Miss Ada F. Thayer, first reader, and Mrs. Frank Wooley, second reader. The subject tomorrow will be "Sacrament." Golden text, Revelation, 2:7. Responsive reading, I John.

* * *

IMMACULATE CONCEPTION CHURCH

Catholic

(Rev. Father John L. Lindsman, pastor)

Masses at 7:30, 9:00 and 10:30 a. m.

Children's mass at 9:00 o'clock.

Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament following 10:30 mass.

* * *

1ST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

(Rev. C. L. Robertson, pastor)

Morning service at 10:30, with a special sermon on the Bible.

Prayer meetings for the coming week, as follows:

District 13. Monday at 7:30 p. m., home of W. Patterson.

District 6. Tuesday at 2:30 p. m., at the home of Mrs. F. Boigeol.

District 28. Monday at 3 p. m., at the home of Mrs. George Dingle.

District 26. Monday 3 p. m. at home of Mrs. Charles Olmstead.

District 22, at the home of Mrs. G. F. Hillick, Monday, 7:30 p. m.

District 31. Tuesday evening at 7:30, at the home of Mrs. Fred Sharp.

District 23, Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Eugene Drury.

District 5, Monday evening at the home of Mrs. A. L. Hall.

ENLISTMENT BREAKS RECORD IN SYRACUSE

Syracuse.—All records at the Syracuse office for recruiting in the United States navy were broken yesterday when six applicants were sworn into the regular service, one for the naval reserves, while five men signed up for the civilian cruise.

In all twelve men were accepted. This is the largest number ever taken in one day. William Richards, eighteen, of Oswego, was among the twelve, he entering the navy as an apprentice seaman.

QUIRK THEATRE

TODAY—
10th Episode THE IRON CLAW in 2 Parts.
3d Episode of "THE MYSTERIES OF MYRA"
"CHIP" Juvenile Comedy.
4—ACTS VAUDEVILLE—4

SUNDAY—
Violet Mersereau in "THE GREAT PROBLEM" 5-Part Bluebird Feature.
Mutt and Jeff in "THE INTERPRETERS"
5th Chap. of "WHO'S GUILTY"
Charlie Chaplin in CHARLIE THE HEART THIEF

MONDAY—
Madam Petrova in "WHAT WILL PEOPLE SAY" 5 Part Metro Feature.
Mr. and Mrs. Drew in "THE MODEL COOK"

LOOK HERE FOR IT.

Many a Fulton Reader Will be Interested.

When people read about the cures made by a medicine endorsed from far away, is it surprising that they wonder if the statements are true? But when they read of cases right here at home, positive proof is within their reach, for close investigation is an easy matter. Read Fulton endorsement of Doan's Kidney Pills.

P. J. Butterman, cigar maker, 512 W. Broadway, Fulton says: "Nearly every spring I have an attack of lame back and severe pains across my kidneys. At such times my kidneys don't act as they should. I use Doan's Kidney Pills and they never fail to give me prompt relief."

Price 50c., at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Butterman had. Foster-Milburn Co. Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Wanted—Men to work on State highway. Inquire of W. F. Hill & Co., 310 Gansvoort St., City. 479

Wanted—Middle aged woman for general house work. Good wages, no children. Apply at5 North Third street, city. tf

Wanted—Good bright boy, over 16 years of age, to learn the printing trade. Apply at the Evening Times. tf

Wanted—At No. 216 Utica street, a girl for general housework. No washing or ironing. tf

Rooms To Rent—Two apartments over Geisler's store. Apply Lewis' Cigar Store. tf

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

Teamster Wanted—Steady work winter and summer; good wages. John W. Pratt farm. tf

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

Wanted Boarders—Desirable rooms, good board, price reasonable. 420 Seneca street. Mrs. Lamb. 484

Wanted—Wonman for general house work, good wages, family of three. Apply at Times office between 10 and 12 a. m. 481c

Young Men Wanted to learn the restaurant business. Those who have had experience in some kind of clerking preferred. Employment in our New York restaurants, $7 or $8 per week with board to start. Railroad fare reimbursed after having been in our service for six months. Good opportunity for the right young men to become managers in a reasonable length of time. Apply in person or by mail to H. Morris, Supt., care of Thompson's Restaurant, Grand Central Station, New York city.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING AND HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second St.

FOR SALE
MOTOR BOAT
AM LEAVING TOWN AND WILL SELL CHEAP FOR CASH
Call 110 ROCHESTER ST.

Days You'll Never Forget

The Ever-Ready Storage Battery Service Station
Use the battery that is guaranteed—a storage battery to fit any car. Recharging and repairing of batteries given prompt attention.
We have the largest recharging plant in the city.
DUTCHER MACHINE CO.

WANTED
GOOD BRIGHT BOY
Over 16 years of age, to learn Printing Trade. Apply at
THE EVENING TIMES

MOUNT PLEASANT.

Don't forget the W. F. M. S. children's meeting at Mrs. Charles Osborne's, July 12th. Everyone invited. Supper will be served for ten cents by the following committee, Nellie Rowlee, Ella Baker, Dorcas Osborne, Beryl Osborne, Amelia Roth and Ida Bartlett.

* * *

A trail hitters' meeting will be held at the Rowlee Schoolhouse Sunday afternoon, at 3:30. These meetings are certainly splendid and no one should fail to attend.

* * *

Roy Balcom and wife and Ralph Balcom and family attended the Balcome reunion at Redfield, at the home of their parents. They made the trip in Edward Kellar's auto last Friday.

* * *

Edward Durfey celebrated his seventh birthday July first by inviting his playmates and treating them to ice cream and cake. A fine time was enjoyed.

* * *

Miss Bessie Montague, of Syracuse, spent the week-end with her sister, Mrs. Charles Osborne.

* * *

Rev. Cadwell held quarterly meeting here last Sunday and preached an eloquent sermon.

* * *

Mrs. Adelia Duboi shas gone to the Lee Memorial Hospital to have a tumor removed.

* * *

Mrs. Eddy Looker is enjoying a week's visit with her sister, Mrs. Jennings, of Fulton, as her guest.

* * *

Harmon Barker and Fred Osborne lost seven valuable head of stock last Sunday during the electric storm.

* * *

Mrs. Carrie Taplan is spending several days with her brother in Fulton.

* * *

Mrs. Hannah Austin, of South Granby, is visiting relatives hereabouts.

* * *

Jasper and Delos Rowlee with the latter's family, took an auto trip to Maple View near Pulaski where Manly Wilmer now owns and lives on a farm.

* * *

Mrs. Eetta Sinclair, of Oberlin, Ohio, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Isaac Hale.

* * *

Harold Distin, of Syracuse, visited his parents, E. D. Distin last Sunday.

RATS, YES! BUT COCKROACHES! NEVER!

(By United Press)

London, June 20 (by mail)—One hundred and thirty-eight women war workers, who agreed to catch rats for a big London "Rat Catching and Vermin destroying" establishment opened up a new discovery of feminine nature today.

They will gladly catch rats for $10 a week but "cockroach decoying" is where they balk. It was where all but two of the rodent catchers balked clude destruction of the wily cockclude desstruction of he wily cockroach in the day's routine.

In addition to catching rats and mice, the firm also attempts to eliminate crawly members of the vermin family. When all the men vermin eradicators were forced to join the army, the firm advertised for women. There was a feminine rush for the job. The women were first taught the gentle art of snaring the rodents. Then came the course of cockroaches. "Nothing doing" was the general reply.

About the Town

Mrs. Leo Seaton, of West Third street, is ill.

* * *

Among faces that were once familiar here are, Prof. W. W. Rowlee, of Cornell University; Myron Foster, of Ilion; Miss Sarah Perry, of Syracuse; Harold Distin, of Syracuse.

* * *

Mrs. Bunn Jennings is visiting her sister, Mrs. Ella Looker, at Mount Pleasant.

* * *

The Fifth District number seven Bible Study Class meeting will be held Monday evening at 704 Emery street. Dr. J. H. Salisbury, of Nebraska will be leader.

* * *

Mr. Charles Finch and Harold O'Brien left this morning for Springfield, Mass., where they will be located for the summer.

* * *

Mrs. F. S. Randall and son, Herman, of this city, are spending the week end in Syracuse.

SOME NIGHTINGALE!

(By United Press)

London, June 20 (by mail)—Mrs. Louis George's Indiana farm chickens which associated with sparrows so consistently that they learned to hop instead of walk, have created discussion in a London newspaper as to the curious traits of animal life.

Printing the Indiana chicken story, the London Star cites another strange freak which occurred in London, concerning a fish, a plaice, a flat fish peculiar to the salt water of the North Sea.

"The plaice was placed in a tank of salt water in a cool place. Its guardian extracted a spoonful of the salt water each day and replaced a spoonful of fresh water. Eventually the water all became fresh and the plaice didn't notice it.

"Then the guardian extracted the fresh water a spoonful each day until the fish became a dry land fish. Then he put the fish in a bird cage and it began to sing."

RULES BY WHICH JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER HOPES TO LIVE TO BE A HUNDRED

To attain age without being old, just don't worry about anything.

Watch your waistline and take precautions to avoid getting overweight.

Drink lots of water all the time. Drink at least three quarts a day.

Keep your body active. See that every muscle works. Exercise lots

Never go to sleep unless you can lie down somewhere in the fresh air.

New York—John D. Rockefeller, the richest man in the world and one of the youngest old ones, is seventy-seven years of age today. Mr. Rockefeller has his health and eigh hundred million dollars. That's not far short of a billion bucks.

Dr. H. F. Bigar, Sr., Rockefeller's personal physician for twenty-five years, declares Rockefeller will live to be more than a hundred years old because he follows the rules outlined above. When Dr. Biggar took John D. to make him over the Oil King was going down grade fast. He had worn himself to shreds building up his enormous fortune. The doctor told him he must rest or he would die. Rockefeller has been resting ever since. He works, but just to suit himself.

In addition to having about $800,000,000 in his own right now, Rockefeller probably has given to his children and his charities and his colleges between two and three hundred million dollars. The realizable market value of his Standard Oil holdings alone recently was estimated at half a billion dollars.

It is estimated that Rockefeller's income is $60,000,000 a year, which is equivalent to $5,000,000 a month, $1,153,846.15 a week, $6,853.97 an hour, $140.40 a minute, $1.90 2-3 a second.

Rockefeller has accumulated every cent of this wealth since 1865, when he made his first $5,000. In 1875 he had $5,000,000. In 1885 he had $100,000,000. In 1900 he had $400,000,000. In 1905 he had $550,000,000.

JOB LOST—DIES OF BROKEN HEARRT

Syracuse—James Jones, fifty years old is dead of a broken heart because he lost a job he had held for twenty-five years.

Jones, who lived at 412 North West street had been working at the R. E. Dietz Company where he had worked for a quarter of a century. He brooded continuously over the affair members of his family said and they believe his death was a direct result of his grief.

"LISTEN TO THE MUSIC OF THE BIG BRASS BAND"
BAND DAY IS THE FOURTH DAY OF
Redpath Chautauqua Week
This Will Be a Real Joy Day For Music Lovers, One Which Will Long Be Remembered
Two Great Concerts of Thrilling Marches, Stately Overtures and Heart Throbbing Songs by CIMERA'S CELEBRATED BAND
—AND—
MISS LILLIAN HEYWARD, Soprano
Your Season Ticket Admits You to Both Programs
Afternoon Adults, - 50 Cents Children, 25 Cents SINGLE ADMISSIONS Evening Adults, - 50 Cents Children, 35 Cents
In Fulton July 31st to August 5th

CAMP WHITMAN IS OBJECT OF CRITICISM

Criticisms regarding the provisions for the health, safety and comfort of the National guardsmen of this state mobilized at Camp Whitman have been heard for some time.

The following statement is from a person who has had adequate means of inspecting life at the camp, who has personally inspected all routines of camp life and should be qualified to speak accurately regarding conditions.

According to this person, whose name for obvious reasons cannot be divulged conditions at the camp are not as good as they have been represented. The following is opinion expressed of conditions at Camp Whitman:

"With over two weeks already elapsed since the New York National Guard was called to the mobilization camp, and with a majority of the units held either at Van Courtlandt Park, New York city, or at Camp Whitman, the belief is growing that the guardsmen are serving as a butt for polticians. And on every hand, from the site of the camp to the facilities, or rather lack of them, afforded there is evidence to bear out that belief.

"Here are a few counts that can be returned by an impartial visitor after only an hour's observation. With additional time, the number might be readily increased.

"The camp site itself is wretched.

"The ground is hilly, thus preventing the laying out of a regulation camp and causing the scattering of the regiments and other units making up the New York division.

"A parade ground where the entire division or even a brigade can pass in review is an impossibility.

"The transportation facilities are execrable. There are only two tracks, one for inbound and one for outbound traffic.

"The camp site is located twenty-five miles from the main line and furthermore is on the wrong side of the river. To shift troops to the main line they must first be transported to Albany, Poughkeepsie or New York city.

"There are absolutely no modern facilities for loading or unloading ambulances, escort wagons or horses. There is only a short siding, which will accommodate but fifteen cars at the utmost. Sidings which will accommodate double that number are a necessity. Otherwise, quick transportation is impossible. Incoming troop trains have been held down the line for over three hours to enable other trains to unload.

"The water situation remains acute and can not be remedied, despite the press notices that sufficient wells have been sunk. There is less than half of the amount of water necessary, and a major of the United States Army, here for inspection, declared that if the troops are held here for two weeks longer an epidemic is in sight. The water is minus in both quantity and quality.

"Sanitary conditions, owing to the lack of water, generally are bad. Many of the men have had no bath since they arrived here, and those who have enjoyed that luxury did so in small creeks from which water is now being drawn for cooking purposes! Only a few regiments have been provided with the shower baths that each organization is supposed to have. And incidentally, only the New York city and down east units have been given them.

"Forced to sleep on soft ground that quickly absorbs and retains water, there has been throughout Camp Whitman an epidemic of colds, catarrh and kindred troubles. The field hospital keeps a lid of secrecy on its cases, but one man had a hemorrhage of the lung from over exposure.

"The lack of organization is a feature noticed by outsiders. Orders are given only to be countermanded within a few minutes. This applies not only to orders of the day, but to mustering in and troop movement commands as well. Efficiency is absolutely missing, at least within the meaning of the term as defined by European war lords. Unit commanders apparently do just about as they please, insofar as maneuvers are concerned. Ask the ordinary non-com who is in command of the camp and he will answer: "Headquarters." Press him further as to who is in charge there and he will shrug his shoulders.

"While there may be one company here which has its full equipment, a canvass has failed to disclose it. Every outfit lacks some one thing, or several things, and the Syracusans are no exception. Battery A, Company C and the Fourth Ambulance Company lack personal equipment, such as additional clothing, shoes, etc. Troop D at New York needs more horses, as does Battery A, while the Fourth Ambulance Company has nary an animal. The Fourth also requires six squad tents. Over a score of the men are sleeping in ambulances, while the tents are overcrowded.

"When it was announced that the training camp would be located at Green Haven, it was stated that the site would be the state farm located there, with additional leased land. The proper way to state it would be to reverse the order and simply say that the state farm would supplement the leased land—all of which meant easy money for certain property holders. Here's where the politicians come in. Just so long as the troops can be held here, just so long must there be rent paid.

"In short, New York State appropriated a half million dollars for the mobilization of all its troops.

"The explanation given first was that Beekman would save the state thousands of dollars in railroad expenses. When the Mexican crisis developed, it was stated that the transportation facilities at Pine Plains were such as to make that place an impossibility as a camp site. In addition it was pointed out that at Pine Plains Black River water would have to be used, while here there was spring and well water in plenty. Those who have attended the Pine Plains camp call it a "perfect paradise" as compared with the present site.

"The men in camp here are more than willing to enter the Federal service as volunteers, and this spirit but reflects that of the officers. But even a blind man can see that the guardsmen are dissatisfied with the conditions existing, although there is little grumbling openly. Military law is too strict for many to wish that. Yet, the men want to see action. They left home with that end in view, and after being brought up to the fighting pitch, to be left kicking their heels here is a lot that not one relishes."

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

The following have recently registered at the office of the Chamber of Commerce:

John J. Stephens, Washington, D. C.; Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Stewart, Jersey City, N. J.; George W. Cannain, Syracuse, N. Y.; Jerry Murphy, Buffalo, N. Y.; Mrs. F. W. Gardner and daughter, Janet, Los Angeles; Mrs. George W. Lloyd, Wilmington, Del.; Mr. and Mrs. James Martin, Rochester, N. Y.; Mr. Edward Grady, Oswego, N. Y.; Mrs. William Grady, Oswego, N. Y.; Miss Eleanor Collins, Rochester, N. Y.; Miss Marcella Martin, Rochester, N. Y.

CHICHESTER S PILLS

THE DIAMOND BRAND.

Ladies! Ask your Druggist for Chi-ches-ter's Diamond Brand Pills in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with Blue Ribbon. Take no other. Buy of your Druggist. Ask for CHI-CHES-TER'S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS, for 25 years known as Best, Safest, Always Reliable.

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

THERE IS NO ROYAL ROAD

TO FINANCIAL SUCCESS. IT DEPENDS UPON THE INDIVIDUAL—HOW HE IMPROVES HIS OPPORTUNITIES. CULTIVATE THE SAVING HABIT, AND YOU WILL BE HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS. YOUR ACCOUNT IS CORDIALLY INVITED.

4% PAID IN OUR INTEREST DEPARTMENT

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

THE SALAD BOWL.

LETTUCE AND GRAPE SALAD.—Cut a head of lettuce into quarters or eighths and place the sections on a serving dish radiating from the center. Between the sections pile halved and seeded white grapes, with purple and black ones in the center—the hard grapes. Serve with French dressing.

Suffrage Salad.—Three cupfuls of diced cold boiled carrots, a cupful of raw grated carrots, half a cupful of raw grated onions, a cupful of mayonnaise of French dressing, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley or green peppers, lettuce leaves and half a teaspoonful of salt. Dice the carrots very fine, place on lettuce leaves, dust with salt and cover with mayonnaise. Sprinkle the grated raw carrot over top, also the parsley or peppers. This makes a very attractive and wholesome salad.

Cucumber and Radish Salad.—This is very simply made with a cucumber, a couple of bunches of radishes, lettuce and some dressing. The peeled radishes should be cut in slices and soaked in ice water for half an hour. The cucumber should also be cut into thin slices, and then arrange the radishes and cucumbers in overlapping slices on a bed of lettuce and serve with a boiled salad dressing or French dressing, if you prefer it.

Grapefruit Salad on Artichoke Hearts.—For this use either the fresh artichokes boiled in salted water or else the canned artichoke bottoms that have been cooked about ten minutes in chicken stock. This stock may be made from the carcass of a chicken boiled up in a little water and well seasoned or from one of the capsules that come now for chicken broth. Drain the artichokes, cool, marinate with French dressing and let stand an hour; then arrange on crisp lettuce leaves arranged cup fashion. Mound with grapefruit that has been chilled and marinated also and pour over all a French dressing. Garnish with strips of red pepper or stuffed olives. For the French dressing use red wine, vinegar, oil and paprika.

Cucumber Spirals.—Peel the cucumbers, toss into ice water, then cut round and round with a fine sharp knife as if peeling an apple. The result should be a long, slender spiral that makes ring after ring. Serve with French dressing.

Anna Thompson.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WEEK END MENU.

SATURDAY—BREAKFAST.
Halved Grapefruit.
Cornmeal Mush.
Browned Fish Cutlets
(From Leftover Haddock and Dressing).
Popovers. Coffee.

LUNCHEON.
Broiled Kidneys With Bacon.
Spinach Timbales.
Buttered Toast. Tea.

DINNER.
New England Boiled Dinner,
Corned Beef, Cabbage, Carrots and Turnips
(Prepared in the Fireless Cooker).
Potato Balls.
Romaine and Radish Salad.
Puff Puddings.
Coffee

MINTY RECIPES.

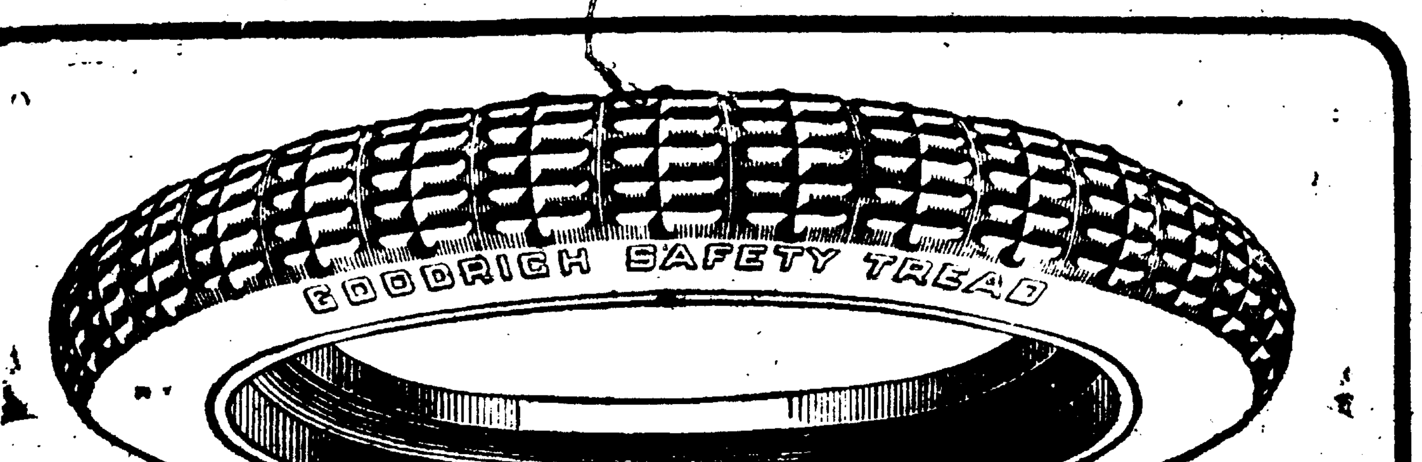
MINT AND ORANGE SHERBET.—Prepare a sirup from three cupfuls of water and two cupfuls of sugar. Cool for six minutes after it begins to boil, add half a bunch of bruised fresh mint and a heaping teaspoonful of instant gelatin. Remove from the fire as soon as the gelatin is dissolved and allow the sirup to cool. Then add the juice of a lemon and three oranges and strain the mixture into a chilled freezer. Pack with ice and rock salt and freeze very slowly. When the sherbet begins to congeal stir in the stiffly whipped whites of two eggs and half a cupful each of chopped creme de menthe cherries and candied orange peel. Freeze until firm and smooth and serve in small crystal sherbet cups.

Canned Mint.—Half fill a fruit jar with well washed mint leaves, then fill to the brim with pure fruit vinegar, diluted if too strong. Dry mint leaves very carefully and put away in tightly sealed jars, covering them with a paper bag so as to exclude the light as much as possible. When ready to use in sauces strain off a cupful of the vinegar and steep a few of the dried mint leaves in it just long enough for them to curl. Sweeten to taste and serve.

Mint Punch.—Remove the leaves from twelve large stalks of mint. Chop fine, put them in a mortar with four or five tablespoonfuls of sugar and grind to a paste or rub them in a bowl with a spoon. Boil together for five minutes a pound of sugar and a quart of water. Add the juice of three lemons and the mint. When the mixture is icy cold freeze. Serve in punch glasses.

Frozen Mint.—A quart milk, a pint sugar, juice of three lemons. Flavor with crushed mint leaves or extract of mint and color slightly with vegetable green. Freeze in the usual manner. Decorate with candied cherries and serve with the meat course.

Anna Thompson.



Three Million Auto Tires made—
—by GOODRICH, in year 1915

STUDY the Price-List publicly printed below.

Compare with the List-Prices of other Tires made in LESSER Volume.

Observe that competing Prices are higher in almost the exact proportion that VOLUME of production is smaller.

This, when Quality approaches the Goodrich Standard.

Cut our 1915 Tire Output (of 3,000,000 Auto and Truck Tires) to One-third, and it would still far exceed the Average of all Competing Makes or Brands.

But, that huge reduction in Volume MIGHT result in every Tire we made costing you One-third MORE than present prices.

They would not,—and could not,—be BETTER Tires, at this necessarily higher-cost to Us, and higher-price to You.

Because,—Goodrich Tires are not made "up to a price,"—nor "down to a price."

WE, first of all, make the BEST Fabric Tires that our 47-year Experience in Rubber-Working,—our huge Purchasing-Power, and the most Advanced Equipment, renders possible.

Then we let Cost fall where it will.

To that Cost we add a moderate, and fair, Profit for Ourselves and for our Dealers.

Then we let VOLUME rise,—as it will.

The more Tires we Make, the LESS each Tire COSTS us to produce,—and the less it costs YOU to buy them.

The more Tires we Sell, the less profit, per Tire, WE NEED, for dividends.

The more Tires we make, the better we KNOW HOW to make them,—the more we have at Stake on Quality,—and Satisfaction to Consumers.

And,—because of all this,—

—The BEST Fabric Tires that Skill,—Experience,—Good-Faith, and Maximum Volume, can build,—are now available to YOU at the VERY MODERATE Fair-List Prices here quoted.

Why pay more for ANY Fabric Tire?

THE B. F. GOODRICH CO., Akron, O.

Goodrich "Fair-List" Prices

NOTICE,—These Tires are as perfect as Fabric Tires can be made.

But, should any dissatisfaction whatever arise, with any Goodrich Tire, its Owner is invited, and REQUESTED, to take the matter up promptly with us,—the Makers.

He will find that Fair, Square, and LIBERAL treatment will always be extended, on all proper adjustments.

THE B. F. GOODRICH CO., Akron, O.

30x3	Ford Sizes (Safety-Treads)	$10.40	34x4	(Safety Treads)	$22.40
30x3½		$13.40	35x4½		$31.20
32x3½		$15.45	36x4½		$31.60
33x4		$22.00	37x5		$37.35

GOODRICH—
—Black "Barefoot" TIRES

"TEXTAN"—Does for your SHOE Soles what black "Barefoot-Rubber" does for Goodrich Tire Soles.

—Wears longer than Leather! —Is Non-slippery! —Is more Flexible than Leather!
—Is Waterproof! —Is Lighter than Leather! —Is EASIER on your Feet!

Ask your Shoe Dealer, or Shoe Repairer, for Textan Soles on your next pair of Shoes.

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M. CLARKE.

Cy Cawkins Was Seasick Once, an His Stomach Had an Awful Time Tryin' to Get Him to Work It Off.

Be ever slow to answer when your passion gets in sway;
It gives you time to conjure up some meaner thing to say.

HOW TO SPRAY WHILE WATERING THE GARDEN PLANTS.

HOW TO SPRAY WHILE WATERING THE GARDEN PLANTS.—Spraying is perhaps the least interesting work in connection with our gardens and therefore is likely to be the last to be done. Nevertheless it is very necessary, and much money and effort have been wasted in the garden through want of spraying.

You can do your spraying while watering, and this is accomplished by various small devices which screw to the faucet and to which one end of the hose is fastened. In these bowls or sprayers insecticide soaps of various kinds may be placed. Thus while watering or syringing a mild solution of insecticide is also applied.

This method of spraying has been tried for several years and is remarkably efficient, particularly in the sense of prevention. If the sprayer is used consistently from early spring to late fall, which can be done at trifling expense, very few bugs will find that garden a comfortable habitation.

Throwing the Dart.

Throwing the dart is a picturesque custom which is observed in Cork, Ireland. Every third year the chief magistrate proceeds to the mouth of Cork harbor in full state. Following immemorial custom, he throws a dart into the sea—a dart with a head of gold and a shaft of mahogany—saying, "I cast this javelin into the sea and declare that as far around as it falls extend the right and dominion of the corporation of Cork to and over the harbor as well as the rivers, creeks and bays within the same."

Weighing Instead of Counting.

No longer is it regarded as good management to count uniform pieces one by one in manufacturing plants. Scales especially constructed for the purpose are employed for counting material of like units. Not only is the weighing machine more accurate because it substitutes simple manual operation and the highest degree of mechanical precision for the complicated mental figuring and inaccuracies of other systems, but it counts from 100 to 1,000 per cent faster than the time worn methods.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 480 — MONDAY, JULY 10, 1916 — Price, One Cent

FIRST STREET PAVING CONTRACT TO BE LET

In the opinion of many Fultonians, Wednesday of this week will be a red letter date on the calendar of the city's history, for at that time the State Department of Highways, after a calm deliberation extending over some six monhs or more, will finally let the contract for the paving of South First street, which in its present condition is one of the most wretched business and residential thoroughfares in the state of New York. The Highways Commission will open the bids for the work in Albany Wednesday and the actual work on construction should begin not later than August 1. It is expected that the work will cover the greater part of two months, and by October 1, it should be completed, unless some new hitch in the proceedings occurs.

The matter of paving South First street between Rochester street and Broadway, .36 miles, was first brought to the public attention last summer, when John W. Stevenson as president, Louis Garrett and A. W. Wiltsie comprised the Board of Public Works. Early in the year the Board passed a resolution to pave the street at a width of thirty-eight feet, four feet wider than its present width. Mr. Witlsie, at the time, voted for the thirty-eight foot street, but afterwards stated hat he had been influenced by misrepresentations on the part of Mr. Stevenson, who had told him that all he property owner along the street were in favor of a wider thoroughfare. When the property owners appointed Fred A. Gage and George E. Mason as their representatives on the paving Board, opposition to the plans of Mr. Stevenson was soon manifest.

By some clever jockeying, which included hastily called meetings and other tried and true political tricks, the thirty-eight foot project was finally "put over," despite the efforts of Messrs. Gage, Mason and Wiltsie. Then inspection of the records of the meeting showed that the resolution was illegally drawn, and the thirty-four foot supporters, holding three votes on the paving board to those of Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Garrett, were in control. All attempts to bring the matter to a vote, failed, however, in spite of several long meetings which were marked by open hostility between the two factions. Large audiences attended most of the meetings, and the members of the Board did not hesitate to express their opinions of their fellow members at any time, in fact, the climax was reached early in July when Mr. Gage and Mr. Stevenson exchanged heated words in the hallway of the City Hall, and a fist fight started between the two men, who had to be separated by other city officials present.

The paving problem, therefore, was left as a legacy to the Lewis administration, along with several other uncompleted and intricate projects of the Fox regime, and the present Board of Public Works at once passed a resolution to pave the street thirty-four feet wide. The city, state and trolley company will share the expense of the work, and the property owners along the street will be assessed in proportion to their frontages.

PEACOCK CLUB MET AT METHODIST CHURCH

The Peacock Men's Club, of this city, met yesterday afternoon at the First Methodist church at three o'clock. President George L. Pratt directed the meeting, and William Salisbury, of Syracuse, president of the Billy Sunday club of that city, was the principal speaker.

The men's chorus sang several hymns during the meeting, and reports of the various committees were received. It was announced that several teams of workers have been sent out to nearby towns to assist in church and choral work. The club will meet again next Sunday.

NEWCOMER IN THE MYERS FAMILY

Mr. Myers, of Utica street, is wearing a broad smile these days. The reason—a bouncing son arrived at his home recently. Mrs. Myers and the boy are both doing well.

Hospital Auxiliary to Meet Thursday

The postponed monthly meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Lee Memorial Hospital will be held Thursday, July 13th at four o'clock at the Citizens' Club.

SUPPOSED DEAD; MAN RETURNS HOME

Oswego—After having been given up for dead as a victim of drowning, in the Oswego river, Ross Gardner, twenty-two, chief shipping clerk for the Columbia Mills, of Minetto, appeared at his home here today in his birthday suit, and very nearly frightened his wife and two children to death.

Gardner went swimming and failed to return and a search disclosed his clothes on the river bank. Villagers assisted by the members of the coast guard from the Oswego station grappled for the body all day yesterday and part of last night. Gardner is unable to remember anything.

Giving Away the Bride.

An archaism of the English marriage service which has fallen into disuse is, "Who giveth this woman away?" It is a relic of the days when a woman could be donated by her father or her brothers as property.

It is related that at a wedding in California many years ago when the clergyman said, "Who giveth this woman away?" a sepulchral voice from the body of the audience replied, "I could, but I won't."—Los Angeles Times.

PUBLISHERS' ASSOCIATION ROYALLY ENTERTAINED

The members of the Central New York State Publishers' Association enjoyed an outing in this city Saturday as guests of Fulton members of the organization. Visiting members of the association met at the Elks' Home Saturday morning at ten o'clock, and after an informal business session they went to the Clark House where luncheon was served at one o'clock. An orchestra played during the luncheon, and Mayor Victor C. Lewis and Willis S. Morin welcomed the visitors to the city. Several members of the association including Frank M. Cornell and A. P. Bradt, of this city, made short addresses during the meal.

At two o'clock, the visitors left by automobile for Oswego, where they were met by members of the Oswego Chamber of Commerce and escorted through Fort Ontario. The delegation then proceeded to the home of Congressman Luther Mott, where Mr. Mott made a short address to the newspapermen. The party returned to this city early in the evening.

Among those who attended the outing were: Editor and Mrs. H. B. Sykes of the Courier, Clinton; Editor W. Stanley Child of the Dispatch, Oneida; Editor M. V. Atwood of the Groton Journal and Courier; Editor C. H. Skelton, of the Canastota Courant; Editor and Mrs. F. F. Milmoe of the Canastota Journal and Bee; Editor and Mrs. E. A. Blair of the Cleveland Press; Editor and Mrs. A. P. Bradt and W. H. Klein, of the Fulton Observer; Editor and Mrs. B. H. Stone and their son of the Camden Advance-Journal; Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Mabie; Editor and Mrs. C. J. Carr of the Vernon News; Mr. and Mrs. Earl Hilmer; Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Bates and their son of the Vernon News; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Judson; Editor and Mrs. W. C. Wheeler, of the Tully Times; E. F. Bussy of the Cato Citizen; Editor and Mrs. C. K. Williams of the Phoenix Register; Mrs. O. C. Breed, Fulton; Mrs. Mary Allen of Kansas City, Mo.; Editor and Mrs. F. M. Cornell and Mr. and Mrs. Louis F. Cornell of the Fulton Patriot.

Herbert W. Adkins, who was a hard worker for Old Home Week

GENEROUS FULTONIANS SUBSCRIBED TO FUND

The name of all Fulton business men who subscribed to the expense fund of the Friday night parade during Old Home Week, and also to the fund which will be used to defray the heavy expenses of the celebration, are printed today at the request of Mayor Victor C. Lewis. The Mayor, assisted by C. Milton Allen and Herbert W. Adkins, solicited subscriptions from the business men Friday, and they asked only the contribution of one dollar from each man. Some gave more, but no one refused the request, and with the money collected the committee was able to engage two out of town bands who added greatly to the success of the affair.

In connection with the Saturday evening dance on the west side pavement, Mayor Lewis today expressed his appreciation of the generosity of M. N. Baldwin, the West Side grocer, who donated the corn meal which was sprinkled on the paving, and to the Electric Light Company, which donated the electricity for the Old Home Week street lighting. Mayor Lewis stated that the Electric Company, through the manager, J. J. Jordan, had displayed a very generous spirit throughout the entire affair, and no request made by the committee was refused.

The names of those who subscribed to the fund follow:

Jas. Andrianos	3.00
Tom. Barry	3.00
Fulton Pharmacy	3.00
F. R. Eaton	3.00
American Tobacco Co.	3.00
E. J. Schem	3.00
J. M. Caffrey	3.00
P. J. O'Brien	3.00
John Pomphret	3.00
Timothy Keeler	3.00
Peter Okonoweski	3.00
Edward Geis	3.00
William Best	1.00
John J. Jordan	1.00
W. P. Morin	1.00
W. D. Carr	1.00
W. W. Kennedy	1.00
William MacNamara	1.00
Charles Wilcox	1.00
James R. Somers	1.00
David Katz	1.00
E. M. Bonner	1.00
John S. Frawley	1.00
J. W. Branche	1.00
O. S. Bogardus	1.00
William Bogue	1.00
James Ward	1.00
O. W. Corey	1.00
Keller and Wilson	1.00
M. A. Stranahan	1.00
F. J. Taylor	1.00
H. N. Wood	1.00
E. J. Crahan	1.00
Fred Carroll	1.00
John Comatis	1.00
H. C. Giesler	1.00
Julius Browda	1.00
Clayton Hall	1.00
D. L. Lipsky	1.00
Conley Brothers	1.00
H. P. Allen	1.00
C. A. Beckwith	1.00
Edward J. Dyer	1.00
Endicott-Johnson Co.	1.00
Jack Reynolds	1.00
W. S. Hillick	1.00
H. J. Wilson	1.00
Wilson & Scott	1.00
John Painter, Jr.	1.00
G. C. Hill	1.00
H. C. Webb	1.00
J. C. O'Brien	1.00
Hulett Tait Co., Inc.	1.00
B. J. O'Grady	1.00
F. E. LaPorte	1.00
Van Buren Furniture Co.	1.00
Fulton Patriot	1.00
Fulton Observer	1.00
Frank Massaro	1.00
Pearson Brothers	1.00
Young & Hill	1.00
W. H. Patterson	1.00
W. M. Burritt	1.00
L. T. Miller	1.00
H. A. Zuck	1.00
Thomas DeMassi	1.00
M. E. Reynolds	1.00
D. M. Sullivan	1.00
J. R. Sullivan	1.00
F. Switzer	1.00
M. B. Hargrave	1.00
Dr. E. M. Anderson	1.00
Charles Brooks	1.00
Fred Gillard	1.00
F. D. Stewart	1.00
Joseph Thomas & Bros.	1.00
John Omelia	1.00
William Cook	1.00
Fulton Salvage Co.	1.00
Frank Wallace	1.00
James Delaney	1.00
Ray Flint	1.00
Boland Brothers	1.00
McIntosh Bros.	1.00
Ed. Walsh	1.00
William Nelligan	1.00
George Althouse	1.00
Dr. S. D. Keller	1.00
Kovack & Gowich	1.00
William Murphy	1.00
William H. Osborne	1.00
W. C. Morgan	1.00
Wallace Amusement Co.	1.00
Fred Feeley	1.00
H. Rosenbloom	1.00
Van Wagenen Corp.	1.00
Fulton Fuel and Light Co.	1.00
Ray Westover	1.00
J. H. Bennett	1.00
Dr. H. W. Schlappi	1.00
H. Amdursky	1.00
Setz & McCormick	1.00
Samuel Waldhorn	1.00
L. A. Richardson	1.00
Statios Contognis	1.00
Aristigen N. Sultin	1.00
H. Huggins	1.00
Mehegan Brothers	1.00
Jos. H. Donovan	1.00
W. J. Lovejoy	1.00
L. C. Foster	1.00
G. W. Perkins	1.00
J. J. Little	1.00
A. W. Thompson	1.00
McKinstrys Store	1.00
People's Hardware Co., Inc.	1.00
F. W. Lasher	1.00
J. F. Brown	1.00
Palmer Hope Hardware Co.	1.00
C. W. Streeter	1.00
H. H. Bristol	1.00
Floyd Marvin	1.00
Dr. A. L. Hall	1.00
H. N. Shipman	1.00
M. J. McDonald Co.	1.00
W. H. Gayer	1.00
E. O. Baker	1.00
Sime Lavell	1.00
Fulton Cleaning and Dying Co.	1.00
Theodore Foster	.50
A. M. Druse	.50

WILSON SOUNDS PEACE NOTE IN DETROIT SPEECH

(By United Press)

Detroit—President Wilson today answered Colonel Roosevelt's spirit of militancy with a message of peace. Speaking to the 3,500 people who packed Arcadia Hall, numbers of whom were delegates to the World Salesmanship Congress, the President said that fighting results in hatred that ruins opportunity for progress in trade and civilization. The same people who heard Roosevelt's call to arms here two months ago today rocked the hall with cheers for peace.

"We must respect the sovreignity of Mexico," the President said at one time, "I say this for the benefit of those who wish to butt in. Mexico feels we do not wish to help her, but to possess her. This is due to the manner in which some have tried to exploit her possessions. I will not help these men." The President sounded a call to business men of the world to respond to the new demand of salesmanship. "Lift your eyes to the horizon of business," he urged in closing, "and with the thought that you stand for the liberty of mankind, sell your goods and try to convert the people to the principles of America." As the president concluded someone shouted "Hurrah for the next President of the United States!"

* * *

Washington—Public health service heads today decided to ask Congress for a $100,000 appropriation and commission to draft physicians from civil life to help the infantile paralysis epidemic now raging in New York and other cities.

Washington—Appointment of a commission of five members, to include one Senator and one Representative, to negotiate with Mexico for the purchase of lower California and northern states of Mexico, was asked in a resolution introduced today by Representative Caldwell.

* * *

Baltimore—Out of the depths Captain Paul Koenig brought here today the word of mouth story of the first successful crossing of the Atlantic by a commercial submarine, the giant super-submersible Deutschland which he says is to be followed here by others. Supplementing a written statement the Captain this afternoon told how his vessel had lain at the bottom of the English Channel one whole night, how he and his crew played the gramaphone beneath the waves and how they lived on champagne and the best of foods, how they had openly sailed 3,800 miles, submerging only a few times for a few hours and doing only ninety miles under the surface during the entire trip.

El Paso, Texas.—By cutting off the top of one ear Villistas are branding Mexicans who refuse to join them against the de facto government, General Gonsalez of Juarez informed the State Department agent today. Several hundred men in southern Chihuahua have already been mutilated in this manner, Gonsalez stated.

* * *

London—The Anglo French armies pressed forward on both sides of the river Somme in severe fighting last night, despite determined German attempts to stem the great offnesive.

GERMAN "SUB" SAFE IN PORT

Baltimore, July 9—The German merchant super-submarine Deutschland arrived at Quarantine, four miles below Baltimore, at eleven o'clock tonight.

Long expected, ridiculed, fabulous as the sea-serpent or the flying Dutchman, she became a reality to the watchers off Cape Henry at exactly 1:20 o'clock this morning.

She made her way slowly through a network of inquisitive ships and through the mazes of red tape of the quarantine and customs officials, toward her dock at the pier of the Eastern Forwarding Company, Locust Point, Baltimore, where she will arrive early tomorrow morning.

She is the largest submarine afloat. The largest German war models are less than 300 feet long. But this submarine of commerce is 315 feet long, exactly one third the length of the largest merchant vessels afloat—the Vaterland and the Imperator.

Carries 1,000 Tons of Dyes

The boat carries no passengers. Her cargo consists entirely of dyestuffs—1,000 tons of them. This keeps her very low in the water when riding on the surface. Her draft when she was sighted was seventeen feet, and it was largely because of her depth that she did not try to come nearer land when submerged.

She is commanded by Captain Kairig and has a crew of twenty-nine men. Both captain and crew are drawn from the German merchant fleet and not from the navy. The craft is unarmed and is being treated by the United States officials like any other merchant ship.

It is said that she submerged whenever she saw any vessel on the chance that it might be a warship.

The English Government was not among those who regarded the transatlantic submersible as a joke, and the report is that the Deutschland was chased for thirty hours by English and French warships. She submerged and eluded them by travelling out of her course 800 miles.

CITY CAN NOT SELL WATERFRRONT

New York—All the West Side waterfront land the City of New York will transfer to the New York Central Railroad—if not restrained—is held by the city only in trust, searchers for the West End Association discovered yesterday.

The priceless waterfront lots along the Hudson River were first owned by the State of New York. They were then intrusted to the City of New York to be held inviolate forever, that the people might have, to the end of time, a breathing place and free access to the water.

"If a lawyer is given property in trust and sells or transfers that property he is first disbarred and then sent to Sing Sing," remarked J. Bleeker Miller yesterday. Mr. Miller is an authority on land titles.

FIVE BAPTIZED IN LAKE NEAHTAWANTA

Rev. J. W. Barrett, pastor of the First Methodist Church, baptized a class of five candidates in the waters of Lake Neahtawanta yesterday afternoon. A large audience witnessed the ceremony and a choral service was held on the lake banks after the baptisms.

PAVEMENT DANCE ON WEST SIDE STREETS

The community dance on the pavement at West Broadway and Second street Saturday night, which marked the close of the Fulton Old Home Week celebration, was a decided success. Scores of young people and many of the older residents of the city enjoyed the dancing to the excellent music furnished by the Elks' band, which was stationed on a platform at the Sullivan corner. The pavement was thoroughly cleaned early Saturday evening and sprinkled with corn meal and made a fairly smooth dance floor.

Mayor Lewis and Mrs. Lewis led the grand march which opened the affair, and about forty couples participated. Among those who danced were Mr. and Mrs. C. Milton Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Webb, Mrs. Robert Hunter, Dr. and Mrs. Edward J. Dyer, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert W. Adkins, Miss Clara Bache, Miss Katherine Webb, Miss Ellen Frawley, Miss Genevieve McCormick, Miss Rose Walsh, Miss Jeanette Cameron, Miss Josephine Shepard, Neal Hunter, Parker VanBuren, James Frawley, and others, including several Oswego and Syracuse visitors who were present.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

MONDAY, JULY 10, 1916

For the second time within a year, the Fulton Chamber of Commerce is without the services of a secretary. The resignation of D. S. Hollenga, who assumed the duties of secretary of the organization last December, was accepted by the board of directors last Wednesday.

Willis S. Morin, president of the Chamber, in announcing the resignation of Mr. Hollenga gave no hint that the Chamber had any other applicants for the position under consideration.

During his stay here, Mr. Hollenga demonstrated beyond all question of a doubt that he has the qualifications and executive ability necessary to properly superintend the work of the Fulton organization. The reasons for his resignation have not been made public, and although several conflicting stories regarding it are in circulation, it is understood that few of them are founded on fact.

It is stated that Mr. Hollenga has under consideration a position as secretary of a Chamber of Commerce in the northern part of this state, and his many friends here hope he will accept it.

The greatest celebration ever seen in this city has gone down into history. Few among those who directed the event were aware a month ago that the affair would reach such proportion and there were many who were skeptical regarding its success.

A week before the event, however, the public at large began to display a co-operative spirit, and when the Old Home Week opening day dawned the success of the affair was assured.

An unforeseen contingency arose last Wednesday and for a time the fate of the celebration hung in a balance, after the resignation of Secretary Hollenga, who was the guiding spirit of the project up to that time.

Then the city administration was given an opportunity to show its worth, and everyone knows the result. The events of the last three days were by far the most successful of the entire week, and the credit is due entirely to Mayor Victor C. Lewis and the members of the city administration. The Friday night parade, in particular, the greatest public spectacle ever seen here, was an impromptu affair arranged within twelve hours by the Mayor and his aides.

If it had no other result, the Old Home Week celebration served its purpose in proving to the people of this city and county that there are men in Fulton who can do things, and are ready at all times to co-operate in any project calculated to benefit their city.

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Utica Herald Dispatch:

The health authorities of New York City decided last night to abandon, for the present, at least, a plan decided upon in the afternoon to appeal to the American Red Cross for nurses to aid in stamping out the infantile paralysis scourge. Health Commissioner Emerson expressed the opinion that it would not be necessary to ask for outside aid, as the hospitals of the city had agreed to extend their help more freely. Six experts of the United States Public Health Service, however, have been ordered to New York to help the city and State authorities. Dr. Simon Flexner of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research has sent word to Commissioner Emerson that he will come to New York next Thursday from Seal Harbor, Me., where he is on a vacation, to attend a meeting of physicians to discuss measures to check the disease.

New York medical men are agreed that only by unremitting vigilance and the strict enforcement of every known sanitary precaution, could the epidemic be kept within bounds. Dr. Emerson declared one of the steps he had decided upon was the prosecution of physicians who fail to report cases of the disease they have attended. The court actions would be begun, he said, wherever the necessary evidence could be obtained. The children's reading rooms in the public libraries have been ordered closed, and the order barring children from moving picture theatres will not be modified until conditions improve. Playgrounds in various parts of the city have been ordered closed. Fresh air work for the children of the city is being done in close co-operation with the city and State health authorities. Before the children are sent to the country they are carefully examined by two physicians and regular visits are made by doctors and nurses to fresh air homes. Sincere efforts are being made in the homes of the poor to follow the instructions of the health department. Almost every home visited by inspectors has been spotlessly clean, but many of them are found swarming with flies because the families have no funds with which to buy screens. As a result of these reports money will be provided to properly screen all windows. The fact that no reports of new cases reached the State headquarters yesterday afternoon strengthened the belief of officials that the disease would not reach the epidemic stage upstate. Cases of the disease are reported from Connecticut, Pennsylvania and Montreal. The Vermont Board of Health yesterday adopted a rule, providing that every child under fifteen years, who has been in New York since June 20, must be duly reported to a health officer within twenty-four hours after coming to Vermont and shall then be subjected to two weeks' quarantine. Hotel managers and boarding house keepers are especially warned to see that the rule is enforced.

* * *

Watertown Standard:

The New York county Progressive committee, which is one unit of the state organization, with an enrollment of 10,000 of the 46,000 under the Moose emblem in the state, is composed in the main of soldiers of fortune unable to get along in either of the old parties. Left high and dry by the retirement of Colonel Roosevelt the committee remnant seeks to do a little business on its own hook. Since Hughes and Whitman are favored by the Moose who returned to the G. O. P. the professionals are reluctant to do anything the men they declare deserted theem desire. It is natural, too, that in state affairs they should prefer Judge Seabury as a standard bearer. The judge has been in about all the side issues himself. A man who can have the support of Hearst and of the Progressives, the single taxers and the Democratic machine is something of a political acrobat or juggler. Judge Seabury appealed to the same elements in 1914. The Progressives of New York who want him to enter their primaries for governor gave him 4,415 votes in their primaries in 1914 and on election day the entire state gave him 3,646 votes under the Moose emblem. Then thousand of the 46,000 enrolled Moose live in New York city. Probably 75 per cent. of the stand pat Moose live there. The upstate Progressives have returned to the Republican party. The total vote in the Moose primaries in the state this year will not be more than 5,000. Sulzer almost captured the Moose gubernatorial nomination in 1914. Judge Seabury should run well in the stranded ranks. The nomination would mean to him one more emblem opposite his name on the ticket. The election returns of 1914 give an idea of the value of these added emblems. Judge Seabury ran with three of them that year.

An account of the New York committee meeting is interesting reading. It appears that Benjamin C. Marsh, the single taxer, started to attack Colonel Roosevelt during the discussion of a resolution, but was promptly hooted down by the committeemen. The name of President Wilson was also cheered, but it remained for the mention of Justice Seabury to get the house. His name was cheered for a whole minute, although the resolution indorsing him was not adopted until there had been a red hot debate over it. The resolution invited Justice Seabury to enter the Progressive primaries as a candidate for governor, and pledged to him the support of the Progressive county committee.

Justice Seabury's golf playing was the cause of most of the opposition to the resolution. One of the committeemen said the justice was accustomed to play golf with Charles F. Murphy on Sundays, and he wanted the resolution amended to provide that Mr. Seabury must not accept the indorsement of Tammany Hall. For more than an hour the discussion of golf went on. One committeeman declared it was up to the justice to get all the indorsements he could, while others declared that he must purge himself of the Tammany stigma before receiving the indorsement of the Progressives.

* * *

Watertown Standard:

It is conceded that short lived and disastrous as was the Sinn Fein rebellion in Dublin it did something for Ireland. The plan of government for the troubled isle now offered by the British government is much more liberal than the earlier proposals. The misguided poets and dreamers who gave their lives for a vision did not die in vain. The British people without dissent approve the plan proposed by Lloyd-George and the cabinet unanimously adopted it. Had there been no rebellion the situation in Ireland would have continued until after the war and the system offered before hostilities would have marked the extent of British concessions.

Trainmen Loyal to Flag.

"In the event of war with Mexico all talk of a railroad strike will end, and the 450,000 trainmen of the country will turn in for the nation immediately." H. A. Enochs, secretary of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen on the Pennsylvania lines east of Pittsburgh, made this assertion. At the recent conference with the railroad managers Mr. Enochs was the virtual spokesman for 16,000 freight men on the Pennsylvania railroad. "We are for the country first of all," Mr Enochs said. "If it comes to an issue the men will forget their personal grievances and turn in for the good of the nation."

Fifty Years of Organization.

The Tobacco Workers' union of Germany has recently celebrated its fiftieth anniversary by a special edition of its Official Journal. Under the caption of "One-half of a Century" an eloquent appeal has been issued to the members, imploring them to make renewed efforts in spreading the principles of the union. The trials and tribulations of the past in the effort to build up the organization upon a more permanent and practical basis bear testimony of a long drawn out struggle.

The Union Label.

You may be a "live wire" union man,
A leader—and one of the best—
But you aren't the kind that I have in mind
Unless you can pass this test:
You may be a light in your union bright
But, still, were you ever so able
The test depends upon whether you are
Out strong for the union label.

For the label's a factor in Labor's fight,
In the struggle that mankind is making
To free the world from the curse of greed
And the toll that industry is taking—
In overworked women and underpaid men
And children in sweatshop and mill;
It's a badge of honor and honest worth,
And its motto is "save" not "kill."

The fellow who's out for the label strong
May neither be bright nor clever,
But he's wise to the fact that each one of us can Count for something in Labor's endeavor,
And I place him beside our greatest men
For the work he is doing to enable
The toilers to prosper and gain in strength
By "boosting" the union label.
—P. J. Doyle in Carpenter.

Historic Phrase.

On the morning after the assassination of Lincoln James A. Garfield, then a representative in congress, addressed a large assemblage in Wall street, New York city. A crowd were about to attack a newspaper which had been hostile to Lincoln. Garfield calmed them with the simple words: "Fellow citizens, clouds and darkness are round about him. His pavilion is dark waters and thick clouds of the skies. Justice and judgment are the establishment of his throne. Mercy and truth shall go before his face. Fellow citizens, God reigns and the government at Washington still lives!"

Dream Life.

I called aloud in the forest, and the shout came back. Then I searched long to find who answered me, but the sound had no source. I followed the will-o'-the-wisp through swamps at evening. It led me hither and yon, but I came nowhere. It was only the ghost of a light. I saw an apple hanging in the depths of a pool. I stopped to pick it and laved my hands in the water. The apple had no form. This is dream life.—Atlantic.

Life's Little Comedies

It is funny to watch a cat whip a dog.

The dog always looks sheepish.

So does the owner.

And after it is all over the woman who owns the cat usually pops out and demands truculently:

"What you trying to do with my cat?"—Chicago Herald.

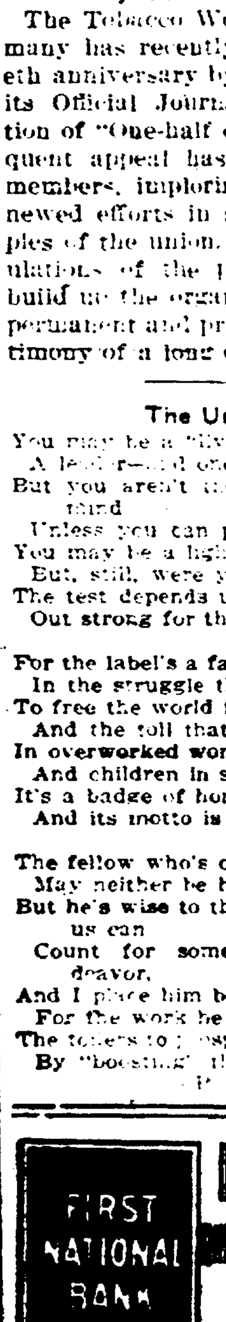
Little Pitcher.

Maiden Aunt—So you're studying physiology, Willie? Well, tell me, to what part of the animal kingdom do I belong? Sweet Little Willie—Dunno. Pa says you're an old hen and ma says you're an old cat.—Baltimore American.

Protected by Grass.

Chinese railroad embankments are protected from floods by planting them with a native grass with tenacious roots that resist erosion.

Politeness is a locksmith and opens many difficult doors.



THERE IS NO ROYAL ROAD

TO FINANCIAL SUCCESS. IT DEPENDS UPON THE INDIVIDUAL—HOW HE IMPROVES HIS OPPORTUNITIES.

CULTIVATE THE SAVING HABIT. AND YOU WILL BE HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS. YOUR ACCOUNT IS CORDIALLY INVITED.

4% PAID IN OUR INTEREST DEPARTMENT

Left Behind

His wistful eyes are dim with tears,
His heart is lead today,
As forth amid the shouts and cheers
The soldiers march away.
They're off to great Adventure's shore,
The true romance to find;
They're answering the call of war
And leaving him behind.

Ah! Why must he stand idly there
All hope of glory gone,
A sorry figure of despair
While they go marching on?
Why must the cruel hand of chance
Stretch forth, so stern and grim?
Why must the country of romance
Deny its door to him?

But every hero may not share
The great and splendid deeds
Of those who nobly do and dare
To serve their nation's needs.
And though the savage battle light
Still beckons him away,
He's just a little young to fight—
He's eight years old today!
—James J. Montague in New York American.

GERMAN SOLDIER FOUGHT IN TWO ARMIES OF ALLIES

Deserted Both Teuton and French and Joined Belgian Forces.

The record of Max Kohler, a clever and crafty German, aged twenty-six, who made a brief appearance at Marlborough street police court, London, is interesting. His record follows:

Served in the German army and deserted.

Served in the French army and deserted.

Joined the Belgian army.

Married a French girl in Paris two years ago.

Married an English girl six months ago.

Was being taken from England to France as a deserter in the Sussex when she was torpedoed.

Was rescued and taken to Folkestone, where he escaped rearrest and went to London.

Worked in the west end and was again arrested when he admitted that he was a German.

Kohler speaks English, French and German fluently.

At the age of twenty Kohler was called up for service in the German army, but after a few weeks' service he deserted from the army and made his way to England and then to America. He served in a weird variety of occupations. He is an electrician by profession, but he has been a sailor, a mechanic, a waiter, a pantryman, a fitter and an associate of criminals.

From America he went to France and for some time lived in Paris, where he was captivated by crime. Bonnot, the famous motorcar bandit, was one of his friends. A few months before war broke out he married a French girl in Paris. He joined the French army at the outbreak of war and was among the first troops to be sent to the front. On the very first day he was in action—Aug. 22, 1914. He was reported to be missing, and later it was found that he had deserted and had been taken by the Germans at Charleroi. He told them he was a German and persuaded them to allow him to make his way through Belgium to Holland.

He then saw a chance of going to England. He posed as a Belgian refugee and as such was admitted. He visited several towns in England and Scotland, where he obtained employment in a well known munition works. That was in the early part of 1915.

In Newcastle he made the acquaintance of the daughter of the foreman of one of the departments in the munition works, proposed to her, was accepted and they were married about six months ago.

NEW STYLES FOR MEN.

A Novelty Resembles the Fatigue Hat of National Guardsmen.

Fashions for men have begun to take a surprising turn. From Spain recently came something quite new in the form of the sandal coat, which, according to prediction, will be popular when the hot weather sets in. And now a new style hat for men has been found to rival the old standby sailor. It made its appearance in New York, where it attracted considerable attention.

The new model is very like the broad, flat fatigue hat of the national guardsmen. The hats were seen on five or six fashionably dressed men. These hats are being sold in some Fifth avenue shops, where it was stated that they were originated to supplant the Mexican sombrero.

IS "CHARLES EVANS" NO. 1.

Bridgeport (Conn.) Baby Was Born Day Justice Was Nominated.

With returns from many other cities still missing, it was estimated at the Hughes campaign headquarters that Bridgeport, Conn., deserved the honor of having the first baby named for the Republican candidate.

The youngster is Charles Evans Williams. He was born the day Mr. Hughes was nominated. A letter from the father was received by Mr. Hughes imparting the joyful information. The candidate replied, saying he hoped Charles Evans Williams would some day be a presidential candidate himself.

To Get Horse Out of a Hole.

Unusual methods were employed at Vandalia, Mo., in effecting the rescue of a valuable mare that fell into a well twenty-two feet deep. The owner, assisted by neighbors, began throwing hay in the well, the mare climbing on the hay as fast as she could and at last reaching the top safely.

DARING WHALERS.

Risks They Take When They Dive With the Harpooned Animal.

Many of the Japanese whalemen are most expert and daring men. After a whale has been cornered, harpooned and is slowly giving out from exhaustion the nimble expert of the whaling crew must prove his mettle.

The skilled Jap, after jumping upon the animal's back and cutting two gashes in the head, one on either side, through which a rope must be run and tied, cannot always perform his work in one trial. Often the animal makes a deep dive. But the little Jap must hold fast to his quarry and dive also, trusting to the fates that his own air supply in his lungs will last as long as that of the whale's.

The Jap is safer from being drowned than from being crushed by the infuriated animal's tail. If the little Jap lets go it usually means his death, so he hangs on to the diving quarry. Frequently these whalemen lose their lives from drowning, but the members of their crew look upon this misfortune with something of a fatalistic regard.

But the main business in hand is the capture of the whale. As the fight progresses and the maddened, frightened mammal grows weaker and finally is dying the boat crews row closer to the body and pray for the ease of his departing spirit. Members of the crew will call out the words, "Joraku, joraku, joraku!" and on the third day after the mammal has been hauled ashore a service is held and prayers offered for the animal's future contentment of spirit.

As soon as the animal has been towed to the shore line he is cut up, the Japs making huge excavations and penetrating inside the animal's body, as though entering a mine shaft or gallery. It is a grewsome sight, but is looked upon purely as a matter of course among the Jap whalemen.—Exchange.

HOLD UP YOUR HEAD.

It Will Stimulate You Mentally as Well as Physically.

In a letter to Robert Grimshaw of the New York university William Muldoon gives advice that it would be well for every man and woman, boy and girl in America to take to heart. He says:

"I was taught in early manhood not to throw my shoulders back, stick my chest out, draw my stomach in or hold my chin down like a goat preparing to butt, but to always try and touch some imaginary thing with the crown of my head. If one tries to do that—first understands how to try and then tries—he doesn't have to pay any attention to the rest of his physical being. That effort to touch something above him not with his forehead, but with the crown of his head, will keep every particle of his body in the position that nature intended it should be.

And as a boy I was advised to frequently back up against the wall and make the back of my head, my shoulders, hips, heels all press against the wall at the same time, and in that way get an idea of what was straight, or, in other words, how crooked I was becoming by drooping."

Both to young and old Mr. Muldoon's "hold your head up" suggestion is inspiriting. Try it. The effect physically and mentally is immediate. When the head goes higher the impulse is to deeper breathing. A man finds more elasticity in his limbs. He steps out with more ease. There is more spring to his gait. He isn't a lumbering, shambling creature, but a man alive. With the elevation of the crown of the head there seems to come clearer thinking, a more buoyant feeling and a brighter outlook.—Commerce and Finance.

Open the Eyes Under Water.

Practice opening the eyes under water in swimming, for with favorable conditions there is much to be seen and enjoyed in the queer, ghostly light below. The ability to see when below the surface may some time prove of priceless value. It is one of the attributes of swimming, and it may be readily mastered. But do not open the eyes until well below. The closed lid is an ample protection when one is plunging from any height, and it should remain closed until the first swift downward rush is ended.—All Outdoors.

Sizes of the Planets

An ingenious way of comparing the sizes of planets with the sun is suggested by a French scientific writer. Let the earth, he says, be represented by a twenty franc piece; then Venus is 15 francs, Mars 2, Mercury 7, Uranus 280, Neptune 320, Saturn 1,840, Jupiter 6,800 and the sun 6,780,000.

Didn't Care For It.

"Ever try liquid soap?" asked the barber.

"No, and don't want to," replied the man in the chair.

"Why not?"

"Oh, well, if I have to eat soap I'd just as leave chew it as drink it."—Yonkers Statesman.

Money by the Bushel.

She—What's this I hear about your getting a large sum of money from some woman? He—Some one's been kidding you. Who was the woman? She (innocently)—Why, May Wheat, they told me her name was.—Boston Transcript.

Hopeless.

"He's no good at an argument, is he? Not at all convincing."

"Well, I should say not. Why, that man couldn't convince a woman that she was pretty."—London Stray Stories.

PUT ON YOUR THINKING CAP!

Realize what it means to have a Home Daily giving you the Latest

LOCAL & TELEGRAPHIC NEWS SERVICE

---later by Three Hours than you can get in any newspaper circulating in this city, and you don't have to wade through a mass of reading to get what you want.

You get what you want in tabloid form in---

FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

ARTISTS DESCRIBE THREE NEW COINS

American Idea Expressed on Dimes, Quarters and Halves.

MONEY IS MUCH ADMIRED.

Liberty Is a Full Length Female Gowned In Folds of Stars and Stripes on the Half Dollar—Wears a Winged Cap on the Dime—Quarter Shows Her Uncovering Shield.

Adolph Alexander Weinman, designer of the new United States fifty and ten cent pieces, and Herman A. MacNeil, designer of the new twenty-five cent piece, have given the following descriptions of their designs and the artistic thought back of the drawings.

Mr. Weinman said:

"While I was given an entirely free hand in the designing of the coins, the subject of the designs was determined by the law governing the coinage of the United States, which law sets forth just what is to appear upon the obverse and reverse of each coin. The manner of representation is, of course, left to the artist, subject to the approval of the director of the mint and the secretary of the treasury. Thus the obverse of the half dollar bears an impression emblematic of Liberty, with an inscription of the word 'Liberty' and the year of the coinage. The same applies to the obverse of the dime.

"Upon the reverse there is the figure or representation of an eagle, with this inscription, 'United States of America.'

"The character of the subject for the reverse of the dime has not been mentioned in this law on coinage.

"In my design for the half dollar I have represented Liberty in a full length female figure enveloped in the folds of the stars and stripes, progressing in full stride toward the glorious dawn of a new day, carrying branches of laurel and of oak, symbolical of civic and of military glory. Her right hand is extended in bestowal of the spirit of liberty upon the 'land of the free and the home of the brave.'

"The design for the reverse of the half dollar shows the American eagle perched high upon a mountain crag, his wings unfolded, fearless in spirit and conscious of his power. Springing from a rift in the rock is a sapling of mountain pine, symbolical of America.

"The design for the dime, owing to the smallness of the coin, has been held quite simple. The obverse shows a head of Liberty with a winged cap. The head is firm and simple in form, the profile forceful.

"The reverse shows a design of a bundle of staffs with battle ax, the 'fasces,' emblem of unity and symbol of strength and preparedness. Surrounding the fasces is a full foliaged branch of olive, symbol of peace."

Adolph Alexander Weinman, sculptor, was born in Karlsruhe, Baden, Germany, Dec. 11, 1870. He obtained his education in Germany and in this country.

Typifies Preparedness.

Mr. MacNeil said:

"It seemed to me a good plan to try to typify in the issue of the new coins not only our country's development artistically, but also to express, so far as possible, the development of the country itself since the last issue, some twenty-five years ago.

"With this in mind, it seemed to me that the idea most in the minds of the whole people these last few years was an awakening from the slumber of security in their own strength. It is a well understood fact that strength trained doubles its value and efficiency so in the obverse of the coin I suggested the figure of Liberty in the act of uncovering her shield to typify preparedness and had her also bearing the olive branch to signify there was no aggressive idea in it.

"From the point of view of numismatics, as well as carrying out this idea, I placed the figure stepping forward to what might be called the gateway of the country. Artistically you will understand that it is a very difficult thing anyway, even without the prescribed limitations, to express in so small a thing as a coin anything more than the mere kernel of an idea."

Herman Atkins MacNeil, sculptor was born in Chelsea, Mass., in 1866 He was graduated from the Massachusetts State Normal school in 1886. He was a pupil of Chapin at Julien academy and spent twelve years at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris.

PLAN SING SING REGIMENT.

Prisoners Ask Governor Whitman For Chance to Serve Country.

Permission to form a convicts' regiment to fight in Mexico has been requested of Governor Whitman by members of the Mutual Welfare league at Sing Sing both by telegram and through the official organ of the league. The leading article of the Bulletin, published by the league, is entitled "The Call to Arms—A Regiment For Prisoners. Why not?"

Warden Kirchwey said that undoubtedly 200 or 300 men in the prison would like to go to the front, but expressed himself as very skeptical of the governor's acceptance of the proposal. "It is easy to guess what the governor will answer to that," he remarked.

His Excellent Defense.

Arrested on a charge of attempting suicide, Brooklyn man said he was only trying to shave with a safety razor.

Days You'll Never Forget

A Big Drawback.

A man was praising the improvements by a friend in his dwelling.

"Your house looks a lot better now that it has been painted."

"Well," the man who had been redecorating admitted gloomily, "it does look a bit better, but we shall have to clean the windows more frequently to keep in harmony with it."

His Speculations.

"How did old Rox get rich?"

"Speculating. He's been married four times."—Life.

Hogarth Used to Forget.

William Hogarth, the famous English artist, was so absentminded he caused his friends much entertainment. When he was prosperous enough to have his own carriage he first used it to make a call upon the lord mayor. When he came out of the Mansion House it was raining hard, and the artist tramped the entire way home, wet to the skin. When asked why he had not come in his carriage he said he forgot all about it, and a messenger had to be dispatched to the coachman to tell him to return.

Fill your home atmosphere with exquisite lasting fragrance—

ED. PINAUD'S LILAC

The great French perfume, winner of highest international awards. Each drop as sweet and fragrant as the living Lilac blossom. A celebrated connoisseur said: "I don't see how you can sell such a remarkable perfume for 75 cents a bottle"—and remember each bottle contains 6 oz.—it is wonderful value. Try it. Ask your dealer today for ED. PINAUD'S LILAC. For 10 cents our American offices will send you a testing bottle. Write today.

PARFUMERIE ED. PINAUD, Dept M ED. PINAUD Bldg., New York

Ho! Everybody!!

Know Zu Zu! Eat Zu Zu! The crispest, spiciest ginger snap that ever tickled a palate.

Make a bee line to the nearest grocer man, and get a whole packageful for a nickel.

5¢

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

Zu Zu • Zu Zu • Zu Zu • Zu Zu • Zu Zu • Zu Zu

HISTORY AS IT IS TAUGHT

A Plea For Really Neutral Textbook In Every Country.

History in every country is so taught as to magnify that country. Children learn to believe that their own country has been always in the right and almost always victorious, that it has produced almost all the great men and that it is in all respects superior to all other countries. Since these beliefs are flattering they are easily absorbed and hardly ever dislodged from instinct by later knowledge.

To take a simple and almost trivial example: The facts about the battle of Waterloo are known in great detail and with minute accuracy, but the facts as taught in elementary schools will be widely different in England, France and Germany. The ordinary English boy imagines that the Prussians played hardly any part; the ordinary German boy imagines that Wellington was practically defeated when the day was retrieved by Blucher's gallantry. If the facts were taught accurately in both countries national pride would not be fostered to the same extent, neither nation would feel so certain of victory in the event of war and the willingness to fight would be diminished.

It is this result which has to be prevented. Every state wishes to foster national pride and is conscious that this cannot be done by unbiased history.

The defenseless children are taught by distortions and suppressions and suggestions. The false ideas as to the history of the world which are taught in the various countries are of a kind which fosters strife and serves to keep alive a bigoted nationalism.

If good relations between states were desired one of the first steps ought to be to submit all teaching of history to an international commission which should produce neutral textbooks free from the patriotic bias which is now demanded everywhere.—Bertrand Russell in Atlantic Monthly.

SCENIC BEAUTY OF ALASKA

A Grand Panorama That Reaches Its Climax In Mount McKinley.

A careful reading of literature pertaining to Alaska prepared me in part for what the journey was bound to disclose, but seeing is the only sense that can give knowledge and secure appreciation of the grandeur, the sublimity, the fascinating beauty of mountain, sea, stream, fiord, falls, islands, forests, cloud and the glorious color effects which the dazzling rays of the sun bring into existence. In connection with all these is a land of enchantment for all who love and can appreciate nature.

Cook inlet, with its arms and reaches, has many bewildering channels, resulting from the numerous rugged islands. The forbidding and embattled shores rising into lofty mountains and at present swathed in white almost to the water's edge possess a virility, a grandeur and sublimity which require the most poetic imagination and most facile pen even faintly to portray. The grand panorama reaches its climax in Mount McKinley, monarch of the North American continent. With its altitude of 20,460 feet it stands alone in lofty pride and is distinctly visible from the vessel notwithstanding the very great distance. This fact well establishes the quality of the clarified and invigorating atmosphere of this far north country

The Thousand Islands with all their beauty would scarcely serve as a prelude to the surpassing grandeur and loveliness of the many thousand islands that adorn the 3,000 miles of Alaskan coast. The fiords of Norway, the farfamed glaciers of Switzerland, cannot compare with their counterparts to be found in Alaska in number, variety, size, color effect and all the qualities that give charm to these works of nature.—Hon. A. Barton Hepburn in Leslie's.

The Loveless Match.

"So you're going to take him for better or worse?" "No—I'm going to take him for more or less."—Exchange.

ANCIENT WAR WEAPONS.

The Battleax, the Halberd and the Armor Smashing Mace.

Probably nobody ever enjoyed being killed in battle. But there is certainly a choice as to how the job could be done. If you had to pass out, how much nicer it would to have a high class swordsman turn the trick! He'd go to work so courteously and do such a neat, genteel job that you couldn't help feeling you had died in good society. But nothing of the sort about being killed with an ax. This would be one of the most untidy ends a man could meet.

The big hatchet, however, and its various descendants were long favorites for taking people apart, and even at the time that everything which could cut was made of flint it was in popular demand.

Later on we find the real battleax the favorite weapon of the Celts and the Scandinavians.

The halberd was the next step (up or down, as one looks at those things). This was a combination of ax and spear; a broad blade backed with a hook and tipped with a spear point, all mounted on a six foot haft. Humane chap who got it up! It was invented to give a single man on foot a chance against one on horseback. And it did If you missed your jab you could still take a healthy swing with the ax or pull him off his horse with the hook. A whole regiment with spears might hold off a cavalry charge, but in individual contests the soldier with the halberd stood the better chance.

The ax was especially favored by the Swiss, and they did so nicely with it that it spread and became the principal weapon of central Europe for nearly 200 years. One English variation, the bill, had more of a sickle shaped blade; but, like the other, it was effective. After one big blow you had a case for the coroner, not the ambulance.

Other cheerful products of those days was the mace. This was a club of iron or steel, blossoming out at the business end into projecting ridges of metal. The operator grasped it with both hands, gave it a whirl and then smashed his opponent. Armor was useless; it crushed right through.

Philip II of France had a royal bodyguard of sergeants-at-arms, who carried maces—real ones. King Richard I. took up the idea, but after awhile the good, stout old weapon lost its punch, so to speak. It got to be only a symbol of authority, a pretty ornament at fancy ceremonies. The house of commons in London has one dating back to 1649. It has the royal crown on top and is lugged around from time to time to show the king is boss.

It occasionally happens that a member of our own congress gets obstreperous and won't behave when the speaker talks nicely to him. Then the latter gives the order, and the sergeant-at-arms comes down the aisle carrying the big silver mace. This means that Uncle Sam has stood all he plans to stand and that the row must stop at once.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

When Is a Bath Not a Bath?

Sometimes I lived with my grand mother. She always bathed me herself before she put me to bed. The bathtub was very long and deep. Grandmother stood on the step which ran beside it with a big towel pinned about her. She held my neck tightly between her thumb and second finger, scrubbing me with her other hand. I slipped and fell from one side to the other, splashing the water high over the edges, so that when she finally lifted me to the floor the towel and her dress were drenched.

"There," she would say, "that is hardly better than a sponging off. You won't sit still while I give you a real bath."

I used to go to sleep wondering how she would give me a real bath.—Katherine Keith in Atlantic.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Local and Personal

Mr. Thomas McCollum spent yesterday in Utica, N. Y.

* * *

John Painter, Jr., and Fred Brown were elected manager and captain, respectively of the Independent Baseball team of this city. The ballots which were sent through the mail were opened and counted by Chief of Police Edward Dyer, who acted as teller of the election.

* * *

Mr. John W. Stevenson, head of the American Woolen Mills in this city, left Saturday night for Baltimore, where he will attend the National Convention of the B. P. O. Elks, which will be held there this week.

* * *

A large motor truck equipped with road oiling apparatus arrived in this city this morning. The truck is the property of J. J. Shannon Road Oiling contractor of Buffalo, and will be used in resurfacing of roads in this section and around Syracuse.

* * *

Mrs. Robert Barney and daughter, Dorothy of South Second street, are spending two weeks in Watertown, Carthage and Beaver Falls.

* * *

Mr. Cole Olcott, of Oneida, was the guest, Thursday afternon, and evening of Mr. James Caffrey.

* * *

Mrs. John Heyle, of New Berlin, is visiting her sister, Mrs. E. Parks, of South Second street.

* * *

Miss Mary Flattery, of New York, is the guest of Miss Zeta Dwyer, of West Third street.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. D. B. Read, are entertaining Mrs. Henry Kelsey, of Oneida.

* * *

Mrs. Alonzo Church and daughter, Fairy, of Buffalo, are guests of Miss Lela Church, of Utica street.

* * *

Ensign J. A. Fitzgerald announced this morning that the Salvation Army will hold its annual outing for poor children at North Bay, July 12th. Children are requested to be at the army hall by nine o'clock Wednesday morning. A good time is assured to all. Proper care will be given all children.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sylvester and daughter left Monday for Oxford, Maine.

* * *

Mrs. Maud LeRoy, of Daysville, is visiting Mrs. C. M. Gutherland, of Utica street.

* * *

Miss Eryma Paige, who has been visiting her parents in this city during Old Home Week, returned yesterday, to Utica.

* * *

Miss Lillian Waldhorn left yesterday for Syracuse, where she will study in the operators' school of the Comptometer Company.

* * *

Stanley Hare is attending the summer school at Syracuse University.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Porter, of Utica, are visiting Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Barrett of this city.

* * *

Mayor Victor C. Lewis and A. W. Thompson, of this city, left today for Rochester, where they will attend the Shriners' Convention.

* * *

Edward Genung, of Oswego, was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Beadle, over Sunday.

* * *

Mrs. George Lloyd, nee Miss Fannie DeGraw, of this city, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Fuller.

* * *

Mr. Herbert Webb has returned from Mount Hermon Preparatory school, where he has been studying.

* * *

The Pi Kappa Epsilon Club will hold their banquet at the Citizen's Club next Wednesday evening.

* * *

Mr. Samuel Case has returned from New York city.

* * *

Mr. John Richardson, Jr., left last night for Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Richardson has been the guest of his relatives for the past week.

* * *

Miss Leah Paige, of Utica, N. Y., is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Philo Paige.

Alumni To Meet.

There will be a meeting of the Alumni of Fulton High School tomorrow evening at 7:30 in the assembly hall of the Public Library, all are requested to be present.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

TOMORROW

THE BIG SALE OF

SUMMER DRESSES

Waldorf make assures these Voile Dresses a perfect fit and workmanship. In fashionable stripes and figures; tastily made and trimmed. These dresses are suitable for porch, street and afternoon wear. Values up to $4.50.

Your choice Tomorrow Morning at 9 o'clock. $1.90

(SEE FIRST STREET WINDOW DISPLAY).

J. C. O'BRIEN

"GRADS" WILL ENJOY DINNER

Members of the class of 1912, Fulton High school, will hold their first reunion since graduation four years ago, at Pathfinder Island Wednesday afternoon and evening. The program includes a ball game, tennis matches and field sports during the afternoon, and a dinner early in the evening, to be followed by a dance. The class will make the trip in automobiles.

Ross F. Wolever, and Harold Schaeffer, both of whom were presidents of the class during their high school days, are the committee on arrangements. Mr. Schaeffer has consented to act as toastmaster at the dinner, and it is quite likely that all present will be called upon to make a few remarks. The class prophecy, given at the class day exercises four years ago, will be read again at the dinner, and a comparison of the prophetic and present occupations of the members of the class will be made.

The members of the class, and their field of work work at present are as follows:

Curtis Austin, graduate of Syracuse university, class of 1916; Glenn Ford, president, studying medicine in Syracuse University; Hugh Jewett, teaching in South, graduate of Oswego Normal; Lee McCaffrey, with Lehigh Valley Coal company, Syracuse; Harold A. Read, Herkimer; Orlo Rogers, with Pierce, Butler & Pierce, Syracuse; Ralph K. Seymour, Croton; Leonard B. Tice, American Woolen company; Ross F. Wolever, graduate of Colgate university, class of 1916, studying medicine in Syracuse university; Harold Schafer, graduate of Union University, class of 1916, College of Pharmacy; Ruth Anderson (Mrs. Leland Ives), Syracuse; Gretchen H. Baldwin, graduate of Oswego Normal, teaching at Hudson; Eva M. Blake, Fulton; Lola M. Crandall, New York School of Dramatic Art; Ellen M. Frawley, graduate of Oswego Normal, Fulton; Lucy M. Howard, Fulton; Evelyn J Hayes, Fulton; Leontine Porter, Solvay Process company; Nina M. Russell, graduate of Oswego Normal, Fulton; Marguerite Sullivan, graduate Oswego Normal, Fulton; Leah Wallace, Fulton; Eva Wilcox, graduate of Oswego Normal, Fulton.

Windward and Leeward Isles.

The Leeward islands are so called because they are less exposed to the prevailing northeast trade wind than the Windward islands near by, while the Windward islands in turn derive their name from the fact that they are the most exposed to these winds of all the Lesser Antilles.

The Sure Tip.

"How did you get that new suit?"

"Had a sure tip on a horse race."

"I never knew one of those sure tips to pan out."

"Neither did I. So I didn't play it. Put the money into this suit instead."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Boost.

"Do you think you can get along on my salary of fourteen a week?"

"Why, certainly, dovey. As an allowance now papa only gives me ten."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Tropical Vegetation.

Freshly cut fenceposts and telegraph poles often start growing again when set up in the tropics, and vine roots often disrupt masonry.

FOR SALE

I BEAMS, new and second-hand all sizes. Also PULLEYS, second-hand MACHINERY, PIPE and all sizes of IRON PLATES.

Inquire of

I. ALDERMAN

Schuyler Street

Office Phone 2342 Res. Phone 1242

FULTON COTTAGERS AT MEXICO POINT

Fulton is represented by a large colony of cottagers and campers at Mexico Point, this year, and several residents of this city are now spending the summer months at the resort. Mr. and Mrs. V. C. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Webb, Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Allen, Mr. and Mrs. C. Milton Allen, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. G Chauncey, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hunter, and Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McGinnis are among those who own or have chartered cottages at the Point for the summer months.

Musicale Saturday Night

The Sky Pilots, of Buffalo, will be heard in concert at the Salvation Army Auditorium, Saturday evening at eight o'clock. Brigadier Edwin White, chairman in charge. A small admission fee will be charged.

HOTEL ARRIVALS.

Hotel Clark: A. F. Rogers, Syracuse; A. J. Gowan, Schenectady; Andrew J. Crowe, Jr., Syracuse; D. J. Hughes, Utica; Morrill B. Spalding, Pitt, Pa.; William Costello and wife, Rochester; Ellis R. Meeker, Auburn.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FAVORITE ICES.

PINEAPPLE ICE CREAM.—Three pints of cream, two large ripe pineapples, two pounds of powdered sugar. Slice the pineapple thin, scatter the sugar between the slices, cover and let the fruit stand three hours. Cut or chop it up in the sirup and strain through a hair sieve or double bag of coarse lace. Beat gradually into the cream and freeze as rapidly as possible. Reserve a few pieces of pineapple unsugared, cut into square bits, and stir through cream when half frozen first a pint of well whipped cream and then the fruit. Peach ice cream may be made in the same way.

Angel Food Ice Cream.—Whip the whites of four eggs until stiff. Pour over this a sirup made of a cupful of sugar and one-third cupful of water boiled until it threads and then beat together well. Whip a pint of cream stiff and fold in. Flavor with vanilla. Dip freezer in cold water, pour in angel food, pack in ice and salt. Let this stand four hours. Turn out on a plate, slice and serve with dainty cake.

Banana Ice Cream.—Boil two quarts of sweet milk in a double boiler, two cupfuls of white sugar beaten with the yolks of four eggs added to the sweet milk. Let boil and thicken with a tablespoonful of flour. Beat the whites of four eggs thoroughly and stir into the custard. When cool add a pint of rich cream and flavor with vanilla. When almost frozen mash three large bananas. Stir in one tablespoonful of powdered sugar to keep the bananas from turning dark.

Frozen Apricots.—A can of apricots, one and one-half cupfuls of sugar and one and one-half cupfuls of water. Drain the fruit and cut it in small pieces. To the sirup add enough water to make three or four cupfuls. Cook this with the sugar for five minutes, cool and strain. Add the fruit and freeze. If wanted richer add two cupfuls of cream, single or whipped.

Lemon Velvet Cream.—To a quart of sweet milk add a pint of sugar and heat until the milk turns a "bluish" tinge at the side of the pan. Cool and freeze to a mush. Have ready the juice of three large lemons and the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Add to the milk and freeze hard.

Anna Thompson.

Quick Jumps.

"I bet, sah, dat I've unj'inted muh old cob pipe fou' hund'ed times since I done got dat mule," related Brother Bombershay. "Every time he kicks I jump back so quick I jerks de stem right out'n de bowl."—Kansas City Star.

BELL-ANS

Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

LEGAL NOTICES.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

State of New York, Office of the State Commission of Highways, Albany, N. Y.—Pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 30, Laws of 1909, as amended by Chapter 646, Laws of 1911, and Chapter 80, Laws of 1913, sealed proposals will be received by the undersigned at their office, No. 55 Lancaster Street, Albany, N. Y., at one o'clock p. m., on Wednesday the 12th day of July, 1916, for the improvement of the following highways:

Oswego County—Road No., 5408; name of road, Fulton City; East First Street; approximate length, 0.36.

Also on Friday, the 14th day of July, 1916, for the improvement of the following highway:

Road No., 1413; name of road, Hastings-Parish; approximate length, 2.04.

Maps, plans, specifications and estimates may be seen and proposals forms obtained at the office of the Commission in Albany, N. Y., and also at the office of Division Engineer, William M. Acheson, 433 So. Salina St., Syracuse, N. Y.

The especial attention of bidders is called to "General Information For Bidders" in the itemized proposal, specifications and contract agreement.

Proposals for each road or contract must be presented in a separate sealed envelope, endorsed on the outside with the name and number of the road or contract for which the proposal is made. Each proposal must be accompanied by cash or a certified check payable to the order of the State Commission of Highways for an amount equal to at least five per cent. of the amount of the proposal which such cash or check accompanies.

This cash or check will be held by the Commission until the contract and bond are duly executed.

The successful bidder will be required to give a performance bond for fifty per cent. of the contract, and a maintenance bond covering the wearing surface of all roads, except water-bound macadam and cement concrete pavements for twenty per cent. of the contract price of the items which comprise the wearing surface, such bonds to be executed by a surety company to be approved by the Commission; or a bond secured by the deposit of collateral securities to be approved by the Commission.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

EDWIN DUFFEY,
Commissioner.

I. J. MORRIS,
Secretary.

Notice to Creditors.

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Warren H. Loomis, late of the Town of Schroeppel in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber, at the law office of Floyd S. Spangle, 15 South First street, Fulton, New York, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 20th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 12th day of June A. D., 1916.

GLENN R. LOOMIS,
Administrator.

FLOYD S. SPANGLE,
Attorney for Administrator,
15 South First Street,
Fulton, N. Y.

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER

Phone 122

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children

In Use For Over 30 Years

Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

FOR SALE

Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.

Ready for Prompt Delivery

Oswego Paper Stock Co.

Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Wanted—Middle aged woman for general house work. Good wages, no children. Apply at5 North Third street, city. tf

Wanted—Good bright boy, over 16 years of age, to learn the printing trade. Apply at the Evening Times. tf

Wanted—At No. 216 Utica street, a girl for general housework. No washing or ironing. tf

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

Teamster Wanted—Steady work winter and summer; good wages. John W. Pratt farm. tf

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

Wanted Boarders—Desirable rooms, good board, price reasonable. 420 Seneca street. Mrs. Lamb. 484

Wanted—Wonman for general house work, good wages, family of three. Apply at Times office between 10 and 12 a. m. 481c

For Sale Cheap—One Roll Top Desk. The Morrill Press. 482

Young Men Wanted to learn the restaurant business. Those who have had experience in some kind of clerking preferred. Employment in our New York restaurants, $7 or $8 per week with board to start. Railroad fare reimbursed after having been in our service for six months. Good opportunity for the right young men to become managers in a reasonable length of time. Apply in person or by mail to H. Morris, Supt., care of Thompson's Restaurant, Grand Central Station, New York city.

GLYCERINE AND BARK PREVENT APPENDICITIS

The simple mixture of buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., known as Adler-i-ka, astonishes Fulton people. Becouse Adler-i-ka acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, ONE SPOONFUL relieves almost ANY CASE of constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. The INSTANT, easy action of Adler-i-ka is astonishing. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. adv.

The Toll of Industry.

From Jan. 1 to June 1 of this year 862 men were killed in industrial establishments in Pennsylvania. As a result of this slaughter 537 women were made widows, 1,109 children were robbed of fathers and 37 dependent parents lost breadwinners. Of the 862 men killed 315 were unmarried. The total compensation awarded is $742,962.75.

LABOR NOTES.

Machinists in a Buffalo auto factory are on strike for the eight hour day.

Milwaukee union carpenters are making a campaign to increase membership.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers has $4,685,928.67 in its treasury.

President Wilson attended the dedication ceremonies of the A. F. of L. seven story office building in Washington July 4 and delivered an address.

The average wages paid to harvest hands in Kansas this year were $2.50 a day and board for the men and $4 to $5 a day for a man and a team. Forty-five thousand men were brought into the state.

QUIRK THEATRE

Continuous 2 to 10:30

Matinee 5c., Night: Balcony 5c. Main Floor 10c

TODAY—

Madam Petrova in "WHAT WILL PEOPLE SAY"

5 Part Metro Feature.

Mr. and Mrs. Drew in "THE MODEL COOK"

TUESDAY—

William Farnum in Fox Film "A MAN OF SORROW" in 5 Parts.

International News No. 52

WEDNESDAY—

Charley Chaplin in Mutual Comedy "THE FIREMAN" in 2 Parts.

1st Episode of "The Secret of the Submarine" in 2-parts.

OTHERS

OLD TIME PITCHERS

Some of the Former Stars Who Won Fame on the Diamond.

THEIR FEATS OF ENDURANCE.

Spalding All Alone Twirled the Old Boston Nationals to Victory Four Years In Succession — Radbourne's Great Record—Some Sad Finishes.

What becomes of all the great pitchers who thrill the baseball populace for a day? That depends upon the age in which they lived. If a man won his fame in the period from twenty to forty years ago he probably went back penniless to manual labor whence he came, or else he found an early grave. But if he was fortunate enough to make his baseball fame within the last score of years he may still be drawing a good salary from some club treasury. Or he may be enjoying prosperity as a successful business man.

A. G. Spalding was one of the few men who won nation wide fame on the diamond in the earlier period, was absolutely unspoiled by it and then followed it up with even greater fame in the business world. Spalding jumped into the limelight as a seventeen-year-old boy with the Rockford (Ill.) club way back in 1867. Talk about the endurance of the modern twirling giants! Just consider what this original iron man did in the early seventies. During that period he was a member of the Boston Nationals, and he won the league championship for his team four years in succession. He was Boston's only pitcher, and he twirled every game the team played, though in those days games were scheduled only every other day and the season was shorter than it is now.

Old timers love to dwell on the prowess of Charles Radbourne, who shone with quite as much brilliance as Spalding until consumption cut short his career, about twenty-five years ago. Radbourne was a member of the Providence team, and when Charles Sweeney deserted that club in midseason only Radbourne was left for slab work But that didn't bother Radbourne, for he not only jumped right in and did all the pitching, but made a new world's record, by winning eighteen straight games and the championship for Providence. This gameness, however, cost Radbourne his life, for his health broke under the strain, which was generally credited with having caused his consumption.

From day laborer to the world's premier pitcher and then back again, is, in brief, the history of Amos Rusie, who from 1889 to 1894 thrilled the baseball world. Rusie had a narrow escape from being cast into the utter darkness of oblivion before he could get started The first day he entered the big league he was weighed by Bancroft, the manager of the Cleveland team, and found wanting. After watching him pitch one game Bancroft let him go. But John T. Brush, owner of the Cincinnati club, had faith in this youngster, gave him his chance, and suddenly the recruit blossomed forth into the greatest pitcher of his day. But prosperity and the applause of the unthinking crowd were too much for Rusie.

Then there were Tim Keefe and John Clarkson, about whose respective merits the fans are still divided. In 1888 Keefe won nineteen straight games for New York, while in 1889 Clarkson pitched seventy-two games for Boston winning forty-six of them. These two men, whose exploits were heralded from one end of the country to the other, were radically different in temperament. Clarkson utterly ruined his health by not taking proper care of himself and died in an insane asylum But Tim Keefe retired with money in the bank.

Probably more printers' ink was used to tell of the exploits of the eccentric Rube Waddell than any other baseball player that ever lived Rube was always good for a story, no matter what he did. On the diamond this man was forever breaking records, first in jumping from one team to another and then by making new strikeout records. Probably his greatest feat was when he called in all the outfielders and then retired the side in order. But consumption finished his broken down constitution.

Cy Young belongs to a different school of pitchers. He was a shining example of baseball longevity founded upon clean living. This marvelous man, who broke into major league baseball in 1890, pitched every season for twenty-two years, a record still unequaled.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Fragonard Panels.

The celebrated Fragonard panels had their inception, it is said, in the lavish expenditures of the Countess du Barry They were designed for her chateau but never adorned it, owing to a dispute between the painter and the king's favorite. Mme. du Barry, notwithstanding her lowly origin, was extremely critical in matters of art and was dissatisfied with these pictures, which are among the greatest prizes of the connoisseurs of today.

Color Blindness.

The ratio of color blind people to those of normal sight is about 65 to 1,154. This does not mean that all of the sixty-five are absolutely color blind but that that is the ratio of those who are more or less affected. Color blindness is said to have been discovered by the famous Dr. Priestley in 1777.

Try to be happy in this present moment and put not off being so to a time to come.

PAID IN CORN AND RYE.

Two Old Time Offenders and the Way They Were Punished.

Two poets, both honest and peaceable and one a Quaker, were fond of telling anecdotes of two old time delinquents, the one quarrelsome and the other thievish. John Greenleaf Whittier was exceedingly fond of quoting the lines, handed down from time immemorial in the Haverhill countryside:

> The man who whipped old Timothy Swan
> Paid his fine in Indian corn.
> He paid his fine and he paid it quick—
> A peck of corn for every lick!

Whether the fine imposed on old Timothy's assailant was judicially decreed and legally assessed nobody knows. But in the case of a fine of three bushels of rye once ordered paid by Ebenezer Snell, grandfather of William Cullen Bryant, it is quite certain that neither judge nor jury had anything to do with the matter. Nevertheless it was paid and promptly.

"My grandfather," Bryant used to relate, "once found that certain pieces of lumber, intended for the runners of a sled and called in that part of the country sled crooks, had been taken without leave by a farmer who lived at no great distance. Such timbers were made from a tree, the grain of which was curved so as to correspond with the curve required in the runners.

"The delinquent received notice that his offense was known and that if he wished to escape a prosecution he must carry a bushel of rye to each of three poor widows living in the neighborhood and tell them why he brought it."

He escaped prosecution. But if the tongues of the three poor widows were as lively as those of most country gossips and the public opinion of the village as strict as in most New England communities he did not escape punishment a good deal in excess of three compulsorily bestowed bushels of rye.—Youth's Companion.

A WORD ABOUT THE SCOT.

And the Influence He Wields All Over the World.

Wherever the Scotchman goes he becomes a leader. You hear of the Irish vote, the German vote, the Italian vote, but you hear only of Scottish leadership. He has had a powerful influence on our country.

Our first newspaper was published by a Scotchman; a Scot first won international honors for American letters; the steamboat, telephone, telegraph and electric light were devised by men of Scotch descent. The second college in our land was founded by a Scotch divine; our constitution was framed and adopted largely by the influence of two Scotch lawyers; our most majestic orator, our most winning politician, our most metaphysical statesman, our greatest diplomatist and our greatest poet were of Scotch lineage. So of many of our business captains and railroad magnates, almost one-half of our presidents and a large proportion of our cabinet members, judges and governors. Was there ever such a drain of leadership upon a like area?

The Scotch have not alone helped make America. They control Australia, direct New Zealand, lead Canada and rule Africa. For centuries Scot and Briton were bitterest enemies. Edinburgh and Paris conspired against London. The union when it finally came was one of crowns and not of hearts. There still lurks jealousy under the surface. Write a letter to a loyal Glasgonian, address it "North Britain," and see what happens.—Samuel P. Orth in Century.

Circuitous Route.

Mrs. Waypp—Where did Mrs. De Style get her new hat? Mrs. Blase—That's a problem. She bought it with the money which her husband borrowed from her uncle, who had won it in a poker game from her brother, to whom she had loaned it shortly after her mother had taken it from her father's pockets and given it to her for a birthday present.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Needed the Money.

Bookkeeper—I'd like an increase in salary, sir.

Proprietor—An increase, you say. How great?

"About $20 per month."

"Are you planning to get married?"

"No, sir; I want to get a divorce. Puck.

Embarrassing.

Conjurer—Now, to help me with this next trick, I want the services of a boy—just any boy in the audience—yes you will do, my little man; come along Now, you've never seen me before, have you? Boy (innocently)—No, father!—London Telegraph.

The wise man expects everything from himself, but the fool looks to others.—Richter.

Fountain Pens.

A book dated 1795 contains a description and illustration of a fountain pen.

About the Town

If there are any young Fultonians who failed to take advantage of the opportunity accorded them to enlist in Company D, Third Infantry, of Oswego, when the first call for volunteers for the National Guard duty was made three weeks ago, who now desire to see some service in the guard, theey will be welcomed at the Oswego Armory this week, as the depot commander, Capt. Fred W. Plank, has received authority to recruit twenty additional men for service in the company to take the places of the men rejected by the Federal examiners after the company reached Camp Whitman. The new recruits will go at once to Camp Whitman, and the Third Regiment is slated to go to the border as soon as the men can be properly equipped. The rejected members of the company will return to Oswego for depot duty.

* * *

The city band concert committee has arranged a splendid program for a concert Wednesday evening at East Side Park. During the past week the members of the band were afforded great opportunities for practice and the entire organization has been improved as a result. The concert Wednesday will begin at eight o'clock. and vocal soloists will sing several popular numbers during the evening.

* * *

The largest crowd of the season attended the baseball game at the Fair grounds yesterday afternoon, between the Red Men of this city and the New York Central shop team of Oswego. The game went thirteen innings and the locals lost the decision by the close score of 3—2. The game was nip and tuck all the way, with both Painter and Wilfred pitching gilt edge ball, but a combination of two hits and a costly error in the unlucky thirteenth frame gave the Oswegonians a one run lead, which the Red Men were unable to overcome in their turn at bat.

Both Painter and Wilfred were very parsimonious with base hits, and the general fielding work of both teams was excellent. Paige, in particular, starring for Fulton at the first corner.

The Red Men will meet the Diamond Match Company team at the Fair grounds next Sunday, and as the visitors are a strong aggregation, a good game may be expected. The line ups yesterday were as follows:

Red Men—Dingle, cf; H. Ingamells, 2b; Hays, ss; F. Brown, 3b; W. Ingamells, lf; E. Brown, rf; A. Paige, 1b; A. Roy, c; Painter, p.

N. Y. C. Shop Team—Mars, 1b; Harrington, 2b; Higgins, ss; Donahue, 3b; Foster, c; J. Foster, cf; Quigley, lf; Johnson, rf; Wilfred, p.

RUNNING A NEWSPAPER

Editing a newspaper is a pleasing business—If you can stand it.

If subscribers want to bawl about anybody—the editor's the goat.

If the town is lagging behind and people won't get out and make things hum—its because the town paper is on the bum.

If business is bad—it's because the editor wants too much money for his advertising space.

If business is good—advertising hasn't anything to do with it, but conditions are right.

If we print what pleases people—that is our duty and we deserve no credit.

If we print what is displeasing—we are a grouch and a crepe hanger, and don't deserve the patronage of the public.

If we print the news as it is actually—people call us over the phone and tell us to stop their paper.

If we garble it—they tell us we ar subsidized by the corporate interests.

Editing a newspaper is a pleasing business—it is not.—Exchange!

KAPLAN'S EXPRESS

Baggage, Trucking and Freight Handled Promptly, Ashes Drawn Household Goods Moved Prompt Deliveries Terms Reasonable All kinds of second hand goods bought and sold

Phones Residence 1568, Business 4246

38 S. Second St., Fulton, N. Y.

The Ever-Ready Storage Battery Service Station

Use the battery that is guaranteed—a storage battery to fit any car. Recharging and repairing of batteries given prompt attention.

We have the largest recharging plant in the city.

DUTCHER MACHINE CO.

MANY FULTON GUESTS AT MEXICO POINT INN

Several Fultonians enjoyed the week end dancing at Mexico Point Inn, Saturday night and at least fifty from this city were guests at the Inn yesterday. The Inn is rapidly gaining in popularity with Fultonians, and the parking space on the lake shore was filled with Fulton cars yesterday afternoon and last night.

The Fulon Imperial Orchestra furnished music for the dancing, and among those who danced Saturday night, were Mr. and Mrs. Russell Rogers, Miss Marjorie Fairgrieves, Miss Ruth Allen, Miss Mary Webb, Miss Margaret VanDeventer, Miss Dorothy Bell, Miss Anne Kelley, Miss Lois VanBuren, Charles O'Brien, Marold Hunter, Donald Allen, Harrison Wilkinson, Reginald Rector, Albert Bustanoby and others.

The Oswego Nurses' Association, including the wives of several Oswego physicians, were dinner guests at the Inn Saturday evening. Miss Katherine Adair won the prize at auction bridge during the afternoon, while George Washburn of this city was awarded the gentleman's honor.

Employes of a Rome manufacturing company, numbering forty, held their annual dinner at the Inn yesterday, coming to the Point from Rome in automobiles. Mayor Victor C. Lewis, Mrs. Merton Reynolds, George Washburn, E. J. LaPorte, and many Oswego and Watertown people were also dinner guests.

Among those who motored to the Point for supper and the evening dance were Mr. and Mrs. Lou Pollock, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Taylor, Miss Vivian Caffrey, Mrs. Bayne Stevenson, Miss Ruth Buchanan, George Keating, James Mackin, C. Milton Allen, Harry Webb, Arthur Guernsey, Herbert W. Adkins, Richard Murphy, Arthur Bidwell, Edward Sullivan, Mr. and Mrs. George Dennison, Fred Rader, Bernard Jones, James Keeler, William Cullen, Michael Knauss, John Mack, Stephen Healy and others.

THE MAN WHO DIED TWICE.

Mystery of Jean, the Hairdresser of Marie Antoinette.

There are many puzzling features of French history, but perhaps the most puzzling of all, though it has to do with a comparatively minor personage, is that surrounding the mystery of the hairdresser of Marie Antoinette. It is not a common occurrence for a person to die twice, a circumstance which has occurred in the case of this hairdresser, who was known as Jean Antie, alias Leonard.

This Antie, or Leonard, was a Gascon, born in 1758, who acquired a reputation in Paris by reason of his great ingenuity in building the elaborate coiffures of the time of Louis XVI. In 1791 he was lodged at the Tuileries as hairdresser of the queen.

When Marie Antoinette and the royal family made their fruitless attempt to flee from France, Leonard was sent ahead as a scout. He was seized, brought back to the French capital and condemned to be executed as a traitor to the state.

So far as any one then knew, he was duly decapitated, his death being properly recorded in the register provided for the purpose. Investigation has, however, elicited the interesting fact that the ex-hairdresser was very much alive in Russia in the year 1814, and to complicate matters the Paris register showed his second death certificate under the year 1824. The question naturally arises, just how did Leonard manage to evade the penalty that every one had no doubt he had suffered? A great many guesses have been ventured, and the following explanation, offered by one puzzled historian, seems of all of them the most reasonable:

One day while a group of condemned were awaiting their turn for execution the guillotine broke down and had to be repaired. A number of victims had been executed; ten or a dozen were obliged to stand waiting until the repairs had been accomplished.

It appears that one individual, the twentieth on the list, whose hands were, as was the custom, bound behind him, grew faint at the delay. He leaned against the line of officers that separated the prisoners from the mob of spectators. Suddenly a gap opened behind the man. Almost unconsciously he slipped through, and the line closed once more. A bystander reached over and placed a hat on the man's bare head, and the people crowded about as if to hide him. A short time thereafter a man with his hands behind him was seen in the Champs Elysees, walking with the air of one out for a quiet stroll. This man was said to have spent the next night in a ditch and to have made his way to Russia subsequently. If this person, saved by a fortunate accident or by collusion, was Leonard the story explains the mystery of the two death certificates.—Washington Star.

Roasting Coffee.

A good chunk of money can be saved in a year by roasting your own coffee, and it is not so hard at that. All that is needed is a good big heavy skillet. Before roasting a pound of green coffee put in a chunk of butter the size of an almond mixed with a teaspoonful of sugar. Roast on the stove or flame, steadily shaking and stirring in the old fashioned double shuffle way until all is a uniform rich brown. Shake fast when coffee "pops" or smokes. Please don't burn. The butter and sugar surely help the flavor, aroma and bouquet of the delicious drink. But the butter must be good and not too much used at one time. The smaller the quantity to do the job right the better.—New York Press.

Colors In Coral.

Genuine coral may be red, pink, white, blue, yellow, green or black, the last being the rarest and most highly prized. The next valuable is the red coral, which is susceptible of high polish and is most in use for jewelry, being the coral of commerce.

Corals are roughly classed under two heads, the horny corals and the time lime or stone corals. To the former belong the red and black forms and the white to the latter. Red coral is chiefly found in the Mediterranean. The corals found on the Atlantic coast of Florida are the lime or stone corals, which are the reef building forms.

HIGHER WAGES NEEDED.

Result of the Investigation Conducted by the Sage Foundation.

"Complex" is the problem of "improving wage and employment conditions among the unskilled workers and among women workers in some occupations," says the report on industrial conditions in Springfield, Ill.

"The wages of unskilled male workers and many women workers are very low, too low in many cases to permit women to support themselves properly or to permit men to support an average family of five in decency."

Wage problems are not entirely local, but their solution depend in part upon local action. The Sage foundation report recommends to citizens of Springfield the support of various measures, some of them indirect in their influence, "tending toward improvement of the lot of this group of workers. Among these are: The prohibition of child labor, with the probable consequent increase in the demand for and in the wage of adult labor; as a corollary of this the development of better industrial education for children now of school age, which shall prepare the coming workers for better paid and higher types of work; the establishment of better wage rates for manual labor on public works and the establishment of legal minimum wage standards."

For the salesgirls and other low paid women workers "some improvement might be brought about through organization of the workers—a measure which at best will be difficult, but which should be thoroughly tried. A second measure is the utilization of public opinion expressed either through constant objection to low wages in specific cases or by consumers withdrawing patronage from stores paying low wages. This has been worked out in some communities through the organization of consumers' leagues. In addition to these, minimum wage legislation which would insure at least enough for adequate self support to girls giving the whole of their working time to store or other work places."

In addition to measures already offered to lessen unemployment the report recommends that "thorough study of the unemployment situation and unemployment insurance as a method of relief be taken up through a state commission to be created by the legislature."

A LIFE SAVING LAW.

Workmen's Compensation Act Started Safety First Movement.

The safety first movement was a sequel to the adoption of workingmen's compensation laws. Arthur Hunter, president of the Actuarial Society of America, asserted in a recent address. Mr. Hunter stated that before the passage of workingmen's compensation legislation employees never had a chance to collect for injuries when opposed by the lawyers of the manufacturers. The act has resulted in a tremendous saving of life and limb, according to the speaker. There was formerly, he said, a saying in connection with the erection of large buildings that it took "one life for every story." Under the compensation act the Woolworth building in New York was erected without a fatality. Unemployment insurance, Mr. Hunter held, should be distributed to men justly out of work, but only enough should be paid to "keep the wolf from the door," in order to prevent people from dodging employment.

Eggs and Onions.

If less meat, shall we eat superboiled eggs after the manner of the Albanians? It testifies to the strength of their digestions. An equal number of eggs and onions are boiled together for about three hours daily on ten successive days, the eggs being slightly pricked after each boil so that the juice of the onions thoroughly permeates them.

They are naturally as hard as bullets at the end of this treatment, but an Albanian will bolt down a huge plateful, helped down by lashings of olive oil, and then clamor for a second helping.—London Chronicle.

National Indifference a Far Greater Peril Than Foreign Foe

By President JOHN GRIER HIBBEN, Princeton University

THE question which I would urge upon your consideration is not whether we are prepared to beat back a foreign foe in time of great national peril, but whether we are prepared to meet our obligations and realize our opportunities in the face, not only of the ordinary duties of the day, but of the extraordinary responsibilities which the present world tragedy forces upon us as a nation.

Photo by American Press Association.
J. G. HIBBEN.

Our country is in the present time in grave danger—danger that comes from the confirmed habit of indifference and inertia, from the spirit of selfish indulgence and of a complacent optimism. It is not the foe without, but the enervating forces within, which cause a nation to sicken and die, and this is our greatest menace.

Patriotism is not a selfish love—my land against all others, but my land for all others. The spirit of nationalism is the spirit of service.

TRUE PATRIOTISM IS CONSCIOUSNESS OF OBLIGATION AND READINESS FOR SACRIFICE.

Socialist Principles Stand For Universal Military Preparedness

By GEORGE R. LUNN, Socialist Mayor of Schenectady, N. Y.

SOCIALISTS hold up internationalism as an ideal. Very good, but a sane nationalism is essential to the best internationalism. Each race or geographical subdivision contributes most effectively to internationalism if it gets its fullest national development.

But to guard sane nationalism we must be prepared. Socialist principles have always stood for universal military service. The present leaders of the party in this country are DEPARTING FROM THE TRUE SPIRIT OF THEIR IDEALS WHEN THEY SIDE WITH THE EXTREME ANTI-PREPARATIONISTS.

Rational preparedness is opposed to militarism in its very essence. If the nation is to enunciate any great principles it must be ready to give them dignity and support. That we must have soldiers is a foregone conclusion. If we make the citizens the soldiers we are democratic. If we permit a specialized group of men to become our protection we create a militaristic class. We are autocratic.

I BELIEVE IN COMPULSORY UNIVERSAL MILITARY TRAINING, THEREFORE.

Experimenting With Nonessentials a Fault In Teaching

By Professor GEORGE TRUMBULL LADD, Yale University

IN our present system of education, in its lower and its higher circles, we have lost out of sight—or at least we have too little regarded—the end of education in our ceaseless and LARGELY FUTILE EXPERIMENTING WITH THE NONESSENTIALS OF THE MEANS.

Our great need is an improved personnel among our teachers and thus an enlarged personal freedom for them in their difficult and too often thankless task.

Our need is also for a stricter discipline—however kindly and sympathetic—over the children and youth of the nation and, above all, a return to the task of breeding individual men and women whose value can be estimated on the basis of their moral character and their moral conduct in the life of citizen and member of society.

THIS ALONE WILL REALIZE THE END OF A TRULY "PRACTICAL" EDUCATION.

GIRL HANGS TO ROOF OF AUTO BY HER NECK CHAIN

Father, Who Was Driving, Finds Her Unconscious and Effects Her Release.

Waverly, Kan.—Miss Dorothea Roberts, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. B. Roberts of Waverly, met with a very unusual and peculiar accident which almost cost her life.

With her father she was riding in their car, the girl in the rear seat, the father in the front seat, driving.

In passing over a culvert at good speed the girl was thrown against the top of the automobile and a strong chain which she wore about her neck caught over one of the bows in the top. There she hung until the father noticed that she failed to answer his remarks. When he looked around he found her unconscious hanging to the top of the automobile.

He stopped immediately and did what he could, but she was unconscious for several hours. Her mouth was full of blood caused from the choking of the chain. She is on the road to recovery.

BEGGAR PRODUCES MISSING ARM; HITS POLICEMAN

Surprised Patrolman Recovers and Puts Husky Fugitive Under Arrest After Fight.

San Francisco.—When is a one round beggar not a one armed beggar? Patrolman John J. Mullin learned the answer when he went to the hospital.

Mullin caught Russell Head, who says he is a waiter, begging alms on Market street, near O'Farrell. One sleeve of the alms seeker's coat was empty, and the arrest caused murmurs of sympathy for the woebegone beggar to well from the lips of passers by. Mullin took Head to a nearby patrol box.

With bewildering prestidigitation Head produced a second solid, substantial arm from under his coat. At the end of the "new" arm was attached a fist which resembled a ham. Before Mullin could recover from his astonishment Head leaned his fist against the former's jaw, and Mullin fell to the pavement.

Head ran away from there, with Mullin in hot pursuit. A brisk battle followed, during which Head seized the patrolman's third finger of the right hand in his mouth and nearly bit it off. Head is now in the city prison, charged with begging and resisting a policeman, and Mullin is in the hospital with a lacerated finger.

REFORESTING SMALL ISLAND

Plan to Make Habitable More of the Hawaiian Group.

Honolulu.—The reforesting of now barren Kahoolawe island, in the Hawaiian group, is the proposition the territorial board of agriculture, the members of which, after a visit to the small islet heretofore designated unsuitable for settlement, decided to begin the work of planting algaroba trees there.

It is recommended a portion of the island swept by the strong trade winds be fenced to prevent depredations by sheep and wild goats. Members of the board say the introduction of horses on the island would assist in the distribution of seed.

It is also proposed to construct several large reservoirs to conserve the rainwater that falls so plentifully at all times. Algaroba trees planted there ten years ago have reached a substantial growth.

COLORS EMPLOYED ON FARM

Barnhart Tells How He Made the Whole Place Yellow and White.

Reading, Pa.—Henry A. Barnhart of Indiana told the committee of the state board of agriculture, in session here, of his efforts in behalf of the artistic side of farming.

He illustrated this by citing that his big barns and outbuildings are all painted yellow, with white trimmings; the farmhouse is painted white, with yellow trimmings; the cattle have the same yellow color, because they are Guernseys; not a horse is used except he is yellow and has a white mark on his head and white feet. The shepherd dog is yellow, with a white band around his neck; there are yellow colored chickens, yellow colored squirrels, the place being known as the "Color Scheme Farm of Indiana."

BORN WITH EIGHT TEETH.

Baby Also Brought Into World a Sufficient Quantity of Hair.

Pittsburgh.—A baby boy born with eight teeth and Samsonian locks has the attention of all Undercliff. The boy has been named Alvin Leroy King and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leroy King.

When the baby opened his mouth for his first lusty yell the nurse was surprised to see four teeth each in upper and lower jaws. The child's head was covered with black hair. Ever since the King home has been an attraction for mothers, fathers and children calling to see the baby.

Protects Tame Jack Rabbit.

Bloomingdale, Ind.—William B Leonard has inserted a notice in the newspapers requesting his friends and neighbors not to harm his pet Kansas jack rabbit. The rabbit has the run of the Leonard farm, but is so domesticated that it returns at night to sleep in the kitchen.

Words of George Washington Still Potent to Arouse the Nation to Its Duty

By THOMAS R. MARSHALL, Vice President of the United States

© Pach Bros.

NOW, I am not a believer in the idea that war is the very worst thing that can come to a people. Being old enough myself to avoid any dangers of war, I still see that it would be far better for our American youth to lose his life upon the field of battle in defense of our institutions than to destroy his life by vicious conduct in social affairs. We are mistaken, my friends, when we think that death and burial are synchronous.

They are not. There are hundreds of men in America walking around the streets who are dead, but they have not yet been buried, and there are men who have gone to their graves who are just as much alive today as they were when they walked visibly upon this earth of ours.

Never in all history was George Washington so much alive as he is at this moment.

AND NEVER WAS THERE SO GREAT A NEED FOR THE AMERICAN PEOPLE TO REMEMBER—TO REMEMBER NOW HIS ADVICE TO HAVE FRIENDLY RELATIONS WITH ALL PEOPLE AND ENTANGLING ALLIANCES WITH NONE.

Abraham Lincoln is as much alive today as he ever was, and no man ever died who lived for a good cause and helps to move it onward, and every man is dead who has no ideals in life.

We are talking much about preparation for peace in this country, and I want everything done that can be done by all patriotic people to see to it that there is never any danger of a foe setting its feet upon American shores. But you will permit me to say that, while, in common with the great men of this country, I AM RAISING MY VOICE FOR THE CAUSE OF PREPARATION FOR PEACE IN AMERICA, YOU CANNOT MEET AND OVERCOME A FOREIGN FOE WITH MERE WINDY WORDS.

SPECIAL EXTRA — U. S. A. — SUNRISE EDITION

FATE OF A BLUFFER.

IN writing up the "bluffers" of this town a few weeks ago we asked Smoky Tiger, or whatever he calls himself, what prison he had run from.

He's been promising the boys to slice off our right ear, have it fried in Bill Taylor's restaurant and then publicly feed it to Steve Aker's Virginia foxhound.

He tried it yesterday. He is in the hospital, and we have his two revolvers and bowie knife on our table as we write. We are waiting for him to prove property and take them away.

WEATHER AND WORRY.

We have been requested by various local subscribers to take up the weather reports and make a feature of them again.

We find that a good murder item gives much more satisfaction than a weather report.

The fact is that no man with a pair of rubber boots, a gun and a bottle of whisky need worry over the weather. It's bound to hit him somewhere.

TOOK IT ALL BACK.

Day before yesterday we were told that Major Cahoon was laying his wires to get us removed from the postmastership and secure our place.

We met him, got the drop on him and backed him up against a wall, and he denied the whole scheme.

The major is a slick, sleek liar, but we lay nothing up against him. We are as solid in the postoffice as any mountain on its base, and we can't be rooted out by anything less than a revolution.

LACK OF JUDGMENT.

NEWS reached us yesterday of the death of Joe Rathbone, formerly of this town, but living near Florence for the last year.

Joe was a good hearted man, but lacked judgment. That lack of judgment brought about his demise.

Mounted on a mule which could do only ten miles an hour, he figured on keeping ahead of a herd of steers making at least twenty-five.

As an angel Joe may have more sense in his head.

OFFICIAL NOTICE.

Acting under instructions from Washington we shall close the postoffice at 10 o'clock at night after this, and any one kicking on the door after that hour will have to take his chances on what may happen.

If the intruder cares to have the bullets dug out of him he will find a doctor on the block below.

Ring the bell twice and wipe your feet on the mat.

HE LACKED SAND.

Editor Jack Nixon of the Primrose Banner came to town the other day to pull our editorial nose for saying that his weekly was a dish rag and that he was a jack rabbit.

Editor Nixon had two guns, a tomahawk and a dog, but he was mistaken in himself.

As he stood face to face with us his sand petered out, his knees knocked together, and he grew white as snow.

We took him by the ear and led him back to his mule and sat him in the saddle, and we felt for him as he rode away with tears in his eyes.

M. QUAD.

Disrespect For the Courts a Menace to Our Government

By Justice JAMES C. CROPSEY, Supreme Court of New York

ONE of the great essentials in this government of ours is that the people universally respect and revere the courts and judges.

The people should have an abiding faith in their integrity, in their fairness, in their ability. With such a faith generally held there is added security for the peace and order of the community. Without it there is a lack of restraint which makes easy acts of disorder and violence.

Lack of respect for the judicial branch of our government tends to undermine the foundation stone of its structure.

NO REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT CAN CONTINUE STABLE IF ITS JUDICIARY ARE DISTRUSTED AND LACK THE CONFIDENCE OF ITS PEOPLE.

When the people generally believe—although the belief be unjustified—that their courts cannot be trusted, that their judges are not impartial, that they are lacking in integrity, that they are grossly incompetent, that they render decisions in aid of their friends regardless of the law, there is cause for genuine alarm. Then the people naturally lose all respect for the law, and without that there is little restraint.

AND IT NEEDS THE ACTIONS OF BUT ONE OR TWO INCOMPETENT, UNFAIR, DISHONEST MEMBERS OF THE JUDICIARY TO STAMP THE WHOLE BENCH, IN THE PUBLIC OPINION, AS UNWORTHY OF CONFIDENCE AND ESTEEM.

No, Indeed.

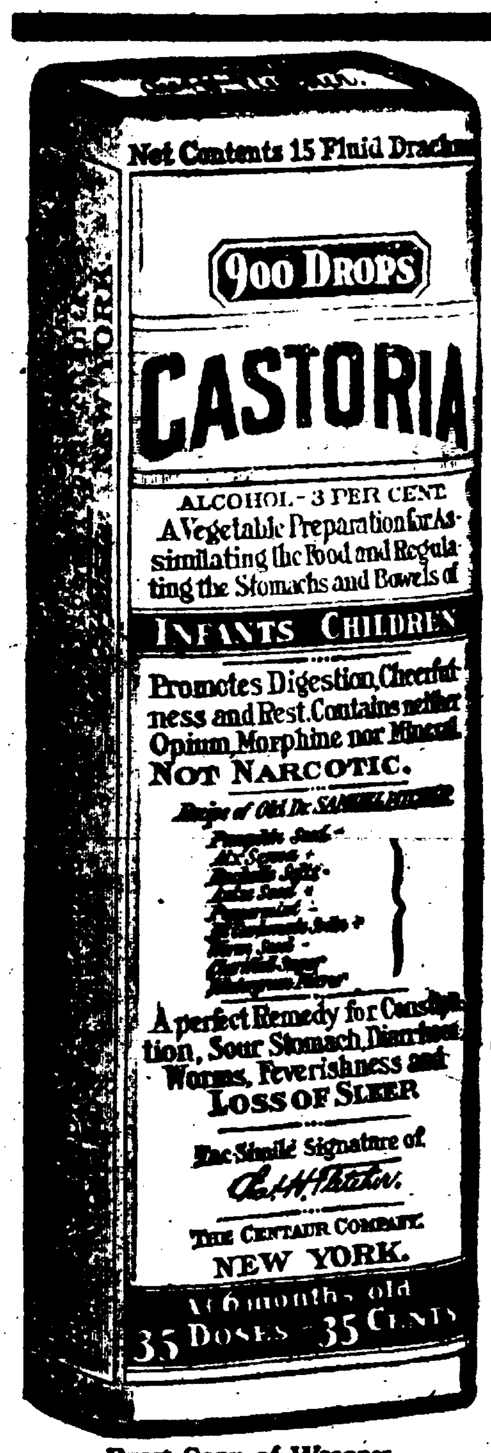
"A little learning is a dangerous thing."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "But the fact doesn't justify some of us in being proud of how little we know."—Washington Star.

Supremacy.

"So you believe in the supremacy of the feminine will?"

"I do," replied Mr. Meekton. "I eat anything the cook puts up and never think of offering an argument."—Washington Star.



Exact Copy of Wrapper.

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children.
Mothers Know That Genuine Castoria Always Bears the Signature of [signature]
In Use For Over Thirty Years
CASTORIA
THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Outdone.

Teacher—Now, boys, I want to see if any of you can make a complete sentence out of two words, both having the same sound to the ear.

First Boy—I can, Miss Smith.

Teacher—Very well, Robert. Let us hear your sentence.

First Boy—Write right.

Teacher—Very good.

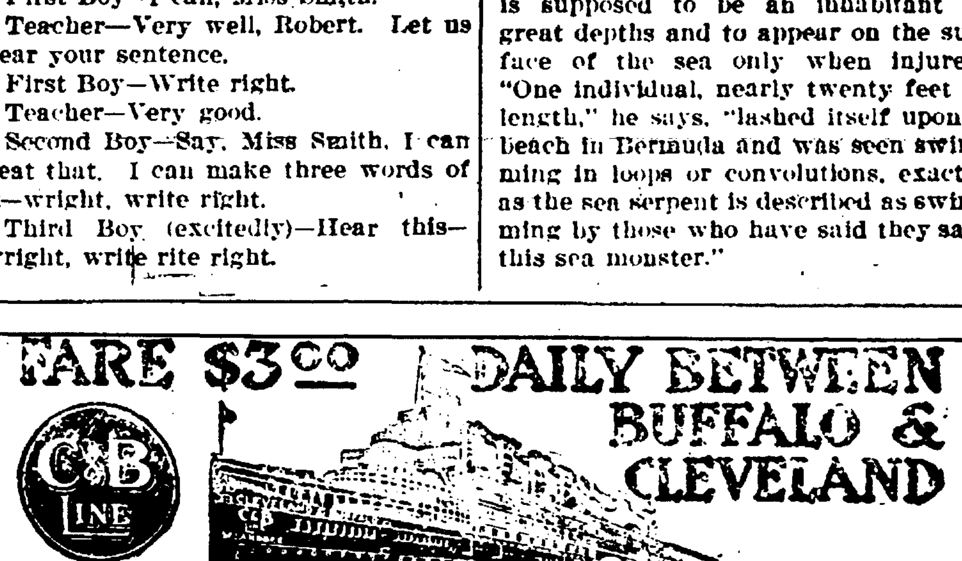
Second Boy—Say, Miss Smith, I can beat that. I can make three words of it—wright, write right.

Third Boy (excitedly)—Hear this—wright, write rite right.

The Ribbon Fish.

In a book on "The Ocean" A. Hyatt Verrill attributes some of the sea serpent stories to the occasional appearance of the strange "ribbon fish." This is supposed to be an inhabitant of great depths and to appear on the surface of the sea only when injured. "One individual, nearly twenty feet in length," he says, "lashed itself upon a beach in Bermuda and was seen swimming in loops or convolutions, exactly as the sea serpent is described as swimming by those who have said they saw this sea monster."

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND



The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"
The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.
"CITY OF ERIE" — 3 Magnificent Steamers — "CITY OF BUFFALO"
BETWEEN
BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Nov. 15th—CLEVELAND
Leave Buffalo . . . 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland . . . 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Cleveland . . . 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo . . . 7:30 A. M.
(Eastern Standard Time)
Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.
Beautifully colored sectional puzzle chart, showing both exterior and interior of The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE" sent on receipt of five cents to cover postage and mailing. Also ask for our 24-page pictorial and descriptive booklet free.
THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

SEND THAT NEXT PRINTING ORDER TO THE JOB-PRINTING-DEPT.
THAT WILL GIVE YOU HIGHEST QUALITY LOWEST PRICES & SUPERIOR SERVICE

WE ARE NOW READY TO EXECUTE YOUR WORK
PROMPTLY
AND WILL APPRECIATE YOUR PATRONAGE
THE FULTON EVENING TIMES
Telephone 45

The Other Side of the Wall

And Different Kinds of Love

By CLARISSA MACKIE

A farmer boy not out of his teens was taking the horses to water. The setting sun threw their shadows so far that their bodies were lost in the distance, while the legs looked like telegraph poles. Leaning on a fence inclosing a yard about a cottage beside the road was a young girl. Her feet were on the bottom rail, her head and shoulders being above the top one.

"You're looking mighty pretty tonight," said the young fellow.

The girl snickered.

"The setting sun shining on that hair of yours makes it look yellow enough to be pure gold."

"That must be what you're looking for."

"What?"

"Gold. When you get a girl you can be sure she'll be the daughter of some rich farmer."

"Your dad isn't a rich farmer," replied the young man softly.

"H'm. I wasn't talking about myself."

"Whom were you talking about?"

"Well, there's Lizzie Blake."

There was no reply to this for the moment. He seemed to be thinking.

"I thought," he said presently, "that you and Lizzie were thicker than two peas in a pod."

"Well, what has that to do with it?"

"Why, I didn't think you would be jealous of her."

"Jealous? Who's jealous?"

"Oh, you're not, eh? Maybe you don't care who I keep company with."

"Of course I don't."

"Then I reckon I'll keep company with Lizzie."

"You can just do that as long and as soon as you want to; I don't care."

The young man gave a tug at the halters of the horses and moved on a few steps, when he stopped, turned and looked back at the pretty figure of the sixteen-year-old girl gilded by the last rays of the setting sun.

"Did you mean that?" he asked.

"Yes, I did," was the reply in a tone so bitter that it would have said plainly to any one except the person to whom it was addressed that she did not.

His only reply was another yank at the halters, and, turning again, he led the horses to the barn, fed them, made their beds and left them for the night.

As for the girl, she went into the house and that night when she went to bed she cried herself to sleep.

These two had been brought up side by side and had arrived at the mating age. A few days before the young man had kissed another girl on finding a red ear at a husking. And so what was about to happen did not happen. Fate makes many sudden turns.

* * * * * * * *

"If I were a man," said Amelia Peddiford impressively, "I would be tempted to use strong language!"

"Don't mind me, Aunt Amelia," grinned her nephew. "Don't let your sex bar you from any of the privileges of the"—

"Fiddlesticks!" snapped Amelia, quite restored to good humor. "Tom, what would you do about Donald Brown's chickens?"

"Catch 'em and eat 'em," said the practical Tom. "If they come into your garden and eat your lettuce and scratch up your corn eat 'em. They're fattened on your food, so to speak."

"I wouldn't do that," said Amelia thoughtfully, "but I was wondering if you wouldn't go over and speak to Donald about it."

"Certainly," agreed Tom. "And is old Brown's pretty niece stopping there now?"

"Linda, you mean?"

"Yes; pretty Linda Brown," said Tom sentimentally.

"No."

"Then I won't go—er—yes, I will. Aunt Amelia, shall I tell Mr. Brown that you, president of the Woman's Suffrage society of Blankton and a stern believer that woman is the equal of man, have sent me, a mere man, over to growl at him for permitting his chickens to invade the sacred precincts of your garden?"

"Tell him anything you please," sighed Amelia wearily.

Tom stepped through the open window and walked down a box bordered path to the high brick wall that separated the two places and provided tangible evidence that the old friendship between the Browns and the Peddifords was no more.

And it had all been on account of marauding chickens on the one hand and Amelia's pet ram on the other side of the fence.

Tom knew a weak place in the wall and kicked out a brick to gain a foothold. The brick assailed Donald Brown upon his rheumatic foot as he hobbled among his old fashioned flowers.

Mr. Brown did not call for a substitute. He roared for himself.

He greeted Tom's handsome face over the wall with a dark frown.

"You young rascal! What do you mean by throwing bricks at me?" he growled.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Brown, but it was an accident. I didn't know you were there." Tom swung himself around, balanced for a moment and dropped a pair of substantial feet into the glass of a cold frame.

Donald Brown danced about excitedly and vowed vengeance upon the Peddifords and all their tribe.

Tom stepped out of the ruin he had created and shook a reproving finger under the handsome nose of the irate gentleman.

"Be a sport, Mr. Brown," he remonstrated.

"What do you want here?" demanded Donald Brown.

"I came to call upon Miss Linda."

"Linda—pooh! She isn't here, sir!"

"Then I came to complain about the chickens. Aunt Amelia's garden is ruined."

"Humph!" snorted Mr. Brown.

"Being unmarried, it's rather hard on Aunt Amelia," went on the young man gently. "If she had a husband to protect her rights"—

"Her own fault!" put in Mr. Brown gruffly.

Tom's eyes danced. Ho! There was an old romance here after all.

"She may have been hasty," agreed Tom.

"You mean she regrets—er—that she remained single?" demanded the other eagerly.

"Oh, no. I mean she regrets that she has had to speak to you about the chickens," explained Tom.

"Oh!"

What a world of disappointment was expressed in the ejaculation! Tom winced and discovered that he was actually feeling sorry for Donald Brown and Aunt Amelia. "Why hadn't they ever married?" he wondered. "Together they would make a spirited pair; apart they nagged at each other. "Both unhappy and don't know the reason why," he decided wisely.

"You know, a woman won't admit she hasn't made a happy choice when she decides to remain a spinster," explained Tom.

"Ah!" Mr. Brown sniffed a little and wiped his eyes with a spotless handkerchief.

"Still, it's never too late for a woman to change her mind on any subject," went on Tom.

"You might put it up to Amelia then," said Donald Brown grimly. "If she'll change her mind I'll change mine."

"You mean it?"

"Certainly."

"Put it there, Uncle Don!" yelled Tom, pumping Mr. Brown's hand up and down.

"Please don't be quite so impetuous, young man," said Mr. Brown. "My niece hasn't exhibited any signs of interest in you—yet."

"Linda? Oh, she'll wait," said Tom airily, for his mind was filled with visions of restoring Aunt Amelia to the arms of Donald Brown. Of course there had been an old romance, and this couple, soured by time and loneliness, only waited a diplomatic hand to join theirs in betrothal.

"Linda and I'll be the bridesmaid and best man," thought Tom as he retreated toward the wall.

"So you're going to put the question to Amelia?" asked Donald.

"If you say so?"

"Of course. Tell her I'm sorry it happened and that I'll take all the responsibility. I'm killing off my chickens anyway. Only got a dozen left and they're nailed up tight as can be in the poultry yard."

"I'll tell her," promised Tom as he vanished over the wall.

Amelia Peddiford was sitting in her rose arbor knitting a shawl.

"Aunt Amelia," said Tom impressively, "I've talked with Mr. Brown and he—er—says—er—that if you'll forget and foregive, why, he will take all the responsibility and blame for the trouble."

Aunt Amelia stared. "Of course he was to blame," she said mildly. "He never should have kept chickens anyway. They ate up his own flowers and vegetables and"—

"And he wants to marry you, Aunt Amelia!" Tom confessed this hurriedly. He wanted the interview over. Had not Linda Brown just flashed past the house in her uncle's runabout?

"Donald—Brown—wants—to—marry—me?" shrieked Aunt Amelia wrathfully. "The old bigamist!"

"Bigamist?" gasped Tom.

"Of course! Didn't you know he was married? Married my old school friend, Lizzie Blake. Poor Lizzie's weak minded and been in the asylum for a dozen years. Marry me?"

"Perhaps he didn't mean that," admitted the wretched youth. "Let me tell you what he said, and you may understand."

So painstakingly word for word he repeated what had been said between the two men on the other side of the wall, and when he had finished Aunt Amelia was laughing mirthfully, and Donald Brown, who had slipped into the yard and also heard, laughed sympathetically.

"I proposed to Miss Amelia to remove the brick wall at my own expense," explained Mr. Brown, "and I was asking you to assure her that I was ready to keep my promise; also that I was eating up my chickens as fast as possible, and there would be no further annoyance from that source. And, Amelia, if you can wait until the other twelve chickens are disposed of"—

"Save them, Donald," interposed Aunt Amelia. "You may need them for Linda's wedding feast."

"And Tom's?"

"It looks that way now."

Their eyes followed Tom's manly form as he scaled the wall and disappeared from view.

He was going to Linda—and happiness.

The two friends in the rose arbor smiled at each other, secure in the happiness that the healing of old differences brings about.

For there are many kinds of love.

CRITIC OF PRINCE.

Admiral Holtzendorff Quit Navy Because of Kaiser's Brother.

DEMANDED A FREE HAND.

German Chief of Navy Staff Received Imperial Promise and Was Reinstated—Said Prince Henry Spoke English Too Much—Made Him Unpopular.

Berlin.—Admiral Henning von Holtzendorff, chief of staff of the German admiralty and as such receiving a large share of credit for the German achievements in the great battle off Skagerrak, attained his present office in September, 1915, not contrary to the wishes of Grand Admiral von Tirpitz, as has been stated, but against the recommendation of Prince Henry of Prussia, the emperor's only brother.

Prince Henry is ranking grand admiral and inspector general of the German navy. This is an honorary office, still one of great influence. When the war opened in August, 1914, Holtzendorff was in retirement, like Hindenburg. The victor of the battle of Tannenburg, now the idolized field marshal of the German empire, had been allowed in time of peace to leave the army. He could not get along amicably with all of his superior officers. Holtzendorff retired because he dared to criticise Prince Henry's exaggerated ideas of discipline. The prince admired his mother's country so much that he spoke English almost all the time on board ship. The questionable taste of preferring it to his native language made him unpopular, although his subordinates were naturally debarred from showing disapproval.

Photo by American Press Association.
PRINCE HENRY.

Admiral von Holtzendorff, who had commanded the German high seas fleet for several years, came in direct opposition to Prince Henry when the ranking grand admiral paid more attention to the ornamental side of seamanship than to actual efficiency. On a tour of inspection, if he found the brass fittings of the ship not as brightly polished as he thought they ought to be, he would order the man who had done the work brought to him and personally sentence him to solitary confinement. Holtzendorff was unable to get his way, and he was allowed to retire.

Prince Henry declined to receive the salute of Admiral Holtzendorff when the two happened to meet, and when the emperor invited Holtzendorff to return to his naval duties the admiral declined unless he were given the post of supreme authority, where he would not be interfered with by Prince Henry.

No man in the German navy represented to the same extent as did Admiral von Holtzendorff the ideas of naval warfare which the United States government was in September of last year insisting that Germany adopt.

The emperor cut the Gordian knot. Actuated by the country's highest need in time of war, exercising that genius for choosing the right man for the right place which he inherited from his grandfather, William I, Holtzendorff was made chief of staff, with the imperial promise that he should have a free hand.

The admiral's father was president of the court of appeals in Gotha, where the son as a little boy was the terror of all his schoolteachers. Full of vitality, grasping his school work without effort, he was full of boyish pranks and early gave indication of extraordinary ability in thinking and acting for himself. As a middle aged man he was, however, a distinguished citizen of Gotha, director of the Gotha real estate credit bank, a famous old institution.

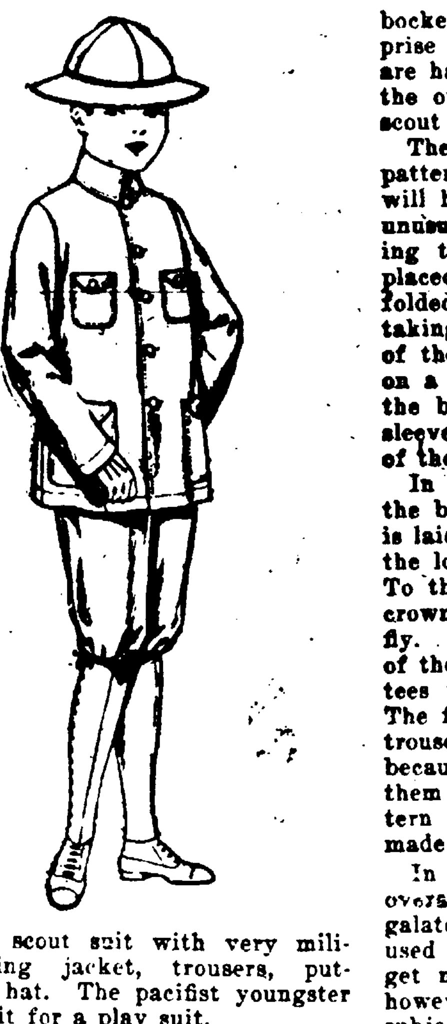
In 1892, when he was thirty-nine, he held the rank of captain in the navy and was attached to the staff of the chief commander, later on to the staff of the maneuver squadrons. In 1895 he was sent to cruise in Chinese waters as captain of the warship Kaiser. His naval career came after his marriage. Inheriting several estates with his brother, Arndt, younger than himself, the family was nevertheless poor. Arndt von Holtzendorff went into business and stayed there. He is now director of the Hamburg-American line at the main office in Hamburg.

Henning von Holtzendorff made a rich marriage, his wife being the widow of a millionaire by the name of Klotz.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

For Scout Duties or Play.



A boy scout suit with very military-looking jacket, trousers, puttees and hat. The pacifist youngster may use it for a play suit.

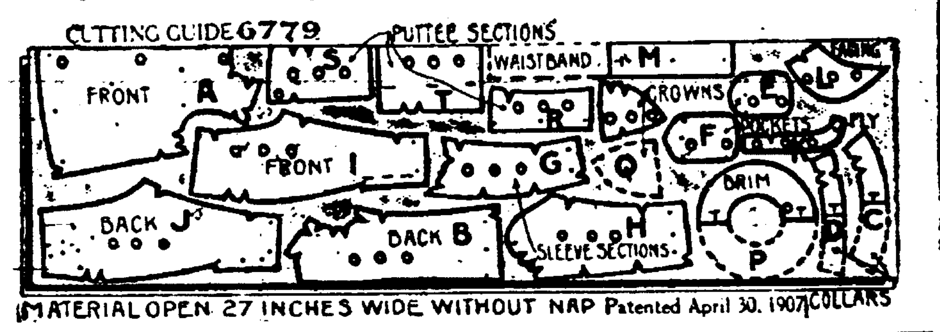
The natural instinct of a boy is to love a suit that boasts a military air and in these days of preparedness talk he has a greater longing than ever for a soldier costume. This model is intended for boy scout service, or it may be used for a play suit, if the youngster hails from a pacifist household. A jacket, side closing knickerbocker trousers and breeches comprise the suit and in addition there are hat and puttees. In medium size the outfit requires 5¼ yards 27-inch scout cloth.

There are so many sections to the pattern that the home dressmaker will have to study the cutting guide unusually carefully before attempting to cut any part. The cloth is placed open, in double width (not folded) on the cutting table. Then, taking the lower row first, the back of the breeches is laid in place first, on a lengthwise thread. Next comes the back of the jacket, then the sleeve sections, followed by the brim of the hat and the two collar sections.

In the next row, above the back of the breeches and back of the jacket, is laid the front of the breeches, with the lower part of the sleeve sections. To the right of these are laid the crown of the hat, the pockets and the fly. The top row includes the front of the jacket, the sections of the puttees the waistband and the facing. The front and back of knickerbocker trousers are not included in the guide, because it is an easy matter to cut them by adapting the breeches pattern and because other provision is made for them in the pattern.

In addition to scout cloth, khaki overalls cloth in brown or blue and galatea of heaviest quality may be used for the suit. It is impossible to get material that will be too stout, however, for these suits are generally subjected to the hardest possible wear.

The jacket may be made with a standing or turn-down collar and two-piece sleeves. Sometimes the upper pockets are omitted, but the suit that pleases the boy scout most is the one that has the greatest number of pockets. Braid may be added as a trimming, if desired.



Pictorial Review Boy Scout No. 67 79. Sizes, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Price, 15 cents.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

What would the little lady of fashion do with a smocked frock? Not that it costs so much, but it is so emminently stylish. Here is shown a pretty model developed in plaid gingham trimmed with the same material in plain color. A touch of embroidery enhaces the beauty of the collar and cuffs and is quickly made. Medium size calls for 2 yard 36-inch gingham and 1-2 yard trimming material.

Pictorial Review Dress No. 6593, sizes 2 to 8 years; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

Growing In Wisdom.

Mabel had developed a really passionate interest in Abraham Lincoln. She had always admired her grandfather, but her admiration deepened to veneration when she learned that the old gentleman had seen Lincoln often.

"And you can really remember Lincoln?" she repeated in awe struck tones.

"Yes, dear," said grandfather. "You know, I am much older than you."

"How much older must I be before I can remember him?" asked Mabel.—New York Times.

LADIES

We have on display in our South window a large number of Sets of

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

while they last we will sell them at

70 Cents the Set

The wholesale price is more than that, but we are going to dispose of them at a great sacrifice.

COME EARLY IF YOU WISH TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER

They were bought by the former publishers for premiums, but we are giving no premiums with the

FULTON EVENING TIMES

OLD RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

Walter J. Boomer, aged fifty-eight, died at his home, 208 Rochester street, early yesterday morning, after an illness of almosts three weeks, occasioned by a paralytic stroke. Mr. Boomer had been in a critical condition since last Wednesday and although he rallied Saturday morning for a brief period, his recovery was declared impossible.

The deceased was born in this city and has always resided here. For the past twenty years he conducted a wholesale and retail liquor business at the corner of Oneida and South Second streets, and was one of the best known business men in the city. He was a charter member of the Fulton Lodge of Elks, and also a member of the Odd Fellows, Red Men, and other local fraternal orders and clubs. He was one of the original founders of the Universalist Church Society.

He is survived by his widow, his mother, Mrs. Ellen J. Boomer; three sisters, Mrs. M. B. Highriter, of Meriden, Conn.; Mrs. A. J. Aubrey, of Napa, Cal., and Mrs. J. C. Embley, of New York city

The funeral will be held from his late residence tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock, and the services will be conducted by Rev. Frederick W. Betts, of Syracuse. The Fulton Lodge of Elks will hold a ritual service at the grave in Mount Adnah cemetery.

BURGARD SELLS PATHFINDER DREDGE

The Burgard Contracting Company has sold the dredge Pathfinder to the state of New York. The state was represented in the purchase by David S. Burleigh, assistant superintendent of Public Works, Middle Division. The dredge is very powerful, having a full three yard dipper and has been very familiar along the barge canal between Fulton and Oswego. The Pathfinder dredge is less than four years old, having been built especially for the Burgard Company. It is said that it is the most powerful dredge ever in this section. The arrangements for moving the Pathfinder have not been completed, nor has the purchase price been made public.

TO BANISH WRINKLES

Before retiring bathe the face and neck with water, hot as may be applied without discomfort, then dry and for two or three minutes rub Usit into the skin gently with the finger tips. No other treatment is necessary. This is a wonderful skin food made from pure nut-oil, guaranteed to contain nothing that will cause hair-growth.

Usit is a formula secured in Egypt and is said to have been used by Cleopatra and other famous Egyptian beauties, and handed down through the ages until today it is offered to the women of this country. Usit is positively guaranteed to drive away wrinkles and resore any complexion to its youthful beauty and freshness.

Any first-class druggist can supply it for 50 cents, but be sure you get the genuine Usit in bottles.

The most painful cases of sunburn are relieved instantly by Usit.

For Sale by the Fulton Pharmacy and dealers everywhere.—Adv.

METHODIST CAMP MEETING AT FAIR GROUNDS

The Syracuse District, Susquehanna conference, of the Free Methodist Church, will hold its annual camp-meeting at the Fulton fair grounds July 26 to August 3, inclusive. The committee in charge has completed all arrangements for the affair, and Rev. C. A. Balch, pastor of the Free Methodist Church of this city, will have charge of the Fulton space reservations.

A large lodging tent will be provided and a boarding tent will be maintained on the grounds. All smaller tents must be ordered of Rev. Mr. Balch at least ten days before the meeting begins.

Rev. G. L. Skinner, district elder, will be in charge of the revival, and he will be assisted by a corps of evangelists and ministers from all parts of the district. The order of services includes a morning holiness meeting at 6 a. m., family worship at 8 oclock, love feast at 9:30, preaching at 10:30, 2:30 and 7:30 p. m., a children's meeting at 1:30 p. m., and a young peoples' meeting at 6:30 p. m. All baptismal services will be held in the lake.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

W. H. HOLDEN WILL LECTURE

W. H. Holden, an evangelist of national reputation, arrived in this city yesterday, and will hold an evangelistic campaign under a big tent at East Fifth street and Broadway, commencing tomorrow evening. Mr. Holden is accompanied by a corps of eight workers, including C. H. Castle, chorister and Joseph Schnetzer, business manager, and the meetings will be held under the auspices of the New York State Seventh Day Adven-tists. Mr. Holden has just completed a most successful campaign in Oneida.

The services will begin each evening at 7:45 o'clock, and the subjects to be dwelt on during the week are as follows: "The Metal Man of Prophecy" "Is the present War the last War?" "The Devil—who is he?" "Plan of Salvation," and "Satan Bound," the Sunday evening sermon, which is considered one of the most forceful delivered by any evangelist in this country. There will be music during each service and all sittings are free. The slogan of the Holden party is "Our Creed the Bible Only—Our Aim the Salvation of Souls." Subjects of vital interest will be discussed, and some of the interesting problems involving interpretation of the Holy Writ will be made plain. The lectures are a connected series and all students of the Bible in this city are cordially invited to be present.

MET AT GETTYSBURG— THERE THEY ARE WED

Gettysburg, Pa.—A romance which began three years ago during the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the battle culminated on the high tower on the summit of Culp's Hall. At about 9:30 o'clock on the morning of the 3rd of July, 1913, Miss Rose Browning and William H. Barnhart, both Government employes at Washington, and strangers to each other, were viewing the surrounding country from the tower, when a mutual friend introduced them.

The friendship ripened during the three years and several days ago they were married, standing on the observatory at the place where they met, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. J. B. Baker, pastor of St. James' Lutheran Church of this place.

MEMBERS OF GUN CLUB TO SHOOT FOR TROPHY

Messrs. Padgett, Fridenburg, Trimble and Watson, of the Fulton Game and Gun Club, who are tied for the Dupont trophy will compete at the club grounds next Saturday. A red target event for a prize pocket knife donated by Foster Brothers will also be held at that time.

The following scores were made Saturday in the fifty bird event.

Padgett	39
Ash	34
Wise	48
Kennedy	39

The pheasant eggs have been received and placed in the surrounding country. Five hundred live pheasants are expected to arrive this week and these will also be distributed in this county.

PALERMO WOMAN UNDERGOES OPERATION

Mrs. George Collins, of Palermo underwent an operation at the Lee Memorial Hospital Saturday. Dr. S. D. Kellar performed the operation and Mrs. Collins is reported resting easily and on the road to recovery.

(By United Press)

LARGE CONGRGATIONS AT ALL SAINTS

An unusually large congregation attended the serves at the All Saints' Episcopal church yesterday. Rev. M. J. Peters, rector of the church preached the sermon at the 10:30 a. m. service, and there was a choral service and sermon at 7:30 p. m.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the parish will meet in the new parish house guild room Thursday afternoon at three o'clock. A social time will be enjoyed and refreshments will be served.

The vestry will meet at the parish house Wednesday evening at eight o'clock.

That Saratoga Trunk

By BARBARA PHIPPS

Mme. Herman, in sable robes and widow's cap, drove up to a pier in New York from which a ship was about to sail for London. She arrived in a taxicab on which there was room for baggage as well as passengers, and as soon as it stopped she alighted and, calling for a couple of porters, she pointed to a large saratoga trunk on the auto and said to them:

"I wish you to carry my trunk to my stateroom. Here's a dollar for each of you. I don't like my trunks banged about and broken. Take it off the car carefully, carry it aboard in the same way and when you set it down don't do it with a thump."

The men pocketed the tip, took the trunk and obeyed the lady's order to the letter, the lady herself accompanying them.

Mme. Herman kept her room during most of the voyage. She was usually in her wrapper, and when a steward answered her bell she would give her orders through a narrow opening of the door, receiving what was handed in in the same way. She said that her trunk which she preferred to have with her took up so much room that there was none left for any one except herself. The trunk being a very large one, this was quite true.

A lady occupying a room opposite Mme. Herman's said that the widow's meals, all of which were eaten in her room, were sumptuous. Three times each day a tray was carried to her door. Each dish was removed from the tray through the narrow opening, and a piece of silver was slipped into the hand of the steward who brought the meal.

Another thing was noticeable in the little passageway when Mme. Herman's room was unlocked. This was a strong odor of cigarettes that quite frequently emanated from her room. This caused some surprise, because the lady appeared to be not the kind of woman who would smoke. Fashionable women of rather a sporty type are the ones who smoke, at least in America, but Mme. Herman was not in the least "loud." Indeed, she was quite the reverse, being very refined and subdued.

Persons traveling have nothing to do but observe their fellow travelers, and these things tended to direct attention to Mme. Herman. Several ladies who roomed near her met one day in the cabin, and the widow became the topic of conversation. One wondered why she should take up so much space in her room with a trunk that another woman would have had put into the hold. Another was surprised that so spiritual a woman could eat so much, avowing that she had seen the dishes carried away and not a remnant of food was ever left on any of them. A third could not understand how so refined a woman could smoke. Indeed, Mme Herman was surrounded with inconsistencies, and these inconsistencies very much troubled her fellow passengers.

Nevertheless Mme. Herman kept her room, except on very rare occasions, when she went on deck for fresh air, and then she always locked her door. It was observed, too, that she never went into the cabin or on deck except after the stewardess had made up the berth and put the room to rights.

One night in a fog the ship came into collision with another vessel. All the passengers turned out of their berths, most of them with very few clothes on. But the officers assured them that not a break had been made in the vessel's side, and the engine, which had been stopped, proceeded with monotonous regularity. This satisfied the passengers, and they returned to their rooms. The lady occupying the room opposite Mme. Herman's reported the next day, when the incident was being talked over, that when she left her room and when she returned to it Mme. Herman's door was shut tight. On comparing notes none of the women could remember having seen the widow on deck.

When the ship was coming into port Mme. Herman was forgotten in the excitement of preparation for landing. After the docking and the passengers had nearly all gone ashore Mme. Herman sent a steward for a couple of porters and when they arrived they received the same instructions with regard to carrying out her trunk that those had received who had brought it aboard. It was placed on an auto with baggage room and taken with its owner to her hotel, where it was deposited carefully by tipped porters in her room. The next day the lady, still feeing porters to carry her trunk carefully, took a train for Dover and crossed the channel to Calais. From there she went to a small town in Holland, where she took a room in a hostelry on the second floor, a window opening a few feet from a shed.

In the morning before daylight a man stood at the window.

"Goodby, dear," he said. "This has been a long and a hard pull and without your coolness and resource would have been unsuccessful. I have no fear but that I shall make my way to our troops in Belgium. You will easil reach Berlin, and when the war is over, if I am alive, I will join you there."

Captain Carl Becker kissed his wife, carefully lifted the window sash, stepped out on to the shed below and disappeared. The next day he appeared among his comrades in the German army.

Aseptico Laboratories Inc.

Rochester, N. Y. July 6, 1916

The following letter was received this morning by Mrs. N. A. Jones:

To Mrs. N. A. Jones,
107 Rochester Street,
Fulton, New York.

Dear Mrs. Jones: Yesterday's paper stated that 100 deaths from Infantile Paralysis had occurred and the average death rate in New York City alone from this cause is now one every hour.

Infantile Paralysis is a germ disease contracted through the nose and mouth and as a preventive measure every mother should take special care of her children at this time.

Children who are old enough to use a gargle or nasal douche should do so using half a level teaspoonful of Aseptico to a glass of water for a gargle and a solution of not over half that strength for a nasal douche. Younger children should have their mouths swabbed out with clean linen and solution of gargling strength. A clean handkerchief over the index finger does this admirably. Children should be kept in their own homes and yards away from contact with others and parties or picnics should be especially avoided. Water for babies' bath should contain Aseptico and all older children should brush their teeth with it.

Remember: This disease does not become noticeable until it is too late to cure it. There is already a case in Binghamton and a number in the Hudson Valley. No one knows how soon your town will be reached.

It is your duty as our representative and as a Christian woman to do everything in your power to save the children of your territory from this terrible disease. Don't wait. Start now in the work of helping mothers to save their babies. If you are a mother you need no further word. If not, do it for the sake of the mother who did everything for you.

Help save the babies.

ASEPTICO LABORATORIES, Inc.

Represented by Mrs. N. A. oJnes, Phone 1352.

United States Justified In Military Extension For Defensive Purposes

By Count SHIGENOBU OKUMA, Premier of Japan

WHY, then, is there all this talk of war with Japan in the United States? The president of the United States is a scholar, a democrat and a man of high personality and has always maintained the principle of peace.

Why is the Democratic government urging military extension? We do not believe that the United States intends to come to us with her navy.

If they came over here with a great squadron we would welcome them NOT WITH WEAPONS, BUT WITH FLOWERS, AND FORM A COMMISSION FOR THEIR ENTERTAINMENT. On the surface it seems that there is no reason for military and naval extension programs in the United States, which does not intend to invade Europe or Japan.

But there is a great reason for it. Now, Europe, after two years' warfare, is accustomed to plundering. If the United States is not well armed the European powers will insult America.

THE UNITED STATES TO KEEP ITS INTEGRITY MUST ARM. SIMPLY FOR THE SAKE OF DEFENSE MILITARY EXTENSION IS JUSTIFIED.

I read the messages of President Wilson, and the reasons he gave for increased armament seem quite justifiable. In a like manner Japan feels the necessity of maintaining her position in the eyes of the world. Both Europe and America will have to recognize this position in the course of the next half century.

FOR SALE

MOTOR BOAT

AM LEAVING TOWN AND WILL SELL CHEAP FOR CASH

Call 110 ROCHESTER ST.

WANTED

GOOD BRIGHT BOY

Over 16 years of age, to learn Printing Trade. Apply at

THE EVENING TIMES

CHICHESTER S PILLS

THE DIAMOND BRAND.
Ladies! Ask your Druggist for Chi-ches-ter's Diamond Brand Pills in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with Blue Ribbon. Take no other. Buy of your Druggist. Ask for CHI-CHES-TER'S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS, for 25 years known as Best, Safest, Always Reliable

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

RECORD OF GERMAN SUBMARINE'S TRIP

Left Kiel, June 23.

Sighted off Cape May, July 9, at 1:20 a. m.

Reached destination, Baltimore, early to-day.

Travelled 4,100 miles, 1,800 of them under water—an unparalleled feat.

Commanded by Captain Kairig.

Crew of twenty-nine men, all of the German merchant fleet, and not from the navy.

Dodged, or dived under, hundreds of British and French warships blockading German ports. She was chased by others for thirty hours.

She is a merchant super-submarine, the largest submarine in the world, 313 feet long.

She is unarmed.

Cargo, 1,000 tons of dye sauffs.

If found to be unarmed, she will be treated by the United States Government as an ordinary merchant vessel.

She is in excellent condition.

She ran through the North Sea, submerged the entire distance. Two-thirds of he way across the Atlantic Ocean, the sight of a Dutch merchant vessel made her submerge again. Six hundred miles from the Virginia coast, hostile ships made her submerge and go two hundred miles out to sea. Then she plunged back to within one hundred miles of land.

She belongs to the Ocean Transportation Company, the new submarine line.

PARALYSIS DEATHS NOW NUMBER 224

New York—Nineteen deaths from infantile paralysis and eighty-eight new cases of the disease were reported by the city health authorities yesterday. These are smaller totals than have been given out on some previous days.

Totals for the epidemic are 224 deaths and 980 cases.

"I am somewhat encouraged by the figures," said Dr. Haven Emerson, head of the Health Department.

But while the doctor said this much for publication, he subsequently admitted that the dreadful scourage that has been spreading into all the boroughs striking down the brightests and seemingly the strongest little children, is by no means under control.

A new element of danger is made known. It is estimated that perhaps 2,000 "abortive," or less typical, cases of infantile paralysis have not even been reported.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 480 — TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1916 — Price, One Cent

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT ANNOUNCES PAVING

An official announcement from the State Highways department outlines a few facts concerning the two road contracts which will be let this week. The announcement is as follows:

Edwin Duffey, State Commissioner of Highways, will open bids at Albany on July 13 and 14 for the building of two highways in Oswego county. These are the Fulton City, East First street and Richfield Springs-Winfield, Parts 1 and 3.

The Hastings-Parish Highway will begin at a junction with the Central Square-Union Square section of the Syracuse-Watertown trunk line, north of Hastings, and run northeast and northerly to the west corporation line of Parish, thence north and northeasterly to the Parish-Camden road, a distance of 2.04 miles. It will be a fourteen foot bituminous macadam road, composed of a seven inch foundation course of field stone, with a three inch top course of broken stone from the beginning of the contract to the Snell property, and a three inch bottom course for the rest of the work. The steepest grade encountered is 5.6 per cent. for 400 feet east of Carrol's Hotel. The town of Parish will lengthen present abutments eight feet on left and build a thirty foot span bridge over Little Salmon Creek on the Palmer property. Right of way has been secured through the Palmer and Crego property. The estimated cost of this construction is $37,600, and the work is required to be completed by December, 1916.

The Fulton City—East First street highway will start at the brick pavement at Broadway and run north on East First street to the brick pavement at Rochester street. It will be a brick road, thirty-four feet wide, and .36 mile long and will be composed of a four inch concrete foundation with a 1-inch sand cushion. Of this wide the Empire United Railway Company pays for nine feet, the State for sixteen feet and the City for nine feet. This Railway Company will also reconstruct its present track to the new line and grade, including new ballast, ties and rails to conform with the detailed plans approved by the Fulton City Board of Public Works. The steepest grade encountered is 1.72 per cent. for 825 feet, through the City of Fulton from the Bristol property to the Elks' Building. The estimated cost of this construction is $20,500, and the work is required to be completed by October 1, 1916.

On July 10th, 13th and 14th the Commission will receive bids for the building of sixty-three highways in Albany, Cataraugus, Cayuga, Chautauqua, Chemung, Seneca, Clinton, Dutchess, Essex, Fulton, Genesee, Greene, Herkimer, Madison, Monroe, Nassau, Niargara, Oneida, Onondaga, Oswego, Otsego, St. Lawrence, Saratoga, Steuben, Ulster, Wayne and Westchester counties, a distance of 265.10 miles.

CHILD IS QUARANTINED

Dr. A. L. Hall, city health officer took the first step in a campaign to prevent an epidemic of infantile paralysis in this city yesterday, when he isolated a child who came to this city from Roslyn, L. I., where, in a population of 1,000 people, there are six cases of the dread disease. The child came here with her parents for a short visit with friends, and in accordance with a request that the arrival of all children from New York, Brooklyn and vicinity be reported to him, neighbors notified Dr. Hall. While her mother was positive that the child had not been exposed to contagion within the past two weeks, Dr. Hall decided to impose a quarantine as a precautionary measure, and the child's parents offered no objection.

The authorities in New York appear to be slowly gaining control of the epidemic and there were fewer deaths reported yesterday than for any day during the last two weeks. There were 103 new cases of the disease, however, for the same twenty-four hours, and the number of people infected numbers 1,083.

The railroad and transportation companies have joined in the fight against the plague, and all railroad cars running into the city are now being fumigated.

Practically every city in the northern section of the state has decided to impose a strict quarantine on all families who come from the vicinity of New York in an effort to escape the epidemic, in order to prevent the spread of the disease. So far there have been few cases reported north of Albany, but in the past week thousands of children have been taken from New York by their parents, and there is danger that these children may carry the germs of the disease into communities in the northern part of this state.

BROTHER DEAD IN TRENCHES

Mrs. Ellsworth Rude, of South First street, and Russell Brownson, of this city, have received word, through the British War Office and their brother, John J. Brownson, of Nottingham, England, of the death of their youngest brother, Private C. J. Brownson, No. 31973, of X Company, 15th Sherwood Foresters, British General Forces, killed in action somewhere in France on June 14 last. A bare statement of the fact was first received by John Brownson from the War Office and he in turn forwarded the news to his sister in this city.

Young Brownson was in the first line trenches with the British forces, somewhere in the vicinity of the Somme River, where the British and French forces have been engaged in a hard drive against the German trenches for the past month. He was twenty-two years of age, and enlisted in the Foresters Regiment last March. His home was in Nottingham and he was a tailor by trade.

Under the date of May 18, he wrote Mrs. Rude a letter in which he described the situation in the trenches, dwelling particularly on the hot weather that the men were experiencing. He also stated that he was affected in a melancholy way by the fact that the trench in which his company was stationed was in the middle of a large field of graves where thousands of his comrades had been hastily buried with scant ceremony in brief lulls in the fighting. His letter, in accordance with the rules of the War Office, bore no postmark other than that of the Field Postal station, and his survivors have not yet been informed just where he met his death or the actual circumstances connected with it.

In the announcement from the War Office, however, it was stated that he had distinguished himself in the hard fighting against heavy odds, and the only consolation for his family lies in the belief that he fell in the defence of his country and met his fate like a true soldier.

The Brownson family is represented by five young men in the British armies, and two other brothers, of Mrs. Rude, Clarence Brownson and Harold Brownson, are at present doing home duty in England after having been invalided because of wounds. Clarence Brownson nearly lost his eye sight and was badly wounded and cut when a large shell exploded within a few feet of him, and Harold Brownson received

(Continued on Page Eight)

CITY WILL INSTALL NEW STREET MAINS

According to the statements of members of the Board of Public Works last night, there is no indication that the paving of South First street will be interfered with or held up because of the fact that the Syracuse Lakeshore and Northern Railway Company is in bankruptcy, as rumored about the city yesterday. It is a fact that the receivers of the company are unable to take action in paying their share of the paving cost until authorized to do so by Justice Andrews of Supreme Court, who has been handling the litigation cases against the company. Justice Andrews is now seriously ill, but Commissioner H. P. Allen of the Board of Public Works stated last night that he would hold court Saturday according to the latest report, and at that time the paving matter would be brought to his attenion. The commissioner made it plain that the trolley people show no disposition to interfere, but are only waiting on the Justice.

The company will not double track the street, however, principally because there is little money available for the improvement. It is quite likely, moreover, that residents along the thoroughfare would enter an objection to the double tracking, as some were out spoken against it last year.

The assessments against property owners along the street have been approximated, but the definite figures will not be known until the contract cost is announced by the State Highways department Wednesday.

Last night Superintendent Frank Rumsey called the attention of the Board to the necessity for new water and gas mains under the street before the paving begins, so there will be no need of excavating and tearing up the pavement, as was necessary on lower First street, when the public utilities companies wished to put in new mains. He suggestsed that the gas company mains be inspected, and new mains ordered installed if the present pipes are not in first class condition. All property owners along the street have been ordered to make new water and gas connections to the street mains before the paving begins, and as many have failed to comply the city will make these connections and charge the cost to the property owners.

City Engineer Hill suggested that a large "T" connection be made from the water main to the city park tract on the west side of the street, so that a pipe may be run along the park, if necessary, in the future.

Mr. Rumsey announced that the oiling of West Third street would begin today. Several blocks throughout the city have been oiled, but no single street has been completed as yet. The use of crushed stone and tar in building around high man-holes was advocated by Mr. Rumsey at last night's meeting.

President Wiltsie stated that the Western Union Telegraph Company, through its local agent, had renewed its application for permission to hang a street sign in front of its offices on South First street. When this matter was brought to the attenion of the Board some time ago, a blanket resolution was passed stipulating that all merchants and business houses who now have signs hanging above the walk should be ordered to file a bond protecting the city from damage suits in case of accident. Accordingly, the Western Union Company will be permitted to erect the sign as soon as an indemnifying bond is filed with the city clerk.

Dr. Cusack was given permission to move the Woodbury house from its present location on Academy street to a lot on Seneca street, between Fifth and Sixth streets. Permission was given the Seventh Day Adventists to erect a sign of welcome at the intersection of the sidewalks at South Fifth street and Broadway.

Because of the absence of W. S. Hillick, city attorney, who was out of the city yesterday and did not return last night, several other matters which were under consideration were tabled until the next meeting.

FULTONIANS ATTEND OSWEGO CARNIVAL

Many Fultonians went to Oswego last night for the opening of the Eagles' carnival, which will continue all week, on the outskirts of the city. The Old Home Week celebration here last week was well attended by Oswegonians and the people of this city are cordially invited to return the compliment during the carnival.

The Great Ruby Shows, numbering twelve attractions, are furnishing the amusement features at the carnival, and Henry (Iron-Neck Hank) Mott, of this city, who recently became a benedict, is the star attraction with the athletic show. Mott meets all comers on the mat, and in a long tour of the east has only twice lost the forfeit money which he offers to any man who can stay three minutes with him without being thrown. Last night, Mott easily disposed of two Oswego lads who tried to win the forfeit money, and then took on John Ward of this city, an old training partner. Ward surprised the crowd and Mott by quickly throwing the challenger.

Several automobile parties of Fulton people were in evidence about the carnival grounds, and a large number enjoyed supper at the Pontiac before returning home.

SALOONS CLOSED IN HONOR OF WALTER J. BOOMER

All the saloons and cafes were closed from 2 to 3:30 o'clock today in honor of the memory of Walter J. Boomer, who died last Sunday.

WOODBURY CAPTURES SWARM OF BEES

While superintending the work of several men in a muck field along the West River road yesterday afternoon, W. L. Woodbury of this city noticed a large swarm of thousands of bees fly overhead and gather on a branch of a nearby tree. As an experienced apiarist, Mr. Woodbury took certain precautionary measures and then with the assistance of some of the men, cut off the branch of the tree and brought the bees to his home in this city, where he succeeded in hiving them last night. He was offered $5 for the hive by Leon M. Yandoh of the west side who has several bee hives on his property, who stated that the swarm would probably produce all of one hundred pounds of honey.

ELKS TO ATTEND THE BOOMER FUNERAL

The members of Fulton Lodge, B. P. O. E., will meet at the lodge rooms this afternoon at two o'clock, and march in a body to the home of the late Walter J. Boomer, one of the charter members of the Fulton lodge, who died Sunday. The Elks will attend the funeral services at the house, and will then march with the funeral cortege to the grave in Mt. Adnah cemetery, where they will hold their ritual service over the remains. All members of the lodge have been notified to be present and it is probable that a large delegation will turn out to honor Mr. Boomer's memory.

THREE DISTRICTS TO MEET IN PRAYER

The following district prayer meetings are announced for this week: District 30, will meet at the home of Mrs. Fred Beck, Park avenue and Beech street, Wednesday evening at eight o'clock.

District 24, at the home of Mrs. Spaulding, West Second street, Wednesday evening.

District 1, at the home of Mrs. Kampt, Fifth and Fremont street, Wednesday evening. Mr. Candee will act as leader.

EVANGELIST WILL OPEN TENT CAMPAIGN TONIGHT

W. H. Holden, the evangelist, will open a campaign in this city tonight in a large tent at the corner of Fifth street and Broadway. He will be assisted by a corps of workers, including a chorus and Bible study teachers, and the campaign will continue throughout this week, and perhaps longer. There will be a sermon each evening on Biblical subjects, with the exception of Saturday, when there will be no services.

Tonight Mr. Holden's subject is "The Metal Man of Prophecy," a sermon founded on the text of Daniel, "Thou, O King, sawest and behold a great image. This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and arms of silver, his belly and thighs of brass, his legs of iron, his feet part iron and part of clay."

AUTO CLUB MAY RUN TO SKANEATELES

The Fulton Automobile Club will probably hold its first run of the season within the next two weeks, President R. L. McCully stated today. The run has been planned and postponed four times, for various reasons, but with the Old Home Week celebration now off the calendar, the club members hope to be able to get together before the middle of this month.

No destination has yet been decided upon, but Mr. McCully said today the club would probably go to Skaneateles for dinner, as some of the members know of a certain hostelry in that section that dispenses unsurpassable meals, and they are consequently eager to introduce their friends at the resort. The Skaneateles trip will make a tour of just the right length as an appetizer, and the party will probably leave the city about four o'clock in the afternoon. There are fine highways all the way, and Skaneatles has the reputation of being a most enjoyable and hustling little summer resort.

The run committee will meet some time later in the week to complete the final arrangements for the run and to decide on the destination.

(By United Press)

Baltimore—With no restrictions upon them Captain Hughes, U. S. N. and customs men boarded the big German super submarine Deutschland here this afternoon to inspect here for armament.

FIRST MUNICIPAL BAND CONCERT TOMORROW NIGHT

Tomorrow evening the Elks' band will play the first of the series of seven municipal band concerts which will be held in the city during the summer months. Four of these concerts will be held in East Side Park, two on the corner of West Broadway and Second street and one in Triangle Park. The concert tomorrow night will be held in East Side Park.

The band offers an excellent program and the general work of the organization at the present time shows a decided improvement over last year. Most of the band members were well nigh exhausted after the Old Home Week celebration, when they were called upon to play each day for several hours and sometimes twice a day, but many of the members enjoyed a good rest over the week-end at nearby summer resorts and the entire organization was reported in good condition by Manager Richardson this morning. The concert will start tomorrow at eight o'clock sharp, and the program follows:

March—The Southerner ..Alexander
Overture—Pique Dame ...... Suppe
Medley—Overture Remick Hits '16
Descriptive Overture—Death of Custer .... Johnson
Selection—The Princess Pat Herbert
Waltzes—Our Wedding Day
Intermezzo—Gretchen
Selection—The Heart of Paddywhack
Popular Hits—
(a) Two Step—Mother
(b) One Step—Loading up the Mandy Lee

WILLIAM McCORMICK TO ENTERTAIN FRIENDS

W. E. McCormick will entertain a party of friends tomorrow at his summer home at the Smokeless Powder Gun Club north of the city on the Oswego river. Several young ladies from New York city who are guests of Mr. and Mrs. McCormick, and an equal number of Fulton young men, with other friends, will comprise the party.

WILSON WILL TAKE THE STUMP IS REPORT

(By United Press)

New York—That President Wilson is planning to disregard Presidential precedents and make a stumping tour of the country in the interests of his candidacy for re-election became known here today. Democratic national campaign managers refused to discuss the matter today, but it was understood the President's friends have suggested in view of the wide-spread tour planned by Hughes, that Wilson will accept some of the numerous invitations to speak which have been extended to him.

* * *

Washington—Secretary Baker was today called upon by a unanimous vote of the House to answer charges that the railroads have transported the militia to Texas in dilapidated cars, that the men en route have been poorly fed, and that many men left for the mobilization camps improperly equipped. The action was taken on a resolution of Representative Moore of Pennsylvania.

* * *

Washington—Senator Lewis, of Illinois today introduced a resolution directing Secretary Lansing to report to the Senate whether the new Russo-Japanese Alliance is not likely to close the open door to China and result in disaster to American business interests.

* * *

Columbus, N. M.—Massachusetts militiamen saw their first action under fire early today when under Captain Edmund Slate, members of the Holyoke Company on provost duty rushed into a negro disorderly house and halted an incipient riot, after gun play started and one negro was shot. The militiamen quieted the disturbance and arrested six colored infantrymen, who will be tried by court martial.

SALVATION ARMY WILL ENTERTAIN CHILDREN

The annual children's picnic under the auspices of the Salvation Army of this city will be held tomorrow, at North Bay on Lake Neahtowanta. All children who wish to attend the affair are to meet at the Salvation Army headquarters at nine o'clock tomorrow morning. Automobiles furnished by R. L. McCully of VanWagenen, Inc., will take the children to the picnic grounds.

A lunch consisting of sandwiches of all kinds, cakes, melons, bananas and ice cream, will be furnished by the Salvation Army, and the children need bring no lunches. During the day there will be a program of athletic sports, including races, baseball games, swimming contests, and other less strenuous games for the little girls, and competent chaperones will care for the children at all times. There will be plenty of lunch for all, and all children who attend are promised a good time.

Ensign Fitzgerald will be in charge of the affair, and he will be assisted by several members of the Army. The Ensign wishes to correct the impression that the picnic will take place tomorrow afternoon, and stated today that the party will leave tomorrow morning at nine o'clock.

BERLINERS EXPECT NEW PEACE MEASURES

By Carl W. Ackerman, United Press Correspondent

(The first article of its kind to pass the censors.)

Berlin—The great allied offensive will end in defeat within a few weeks and will be followed by negotiations for peace in the opinion of well informed persons in Berlin. The check administered to the British in the death struggle north of the Somme has given rise to the national hope that peace will follow the fighting in Picardy, which has been marked with unprecedented slaughter. The German people are practically a unit in believing that the attempt of the Allies to force the German line is doomed to failure.

* * *

Berlin—Repulse of strong British attacks on both sides of the Bantame-Albert highway between the Antre and the Somme was announced by the War Office this afternoon. Attacking enemy forces were mowed down by German fire before they came to close fighting.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

TUESDAY, JULY 11, 1916

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Buffalo Times:

Commenting on the portion of the new Revenue Bill, wherein it is proposed to double the normal Income Tax rate to meet the cost of preparedness, the New York World, in its leading editorial of last Thursday, declares for the proposition that instead of increasing the Income Tax rate, the levy be made to apply to the great body of the people.

In other words, the World would enlarge not the rate, but the scope, of the Income Tax.

The World continues:

> The fault of the present law is that its exemptions of $3,000 for single and $4,000 for married persons are too large. Before its passage, Representative Hull, its author, predicted that it would reach more than 1,000,000 families. Although figures for the fiscal year 1916 are not yet at hand, only 357,598 paid in 1914 and 357,515 in 1915. Total receipts for individual incomes were $28,253,534 in 1914, $41,046,162 in 1915 and $67,957,488 in 1916.
>
> It is comparatively easy to mark up existing tax rates, but a wiser way would be to find new sources of revenue. In other important countries taxation of incomes begins at a few hundred dollars, below which it is held that the yield does not pay the cost of collection. If we were to begin at $1,000, or possibly $1,500 where children are to be considered, the aggregate proceeds would be very great; the public instruction in responsibility would be even more impressive.
>
> No figures as to the number of persons having incomes of $1,500 are now available at Washington, but it must run into tens of millions. An important suggestion on this point is found in the fact that national bank depositors are in excess of 14,000,000. Making allowance for duplications, it is obvious that persons enjoying such facilities must have incomes of more than $1,500. Hundreds of thousands, probably millions, of prosperous farmers, small merchants and manufacturers, and well paid clerks, professional men and mechanics, would come into the same category.

Finally, the World sums up its argument by declaring that "the income tax should be made to apply to the largest possible number."

The position now taken by our distinguished Democratic contemporary, is precisely in line with the views expressed in the following editorial which appeared in The Buffalo Times nearly six months ago. On the 15th of January last, the Times said:

> It is the belief of The Times that a law making incomes of, say, $1,200 and upward amenable to taxation, would not only be effective, but popular. It would make the man of small income a partner in the government. Every patriotic, self-respecting citizen is willing to do his share in helping pay the cost of running this country. We should say tax incomes below $1,200, or of $1,000 and even less, were it not for the fact that the expense of collecting these taxes would probably be prohibitive.
>
> But on incomes as large as $1,200 collecting would be feasible without burdening the government with a multiplicity of small details. So far from the citizen of moderate income protesting, we believe he would be glad and proud to pay a small tax for the expenses of the government under which he lives.
>
> A tax of one per cent. on an income of $1,200 would be $12 a year. Not one man in a thousand would begrudge that. Such a plan would be truly Democratic in its recognition that the little man financially is every whit as good as the big one. It would increase the interest of citizenship, generally, in the affairs of government. It would give the citizen of small income a stake in seeing that governmental matters are wisely and economically administered. It would be genuinely in accord with the fundamental principles of American institutions. And it is our firm opinion that it would be received with acclaim by a patriotic country, and by none more so than by the very citizens who would thus be taxed.

It is gratifying that the New York World has come to hold the same view. The influence of the World, should, we are sure, go far to bring about a correct solution of this problem.

* * *

Oswego Times:

It is quite an eye-opener to travel around to the summer resorts and see the lavish and enormous palaces built for the summer vacation business. When you consider that most of these places can do a good business not over two to three months in year, it does seem as if many of them must be run at a loss.

Not merely do they have as heavy an operating expense as a fine city hotel, but they must pay interest on capital, depreciation, repairs, and taxes, out of the profits of a very short season. The managements may save something by transferring their force of employes from winter resort houses run alternately with the summer places. But at best there must be long between season periods when things go slow.

The modern wealthy American is a free spender, and he demands and is willing to pay for high standards of service and luxuries. Probably the servants in these places get their pay largely out of the free tipping prevalent, which must help a lot.

Smaller hotels run for people of moderate means look like a less risky proposition. These are very apt to depend for their service on school teachers or college students living near by, who can be hired at moderate rates and need be engaged only for a short season. Their equipment seems rather primitive to people used to high class hotels. There may be no electric bells and the guests may have to depend on oil lamps. But at the present cost of living a great many people are willing to put up with the lack of modern conveniences.

There are thousands of these small hotels in attractive scenes that get just about the same crowd of people year after year. If they provide good home cooking, comfortable beds, pure water, and good sanitation, a great many other lacks are overlooked. People return year after year, and the pleasure of meeting old friends counts more than the niceties of service.

* * *

Rochester Democrat and Chronicle:

Once more has the government shipping bill, the darling of the administration's legislative program, been amended for the purpose of quieting Democratic objections to it in the Senate. The Democratic senators caucused over the bill Sunday, and the statement is made that it will, in its latest form, receive their united support.

The bill, in consequence of the storm of public criticism and the numerous objections made by Democratic members of Congress, now bears little resemblance to the measure with which Secretary McAdoo first dazzled the vision of his fellow Democrats. The important concessions iclude a provision forbidding the purchase, by the government, of ships which fly the flags of nations in Europe now at war. This is a radical departure from the original scheme, which contemplated the purchase of ships now interned in this country.

Another modification forbids the purchase of ships already engaged in American trade. The apparent object of this provision is to guard against government absorption of existing lines. Further, as a protection for private ship owners, it is expressly stipulated that the government shall not attempt to operate merchant ships until after efforts have been made to negotiate satisfactory leases or sales to private corporations.

Since ships cannot be conjured out of the air, even by the genius of Secretary McAdo, the government will have to wait until they can be built before engaging in the shipping business. The war may be over by that time. The government will then find itself owner of a number of vessels, bought when labor and material were at their highest point, and which will naturally have to be sold at a loss. The bill, however, if it becomes a law, will enable government bureaucrats to gratify their instinct for meddling with private concerns, for it embodies provsions which give them authority to undertake the regulation of rates of all shipping lines entering American ports, no matter where owned.

Success on the Farm Demands a Knowledge of Agricultural Science

By Dr. PHILANDER PRIESTLY CLAXTON, United States Commissioner of Education

THE successful farmer of today must know underlying principles; must not only know what to do, but why it is done. This knowledge can be had only through the schools.

We should have vocational efficiency without decreasing the degree of culture. Culture does not come through studying any one subject. I have known a gentleman farmer and a highly cultured blacksmith. It is the result of an attitude toward life. I have no sympathy with the philosophy that thinks of the man who handles clods as being himself a clod. THOSE PERSONS WHO LIVE IN THE COUNTRY MUST BE CITIZENS—MUST HELP DIRECT THE AFFAIRS OF THE NATION.

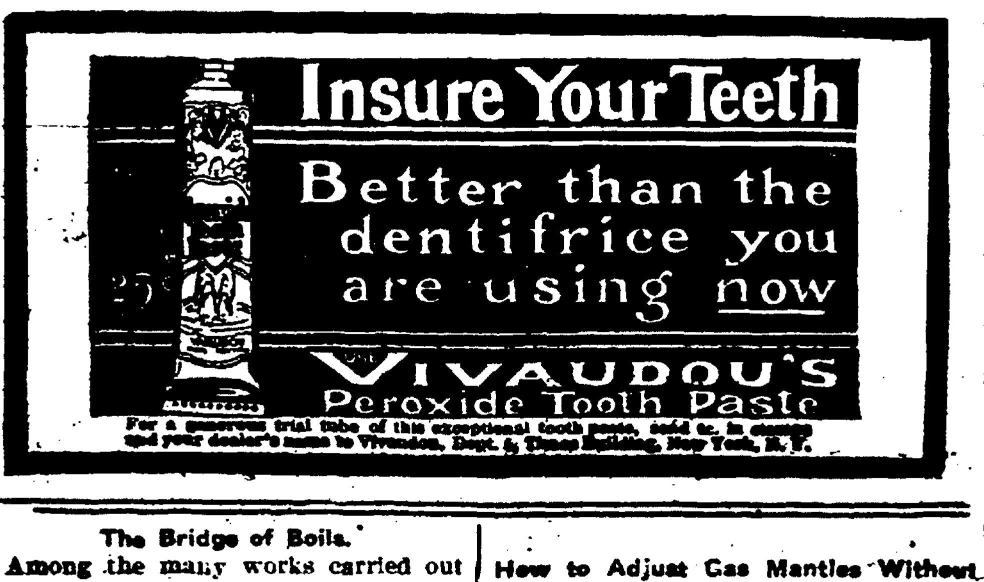
Every man who has a piece of land must know his land—know its possibilities. Whatever knowledge a farmer has should be applied to his farm. The farmer must know a soil—know its chemistry. He must know how to select seeds, how to plant, cultivate, protect against insect pests and diseases and how to harvest the crop.

The farmer must be a good machinist, a pretty good engineer, an architect and a good accountant and bookkeeper.

The farmer's wife should know these things, as her husband may be taken away and the responsibility of the farmer and care of the children thrust upon her. She should know how to feed the children a balanced ration.

The value of land is based upon the use man can make of it.

IT IS INTELLIGENCE THAT MAKES RAW MATERIAL VALUABLE. NATIVE ABILITY, NATURAL RESOURCES AND ACQUIRED ABILITY ARE THE FACTORS THAT MAKE MATERIAL WEALTH.



The Bridge of Boils.

Among the many works carried out by the late Sir John Aird is the most oddly named bridge in the world. This is in Peru, on the railway from Lima to Oroya, spanning a deep and precipitous chasm over 600 feet wide and resting on three gigantic piers.

Many of the men employed on the work were ex-sailors, whose training enabled them to work at dizzy heights Although the work was necessarily of a most dangerous character, there were comparatively few accidents.

But an epidemic of bubonic plague broke out. So the bridge was officially christened Puente de las Verrugas, or Bridge of Boils, a name which it still retains.—Exchange.

His Speculations.

"How did old Rox get rich?"

"Speculating. He's been married four imes."—Life.

How to Adjust Gas Mantles Without Puncturing Them.

You should learn to adjust your own gas mantles instead of sending for a man and paying anything from 30 to 50 cents for them. They can be bought for 10 cents and are easily adjusted. After fitting the mantle over the burner the principal thing to do is to "burn" the mantle as soon as it is adjusted. Apply a match and don't be startled when the whole mantle flames up. The coating is simply burning off—a necessary operation.

How Windows Can Be Frosted by the Householder.

Make a clear solution of gum arabic. dissolve enough epsom salts to make a strong solution and add to the gum arabic. Apply this mixture to the glass with a small brush.

A TRUCELESS WAR

The Unending Struggle Between the Sea and the Shore.

VICTORIES ON BOTH SIDES

Sometimes the Ocean Lashes Its Way Through Rocky Cliffs, and Sometimes the Wind and Land Combine to Beat the Billows Back to Defeat.

It is a truceless war that the waters of the world are waging against its lands. John Oliver LaGorce, associate editor of the National Geographic society, has prepared for that institution a study of this striking struggle between the earth and the sea with the shores lines of the world as the far flung theater of war.

After calling attention to the fact that the processes which have transformed the polar regions from dense jungles of tropical growth into lands of perpetual ice and snow, which have brought the tops of mountains to the bottom of the sea and the bottom of the sea to the tops of mountains, are still going on, although the hands upon the face of the clock of geology move so slowly that we cannot perceive their movement, Mr. LaGorce continues:

"Along every coast line on the face of the earth there is perpetual warfare between the land and the sea, with the wind as the shifting line, now throwing its weight into the balance on the one side and now on the other. Here the land is taking the offensive, driving the sea back foot by foot, always with the aid of the wind; there the sea marshals a great drive and eats its way landward slowly and laboriously, but none the less successfully.

"The varying fortunes of this relentless and age long war which neither truce nor treaty will ever bring to an end can be read in the shifting sands of the seashore. At many points along the coast of the northeastern states are found bold cliffs, and the charging sea attacks them with the shot and shell of loose shingle. Some of them, however, are adamant and impregnable in their frontal fortifications and hold out against the sorest siege, but between them have occurred stretches of softer rock which have been literally pounded to dust by the ocean's heavy artillery, thus permitting flank attacks on the hitherto unconquered defenses.

"Along the southeastern coast, however, the rock bound cliff is the exception and the long stretches of glittering sand the rule. Here the sandy beach reaches out farther and farther into the sea, and the water is thus enabled to penetrate farther and farther into the land because the attack of the sea is usually a frontal movement and that of the land frequently a wedge attack. Thus we can account for the long straight shore on the one hand and the split on the other.

"The formation of the beach immediately guarded by the Cape Henry light is not changing so rapidly as is the case only a few miles on either side because of its somewhat protected position, due to the many sand bars or reefs far out from shore which, acting as the first trenches, serve to break the charge of the white horses of Father Neptune as they dash in from the ocean, and because of this knowledge of defense, it is plain to be seen that a good quarter of a mile of beach has been added by the defender since the old light was erected.

"Rockaway beach, Long Island, grows westward at the rate of nearly a mile every twenty years. At Nag Head, N. C., the land has extended into the sea at the rate of thirty-five feet a year. In 1804 Dr. Nathaniel Bowditch prepared a chart of Salem and Marblehead harbors, giving the soundings over various ledges of rock. Ninety years later similar soundings were taken, and in all cases the water was found to be considerably deeper, once again telling the tale of endless warrings.

"On the shore of Cape Cod, near Chatham, the land is retreating at the rate of a foot a year, and on the southern shore of Marthas Vineyard it is giving up the fight to the enemy at the rate of three feet every twelve months, while on the southern face of Nantucket the retreat has been as much as six feet a year, the records tell us.

"In its incessant warfare against the land the sea literally takes its captured hosts and makes them do battle under its command. The bowlders that are shattered from the face of a cliff are dashed up against it again and again, hammering others loose, the while being worn round and smooth as the projectile of big guns must be. As the process goes on these huge shells are worn down and crumbled until there remains nothing to tell the story of forced fighting against their own stronghold save grains of sand on some distant beach or the soft carpet spread upon the floor of the sea many fathoms deep.

"How rapidly this process goes on is sometimes strikingly shown. A schooner laden with bricks is beached on some bare shore in a storm. These bricks are rolled and tumbled a distance of five miles or so in the course of a year, and by that time attrition has usually completed its work. Authorities say that on the shores of Cape Ann a fragment of stone as big as a nail keg has been worn completely round by its constant turning during the course of but five years."

A propensity to hope and joy is real riches, one to fear and sorrow real poverty.—Hume.

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

Left Behind

His wistful eyes are dim with tears,
His heart is lead today,
As forth amid the shouts and cheers
The soldiers march away.
They're off to great Adventure's shore,
The true romance to find;
They're answering the call of war
And leaving him behind.

Ah! Why must he stand idly there
All hope of glory gone,
A sorry figure of despair
While they go marching on?
Why must the cruel hand of chance
Stretch forth, so stern and grim?
Why must the country of romance
Deny its door to him?

But every hero may not share
The great and splendid deeds
Of those who nobly do and dare
To serve their nation's needs.
And though the savage battle light
Still beckons him away,
He's just a little young to fight—
He's eight years old today!

—James J. Montague in New York American.

GERMAN SOLDIER FOUGHT IN TWO ARMIES OF ALLIES

Deserted Both Teuton and French and Joined Belgian Forces.

The record of Max Kohler, a clever and crafty German, aged twenty-six, who made a brief appearance at Marlborough street police court, London, is interesting. His record follows:

Served in the German army and deserted.

Served in the French army and deserted.

Joined the Belgian army.

Married a French girl in Paris two years ago.

Married an English girl six months ago.

Was being taken from England to France as a deserter in the Sussex when she was torpedoed.

Was rescued and taken to Folkestone, where he escaped rearrest and went to London.

Worked in the west end and was again arrested when he admitted that he was a German.

Kohler speaks English, French and German fluently.

At the age of twenty Kohler was called up for service in the German army, but after a few weeks' service he deserted from the army and made his way to England and then to America. He served in a weird variety of occupations. He is an electrician by profession, but he has been a sailor, a mechanic, a waiter, a pantryman, a fitter and an associate of criminals.

From America he went to France and for some time lived in Paris, where he was captivated by crime. Bonnot, the famous motorcar bandit, was one of his friends. A few months before war broke out he married a French girl in Paris. He joined the French army at the outbreak of war and was among the first troops to be sent to the front. On the very first day he was in action—Aug. 22, 1914. He was reported to be missing, and later it was found that he had deserted and had been taken by the Germans at Charleroi. He told them he was a German and persuaded them to allow him to make his way through Belgium to Holland.

He then saw a chance of going to England. He posed as a Belgian refugee and as such was admitted. He visited several towns in England and Scotland, where he obtained employment in a well known munition works. That was in the early part of 1915.

In Newcastle he made the acquaintance of the daughter of the foreman of one of the departments in the munition works, proposed to her, was accepted and they were married about six months ago.

NEW STYLES FOR MEN.

A Novelty Resembles the Fatigue Hat of National Guardsmen.

Fashions for men have begun to take a surprising turn. From Spain recently came something quite new in the form of the sandal coat, which, according to prediction, will be popular when the hot weather sets in. And now a new style hat for men has been found to rival the old standby sailor. It made its appearance in New York, where it attracted considerable attention.

The new model is very like the broad, flat fatigue hat of the national guardsmen. The hats were seen on five or six fashionably dressed men. These hats are being sold in some Fifth avenue shops, where it was stated that they were originated to supplant the Mexican sombrero.

IS "CHARLES EVANS" NO. 1.

Bridgeport (Conn.) Baby Was Born Day Justice Was Nominated.

With returns from many other cities still missing, it was estimated at the Hughes campaign headquarters that Bridgeport, Conn., deserved the honor of having the first baby named for the Republican candidate.

The youngster is Charles Evans Williams. He was born the day Mr. Hughes was nominated. A letter from the father was received by Mr. Hughes imparting the joyful information. The candidate replied, saying he hoped Charles Evans Williams would some day be a presidential candidate himself.

PUT ON YOUR THINKING CAP!

Realize what it means to have a Home Daily giving you the Latest

LOCAL & TELEGRAPHIC NEWS SERVICE

---later by Three Hours than you can get in any newspaper circulating in this city, and you don't have to wade through a mass of reading to get what you want.

You get what you want in tabloid form in---

FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Mr. Patterson's Surprise

By ETHEL HOLMES

Patterson was going home one night from his club. On passing a house standing alone and well back from the street he saw the flash of a dark lantern in the back yard. It was instantaneous, but it was enough to suggest to him that he had hit upon a job of housebreaking. He ensconced himself behind a tree box and watched. The flash was repeated, and this time he saw by it a man opening a window with a jimmy. The man holding the lantern was in darkness. The man with the jimmy, having made an opening for himself, clambered in, and all was dark again.

At that moment a policeman entered the grounds where the robbery was being committed. He made no sound in his rubber boots, which added to the midnight uncanny flavor of the proceeding. The cop disappeared toward the rear. Patterson's curiosity was aroused. He wanted to see the result. Following the policeman, he entered the yard and concealed himself behind a bush. Occasionally there were flashes of light, some of them very brilliant, which indicated that there were a number of burglars or policemen, probably the latter. Patterson concluded that the cops were surrounding the house. He surmised that he would be one of the cordon and would be in at the capture. What puzzled him were the occasional flashes of brilliant light. Surely the cops would not have used such illumination unless they had their prey secure.

Patterson advanced toward the house and at one of the bright flashes saw that he was one of the ring of policemen that was surrounding the house. But the flash was so brief that he had not time to notice how the city's guardians looked upon a civilian joining in with them in a duty. Suddenly the house was illuminated. Evidently the police had cornered the burglars, and there was no further occasion to work in the dark. Patterson was standing near a door opening on to a side porch. A girl in night clothes stood in the hall, looking very much frightened and apparently not knowing which way to turn. Then seeing Patterson she ran to him and threw herself into his arms.

Patterson stood dumfounded for a moment; then surmising that there was a fight in the house between the police and the burglars, and if so it was no place for a woman in night clothes, picked up the girl and started for the street. He had no difficulty in finding his way, for he was moving in an intense light.

"Put me down," said the girl sharply when they reached the sidewalk. Patterson obeyed. The girl opened the gate and ran like a deer back to the house. He could not see what she did when she reached it, for the bright light being shut off made the darkness darker.

"By gum!" exclaimed Patterson. "I've heard of horses running into a burning stable, but never have I dreamed of a girl so crazed as to run into a building where robbers were disputing with the police!"

He was about to retrace his steps that he might see the end of the affair when a man came from the house to where he was standing. Patterson judged from his appearance that he was neither a cop nor a burglar. He was evidently looking for some one. Patterson, who was standing in shadow, slipped out into the light. As soon as the man saw him he said gruffly:

"Oh, here you are, are you? You're the man who has been interfering in what doesn't concern you. Move on."

"I should like to know," Patterson was beginning, but the man gave him a push, and Patterson, who was not fond of fighting to have his own way, concluded that he had better go home. On reaching his room he lighted a cigarette and, throwing himself on to a lounge, gave himself up to going over the strange adventure. He could not make head or tail of it.

Not long after that Patterson and his girl were at the movies. Patterson was a swell and his girl a high stepper. The performance was sensational. In one of the productions Patterson saw a flash picture of a burglar opening a window. It seemed familiar to him. The next thing he knew there he was on the screen carrying a girl in her nightclothes in his arms. Then he and the girl were given in a close up picture. The expression on his face in the photograph was such as to set the audience laughing. The expression on her face was one of horror. A few minutes later Patterson's girl arose and swept out of the theater. He followed her and attempted to get into the carriage with her, but she slammed the door, and the driver started up the horses.

So many emotions conflicted in Patterson's brain that for awhile he failed to get on to an explanation of his being the hero of a moving picture play. But gradually the matter became clear in his brain. He had evidently got into the field of the camera ahead of the man that was to have played the part, and perhaps the fellow, seeing his place taken, had held back. Whether the girl thought him the right man to carry her away or made a virtue of necessity was a question.

Patterson's girl, on seeing him a movie actor, had supposed he had deceived her as to his calling; hence her indignation. Patterson spent a month trying to get an interview with her and another month persuading her to believe his story. However, he made it up with her at last.

Days You'll Never Forget

THE DAY YOU FRIGHTENED "AUNT MANDY" WITH THE EMPTY BABY CARRIAGE

BUFFALO & CLEVELAND

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.

"CITY OF ERIE" —— 3 Magnificent Steamers —— "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Nov. 15th—CLEVELAND

Leave Buffalo . . 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland . . 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Cleveland . . 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo . . 7:30 A. M.
(Eastern Standard Time)

Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, ... Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. ...

Beautifully colored sectional puzzle chart ... of The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE" sent on receipt of five cents to cover postage and mailing. Also ask for our 24-page pictorial and descriptive booklet free.

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

SEND THAT NEXT PRINTING ORDER TO THE JOB PRINTING DEPT. THAT WILL GIVE YOU HIGHEST QUALITY LOWEST PRICES & SUPERIOR SERVICE

WE ARE NOW READY TO EXECUTE YOUR WORK

PROMPTLY

AND WILL APPRECIATE YOUR PATRONAGE

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Telephone 45

SECRETS OF SPACE

What Might Be Revealed If Nature Lifted the Veil.

WONDERS OF THE INVISIBLE.

Evidence That What We Call the Universe Is Only a Part of a Far Grander and Perhaps Infinite System of Suns and Worlds and Planets.

Men of science have found reasons for believing that there may be, far off in infinite space, other material systems besides the one visible to us. We seem to be able with modern telescopes to reach the boundaries or farthest limits of the stellar system to which our sun belongs.

It is found that with increase of distance the relative number of stars decreases until, in most directions at least, a point is reached beyond which virtually no more stars can be seen. Then, too, it has been found that the stellar system has a fairly definite shape—a fact which in itself implies boundaries. The shape is that of a vast spiral, with curving arms surrounding a central agglomeration. If you will imagine floating in the middle of the room where you sit a roughly globular swarm of bright particles, distributed with a fair degree of uniformity as to distance from one another, and then outside of the swarm surrounding it, but separated from it by a space which is nearly but not quite empty, an irregular spiral ring of similar shining particles, you will have before you a picture of one of the latest astronomical conceptions of the form of the visible universe.

The central swarm will represent the assemblage of stars of which our sun is a modest member, while the enveloping spiral will represent the immense system of the Milky way, whose stars are vastly more numerous than those composing the globular swarm. The stars of the Milky way are the most distant members of the entire system, which appears to be shut in all around by black space. Viewed from afar off in the ebon depths of that space, this universe of ours would resemble a phosphorescent jellyfish, with faintly sparkling tentacles, afloat in the sea of immensity.

This being so, the question naturally arises, May there not be, or must there not be, an indefinite number of other such systems scattered through the limitless expanse of space? That question would forever remain a matter of pure conjecture if we did not have certain very suggestive facts which seem to indicate that it ought to be answered in the affirmative.

The facts of which I speak are objects of visual observation. But that does not necessarily make them parts of the "visible universe," because they appear to be unconnected with it and to lie beyond its boundaries.

These objects are known as spiral nebulae. The photographs that have been made of them in the past few years are simply amazing. The forms of many are surprisingly like that which has been described above as characterizing the stellar system. They have central agglomerations with enveloping spirals. They have knots of light which recall the globular clusters of stars found in the visible universe, but they are so distant that no separate stars can be detected in them.

They look like masses of more or less condensed glowing gas, but the spectroscope shows that the light coming from them is not that which is characteristic of gaseous nebulae, but that which belongs to true stars. The influence is that these wonderful objects may actually be other universes lying out in the ocean of space beyond our shores.

This inference is strengthened by what we know of the distance of some of these objects. The utmost diameter of the great spiral of the Milky way probably does not exceed from 4,000 to 6,000 "parsecs," or from 800 to 1,200 million times the earth's distance from the sun. A parsec, which corresponds to a parallax of one second of arc, equals about 19,000,000,000,000 (nineteen trillion) miles. But some of the spiral nebulae appear to be at least 10,000 parsecs distant.

If that is so there exists between them and the outer frontiers of the visible universe a gap far broader than the entire diameter of that universe. It can hardly be supposed, then, that they are outlying parts of or attendants upon our universe, but it is much more reasonable to conclude that they are other universes constructed on a similar plan, but so far away that as viewed with our utmost visual powers, our mightiest telescopes, they are but gleaming specks! Perhaps the nearest of these strange objects is the Andromeda nebula, which, in a small telescope, looks like a faint spindle shaped wisp.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

Vengeance on the Caddie.

"What! Buying more golf clubs? I thought you had a pretty complete outfit before."

"I have, but that caddie of mine had the nerve to snigger when I topped my drive yesterday, and I'm going to make him carry double weight."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Happiness.

Happiness is that single and glorious thing which is the very light and sum of the whole animated universe, and where she is not it is better that nothing should be.—Colton.

The most completely lost of all days is the one on which we have not laughed.—Chamfort.

Local and Personal

Dr. H. J. Terpening and family of West Broadway, are enjoying a vacation at Ira Hill.

* * *

Len Nealis, of Ilion is spending a few days with his sisters in this city.

* * *

Leonard B. Hotchkiss, of Buffalo, is the guest of his uncle, James W. Bogue, of South First street.

* * *

Mayor Lewis and W. S. Hillick, city attorneys are in Buffalo in attendance at the great convention of Shriners in that city, but are expected to return tonight, in time for the meeting of the Common Council.

* * *

The vestrymen of the Zion church will meet tomorrow night to decide on plans for the annual church picnic which will be held within the next two weeks.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Flaxington and daughter, Dorothy, Mrs. Frank Sheldon and Mrs. William Townsend, of Syracuse, were the guests last week of Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Hall and Mrs. E. W. Flaxington.

* * *

The alumni of Fulton High school will meet tonight at the Library at 7:30 o'clock, and all graduates of the school are urged to be present. Plans for a large reunion of all graduating classes for the past twenty years will be discussed.

* * *

The Delta Alpha class of the Congregational Church will hold its monthly meeting Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Fred Jones, 465 West First street.

* * *

Mrs. Harvey VanBuren is rapidly recovering from a serious illness.

* * *

John J. McGinnis and family are summering at Mexico Point.

* * *

F. G. Dolbear lost a valuable horse Sunday through illness.

* * *

Frank Blake has returned home from a visit to Stapleville, Mass.

* * *

Mrs. D. C. Ives is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Homer Ive of this city.

* * *

A daughter, Vernice Jennie, was born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Troup, of Atlantic avenue, city.

* * *

M. A. Stranahan has returned from a week's vacation in Rome, Utica and Sylvan Beach. Mr. Stranahan conferferred with several political leaders in the southern part of the state during his absence, regarding plans for the fall gubernatorial campaign.

To The Republican Electors of Oswego County:

Inspired by my training and experience and by most satisfactory reports of the various accountants, municipal examiners and committees that have examined the finances of the County and the system used by me in the County Treasurer's Office, I believe that I can conscientiously ask you to support me as a candidate for renomination for County Treasurer. If you approve my efforts in behalf of the taxpaying public and my record as County Treasurer, I urge you to attend the Primaries on September 19, 1916, and give me your valuable assistance.

Appreciating your good will, I remain

The People's humble servant,

Paid Advertisement. HERMAN W. KANDT.

BIBLE STUDY HEADS WILL MEET FRIDAY

There will be a meeting of the Central Bible study class at the Presbyterian church parlors Friday evening, July 14, at 7:45 o'clock. E. R. Redhead will be the leader.

The president, secretary and leader of each Bible study district constitute the Central class, and the attendance of all members is especially desired.

Goldfish.

Goldfish were first discovered in China, whence they were carried to Europe in the seventeenth century.

"FIGHTING SIXTY-NINTH" OFFICERS DROPPED

(By United Press)

Camp Whitman—As Colonel Conley and Lieutenant Col. Phelan of the 69th Regiment were boarding their trains to leave for the border with their troops today they were handed an order from Major General Wood instructing that they be immediately mustered out of the Federal service. Physical disability was given as the reason. The order was transmitted here by telephone. The great feeling was evidenced by some of the officers. Conley was greatly upset a declared he believed the action due to politics or a desire of the regular army to grab the National Guard.

IMPROVEMENT OF ONEIDA STREET WAS DISCUSSED

The resurfacing of Oneida street from South Second street to the city limits was informally discussed last night at the meeting of the Board of Public Works. Some sections of the street are now in a bad condition, and some action must be taken in the very near future if the street is to be maintained in first class shape.

It was suggested last night that a top coat of broken stone with an oil dressing be laid the entire width of the street, and that the present brick gutters be torn up. At the present time, the macadam center of the street wears down below the level of the brick gutters and a long groove, which catches the wheels of vehicles, results.

As there is little money in the treasury for street improvements no immediate action in the matter is expected, and the sentiments of property owners along the street will be sounded before the matter is given the official attention of the Board.

BERNHARD'S BAY

Miss Lillian Slater, of Fernwood, is a guest of Miss Edith Barry.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Montonda and son, Glen, of Syracuse, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Winn. The trip was made by auto and Mrs. Florence Cook accompanied them to Syracuse, returning Monday.

* * *

Harvey Deline, of Syracuse, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Deline.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Parker and daughter, Henrietta, of Oneida, spent last week at the Parker house. Their sister accompanied them.

* * *

Miss Mildred Marsden spent several days with Miss Inez Reed at Constantia.

* * *

Miss Lula Taft was married to Mr. Arthur Davis, Saturday, July 2. They went to the Adirondacks on a short wedding trip.

Heading Him Off.

Mr. Slowgait (about to propose; time, 11 p. m.)—I am about to say something, Miss Chillington, that I should have said some time ago. Look into my eyes and tell me if you cannot guess what it is. Miss Chillington (suppressing a yawn)—You look as sleepy as I feel, so I suppose you must be going to say "Good night."—London Stray Stories.

He Found A Watch

And Received the Reward He Wished For

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Simpson was walking on the street one afternoon in a portion of the city devoted to residences. The sidewalks were broad and laid between grass plots. In the grass on one side he saw something sparkle. Going to it he took up a gold hunting watch. The first thing that Simpson did was to press the spring to open the lid over the face.

He caught his breath. Inside the lid was a photograph of the face of a young girl and so pretty that Simpson would have given his head for one kiss of the original. The watch was of good size and evidently belonged to a man. A pang shot through the finder as it occurred to him that the girl was the betrothed of the owner of the watch.

On the outside of the case, in a smooth space within the chasing, were the initials "H. F. L." "That's the guy that owns the watch and the girl, too, I suppose," muttered Simpson to himself. "I can find out who he is through the directory or possibly the telephone book. I don't mind returning the watch, but I'd like to keep the picture."

He went to the nearest drug store, where he took down the telephone book, turned to "L" and began to run his eyes down the names, keeping them open for the three letters on the watch. It was a long hunt, for there were more than a thousand surnames beginning with "L," and in this case the second letter in the surname was at the lower end of the alphabet. It was "o." The name with the letters "H. F." before it was Loring. Henry F. Loring corresponded with the letters on the watch and it was probable that this Loring was the owner. His residence was on an eminently respectable street, and very likely he was one of the upper ten thousand.

Simpson was in no hurry to return the watch because the picture went with it, and the oftener he looked at it the more he was infatuated with it. But conscience, combined with a desire to find the original, compelled him to look for an advertisement of the lost property, and at last one met his eye. A reward was offered if the watch was delivered at the office of the newspaper containing the ad.

Simpson was not to be put off in this way. He walked past Mr. Loring's residence and asked a cop on the beat who lived there and what persons constituted the family. He was pleased to learn that Mr. Loring was its head. This was all he elicited or needed. Mr Loring was doubtless the father of the girl whose picture had enthralled Simpson instead of being her lover.

What luck!

Simpson went home, took down his telephone book and learned the Loring number. Then he called for it.

"Is Miss Loring at home?" he asked.

"Hold the wire."

In a few moments a feminine voice asked what was wanted.

"I have found a watch with the initials 'H. F. L.' on the case. Has any one of your family lost a watch?"

"Isn't that lovely! Mamma, papa's watch has been found!" Then again in the transmitter, "There's a reward offered"—

"Never mind that. I wish first to establish the fact that the property belongs to your family. Can you identify it in any way?"

"Yes; there is a photograph inside the case."

"Of a very lovely girl?"

"Oh, no, not that; only a girl!"

"Then it can't be the watch you suppose it to be. The photograph is surely that of an angel. Sorry. I suppose I must look further for the owner."

There was no reply to this. So Simpson began again:

"I might take the watch to your house, and if the photograph appears to be a likeness of one of your family that would prove property."

Quite likely by this time the girl had got on to Simpson's facetious manner of returning the watch and proposed to play him at his own game.

"If the photograph is that of an angel there is no use of bringing it here. There's no angel in this house."

Simpson was a gentleman and remembered that such a dialogue forced unnecessarily on a young lady by a stranger—indeed, one she could not even see—was impertinent. He must be cautious or he would get himself shut off.

"Are your father's initials 'H. F. L.?'" he asked.

"They are."

"Then the watch must belong to him. It is not for me to suggest the manner of its return. I am George Simpson, Athenaeum club. Unless I hear from some one of your family soon I shall send it by messenger to your house."

"I'll tell papa. Thank you very much."

"Goodby."

"Goodby."

Simpson flattered himself that he had made a very good bid for an introduction. He could scarcely be accused of transcending the proper limits. He was not supposed to know that the person at the phone was the original of the photograph. He had got in a fine compliment without offense. He had given his address and could only await the issue.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Wanted—Middle aged woman for general house work. Good wages, no children. Apply at5 North Third street, city. tf

Wanted—Good bright boy, over 16 years of age, to learn the printing trade. Apply at the Evening Times. tf

Wanted—At No. 216 Utica street, a girl for general housework. No washing or ironing. tf

Anyone desiring Cherries for canning should address C. W. Streeter, Phone 1272. 483

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

For Sale—A good E. M. F. Touring Car, for $175. Van Wagenen, Inc. 483

Teamster Wanted—Steady work winter and summer; good wages. John W. Pratt farm. tf

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

Wanted Boarders—Desirable rooms, good board, price reasonable. 420 Seneca street. Mrs. Lamb. 484

For Sale—A good Overland car for $200. Van Wagenen, Inc. 483

Wanted—Wonman for general house work, good wages, family of three. Apply at Times office between 10 and 12 a. m. 481c

For Sale Cheap—One Roll Top Desk. The Morrill Press. 482

Young Men Wanted to learn the restaurant business. Those who have had experience in some kind of clerking preferred. Employment in our New York restaurants, $7 or $8 per week with board to start. Railroad fare reimbursed after having been in our service for six months. Good opportunity for the right young men to become managers in a reasonable length of time. Apply in person or by mail to H. Morris, Supt., care of Thompson's Restaurant, Grand Central Station, New York city.

For Sale—A good Maxwell touring car for $250. Van Wagenen, Inc. 483

Modern Woodmen to Meet.

All members of the Modern Woodmen of America are requested to meet at the camp rooms to-night at 8 o'clock, to go in a body to review the remains of Clyde Bowers, brother of Neighbor William Bowers.

MANUFACTURERS HERE; INSPECT FULTON SITES

A party of manufacturers from a nearby city were in town today in consultation with Willis Morin, president of the Chamber of Commerce, and O. S. Bogardus of Whitaker & Bogardus, Inc., with a view to locating a plant here. Mr. Morin and Mr. Bogardus escorted the visitors through the city, explained the advantages of Fulton to them, and offered several sites for the consideration of the men.

Both Mr. Morin and Mr. Bogardus refused to divulge the names of the visiting manufacturers or the nature of the industries which are to be brought here in the event that the men decide to locate in the city. While no definite answer was given by the visitors today, Mr. Bogardus and Mr. Morin were both optimistic regarding the chances of securing the industries. It was stated unofficially that the prospective plant would be a large one and would employ in the neighborhood of 350 skilled hands.

Seed Buckwheat

Buckwheat has been a good paying crop for several years. On account of unusual weather conditions this Spring, many acres intended for oats will now be sown to Buckwheat. Seed will be scarce. Buy early. Recleaned seed—$1.00 per bushel. Careful attention to shipping orders.

GILBERT & NICHOLS CO.
Fulton, N. Y.

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

The Loveless Match.

"So you're going to take him for better or worse?" "No—I'm going to take him for more or less."—Exchange.

HACK LICENSE IS WORTHLESS

Fulton automobile livery companies who paid $50 of their good money into the city treasury ostensibly for a license to carry passengers in the city, are wondering whether the money was simply a gift to the city, or is regarded as an evidence of good will. When the city ordinance setting the taxicab license fee at $50 was passed, it was understood that no hacking car in this city could carry passengers without a license, and that those who did so violated the law, and were subject to arrest and fine.

It now appears that certain unlicensed livery drivers have been renting their cars and accepting hack fares in the city for the past two months without interference and that these men laugh at the police and the two taxi-cab companies who paid $50 for protection of their legitimate business.

When interviewed this morning, the manager of one of the licensed taxi-cab companies said he intended to take up the prosecution of one of the unlicensed taxi drivers at once. He stated that W. S. Hillick, city attorney, had declined to handle the matter, although the breach of the ordinance was an offense which could be prosecuted by the city legal department, and that he intended to hire an attorney to fight the case.

"We have paid $50 for what we thought was a license," this man said, "and if other people, who have not paid a license fee, can do business here, we intend to get our $50 back. I have no objection to other men engaging in the hacking business, and if the city wishes no restrictions, I am perfectly willing to handle it that way. On the other hand, if the city ordinance is good for anything, we should have some protection for our money. We will try the case and ascertain whether or not the ordinance amounts to anything, and if it cannot protect us we will get our license fee back from the city."

It is understood that the taxicab driver who will be proscuted in the test case will be served with a warrant today. The licensed taxicab drivers have plenty of evidence to convict the man of a breach of the ordinance as it stands, in fact he has made no secret of the fact that he was doing a hacking business, and has stationed his car along South First street in broad daylight. The licensed companies infer from their competitor's attitude that he has legal advice that the ordinance is not binding and that he is in no danger of any penalty even if he should be arrested.

In the opinion of a local attorney who is considered an authority on such matters, however, the ordinance is iron clad and can be strictly enforced by the city officials and police department if they so desire.

MINARD COLE CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY ANNIVERSARY

Minard Cole, of this city, celebrated his sixty-first birthday anniversary with a party for several of his friends Sunday afternoon. A huge birthday cake, on which were mounted sixty-one candles, was placed in the center of the banquet board, and Mr. Cole's friends, after wishing him many long years of life and happy returns of the day, presented him with a large oak arm chair.

Those present to congratulate Mr. Cole were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Cole, Mr. and Mrs. Sinder, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Quad, Mr. and Mrs. William Breen, Mr. and Mrs. Minard Cole, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Welden, Harlow Cole, Gerald Lunn, William Lunn, Cecil Cole, William Buckley, Miss Mae Buckley, Roland Quad, and Miss Lucy Howard of Altmar.

CHICHESTER S PILLS

THE DIAMOND BRAND.
Ladies! Ask your Druggist for Chi-ches-ter's Diamond Brand Pills in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with Blue Ribbon. Take no other. Buy of your Druggist. Ask for CHI-CHES-TER'S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS, for 25 years known as Best, Safest, Always Reliable
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

Might Spare a Few.

It is said that never was there a gentler critic than Dr. McClintock of Dickinson college. One day a young orator presented his speech for Dr. McClintock's approval. He evidently did not anticipate adverse criticism. He received it nevertheless, given in the doctor's gentle, humorous way, which never could offend.

"It's a good speech," he said, "but there is perhaps a little too much of a certain sort of rhetoric. For instance, I find in it two midnight owls, two midnight wolves, three American eagles and four unfurled banners. It seems to me that the supply exceeds the demand."

CHAINED TO A ROCK

How the Turks Once Imprisoned a Greek Battleship.

DARING OF A YOUNG OFFICER.

His Pluck and Strategy Resulted In Making the Powerful Enemy Vessel Lie Helpless Within the Landlocked Waters of the Gulf of Arta.

It was during the war between Greece and Turkey in 1897 that the inhabitants of Gala Krini—a large village, since destroyed by the Turks, on the shores of the gulf of Arta—awoke one morning to find that a Hellenic battleship had entered the gulf and cast anchor off the shore. The surprise of the inhabitants of Gala Krini was nothing compared with that of a party of five Turkish officers, who, from the very crest of a hill towering above the village, watched the vessel through their telescopes.

These Turkish officers were on an urgent and important mission—to block out the Hellenic fleet from the gulf of Arta. Behind them, at the bottom of the deep ravine, were a number of heavy guns which had been dragged all the way from Saloniki, a long and difficult task, and with this artillery they had been ordered to fortify the strait.

To reach the strait, however, the Turkish column had to run the gantlet of the battleship's heavy guns, which meant sheer destruction. Somehow or other they must escape the man-of-war or prevent her interference with their work, but to do this seemed impossible.

In the midst of their discussion a young officer who had been listening said he could hold the vessel a prisoner if they would allow him. His pleading won, and, hurriedly changing his clothes for those of a shepherd, he descended in that disguise to Gala Krini.

Late that night a number of figures stole through the dark alleys of the village toward the shore. Close to the water's edge was an old boathouse, used as a shed for repairing boats. This the party silently entered and by the flickering light of a taper searched the black interior. At length there was a gentle rattle and from the gloom emerged Hassan, stripped to the waist, dragging a heavy chain. This, with the help of his comrades, he began to pull, and after an hour's laborious work the end of the great chain—once the cable of a Turkish vessel—was reached.

From the beach the chain was loaded on board a large caique, whose sides and floor had been covered with cloth to deaden the sound. This task accomplished, three men got in with Hassan and rowed with muffled oars toward a large rock in the middle of the bight. Round this rock the chain was laid and securely fastened. One man having been landed on the crag to keep guard over this end, the boat set out cautiously for the battleship, looming like a phantom in the distance. Not a sound did the men make as link by link the massive chain was paid out over the stern into the still water till they reached the vessel.

There was an excited gleam in Hassan's eyes as, with a sign to his comrades, he gradually lowered himself into the dark water, guiding himself by passing his fingers over the battleship's plates. A slight grating of the chain against the hull was all that his anxious companions in the boat heard, though now and then a reassuring pull was felt on the line that Hassan held, directing them how to pay out the chain. Hours rather than minutes seemed to have gone by ere the young officer came to the surface. So exhausted by his long dive was he that he had to be almost lifted into the boat.

"It is round the propeller," he gasped. "I have fixed it so that nothing can move it. Back you go."

Then, link by link the tedious work was renewed until the boat returned to its starting point, where the other end of the chain was secured. The risky task was done, and the Hellenic battleship was securely moored to an immovable rock by a double thickness of cable.

The early rays of dawn revealed a sight which astonished the Greek commander. A whole regiment of Turks were on the march toward the strait of Arta, with train after train of artillery, the last of which disappeared beyond the intervening head before the ship's guns could be brought to bear on them. The commander gave orders for the guns to be run out and decks cleared for action, while the anchor was weighed, his intention being to prevent the Turks from fortifying the strait before they had become too strong. "Full speed ahead!" went the order to the engine room, and, propelled by her mighty screw, the battleship advanced, only to lurch backward as if dragged by some unseen force. Work as the engines would, the vessel seemed to be in an enchanted circle, beyond which it was impossible to go.

It was not until the sun's rays had penetrated the deep blue water alongside that the secret was revealed and the massive chain was discovered passing round the ship's propeller and the adjacent rock.

Before it could be removed, however, the strait had been sufficiently fortified by the Turks and a powerful Greek warship lay a helpless prisoner within the landlocked waters of Arta.

Kindness is a language the dumb can speak and the deaf can hear and understand.—Bovee.

HE MOVED HIS WELL.

It Wasn't Pulled Up Nor Sawed Up, but It Did Change Place.

There is an old story about the man who pulled up a well and took it to a more desirable location and another about the man who took up a well, sawed it in sections and used one of the sections for a land roller. They were exaggerations, but the experience of Ezra Tetlow proves that a well cannot always be classed as a permanent fixture. Ezra had a well in front of his house. It had never been a success as a well. Ezra wanted it filled up. One way would have been to haul stones or earth and use the material to fill it. But Ezra had no team.

So he went at it with a shovel. Working on the side of the well next to the road, he began to dig and to throw the dirt into the well. He kept this up until he had filled it, which was not a difficult job, as the well was rather shallow.

But when the task seemed finished Ezra found that he had made a new hole by the side of the one he had been filling. There was but one thing to do—he proceeded to fill it in the same manner. Of course this resulted in still another excavation, which in turn received similar treatment.

As all of Ezra's digging had been on the side of the well nearest the road, the result was that the hole in the ground was finally moved out into the highway.

Judson Tolliver was commenting on the exploit one day down at the corners. "Queer thing Ezra did," he remarked. "You know that old well that stood in his front yard? Well, sir, he's moved it thirty feet from where it was—moved it clear out into the road!"

"How'd he do it?" inquired another representative citizen.

"You'll have to ask Ezra," replied Judson. "But he did it, sure enough. I saw the well in the road yesterday, and I saw the track he made movin' it. The thing plowed a furrow four feet wide all the way."—Youth's Companion.

OUR GOLD CERTIFICATES.

Why These Notes Have Never Been Made Legal Tender.

Answering the question, "Why are gold certificates not legal tender?" the New York Times says:

The first gold certificate act was passed in 1863, and at that time the issuance of these certificates was confined to certificates drawn to order. It was not until later that bearer certificates were put out.

These certificates were issued at the request of New York banks which at that time were handling large amounts of gold and which sought the issuance of gold certificates by the government as a matter of convenience, thus obviating the constant handling and rehandling of gold coin. These certificates were regarded not so much as money as warehouse certificates for money, being exchangeable at all times upon demand for the actual coin.

The question of making the certificates legal tender was not, to the knowledge of the authority consulted, discussed when this suggestion of the New York banks was carried into effect by act of congress. The fact that it was decided, to begin with, to limit these certificates to certificates to order would have been a barrier in the way of making them legal tender had the suggestion been advanced.

So much for the authorization of gold certificates and their not being made legal tender then. Financial authorities point out that there has been in the years since no practical need for taking this step. Gold certificates are in practice accepted as in every way as good as the gold itself, and they are immediately convertible into legal tender by surrender and exchange into gold.

Wit of Disraeli.

There is a story about Disraeli that is much like him and will give an idea of what he was at this time (1877). As he was leaving a house he asked some one to give him his arm down Piccadilly. The man, who must have been a person of some wit, said, "At such a time as this I should wish to be met by my creditors." "No," said Disraeli, "it is not at such times that your creditors meet you. Your creditors meet you when you are carrying a bundle."

There you have the literary quality of the man.—E. S. Nadal in Outlook.

Queer Human Nature.

"Man's a funny proposition!"

"What now?"

"When he reads a medical book he fancies he has every disease described, but let him read the work of a moralist and all the faults pointed out he sees not in himself, but in his neighbor."—Boston Transcript.

Bound to Rise.

"He is one of the most stupid bores I ever met."

"And yet he seems to have accumulated money. Fortune appears to have knocked at his door."

"I don't believe she merely knocked; she must have broken right in."—Brooklyn Citizen.

No Cause For Complaint.

"Oh, my tooth aches dreadfully! I don't see why we can't be born without teeth."

"I think, my dear, that if you will look up some authority on that point you will find that most of us are."—London Telegraph.

A Real Wonder.

Aladdin was exhibiting his wonderful lamp.

"It's an auto lamp," he explained, "that won't go out just as a traffic cop heaves in sight."—Pittsburgh Post.

BEGIN HOT WATER DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you wake up with a bad taste, bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is dull or aching; if what you eat sours and forms gas and acid in stomach, or you are bilious, constipated, nervous, sallow and can't get feeling just right, begin inside bathing. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and cleanse, sweeten and purify the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous waste, gases and sour bile before putting more food into the stomach.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your pharmacist a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast. They are assured they will become real cranks on the subject shortly.

Questions In Dispute Will Probably Be Settled Without Strike.

The representatives of the railroads and the brotherhoods, in conference in New York, have failed to agree, but it is hardly true to say that a deadlock has been reached, says the Indianapolis News. Statements issued by both sides indicate that no final position has been taken. The general demands of the unions are based on an eight hour day, with time and a half for overtime. The railway managers' reply refused double compensation for employees doing different classes of service the same day. This point was insisted upon by the brotherhoods. But for this it is possible that a tentative agreement might have been reached, although it is not understood that the railroads would yield on the eight hour day and time and a half for overtime demands. They merely indicated that it was possible to use the terms as the foundation for a compromise. It appears that the brotherhoods expected the railways to present a compromise plan, but none was forthcoming. The brotherhood representatives desire further instruction from the membership, and negotiations have been suspended.

These conferences may result in bringing before congress at its next session, if not at the one now drawing to a close, the whole question of railway rate and wage control by the government. The railroads have suggested that the issue be taken to the interstate commerce commission and, recognizing that the commission might be powerless, open the way for a joint appeal for legislative change to make such settlement possible. The unions have declined to make the interstate commerce commission "a tribunal for the disposal of questions of wages."

A. B. Garretson, head of the conductors' brotherhood, has made a statement calculated to correct an impression that the unions were antagonistic to arbitration. They are not, however, favorable to arbitration under the present circumstances and for this reason desire to make sure of the union sentiment. "Even if the offers did appeal to us," said Mr. Garretson, "it would be impossible to accept them at the present time, for no man can say that a threat has been made that traffic will be interrupted. Even if any of our men say so in a moment of heat they would not be authorized. The terms of the Newlands act embrace only those exigencies when traffic is threatened. That has not been done, as the voice of the men has not yet spoken."

Hatmakers Make Gain.

Striking employees of the Stetson Hat company, Philadelphia, have voted to return to work, accepting the agreement made possible by Robert McWade, representing the federal department of labor. The strike started March 16 and was the culmination of continued dissatisfaction because of working conditions. About 1,000 employees are directly involved. The company agrees to improve conditions and receive committees to adjust grievances. As an indication of conditions that formerly existed President Cummings of the company says "the men will not be required to pass the usual physical examination."

(By United Press)

Washington—Great Britain and France will do everything in their power to prevent the United States recognizing the super-submarine Deutschland as a ship of commerce and to prevent the operation of the line of submarine freight carriers proposed by the North German-Lloyd Steamship Company. This was admitted at the embassies of the two governments here today.

* * *

New York—Despite prodigious efforts to curb the epidemic of infantile paralysis gripping Greater New York, reports to the Health Department today showed an increase of 100 per cent. in the number of deaths and new cases in Brooklyn since yesterday.

Beaten to a Mummy.

Until pretty late in the eighteenth century mummies entered into a great variety of drugs, balms and other medicaments. As the genuine mummy was then expensive, recipes were given by many ancient writers for converting human flesh into mummy. Usually only certain portions of the body were used, and these were beaten, dried, macerated and spiced out of all likeness to their natural condition: hence "beaten to a mummy." Numerous allusions are made to the practice in ancient literature, and in an old play, "Bird In a Cage," are the directions, "Make mummy of my flesh and sell me to the apothecaries."

SOUTH GRANBY

We are having fine hay weather and the farmers are taking advantage of it.

* * *

We are sorry to record the passing away of one of our oldest citizens, Mr. John Dickinson, who died Wednesday evening, of pneumonia. He had lived in this place forty years and is survived by his widow, two sons, one brother, Eugene, of Messengerville; two sisters, Mrs. Harriett McKee, of the same place, and Mrs. Thomas Lynch of Cortland. The funeral was held at two o'clock Sunday at the house. Rev. Bacon officiated. Burial was made at Jacksonville.

* * *

Mr. Myron Terpening and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Jones, of Fairmont, and an aunt from Kansas City, were guests of Mrs. Anna Dickinson, Sunday.

* * *

Mrs. Grochan and daughter, Mabel, have gone to Syracuse today.

* * *

Mrs. L. T. Austin attended the Ladies' Aid Society exercises at Mount Pleasant, July 4th, and the entertainment in the evening. She was an over night guest of her brother Delos Distin.

* * *

A card received from Freddie Sperbeck, said they arrived safely Thursday morning and are at home at 181 King avenue, Detroit, Mich. He says Detroit is a fine city.

* * *

Mr. Chester Stewart and three daughters and a son-in-law called at Elmer Fisher's Friday.

* * *

Mr. Robert Stewart and family and Mrs. Frank Wilcox were guests at Miss Alba Covill is home for a va-
Wilson Stewart's Sunday.

* * *

Milo Austin and wife spent the week end with his mother.

* * *

Miss Mary and Harlon Stege visited their parents over Sunday.

* * *

Willie Cook, who is working in Syracuse, was home over the Fourth.

* * *

Mrs. Maud Pierce has gone to New York, to join her husband in that city.

* * *

The Austin picnic reunion will be Saturday at the home of Fred Andrews.

HAPPY HOUR TODAY

Benefit for Sons of Veterans

Bill Burke in "PEGGY" and Others.

By Special Request.

WANTED
GOOD BRIGHT BOY

Over 16 years of age, to learn Printing Trade. Apply at

THE EVENING TIMES

BIG INCREASE IN NATIONAL BANKS

Number of Depositors Jumps 86 Per Cent In Six Years.

PENNSYLVANIA IN THE LEAD.

Reports 2,021,878 Depositors—New York, With 1,199,471, Second—Total of 14,288,059 In Entire Country—Other Statistics Show Prosperous Condition of Nation.

Comptroller Williams has given out a statement showing that there are 14,288,059 national bank depositors in the country, the number having increased 86 per cent since 1910.

Pennsylvania leads all the states in the number of depositors, reporting 2,021,878 as against 762,738 in 1910. New York shows the next largest number, 1,199,471.

Illinois comes third with 847,037 national bank depositors, an increase since 1910 of 376,910. Ohio ranks fourth in the number of national bank depositors with 791,760, an increase of 321,076 since 1910. Texas comes next with 658,774, an increase of 291,161. California follows with 529,290, an increase of 294,799.

The largest actual increase by geographical divisions was shown in the middle western states, which give an increase of 1,773,370 depositors, although the southern states lead in the largest percentage of increases. The number of depositors in the southern states June 30, 1910, was 1,272,746. On May 1, 1916, this had been increased to 2,814,508, the increase being 1,541,762, or 121 per cent.

The Pacific states increased 592,689, or 117 per cent. The New England states show an increase of 388,923, or 84 per cent. The western states increased 668,517, or 82 per cent, and the eastern states show an increase of 1,620,651 depositors, or 68 per cent.

Other Interesting Features.

Here are excerpts from the comptroller's statement:

Of the 14,288,059 deposit accounts in the national banks of the United States 755,309 are carried in the national banks of the central reserve cities of New York, Chicago and St. Louis; 1,778,869 are with the national banks in the other reserve cities, while the country banks report 12,203,751 deposit accounts, or over 85 per cent of the total number.

Of the 14,288,059 deposit accounts 9,494,289, or 66 per cent, are demand deposit accounts. Of the 9,494,289 demand deposit accounts 1,498,945 draw interest; the remaining 7,995,244 demand depositors collect no interest.

In the three central reserve cities 78.9 per cent of all depositors are demand depositors. In the other reserve cities 66 per cent are demand depositors. In the country banks 66 per cent of the total deposit accounts are demand, the balance being on time.

The total number of deposit accounts on June 23, 1915, as reported by all the state banks (exclusive of mutual and stock savings banks) and by all loan and trust companies throughout the United States was 15,814,446. It is therefore seen that the national banks now have nearly as many deposit accounts as all the state banks above mentioned and all the loan and trust companies in the United States combined in June, 1915, the time these figures were last compiled in regard to them.

GERMANS BUILD SHIPS.

754,000 Tons In New Vessels Are Now Under Construction.

Herr Ballin, general manager of the Hamburg-American line, says his company is building the turbine ship Bismarck, of 56,000 tons, the world's greatest steamer; the Tirpitz, 30,000 tons, and three other vessels of 22,000 tons each.

At Bremen there are building nine vessels, four of them with a carrying capacity of 18,000 tons, being the world's greatest freight steamers; at Flensburg two steamers of 13,000 tons each, three larger passenger freight steamers, and at Geestemunde two freight steamers of 17,000 tons each for traffic through the Panama canal.

The Hamburger-South America line is building the Cap Polonio, a sister ship to the auxiliary cruiser Cap Trafalgar.

The North German Lloyd is building two fast steamers, the Columbus and Hindenburg, of 30,000 tons each; the Munchen and Zeppelin, of 16,000 tons each; twelve vessels of 12,000 tons each. Twenty-four ships of from 9,000 to 13,000 tons are being built for other lines.

URGED TO PRAY FOR PEACE.

Neutrals of the World Asked to Unite In Prayer on Aug. 1.

The neutral conference for continuous mediation has decided to request all neutral nations in the world to hold peace demonstrations on Aug. 1, the anniversary of the beginning of the war.

The conference suggests public meetings, street parades, pageants and church services, but particularly urges a five minute pause throughout the neutral world. This would mean a complete cessation of all activities at 11 o'clock in the morning of Aug. 1.

Demonstrations are now being arranged in Scandinavia.

FISHED WITH A GANDER.

And Now the Poor Fowl Shows a Distinct Aversion to Water.

A gander was so upset by experiments made upon and through him by a mischievous boy that for a long time he would not go into the water.

The gander's determination to abstain from water as a means of bathing grew out of the following circumstances:

The boy thought he would tie a fishing line to the gander's leg and with a hook properly baited turn the bird out into the water. The bait was a frog.

The gander went into the mill pond, where he swam around for half an hour, turning "flipflaps" and diving for food. Suddenly he felt a pull at his leg and looked as surprised as the "lone fisherman" when he caught a whale.

The gander thought there was something the matter, and he looked to ascertain the cause. The pickerel on the hook gave several jerks, whereupon the gander decided he wanted to go home.

He at once started for the shore, but the pickerel on the hook wanted to go the other way. The gander seemed frightened at first. Then he evidenced signs of anger and tried to fly to shore, but the pickerel pulled him back.

After half an hour of the hardest work he had ever done the gander came ashore, dragging a six pound pickerel up the bank.

The boy took off the pickerel and baited the hook with another frog. He tried to induce the gander to go in for another swim, but no amount of persuasion could get the bird to do so. He simply would not be driven in. For many weeks the gander would not go into the water. He would proceed with the rest of the flock to the water's edge, but there he would stop. He would seem to be arguing with them with reference to the danger they were courting.—Los Angeles Times.

SHOOTING WITH A RIFLE.

The Proper Way to Aim if One Aspires to Good Marksmanship.

Walter Winans, the famous American sharpshooter, who lives in England, writes to the Scientific American the following directions as to the proper way to aim a rifle:

"The way to shoot is, first, put a big ivory front sight in place of the black one used for target shooting.

"Most real objects one shoots at are more or less dark, and the black front sight is difficult to see on the object; the white one shows up at once.

"Next, have your hind sight put on the rifle at the distance from your eye that you can read print best.

"When shooting do not try to focus a black bullseye, a black front sight and a black hind sight and a half dozen other things alternately while you hold on to your rifle like grim death.

"Look at the object you want to hit. If it is moving judge how much allowance in front you must make, bring up your rifle to your shoulder, swinging it with the movement of the object you want to hit, and press the trigger as the butt touches your shoulder.

"The bullet will go where you want it to without your noticing the sights at all.

"If you want to be a good rifle shot at game, or as a soldier, join the nearest clay pigeon shooting club, and when you can break 90 per cent of the clays you can rest perfectly confident that you can hit a man every shot you fire if being charged by an enemy if you have a rifle in your hands instead of a shotgun.

"If you practice in a 'coal hole' rifle gallery at a stationary black bullseye with a black front sight and see 'three front sights' and a 'blurred back sight' you are not learning to shoot, but merely ruining your eyesight."

Cornish Pies.

There are several dishes peculiar to Cornwall, and a pasty is one. It resembles an apple turnover, but is composed of meat, potato and seasoning, finely chopped. Almost every kind of food is put into a Cornish pie. Squab pie is a great favorite. Herby pie is another peculiar dish, composed of nettles, pepper cress, parsley, mustard and spinach, together with thin slices of pork. Pies are also made with leeks and pilchards, goose feet, gizzard and blood, raisins, sugar and apples and mackerel, parsley and cream.—London Standard.

Her Proof.

"I've brought back those eggs you gave me this morning," said the new bride as she began to take the articles in question from her basket. "They're duck eggs."

"Duck eggs!" sneered the grocery boss. "You're mistaken, ma'am. I don't never sell no duck eggs."

"But I tested them," triumphed the matrimonial novice. "I dropped them into water and they floated."—Judge.

Domestic Discussion.

"My husband accuses me of extravagance. I spent about $10,000 last year."

"I wouldn't mind being scolded on that basis. I have to stand for the same accusation on $20 a week."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Bohemia.

Bohemia has not existed as a separate independent nation since 1620. That year was fought the battle of the White mountain, which resulted in the total overthrow of the Bohemian forces and the subjugation of the country to Austria.

Eagles on the Hunt.

Eagles usually hunt in pairs, one bird frightening the prey from its hiding place and the other pouncing on it as it tries to escape.

RAISING REVENUE PUZZLES WILSON

$100,000,000 Additional Will Be Needed This Year.

MEXICAN CRISIS IS COSTLY.

Unexpected Drain on Treasury Will Cause Congress to Change Its Plans. Leaders Are Opposed to Issuing Bonds or Selling the Panama Canal Paper That the Government Holds.

While the military authorities of the country are struggling to mass additional troops on the Mexican border, congress is confronted with a serious question of where the money is to come from with which to finance the operations. The cost is to be staggering. This is the one clear fact that stands out of the whole situation.

Since congress convened in December it has been spending money at the rate of approximately $10,000,000 a day. Up to date the total appropriations aggregate in the neighborhood of $1,500,000,000. This enormous sum will be increased heavily before adjournment.

As is entirely natural, the greater part of this vast expenditure is directly and indirectly due to the upbuilding of the military establishments. Never in the history of the country have such heavy sums been appropriated for the army and navy. The sea forces especially will be strengthened to a degree never yet authorized by a previous congress. Not only is this true in the number of ships voted, but the expenditures will be made in three years instead of five, as had been contemplated.

The cost of reorganizing and strengthening the army also will be heavy, and in consequence congress was compelled to appropriate heavy sums for this work. Because of the reorganization greater supplies of field guns, aeroplanes, ammunition and other military impedimenta were necessary. In fact, increases over the original estimate ran the gamut of the entire army bill.

The house ways and means committee, which has been struggling with the revenue bill that is expected to turn into the treasury a golden stream to meet the congressional demand, is in a quandary. Chairman Kitchin and his subcommittee had drafted a measure calculated to produce in revenue $240,000,000. Now it is found that because of the unprecedented appropriations, much of them due to the Mexican crisis, an additional $100,000,000 must be saddled on the bill in order that the treasury may be on the safe side of the situation.

As a result the leaders in the capitol are busily engaged in scuttling to conference at the White House and treasury department. President Wilson is fully alive to the political necessity of solving the financial situation before the campaign gets under way. In seeking for this solution the chief executive and his advisers find themselves on the horns of a dilemma.

The revenue bill proposes to raise the necessary funds largely through direct taxation, a method that in the past had not been popular with the American people. On the other hand, the administration recognizes that a bond issue to meet the expenditures would be politically unwise. The suggestion that a block of Panama canal bonds held in the treasury be released and thrown upon the market does not meet with the president's favor. The administration is said to feel that the public effect would be the same as though "war bonds" were issued directly.

All in all, out of the turmoil and aggravation of present international and domestic problems arises the one question:

"Where is the money coming from to meet the cost?"

WILL TATTOOED ON HIS BACK.

Coroner Finds Man's Body Covered With Fantastic Designs.

While performing an autopsy over George Ballantyne Hood, who died at Pittsburgh, Deputy Coroner McKinley found the will of Hood tattooed on his back. Deeply imprinted in the skin the will read:

"All my earthly possessions I bequeath to my beloved mother."

Hood's entire body, with the exception of his face, hands and feet, was tattooed with pictures of women, dogs, horses and other designs. It had taken seven years, and Hood had told friends that he suffered agony during the needlework. He visited every circus that came to Pittsburgh and each time had a new picture cut into his skin.

PLENTY OF HORSES AVAILABLE

Thousand a Week if Not Too Particular, Says Expert.

There will be no lack of horses for the United States army, said a New York horse dealer. Although the cream of the country's horse supply has undoubtedly been gobbled up by the British, French and Italian governments he says many thousands are available for army service.

The war department recently asked for bids on 16,000 horses and 2,000 mules, under rigid specifications which will make it impossible, some horse dealers think, to provide the animals in many months. But if these specifications are not adhered to rigidly it is believed horses can be supplied at the rate of about 1,000 a day.

CURIOUS CORDOBA.

This Spanish Town Is So Compact It Looks Like One Building.

Cordoba is scheduled on the European itinerary as a half day stand. Those who go from Seville to Granada and those who go from Granada to Seville take Cordoba on their way. Fifteen minutes for the cathedral, five for the alcazar, an hour for luncheon and on to further discoveries—that is the Cordoba program. The hotels of Cordoba are, in consequence, unpalatial, a circumstance in itself which endears the little town to the judicious. I do not believe there is a lift in all Cordoba, and if your wife wishes for any reason to buy a new hat she must go out of the hotel for it, and then it will be three years old.

At night all the tourists are gone to Seville or Granada, and you and the Cordobans and the stars share the amenities of Cordoba's one boulevard, of which everybody is very proud, because it is much superior to anything that Paris or even Madrid can show. It was a lucky chance which caused them to build Cordoba so handily between Seville and Granada. It has provided a still little backwater for the traveler's repose, a spot where he may forget that American bars exist, eat his meals untroubled by the squeaking of a tango band and adventure himself among the mysteries of a bill of fare jelly printed in blue and illegible Spanish.

You could put your hat over Cordoba, and very little would protrude. It is the compactest little town. From the tower of the cathedral it all looks like one building. You can hardly perceive the streets, so closely do they wriggle among the houses. The roofs are yellow, brown, gray, red; the walls and their shadows every color in the world. Among the buildings the green of palms, orange trees, lemon trees, chestnuts, soothe the glare struck eye. The Guadalquivir snakes through its rich plains from the faraway flat hills (red, gray brown, yellow), and over all are the great sky of the south and the huge sun of the south, which imposes silence on the world till night shall set the guitars a-buzzing.—William Caine in Century.

CAUSE OF RHEUMATISM.

Cavities Holding Pus, It Is Claimed, Breed the Dread Ailment.

In the American Magazine is an article on rheumatism by Dr. Arthur R. Reynolds, who says:

"The cause of rheumatism is pus formed and imprisoned in some part of the body. It gets into the circulation and is carried by it to the region affected. These pus places may be in spots more or less closed up, so they are not easily drained. They may be located about the teeth, at the end of the roots of dead or diseased teeth, in the crypts of the tonsils, in some of the sequestered places in the nostrils, in the bony sinuses of the head. They may be in the bladder, the kidney, the gall ducts or other places. The pus producing spot may be as small or smaller than a pea or it may be larger. Its existence is frequently unknown to the patient, especially if it be hidden in soft tissue like the tonsil. It may even exist in the bony socket of a tooth without giving pain.

"Several different organisms produce pus, and any or all may produce rheumatism when transferred to the joints or the heart.

"The physician today seeks for the pus cavity when he meets a patient with rheumatism, and he endeavors to clean it up. Rheumatic pains have been stopped with magical promptness by simply extracting the offending tooth. It is not always easy to find the pus places in the hidden parts of the body. The X ray shadowgraph is essential in locating the trouble. It shows definitely and accurately all trouble about the roots of the teeth, and its use is therefore of the first importance in ferreting out the pus in the deep structures."

Duncan Smoked in Church.

Sir Walter Scott in his "Heart of Midlothian" refers to one Duncan of Knockdunder, an important personage, who smoked during the whole of the sermon from an iron pipe tobacco borrowed from other worshipers. We are told that at the end of the discourse he knocked the ashes out of his pipe, replaced it in his sporran, returned the tobacco pouch to its owner and joined in the prayer with decency and attention.

Domestic Strategy.

Husband—I am not ready to go out yet. Wife—But I am, and we must go immediately. Husband—But, my dear, your hat is not on straight. Wife—Dear me! Isn't it? Wait a minute till I go to my room and put it right.

Exit wife for half an hour, and her shrewd husband completes his work.

Argentina.

If the country has the same average potentiality for producing food as land similarly situated in North America or Europe, it would seem that Argentina can support 100,000,000 people easily, as only small parts of it lie outside the temperate zone.

The Point of View.

"The darkest cloud has a silver lining," remarked the optimist.

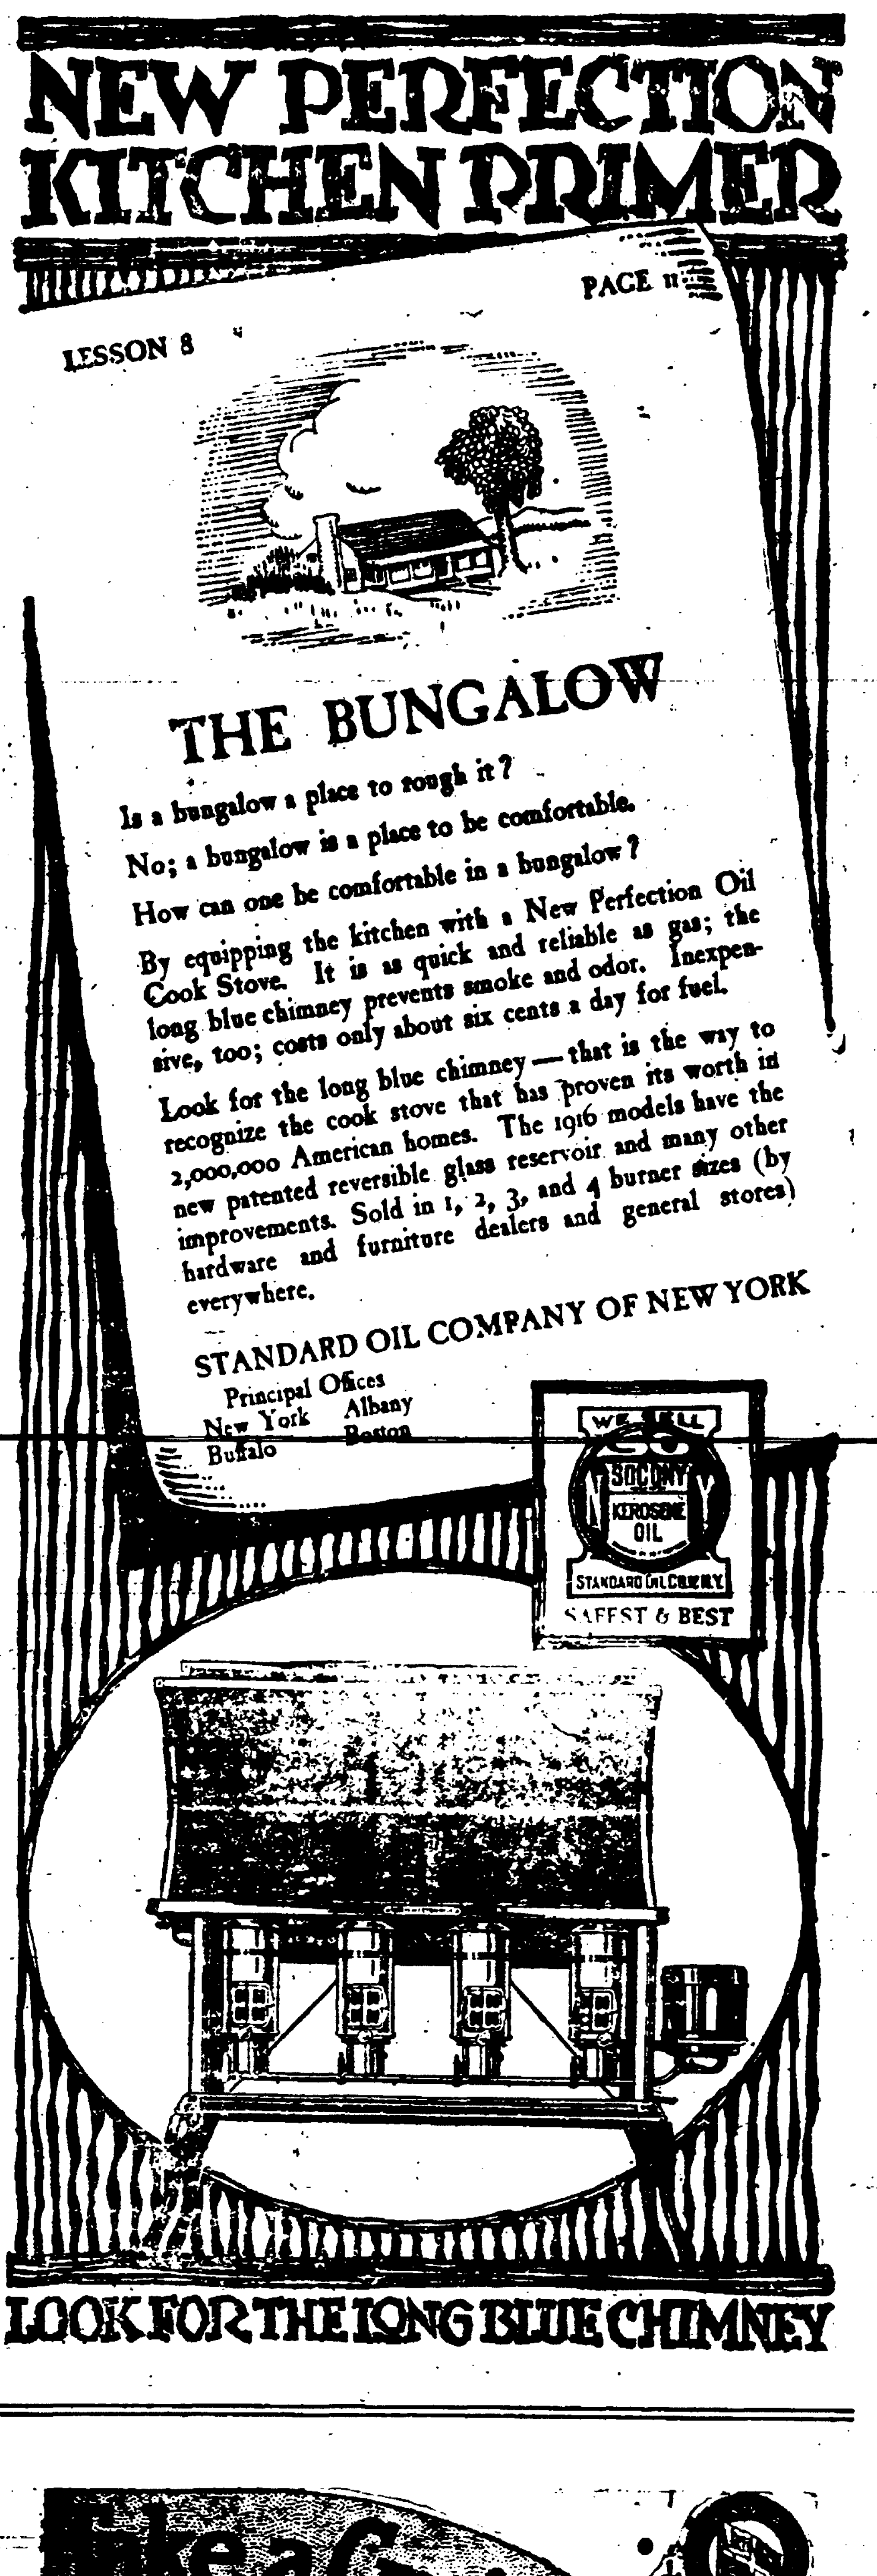
"But it is a dark cloud, just the same," insisted the pessimist.—Exchange.

Silly Fellow.

"You are the only girl that can make me happy."

"Are you sure?"

"Yes; I have tried all the others."—Philadelphia Record.



Special For Old Home Week

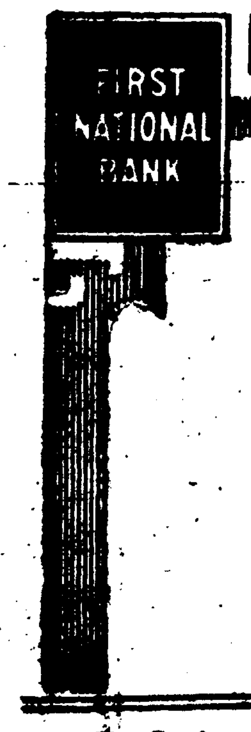
A $3.00 G. E. TOASTER For $2.11

Make clean crisp toast right at your table. Just connect to a light socket. 16 slices of delicious toast for 1 cent.

We have a full line of Electric Hot Weather Helps.

THE ELECTRIC COMPANY

Phone 144



OUR DEPOSITORS KNOW

that the First National Bank gives the most careful attention to their financial interests and desires in every way to show its appreciation of their patronage by making its service more useful.

CHECKING ACCOUNTS ARE INVITED

ABOUT THE TOWN

THEY ALL COME BACK.

Another former Fultonian arrived in the city today. H. S. Goodjon, brother of F. E. Goodjon, of Buffalo street, couldn't resist the cordial invitation made by the Chamber of Commerce to enjoy the festivities, so he bade farewell to his Randall's Island charges and is looking at the town, where he was born, December 1, 1850.

He is at present one of the officers and instructors at the House of Refuge, Randall's Island, New York. This is a trade and military school for the criminal youth. Mr. Goodjon has been connected with various institutions of this state about forty years, and served the Commonwealth at the Auburn and Sing Sing prisons. The last sixteen years have been spent by him filling a post at Randall's Island.

* * *

QUEEN OF OLD HOME WEEK CONTEST

The result of the fourth day or voting is as follows:

Genevvieve McCormick	582
Ruth Buchanan	1,011
Greta Lewis	1,080
Rosella Nichols	251
Trixie Dix	416

Miss Greta Lewis since yesterday has made quite an advance jumping from third place to first.

Secretary Hollenga of the Chamber of Commerce has decided to close the contest Monday night, July 3rd at twelve o'clock, to enable the winner to participate in the exercises on the Fourth of July.

* * *

The Old Home Week Committee has learned that there are a number of contestants who are withholding votes. The committee objects and wants all outstanding votes returned today.

Secretary Hollenga announces that, The Rev. Dr. F. W. Betts will speak from the grand stand July Fourth, at two o'clock; and, that any and all changes in the program for the week will be announced upon a large bulletin board, in front of the Chamber of Commerce office and by means of megaphones throughout the city.

* * *

R. L. McCully, president of the Fulton Automobile Club, announces, that he has just received from the Secretary of the State Auto Association, a large map of New York State showing the latest improved roads. The map is posted at club headquarters, Chamber of Commerce rooms and automobile owners, as well as members of the club, may view it as they desire.

* * *

The old Continental Marching Club was revived last night. W. S. Hillick issued a call for members yesterday and a large number appeared at the City Hall last night to practice for the preparedness parade on July Fourth.

* * *

Marching clubs from Oswego and other cities will be here July Fourth and the parade will be one of the longest ever witnessed in this city.

This Business Property For Sale at a Bargain. Inquire of M. LOUISE, Agt., 37 South Second Street, Fulton, N. Y.

OLD MAIDS WIN MANY HEARTS

Irresistibly Charming, Is the Way the Bach. Spectators Express Their Approbation

A small playlet was given at the State Street M. E. Church last night, to a large audience.

The old maid characters were dressed typically as the gossiping sex are dressed. Some in shakers, some in hoop skirts, some in plumes and small bonnets and another carried a foot warmer.

The old maids met at a business meeting where the gossiping and slanderous conversations took place. Mrs. William Singleton called the Old Maids' Convention to order with much hard work in doing so. The secretary then called the roll and as this was done each old maid responded with a laughable poem on bachelorhood, embracing their longing for sweethearts and husbands. The treasurer's report was very amusing, after which followed other reports from various committees all pertaining to matrimonial matters.

At this time Prof. Pinkerton was announced, this character was impersonated by Charles Sage; with him came his large transforming machine, with its doses of light or dark tonics and by simple process of the "transform(her)" he changed the old maids into bright and smiling young ladies, in fact just as was the wish of the old maids.

Miss Luella Jones was transformed into Miss Hazel Robinson, who sang a beautiful solo, which was well rendered.

Miss Dryer gave a select reading after being transformed from Mrs. C. E. Wilson.

Then came Mrs. Harry McRae who wished to be transformed into a pretty brunnette, but through the nervousness of Prof. Pinkerton, who gave her an overdose of the dark brown transforming liquid, instead of a bright young lady, out came a colored woman, which was impersonated by Donald Allen. This caused the old maids to go into a terrible fury and the professor after various dexterious moments secured the colored woman, who was rushed back into the transforming box again, who when changed rightly, came out as a beautiful white girl in the person of Mrs. H. Hurlburt, who played a mandolin solo accompanied by piano.

Then came Mrs. Fred Vogelsang, who wished to be young and lively, so was transformed in the person of Miss Helen Foster, who gave an exhibition of gymnastics with the dumb bells. Then followed Mrs. Dunton, who when transformed came out in the person of Mrs. Hugh Mattot who rendered a very pleasing selection on the organ. Miss Stella Johnston also sang a very pleasing selection.

The Queen Esther society served ice cream after the playlet.

NEW ELECTION LAW A TANGLE

Considerable confusion has been caused in some sections of the state by an amendment to the election law passed by the legislature, of which Senator J. Henry Walters of Syracuse, was sponsor.

The amendment provides that whenever by reason of the new apportionment two or more members of the state committee elected from the assembly districts at the spring primaries are thrown together in the same Assembly district the members of the county committee shall meet and choose a member of the state committee the present members from that district losing their seats in the state committee. The amendment also provides that if by reason of the new apportionment an assembly district is not represented in the state committee the county committee members from that district shall elect a member of the state committee.

Most of the confusion so far has been caused in the ranks of both leading parties in New York city. They have discovered that some districts there are as many as three state committeemen and none others. Hurried meetings are being called to straighten out the tangle.

Pulpit and Pew

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

(Rev. Minor J. Peters, rector)

Sunday, July 2nd, Second Sunday after Trinity.

Services as follows:

Holy Communion, 8:00 a. m.

Holy Communion and Sermon, 10:30 a. m.

Evensong and Sermon, 7:30 p. m.

All the seatings are free, and strangers are cordially invited.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

(Charles S. Robertson, pastor)

Final Session meeting before Communion at 10.

Worship by families at 10:30, when adult baptism will be administered, members received and the Lord's Supper observed.

Bible School at noon.

Union service in the tabernacle at five o'clock.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Services are held at 55 South First street Sundays at 10:45 a. m. and Wednesdays at 8 p. m. Reading room open daily 3 to 5 p. m., except Sundays. Miss Ada F. Thayer, first reader; Mrs. Frank Wooley, second reader. You will be welcome. The subject for next Sunday will be "God." Golden text, Psalms. 46:7. Responsive reading Micah 4:1-8.

FREE METHODIST CHURCH

State and South Third Street

(Rev. C. A. Balch, pastor)

Sunday, 10:15, preaching by the pastor.

12:00, Sunday school, Mrs. Anna Curtis, superintendent.

6:45, Prayer service.

7:30, Preaching by the pastor.

Tuesday night, Class meeting.

[illegible] night, Prayer meeting.

[illegible] night, Cottage meeting at [illegible]n's.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

(Charles Olmstead, pastor)

At the morning service tomorrow, there will be baptism and reception of members and a brief address appropriate to the communion observance which will conclude the service.

The Peacock Evangelistic Club will meet in this church at three p. m.

The church will unite with the other churches of the city in a mass meeting at the tabernacle at five p. m., in the observance of "Old Home Sunday." Rev. W. D. Chase, a former pastor in this city will speak.

The Thursday evening service will be held at 7:30. We shall expect to meet many visitors from out of town at this service.

BIBLE STUDY CLASSES

District No. 2 will meet Monday evening with Mrs. E. J. Cusack, Oneida street.

District 28 will meet with G. O. Snyder, Monday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock.

District No. 22 will meet Monday evening at 7:45 with Mrs. Nolan, south First street.

District No. 26 will meet Monday at 3 p. m., with Mrs. William Dingle, West Fifth street.

GOOD PRIZES FOR TODAY'S SHOOTING EVENT

In the beginners' shoot, held by the Fulton Gun and Game Club at Stop 27 this afternoon, there were about thirty contestants for the following prizes:

One sterling silver watch fob, donated by the Du Pont Powder Co.; one beautiful pocketknife, in the red target event, donated by C. Earle Foster, and one box of cigars in the same event, donated by the Boland Brothers.

CARS CRASH AND MRS. BARKER IS INJURED

An automobile belonging to William Van Sanford, of South Sixth street, was wrecked last night near Volney Center, when he collided with a car driven by Joseph Salladin of New Haven. Mr. and Mrs. Van Sanford, with Mr. and Mrs. Wirt Barker, were in the damaged car and on their way to the Thousand Islands. Mrs. Barker was the only one injured; suffering a sprained leg.

BOORMAN—KELLER

Miss Mildred Keller, of Phoenix, and Eric Boorman, formerly of this city, were married last night at the home of the bride's father, Richard S. Keller.

Mr. Boorman is at present connected with the Semet-Solvay Company. After a short trip through the Adirondacks they will reside in Syracuse.

Special arrangements for auto storage during old home week at the Van Wagenen Garage.—Adv.

Fulton Keynotes

Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Roy and children will return from Sylvan Beach Monday, where they have been spending a week.

* * *

Utoka Tribe of Red Men, true to their traditions, will take a leading position in the line of the preparedness parade Tuesday morning, wearing white hats, red neckties and carrying neat canes. The Tribe may at all times have the confidence of the people of Fulton to do its share toward a public enterprise.

* * *

R. L. McCully has appointed H. H. Bristol, F. H. Morin and H. F. Van Sanford as a committee to assist him with the auto parade.

* * *

Erma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Little, of State and Fifth streets, is seriously ill.

* * *

Dr. H. S. Orchard has left his river camp and returned to his city residence to view the Old Home Week festivities.

* * *

Mr. Richard Harrison, of Brooklyn, is spending a two weeks' vacation with his aunt, Mrs. W. J. Boomer, of Rochester street.

* * *

Miss Charlotte Pearl has returned from Platsburg, where she graduated from the State Normal school, and will spend the summer with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Pearl. In the autumn Miss Pearl will take charge of the commercial department at Pleasantville, N. Y.

POLICE COURT NOTES

Arthur Worden was brought before Judge Wilson this morning, upon the charge of public intoxication and interference with his neighbors' rights. The complaint was made by F. W. Pratt, who did not press the charges. The defendant was dismissed.

* * *

Fred B. Gaitley pleaded guilty to a charge of assault preferred against him by his wife. Judge Wilson suspended sentence upon receiving a promise of good behavior.

Investing Money.

First of all be satisfied you have a safe investment with a reasonable income. Don't be misled by some stranger's promise to make you rich quickly. If he could do this for you he would not tell you anything about it, for he would do it for himself. Next buy the same kind of securities that all the successful investors are buying—those listed on the Stock Exchange that have a good record as dividend payers and that can be sold on the exchange any day that you want to sell them.—Jasper in Leslie's.

HOTEL ARRIVALS.

Clark House—George Salem, Mt. Pleasant; Marley Mace, Auburn, N. Y.

Ajax tires and Viking Spark Plugs. Van Wagenen, Inc.—Adv.

Fireworks! Fireworks!

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL AT

S. Waldhorn's 18 First St.

Salutes, Firecrackers, Sparklers, Roman Candles, Sky Rockets, Mines, Caps, Pistols, Canes, Pinwheels, Torpedoes, Balloons—all in large assortments.

SPECIALS

In Underwear, Hosiery, Oil Stoves, Window Screens, Rubber Hose, [illegible], Linoleums, Oil Cloths, Window Shades, Suit Cases, Children's Dresses, Granite Ware, Crockery, Notions, 9 Bars Lenox Soap 25c.

THE FAIR STORE

Don't overlook your porch furniture

Get out the rockers and the settee and see if they don't need freshening up a bit. It won't cost much and a change in color might be agreeable.

DEVOE THE GUARANTEED GLOSS CARRIAGE PAINT

offers you an easy way of getting a high gloss that will hold its lustre under weather exposure.

We recommend Devoe Gloss Carriage Paint for porch and lawn furniture—yes, and for baby carriages, too, It will not crack or chip. It gives a hard durable finish which does not mar easily. Then, you know, it can be washed with soap and water.

Stop in and get a card showing the many pleasing colors. Ask us for information about this and other Devoe products. Remember, we guarantee satisfaction.

L. P. SMITH COMPANY

PLUMBING, TINNING, WINDOWS, DOORS, LEHIGH VALLEY COAL

FULTON, N. Y.

Out of the Dungeon

A Story of Ancient England

By F. A. MITCHEL

Before England became united under one government there were many kings there. These kings ruled little tracts that afterward became counties, and their rulers became nobles. The full regalia of a peer of England includes a coronet, and the fact that these petty kings were in time reduced from royalty to nobility is the reason why the higher British nobles wear a kingly headgear.

The residences of these kings were not called palaces, but castles. They were usually built on an eminence and were surrounded by heavy walls and a moat and the entrance was protected by a drawbridge. The reason for this was that the sovereign of all England had very little power, and in consequence the subkings were usually fighting with each other and needed to live in fortified homes.

Away back in early times when this feudal system was the only English system of laws known there was a king of Gloucester. He had been a powerful sovereign in his day and had won many victories over the neighboring potentates. He and the sovereign of Warwick had been in perpetual warfare and Gloucester had conquered his enemy, who had fled, no one knew where, with his wife and child, the latter a boy only a few years old. Afterward one of Warwick's subjects named Conrad led an army against Gloucester's forces and, achieving his independence, made himself king.

In this contest a young man not over twenty-one or twenty-two years old distinguished himself fighting in the ranks of Warwick. He was captured and imprisoned in one of the dungeons under Gloucester castle. There he remained for a long while forgotten.

Meanwhile the new king of Warwick was becoming daily more powerful and his former enemy, Gloucester, was growing old and the number of his armed retainers was diminishing. At last it occurred to Conrad that he might overthrow his neighbor and add his kingdom to his own.

In order to pick a quarrel with Gloucester, Conrad went to Gloucester castle to make upon the old king certain insolent demands that he knew would not be granted. While there he saw the king's daughter, Eleanor, a beautiful girl who had just come to a marriageable age. Upon beholding her he agreed to withdraw his demands provided the king would give him his daughter to wife.

Now, Conrad was not only a bad man, but he was very repulsive physically.

The old king of Gloucester, aware that he no longer possessed the power to resist a strong enemy, knew not what to say to Conrad's proposition.

Eleanor understood her father's position and the terrible alternative before her. Either she must become the wife of her father's enemy or he would be overpowered, and they would meet the fate they had inflicted on the real king of Warwick. She had often heard the story of his flight with his wife and child and regretted that her father had been instrumental in bringing about his fall and the rise of the usurper. And now the latter had come to revenge the man he had driven from his kingdom.

Eleanor had never seen the usurper and before deciding consented to meet him. When he came into her presence he bent his long body on his bandy legs, the plume of his hat sweeping the floor, expressing at the same time his admiration in a leer. She could not conceal her disgust. Turning from him, she swept out of the room.

The hot blood mounted to Conrad's cheek. He scowled, half drew his sword, then thrust it back into its scabbard and, stalking out into the courtyard, mounted his horse and, followed by his attendants, rode out through the castle gateway, crossed the drawbridge and went down the declivity.

Nothing remained for the old king of Gloucester but to put his castle in as good a state for defense as possible, arm his retainers and sell his kingdom as dearly as possible. His daughter did what she could to assist in the preparations, but her efforts were confined principally to getting together material that would be needed by the wounded. She knew that there were prisoners in the dungeons below, and she went down there to see if any of them could be persuaded to fight for the king of Gloucester.

A young man, pale from confinement, was led out to her. It was some time before he could see her in the strong light.

"Who are you?" she asked.

"I was taken prisoner, I know not how long ago, fighting in the army of Conrad the usurper."

"Why do you call him the usurper?"

"Because there is but one king of Warwick, and he is not on the throne."

"We are to be attacked by this pretended king of Warwick."

"Grant me leave to fight for you, good lady, and I will do so."

"Will you fight for the king of Gloucester?"

"No; for you."

"What is your name?"

"Harold."

At a signal from Eleanor the young man's chains were knocked off him. He was taken up into the castle, where he was washed and fed and armed for a soldier. The next day he met Eleanor hurrying through the courtyard and said to her:

"Good lady, have I your permission to point out to you certain weak points in the castle?"

"You have."

Taking her to a part of the wall he showed her that it was ready to tumble. Then, in the armory, he convinced her that most of the weapons were blunt and certain armor had rusted till it could be punctured with a wooden sword. Leading her here and there, he showed her various imperfections, and she gave orders that they should be made good.

Going to her father, she asked him who was to lead in the defense. He replied that he would command. Then she told him about the released prisoner who had noticed the deficiencies and suggested that he be made second in command since he seemed to have been trained for a soldier and there were no leaders among the defenders of the castle. The king said that he cared not who was second in command, for all must obey his own orders. But it made no difference, he added, who commanded since defeat was inevitable.

When Eleanor told Harold that he would command under her father he said to her:

"Thanks, lady, for an opportunity to crack crowns with this bandy legged, red headed usurper. If we do not knock the circlet off his head and the scepter out of his hand, then I die here in Gloucester castle."

This encouraged Eleanor, though she did not understand what he meant by cracking crowns, nor could she account for his desire to defeat a man in whose ranks he had fought. But she was so intent on saving the kingdom from the enemy that she gave no thought to anything else.

Harold at once took charge of all preparations. In this he was not subject to interference, for the old king was lamenting his fate in his apartments. At last the army of Conrad was seen marching in the valley, and when it reached the bottom of the hill on which Gloucester castle was situated the men encircled it, and it was evident that if they did not take it by storm they would starve the garrison into subjection.

The king of Gloucester came out clad in a suit of armor, but it was too heavy for his reduced strength. He stumbled and fell under its weight and was carried back to his room. This gave Harold full control. He gave Eleanor his plan. It was to act so that the invaders would believe that they had only to take their ease for a short time and their enemies would have to surrender for want of provisions. When they seemed most confident Harold would strike.

So he sent a deputation to say that since they had but five days' provisions the men of Gloucester must surrender and to ask what terms would be granted. Conrad said that he would grant no conditions. The deputation returned in the evening, and Conrad expected to receive a surrender the next day. Till midnight he and his army made the night ring with song and shouting. They had not finished carousing when the castle clock struck 2. Slowly the portcullis was raised, the drawbridge (the chains had been oiled to prevent a rattle) let down, and the little army of Gloucester, led by Harold, silently emerged and, dividing into four bands, bore down from the four points of the compass upon the men of Conrad and with a yell began to stab and hack those who were sober enough to resist them and cut down those who attempted to rise.

Harold had noted the tent of Conrad, and while the usurper, half drunk, was endeavoring to get on his arms the late prisoner raised his sword and brought it down, cleaving his enemy's shoulder. Conrad was felled by the blow, and Harold, standing over him with raised sword, said:

"I am Harold, king of Warwick, come to avenge the death of my father. I came from exile and without being known joined your retainers as they were setting out to fight my father's old enemy of Gloucester. I came to watch my opportunity for vengeance on you. It has come."

When Conrad was killed his army was fleeing down the hill. As soon as they heard that their leader was dead they gave up all hope of getting safely back to Warwick and expected to pass the rest of their lives in the dungeons of Gloucester. In the morning Harold rode down to them and, calling them together, announced himself as their legitimate king. Conrad had been hated by them, and they received Harold's announcement with joy.

Harold bade them re-establish their camp and promised to lead them to Warwick. Then he rode back to Gloucester castle.

He found great joy there, even to the old king, who had got up from his bed and come out to the courtyard to welcome and thank his deliverer. But Harold, ignoring him, dismounted and, kneeling at Eleanor's feet, said:

"Good lady, I told you I would fight for you and not for the enemy of my father, for I am king of Warwick, who as a child was spirited away to prevent my being murdered by this infamous usurper."

"The enmity between our houses," replied Eleanor, "is ended by this splendid defense of yours."

And leading him to her father she effected a reconciliation.

The reconciliation was cemented by the marriage of King Harold and the Princess Eleanor. But that was many centuries ago. The house of Warwick still occupies Warwick castle, but the lineage has often changed since the period of this story.

Fussy Gown For the Girl Who Likes One

THIS study in black and white is put up in voile, white flounces embroidered in black, each tier being set off with a ruche of black georgette crape picoted. A simple bodice contrasts this elaborateness, voile box plaited and trimmed with narrow black taffeta ribbon. ANNA MAY.

THE EMERGENCY SHELF.

How to Be Always Prepared For Unexpected Guests.

When unexpected guests arrive the hostess naturally wishes to entertain them and to get her share of pleasure from the visit, but that matter of "what to eat" makes her ill at ease. She phones wildly for this and that or rushes out into the kitchen almost as soon as the guests are seated. Later, in taking stock, she finds that she has spent more than was warranted and that the refreshments offered were needlessly lavish or sadly one sided.

The hostess backed by a well stocked emergency shelf and menus arranged to fit any occasion opens her door to the party of friends who "just drop in" with absolute joy. She comfortably visits with her guests, for she knows she can serve dainty, satisfying refreshments in a twinkling from her emergency shelf.

On the emergency shelf there should be canned fish, meats, chicken and fruits, a jar of sweet homemade cookies, packages of plain crackers, a jar of pickles, beef extract and canned soups. A small case of grape juice will answer the call of almost all emergencies for beverages and desserts. Keep a pail of pure leaf lard on hand to mix up quick pastries and to cook croquettes.

FLESH COLORED LINGERIE.

The Fad For Fine Underwear Takes on Colorful Shapes.

Such a hold has flesh color obtained on the popular fancy that even in batiste flesh color is much used for nightgowns and underwear. Flesh color batiste is very effective embroidered in white or in bright pink and pale blue. A white scallop with a dainty floral design in white is particularly attractive on the pale tinted background, and many a pretty dressing jacket, nightgown and chemise or camisole is embroidered with the white. When blue is used in the embroidery it must be used with caution and in some patterns is better combined with white, but it is very effective to run pale blue ribbon in flesh colored lingerie, whether of batiste or silk or satin, and this is being done a great deal by the specialty shops which make a point of dainty and unusual lingerie creations. The combination of pink and blue is gaining steadily in favor in this connection and is useful as well as attractive, since it allows of the garment's use with either pink or blue over finery.

The Alternative.

Figg—My wife wants a new silk dress.

Fogg — Are you going to let her have it?

Figg—Yes. It's a case of silks or sulks.—Boston Transcript.

The Kitchen Cupboard

WHOLESOME BREADS.

GRAHAM BREAD.—Scald one pint of milk and one pint of water, melt two tablespoonfuls of lard in liquid. When lukewarm, add one yeast cake dissolved in three-quarters cupful lukewarm water. Make soft batter by adding one quart graham flour, two tablespoonfuls sugar, two teaspoonfuls salt. Cover with doubled warm woolen cloth. Set in warm place over night. In morning add enough white flour to make stiff dough. Knead with white flour until dough will absorb no more and is elastic and does not stick to board (about ten or fifteen minutes). This makes four loaves or three loaves and pan of biscuits. Set to rise again in warm place (shelf over stove) till doubled in bulk. Bake in hot oven, 300 degrees, forty or sixty minutes. Whole wheat or rye bread can be made same way. A couple of handfuls wheat bran make it better added to sponge at night. Raisin bread can be made by halving batter in morning and adding teacupful raisins, cupful sugar and half cupful butter to one part.

Peanut Bread.—Two and one-half cupfuls flour, one-half cupful sugar, one cupful peanuts, chopped fine; two teaspoonfuls baking powder, one teaspoonful salt. Mix all together and add one egg beaten with enough sweet milk to make a stiff batter. Pour in a bread tin and bake forty minutes. This makes one loaf.

Spoon Bread.—One pint of milk heated to boiling point; stir into this one cupful of white cornmeal; cook five minutes; beat in two tablespoonfuls of butter and one-half cupful of cold milk into the mush; add two eggs, well beaten; once more add one-half cupful cold milk. Put into a well buttered dish and bake for one-half hour in rather quick oven.

Brown Bread. — Three cupfuls of meal, one and one-half cupfuls of graham flour, one-half cupful of rye flour, one scant cupful of molasses, just about a quart of milk or water, three level teaspoonfuls of soda, about a good teaspoonful salt.

Anna Thompson.

Japanese Women Smokers.

All the men and most of the ladies in Japan smoke, the girls beginning when they are about ten years of age. The ladies have pipes with longer stems than the men, and if one of them wishes to show a gentleman a special mark of favor she lights her pipe, takes a whiff, hands it to him and allows him to smoke.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

Sheer white batiste, insertion and edging are employed in the making of this dainty blouse. The insertion is applied in an encircling band and repeated on the collar and shapely sleeves. Edging outlined the collar, front of the blouse and extends in narrow ruffles up the sleeves. In medium size the waist requires 2 1-4 yards 36-inch batiste, 4 yards insertion and 5 1-4 yards edging.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6677; sizes, 34 to 44 inches bust, price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

Some Women and Money.

One of the chief causes of financial pressure in modern life is the failure of some girls and women to realize that money does not fall like the dew, gently from heaven.—Mother's Magazine.

LADIES

We have on display in our South window a large number of Sets of

SANITO COOKING UTENSILS

while they last we will sell them at

70 Cents the Set

The wholesale price is more than that, but we are going to dispose of them at a great sacrifice.

COME EARLY IF YOU WISH TO AVAIL YOURSELF OF THIS OFFER

They were bought by the former publishers for premiums, but we are giving no premiums with the

FULTON EVENING TIMES

BROTHER DEAD IN TRENCHES

(Continued from Page One)

shrapnel wounds in the arm and leg.

Two other brothers, Claude and Vernon Brownson, are still in France, and the regiments of which they are members are in the thick of the fighting along the Somme. They have also corresponded with their sister and brother in this city, but no word has been received concerning their whereabouts since early in June. All correspondence from the field forces is restricted by the censors to the bare details and personal matters entirely, and any information concerning the movements and disposition of troops is dileted in England.

THE QUIRK TODAY

Remake City For Picture. Build Village Square About Blacksmith Shop.

Several streets of the city of Burbank, Cal., were transformed so as to serve as the setting for a scene in the William Fox production, "A Man of Sorrow," starring William Farnum, which was directed by Oscar C. Apfel.

In hunting for a suitable location in which to take a village square scene, Lester Scott, Jr., Mr. Apfel's assistant, found an old blacksmith shop standing in the center of Burbank. It was just the thing needed and he immediately set about obtaining the consent of city officials to build a town square around the blacksmith shop.

Realizing the publicity the city would gain through the pictures, consent was given and the construction of the square was begun. A huge funtain was built and houses were erected, with the blacksmith shop forming the center of the group.

ADVERTISED LETTERS

The following letters remain uncalled for at the Post Office July 12, 1916. Inquirers will please say advertised:

Frank Andy 2, M. E. Braun, Chris J. F. Christopher, E. T. Cowles, Mr. and Mrs. Cummings, John Hoyt, E. A. Hutchins, Andrew Marshall, Harry McCarthy, Jessie Nicholas, Bert Orton, John Pluff, J. R. Somers, Levi Taylor, William Webster.

Women—Miss Helen Adams, Miss M. E. Humpston, Miss Flora Waldron, Miss Lola Wilson, Mrs. Wallace Carr, Carrie Dillenbeck, Mrs. Smith Fields, Mrs. Burt Williams.

Camden Furniture Co., Carslay Bacc.

PETER T. CONLEY,
Postmaster.

NORTH VOLNEY

The L. A. S. will meet at the church parlors, Wednesday. Every one invited.

* * *

Calla Parkhurst fractured her arm last Monday. Dr. Stockwell, of New Haven, reduced the fracture.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Coe and children, of Hastings, motored here Sunday and called on R. C. Coe and family and Mr. and Mrs. Charles McDougalls.

* * *

Mrs. Earl McDougall and children spent Sunday with her brother, Clinton Hall.

* * *

The little daughter of Llefelyn Hart is spending some time with her grandmother, Mrs. Mary Hart, at the home of William West.

* * *

Mrs. Burt Sconton, of Fulton, spent Saturday and Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Frank Austin and her sister-in-law, Mrs. G. B. Cook.

* * *

Mr. Amos McDougall has gone to the Thousand Islands to work.

* * *

Miss Helen Broadwell is spending some time at Split Rock with Mrs. M. Schell.

* * *

Mrs. Evaline Griswold, of Fulton, who has been spending some time with her daughter, Mrs. Charles McDougall has returned home.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert West, of Orwell, have returned to their home after spending a few days with their cousin, Mr. and Mrs. William West.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Umback and daughter, Nancy, of Phoenix, and Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Stevens and family spent July Fourth with H. L. Bowen and family.

* * *

Miss Naomi Sikes is spending a week with her aunt, Mrs. Velma Dexter, at Oswego.

* * *

William Taft, Winfield and Thelma Bogardus are spending a few days at Gerard Taaft's.

* * *

Mrs. Laura Abbott, of South New Haven, spent Friday with Mrs. Fred Sikes.

* * *

Mrs. Benton Hollbrook is having a serious time with her eyes. Dr. Radway, of Mexico was called Sunday.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William Potter and daughters, Mrs. Lefa Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Silas McDougall and Clifford Shennon, spent July Fourth at the lake.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Van Buren went to Oswego on Sunday to visit Raymond Bellinger, who was so badly hurt when his motorcycle collided with a trolley car.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. William West spent July 4th with his parents at Oswego Forum.

* * *

George Gates, who works in Fulton, spent last week at home here.

* * *

Mrs. Hattie Hale and sister, Mrs. Etta McCarty called on friends here on Thursday.

* * *

Miss Bertha Dune returned home last Tuesday after spending some time wiih relatives in Clinton and Phoenix.

* * *

Maurice Stevens has hired out to work for Arthur Hubbard in the crate factory.

* * *

Nine of the trail hitters, of Fulton, attended our Wednesday evening prayer meeting.

* * *

Mildred Gates and Leonard Gates are picking strawberries at New Haven, for Mr. Newvine.

* * *

Miss Ruth Larkin spent Sunday with Mildred Gates.

BUNDY'S CROSSING.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mohanna, of Fulton, spent Sunday with Mr. and C. J. Echard.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. DeLoss McDonald, of Mount Pleasant, Mr. and Mrs. Byron Wells and children, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Graham.

* * *

Mrs. Margaret Hill has returned to her home at East Minetto.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. James Stevens spent Sunday with her brother and family Mr. Erwin Dumont.

* * *

Many from here attended Old Home Week at Fulton, also Independence day.

* * *

All are busy making hay and picking berries here.

* * *

Over a thousand autos, motorcycles and vehicles were seen to pass through here on Tuesday.

* * *

Mrs. Allen Dewey and Mrs. Ransome Dumont are slowly recovering.

FOR SALE

Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.

Ready for Prompt Delivery

Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y

The following letter was received this morning by Mrs. N. A. Jones:

Aseptico Laboratories Inc.

Rochester, N. Y. July 6, 1916

To Mrs. N. A. Jones,
107 Rochester Street,
Fulton, New York.

Dear Mrs. Jones: Yesterday's paper stated that 100 deaths from Infantile Paralysis had occurred and the average death rate in New York City alone from this cause is now one every hour.

Infantile Paralysis is a germ disease contracted through the nose and mouth and as a preventive measure every mother should take special care of her children at this time.

Children who are old enough to use a gargle or nasal douche should do so using half a level teaspoonful of Aseptico to a glass of water for a gargle and a solution of not over half that strength for a nasal douche. Younger children should have their mouths swabbed out with clean linen and solution of gargling strength. A clean handkerchief over the index finger does this admirably. Children should be kept in their own homes and yards away from contact with others and parties or picnics should be especially avoided. Water for babies' bath should contain Aseptico and all older children should brush their teeth with it.

Remember: This disease does not become noticeable until it is too late to cure it. There is already a case in Binghamton and a number in the Hudson Valley. No one knows how soon your town will be reached.

It is your duty as our representative and as a Christian woman to do everything in your power to save the children of your territory from this terrible disease. Don't wait. Start now in the work of helping mothers to save their babies. If you are a mother you need no further word. If not, do it for the sake of the mother who did everything for you.

Help save the babies.

ASEPTICO LABORATORIES, Inc.

REPRESENTED BY MRS. N. A. JONES, PHONE 1325.

Thackeray on Fame.

Thackeray's literary work did not help him much when he sought to enter the house of commons. The Rev. Frederick Meyrick in his "Memories of Oxford" tells of a dinner given when he stood as a Liberal for that city: "I remarked to him that his must be a special experience, as he was known by fame to most of those whose votes he canvassed. 'Now,' he said, laying down his knife and fork and holding up a finger, 'there was only one man among all that I went to see who had heard my name before and he was a circulating librarian. Such is mortal fame.'" That was in 1857, ten years after the publication of "Vanity Fair."

The Chicle Tree.

Chewing gum is nothing but chicle mixed with sugar and flavoring, and chicle is the gum of a tree that grows plentifully in Mexico and Central America and that of recent years has been cultivated on a large scale in Yucatan.

The chicle tree is not unlike the india rubber tree, and the gum was first shipped to America by men who believed that in it they had a perfect substitute for rubber. In this, however, they were mistaken, as it was found that the chicle gum was insoluble. Not to this day has any medium, acid or alkali, spirit or ether been found that will dissolve it.—Argonaut.

Making the Money Last.

Rosa Bonheur used to say that her youth was one of great poverty. Then she would add some droll stories about the family method of regulating its finance. The studio was a collection of odds and ends, and M. Bonheur knew how to turn that disorder to account. When he received money for his work he would take a handful of coin and throw it at random about the room. Then in times of stress, when there was apparently not a farthing left in the house, the entire family would set to work searching in nooks and corners. Sometimes they would find a five franc piece, and that warded off starvation.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 481 — WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, 1916 — Price, One Cent

RIGHTER IS ELKS' RULER

Edward J. Righter of New Orleans Wins National Honor at Baltimore. Stevenson Not a Candidate

Edward J. Righter, of New Orleans, was elected national exalted ruler of the Elks of the United States at the Baltimore Convention yesterday. Mr. Righter is a prominent hotel man in the Crescent City, and is well known to many members of the Fulton lodge. His election was a foregone conclusion early in the year, and no active opposition to his candidacy was manifest.

The delegates chose Boston as the 1917 convention city, after a long fight in which several cities in the middle western states tried to secure the honor.

John W. Stevenson, exalted ruler of Fulton lodge, who is a candidate from this city to the convention, made no campaign this year for the office of national exalted ruler, in fact, he was suggested as a candidate only recently, and his supporters had little time to organize for him. Friends of Mr. Stevenson here state that he is not likely to be nominated next year either, and that 1918 will probably see a concerted effort to land him in the national chair. The wide scope of the Elks' order requires a long systematic campaign, particularly where the national offices are concerned, and candidates sometimes work for two or three years lining up supporters before their names are put in nomination at the national convention.

Mr. Stevenson has sent souvenirs of the convention to many of his friends in this city, and has written that he will probably return Friday. Baltimore is entertaining the visiting Elks in fine style and every form of amusement and the complete control of the city has been placed in their hands. Tomorrow night the visitors will be entertained at a prize fight, with Jack Dillon, the "Indiana maneater" and "Battling" Levinsky of New York as the contestants.

Some Weather, Friend!

According to the thermometer in the shade at the office of Dr. W. W. Kennedy on South First street it was 93 degrees hot as the 12 o'clock whistle blew today. In the words of the prophet, "That's some heat!" But think of the lads on the border—and hurry to enlist in the National Guard.

FORSAKEN HUSBAND IN SEARCH FOR SPOUSE

A resident of the First ward caused considerable excitement in the vicinity of the lower falls last night while on a still hunt for his wife, whom he claimed was receiving th attentions of another man and was out walking with him last night. His excited inquiries as to her whereabouts aroused the curiosity of a large number of residents of that section, and a crowd began to follow the man as he started to find a policeman. No policeman could be found at the time, and after publicly announcing his intentions of forcing a recokining with his faithless helpmeet, the man returned to his home, and all was peaceful once more along the Oswego.

FIRST STAG DINNER AT PATHFINDER ISLAND

The usual Wednesday stag day which is a feature of the summer program of athletic sports including baseball game between picked teams. The batteries as given out this morning called for the appearance of Maurice Conley and Chief Edward J. Dyer as the battery performers for the "Indefatigables," while Dr. Kellar and Frank Flanders will be in the points for the "Invincibles." Among those who will shine are Louis Cornell, Fred Feeley, Edward Rugg, John Painter, Bruce Steele, Harold O'Brien, Charles O'Brien, J. Morrill, Dr. Schlappi, William Forsythe, A. L. Rice, Harold Bristol, G. Tilly and C. M. Allen, Jr.

The tennis courts will be reserved for the use of the male members of the club, and several keen matches are on the bill. A chicken pie supper will be served tonight at six o'clock. There will be no dancing this evening, but the usual dancing party will be held Friday night.

WEALTHY WOMEN TO AID SOLDIERS' FAMILIES

The wives of the General Staff Officers of the New York National Guard and Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, form the executive committee of the Active Service Auxiliary, National Guard, New York. Of this committee Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt is chairman. The object of the auxiliary is first to furnish immediate relief to those families of Guardsmen in immediate need of relief because of the cessation of the husband's earnings; and, secondly, to bring the whole matter of Guard relief within the cognizance of the military system. The following statement made today by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt explains the object and progress of the work:

"The calling out of the Guardsmen makes necessary in this country a great problem of adjustment, which we are by no means able to meet.

"The rapid withdrawing of wage earners almost without premonition causes an economic crisis within a state which is hardly less than the crisis in military affairs of which this country is just beginning to be conscious.

"Take a single instance. Suppose we have a young Guard of about thirty-five years of age. He has several young children whose maintenance and education are just beginning to be expensive. He has just managed to get on his feet in business. He still has debts on his household furniture. He is carrying heavy insurance. In other words, his obligations daily are just about as great as his daily assets.

"The call comes and he goes off with the Guard. His family has absolutely no reserve, and it is not logical that they would have. They have been busy building up an economic status which they have not yet attained, and it is not his fault or his wife's fault that they have not.

"The departure of that Guardsman throws the whole family into an entirely different economic situation. Unless they happen to have wealthy relatives, they become at once objects for public relief.

"Many patriotic men and women in this country regard this economic aspect of our unpreparedness as one of the most repellent aspects, one of the conditions most in need of swift and radical change.

"The support of the National Guard in active duty and the support of our whole army reserve in active duty legitimately belongs to our Federal military policy, by which the expense must ultimately be borne.

"Until it is, we feel that this matter of Guard relief should be brought within the cognizance of the military system, if it cannot be brought under the direct authority of this system.

"With this conviction, the Active Service Auxiliary of the National Guard of New York has been established. We plan to establish branches throughout the State and have all applications for relief come into the local armories of the Regiment in which the men are enrolled.

"This method should accomplish two very desirable objects. It should make the men at the front feel more secure in the knowledge that their families are being taken care of by a part of the very system in which they are enlisted. You notice that we have adopted for our slogan—'They have enlisted to protect our families in our homes. We must enlist to protect their families in their homes.' The men will be spared the worry and chagrin of knowing that their families are dependent upon community relief associations—which may or may not exist. And, secondly, it will co-ordinate all the Guard relief organizations and centralize the whole problem of taking care of dependent families of our Guardsmen.

"This centralization of the relief system will do two things. It will show exactly what the economic situation, caused by the sudden withdrawal of the Guardsmen under our present system, actually is. We shall certainly get the definite facts on the upheaval and misery caused by the present system. And, secondly, this centralization will bring us one step nearer to a national system of maintenance for our Guardsmen and army reserves, which will be dependent upon private subscription.

"And, so, while in a sense, the present movement is an emergency movement, I believe it also establishes the principles upon which we shall be able to work out an official policy.

"Within the few days in which the Active Service Auxiliary has been at work at the 71st Regiment Armory, it has brought forth a number of interesting and appealing situations. And it must be remembered that only a very few people know as yet where to apply, and also that many people who might well apply will for a time hesitate to do so. Many of our most pressing cases are those of pregnant women—husband and income withdrawn at the very moment of a domestic crisis.

"In many cases rents are due and landlords are pressing. He is in the 12th Regiment. They have no savings, and his departure left his mother entirely destitute. She has received her dispossess notice. She has a four room apartment for which she pays $10.50. We have paid the rent due and have moved her to a smaller apartment of three rooms, bought her a stove, and, since she is able to work and wishes to, we are sending her to a position in a button factory. After her son's pay is received August 1, she will be all right.

"Another case is that of a wife of a Guardsman in the 14th Regiment, Brooklyn. She has three children. Her husband earned $18 a week. They have no savings and no income. It costs her $10 a week to keep up the home. She is willing to work and will be given temporary employment. A neighbor promises to care for the two smaller children daily. The boy of fourteen will be placed in an office tomorrow. His mother is now applying for working papers. Meanwhile money has been advanced for food until the husband's pay comes in.

"By such adjustments we shall be able to avert a permanent break in the fortunes of many families. We hope that the work now in progress in the 71st Regiment Armory, and soon to be established in other armories throughout the state, will enlist the enthusiastic interest of patriotic citizens everywhere, and bring us all to the consideration we ought to give to this aspect of our national preparedness. If we do, the problem will be the sooner solved."

NEW ORDINANCE TO REGULATE TAXICABS

After a consultation yesterday afternoon between George M. Fanning, W. C. Hillick, city attorney; R. L. McCully and William Wilson of Van Wagenen, Inc., and the Wilson-Scott Taxicab company respectively, it was announced that no legal action would be taken under the present ordinance against the unlicensed taxi drivers who are accepting hack fares in this city. In the opinion of Mr. Fanning, the present ordinance affords a chance for a protracted litigation, in that the Common Council overstepped its authority in stipulating a penalty which could be imposed upon violators in stipulating a penalty which could be imposed upon violators of the ordinance. Mr. Fanning does not believe that the council has this authority, and Mr. Hillick shares his opinion, and for that reason did not take action against the offenders when the matter was called to his attention by the police some time ago.

As the ordinance now stands, all persons other than those who have paid a license fee of $50 for the first car and $2 each for all additional cars in service, are prohibited from engaging in the public hacking business in this city, and all violations of the law are to be punished by a fine of not less than $2 nor more than $50, with imprisonment in the Oswego County jail until the fine is paid. Mr. Fanning says the council has no authority to impose a fine, but does possess the right to class the offense as a misdemeanor, punishable as such under the law, or can specify the sum of money which can be recovered by the licensed companies through a civil action against the violators.

The licensed companies yesterday placed their case in the hands of Mr. Fanning, and he will take the matter before the next meeting of the Common Council. He will offer a new ordinance for the consideration of the aldermen, which will be explicit in its provisions and will invest the police with the authority necessary to properly protect the licensed companies from unfair competition.

The offenders of the existing ordinance have made no attempts to conceal the fact that they have accepted fares in violation of the ordinance, and some of the men have received legal advices that they could not be prosecuted under the present law. The licensed companies on the other hand, do not desire to prosecute these men in an unfriendly spirit, but feel that the payment of a large license fee to the city should afford them some protection, and if it cannot, they will demand the return of the money.

The matter was to be brought before the Common Council last night, but on account of the absence of Mayor Lewis and the extreme heat, the meeting was postponed until Thursday evening.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE

(By United Press)

Berlin—Two German naval aeroplanes bombarded the French seaport of Calais and a troop encampment at Bray-Les-Dunes, on the night of July 10-11, returning undamaged, it was officially announced today.

* * *

Scranton—One man is known dead and several are missing in a fire which at eleven o'clock had destroyed McCullom's Hotel and several residences at Duryea, near here, and was sweeping beyond the control of firemen from three towns.

* * *

Washington—The United States will watch carefully and be deeply interested in any action taken by Allied governments against the great German submarine merchantman, Deutschland, a high administration official said today. This official warmly denied reports saying the United States will ignore any possible action by Allied governments.

* * *

London—German troops regained some lost ground in the fighting last night between the Mametz and Trones works, east of Albert, but all other enemy attacks were beaten off with heavy enemy losses, General Haig reported to the War Office this afternoon.

* * *

El Paso, Texas—A battle still raging, at last reports, opened at Sombaerto, Durango, today with an attack of Carranzista forces under General Garcia on a Villista column led by General Compreres and General Polizo. This official news came from General Crevino at Chihuahua city, and was followed by an unconfirmed report that General Ignacio Enriquez, sent by War Minister Obregon to replace Crevino in command of the de facto army of the North had been captured by Villistas and executed.

Washington — President Wilson may make a personal appeal to the rulers of the belligerent nations of Europe to save Poland from devastation.

* * *

Paris—French troops made a successful counter attack on the north eastern front of Verdun last night, recapturing part of the ground captured by the Germans yesterday in the heavy offensive along the Fleury-Chenois line, the War Office announced today that eighty prisoners were taken.

* * *

Washington—General George W. Goethals, the builder of the Panama Canal is expected to resign his post as governor of the Canal one to-day.

Camp Whitman.—The 22nd Engineers of New York entrained for the border this afternoon. The Third Infantry was breaking camp as the Engineers departed and will leave tomorrow. The First New York armored car arrived this afternoon, accompanied by a motor cycle squad.

* * *

London—A pitched battle for the possession of important points north east of Albert has followed the arrival of strong bodies of German reinforcements to check the British offensive. The German War Office announced this afternoon that the fighting has gone on practically without interruption since Monday. The two armies are locked in a hand to hand struggle in many sectors of a wide front extending on both sides of the Bapaume-Albert road. The fighting is especially violent near Contalmaison, and in a south easterly direction in the Mametz and Trones works, Berlin reported. General Haig, British commander in chief, reported this afternoon the arrival of strong German reinforcements and admitted that the British had suffered temporary setbacks.

HEAT WAVE SWEEPS CITY

Thermometer Registers Warmest Day of the Year—Chocolate Employes Unable to Mold Candy.

The thermometer showed 88 degrees at one o'clock yesterday noon, and there was little change in the figures at 12 midnight. While there were no cases of prostration reported on the streets, due probably to the fact that few people left the shelter of their homes or places of business, the terrific heat wave was responsible for much suffering throughout the city, especially on the part of older people and babies.

Although heavy clouds were banked in the west at midnight, and thousands who could not sleep because of the heat were watchfully waiting for rain to fall, the storm clouds passed overhead with a gentle breeze and the city was given no relief.

Today promises to be still warmer, and the half holiday given the employes of most of the leading stores of the city will be gratefully received. Many of the employes plan to go for a swim in the cool waters of the river, and a large number will spend the after noon at Pathfinder Island.

Many residents who had postponed their departure for their summer homes at nearby resorts and in the North Woods because of the Old Home Week celebration hastily made arrangements yesterday to get away from the intense heat, as there is every likelihood that the present warm wave will continue for the next two weeks, according to United States weather reports.

At the Peters Chocolate Works, many employes were unable to complete their full time yesterday, for the heat softened the chocolate candy and it could not be handled. The night shift was obliged to wait until ten o'clock before starting work in order that the candy might cool.

OPERATE ON SKULL TO SAVE NORTON.

An operation was made at the Lee Memorial Hospital this morning in an attempt to save the life of Levi P. Norton who sustained a fractured skull when he fell down the stairs of the Waldhorn block during Old Home Week. Norton claims he was pushed down the stairs.

Dr. A. L. Hall was called at the time of the accident and took five stitches in a long cut in the man's head, but a superficial examination disclosed nothing serious. Since that time, however, Norton has been affected with epileptic fits, and his condition became so serious yesterday that he was taken to the hospital. There it was learned that a bone in the skull had been fractured and was pressing upon the brain.

The operation was a very delicate one, and Mr. Norton's condition is serious, according to the hospital officials. Dr. Cusack performed the operation.

CHILDREN'S PICNIC AT LAKE NEAHTAWANTA

A party of 2[illegible] children, guests of the Salvation Army, were transported in automobiles this morning to the picnic grounds at North Bay on Lake Neahtawanta, where they will enjoy the annual Army outing for the children of the city.

The Army furnished the lunches for the kiddies, and several aides under the direction of Ensign Fitzgerald will care for the children and keep them out of mischief while they are at the lake. There will be games for the girls and bathing suits and baseball paraphernalia for the boys.

The Van Dagenen Corporation, Almon Bristol and others kindly loaned their cars for the transportation of the children, and the little ones will be brought home early this evening.

CORTLAND REPORTS A CASE OF PARALYSIS

(By United Press)

Syracuse—Dr. W. H. Hall of Cortlandt, this morning reported to the health officers here the first case of infantile paralysis in this section. The daughter of Slater Sanders, of Staten Island, on a visit here since July 6, developed the disease yesterday. She has been isolated.

Local and Personal

Francis X. Welch, of the Ray B. Smith law offices, Syracuse, was in town yesterday on business.

* * *

J. L. McQuade proprietor of the Clark House, is the proud owner of a new four passenger Overland roadster, cloverleaf model.

* * *

Miss Ella Drake, of New York city, is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. L. Fowler Joy.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. L. Fowler Joy, are on an extended auto trip to be gone for the week.

Boys, Look Out For Green Apples

Lester Wolroth had a very severe attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating green apples. His mother, Mrs. Pearl Wolroth, Herkimer, N. Y., says, "I was advised to give him Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which I did, and the relief from the first was very great. After taking three doses he was all right."

For sale by all dealers.

To Make Mushroom Ketchup.

"Mushroom ketchup may be made after the following recipe," says a writer in Farm and Fireside:

"One peck mushrooms, carefully picked over; one pint vinegar, two tablespoonfuls salt, one-half teaspoonful cayenne, two tablespoonfuls mustard, one tablespoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful mace, one-half tablespoonful cloves.

"Cook the mushrooms with one cupful of water until quite tender and rub them through a colander. Add to this pulp the vinegar and spices and cook about half an hour longer. Bottle and seal.

"This sauce is delicious with fish, steak and cold meat."

For Sale. Carload Alfalfa and timothy hay. Van Wagenen, Inc.

YOUR BOWELS SHOULD MOVE ONCE A DAY

A free easy movement of the bowels every day is a sign of good health. Dr. King's New Life Pills will give you a gentle laxative effect without griping and free your system of blood poisons, purify your blood, overcome constipation and have an excellent tonic effect on the entire system. Makes you feel like living. Only 25c. at druggists.

TOURING WEEK STIRS SPIRIT TRUE MOTORISTS

The country's call of the road, sounded by National Touring Week, is singing in the ears of every motorist to whom vacation spells the free and the open. When August 6th, the date of the week automobilists are setting aside for spending their vacations in their cars, is bared on the calendar, motorists by thousands will be on the road from the Atlantic shore to the Pacific coast.

No movement has ever produced a more spontaneous or nation-wide response. The call to "come, wander a-wheel" has cast its spell to the remote village, and into the isolation of the great city.

There is yet much of the nomad in the human animal, notwithstanding his centuries of what he terms civilization. In his heart he is often the gypsy. He dreams, as he works, of fields afar, and beauty spots hidden in the woodlands for his particular joy. With vacation the spell to go forth and find them grows irresistible.

What more in harmony with modern efficiency and love of creature comforts than that the nomad should do his wandering in a motor car. The automobile tourist is the gyspy de luxe. Therefore, motorists by thousands are hearkening to the call of National Touring Week.

Newspapers, automobile clubs, and automobile dealers, at once sensing the popular appeal of the movement, have aligned themselves with it. The momentum it has already gained will carry the outpouring of motorists far beyond the single week set for the touring festival.

"Take that vacation in your motor car if you would drink the full measure of it," is the warning of the Summer.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

WEDNESDAY, JULY 12, 1916

PITY FOR THE MEXICANS

It may not be a popular thing to do at this time, when our boys are on their way to the border of Mexico, to give a good account of themselves in event war comes between the two nations—it may not be popular to speak a kindly word for the Mexicans or to express pity for them. But those who have lately been in Mexico and have seen the miserable people of that country, do not hesitate to so express themselves.

One of these persons is J. J. Taylor, of the Dallas News. He has just returned from Mexico, and he isn't at all anxious for war between the two countries. He knows the trouble that has been caused by certain Mexicans—the tragic murders and the destruction of property along the border by the Mexican bandits is more familiar to him than to us at this distance. But this is what he writes upon his return from the troubled country:

"In all seriousness I must say that the only emotions which I—and most of my adventurous co-explorers—experienced in Mexico were those of sympathy and pity. The poor are there by thousands, and little beggar boys and girls, many of them with bright and sensitive faces, excited the commiseration of every one of our party. These people are starving. These people are in rags. There are no schools for the children; there is no work for the men."

War may come with Mexico. If it does we shall not fight these little boys and girls; we shall feed them. If it does not come, we ought to find some way to help them.

Mexico has never had a chance; always there has been some one upon her prostrate form. Whether these hungry and ragged people can ever expect or hope to find themselves until we go to war with the country, and give the common people a chance, remains to be seen.

But at this time we can only pity those poor people, and sympathize with them—which will not clothe them nor feed them if we stop at pity and sympathy.

FULTON NEEDS GOOD STREETS

At the last meeting of the Board of Public Works certain members of the commission and aldermen present brought to the attention of the Board the condition of the streets of Fulton, not only those in the outlying districts which are still unpaved, and are impassable four months or more during the year, but thickly populated residential streets of the city—streets that are considered main arteries of traffic. The discussion did not include South First street, that matter having now passed beyond control of the Board. Oneida street, Emery street, several cross streets on the west side, and Hannibal street, were the main topics of discussion.

The Board decided to make a tour of the streets of the city some afternoon later in the week. Every street, no matter how small, will be covered and inspected and the members of the Board will make notes on the condition of each highway. A detailed report of unsatisfactory conditions will then be presented to the Common Council and the aldermen will be asked to conceive of some method by which funds to improve these conditions can be raised. Something must be done, and done at once, if the city is not to undergo the heavy expense of practically rebuilding certain city thoroughfares within the next two years. Many of the streets can be saved by quick action, but after another winter passes over them, they will require the expenditure of much more money and labor than they now need.

Nothing so impresses the casual visitor to a city as good streets and residential avenues. Fultonians who have traveled can attest this fact. Tall buildings in the large cities first impress the man from the small town, but let the city man go to the urban districts and the first thing that catches his eye is the street. If a city can boast wide, well-kept business streets and carefully constructed avenues in the residential sections, with plenty of shade trees, the traveler is very apt to receive the impression that the town is alive and well governed, and that the people posse the proper measure of civic pride. On the other hand, if muddy and unkempt business thoroughfares, with rubbish filled gutters, and narrow residential streets full of ruts and furrows meet his gaze, he is equally apt to say. "It's a dead town."

The traveler who has visited Washington is certain to remember his first view of Pennsylvania avenue, no matter if he forgets every other object of interest. Broad street, Philadelphia, with its clean, smooth asphalt pavement and the Lancaster Pike, which runs to Harrisburg through picturesque Bryn Mawr, Haverford, Merion and other beautiful residential suburbs of the Quaker city, are also cited as examples of the last word in street construction and maintenance; Canal Street, New Orleans, the widest business street in America, although at times one of the dirtiest business arteries in the South, is one of the most beautiful in the world through the residential districts, and is remembered and described by every traveler who visits the Crescent City.

In our own state, the main street in Auburn is an example of foresight in road building, and its spick and span appearance at all times has occasioned much favorable comment from travelers.

It is safe to say that the wretched condition of South First street during the past year has been the cause of more unfavorable comment from visitors to this city than any other one thing. The passing tourist, for instance, en route to the Thousand Islands, after crossing the Broadway-Rochester street stretch, is quite likely to say, if in the future he should be questioned concerning this city, "Yes, that's the town that has the worst paved main street in Central New York," and while Fulton possesses many beautiful streets in good condition, this man, by chance passing along the worst of the lot, forms his opinion accordingly.

Any action taken by the Board of Public Works and Common Council looking to the improvement of the residential and business streets of Fulton, is certain to meet with the approval of the public at large, and if a special election to decide whether or not a bond issue for funds shall be made, is found necessary, the administration can rest assured that any feasible plans will be approved and supported.

WHEN YOU HAVE A COLD

Give it attention, avoid exposure, be regular and careful of your diet, also commence taking Dr. King's New Discovery. It contains Pine-Tar, Anseptic Oils and Balsams. Is slightly laxative. Dr. King's New Discovery eases your cough, soothes your throat and bronchial tubes, checks your cold, starts to clear your head. In a short time you know your cold is better. Its the standard family cough syrup in use over 40 years. Get a bottle at once. Keep it in the house as a cold insurance. Sold at your druggist.

Bowel Complaint in Children.

Mrs. Margaret Perry, Utica, N. Y., says, "When my son, now grown, was four years old he had a dreadful attack of bloody dysentery, and was so sick that the doctors gave him up to die. A neighbor who knew what a wonderful medicine Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is advised me to give it to him. It is a great medicine and can certainly be relied upon in cases of bowel trouble."

For sale by all dealers.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

Acceptable For The Summer Wadrobe.

A delectable frock in cotton voile combined with crepe Georgette that answers all the purposes of style, while costing but a moderate sum.

The best sort of frock for summer afternoons is one that follows the latest lines of fashion without being expensive. With so many handsome cotton voiles in the shops, one has a wide selection of designs and there are numerous imported models which may be duplicated in style. The dress shown here requires, for average size, six yards 40-inch printed voile, with 1 yard 36-inch crepe Georgette for the vest, collar and cuffs. One-quarter of a yard of all-over lace will make the flare collar.

The bodice closes at the left side in surplice style and the fronts extend below the waistline in pointed effect. The skirt is a one-piece model with cascade drapery at the sides. It is gathered to a two-piece yoke, closing at the left side. In medium size the dress requires 8¾ yards 36-inch figured voile and 1 yard 44-inch crepe Georgette for the trimming. If lace is used to outline the collar and cuffs, 2½ yards will be required.

The novel lines of the bodice demand some exceptions to the accustomed rules in cutting, so that it is necessary to study the guide carefully. Note that the right and left fronts of the bodice and the collar, the material must be laid open and single on the cutting table, the right side up. To cut the sleeve, the material is also laid open, but in double widths, so that the sleeve and applied back may be cut in duplicate.

Now, fold the remaining portion of the voile and along the fold place the back of the waist. The back of the underblouse is arranged in the same way, with the front and the sleeve on a lengthwise thread of material.

Buttons trim the vest, matching the design of the voile in color. There is a marked return to the short sleeve. Sheer cotton frocks, especially show these models and they may be finished with turn-back cuffs or handkerchief frills or a series of ruffles. To have style one must have the trimmings. These are the details that let each woman show her individual taste and sense of style. Trimmings are the flavor of the fashion, and the most exacting taste is amply satisfied in the varied styles of dress trimmings and ornaments being produced this season.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6808. Sizes, 34 to 44 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

Skirt No. 6820. Sizes, 22 to 30 inches waist. Price, 15 cents.

REDUCED FARES

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

Alexandria Bay 2.50

(Including Tour of Islands)

Round Trip. Every Wednesday, Saturday, Sunday and Holiday to August 30th. Return limit same day.

Consult local ticket agents for time of trains and other information.

News to Her.

He—Concerning love, everything possible has been said and thought. She (coyly)—But not to me.

Deceitful Man.

"Didn't you think that was a beautiful girl with me today, Arthur?"

"What girl, my dearest?"

"Why, she was with me when you met us in front of the church."

"Was there a girl there, dear? I didn't notice. I was looking at you."

And then she loved him all the more.

Bad Outlook For Binks.

"What! Little Binks going to marry big, handsome Kate Blowitt. Why, she could carry him around in her pocket."

"But she won't. He'll be out of pocket all the time after he marries her."—Boston Transcript.

Just Supposin'.

"Will you be my wife?"

"You must ask mother first."

"Yes, but suppose she doesn't refuse me?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

He who lives well is the best preacher.—Cervantes.

HOME-COMING WEEK

Chautauqua Week is gala time for everybody from the youngest kiddie to the oldest grownup.

Why not make it Home-Coming Week?

Invite your relatives and friends to help you share the six big days of entertainment, inspiration and community good fellowship.

It's the jollification week of the year. Let us help you entertain your friends at the big Chautauqua tent.

In Fulton, July 31st to Aug. 5th

A MODEL TEACHER

Must Be Stylish as Well as Pretty, Says Principal.

ICHABOD CRANE TYPE EXTINCT

Brains, Beauty, Charm, Magnetism, Attractiveness, Poise and an Overdose of Common Sense Are General Attributes For a Modern Instructor, P. M. Fisher of Oakland, Cal., Thinks.

Oakland, Cal.—"There goes a schoolmarm. You can tell them by their dowdy dress and their prim manner."

"Oh, can you, though?" asks Principal P. M. Fisher of the Oakland Technical high school, who has drawn up the plans and measurements of the ideal teacher and declares that more and more of them are conforming to the standard. He has named the requirements necessary for the successful pedagogue, and those who are deficient can spend their vacations in catching up.

Brains, beauty, charm, magnetism, attractiveness, poise and an overdose of common sense are the general attributes. The old type of teacher is extinct, he says.

"The day of the Ichabod Crane type of teacher is gone," said Principal Fisher to his teachers. "The time when the lame, the halt and the blind were naturally elected as the custodians of the desk and the wielders of the birch is also passed. Today the teacher is more likely to look like a fashion model than like a frump. She has no narrow views, no old maid ways. She is brought into contact with many sides of life and to qualify she must feel and understand. She must be superior not only mentally, but morally and physically as well. She must be a well poised expert, human and efficient."

In the scale in which Principal Fisher would weigh the prospective teacher personally would have to outbalance education. It is also as important that she be well formed as well informed.

"No teacher needs to be a Venus; neither should she dress like a dress model," the principal elucidated, "but she must be wholesome and pleasant to look at, and her dress should be both becoming and businesslike without being designed especially to attract notice on its own account.

"But that is not all. Though she have the beauty of Helen of Troy, the style of Gaby des Lys, the brain of Mme. de Stael, still she would not qualify 100 per cent unless she had a voice tuneful as a thrush, soothing as the lapping of summer waters on a sandy beach.

"The voice should be free from all acid qualities, gentle and friendly," in the opinion of the Oakland educator, "and in character the teacher must be neither too insistent nor overstrenuous. Her mission is to call out a response in her pupils, not to set them on edge. The driving quality is too often apt to drive diffident natures to the wall. Instead of drawing them out she is likely to shut them up like clams.

"As gentle as a nun, yet she must be firm as a soldier. The pupil who tries to get through school by dodging and fourflushing she must call promptly."

FORTUNE AWAITS TWO GIRLS.

Man Will Leave $70,000 Estate to a Maid and a Clerk.

Chicago.—An unusual situation due to the dearth in domestics came to light recently when the Illinois free employment office announced that a man worth $70,000 who is adding $1,000 a year to his belongings is willing to give his fortune at the death of himself and his wife to two girls, one a domestic and another a clerk, if he can find them.

He wants a girl, preferably of Swedish or German descent, for general housework and another for clerking in his store, which is in a town of 2,000 sixty miles from Chicago. He will pay the girls $2 a week, with board and lodging, while he or his wife live.

DROWNS IN SET TUB.

Despondent Over Illness, He Commits Suicide In Novel Manner.

New Britain, Conn.—In a fit of despondency arising out of illness with alcoholic gastritis, Ricard Sederval, aged twenty-seven years, committed suicide by drowning. He lay across set tubs in the cellar of his brother's home at 102 Linwood street and held his head under water until he died.

After returning home he put up a pair of horses in the barn and then went into the cellar of the house. He was found fifteen minutes later by his sister-in-law. When the police arrived at the house they found Sederval's helper holding the dead man's head out of the water.

Woman Chokes Rats.

Atchison, Kan.—When Mrs. T. E. Garvey of this city discovered six full grown rats in a barrel of chick feed she did not scream and run, as most women would do, but grabbed them by the neck, one by one, and choked them to death. There was a canvas covering on the barrel, and it had a small hole in the center. The rats were choked as they emerged from the hole in the canvas.

Music With Joy Rides.

Bellefontaine, O.—Persons living in Bellefontaine believe they have originated something new for evening automobile rides. They are carrying small phonographs with them in their cars and enjoying music as they ride.

BELL-ANS

Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

The Young Old Man.

Probably nothing in the world is as wholesome as seeing an old man thinking himself young. Truly, a man is only as old as he thinks. Sometimes, though, this tendency amounts to almost a frenzy and becomes wholly irreconcilable and beyond all reason.

A case in point is emphasized in a postal card received by the circulation department from an eighty-three-year-old subscriber down state: "Dear Sirs—Why can't you send me the sporting extra instead of this 5 o'clock regular?"

We have a mind that this youngster will rock the boat, splash the young women and cut up all manner of kid didos on the trip across the river Styx!—Buffalo News.

Mrs. Morris Finds a Cure for Rheumatism

"I suffered from rheumatism in my knee for over a week last winter," writes Mrs. Frank Morris, Jamesville, N. Y. "It kept me awake at night and the pain was sometimes dreadful. I obtained a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment. After the second application I rested comfortably all night, and by applying it for a few days I was cured."

For sale by all dealers.

Shedders of Knowledge.

Sometimes boys throw mud at the side of a barn, and as long as the mud remains plastic it holds to the wood fairly well, but when the sun comes out it dries and crumples and falls off, and the next shower removes all traces of it.

That side of a barn is a good deal like our minds, and the boy may be likened to the modern makes of knowledge. In these days we are pelted pretty hard by plastic facts, but few of them stick. Perhaps, after all, this is a healthy dispensation of Providence which enables us to shed knowledge. Suppose we were obliged to retain all the "vital" facts that were thrown at us. What an intolerable burden!—Life.

Chaplain of the Commons.

The chaplain who opens the daily sessions of the British house of commons appears always in white silk robes and white kid gloves. He enters the chamber with the speaker and each bows twice to the house as they proceed to the table. Then, as they stand together, the speaker on the right, the chaplain reads the special prayers appointed for the occasion, the members also standing. When he has finished the chaplain retires, walking backward and bowing as he leaves the chamber. As he passes out an attendant calls, "Prayers are over," and the house proceeds to the transaction of business.—New York Sun.

WILL SLOAN'S LINIMENT RELIEVE PAIN?

Try it and see—one application will prove more than a column of claims. James S. Ferguson, Phila., Pa., writes: "I have had wonderful relief since I used Sloan's Liniment on my knees. To think after all these years of pain one application gave me relief. Many thanks for what your remedy has done for me." Don't keep on suffering, apply Sloan's Liniment where your pain is and notice how quick you get relief. Penetrates without rubbing. Buy it at any Drug Store. 25c.

Panama Indians.

The San Blas Indians, who occupy the north coast of the republic of Panama from a point a few miles west of the gulf of San Blas to Cape Tiburon, on the Colombia frontier, are well known as dwellers in the canal zone, which they frequently visit, but are by no means inclined to receive visits in return. They have resolutely maintained their independence, preserved their territory from foreign exploitation and kept their blood and racial characteristics pure. J. G. Steese, writing of these people in the Bulletin of the American Geographical Society, says that they keep up the custom of requiring traders who visit their coast to return to their ships at sundown.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Cure fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

Look on the bright side always. Pessimists are ever in the rear and never in the van in the march of progress. Your successful men and women are never chronic grumblers.—Bishop Samuel Fallows.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Wanted—Middle aged woman for general house work. Good wages, no children. Apply at5 North Third street, city. tf

Wanted—Good bright boy, over 16 years of age, to learn the printing trade. Apply at the Evening Times. tf

Wanted—At No. 216 Utica street, a girl for general housework. No washing or ironing. tf

Anyone desiring Cherries for canning should address C. W. Streeter, Phone 1272. 483

To Rent—Cottage, 8 rooms; all modern improvements, garden and fruit. Inquire 303 Worth street. tf

For Sale—A good E. M. F. Touring Car, for $175. Van Wagenen, Inc. 483

Teamster Wanted—Steady work winter and summer; good wages. John W. Pratt farm. tf

To Rent—Upper flat, $3 weekly. Phone 2520. tf

Wanted Boarders—Desirable rooms, good board, price reasonable. 420 Seneca street. Mrs. Lamb. 484

For Sale—A good Overland car for $200. Van Wagenen, Inc. 483

For Sale Cheap—One Roll Top Desk. The Morrill Press. 482

Young Men Wanted to learn the restaurant business. Those who have had experience in some kind of clerking preferred. Employment in our New York restaurants, $7 or $8 per week with board to start. Railroad fare reimbursed after having been in our service for six months. Good opportunity for the right young men to become managers in a reasonable length of time. Apply in person or by mail to H. Morris, Supt., care of Thompson's Restaurant, Grand Central Station, New York city.

For Sale—A good Maxwell touring car for $250. Van Wagenen, Inc. 483

Piano and several articles of household furniture to be sold at private sale, 177 S. Second St. Mrs. Fones. 483

BUELL BROS.

PLUMBING AND HEATING

Phone 186

17 N. Second St.

Mexican Names.

Mexican names that are euphonious in Spanish are awkward when pronounced as in English. The vowels have the same sound as in German. J has the sound of a strongly aspirated H, and the H is mute. The double R is rolled, and the double L is followed by the consonant sound of Y. The accent is on the ultimate when the word ends in a consonant, usually on the penultimate when ending in a vowel. Exceptions are indicated by use of the accent mark.

In Diplomatic Language.

Office Boy—The editor says he is much obliged to you for allowing him to see your drawings, but much regrets he is unable to use them. Fair Artist (eagerly)—Did he say that? Office Boy (truthfully)—Well, not exactly. He said: "Take 'em away, Pimple. They make me tired."—London Stray Stories.

Weather Query.

Frivol—In a "driving storm" does Jupiter Pluvius hold the rains? Sporty—No. He lets 'em go.

QUIRK THEATRE

Continuous 2 to 10:30
Matinee 5c., Night: Balcony 5c, Main Floor 10c

TODAY—

Charley Chaplin in Mutual Comedy
"THE FIREMAN"
in 2 Parts.

1st Episode of "The Secret of the Submarine" in 2-parts.

2—OTHERS—2

[redacted]

FRIDAY—

House Peters in World Film
"THE CLOSED ROAD"
in 5 Parts

4—ACTS VAUDEVILLE—4

Fear of Financial Depression After the War Not Justified

By WILLIAM G. M'ADOO, Secretary of the Treasury

THE duty devolves upon the bankers of the United States because the responsibility rests primarily upon them to curb speculation and to restrain inflationary tendencies. The federal reserve board at Washington will use its great power to assist in the wholesome use of the great credit resources of the country and to prevent unhealthful tendencies, but the banks themselves have the chief power and responsibility. The federal reserve board can only contribute toward this result to the extent that the law gives it the necessary authority.

Photo by American Press Association.
W. G. M'ADOO.

When I speak this word of caution about speculation and inflation I must at the same time express my lack of sympathy with the views so strenuously put forward, and I think for selfish motives primarily by some people, that the United States must face a period of serious depression, if not possible disaster, upon the conclusion of peace in Europe.

UNREASONABLE FEAR ALONE SEEMS TO ME TO BE AT THE BASIS OF ALL HONEST APPREHENSION ON THIS SCORE.

Preservation of the Nation Depends on Character, Not Force

By President JOHN M. THOMAS, Middleburg College

IF our eyes are really open we shall be stirred to something far more serious, far more radical, than a burst of naval and military enthusiasm. There is a superficiality in the present preparedness movement that is all too characteristically American. If we are threatened by one or more of the empires of the world we shall not meet the situation BY THE MILITARY TRAINING OF A FEW THOUSAND MORE AND THE BUILDING OF A FEW DREADNAUGHTS.

It is a time for deep searching of heart as to the national character, on which alone eventually the national preservation must depend. We can no longer blunder our way to prosperity; we must earn and deserve it.

WE MUST PRODUCE BY INTENTION AND RESOLVE THE CHARACTER WE NEED TO HOLD OUR OWN AGAINST THE NATIONS OF THE WORLD.

Greek Ideal of Beauty Revived by American Women

By Mrs. HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY, Noted Sculptor

THE sculptor's idea of beauty is very generally that of the Greeks. The strong, straight woman, developed by exercise in the open air, seems the most beautiful to me. I think that is the general conception of beauty today.

The Greek worship of beauty seems to me to be revived among us. The American girl's fondness for clothes, even the wrong clothes sometimes, is an expression of the search for beauty. But real beauty depends very little on clothes.

SOME OF THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMEN I HAVE EVER SEEN ARE AMERICAN MODELS I EMPLOY IN MY STUDIO.

You can see in all their faces the ideal of service and of helpfulness. I believe that work beautifies women, you know—that it keeps them young. Not necessarily work for money—that depends on individual circumstances—BUT THE IDEA OF DOING SOMETHING FOR OTHERS.

Army of Trained Workers Is Nation's Greatest Need

By Professor LEE GALLOWAY, New York University

IF commercial supremacy is to be attained and maintained by the United States she must pay the price which her democracy demands in the education and training of her people—her workingmen, her capitalists, her business administrators. Commercial and industrial opportunity in an autocracy may limit its application to foreign trade. The open door policy as applied to other nations may mark the boundary of its liberality, BUT IN A DEMOCRACY OPPORTUNITY MUST MEAN EQUAL OPPORTUNITY AS WELL.

There must be equal opportunity to make a living as well as to make a fortune; equal opportunity for every man or woman or child to climb the ladder of success.

Without discussion let us assume that the state should be responsible for the broad general training that is applicable to our industries as a whole and that the corporations should furnish the education and training which is special to them.

WHEN THESE TWO EDUCATIONAL FACTORS HAVE DECIDED UPON THEIR PARTICULAR FUNCTIONS AND HAVE STARTED THEIR EDUCATIONAL ACTIVITIES THEN WILL THE MARCH TOWARD INDUSTRIAL PREPAREDNESS TRULY HAVE BEGUN.

American People Degenerating Into A Purely Commercial Race

By Dr. CHARLES H. MAYO, Famous Surgeon

AS we look back over history we see the stars of nations rise and fall, the fall coming after the rise to a commanding height. The Slavic race has not seen its rise to power yet, but the Slavs will be the coming nation of the earth, while ours is destined to be a commercial nation, one of the meanest of types.

IN A COMMERCIAL NATION EVERYTHING IS PLACED ON A COMMERCIAL BASIS. THE DOLLAR RULES THE NATION.

We have seen a most remarkable rise in this country, a remarkable progress particularly in medical and health lines. We must get the interested co-operation of the public for public health and hygiene or they will place health considerations secondary to business interests.

Business interests get four times as much from the government for care and protection of hogs and cattle as the public health service gets for the care of human health. Humanity must be put above commerce. We should have skilled men at work for the public health everywhere, and each worker should receive a SALARY EQUAL TO THE ECONOMIC VALUE OF JUST ONE HUMAN LIFE. THAT IS ONLY FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS.

"Onyx" Hosiery

You Get GOOD Value at ANY Price—Silk; Lisle or Cotton 25c to $5.00 per pair

Emery-Beers Company, Inc.
WHOLESALE 153-161 EAST 24th ST. NEW YORK

For Sale by C. A. BECKWITH, Shoes
FULTON, N. Y.

A Skin Like Velvet smooth, clear, free of wrinkles

Use the exquisitely fragrant cream of the beauty flower of India and be complimented on your complexion. Your dealer has Elcaya or will get it.

CRÊME ELCAYA

Days You'll Never Forget

LEGAL NOTICES.

Citation On Settlement.

The People of the State of New York:

To Robert E. Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Elmina Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Cyrus Frederick Phillips, Rochester, N. Y.; Ross Phillips, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Asa Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Grace Phillips Bryant, Akron, O.; May Wood Taylor, St. Josephs, Mo.; All Saints' Church (formerly Zion Episcopal Church), Fulton, N. Y.; Mount Adnah Cemetery Association, Fulton, N. Y.; Minnie Wood Douglas, Nutley, N. J.; Charles Shaw, Kansas City, Mo.; Frank Barnes, Fulton, N. Y.; Hiram Barnes, Little Falls, N. Y.; Nellie Barnes Huntly, Colòsse, N. Y.; Harriet A. Phillips, Denver, Col.; Charles R. Phillips, Youngstown, O.; Fanny Barnes Burt, Hannibal, N. Y.; Edith Barnes, Fulton, N. Y.; Hattie Hurlburt, Natural Bridge, N. Y.; Ella Reed, Russell, N. Y.; Mary Curtis, Hermon, N. Y.; Anna Phillips Nagle, Minneapolis, Minn.; Leonard T. Haight, Syracuse, N. Y.; William B. Phillips, Toledo, O.; Thurber C. Phillips, Long Island City, N. Y.; Mary Helen Winegar, Syracuse, N. Y.; Ruth Winegar, Nutley, N. J.; Josephine Broadwell, Fulton, N. Y.; Mary A. Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Eleanor Barnes Tamlyn, Custer City, S. Dak.; George H. Phillips, Stockbridge, Mich.; Cyrus W. Phillips, Rochester, N. Y.; Florence C. Boddy, Rochester, N. Y., and to all other persons interested in the estate of Julia A. Broadwell late of the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, deceased, either as creditors, legatees, next of kin or otherwise, Send Greeting:

Upon the petition of Arvin Lewis Rice, of the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, the executor of said Julia A. Broadwell, deceased:

You and each of you are hereby cited to show cause before the Surrogate's Court of Oswego County, New York, at the Surrogate's Office in the City of Oswego, in said county, on the 31st day of July, 1916, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why the account of Arvin Lewis Rice as executor of said deceased should not be judicially settled and allowed, and such of you as are under age of twenty-one years are required to appear by your general guardian, if you have one; or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed; or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a special guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate's Court to represent and act for you in the proceeding.

In Testimony Whereof, We have caused the seal of the Surrogate's Court of the County of Oswego to be hereunto affixed.

(L.S.) Witness, Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of our said County of Oswego, at the City of Oswego, in the said County, the 26th day of June, A. D., 1916.

H. E. HINMAN,
Clerk of the Surrogate's Court.

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Clara A. Fredenburg, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at No. 59 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 23rd day of October, 1916.

Dated this 24th day of April, A. D., 1916.

JAMES R. SOMERS,
Attorney for the Administrator of the Estate of Clara A. Fredenburg, deceased.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Clark Butts, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his law office No. 59 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 15th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 29th day of May A. D., 1916.

JAMES R. SOMERS,
Attorney for Administrator

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of D. P. Morehouse, jr., special Surrogate of the County of Oswego, N. Y., notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Frank R. Caldwell, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his office in the Village of Central Square, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 15th day of September, 1916.

Dated this 6th day of March, A. D., 1916.

HENRY D. COVILLE
Executor.

Notice to Creditors

IN PURSUANCE OF AN ORDER of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Bridget Gibbons, late of the City of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his office, No. 24 White Memorial Building, Syracuse, in the County of Onondaga, New York, on or before the 15th day of October, 1916.

Dated this 27th day of March, A. D., 1916.

EDWARD L. MOORE,
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of Bridget Gibbons, deceased.
WILLIAM H. BAMERICK,
Attorney for Executor,
24 White Memorial Bldg.,
Syracuse, N. Y.

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Sarah Hancock, late of the City of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at the law office of Claude E. Guile, 35 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 1st day of September, 1916.

Dated this 7th day of February, A. D., 1916.

Alden M. Hurd,
Executor
Claude E. Guile,
Attorney for Executor,
35 South 1st st., Fulton, N. Y.

Too Knowing.

"I've tried to teach my boy the value of money."

"Good thing!"

"Well, I don't know. He used to behave for 10 cents, but now he wants a quarter."—Life.

CHICHESTER S PILLS

THE DIAMOND BRAND.
Ladies! Ask your Druggist for Chi-ches-ter's Diamond Brand Pills in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with Blue Ribbon. Take no other. Buy of your Druggist. Ask for CHI-CHES-TER'S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS, for 25 years known as Best, Safest, Always Reliable

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

FOR SALE

Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.

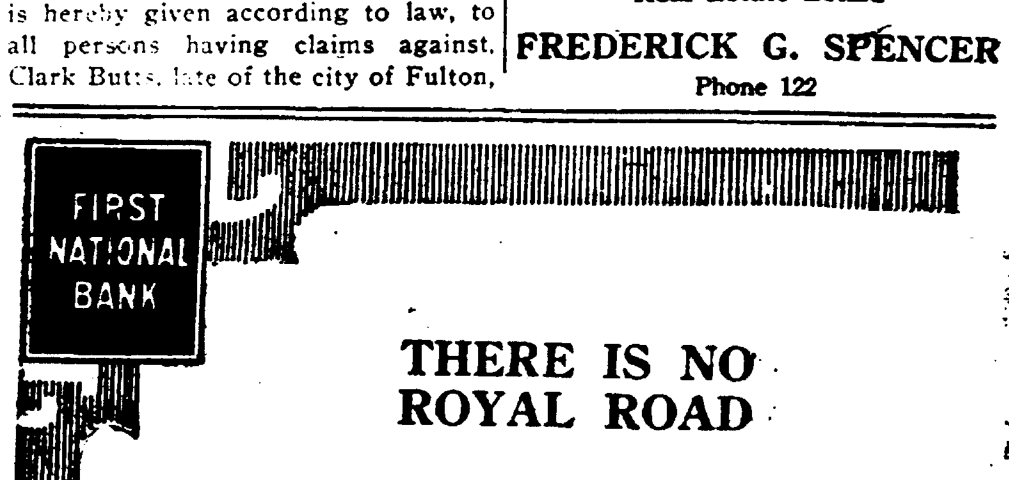
Ready for Prompt Delivery

Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

INSURANCE — REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122



THERE IS NO ROYAL ROAD

TO FINANCIAL SUCCESS. IT DEPENDS UPON THE INDIVIDUAL—HOW HE IMPROVES HIS OPPORTUNITIES. CULTIVATE THE SAVING HABIT, AND YOU WILL BE HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS. YOUR ACCOUNT IS CORDIALLY INVITED.

4% PAID IN OUR INTEREST DEPARTMENT

Sporting Comment

By VINCENT P. LAPORTE

Who said the Feds never had a league, and where are all these "Wise Guys" who were going to spring their "I told you so's" after the present season had started. In looking over the records made so far by a few of these Ex-Feds we see very little difference in the playing of some of the so-called "Has Bens" from that of some of the National and American League players.

Begin with the New York teams. The Giants have Anderson, Kauff, McKechnie, Doolan and Rariden,—quite a collection and every one making good. Anderson is pitching with the best of them; Bashful Bennie is hitting 290 which isn't so bad considering the strain and kidding by the fans every time he comes to the plate. McKechnie is the one to be congrated as every one who saw him make his debut at the beginning of the season predicted a very short sojourn for the former Yank, but he also is holding his own with the best third basemen of the league and is batting higher than most of them. Doolan hasn't had a fair chance to show, but he has a past reputation which he can be depended upon to uphold. Rariden is rated as the best catcher in the game and he is certainly showing himself worthy of the name, always can be depended upon to hit in a pinch and holds down such mound artists as Big Jeff Tesreau in fine style.

Brooklyn has only players who may be known as a former Feds, in Johnston, the young star outfield from the Pacific Coast, and he is showing the way to a good portion of the Tener crowd just at present. "Old Mike Mowery" the Old St. Louis player who last year cavorted in the defunct Federal league, although not setting the League on fire is playing well enough to hold a regular place with the league leaders.

Next we have Boston with Konetchy at the keystone sack and Allen the latter a former Buffed. This club is also well fortified with Fed players and these two are beyond any doubt making good. Allen yesterday held Chicago to four hits and won in a walk while "Konny" came through with three hits, one of these being a circuit clout.

Miller, Wilson and Gonzales are playing in the Mound City and Prince Hal Chase, Fisher, Wingo in Cincinnati. They are making the fans forget some of the teams they used to have in these two burgs. Chicago is practically a Federal team and although not up very far in the race is about the hardest proposition the Eastern contenders have in the West. Pittsburg and Philadelphia are overburdened with the Federal Players, but are using a few. Wilson, the former Giant and Compton, who caused so much trouble last winter when some of the clubs were in market for his services, are in Pitsburg, while Chief Bender and Claude Cooper, the Chief having played in Baltimore last year and Cooper in Brooklyn, under Magee, are with the Quakers. In ending this short resume, it may be stated that a ballplayer can never be judged by the suit he wears whether it be National, American, or Federal so long as he produces the goods.

* * *

Sherwood Magee the former Philly outfielder and at one time a resident of Fulton is in immediate danger of losing his job as a regular with Boston unless he overcomes his shyness at bat. Sherry is likely to prove the old saying that begins, "Too many trips toward the water bucket break the batter's back."

SAFEGUARD YOUR CHILD

If your child is pale, dull, at times flushed, irritable and fretful you should attend to this condition at once as the chances are your little one is suffering from worms. Kickapoo Worm Killer is what you should get. This well known remedy in lozenge form is pleasant to take and expels the worms at once, the cause of your child's suffering. Only 25c. at all druggists.

GOOD HABITS.

Pay attention to the habits you are continually cultivating. Life is very largoly made up of habits. They are meant to make life easier for us and better. A good habit, once formed, is like a towrope that pulls us along thereafter without our conscious effort. The more good habits we can form the sweeter and safer and more successful life will be ever after. Begin to form good habits now—this very day.

How to Get It Back.

"I've lost a wallet containing $100," said Mr. Baker excitedly to a friend. "How much reward shall I offer for its return?"

"Where did you lose it?" asked the friend.

"In New York City."

"Well, if you want it back," said the friend, "you'll have to offer at least $700 reward."—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Legal Route.

Black—Where there's a will there's a way. White—Yes, to break it.—Town Topics.

Some Queer Ones.

Watered milk costs $250 a pint in Brooklyn—if the police catch you.

Regiment of Medicine Hat, Alberta has one company of Japs and another consisting solely of Mormons.

Mayor's offer of 2 cents for each rat tail is rapidly decimating the rodent population of Owensboro, Ky.

Thumb print instead of signature used by New York visitor to sign checks, and he gets the money on them.

Because accident deprived him of ability to chew tobacco Indiana farmer has sued street car company for $5,000.

All Wichita (Kan.) woman asks with her divorce is her dog, one pillow, a pair of portieres, two stewpans and two geraniums.

Escaped monkey stole four umbrellas on Hudson river boat Berkshire, threw coal at engineer and committed suicide by jumping from upper deck.

When Bayonne judge asked for evidence horse had gnawed bark from a tree policeman pulled up tree, roots and all, and took it to court to convict driver.

CHILD ROBS KAISER OF ONE RESERVIST

Little Girl Convinces Him United States Is "Good Enough to Fight For."

Francis Hummel, professor of German at the Curtis high school, Staten Island, was observed the other day on a ferryboat that was conveying Troop F on its way to Van Cortlandt park. The observer was a girl, a former pupil—surprised to see the professor in a private's uniform of the United States service. She had known him as a champion of the kaiser's cause.

"Why, Herr Hummel," she said with smiling eyes, "you astonish me! I could only think of you in a German uniform, fighting, as you have frequently spoken of doing, for the fatherland."

The professor did not smile. He said with gravity:

"Yes, my dear young lady, I had thought that never would I fight for any country but the fatherland. Yet you see, I have two children born in America. And the other day I saw one of them as I sat on my porch, and she was happy and healthy—full of life—playing about the lawn.

"As she romped she held an American flag. She waved it in full happiness and triumph. I said to myself then: 'If that flag is good enough for my children to live under it is good enough for me to fight for.' I promptly enlisted."

Professor Hummel left for Texas with Troop F.

HIS HONEYMOON HALTED.

Returns to New York From Far Northwest to Answer Call to Arms.

"Major, I'm ready to report for duty," said a tanned and almost breathless youth who dashed into the armory in New York. "I had some time getting here, but I'm on the job."

The young man was Felix Mandell, a private. He married three weeks previously and went to the Canadian northwest to spend his honeymoon. He learned from a guide that trouble with Mexico was expected, and he sent a messenger to the nearest point of civilization to ask his mother about it by wire.

Mrs. Mandell replied informing him of the mobilization order. It cost her $30 to get her dispatch to him by runners. The young chap immediately upon receipt of the news started for civilization and traveled day and night until he reached New York. He sped from the railroad station to the armory.

EXTRA PAY FOR REGULARS.

Will Be Allowed 20 Per Cent Increase For Foreign Service.

Extra pay for foreign service will be allowed the American troops serving across the Mexican border under a decision by Comptroller Warwick of the treasury. Enlisted men will receive 20 per cent addition and officers 10 per cent.

The comptroller also gave the opinion that government employees who enlist in the national guard are entitled to full pay from the civil position for the first thirty days of their service, except that the combined salaries of officers will be subject to the $2,000 limitation provided by law.

HOW TO ADDRESS LETTERS TO SOLDIERS TO INSURE DELIVERY.

Letters to the guardsmen on the Mexican border have begun to accumulate in the postoffices because of insufficient address.

It is essential in order to insure prompt delivery that the address should contain the addressee's name, together with his rank and the unit to which he is attached. As an example a proper address for all classes of mail should be in the following form:

"Private John Doe.
"Co. A, 7th Regiment, N. G. N. Y.,
Military Camp.
Brownsville, Tex."

BIG CATCH OF SHARKS.

Apollo's Crew Hooks and Kills Nineteen—Captain Gets Turtle.

Baltimore. — Catching sharks and shooting immense sea turtles was the pastime enjoyed by Captain Thomas Thomassen and his crew during the voyage of the Norwegian bark Apollo, now in port with manganese ore from Rio Janeiro. Nineteen sharks, the largest eleven feet long, were captured and dispatched by the ship's crew.

"It was on June 4," said Captain Thomassen, "that numerous sharks hovered about the vessel, fighting each other for the refuse from the ship's galley. I made a hook about twelve inches long on a two inch line, baited it with pork and fastened it to a two inch rope. The bait hardly reached the water when a shark swallowed it, and the tussle began. That day we caught seven of the monsters.

"It took five men to hoist a shark to the ship's deck. After killing the shark with an ax its fins were removed and the carcass thrown overboard.

"A large sea turtle was sighted about 200 yards from the vessel on June 10. I took a shot with a rifle and struck a vital part."

KISSING NEGRESS COST $3.50.

Young Man Who Saluted Her Was Put Under Arrest.

Pittsburgh.—Raymond Watkins, twenty years old, of Homeville and his companions were standing on a street corner in Munhall terrace recently chatting and joking when one of Watkins' friends bet him $1 he did not dare to kiss the first girl that came along. Watkins put up the money and soon got his chance to win a dollar.

Estelle Stanton, a negress, eighteen years old, living in Munhall terrace, walked along an instant later, and Watkins seized his opportunity, accosted the young woman and kissed her on the cheek. Watkins then turned to his companions and collected the dollar.

A few hours later he was taken into custody on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by the girl. Watkins paid the costs, $4.50, and was freed. Thus he lost $3.50.

TO FIDDLE FOR VOTES.

Missouri Girl Will Help Her Father's Campaign.

St. Louis.—When William C. Askin, a banker of Salem, Mo., announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for secretary of state his daughter, Miss Bernice Wolcott Askin, was in New York. The news of her father's candidacy, however, brought her back to Missouri with the announcement that she will accompany him on his campaign with her violin.

"Father has done much to aid me in my musical education," said Miss Askin at the home of a friend in St. Louis, "and now that he wants to be secretary of state I am going to do all I can for him. I may accompany him over the state during his entire campaign. If I do I shall take my violin along and entertain the voters."

READ BY VOLCANIC LIGHT.

Could See Newspaper Print in Glow of Lava From Maunaloa.

Honolulu.—Maunaloa, which was in eruption in May, recently broke out again. A flood of lava which burst forth at an elevation of 7,000 feet flowed down the mountain side, traveling southwest at the rate of about a mile an hour.

The flood of lava divided, following two channels. The glow illuminated the entire landscape at night.

Newspapers could be read by its light many miles away.

The course taken by the lava was that taken by the last previous eruption, about nine years ago. The sea is about fifty miles from the mountain in this direction, and there is little property of value between.

Standard "Gas" at the Van Wagenen Garage.

GET RID OF WRINKLES

Usit Will Drive Them Away. Brings Back Smooth, Clear, Youthful Complexion and Color

"The bottle of Usit has completely cleared my face of the horrible wrinkles that were such an eyesore to my five daughters, and even my grandchildren have their say about Grandma's wrinkles. It is a Godsend to wrinkle suffering humanity."

Usit, the wonderful pure nut-oil skin food (in opal bottles, not a face cream) will do as much for you, ladies, whether you are grandmothers, middle-aged or young mothers, or younger girls—whether the wrinkles have been brought to your face by age, work, worry or exposure to wind and sun.

Usit feeds the skin back to health. It is the one thing that will bring back the youthful appearance so dear to you and admired by everybody.

Rubbed into the skin before retiring, it does it magical work while you sleep. No other treatment is necessary. Get a bottle today at any first class drug store for 50 cents. It is guaranteed to contain nothing that will cause hair growth.

The most painful cases of sunburn are relieved instantly by Usit.

For Sale by the Fulton Pharmacy and dealers everywhere.—Adv.

Ninety-nine out of every hundred purchasers of an Ice Cream Freezer demand a

WHITE MOUNTAIN REFRIGERATOR

and will take no other. The same would apply to Refrigerators if intending purchasers would make comparisons

White Mountain Refrigerators

are of the same high standard of excellence as the ice cream freezer of same name and cut down the ice bill one half.

WHITE MOUNTAIN

BIG FREEZERS AND LITTLE FREEZERS

Also

WHITE MOUNTAIN

REFRIGERATORS

ON SALE AT

The Peoples' Store

The Red Front Harware Store of Fulton

For the afternoon tea this frock was designed. For the skirt satin crepe is suggested, because it is well suited to the soft, draped lines. Crepe Georgette mounted over taffeta serves acceptably for the bodice and a band of wide lace might be stitched around the taffeta foundation to show through the crepe. Revers, collar and belt are of taffeta. In medium size the dress requires 4 yards 40-inch crepe, 3 yards taffeta and 1 1-4 yards lace.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6456. Sizes 34 to 48 inches bust; price, 15 cents. Skirt No. 6664, sizes 22 to 34 inches waist, price, 15 cents.

Doubtful.

"This is the best speedometer on the market. We guarantee it to be absolutely accurate."

"That's all very well. But suppose that the speedometer says I'm going twenty miles an hour and the traffic cop says I'm going fifty can you guarantee that the judge will take the speedometer's word for it?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

The Bane of Prosperity.

About the time the average family merges into prosperity the older members begin to be troubled with indigestion and constipation. J. W. Spencer, Chittenango, N. Y., writes, "When I get bilious, have headache and feel out of sorts, I take two or three of Chamberlain's Tablets and they fix me up all right."
For sale by all dealers.

Getting There On Time

is largely a matter of knowing the correct time all the time. Some watches give the time—others give the correct time. We handle both kinds: the first, because many of our customers require this kind of watch; the second, because we can give an absolute guarantee of their accuracy and assure the customer of complete satisfaction for years to come.

May we show you these watches at your convenience?

WM. C. MORGAN, Jeweler

The Hallmark Store — Quirk Theatre Building

REPORT OF CONDITION OF THE

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

At Fulton, in the State of New York, at the close of business on June 30, 1916

RESOURCES

Loans and discounts		$806.972 66
Total Loans			$806,972 66
Overdrafts, unsecured	$94 75		94 75
U. S. bonds deposited to secure circulation (par value)		57,500 00
Total U. S. bonds			57,500 00
Bonds, securities, etc.:
Bonds other than U. S. bonds pledged to secure postal savings deposits		6.135 00
Securities other than U. S. bonds (not including stocks) owned unpledged		111.841 55
Total bonds, securities, etc.			117.976 55
Subscription to stock of Federal Reserve Bank	5.300 00
Less amount unpaid	2.650 00		2.650 00
Furniture and fixtures			16.198 34
Real estate owned other than banking house			13.108 61
Net amount due from Federal Reserve Bank			22,065 81
Net amount due from approved reserve agents in New York, Chicago, and St. Louis		8,279 05
Net amount due from approved reserve agents in other reserve cities		19,989 12	28.268 17
Net amount due from banks and bankers			2,770 36
Exchanges for clearing house			3,898 01
Outside checks and other cash items		2.193 63
Fractional currency, nickels, and cents		593 18	2.786 81
Notes of other national banks			565 00
Coin and certificates			34.265 35
Legal-tender notes			7,823 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer and due from U. S. Treasurer			2.875 00
Total			$1.119.818 42

LIABILITIES

Capital stock paid in		$57,500 00
Surplus fund		30.000 00
Undivided profits	$6.498 50
Reserved for taxes.	621 50
Reserved for	1,132 07
Less current expenses, interest, and taxes paid		8,252 07
Circulating notes outstanding		57,500 00
Demand deposits:
Individual deposits subject to check		249,824 43
Certificates of deposit due in less than 30 days		53,258 12
Certified checks		954 28
Postal Savings deposits		4,374 94
Time deposits (payable after 30 days, or subject to 30 days or more notice:
Certificates of deposit		5,500 00
Other time deposits		607,654 58
Bills payable, including obligations representing money borrowed		45,000 00
Total		$1,119.818 42

State of New York.
County of Oswego, ss:

I, L. C. Foster, Cashier of the above named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 11th day of July, 1916.

JENNIE F. DAVIS.
Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:

J. R. SULLIVAN,
H. C. GARDNER,
C. A. GUILE,
Directors.

There are plenty of good places to stay at

MACKINAW

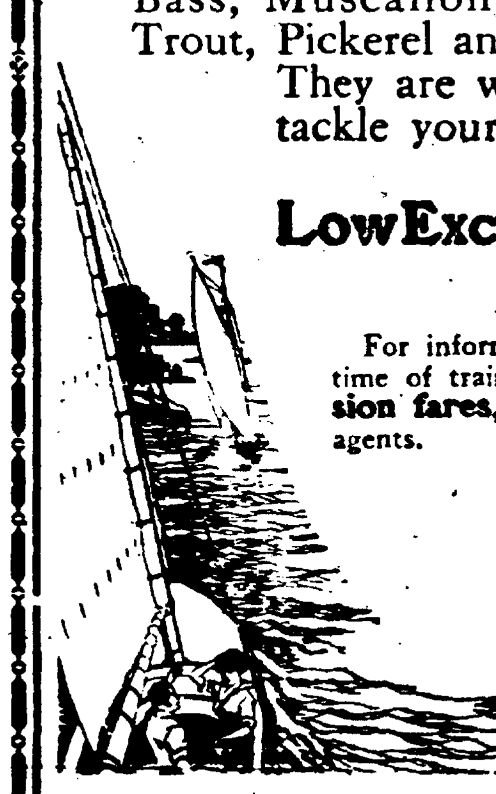
or in Northern Michigan

Everything that water and land and woods provide for a vacation—the ideal Great Lakes Resorts.

FISHING

Bass, Muscallonge, Mackinaw Trout, Pickerel and Pike abound. They are waiting there to tackle your fishing tackle.

Low Excursion Fares



For information about tickets, time of trains and low excursion fares, consult local ticket agents.

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 482 MONDAY, JULY 24, 1916 Price, One Cent

Austrian Weakness Opens Way to Advance

(By United Press)

Petrograd—Russian armies have blasted and battled their way through the German lines below Riga, and have shattered at least temporarily the Austrian resistance to further Russian advances in Northeast Galicia and Hungary.

Violent German counter attacks northeast of Kovel have been repulsed. Today a violent artillery dual was in progress between forces of General Kuropatkin and von Hindenburgh along the northeast point of the battles. So far the censor has failed to permit the transmission of the exact details of General Kuropatkin's most recent coup.

* * *

London—Amid a blast of artillery fire hurled from big guns, the British forces have advanced still further in their thrust around Osieres, General Sir Edward Haig reported today.

The French troops continue, with the assistance of the British, their advances. The British commander reports great gains near the high woods at Peronne.

Premier Asks for Vote of Heaviest Credit

(By United Press)

London—Premier Asquith in Commons today moved for a vote of credit amounting to 450,000,000 pounds, the largest sum which the government has asked for in a single bill since the beginning of the war.

* * *

London—John Redmond, Irish Nationalist leader, was the center of a storm in Commons this afternoon, when he assailed Premier Asquith, for his dilatory tactics in the solution of the Irish question.

BRITISH, SAYS BERLIN, STILL HELD IN CHECK

(By United Press)

Berlin—British troops failed to obtain any decisive foothold they admit Bremen is enroute they have no means of explaining her advantage the British obtained yesterday along the line at Guillemont was at Pozieres, where they penetrated a few houses, the statement asserts.

Berlin is at variance with the British official communication, declaring that along the entire line the attacks of the British were fruitless and that they suffered heavy casualties. Around Pozieres and the Foureaux wood the combatants came to grips in hand-to-hand fighting.

South of the Somme Sunday was relatively calm, following strong attacks Saturday night against the French near Soyecourt, which Paris asserts broke down under the French fire. The Germans in the Verdun sector, according to Berlin, have gained some ground south of Damloup.

AMICABLE SETTLEMENT OF BLACKLIST COMING

(By United Press)

Washington—The Blacklist differences will be adjusted Senator Smith of Georgia declared today, after a talk with President Wilson.

"I believe Great Britain will withdraw the whole or a major part of their blacklist order," he said. Senator Smith has been the leader of the opposition of this country to England's blockade policy, most of which opposition has been unpopular with the leaders of his party. The fact that he sees defeat for the British plan is thought to be significant of the stand to be maintained by the administration.

MONARCH MILL SETS NEW PACE, MAKING MORE WASH CLOTHS

The Spanswick Manufacturing Company, whose specialty has been the making of fine cotton underwear, announces a suspension of activity along that line, because of the scarcity of experienced help in this city. It is the intention of the company to retain every member of the force of work people, and every piece of machinery engaged in that particuuar line of work, so that in the event of landing an order for Fulton-made underwear, no time will be lost in executing the order.

In the same building with the Spanswick Company is located the machinery and organization belonging to the Monarch Knitting Mills, whose product is wash cloths. Mr. W. H. Spanswick, president of the affiliated companies, is optimistic regarding the future of the last named company, and feels confident that the demand for wash cloths will continue to tax the capacity of the plant, and this in spite of the fact that never before has he been able to throw as much strength into that particular line of business. Sales of wash cloths have doubled recently, says Mr. Spanswick, and, in spite of the increased force of workpeople and augmented machinery, he is skeptical about the plant's ability to keep up with the demand for a now famous line of Fulton-made goods.

Miss Helen Waldhorn Saved from Drowning

Miss Helen Waldhorn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Waldhorn, of Oneida street, narrowly escaped drowning yesterday. The family were enjoying the day near the Scholz cottage at Battle Island, and Miss Waldhorn, with other friends, were encouraged by the heat of the day to go bathing. The river's bank at this spot is treacherous inasmuch as it is slippery. As Miss Waldhorn entered the water she slipped and went in over her head. Her cries were heard by William Storms and George Gardner, who were nearby. Mr. Storms dove in and drew her to the surface where Mr. Gardner joined in the work of resuscitation.

After receiving first aid, Miss Waldhorn returned to consciousness and was removed to her home, where she rested comfortably today.

2 Cyclists Run Down By Unknown Driver

Two motorcyclists giving their names as Stanley Hutton, of R. F. D., No. 4, and Leon Smith, of R. F. D. No. 5, were struck yesterday by a strange touring car at the east side of the lower bridge. The cyclists claim they were on the right side of the road, intending to cross the bridge when suddenly the car swung into their pathway. The cyclists were ignorant of the approach of the autoist, who crashed into them demolishing both motorcycles and ripping the running board of the auto from its fastenings. The cyclists were severely shaken up but no serious injuries were sustained.

The police department is in possession of clues which may lead to the arrest of the auto drivers, whose names could not be learned at the time of the collision.

TO THE HOUSEWIFE.

We yet have a few sets of SANITO COOKING UTENSILS that we will sell at 70 cents the set. They are good value at more than double that price, but we have no use for them and you have. The set comprises covered and open earthenware dishes for cooking and baking and we will be pleased to have you come in and inspect them.

tf

The way to test this newspaper's strength is by inserting an ad in the Miscellaneous Want Column. See rates on fifth page.

NATIONAL PAY UP WEEK.

National Pay Up Week, October 2nd to 7th, will be observed in thousands of communities from one end of the country to the other. It is endorsed by hundreds of cities and towns which received the benefits from the first National Pay Up Week in February of this year.

The Evening Times will explain in a later issue the full details of how the campaign is carried on and the strong endorsement that other cities are giving it is sufficient evidence that the merchants of Fulton will receive much benefit by co-operating in the work.

Second Undersea Boat Fails to Arrive Here

Baltimore—Men connected with the Ozean Rhederei confessed today that they are in the dark as to the whereabouts of the undersea boat, the Bremen, but in the same breath they declared that they have no reason to believe the boat has met with an untimely end. While they admit Bremen is enroute they have no means of explaining her delayed arrival. They announce also that the Deutschland will await the arrival of the Bremen.

All the treasure of the Kronprinzessin Cecilie is tucked away aboard the little queen undersea packet, the Deutschland.

They brought it down from Boston, where the Cecilie is interned, one day last week—the day they pulled the screen of old freight barges around the German submarine and took other precautions.

In small bags, by rail, the money came—four mllion dollars in gold—and it was trundled aboard the Deutschland and stored in secret compartments.

This is on the authority of a man who knows. Nameless he must be in the story—but he knows.

* * *

Baltimore—The wireless apparatus of the Deutschland was sealed by Federal officials this afternoon under the neutrality laws of the country. The tug Timmins standing by was under full head of steam and the submarine ship buzzed vigorously.

GERMAN DESTROYERS ENTER RIVER THAMES

London—Six German destroyers attempting either a raid or reconnoissance on the British coast were put to flight by a British sea force in a running fight off the Shouwen bank, Saturday night and early Sunday morning, is the text of the Admiralty's statement issued today.

The German ships, it was said, were repeatedly hit, and one British ship was struck, the total of the fatalities among the British being two men.

* * *

Berlin—Our torpedo boats returned from a point close to the mouth of the Thames this afternoon, following Sunday's short engagement. No loss of life occurred aboard the boats and none was damaged.

Autoists to Run to Skaneateles Lake

The Fulton Automobile Club will go on a run Wednesday afternoon. The start will be made from the city plaza at 4:30 sharp, proceeding to Skaneateles Lake by way of Three Rivers, to Baldwinsville, to Cold Springs, to Syracuse, to Camillus, and thence to the destintion. A dinner will be served at Krelis, the price of which will be $1.00 and a prize will be awarded to the car arriving nearest the secret time; also a consolation prize will be awarded the car arriving the farthest from the appointed time. All auto owners are invited to attend this run and those who are contemplating making the trip should notify R. L. McCully, president of the club, or F. H. Morin, secretary, by tomorrow at noon.

Last Minute News

New York—Infantile paralysis cases today reached a new low mark in the history of the epidemic since its outbreak on June 6th. Only eighty-nine cases were reported today, with 115 yesterday. The number of deaths of cases already reported increased from twenty-three yesterday to thirty-four today. With today's figures 2,948 cases have been reported since June 6th and 609 deaths.

* * *

London—Official announcement of the refusal of an application of Sir Roger Casement was announced by the Attorney General office this afternoon.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

MONDAY, JULY 24, 1916

"Boys are like vinegar," we heard an observer remark the other day. "The more 'mother' in them the sharper they become."

THE GAMBLERS AND THE NEWS

The ordinary card gambler or those who use devices are always in terror of the law. The Wall Street gamblers read the news—and lay their wagers accordingly. Perhaps it would be more dignified to say that the investors make their investments in accord with the happenings of the world. That is the way the average man wants it put, but the truth is there is precious little difference between the modern "investor" as he is known in the securities markets, and the plain, everyday gambler.

The movements of troops in Europe, the winning or the losing of a battle, the sinking of a ship, the death of a prominent statesman here or there, the weather conditions, and the voting at national conventions—all of these things and many others have a direct bearing upon the price of securities, as well as upon the price of actual products of the soil.

Thus we find the price of steel stocks, or of automobile stocks, or of the bonds issued by a railroad company, actually falling or rising in price every time the newspapers get out an edition. What any politician says in any convention could not have anything to do with the number of passengers carried upon the street cars of a city. Yet you will frequently find the price of the stock in the corporation fluctuating after a speech by a politician. The gamblers are a superstitious lot and they read a deep meaning into meaningless words.

The result of the war will naturally have a result upon many securities in this country. The termination of the war will influence many industries, or its prolongation will have an effect upon certain industries. So there is nothing strange about the price of securities based upon such industries fluctuating with news from the war. But the fluctuations do not stop with the securities based upon industries affected by the termination or continuance of the war; they extend to all other lines—and they will continue to extend just so long as we permit gambling upon a large scale under the misnomer of "stock exchange investments."

And still if Mexico should become as peaceful as an American state, it would probably not attract so many of our people as in the days of yore when a fellow had to take a chance.

An exchange says: "Military preparedness wins the battle, but industrial preparedness wins the war." And it has been a long time since a wiser remark was made by anybody.

CONDITIONS IN MEXICO

The Mexicans as a whole are not an aggregation of outlaw bands as they are nearly always pictured by the metropolitan press. which has a tendency to inflame feeling against them, but they have lacked in advantages what they need that tends to advancement. They need a regeneration that will make for them new land adjustments, co-operative municipalities, temperance legislation, free schools, and encouragement to industry and thrift. In more than half of the states, and in more than half of the territory of the remaining states law and order reign and as an illustration of the rapid advances they are making along educational lines you only have to look to the fact that Yucatan now has about 2,400 schools today against 200 of two years ago.

Some one has said: "You cannot go back to yesterday." True—but why should we want yesterday when we have today?

The election this fall will not be decided by the people who are convinced by street corner arguments.

Watch the Fulton Evening Times grow—and incidently, Fulton.

CASTORIA

For Infants and Children

In Use For Over 30 Years

Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Her Fault.

A certain Scotch professor was left a widower in his old age. Not very long after he suddenly announced his intention of marrying again, half apologetically adding, "I never would have thought of it if Lizzie hadn't died."

SELECTED EDITORIALS

The Syracuse Journal:

Vacation joys, like most others, are sweetest when simplest.

Many good people are planning elaborate vacation trips at expense they cannot well afford, will put up with high priced inconveniences they would not tolerate at home, and will come back more tired than they went away. But out of the dirt and rattle and confusion of the town there is easy escape in the shady, silent woods that are cool, clean, sweet, odorous, musical; in the smiling fields, the laughing brooks and the placid lakes not far from home. Here are real rest for worn nerves and true quickening of the flagging spirit.

What a noble gift to mankind are the trees. How pleasantly their shadows fall upon us when we turn to them from the glitter and turmoil of the hot town. The breath of heaven seems to linger in the whispering branches, and the sunshine sifts through the swaying leaves like a benediction purified.

In the close application to the detail of our daily work we are apt to distort the perspective of our purposes. We are apt to plod on through habit and forget our higher aims. Maybe some of us never have any. Then all the more do we need a time of solitude and dreams. Men without definite aims and purposes beyond mere means of comfortable existence are animals on two legs with nothing to recompense the loss of the monkey tail.

It is good once in a while to get away from the hurly-burly and take a little while to dream, to form ideals, to shape and direct purposes, to realize what the noisy striving is all for.

* * *

Philadelphia Ledger:

Why does a man fail? One smashup or a dozen cannot put out of running the undefeatable soul. The world applauds the "up-boys-and-at-em" spirit that is flattened and then puffs itself (but not with conceit) for a fresh start. Temporary failure is often the stepping stone, the starting point for victory. But there are men who, when knocked down, stay down. What is the matter with them?

The solicitude for a fizzler is not one that concerns busy people as a rule. But in these days, when we are conserving every kind of waste material and coining dross into gold, it is time to take account of the wastage in brains and souls and moral stamina eschewed or but half utilized. Most men are using but a part of themselves, like a motorcar running on two of its six cylinders. As William James pointed out, they could do a great deal more than ever they attempt. But they are content with a latent capacity rather than a patent achievement. They describe to themselves—sometimes to us—what they could do if they would.

The plain man doing the work wants no more of the fancy, faineant gentleman than that they shall get out of his beset track and not bother him. He has his own straight furrow, and he cannot turn the clean billows of earth away from the plow's keen, cleaving edge without striking many a flinty rock, and stubborn root. These elegant folk, too proud to soil their hands are a dertiment to him. He heartily desires to see the last of them. Let the youth write in his bright lexicon, at the top of the first page, that the prime reason why men stay put, somewhere round the ladder's lowest rung, is that at one time or another in their lives they supposed that some particular species of work was beneath their precious dignity.

* * *

Tacoma (Wash.) Ledgers

A decision of moment affecting the industrial law of this state was rendered by the supreme court a few days ago when it held, in substance, that the law is meant to protect workmen against every accident or fortuitous event. Several months ago a discharged employe of a Mason county logging company fired at a crew running a logging train. Joe Stertz was killed. Louise F. Stertz, his wife, applied to the state industrial insurance commission for compensation and was denied. The commission held that the killing was not directly due to Stertz's employment. The Thurston county superior court, to which appeal was taken, sustained the commission, but the supreme court has reversed the superior court, and the widow will receive compensation.

Industrial insurance laws are new in the United States and the decisions of courts finish a new line of cases. In May the supreme court of New Jersey decided that a brewery employe's widow had no right to compensation, her husband having been murdered while he was engaged in delivering beer. This New Jersey case seems to be a good deal like the Stertz case in Washington, but the supreme courts arrived at different conclusions. However, the New Jersey supreme court, a few days after deciding the brewery employe case, rendered a decision more in keeping with the outcome of the Stertz case. The night watchman of a paper company was murdered by a fellow employe. The paper company refused to pay compensation, contending that it was liable only for accidental death in the course of employment. It argued that murder was not an accidental death. The highest court of New Jersey took the position in this case that the employe's death was due to something he had not designed and had no reason to expect, and hence that it was accidental. Compensation will be paid to the widow.

In another state, employes of a factory were in the habit of hurling rocks at each other by way of fun during the noon hour. One of them was injured and asked for compensation. The court upheld the employe because the injury was suffered on the factory premises where the employer was supposed to maintain order and provide for the safety of employes. But in another state a contrary decision was rendered.

So it appears that at the present time industrial insurance law is in a formative stage, with the tendency toward a liberal construction in favor of injured employes.

Days You'll Never Forget

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M. CLARKE.

Cy Cawkins Can't Even Get a Laugh Into Action 'Till th' Fun's All Over.

S'teen times out of twenty in these auto party schemes
Th' guests are friends an' neighbors who also own machines.
Th' social lines ain't drawn no more at worth, by modern rule.
Just buy a car, an' there you are—splash in the auto pool.

Some feller's ideas of reciprocity are rather one sided.

WELL CHILDREN ARE ACTIVE

If your child is dull, pale, fretful and wants to lie around, the chances are it is suffering from worms. Kickapoo Worm Killer, a pleasant candy confection, liked by all children is what your child needs. You only give one-half to one lozenge at a time and you get immediate results. Every mother should have a box on hand. 25c. at all druggists.

NATIONAL PAY UP WEEK.

National Pay Up Week, October 2nd to 7th, will be observed in thousands of communities from one end of the country to the other. It is endorsed by hundreds of cities and towns which received the benefits from the first National Pay Up Week in February of this year.

The Evening Times will explain in a later issue the full details of how the campaign is carried on and the strong endorsement that other cities are giving it is sufficient evidence that the merchants of Fulton will receive much benefit by co-operating in the work.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Cure fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

The way to test this newspaper's strength is by inserting an ad in the Miscellaneous Want Column. See rates on fifth page.

THE GROUP PLAN OF INSURANCE

Merits and Failings of New Scheme of Employers.

BAIT OFFERED TO WORKERS

Significance of the Fact That Propositions of This Kind Are Never Introduced Into Union Shops—What Wage Earners Want Is Sufficient Wages to Provide For Their Own Future.

One of the new schemes that certain employing interests are bringing out is to insure the lives of their employees. A newspaper clipping from a Milwaukee (Wis.) newspaper reads as follows: "Following close upon other large manufacturers of the city, the F. W. Mayer Boot and Shoe company announced recently that it had taken out a group policy of life insurance on nearly 400 of its employees. The policies will be absolutely free to employees of his company."

There are several things about this proposition of group insurance, so called, to which we would like to call the attention not only of our members and other trade unionists, but of fair minded employers as well, says the Shoe Workers' Journal.

First of all, we wish to draw attention to the fact, which may fairly be regarded as significant, that propositions of this sort are never introduced into union shops. Why? Because in the union shop the workmen have the machinery to obtain some sort of fair adjustment of the wage question and are not to be subsidized by a sop to be thrown to them when they are dead.

This group insurance plan says to the wage earners: "If you have been good boys and have worked for me at my prices and conditions for a year or more I will insure your life free of cost to you while you continue in my employ at the wages and conditions which I shall fix for you without any of your assistance or advice."

The moment a wage earner leaves that employment he ceases to be insured. While he has worked there he has worked at the employer's price, and yet the employer has nerve enough to tell him that he, the employer, is giving the wage earner life insurance free of charge.

Does the employer really pay for this insurance? Certainly not. His intention is to offer the insurance as a bait by which to lure the employee to work contentedly for him at a low wage scale, so that when the employer has paid the insurance premiums he has made a net profit on the labor.

Looked at from the shortsighted angle, this may appear to be good business to such employers. An employee may work, for instance, for $3 to $6 a week less money and in ten years may have received $1,500 to $3,000 less in the pay envelope, but can comfort himself with the cheerful reflection that when he is dead his family will cash in $500.

As a farsighted business proposition we submit that this group insurance plan is not a good industrial policy. We think it will appeal to the average fair minded business man that it is better policy to give the wage earner a fair standard of living. Wage earners will be better satisfied with a more satisfactory pay envelope here and now than with a life insurance policy which at best will only give their family a pittance after they are dead and which the employer can discontinue any time he sees fit.

Suppose, for instance, the F. Mayer Boot and Shoe company or any other concern carried on this group insurance for a period of five years and at the end of that time dropped it. If their employees have remained in their employ because of the insurance then there is five years of their life which they have spent qualifying for an insurance policy which has been taken away from them.

We are quite certain this group plan of insurance is not for the benefit of the wage earners. We doubt, even, if it is for the benefit of employers. It appears to be a good thing for the life insurance company, but is a dubious business for them to be engaged in. This is the first time within our knowledge when a life insurance company of any standing has attempted to intervene between capital and labor in a way calculated to assist the employers and induce the wage earners to forego their right of organization. Before any life insurance company shall deny that this group insurance plan is open to criticism let it show instances where employers running union establishments and paying the union scale of wages have done business with the life insurance companies upon the group insurance plan.

Interest in employees, as evidenced by this plan of group insurance, looks decidedly hypocritical. What wage earners want is something in the pay envelope, the right to a comfortable living and the means wherewith to pay for it. They also want the right and the means to provide for their own future. It would be well if employers would take the matter home to themselves and see how they would like it if their employees would undertake to provide and regulate the future conduct, conveniences and final destination of the employer.

Boys, Look Out For Green Apples

Lester Wolroth had a very severe attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating green apples. His mother, Mrs. Pearl Wolroth, Herkimer, N. Y., says, "I was advised to give him Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which I did, and the relief from the first was very great. After taking three doses he was all right."

For sale by all dealers.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS.

The Great Hive of the Ladies of the Maccabees has again announced itself as a force to help secure votes for women and its further intention to help get suffrage by a national amendment.

* * *

The attorney general of Nebraska has publicly testified to his belief that woman suffrage was carried in that state in 1914 and that the women were tricked out of their victory by the activity of certain "interests."

Former Governor Chase of Michigan, in his speech before the Women Voter's Convention last month in Chicago, made the statement that woman suffrage in Michigan in 1912 "really carried but smudgy practice voided the election."

The Woman's Journal in publishing these statements cites other testimony tending to show the difficulty of securing an honest count on a suffrage amendment, notably that of the editor of the Mason City Times that "in several precints in Dubuque County the judges failed even to tally the suffrage ballots" cast at the Iowa referendum June 5th.

* * *

The celerity with which the Ohio Republican platform copied the woman suffrage plank from the national platform shows the impetus given the suffrage movement by the June endorsements. "It is no longer," comments the New York Post, "a suppliant at the doors of party conventions, but has gained such strength that both parties are compelled to bow to it."

* * *

Just as Josie Westfall was prepared to celebrate her election to the office of city judge of Macomb, the state supreme court dashed the cup of triumph from her lips. The office was not for her whose majority had been won by votes of women. The suffrage given the women of Illinois, so decreed the court, did not include the right to vote for city judge, and Dean Franklin whose vote was smaller, but unfeminized assumed the gavel.

* * *

Suffrage to Montana was a joke when first presented: on its first appearance in the legislature it received two votes; two years later it lacked two votes of a majority; two years later it got all but two votes of the vote cast; and thus in six years public opinion was entirely transformed; so ran the testimony of Congressman Evans before the judiciary committee of the House of Representatives.

* * *

To a member who asked him "why?" he replied. "We had a lot of fine women and some bad politics and we thought the women might clarify the politics and they did, especially in local matters."

Suffragist lobbiests can often be heard scolding about the amount of irrelevant matter that Congressmen get printed at public expense in the Congressional Record, but when Congressman Evans got his suffrage speech in never a murmur was heard from suffrage quarters.

Lee Slack of Ripley, O., writes: "I have sold several kinds of horse liniment and Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh will do more than any other liniment I have ever sold or knew of."—Adv.

Hogarth Used to Forget.

William Hogarth, the famous English artist, was so absentminded he caused his friends much entertainment. When he was prosperous enough to have his own carriage he first used it to make a call upon the lord mayor. When he came out of the Mansion House it was raining hard, and the artist tramped the entire way home, wet to the skin. When asked why he had not come in his carriage he said he forgot all about it, and a messenger had to be dispatched to the coachman to tell him to return.

STATE TO FEED BELGIUM 1 DAY

San Francisco.—Early in the month of August the people of California will undertake to supply sufficient food for feeding the entire population of Belgium and northern France one day, and this day will be known throughout that region as California day. The plan was proposed by a group of San Francisco citizens and is being carried forward under an organization known as the San Francisco business men's committee. An energetic campaign for raising the fund is being pushed in every section of the state. To carry out the idea it will be necessary to raise $70,000, with which will be purchased grain, wheat, corn, rice, peas, barley, sugar, condensed and evaporated milk, and dried fruit or chocolate.

In the appeal that is made to the people of California it is pointed out by the commission for relief in Belgium that the work is entirely neutral, having been indorsed by all the large nations, including Germany, France, England, Russia, Japan, Austria, the United States and others. Assurance is also given that there will be no "leakage" in the distribution of the foods. The goods all go under seal to the communal magazines and the mayors themselves report their arrival in quantity to the American district manager, who in turn notifies the central organization of the commission. Every household has a "carte de menage" issued by the company and this card entitles the holder to the purchase or the gift of a ration.

Through its state committtee California has given to the cause of Belgian relief during the past six months the sum of $56,213.52 in cash and $22,837.96 in clothing, making a total of nearly $80,000, or an average of $15,000 a month. This money was raised by private subscription and by the holding of market days, bazaars and other occasions, at which goods of various kinds were contributed and sold to the public. This form of fund raising in San Francisco, Oakland, Los Angeles and other cities, has been very successful.

It is held by those who are carrying forward the campaign for California day in Belgium and France that the supplying of sufficient provisions for the feeding of the entire population for one day will not only aid in fulfilling the needs of these peoples, but will stand as a mark in the moral support that the people of California are giving to the large number of California men and women who have taken a leading part in the commission work in Belgium.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

TO THE HOUSEWIFE.

We yet have a few sets of SANITO COOKING UTENSILS that we will sell at 70 cents the set. They are good value at more than double that price, but we have no use for them and you have. The set comprises covered and open earthenware dishes for cooking and baking and we will be pleased to have you come in and inspect them.

tf

Mrs. Morris Finds a Cure for Rheumatism

"I suffered from rheumatism in my knee for over a week last winter," writes Mrs. Frank Morris, Jamesville, N. Y. "It kept me awake at night and the pain was sometimes dreadful. I obtained a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment. After the second application I rested comfortably all night, and by applying it for a few days I was cured."

For sale by all dealers.

DON'T BE A RECLUSE.

The lonely people of the world are usually those who, instead of going out and winning love and friendship, are simply standing still and waiting for love and friendship to come to them.

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

The way to test this newspaper's strength is by inserting an ad in the Miscellaneous Want Column. See rates on fifth page.

REDUCED FARES
NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES
Alexandria Bay 2.50
(Including Tour of Islands)
Round Trip. Every Wednesday, Saturday, Sunday and Holiday to August 30th. Return limit same day.
Consult local ticket agents for time of trains and other information.

Long Island and New England
The "End of a Perfect Day" usually ends with dancing on wide porches or in the ball rooms. The daylight hours are filled with surf bathing, boating, fishing and other water sports. Can you resist the call?
Through cars to New York and Boston, the gateways to Long Island and New England resorts.
Low Summer Excursion Fares
For information about tickets, time of trains and low excursion fares, and frequent 15-day excursions to Boston at one way fare plus $3 for round trip, consult local ticket agents.
NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES
For the Public Service

REDPATH CHAUTAUQUA WEEK

Six Well Known Lecturers Who Always Deliver the Goods

Six Days of the World's Best In Entertainment and Inspiration Brought to Your Door.
Enjoyment Without Measure or Stint.
This Is the Week When Fun Chases Dull Care Out of Sight and Mind.
The Gala Season of the Whole Year Is Near at Hand—The Great Social Get-Together Week.

Junior Chautauqua For the Children. Expert Playground Supervisor In Charge All Week. Splendid Morning Hour Lectures For the Grownups.

FIRST DAY
MORNING
JUNIOR CHAUTAUQUA ORGANIZATION
AFTERNOON
LOVAT'S HIGHLAND BAND
Seven Picturesque Scotchmen—Harry Lauder's Famous Company.
HON. JOE R. HANLEY
In a Stirring Lecture, "A Modern Crusader."
EVENING
LOVAT'S HIGHLAND BAND
JOHN B. RATTO
Original and Clever Characterizations.

SECOND DAY
MORNING
JUNIOR CHAUTAUQUA
FIRST LECTURE OF POPULAR SERIES
AFTERNOON
JUDGE MARCUS A. KAVANAGH
"Traitors to Justice."
EVENING
THE BEN GREET PLAYERS
"The Merchant of Venice."

THIRD DAY
MORNING
JUNIOR CHAUTAUQUA
SECOND LECTURE OF POPULAR SERIES
AFTERNOON
ELSIE BAKER COMPANY
Three Nationally Known Artists.
EVENING
DR. RUSSELL H. CONWELL
"Acres of Diamonds."

FOURTH DAY
MORNING
JUNIOR CHAUTAUQUA
THIRD LECTURE OF POPULAR SERIES
AFTERNOON
CIMERA AND HIS BAND
LILLIAN HEYWARD, Soprano
EVENING
CIMERA AND HIS BAND
LILLIAN HEYWARD, Soprano

FIFTH DAY
MORNING
JUNIOR CHAUTAUQUA
FOURTH LECTURE OF POPULAR SERIES
AFTERNOON
MARIGOLD GIRLS
Attractive Girls In a Pleasing Program.
MRS. SARAH TYSON RORER
Famous Home Economics Expert—Lecture and Demonstration.
EVENING
MARIGOLD GIRLS
ALTON PACKARD, Cartoonist and Humorist.

SIXTH DAY
MORNING
JUNIOR CHAUTAUQUA
LAST LECTURE OF POPULAR SERIES
AFTERNOON
CHILDREN'S SHAKESPEARE PAGEANT
FIVE EMINENT ARTISTS, In Grand Concert.
EVENING
DR. EDWARD AMHERST OTT
"The Man Who Makes You Think."

Eight Great Musical and Entertainment Features, Artists of National Reputation

Only Seven Hundred and Fifty $2.00 Season Tickets Will Be Sold by the Local Committee.
When These Are Gone the Price Will Be $2.50, on Sale Only at the Gate.
Single Admissions For the Week Will Aggregate $6.70.
You'll Be Wise if You Prepare Yourself With a Season Ticket NOW.

Seventeen Entertainments and Lectures. Something Doing Every Morning, Afternoon and Evening. Community Headquarters at the Big Tent All Week.

GET AN ILLUSTRATED SOUVENIR PROGRAM AND SEE FOR YOURSELF

IN FULTON JULY 31st TO AUGUST 5th

Cool and comfortable to throat and tongue—a SENSIBLE cigarette.

20 for 15¢

Local and Personal

Mr. Harold Read, of Herkimer, has returned to his home, after visiting relatives in this city.

* * *

Mr. Daniel Hudson has returned from Lincolnton, N. C. He will locate with his parents in this city and will become an employe of one of the local paper mills.

* * *

Mr. Joseph McCaffrey, of this city, who recently graduated from the forest Ranger School at Wanakenna, has accepted a position as engineer for a lumber company located at Charlotte, N. C. He will leave tomorrow to report for duty.

* * *

Frank Halstead and Orin Prashaw, who are employed at Frankfort, spent Sunday with their families on the West side.

* * *

A picnic was held at Stop 22 yesterday, by a number of young persons of this city.

* * *

Mrs. Mary McCarthy, of 164 West Second street, is seriously ill.

* * *

The Misses Geraldine H. and Alice Scanlon have returned to their home in Rome, N. Y., after spending a week with their friends, Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Smith, of Broadway and Sixth streets.

* * *

Mr. Herbert Taylor, of Mexico, N. Y., has been spending a few days with relatives and friends in this city.

* * *

Mrs. I. Alderman has returned, after spending nearly a week with friends at Camillus. The return trip was made yesterday in the Alderman car. Mr. Alderman carrying the family to Camillus and return.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stewart, of Utica street, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. J. Rude, of the Chase road.

* * *

Miss Eva Rude, of the Chase road, has returned from Syracuse, where she spent last week as the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Vickery.

* * *

Mrs. J. Rude and Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Stewart have leased a cottage at Sylvan Beach, and will leave for that place next Monday, to remain for an indefinite period.

* * *

Mrs. Frank Phillips and Mrs. Ernest Phillips and daughter, of North Eighth street, have returned from Central Square where they spent a week with relatives.

* * *

Mrs. L. Rhodes, of Cayuga street, is visiting relatives in Oswego.

* * *

Miss Marion Dickinson, of Emery street, is visiting friends in Boston, Mass.

* * *

Dr. Salsbury and family, of Cazenovia and Dr. Salsbury and family of Nebraska, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Anson Salsbury, of Emery street.

* * *

Mrs. Helen Wolcott has returned to her home in Utica street, after spending a brief time in the Lee Memorial hospital.

* * *

Mrs. L. P. Smith and family have returned from their camp in the North Woods.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. George C. Chauncey, of Park street, are spending a few days at Mexico Point.

* * *

Mrs. F. M. Baker is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Morton, of Academy street.

* * *

Master William Morton is visiting Lloyd Allen, at Mexico Point.

* * *

Mr. Edward Joslin is at the Thousand Islands.

* * *

Mr. A. D. Carroll, of Syracuse, spent Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Carroll, of 162 West Second street. He was accompanied by a young friend, Mr. George Oehrlein, of Brooklyn.

* * *

Miss Mildred Kellogg, of Syracuse, was the guest of friends in this city yesterday.

* * *

City Stenographer Feeley was in the lineup with the Rowan Stars of Oswego, against the Cuban Giants at Watertown Saturday.

* * *

The Board of Public Works will meet at the city hall this evening.

* * *

Mayor Victor C. Lewis motored to Syracuse, today to confer with officials of the Syracuse, Lakeshore and Northern Railroad in regard to the First street paving.

* * *

The Oneida street grade case of S. F. Hill against the City of Fulton will take place in the offices of City Attorney, William S. Hillick, this afternoon.

* * *

H. C. Webb and family have returned from Mexico Point.

* * *

Mrs. Lou Pollack is visiting in Rockaway Beach, N. Y.

* * *

Dr. and Mrs. W. B. Halstead and City Chamberlain and Mrs. H. W. Adkins, have returned from the Thousand Islands where they motored for the week end.

* * *

Mr. Fred Radder is enjoying his annual vacation at the Endicott & Johnson shoe factory at Endicott, N. Y.

* * *

Mr. Herbert Taylor left yesterday for Seneca Falls, where he has secured a position.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hartnett and family, are camping at Mexico Point.

* * *

Miss Mabel Hovey, of Syracuse, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. 'Bert Slawson.

* * *

Harold O'Brien has returned from a two weeks' trip through the New England states.

* * *

James Marshall has returned to Detroit, Mich.

* * *

Mrs. B. L. Newbauer is visiting friends in Oneonta.

* * *

The annual Sunday School picnic of the First Baptist Church will be held at the Fair Grounds Wednesday.

* * *

Mrs. Reeves Smith and daughter, Cornelia, are guests of friends in this city.

HOTEL ARRIVALS.

Clark House—John Perry and family, South Orange, N. J.; J. W. Bennett, New York City; Mr. and Mrs. I. E. Brown, Albany, N. Y.; R. Dickerson, Ashland, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Chappell, Syracuse, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Dutch, Cortland, N. Y.; J. E. Whitehead, New York city; Morril B. Spaulding, Pitsburgh, Pa.; S. J. Scove, New York city; E. Harrigan, Cincinnati, Ohio; William Scott, St. Amsburg, Pa.

TAKE NOTICE!

I have recently opened my new tailor shop at 105 West Broadway in conjunction with the original plant at Cayuga street. I am now equipped mechanically and otherwise to meet the demands of my patrons. Satisfaction guaranteed.

D. RICHARDSON, Tailor.

—Adv.

Bowel Complaint in Children.

Mrs. Margaret Perry, Utica, N. Y., says, "When my son, now grown, was four years old he had a dreadful attack of bloody dysentery, and was so sick that the doctors gave him up to die. A neighbor who knew what a wonderful medicine Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is advised me to give it to him. It is a great medicine and can certainly be relied upon in cases of bowel trouble."

For sale by all dealers.

EMBLEM STANDS FOR HUMANITY

Trade Union Label Symbolizes Hopes of Those Who Toil.

HAS AN ECONOMIC MISSION

Designed With the Purpose of Raising the American Standard of Life and Morality—Aims to Destroy Advantages of the Few—Appeals to Reason, Not to Force.

By MATTHEW WOLL, President of the International Photo Engravers' Union.

> As the cross is the symbol of Christianity, the Red Cross the emblem of courage and of hope to the sick and wounded, so the trade union label is the emblem of humanity, the symbol of the hopes and aspirations of the worker.

A symbol is a sign or representation of any moral thing by the images or properties of natural things. Thus, the lion is the symbol of courage; the lamb is a symbol of meekness or patience. Symbols are of various kinds, as types, enigmas, parables, fables, allegories, emblems, hieroglyphics, etc.

That the workers' hopes, aims and aspirations should find symbolical expression should therefore occasion no surprise. The union label has come to be a well recognized part of the work of the trade union movement. The trade union label as used serves to indicate that the goods and receptacles of goods to which it is attached were made by union workmen and under working conditions established by the associated efforts of the organization having adopted the particular symbol. It is intended to distinguish such goods from all others of a similar kind.

The trade union label was originally designed by the cigarmakers of San Francisco to direct attention to the growing competition of Chinese labor with white labor and the ultimate converting of an American standard of life and of morality to a much lower condition of life and work. The message of the hope of the workers thus symbolized the impending dangers to society, so well represented in this emblematic form, immediately aroused and crystallized such a strong social resentment as to have practically destroyed the grave menace then confronting the workers and society.

The great moral, social and economic mission which the trade union label so well symbolized at that time is greater in its concept and more comprehensive today than at any time since its adoption.

Today the union label directs attention to the evils of underpaid and overworked adult labor, to the unfair competition of free labor with compulsory labor, to the exploitation of woman and child labor. It directs attention and concentrates public sentiment against the evils peculiar to certain crafts and evils common to all industries. It is emblematic of the scientific truth about human nature—that the more men know of each other and of their hopes and aspirations the more they love each other and the closer they knit themselves together in a common purpose and cause, and in which scheme of life the humane doctrines of mutual sacrifice, protection and uplift are predominating principles.

The trade union label symbolizes the struggle to put an end to the partnership between competition and charity—competition between paupers, and charity dropping one tear on another.

The great aim of the trade union label is to destroy the instrument of oppression, of undue advantage for a few. It heralds the message that men who are to live together in society must make mutual sacrifices. It represents the birth of a new brotherhood, born of the nearness of man to man, made possible by modern civilization. It holds that the chief end of man is to live the life of a free man, whole—that is, wholly in body, mind and soul. It seeks to attract the sympathy, encouragement and support of all right thinking people in the uplift of those who do the world's work.

The label is a significant and permanent declaration of the moral duty devolving on the purchaser to inquire into the social cost at which an article is produced as well as into the cost at which it is sold. It appeals to reason and not to force and is a medium by which the public may enforce its rightful power of arbitrament between employer and employee.

It is impossible to comprehensibly define the great possibilities of the union label. Nothing in the whole realm of human labor is more capable of effective and continuous unity. To the trade unionists it is a constant reminder of their common interest and a common duty. It is unquestionably the most practical agency yet devised to unify all the forces of labor, at present greatly divided into individual units of organization, predicated on craft and trade lines.

More Pay For Horseshoers.

The Boston Journeymen Horseshoers union has compromised wage differences with the Master Horseshoers' association. The new rates are $22 a week and a Saturday half holiday for nine months in the year.

Ho! Everybody!!

Know Zu Zu! Eat Zu Zu! The crispest, spiciest ginger snap that ever tickled a palate.

Make a bee line to the nearest grocer man, and get a whole packageful for a nickel.

5¢

NATIONAL BISCUIT COMPANY

Zu Zu • Zu Zu • Zu Zu • Zu Zu • Zu Zu • Zu Zu

RAILROADERS DEFEAT UTOKA TRIBESMEN

The Red Men's baseball players were defeated yesterday in a game with the New York Central shop team of Oswego, by a score of 14 to 5, in favor of the Oswegonians. Higgins, the visitors' moundsman, did creditable work, displaying such sharp curves that the local boys were unable to hit. Painter worked for Fulton, but evidently had an off day, the visitors finding him for numerous hits. The fielding of the Red Men was capable of improvement and the same thing may be said of the hitting. A large audience of fans was present, but a small offering was realized.

AMERICAN MECHANICS WILL INSTAL OFFICERS

Installation of officers will occur tonight in the Council rooms of the Order United American Mechanics. A large attendance of the membership is desired to welcome a delegation of Salt City Council members of the order. At the conclusion of the business session there will be served a light luncheon, with red-ripe, juicy watermelon as a finishing touch.

ALL SAINTS CHURCH WILL PICNIC TOMORROW

The All Saints' Church congregation and Sunday school will hold the annual picnic, in conjunction with the Christ church parish, at Long Branch tomorrow. A car will leave at ten o'clock tomorrow morning. Ball games, races and various contests will be waged in the afternoon and dancing will be enjoyed at night.

CHAUTAUQUA CLUB MEETS IN LIBRARY

A meeting of the Chautauqua Association will be held at the Public Library this evening, when plans will be perfected for continuing the work of selling tickets. A lot of additional business will be discussed, all of which bears upon making the coming Chautauqua season a success.

K. OF C. LEAVES OLD HEADQUARTERS TOMORROW

The first meeting of the Knights of Columbus in their new home will be held tomorrow night, when plans will be made for the formal opening of the house, to occur August 1st.

The new home is beautifully decorated and the equipment within is modern in every respect.

TWO AUTOS COLLIDED IN EAST FIRST STREET

Two large touring cars collided on East First street, yesterday afternoon. The cars met in an unusual way, the right wheel of one ramming the left wheel of the other. Fortunately no one was hurt, but the cars were badly damaged.

GRACE M. GUILFOYLE

The death of Miss Grace Mildred Guilfoyle, eight years old, of 260 South Seventh street, occurred today at 12:30. Miss Guilfoyle is survived by her mother, Mrs. Eliza Guilfoyle; one sister, Helen, and three brothers, John and William and the third an infant. Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Attention Babies

We re-tire cabas and go-carts. Van Wagenen, Inc.—Adv.

PHILADELPHIA PENN COLLECTION FILLED

Philadelphia, Pa.—With the purchase in London this month of two Penn portraits, the collection of the Pennsylvania Historical Society is virtually complete. The pictures, one of Hannah Callowhill, second wife of Penn, and Granville John Penn, great grandson of William Penn, were purchased at auction at Christie's. They formerly belonged to the collection of J. Meyrick Head, and were sold by his wife. No definite announcement that the Granville Penn portrait has been purchased was made, but the understanding among members of the society is that it was.

The portrait of Hannah Callowhill was bought for about $425. It is not a large canvas being only 17 by 14 inches. The painter, who posed her in a high back chair, is not known. This purchase recalls a bit of interesting negotiation the society has had for several years with J. Meyrick Head. Dr. J. W. Jordan, librarian of the society, as its representative had for some time been trying to buy the whole Head collection of Penn relics, which he secured when he obtained Pennsylvania Castle about 30 years ago. He asked $250,000 for the collection, afterward reducing the price to $100,000, but negotiations for it were never completed.

The Historical Society's collection is unusually complete, among the most interesting and among the most valuable being Penn's diaries written while he was in Ireland and Holland.

RIDES A FISH TO DEATH.

Hiram Also Keeps His Prize Despite State Game Wardens.

Appleton, Wis.—Riding a fish and killing it is not catching it. Such is the decision of the state game wardens in the case of Hiram Beveridge.

The water in the Fox river has been low of late, and Hiram saw a six foot sturgeon in a shallow pool below the John street dam. He tried to catch it by the tail, but failed. Then he jumped and landed on its back. It was worse than riding a bucking broncho, but he seized a stone when the fish was floundering in shallow water and beat it to death.

Hiram's knees were scraped raw and his legs cut, but he got seventy pounds of fish and furnished the basis for a new legal decision to ring down the ages.

Sentenced to Attend Church.

Galion, O.—Mayor Biehl recently sentenced Sylvester Shade, found guilty of stealing two dollars' worth of brass from a traction company to three years in the workhouse and a fine of $50, but remitted the sentence if Shade keeps clean, sober and attends church at least once a Sunday

FATHER HAS A MOTOR DRIVEN BABY CARRIAGE

When Twins Came Along He Asked For License, Which Was Granted.

Olympia, Wash.—A man in Vancouver has a motor driven baby carriage and has applied to the secretary of state for a license to operate it. He wrote as follows:

"A short time ago I took out a license for a motor attachment for a bicycle, and now I want to transfer that motor to a baby carriage that I purchased when twins were born into my family. May I do this without taking out a new license?"

I. M. Howell, secretary of state, in his reply to the proud though anxious father replied that the transfer would be allowed.

ROBBED BY BANDITS, BUT HE WINS BRIDE

And Then Couple Adopt Child Who Was About to Become an Orphan.

Live Oak, Cal.—Starting out from Seattle, bent on an auto trip that would include Yosemite valley, Harold Fitzgerald, a lumber dealer, met in four weeks' travel some thrilling adventures.

Fitzgerald began his trip alone, but he is taking on passengers and may be overcrowded before he is ready for the homebound journey.

Here are a few episodes in Fitzgerald's search for thrills as related when he stopped at Live Oak to take on gasoline.

When near Kalama, Wash., he was held up by two highwaymen and relieved of a rifle and $40. The road agents got into the car and rode sixty miles, thanking him for his courtesy and sportsmanlike spirit, as they left to strike off into the hills.

A few miles out from Salem, Fitzgerald came upon an auto going north. In the party was Miss Jeannette Draper, daughter of John Draper, driver of the car. It was love at first sight. Fitzgerald discovered that it was necessary for him to return as far as Salem. It was a whirlwind courtship that in four days ended in Miss Draper becoming Mrs. Fitzgerald. Father and mother continued north, bride and bridegroom coming south.

While crossing the Siskiyou range the Fitzgeralds came upon an old mountaineer and his four-year-old granddaughter. The man told a story of how the child's mother had died, and he was leaving for the county seat to place the little one in an orphan's home.

The beauty of the child and the pathetic story appealed to the newly wedded couple. The next day little Mabel Hines was riding in the big auto. She had found a new father and mother.

Dealers recommend Hanford's Balsam because they personally use it and their customers always come back for more.—Adv.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW

What a Heap of Happiness it Would Bring to Fulton Homes.

Hard to do housework with an aching back.

Brings you hours of misery at leisure or at work.

If women only knew the cause—that

Backache pains often come from weak kidneys.

'Twould save much needless woe.

Doan's Kidney Pills are for weak kidneys.

Read what a Fulton woman says:

Mrs. Leland Sherman, 267 S. Seventh street, Fulton, says: "I feel justified in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills, for I know from personal experience that they are an excellent kidney and backache medicine. I used them for pains in my back and loins and other kidney annoyances, and they gave me relief."

Price 50c., at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Sherman had. Foster-Milburn Co. Props, Buffalo, N. Y.

SAVINGS ACCOUNTS

More people are opening Savings accounts this year than ever before. Prosperity is here and now is the time to save.

Open your savings account and send your deposits by mail.

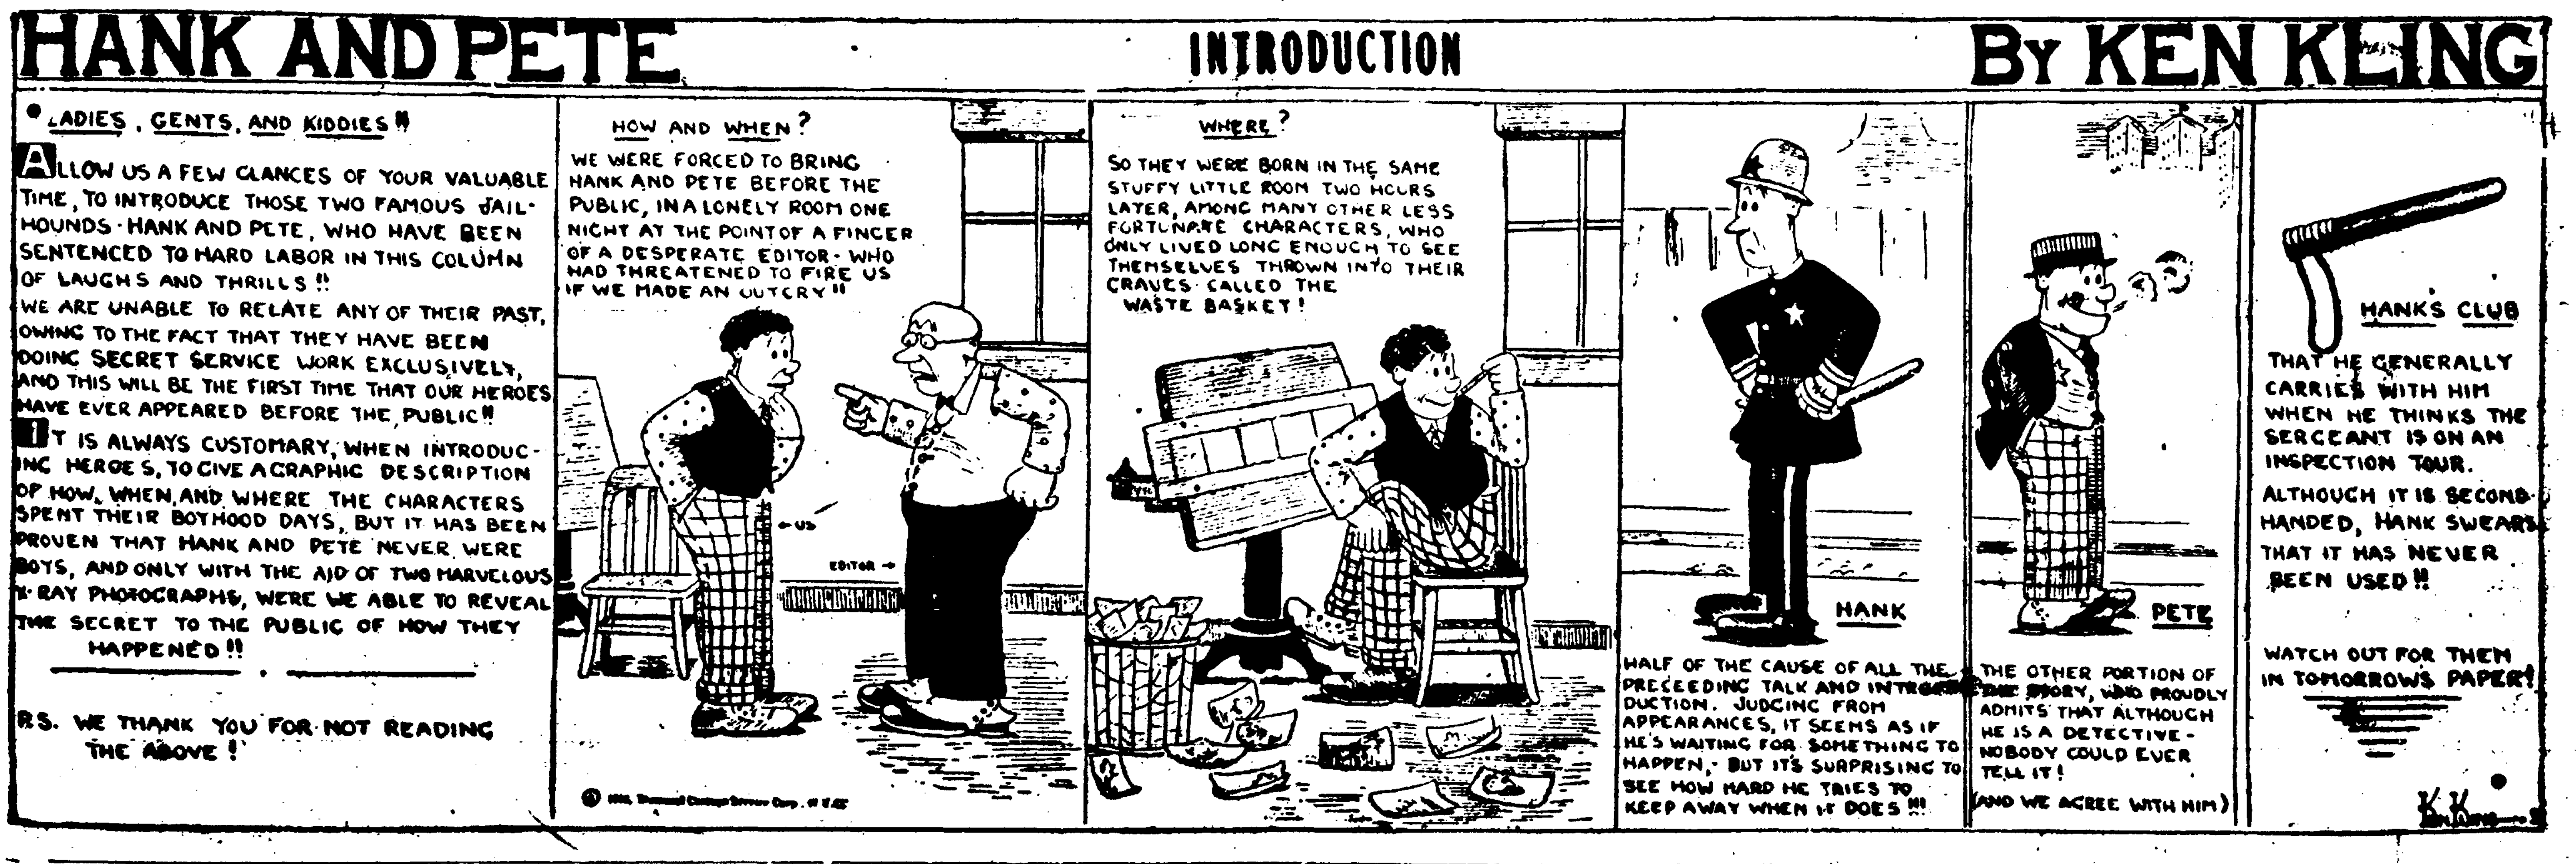
Prompt and efficient service.

Assets over $12,000,000.00.

4% INTEREST Paid since Jan. 1, 1908.

ALBANY CITY SAVINGS INSTITUTION
100 STATE ST.
ALBANY, N.Y.

Booklet "U.S. MAIL FOR BANKING"
SENT ON REQUEST



REAL ISSUE OF SHIPPING BILL

Washington, D. C.—The Wilson administration's legislative effort to restore the American merchant marine to the seas appears now to be on the eve of realization. Contested every foot of the way since first proposed in the last Congress, the Alexander plan of federal regulation of ocean shipping, combined with the McAdoo plan for government ownership and operation, has been endorsed by the House and is before the Senate in a favorable report from the committtee on commerce. According to the majority's legislative program for the remainder of the session, this bill is to have right of way, except for appropriation bills and conference reports.

The measure had come generally to be known as the "ship purchase bill," because the controversy has entered in the provisions for purchase and possible operation of merchant vessels by the government. As this feature is only temporary in its operation it would seem that popular impression has come to appraise the measure, not according to its most vital provisions, but according to a relatively minor provision.

The permanent legislation in the bill, which presumably will affect the operation of every ship in the merchant marine, long after the government ships have become reminiscences, is that of establishing a government shipping board to perform for ocean commerce the regulatory functions which have been performed for some years now for railroad commerce by the interstate commerce commission.

This board is advocated by mar shipowners who have frowned upon the government ship plan. They see in the shipping board vast possibilities for helpfulness to the merchant marine.

They see regulation of ocean shipping centralized in a body of men who presumably will know something about ocean shipping and who will have, or acquire in time, something of the point of view of the shipowner who is trying to develop foreign trade. They see the possibility of this board becoming to the United States merchant marine what the British Board of Trade has become to the British merchant marine. They see in this board an avenue through which Congress may be reached with recommendations for amendments to the navigation laws, and have hope that this board may be able to persuade Congress that certain long standing statutory burdens must be removed if the United States merchant marine is to become a factor in the world's commerce.

The "shipping board act" or the "ocean commerce regulation act" or the "merchant marine regulation act" would seem to be more appropriate titles for this measure than its popular name, the "ship purchase act." For temporary identification, while no other important bills affecting the merchant marine are pending in Congress, the term "ship bill" suffices and is more accurately expressive of the contents of the measure than the term "ship purchase bill."

The bill as reported by the Senate committee proposes to establish the United States shipping board of five commissioners, appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, to have general supervision over operation of United States vessels on the ocean and on the Great Lakes. The Senate committee heeded protests and eliminated the House provision that the secretaries of the navy and commerce be ex officio members of the board. The commissioners are to have six year terms, arranged to expire alternately, and $10,000 salaries. Not more than three are to be of one political party. No commissioner may be financially interested in shipping and they must devote their entire time to the work of the board.

The first task imposed on the board is to acquire for the government, by construction, purchase, lease or charter, merchant vessels that may be used as naval auxiliaries or army transports. For this purpose a $50,000,000 issue of Panama canal bonds, is authorized. To accomplish the result the board is authorized, if necessary, to form one or more corporations of not exceeding $50.000.000 capital stock, to acquire and operate the ships, the board being empowered to subscribe to not less than a majority of the stock.

To meet the objections of certain Democratic senators who in the last Congress bolted their party on this measure, the committee has modified this ship purchase and operation feature so as to forbid government acquisition of any vessel already engaged in commerce of the United States, unless about to be withdrawn, or any vessel flying the flag of a belligerent, or any vessel not adapted to the purpose of the bill, or any vessel not 75 per cent. efficient. It will be remembered that in the last Congress the Senate developed an intense controversy over the possibility of international complications by the purchase of belligerent vessels sequestered in American waters, but nobody speaking for the administration would give assurance that there was no intention of buying the German ships tied up in New York and Boston harbors.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

For Sale—A good E. M. F. Touring Car, for $175. Van Wagenen, Inc. 483

Wanted Boarders—Desirable rooms, good board, price reasonable. 420 Seneca street. Mrs. Lamb. 484

For Sale—A good Overland car for $200. Van Wagenen, Inc. 483

For Sale Cheap—One Roll Top Desk. The Morrill Press. 482

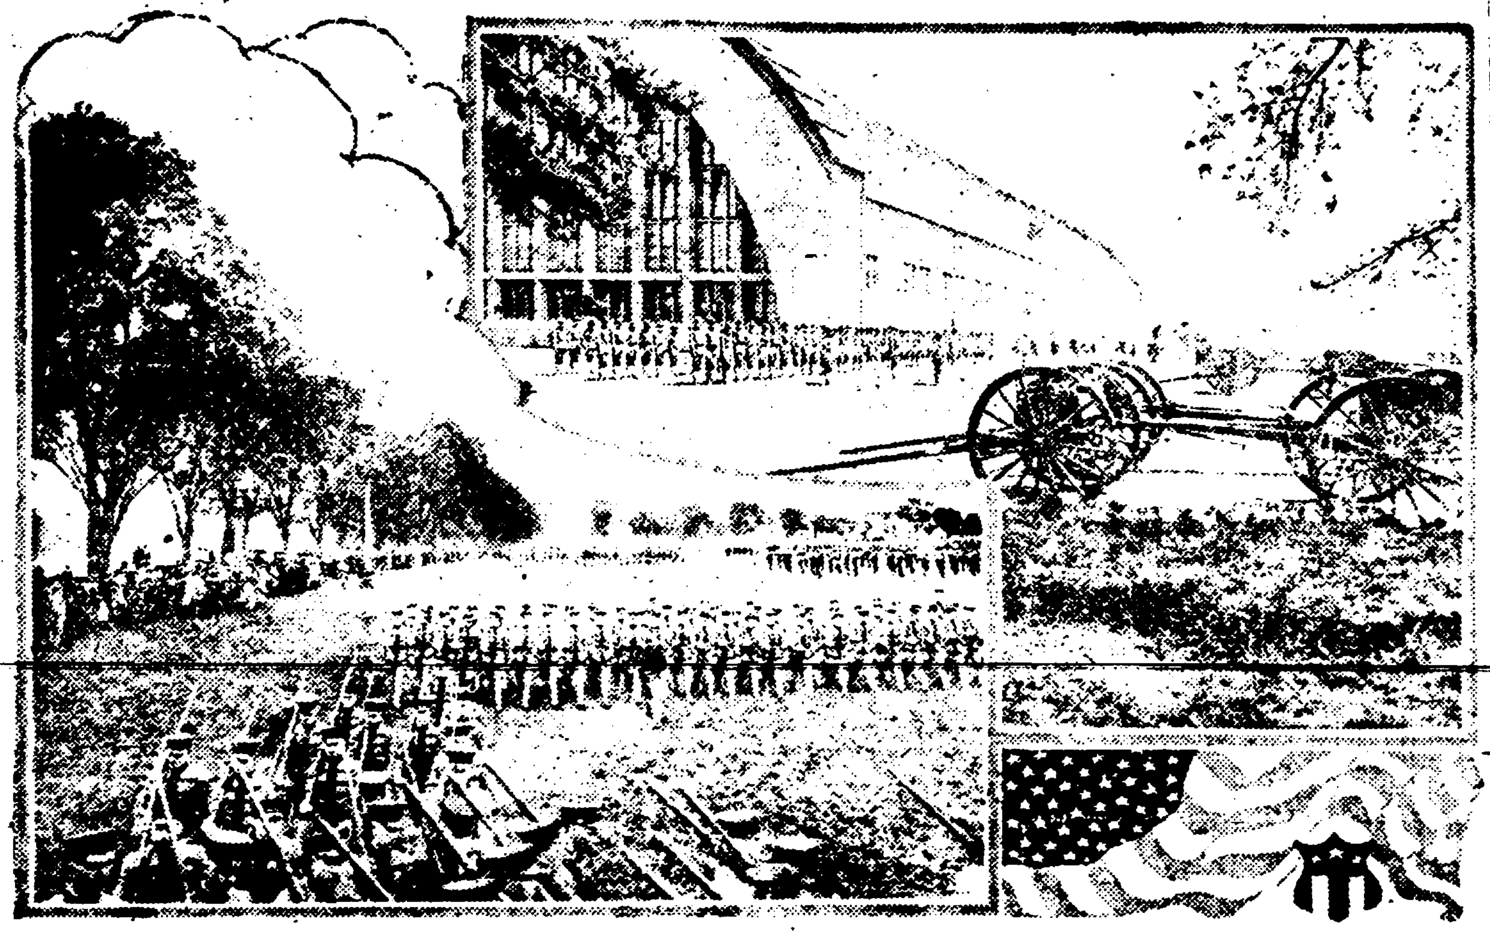
For Sale—A good Maxwell touring car for $250. Van Wagenen, Inc. 483

QUIRK THEATRE

Continuous 2 to 10:30
Feature Motion Pictures.
ALL SEATS 5—CENTS—5. NO HIGHER.

TODAY—
"THE LURE OF HEART'S DESIRE"
5-Part Metro Feature.
Mr. and Mrs. Drew in
"ONE ON HENRY"
TUESDAY—
Theda Bara in
"THE ETERNAL SAPHO"
5-Part Fox Feature

ILLINOIS COLLEGE BOYS EXPECT CALL TO BORDER



Battery F of Illinois national guard and a company of infantry composed of students of the University of Illinois who expect a call for duty on border. After graduation these students are given a commission as brevet captain in national guard.

SOUVENIRS FOR BRIDES.

New York Suffragists Tell Each New Wife Power Vote Would Bring.

New York.—Little American flags and suffrage buttons were given out at the marriage license bureau to all the brides of the greater city recently by New York city suffragists. The demonstration took place just as the soldiers were called out to camp, and so many of the brides were tearful little war brides, to whom the American flags presented by the suffragists were peculiarly appropriate. With the flags and buttons each bride received a box of wedding cake tied with suffrage ribbon and a bride's leaflet advising each new wife of the power she might gain for husband and children if she had the vote.

The leaflet told of the good laws women have helped to gain in the twelve suffrage states for the protection of men, women and children. It ended with an appeal to every bride to join the suffrage movement, which is endeavoring to "extend the wife and mother influence throughout the state."

Chief Scully entered heartily into the plans of the suffragists and permitted them to trim up the marriage chapel in the municipal bureau with yellow flowers.

CLEAR SKIN COMES FROM WITHIN

It is foolish to think you can gain a good clear complexion by the use of face powder. Get at the root of the trouble and thoroughly cleanse the system with a treatment of Dr. King's New Life Pills. Gentle and mild in action, do not gripe, yet they relieve the liver by their action on the bowels. Good for young, adults and aged. Go after a clear complexion to-day. 25c. at your druggist.

CHAUTAUQUA MOVEMENT SPREADS OVER COUNTRY

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says that going to Chautauqua formerly meant taking a railroad trip to western New York. Now it may mean taking a street car to a grove somewhere in the town's outlying district and returning home for supper. People originally had to go to Chautauqua; now Chautauqua has been brought to them.

The most casual reader of small town newspapers is struck by the number of chautauquas either now in progress or preparing to open their seasons in various localities. Chautauqua week is a real event, social as well as educational. It brings the small community into touch with the great throbbing world of ideas. It is an education and an inspiration—as fine an example of university extension practice as can be found.

The original chautauqua was established more than forty years ago on the banks of the lake whose name it took. For years that was all the chautauqua there was. The influence of its sessions reached out through the publications of the organization and through its visitors, but in no other way. Relatively few people, of course, could afford the time or the money to bring themselves into personal contact with it.

Now, however, some 200 chautauqua assemblies exist in various parts of the country each contributing to the education and upbuilding of its community through the course of lectures, sermons and other cultural offerings. Men recognized far and wide for their eminence in various fields of thought and activity make the rounds of these small chautauquas, discussing politics, sociology, economics and the sciences and bringing their thousands of hearers into touch with the latest thought in many directions.

The chautauqua and the county fair are valuable agencies of progress through which much has been accomplished and more is to be expected.

Might Spare a Few.

It is said that never was there a gentler critic than Dr. McClintock of Dickinson college. One day a young orator presented his speech for Dr. McClintock's approval. He evidently did not anticipate adverse criticism. He received it nevertheless, given in the doctor's gentle, humorous way, which never could offend.

"It's a good speech," he said, "but there is perhaps a little too much of a certain sort of rhetoric. For instance, I find in it two midnight owls, two midnight wolves, three American eagles and four unfurled banners. It seems to me that the supply exceeds the demand."

A Notable Event.

"People often preserve the pens with which historic documents are signed."

"Quite so," said his wife. "I think I'd preserve the pen with which you signed that $5 check you gave me the other day."—Kansas City Journal.

CHARLES E. HUGHES, JR., TRAINS AT PLATTSBURG

The only son of the Republican presidential candidate at the business man's training camp at Plattsburg, N. Y. His work there will make him eligible to command volunteers if we should war with Mexico. (Star indicates Hughes.)

TELLS GIRLS TO PROPOSE.

Young Woman Who Is Studying Blacksmithing Gives Her Reasons.

Ames, Ia.—Miss Tura A. Hawk, Iowa State college's only girl student of blacksmithing, has further demonstrated her versatility by winning the faculty cup for the best extemporaneous address, and she did it with the subject, "Why Women Should Propose."

"There are three reasons why women should propose—physical, spiritual and moral," said Miss Hawk.

"I ask you, is there any reason why a strong, able bodied woman should not support a husband if she chooses? No; only a time worn prejudice rears itself against such a procedure.

"For the spiritual reason, there is the great saying, 'Whatever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them.' As women should rightfully be the manager of the oldest of all institutions, the home, is it any more than fair that she should be permitted to ask the man of her ideals to help her found and operate that home? Must woman, because years of common practice have established a custom, wait when she is ready to begin her life work because only the men who are not her ideal will propose?"

The Laziest People.

There is no doubt that the Malays are among the laziest people in the world. Except in rare cases they will not take the trouble to learn when they are young, and afterward, if they have learned, they will not exert themselves to apply their knowledge to any object which requires a sustained effort. That they possess effort is known to any one who has seen Malays engaged in any enterprise which savors of sport. They do not mind the trouble if there is only some risk and excitement in the work.

CHICHESTER S PILLS
THE DIAMOND BRAND.
Ladies! Ask your Druggist for Chi-ches-ter's Diamond Brand Pills in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with Blue Ribbon. Take no other. Buy of your Druggist. Ask for CHI-CHES-TER'S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS, for 25 years known as Best, Safest, Always Reliable
SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE
Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING AND HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second St.

FOR SALE
Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.
Ready for Prompt Delivery
Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

KAPLAN'S EXPRESS
Baggage, Trucking and Freight Handled Promptly. Ashes Drawn
Household Goods Moved
Prompt Deliveries Terms Reasonable
All kinds of second hand goods bought and sold
Phones Residence 1568, Business 4246
38 S. Second St., Fulton, N. Y.

FOR SALE
I BEAMS, new and second-hand all sizes. Also PULLEYS, second-hand MACHINERY, PIPE and all sizes of IRON PLATES.
Inquire of
I. ALDERMAN
Schuyler Street
Office Phone 2242 Res. Phone 1367

LEGAL NOTICES.

Citation On Settlement.

The People of the State of New York: To Robert E. Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Elmina Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Cyrus Frederick Phillips, Rochester, N. Y.; Ross Phillips, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Asa Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Grace Phillips Bryant, Akron, O.; May Wood Taylor, St. Josephs, Mo.; All Saints' Church (formerly Zion Episcopal Church), Fulton, N. Y.; Mount Adnah Cemetery Association, Fulton, N. Y.; Minnie Wood Douglas, Nutley, N. J.; Charles Shaw, Kansas City, Mo.; Frank Barnes, Fulton, N. Y.; Hiram Barnes, Little Falls, N. Y.; Nellie Barnes Huntly, Colosse, N. Y.; Harriet A. Phillips, Denver, Col.; Charles R. Phillips, Youngstown, O.; Fanny Barnes Burt, Hannibal, N. Y.; Edith Barnes, Fulton, N. Y.; Hattie Hurlburt, Natural Bridge, N. Y.; Ella Reed, Russell, N. Y.; Mary Curtis, Hermon, N. Y.; Anna Phillips Nagle, Minneapolis, Minn.; Leonard T. Haight, Syracuse, N. Y.; William B. Phillips, Toledo, O.; Thurber C. Phillips, Long Island City, N. Y.; Mary Helen Winegar, Syracuse, N. Y.; Ruth Winegar, Nutley, N. J.; Josephine Broadwell, Fulton, N. Y.; Mary A. Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Eleanor Barnes Tamlyn, Custer City, S. Dak.; George H. Phillips, Stockbridge, Mich.; Cyrus W. Phillips, Rochester, N. Y.; Florence C. Boddy, Rochester, N. Y., and to all other persons interested in the estate of Julia A. Broadwell late of the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, deceased, either as creditors, legatees, next of kin or otherwise, Send Greeting:

Upon the petition of Arvin Lewis Rice, of the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, the executor of said Julia A. Broadwell, deceased:

You and each of you are hereby cited to show cause before the Surrogate's Court of Oswego County, New York, at the Surrogate's Office in the City of Oswego, in said county, on the 31st day of July, 1916, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why the account of Arvin Lewis Rice as executor of said deceased should not be judicially settled and allowed, and such of you as are under age of twenty-one years are required to appear by your general guardian, if you have one; or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed; or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a special guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate's Court to represent and act for you in the proceeding.

In Testimony Whereof, We have caused the seal of the Surrogate's Court of the County of Oswego to be hereunto affixed.

(L.S.) Witness, Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of our said County of Oswego, at the City of Oswego, in the said County, the 26th day of June, A. D., 1916.

H. E. HINMAN,
Clerk of the Surrogate's Court.

Notice to Creditors.

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Warren H. Loomis, late of the Town of Schroeppel in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber, at the law office of Floyd S. Spangle, 15 South First street, Fulton, New York, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 20th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 12th day of June A. D., 1916.

GLENN R. LOOMIS,
Administrator.

FLOYD S. SPANGLE,
Attorney for Administrator,
15 South First Street,
Fulton, N. Y.

Notice to Creditors

IN PURSUANCE OF AN ORDER of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Bridget Gibbons, late of the City of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his office, No. 24 White Memorial Building, Syracuse, in the County of Onondaga, New York, on or before the 15th day of October, 1916.

Dated this 27th day of March, A. D., 1916.

EDWARD L. MOORE,
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of Bridget Gibbons, deceased.

WILLIAM H. BAMERICK,
Attorney for Executor,
24 White Memorial Bldg.,
Syracuse, N. Y.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

LEGAL NOTICES.

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Sarah Hancock, late of the City of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at the law office of Claude E. Guile, 35 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 1st day of September, 1916.

Dated this 7th day of February, A. D., 1916.

Alden M. Hurd,
Executor.

Claude E. Guile,
Attorney for Executor,
35 South 1st st., Fulton, N. Y.

Notice to Creditors.

In pursuance of an Order of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Eliza Birdsall, late of the Town of Granby, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at law offices of Wilson & Rice, Savings Bank Building, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 4th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 22d day of May A. D., 1916.

NELLIE E. WILCOX,
Executrix.

By ARVIN L. RICE,
Attorney.

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Clara A. Fredenburg, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at No. 59 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 23rd day of October, 1916.

Dated this 24th day of April, A. D., 1916.

JAMES R. SOMERS,
Attorney for the Administrator of the Estate of Clara A. Fredenburg, deceased.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against, Clark Butts, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his law office No. 59 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 15th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 29th day of May A. D., 1916.

JAMES R. SOMERS,
Attorney for Administrator

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of D. P Morehouse, jr., special Surrogate of the County of Oswego, N. Y., notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Frank R. Caldwell, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his office in the Village of Central Square, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 15th day of September, 1916.

Dated this 6th day of March, A. D., 1916.

HENRY D. COVILLE
Executor.

Making the Money Last.

Rosa Bonheur used to say that her youth was one of great poverty. Then she would add some droll stories about the family method of regulating its finance. The studio was a collection of odds and ends, and M. Bonheur knew how to turn that disorder to account. When he received money for his work he would take a handful of coin and throw it at random about the room. Then in times of stress, when there was apparently not a farthing left in the house, the entire family would set to work searching in nooks and corners. Sometimes they would find a five franc piece, and that warded off starvation.

DOES SLOAN'S LINIMENT HELP RHEUMATISM?

Ask the man who uses it, he knows. "To think I suffered all these years when one 25 cent bottle of Sloan's Liniment cured me," writes one grateful user. If you have Rheumatism or suffer from Neuralgia, Backache, Soreness and Stiffness, don't put off getting a bottle of Sloan's. It will give you such welcome relief. It warms and soothes the sore, stiff painful places and you feel so much better. Buy it at any Drug Store, only 25 cents.

He Found A Watch

And Received the Reward He Wished For

By ESTHER VANDEVEER

Simpson was walking on the street one afternoon in a portion of the city devoted to residences. The sidewalks were broad and laid between grass plots. In the grass on one side he saw something sparkle. Going to it he took up a gold hunting watch. The first thing that Simpson did was to press the spring to open the lid over the face.

He caught his breath. Inside the lid was a photograph of the face of a young girl and so pretty that Simpson would have given his head for one kiss of the original. The watch was of good size and evidently belonged to a man. A pang shot through the finder as it occurred to him that the girl was the betrothed of the owner of the watch.

On the outside of the case, in a smooth space within the chasing, were the initials "H. F. L." "That's the guy that owns the watch and the girl, too, I suppose," muttered Simpson to himself. "I can find out who he is through the directory or possibly the telephone book. I don't mind returning the watch, but I'd like to keep the picture."

He went to the nearest drug store where he took down the telephone book, turned to "L" and began to run his eyes down the names, keeping them open for the three letters on the watch. It was a long hunt, for there were more than a thousand surnames beginning with "L," and in this case the second letter in the surname was at the lower end of the alphabet. It was "o." The name with the letters "H. F." before it was Loring. Henry F. Loring corresponded with the letters on the watch and it was probable that this Loring was the owner. His residence was on an eminently respectable street, and very likely he was one of the upper ten thousand.

Simpson was in no hurry to return the watch because the picture went with it, and the oftener he looked at it the more he was infatuated with it. But conscience, combined with a desire to find the original, compelled him to look for an advertisement of the lost property, and at last one met his eye. A reward was offered if the watch was delivered at the office of the newspaper containing the ad.

Simpson was not to be put off in this way. He walked past Mr. Loring's residence and asked a cop on the beat who lived there and what persons constituted the family. He was pleased to learn that Mr. Loring was its head. This was all he elicited or needed. Mr. Loring was doubtless the father of the girl whose picture had enthralled Simpson instead of being her lover.

What luck!

Simpson went home, took down his telephone book and learned the Loring number. Then he called for it.

"Is Miss Loring at home?" he asked.

"Hold the wire."

In a few moments a feminine voice asked what was wanted.

"I have found a watch with the initials 'H. F. L.' on the case. Has any one of your family lost a watch?"

"Isn't that lovely! Mamma, papa's watch has been found!" Then again in the transmitter, "There's a reward offered"—

"Never mind that. I wish first to establish the fact that the property belongs to your family. Can you identify it in any way?"

"Yes; there is a photograph inside the case."

"Of a very lovely girl?"

"Oh, no, not that; only a girl!"

"Then it can't be the watch you suppose it to be. The photograph is surely that of an angel. Sorry. I suppose I must look further for the owner."

There was no reply to this. So Simpson began again:

"I might take the watch to your house, and if the photograph appears to be a likeness of one of your family that would prove property."

Quite likely by this time the girl had got on to Simpson's facetious manner of returning the watch and proposed to play him at his own game.

"If the photograph is that of an angel there is no use of bringing it here. There's no angel in this house."

Simpson was a gentleman and remembered that such a dialogue forced unnecessarily on a young lady by a stranger—indeed, one she could not even see—was impertinent. He must be cautious or he would get himself shut off.

"Are your father's initials 'H. F. L.?'" he asked.

"They are."

"Then the watch must belong to him. It is not for me to suggest the manner of its return. I am George Simpson, Athenaeum club. Unless I hear from some one of your family soon I shall send it by messenger to your house."

"I'll tell papa. Thank you very much."

"Goodby."

"Goodby."

Simpson flattered himself that he had made a very good bid for an introduction. He could scarcely be accused of transcending the proper limits. He was not supposed to know that the person at the phone was the original of the photograph. He had got in a fine compliment without offense. He had given his address and could only await the issue.

The next morning he received a note that Mr. Loring would call upon him that evening at his club. When the gentleman called Simpson handed him the watch. Of course the owner made no mention of a reward. He acknowledged the obligation and asked if there were not some way of making a return.

"There is only one way," said Simpson, "of doing that, but it would not be permissible for me to mention it, at least not now."

"Were the watch an ordinary one," replied the other, "I should consider that thanks expressed for its return would be sufficient. But it is a very valuable one. I have had it tested in an astronomical observatory and those in charge pronounced it equal for accurate timekeeping to their best chronometers. But this is unimportant beside the fact that it was given me by my late wife. I trust that you will think over the matter and find some method of enabling me to show my appreciation for its return."

"How did it come into the position in which I found it?"

"I cannot tell you. The watch was stolen some time ago. Possibly the one having it, fearing arrest, purposely dropped it that he should not be incriminated by its being found on his person."

"I appreciate your feeling in the matter, Mr. Loring. I will endeavor to think up some way by which you may get your desire."

When Mr. Loring went home that evening there was much eagerness to hear all about the recovery of his treasured keepsake. Had Simpson opened the other side of the case he would have seen a photograph of an elderly lady, the donor of the watch, and would have noticed a resemblance between it and the face on the other side. What especially pleased those interested was that this photograph was returned unblemished, for it was the only one of its kind in existence.

"What kind of a looking man was he, papa?" asked Miss Loring.

"A very gentlemanly appearing young fellow."

"Did you offer to pay him the reward?"

"Of course not. To offer a gentleman a reward for the return of lost property would have been an insult. I explained to him why I prized the watch and asked him to name some way that would be agreeable to him whereby I might show my appreciation of his return of the property."

"What did he say to that?"

"He said that there was only one way of doing it, but it would not be permissible for him to mention it, at least not at present."

Miss Loring turned away to hide a faint blush. Her father continued:

"I begged him to think over the matter and endeavored to find some method of my acknowledging the obligation."

"Did he say he would?"

"Yes."

"I think, papa, that you can scarcely expect that of him, or at least that he should name any favor acceptable to him. It seems to me that it is our part to find a way to favor him."

"Well, Puss, what do you suggest?"

"Why, since he is a gentleman quite likely he knows some one that we know. In that way you might form his acquaintance in a more conventional way than by his returning the watch, and then, you know, it would be in order for you to invite him to dinner."

"I can invite him to dinner without hunting up a mutual friend. It strikes me that returning a man a valued keepsake in the shape of a $500 watch is more of a voucher than a conventional introduction."

There was no response to this, at least none that was visible to the father, for Miss Loring's face was turned away. Nevertheless her eye lighted with satisfaction.

"An invitation to dinner," she continued, "is not in itself an expression of your appreciation of what the gentleman has done, but it will give you an opportunity to discover how to convey a favor."

"I see," said the father, and, seating himself before a desk, he wrote the invitation.

Now, if the young lady had said, "It will give me an opportunity to discover how to convey a favor," she would have spoken the truth. And if she had said, "He wants the picture you carry in the lid of your watch; his coming to dinner will enable me to find a way of giving him a duplicate," she would have told the whole truth.

When Simpson opened the invitation he looked as if he had been plunged in a basin of joy.

"You bet," he said to himself, "that George Simpson, Esq., has managed this affair just about right! George, you have good reason to be proud of yourself."

Oh, the conceit of man! Simpson had managed the affair well enough so far as he was in a position to manage it, but had not his action been supplemented by the all important suggestion of Miss Loring he might have whistled to the wind for the desired acquaintance.

The dinner came off, and after it was over naturally enough Simpson and Miss Loring were left together, while the father read the evening paper in his smoking room. And George found no difficulty whatever in telling what kind of a reward for the return of the watch would be acceptable to him. After a good deal of backing and filling on the part of the young lady he went away with a duplicate of the picture in the case of her father's watch.

From this point the narrative is like all other love stories. Simpson now carries the photograph of his wife in one side of his watch and one of his daughter in the other. They look like twins.

Beautiful Bust and Shoulders are possible if you will wear a scientifically constructed Bien Jolie Brassiere.

The dragging weight of an unconfined bust so stretches the supporting muscles that the contour of the figure is spoiled.

BIEN JOLIE BRASSIERES put the bust back where it belongs, prevent the full bust from having the appearance of flabbiness, eliminate the danger of dragging muscles and confine the flesh of the shoulder giving a graceful line to the entire upper body.

They are the daintiest and most serviceable garments imaginable—come in all materials and styles: Cross Back, Hook Front, Surplice, Bandeau, etc. Boned with "Walohn," the rustless boning—permitting washing without removal.

Have your dealer show you Bien Jolie Brassieres, if not stocked, we will gladly send him, prepaid, samples to show you.

BENJAMIN & JOHNES, 51 Warren Street, Newark, N. J.

Fill your home atmosphere with exquisite lasting fragrance—

ED. PINAUD'S LILAC

The great French perfume, winner of highest international awards. Each drop as sweet and fragrant as the living Lilac blossom. A celebrated connoisseur said: "I don't see how you can sell such a remarkable perfume for 75 cents a bottle"—and remember each bottle contains 6 oz.—it is wonderful value. Try it. Ask your dealer today for ED. PINAUD'S LILAC. For 10 cents our American offices will send you a testing bottle. Write today.

PARFUMERIE ED. PINAUD, Dept M ED. PINAUD Bldg., New York

"Onyx" Hosiery

You Get GOOD Value at ANY Price—Silk; Lisle or Cotton 25c to $5.00 per pair

Emery-Beers Company, Inc.

WHOLESALE 153-161 EAST 24th ST. NEW YORK

For Sale by C. A. BECKWITH, Shoes
FULTON, N. Y.

A Skin Like Velvet smooth, clear, free of wrinkles

Use the exquisitely fragrant cream of the beauty flower of India and be complimented on your complexion. Your dealer has Elcaya or will get it.

CRÊME ELCAYA

Giving Away the Bride.

An archaism of the English marriage service which has fallen into disuse is, "Who giveth this woman away?" It is a relic of the days when a woman could be donated by her father or her brothers as property.

It is related that at a wedding in California many years ago when the clergyman said, "Who giveth this woman away?" a sepulchral voice from the body of the audience replied, "I could, but I won't!"—Los Angeles Times.

TROUBLES AND JOYS.

The trouble with most of us is that our joys seem to sink out of sight in some inner quagmire and our pains take root on the thinnest soil and flourish like the green bay tree. What is the matter with us that a little irritation today can wipe out all the recollection of yesterday's glory?

FARE $3.00 DAILY BETWEEN BUFFALO & CLEVELAND

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.

"CITY OF ERIE" —— 3 Magnificent Steamers —— "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BETWEEN

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Nov. 15th—CLEVELAND

Leave Buffalo 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Cleveland 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo 7:30 A. M.
(Eastern Standard Time)

Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.

Beautifully colored sectional puzzle chart, showing both exterior and interior of The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE" sent on receipt of five cents to cover postage and mailing. Also ask for our 24-page pictorial and descriptive booklet free.

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

Court Versus Committee Law

By ALAN HINSDALE

One night John Arbuckle, while peacefully sleeping in his home, surrounded by his family—a wife and several little children—was awakened by a loud rap at his door. Going downstairs, he opened the door and by the light of a full moon saw a dozen men, each man covering him with a revolver.

"What's become of your clerk, Tom Bowles?" asked the spokesman.

"I don't know. He left me without a word as to where he was going or why."

"That story won't go down with us. You were heard the day before he disappeared to accuse him of robbing you."

"I did not accuse him of any such thing. He was my bookkeeper, salesman and general utility man. He had so much to do that he got the books into a muddle. I was vexed and told him that he might as well have robbed me. As I said the two last words Cy Jenkins came into the store and heard them and saw me looking angrily at Tom. Afterward I apologized to Tom, and he seemed perfectly satisfied. The next day he disappeared."

"Very plausible," replied the spokesman. "How do you account for blood on a towel found in Bowles' room?"

"There's nothing in that. Bowles was cutting some meat for a customer and the knife struck his finger. He went to his room to stanch the blood."

"John Arbuckle, your explanations are mighty thin. You were heard accusing Tom Bowles of having robbed you. The next day he disappeared without a word of information as to where he was going. If you was in the eastern country where such cases as yourn drag along for months, you'd probably get a lawyer who would prove that you never saw Bowles. In this country we take things as they are, there ain't no lawyers to throw dust in our eyes. Come along."

By this time Mrs. Arbuckle and the children had come downstairs and despite their clinging to the husband and father he was hurried away.

"I'll make you men pay for this," he said. "Every one of you."

"You'll have to come back from kingdom come to do it," was the cold reply.

They took their prisoner to a tree and were about to hang him when a man rode by and asked what was the charge against him. When told he said that about the time indicated he had met Bowles early one morning walking on a road leading southward. The informant couldn't remember the date, but he judged it was about a month before.

The committee had started in to hang a murderer and did not relish being turned from their purpose, but several of their members insisted on an investigation of Bowles having been seen going southward and after a long dispute it was determined to put him in jail till this could be done. He was therefore lodged in a cell and the committee went home to bed.

One would naturally suppose that these men who considered that justice rested on their shoulders would have taken the pains to send out in the direction Bowles had been seen going to make inquiries for hm. But while they made it their business to dispense justice and gloried that there were no lawyers in the territory to delay them in doing so, no one of them seemed to consider it his business to hunt up the missing man. A week after they were bent on hanging Arbuckle they had so far cooled as to take very little interest in his case.

However, Mrs. Arbuckle placed her children in the care of a friend and, without announcing her intention, started out to hunt for the missing victim. She spent a good deal of time in her quest without immediate result. After being away from her little ones as long as she felt it practicable to leave them, she returned, bitterly disappointed.

Time passed. There was no trace of Bowles, but the thoughts of the vigilance committee had been turned into other channels and no movement was made to excute Arbuckle. Six months he remained in jail and would probably have remained till the crack of doom had not a court been organized to take the dispensation of justice out of the hands of a self constituted committee. When this occurred the prisoner's case was looked into, and since there was not sufficient evidence against him to warrant his trial he was discharged.

A few days later Bowles, accompanied by a wife, turned up, happy in being a bridegroom. He had been turned down by the bride, but she had relented and given him hope. He had gone for her, but being a modest man and fearing further disappointment had kept the reason for his going to himself.

The day after Bowles' return Arbuckle availed himself of the newly established court to bring suit for damages for false imprisonment against every one of the committee. Most of them had some means, and Arbuckle turned everything he had into money to pay his lawyers. Arbuckle won his suit and received a round sum from each and all who were able to pay. Those who were not able to pay he kept in jail two days for every one he had spent there himself.

Such was the ignominious end of the vigilance committee and the beginning of court law in a western city.

WILL MY CHILD TAKE DR. KING'S NEW DISCOVERY?

This best answer is Dr. King's New Discovery itself. Its a pleasant sweet syrup, easy to take. It contains the medicines which years of experience have proven best for Coughs and Colds. Those who have used Dr. King's New Dicovery longest are its best friends. Besides every bottle is guaranteed. If you don't get satisfaction you get your money back. Buy a bottle, use as directed. Keep what is left for Cough and Cold insurance.

Damascus Olive Groves.

There is an ancient custom under which the olive groves around Damascus are guarded by official watchmen to prevent the trees being stripped by thieves. But on a certain date the governor or some magistrate issues a proclamation warning all owners of olive trees that they must pick their fruit, for after a certain date it becomes public property. If a farmer has his crop only half gathered when that date arrives the public will gather it for him. —London Globe.

Sounded Queer.

"I like to clean up my work in a hurry," said the visitor.

"I find it advisable to string it out a little so that I will always have something on my desk in case a bore comes in," said his friend, taking up some papers.

Then the other man looked at him queerly and went out.—Kansas City Journal.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic, all Teething Troubles and Diarrhoea. It regulates the Stomach and Bowels, assimilates the Food, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years

The Kind You Have Always Bought

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

Here's a Tub Frock to Your Good Taste

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York.

WIDE tucks, hemstitching, organdie fixings and a flowered voile are the ingredients of this fetching frock. The pointed peplum takes a crushed belt, bordered with voile matching the figures, which come in black, copenhagen or rose. Please observe the peanut straw's dashing tilt and the picturesque summery parasol. ANNA MAY.

HIGHER WAGES NEEDED.

Result of the Investigation Conducted by the Sage Foundation.

"Complex" is the problem of "improving wage and employment conditions among the unskilled workers and among women workers in some occupations," says the report on industrial conditions in Springfield, Ill.

"The wages of unskilled male workers and many women workers are very low, too low in many cases to permit women to support themselves properly or to permit men to support an average family of five in decency."

Wage problems are not entirely local, but their solution depend in part upon local action. The Sage foundation report recommends to citizens of Springfield the support of various measures, some of them indirect in their influence, "tending toward improvement of the lot of this group of workers. Among these are: The prohibition of child labor, with the probable consequent increase in the demand for and in the wage of adult labor; as a corollary of this the development of better industrial education for children now of school age, which shall prepare the coming workers for better paid and higher types of work; the establishment of better wage rates for manual labor on public works and the establishment of legal minimum wage standards."

For the salesgirls and other low paid women workers "some improvement might be brought about through organization of the workers—a measure which at best will be difficult, but which should be thoroughly tried. A second measure is the utilization of public opinion expressed either through constant objection to low wages in specific cases or by consumers withdrawing patronage from stores paying low wages. This has been worked out in some communities through the organization of consumers' leagues. In addition to these, minimum wage legislation which would insure at least enough for adequate self support to girls giving the whole of their working time to store or other work places."

In addition to measures already offered to lessen unemployment the report recommends that "thorough study of the unemployment situation and unemployment insurance as a method of relief be taken up through a state commission to be created by the legislature."

Nothing surpasses Hanford's Balsam for external use on horses.—Adv.

THE EMERGENCY SHELF.

How to Be Always Prepared For Unexpected Guests.

When unexpected guests arrive the hostess naturally wishes to entertain them and to get her share of pleasure from the visit, but that matter of "what to eat" makes her ill at ease. She phones wildly for this and that or rushes out into the kitchen almost as soon as the guests are seated. Later, in taking stock, she finds that she has spent more than was warranted and that the refreshments offered were needlessly lavish or sadly one sided.

The hostess backed by a well stocked emergency shelf and menus arranged to fit any occasion opens her door to the party of friends who "just drop in" with absolute joy. She comfortably visits with her guests, for she knows she can serve dainty, satisfying refreshments in a twinkling from her emergency shelf.

On the emergency shelf there should be canned fish, meats, chicken and fruits, a jar of sweet homemade cookies, packages of plain crackers, a jar of pickles, beef extract and canned soups. A small case of grape juice will answer the call of almost all emergencies for beverages and desserts. Keep a pail of pure leaf lard on hand to mix up quick pastries and to cook croquettes.

FLESH COLORED LINGERIE.

The Fad For Fine Underwear Takes on Colorful Shapes.

Such a hold has flesh color obtained on the popular fancy that even in batiste flesh color is much used for nightgowns and underwear. Flesh color batiste is very effective embroidered in white or in bright pink and pale blue. A white scallop with a dainty floral design in white is particularly attractive on the pale tinted background, and many a pretty dressing jacket, nightgown and chemise or camisole is embroidered with the white. When blue is used in the embroidery it must be used with caution and in some patterns is better combined with white, but it is very effective to run pale blue ribbon in flesh colored lingerie, whether of batiste or silk or satin, and this is being done a great deal by the specialty shops which make a point of dainty and unusual lingerie creations. The combination of pink and blue is gaining steadily in favor in this connection and is useful as well as attractive, since it allows of the garment's use with either pink or blue over finery.

For Sale by Fulton Pharmacy anddealers everywhere.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

IRONING DAY MENU.

TUESDAY—BREAKFAST.
Diced Pineapple.
Steamed Hominy.
Barbecued Ham. Radishes.
Maryland Beaten Biscuits.
Coffee.

LUNCHEON.
Veal Souffle (From Last Night's Dinner).
Stuffed Baked Potatoes.
Bread Sticks. Tutti Frutti.

DINNER.
Halved Grapefruit With Cherries.
Planked Bluefish.
Parsley Potatoes. Stuffed Tomatoes.
Cucumber Salad. Pudding.

LIGHT SOUPS.

POTATO SOUP.—Boil two quarts of water in a saucepan. Take two pounds of potatoes and an onion washed, peeled and cut into slices. Add them to the boiling water, with pepper and salt. Boil gently until thoroughly mashed. Strain through a colander, rubbing the vegetables through with a wooden spoon. Put the soup back into the saucepan, add a pint of milk and put on the fire until it boils. Have a hot tureen and pour the soup into it.

Cream of Onion Soup.—Materials: Two cupfuls onions, two cupfuls milk, a tablespoonful butter, a tablespoonful flour, a teaspoonful salt, one-eighth teaspoonful white pepper, one-quarter teaspoonful grated nutmeg, a tablespoonful chopped parsley.

Directions.—Put the onion into saucepan with four cupfuls water and boil until tender without a cover. Mash through strainer and return to the onion water (there must be two cupfuls). Put the milk in top of double boiler. As soon as it boils add the onions and onion water. Add the butter and flour rubbed together; salt, pepper and nutmeg. Boil five minutes; add the parsley and serve.

P. S.—Scallion tops can be used.

Vegetable Soup.—Run through chopper or colander the vegetables left from a boiled dinner, such as potatoes, tomatoes, peas, etc.; add an onion, salt, pepper and as much milk as you need for your family. Let come to the boiling point, then add a teaspoonful of butter and a teaspoonful of flour creamed together. Serve when thoroughly blended.

Puree of Pea Pods.—Pods from two quarts of fresh peas, three cupfuls milk, a tablespoonful onion juice, a teaspoonful sugar, three tablespoonfuls flour, three tablespoonfuls butter, a teaspoonful salt, one-eighth teasponful pepper. Chop the pods coarse and add five cupfuls of boiling water. Cook gently for an hour and a half and then rub through a strainer. There should be three cupfuls of the puree. Add milk and seasonings, let come to the scalding point and thicken with the creamed flour and butter. Let boil up once and serve.

Anna Thompson.

The Bane of Prosperity.

About the time the average family merges into prosperity the older members begin to be troubled with indigestion and constipation. J. W. Spencer, Chittenango, N. Y., writes, "When I get bilious, have headache and feel out of sorts, I take two or three of Chamberlain's Tablets and they fix me up all right."

For sale by all dealers.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

A bit of Chinese blue for a background, with a touch of American beauty in the figure, with the flowing Japanese lines in the design, and we have one of the daintiest international combinations imaginable, one that meets universal approval, while it adds to the pleasure of hours spent in the boudoir. The deep collar and cuffs are of delicate rose silk, hemstitched. In medium size the kimono requires 3 1-2 yards crepe and 1 yard silk for trimming.

Pictorial Review Kimono No. 6663, sizes, 34 to 50 inches bust; price, 15 cents. Skirt No. 6254, sizes, 22 to 36 inches waist; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

Thackeray on Fame.

Thackeray's literary work did not help him much when he sought to enter the house of commons. The Rev. Frederick Meyrick in his "Memories of Oxford" tells of a dinner given when he stood as a Liberal for that city: "I remarked to him that his must be a special experience, as he was known by fame to most of those whose votes he canvassed. 'Now,' he said, laying down his knife and fork and holding up a finger, 'there was only one man among all that I went to see who had heard my name before, and he was a circulating librarian. Such is mortal fame.'" That was in 1857, ten years after the publication of "Vanity Fair."

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

PLEASURE AND PROFIT

PEOPLE WHO BANK THEIR MONEY WITH US REGULARLY FIND IT A PLEASURE AND PROFIT.

WE CORDIALLY INVITE YOU TO COME IN AND START AN ACCOUNT WITH US.

4% PAID IN OUR INTEREST DEPARTMENT

AMERICANS SENT FROM IRELAND

New York—An elderly but well built man walked off the gangplank of the American liner St. Paul yesterday with a small package in his hand. He was Richard Ebbet, an American veterinary surgeon, who was deported from Ireland by the British authorities because they had read his letters to friends in this country. The package was the sole possession he was allowed to bring home.

With him was Father James Markey, a Chicago priest.

Ebbet is a native of Grand Island, Neb., where he was born sixty years ago. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American War, having served in the Philippines.

Four years ago he gave up his practice in this country and went to Oldcastle, County Meath, Ireland, about twenty miles from Dublin, and there began business.

Reported to Consul.

"I reported regularly every year to the American Consul in Dublin," he said yesterday. "On May 20 last an automobile called at my door and a number of Dublin officials entered my house and searched it thoroughly. They found an old Malayan kris—a sort of knife used by the Malays.

"They took this away without any explanation and then departed. I wrote to W. E. Adams, American Consul in Dublin, I got no reply, and then wrote to Ambassador Page. He referred me to the Consul. Finally I got a letter from Mr. Adams saying he had not received any letters from me. I believe him.

"On July 14 two policemen came to my house and told me they wanted to help me get back my kris. They asked me to accompany them to the barracks. I did so, and the door was locked on me.

"Shortly afterward a couple of detectives came in and told me I was ordered deported and would have to leave with them for Liverpool. I was not given time to get any of my belongings.

"I asked them why I was being deported. They told me they did not know, but perhaps it was because I had written to friends in America telling of conditions in Ireland."

Priest Is Sent Home.

Dr. Ebbet declared he was going direct to Washington to protest to the State Department. He is also contemplating legal action against the British Government.

The Rev. James Horace Markey, of Chicago, was refused permission by the British Government to visit relatives in Ireland. Father Markey left Chicago for Rome in 1912 to study in the American College there. After he was ordained in Rome he went by way of France to England.

He carried an American passport. In London he went to the Foreign Office for permission to visit his relatives at Ballyhaunts, County Mayo, Ireland. The Foreign Office refused permission and "advised" him to go to Liverpool and sail on the St. Paul.

Overland cars used exclusively by the Van Wagenen Auto Livery.—Adv.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

State of New York, Office of the State Commission of Highways, Albany, N. Y.—Pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 30, Laws of 1909, as amended by Chapter 646, Laws of 1911, and Chapter 80, Laws of 1913, sealed proposals will be received by the undersigned at their office, No. 55 Lancaster street, Albany, N. Y., at one o'clock p. m., on Monday the 14th day of August, 1916, for the improvement of the following highways:

OSWEGO COUNTY

Road No. 1427, Name of Road, Fulton-Volney, Part 1; Approx. Length, 0.57.

Also on Wednesday the 16th day of August, 1916:

Road No. 1428; Name of Road, Sandy Creek-Smartville; Approx. Length, 6.36.

Also on Friday the 18th day of August, 1916:

Road No. 5408; Name of road, Fulton City; East First Street; Approx. Length, 0.36.

Maps, plans, specifications and estimates may be seen and proposal forms obtained at the office of the Commission in Albany, N. Y., and also at the office of Division Engineer, William M. Acheson, 433 So. Salina street, Syracuse, N. Y.

The especial attention of bidders is called to "General Information For Bidders," in the itemized proposal, specifications and contract agreement.

Proposals for each road or contract must be presented in a separate sealed envelope, endorsed on the outside with the name and number of the road or contract for which the proposal is made. Each proposal must be accompanied by cash or a certified check payable to the order of the State Commission of Highways for an amount equal to at least five per cent. of the amount of the proposal which such cash or check accompanies.

This cash or check will be held by the Commission until the contract and bond are duly executed.

The successful bidder will be required to give a performance bond for fifty per cent. of the contract, and a maintenance bond covering the wearing surface of all roads, except water-bound macadam and cement concrete pavements for twenty per cent. of the contract price of the items which comprise the wearing surface, such bonds to be executed by a surety company to be approved by the Commission; or a bond secured by the deposit of collateral securities to be approved by the Commission.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

EDWIN DUFFEY, Commissioner.

T. J. MORRIS, Secretary.

GARY SCHOOLS ARE STUDIED

New York—The General Education Board founded by John D. Rockefeller, announces that it is about to undertake a study of the public school system in Gary, Ind.

The board plans to present an authoritative account of the Gary experiment to all cities in the United States with a view to having it adopted if found satisfactory.

A preliminary study of the Gary plan has already been made by five educational experts. Five months were spent in figuring the costs of the system and the results it has achieved. The work was undertaken at the invitation of the school board of Gary.

Abraham Flexner, of the General Education Board, is directing the study, assisted by Dr. Frank P. Bachman, formerly associate superintendent of schools of Cleveland.

Professor C. R. Richards, director of Cooper Union, will have charge of the study of vocational and industrial instructions. Mrs. Eva W. White, director of the Extended Use of Public Schools of Boston, will study domestic science and arts as taught by the Gary system.

Other specialists and the work they will study are: Professor George D. Strayer, Columbia University, administration, organization and supervision; S. A. Courtis, of Detroit, class room testing; Lee K. Hammer, of the Russell Sage Foundation, physical training and recreation; Professor Otis W. Caldwell, University of Chicago, science; Frank L. Shaw, Cleveland School Survey, statistical work, and Ralph Bowman, formerly of the Bureau of Municipal Research, cost accounting.

FEEDING GERMANS

Herr von Batocki, New Dictator, Establishes City Kitchens.

ABOLISHES PRIVATE PROFITS.

Hot Dinner at Midday and Supper Being Served at Minimum Charge Wealthy Families Urged to Take Meals by This Method—Result of Speculation in Food.

Berlin.—The food dictator of Germany, Adolph von Batocki, has started the feeding of the population by communal kitchens. In Berlin there are from twenty-five to thirty of them, directed by five or six committees appointed by Batocki. Half a million people will be dealt with at once by the card system, and this number will be increased as necessity arises. Hot dinner at midday and supper are being served at a minimum charge, the families even of the well to do being encouraged to take their meals by this method.

The same system is being initiated throughout the empire for the soldiers and the civilian population, the new war nutrition office being administered from Berlin the same as any other department of the imperial government.

HERR VON BATOCKI.

The war nutrition office has complete control of all foodstuffs and raw materials of food and fodder, and first of all will do away with private profit in the sale of food, especially meat, bread, milk and butter.

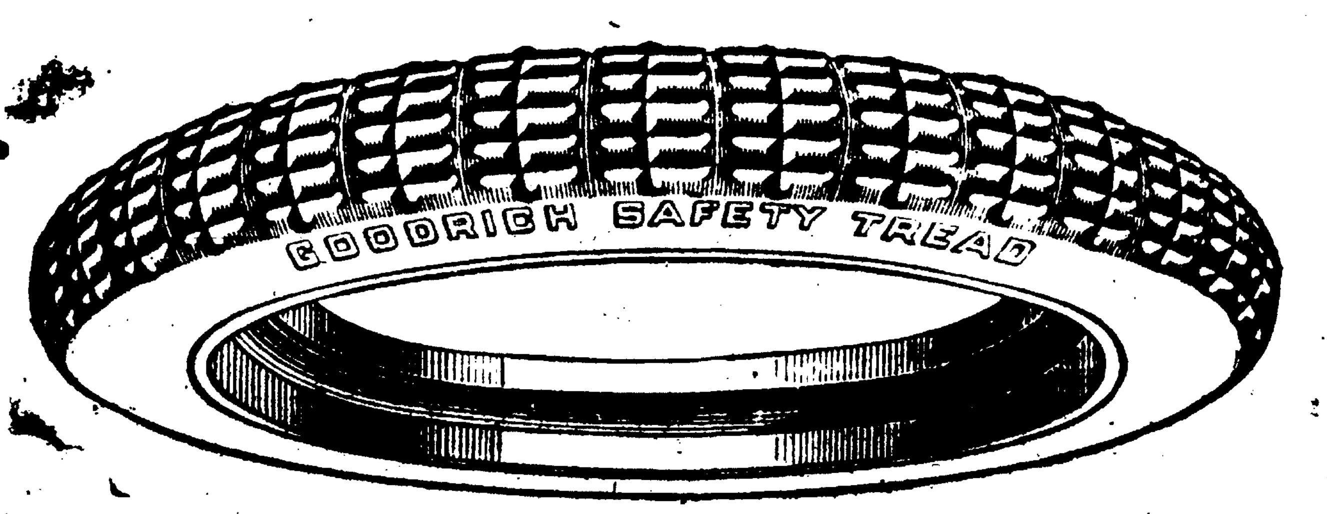
While the mass of the German people has displayed extraordinary self denial since the war began, there has been speculation in food, and the poor have suffered in consequence. Batocki's appointment was made shortly after butcher shops in Berlin and the suburbs were raided by angry mobs of women who had sought in vain to buy meat, only to be told by the butchers that they had none. Midnight watching revealed a brisk trade which the butchers carried on with patrons who could afford to pay exorbitant rates.

The police were active in prosecuting the gamblers in food, but the evil was not eliminated. One butcher, Klausmann, whose shop was in the Hoheluft-Chausee, was convicted of selling sausage made of semi-putrid meats deodorized by chemicals. One of his patrons, the principal of a large school, had him arrested after several of the children had died from eating his sausages. The man hanged himself in prison.

The bakers were not guiltless, one of them, Gustav Bruschwitz, doing business in the Naugardenstrasse, having been arrested for increasing the weight of his bread tickets by watering them. The bread coupons when arranged in large quantities normally weighed a certain amount and when presented in bundles to the bread committee in return for flour were exchanged according to the weight of the bundle of tickets. Bruschwitz found that perfectly dry tickets in the bundle weighed 120 pounds, while the bundle after being moistened with water weighed 151 pounds. His depredations were finally discovered, and he had to pay a big fine as well as serve a sentence in prison.

The appointment of Batocki as food dictator, in the first place, was to control these "human food hogs," as they are called in Germany, the butchers, the bakers, the farmers, etc. His duties also are intended to regulate the expenditure of money for food among the working classes, particularly the young women, who are earning higher wages than they ever dreamed of getting and frequently spending it in expensive restaurants. Many girls, taking the places of men in different departments of business, have had their wages increased three or four times over. The German law permits the state to supervise the expenditure of a child, but not of a person who is of age. These girls apparently have invested in war bonds to some extent and then have had a large surplus remaining, which has burned in their purses until it could be flung away in useless luxury.

Batocki's appointment did not surprise his friends. A large landowner in East Prussia, several years before the opening of the war he had been president of the Agricultural Chamber of East Prussia and a member of the house of lords, an authority on political economy, the tariff and other questions concerned with commerce and industry.



Help us to HOLD DOWN— —Tire Prices

TIRES, and GASOLENE, "make the Wheels go round!"

A Car in the Garage COSTS as much as a Car-on-the-Road, but it pays no dividends, on the Investment, so long as it STAYS in the Garage.

The VALUE of the Car,—to its Owner,—narrows down, in the ultimate, to the precise number of Hours he USES that Car, yearly.

If a $2,000 Car be owned for, say, 4 years (then sold for $600.) there has been $1,400 of Car-Value absorbed by the Owner,—equal to, say, $350. per year.

If then, that Car be USED 913 Hours in the year, it would cost him but 38 CENTS per Hour, for Car-Use.

But,—if he used it only HALF that number of Hours, yearly, the Car would cost him 100% MORE for every Hour he used it.

How MUCH he uses it will depend,—to a considerable extent,—upon the PRICE of TIRES and GASOLENE.

This was one of the reasons why we (Jan. 31st, 1915) inaugurated the Goodrich "FAIR-LIST" Propaganda against High-prices, and Padded-Price-Lists, on Tires.

It is a further reason why we NOW keep our own Goodrich Prices DOWN to the very moderate "Fair-List" figures here quoted.

BETTER Fabric Tires are NOT made, and cannot be made,—at ANY price,—than are produced by The B. F. Goodrich Co.

A 15%, to 50%, higher price could well be justified for these same Tires, by fair comparison with other Tires sold at 15% to 50% higher prices.

Will you help your own interests (present and future), by further expanding the Sale of that Tire which demonstrates its Intention, through LOWERING the Cost of its Tires to you, with every INCREASE in its Volume?

Will you thus endorse, and support, the Goodrich Policy which automatically PREVENTS OTHER Makers from forcing UP the Market on Tires?

Compare Goodrich Fair-List prices, here quoted.

Bear in mind that NO Fabric Tires,—at ANY price,—are "better,"—no House more Fair, and LIBERAL, on proper Adjustments.

THE B. F. GOODRICH CO., Akron, O.

Goodrich "Fair-List" Prices

30x3	Ford Sizes (Safety-Treads)	$10.40	34x4	(Safety-Treads)	$22.40
30x3½		$13.40	35x4½		$31.20
32x3½		$15.45	36x4½		$31.60
33x4		$22.00	37x5		$37.35

NOTICE,—These Tires are as perfect as Fabric Tires can be made.

But, should any dissatisfaction whatever arise, with any Goodrich Tire, its Owner is invited, and REQUESTED, to take the matter up promptly with us,—the Makers.

He will find that Fair, Square, and LIBERAL treatment will always be extended, on all proper adjustments.

THE B. F. GOODRICH CO., Akron, O.

GOODRICH— —Black "Barefoot" TIRES

"TEXTAN"—Does for your SHOE Soles what black "Barefoot-Rubber" does for Goodrich Tire Soles.

—Wears longer than Leather! —Is Waterproof! —Is Non-slippery! —Is Lighter than Leather! —Is more Flexible than Leather! —Is EASIER on your Feet!

Ask your Shoe Dealer, or Shoe Repairer, for Textan Soles on your next pair of Shoes.

SECURITY VALUES GAINING GROUND

New York—For a mid-summer week-end session, today's market was unusually active, broad and strong.

Special stocks again furnished the bulk of trading, being in further demand by the bears or short interest, that faction suffering additional impairment of "paper profits." Motor issues were particularly prominent, with gains of 2 to 3 points in Willys-Overland and Maxwell and 10 for General Motors. Munition and Allied shares were substantially better, together with Tobacco, American Hide and Leather preferred, American Beet Sugar and the Zinc issues.

United States Steel was the real leader, trading in that stock representing about 20 per cent. of the whole at an extreme advance of 1 1-8, most of which was retained. There was a better tone to shares of the independent steel companies, notably Lackawanna and Republic, together with Colorado Fuel and American Car. Rails were again relegated to a place of minor importance, even the investment issues moving sluggishly. Reading closed with a fractional gain, but Wisconsin Central forfeited 4 points of its recent advance. Shipping shares, also, were backward with no material price changes.

The bank statement reflected a substantial cash gain, the actual increase of about $13,560,000 being in excess of all estimates, while loans showed further contraction, with an increase of almost $13,000,000 in reserves, bringing the total excess up to $108,000,000 against $53,546,000 two weeks ago. Weekly reports of the Mercantile agencies were of a confident tenor, the only discouraging note coming from that portion of the South which recently experienced severe storms. In drygoods lines the volume of distribution shows an increase.

Bonds were steady today on nominal trading. International issues were firmer. Total sales, par value, aggregated $1,055,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

Several used car bargains. Van Wagenen, Inc.—Adv.

WEATHER REPORT

General shifting wind. Fair tod[ay] and Tuesday. Little change in te[m]perature.

A UNION'S SUCCESS.

The Boot and Shoe Workers' union is a labor organization. It has no other purpose for its existence except to benefit the shoe workers in their employment at making shoes. Our union has stuck to its purpose steadfastly, has never wavered nor wandered into bypaths. It has plugged along persistently for years to build itself up and and has succeeded. High dues, benefits, and the absence of assessments and a sound policy in regard to the union stamp and arbitration are the elements which, plus fairly successful administration, have made our union what it is.—Shoe Workers' Journal.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 483 — TUESDAY, JULY 25, 1916 — Price, One Cent

SEABURY LOSING GRIP ON LEADERS

Tammany Seems to Favor Northern Man as Candidate---Unofficial Convention in August.

Several Oswego County Democratic leaders are preparing to go to Saratoga early next month to attend the unofficial Democratic State Convention.

At this gathering there is to be a free and full discussion of the various candidates suggested for the important offices which the people of New York must fill at the November elections. Chief among these is the governorship and the United States Senatorship which the expiration of Senator O'Gorman's term next March will make vacant.

While up to a few days ago it had been generally conceded that Justice Seabury would be the Democratic standard bearer there appears to have been developed an undercurrent of sentiment against him within the ranks of the party and other names are now being mentioned as possible candidates. Reports from New York say that Tammany Hall will make no choice on the governorship. In some circles it is said that the Tammany leaders want an up-state man named.

It is known that for several weeks past emissaries from New York have been sounding out sentiment throughout Central and Western New York in an effort to determine which way the wind was blowing on the governorship. These agents are of the opinion that Governor Whitman is certain to be the Republican standard bearer.

Among the names mentioned as possible Democratic candidates have been Franklin D. Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy; Charles E. Tremain, former state superintendent of public works and one of the leading bankers of Central New York; Seymour VanSantvoord, former chairman of the up-state public service commission; William Church Osborn, Thomas B. Lockwood, Thomas F. Conway, former lieutenant governor and others. Thus far, however, there has not been any concentration of support for any one of these men, although each has his own strong backing in his own particular districts.

The United States Senatorship has received considerable thought in the conferences. Senator O'Gorman's position does not seem to be very clear to the leaders, although some of them insist that he will be a candidate when the time comes. Former Governor Glynn has also been mentioned as a possible successor to him and so has William Church Osborn, the latter with a little more frequency perhaps.

Mr. Glynn has said that talk of his candidacy for the Senate was "a little premature." He is also quoted as saying that he has not made up his mind what his attitude toward the senatorship will be.

In view of the uncertainty as to party sentiment regarding these nominations, many of the party's leaders both up-state and in Tammany hall want an unofficial convention where the various candidates can be discussed with a view to united action in the September primaries.

The call for the meeting is expected to be issued in a few days by Chairman Harris.

DEUTSCHLAND HELD AWAITING A POW WOW

(By United Press)

Baltimore—The stay or departure of the German submarine Deutschland may be determined tomorrow night, in a conference between her promoters and the German Ambassador, von Bernsdorff. The Deutschland's promoters stood ready to shoot out at a moment's notice. The tug Timmins had steam up prepared to clear and all that was necessary was for the tug to pull the switch and make a run.

AUCTION!

The sale of household goods which began last Saturday at Falley Seminary, will be continued there Wednesday afternoon, July 26th, at two o'clock.

23 MEN TRAPPED IN TUBE FIVE MILES FROM SHORE

(By United Press)

Cleveland, Ohio—At least twenty-three men were trapped in the new water works tunnel, one hundred twenty feet below the surface of Lake Erie, at a point five miles off shore today, following a burst of gas in the big tube.

Whether any of the workmen are alive will not be known until the rescuers are able to drag them from the big concrete cylinder.

At ten o'clock this morning eight bodies were taken from the tube, seven of them being identified. Four men of the entire twenty-three are believed to be alive. Rescuers and workmen insist that there are still twelve to sixteen more bodies in the tunnel.

Ten bodies of victims have been taken from the death house and it is estimated that there are thirteen more dead in the tunnel. Ten escaped with injuries. The ten known dead were members of three rescuing parties who descended into the death trap, although they had no helmets.

PARTY LEADERS UNEASY ABOUT SOLDIERS' VOTES

Fifteen thousand New York state voters—the officers and men of the National Guard—may be disfranchised this fall if the Mexican situation still demands their retention along the border when election day, November 7, rolls around.

That such a large block of voters may be prevented from casting their ballots on the presidency, the governorship and other important offices to be filled has caused the political leaders no little worry and hampered them in pre-election calculating. It has already developed considerable talk about urging Governor Whitman to call a special session of the Legislature to make such provisions as may be possible under the circumstances, to provide—if it can be done, for the casting of their votes, both in the primary and in the general election, at their camps in Texas where they are now located.

There are already provisions partially covering the mater, but these are deemed to be wholly inadequate to cover the present situation. They apply only to a situation where the United States is actually at war—the United States is not at war with Mexico and will endeavor not to get into such a situation—and then, according to the way in which the present law is interpreted, the provisions are not applicable at all to the primaries.

No War Exists.

The state constitution provides that, "in time of war" the Legislature shall make provision for the absentee voting of residents of this state who are at the front. In pursuance of this section the election law contains twenty-three provisions, providing in great detail for the manner of such voting at "general or special elections," but saying nothing about primary elections.

Many, even among those who are urging that a special session of the Legislature be called to do what it can, doubt very much whether that body can help out, in the face of the constitutioal provision which makes it clear the United States must be actually at war in order to make valid any provision for the absentee voting of soldiers. After declaring that the voter must cast his ballot in his home election district, it makes the exception this way:

Fairness Intended.

"Provided that in time of war no elector in actual military service of the United States, in the army or navy thereof, shall be deprived of his vote by reason of his absence from his election district; and the Legislature shall have the power to provide the manner in which, and the time and place at which, such absent electors may vote and for the return and canvas of their votes in the election district in which they respectively reside."

With this provision in mind the question is asked, "Could the Legislature extend such privilege of voting to soldiers when there is no war, even though their absence is demanded by the threat of war and they are actually in the service of the United States?" Thus far this question has not been answered.

If we should actually become engaged in a war with Mexico the present legislative provisions would cover the situation so far as the general election is concerned, and the legislature could, without doubt, according to the interpretations of the constitutional provisions, make further provisions in special session for the casting of the National Guard vote at the primaries.

The present provisions of the election law for the absentee voting of soldiers in time of war are in great detail. It provides that the Secretary shall have printed war ballots and special statements of all nominees, to be sent to the headquarters of the various commands.

Distribution Provided.

Such election must be held within twenty days before the regular election day and at the headquarters of the captain or other commanding officer who shall be provided by the secretary of state with poll books and lists of all New York state voters in his command. The voters themselves may by viva voce vote, select their election officers. Each voter is given a war ballot and an envelope on which he must sign his name to an oath, swearing that he is entiled to vote and setting forth in which county and election district.

After the voting is over the ballots are set to the Secretary of State, opened by him in the presence of the Democratic and Republican state chairman and distributed to the counties in which the voter in each is entitled to cast his ballot. The county clerks in the election districts are directed to redistribute them to the election district election boards in which each should be recorded and that election board is directed to meet on the sixth Tuesday after the general election to canvass the vote thus cast. The results are added to the results of the home voting and the total is canvassed by the county and state boards like other ballots.

To prevent nullification of such voting through technicalities, it is specifically provided that "no mere informality in the maner of carrying or executing" the provisions of the law shall invalidate the vote.

FRANK TEMPLE DIES; KICKED BY A HORSE

The death of Frank Temple, of Bowens Corners, occurred last night at 6:30 o'clock as a result of being kicked in the abdomen by a horse. Dr. Fox was summoned, but the patient died before he arrived. Coroner Cusack and Dr. Fox performed the autopsy and reported that death was due to a rupture of the intestines.

Funeral arrangements have not as yet been made.

WEATHER FORECAST

Gentle shifting winds. Partly cloudly tonight and Wednesday. Thunder showers on West Erie. Cooler tonight.

NEW DISINFECTANT IS BLACK, NOT WHITE LIME

(By United Press)

Brownsville, Texas—Good-bye to the old style lime-white army camps. That is the way it seems here today, as the use of lime was stopped in all army camps by orders which Major Bisham, sanitary inspector for the army of the Lower Rio Grande issued at midnight last night.

The Major says: "We have discovered that flies like white color. What we are looking for is something black in the way of a disinfectant. The latest idea is lamp-black mixed with petroleum." This mixture is meeting with the approval of most of the army inspectors of sanitary conditions.

GENERAL HAIG CLAIMS LARGE PART OF SECTOR

(By United Press)

London—General Haig, in an official statement issued today, reported that the greater part of Pozieres "is now ours."

The British commander-in-chief declares that, nowhere did the Teutons reach British trenches. German counter attacks at several points north of Pozieres are all frustrated, says the report. The British gained additional ground, capturing two machine guns and many soldiers.

* * *

Petrograd—Further advance of General Sakharoff's Russian forces was announced today. The Russian commander reports he had penetrated the enemy entanglements on the river Slonbike, near the Carpathian theater of war. The Grand Duke Nicholas reports that his advanced Russians had reached a point 13 versts (ten miles) from Erzingan, the Turks retreating in this order.

DEUTCHLAND'S SISTER HEADED FOR BOSTON

(By United Press)

Baltimore—The German super-submarine Bremen, sister ship to the Deutschland, will put in at the Boston port. The Bremen had positive orders before leaving Germany not to risk running into the fleet of Allied warships lying off the Virginia capes. This was made known to the United Press today by a higher official of the Eastern Forwarding Company, who declined to permit the use of his name.

COUNTRY'S BIG BURDEN NEAR PASSAGE TODAY

(By United Press)

Washington—The last of the great preparedness measures of the two hundred eighty million dollar army bill was near passage in the Senate today. Chairman Chamberlain had pushed his measure to the largest of the kind that the United States has known for many years.

TUCKER'S CROSSING SCENE OF BAD SMASHUP

A six cylinder touring car from Oswego, crashed through the fence at Tucker's Crossing, on the East River road, early this morning and much damage to the car was inflicted. Fully two rods of fence and posts were torn up when the car plunged, the result of a broken spring on the steering geer.

One of the members of the party received a broken arm in two places. The other members of the party received a thorough shaking up, besides some cuts and bruises. A taxi was called from Fulton and the party were taken to Oswego. The auto was towed to a local garage for repairs.

CAR SKIDDED, BUT NO ONE WAS INJURED

An automobile driven by John Wallace, of Oswego, and containing a number of friends, skidded while turning the corner of Broadway and West First streets, this morning, and rammed a curb at that point. The occupants of the car were thrown to the ground, but they all escaped injury. The car was not so fortunate, however, as its front was badly smashed and the party decided to abandon the trip.

DOGGIE'S BOOGEY MAN SWORN INTO OFFICE

Mr. Rexford Mitchell was assigned to the position of official dog catcher yesterday and was sworn into office late last night. All dogs running at large without the required license tag will be duly confiscated. People owning dogs are warned by the dog catcher to secure tags immediately, otherwise the pets will be escorted to the pound.

The way to test this newspaper's strength is by inserting an ad in the Miscellaneous Want Column. See rates on fifth page.

LLOYD GEORGE WOULD RESIGN

Premier Asquith Would Follow His Lead, the Result of Disturbance Over Irish Question.

(By United Press)

London—The coalition cabinet was endangered today by the Irish question. David Lloyd George, minister of war and originator of the comprehensive plan for the settlement of the Irish problem, was quoted as having offered to resign, in view of the failure of the cabinet to acquiesce in his proposal to the Irish Nationalists.

Premier Asquith was understood to be ready also to step down if Lloyd George retired. Threats to submit the question to a vote of the people in a general election were freely made during the Commons discussion this morning.

DANISH ISLANDS MAY BE SOLD TO UNITED STATES

Washington—Negotiations for the purchase of the Danish West Indies by the United States will probably be closed today. Congress is appropriating twenty-five million dollars, it was stated officially at the White House this morning. The negotiations have been carried on by the State Department and the Danish Ambassador.

MOOSE VICTORY SOUNDS HOLLOW

Still They Prefer Democratic Candidate to Charles E. Hughes foa Governor.

Syracuse—With their party a tottering ruin, the radical Progressive leaders, several of whom straggled around this city today, are arranging to have the final crash inflict as much damage as possible on the Republican party.

Still gasping for breath, a few members of the anti-Hughes wing of the Moose party are shouting loudly that they have won a tremendous victory. They count their black political eyes and scars as badges of honor. They believe they have trimmed George W. Perkins in his home state, in his own personally conducted organization, manned by his own assistants and supported by his own check book.

They are already laying plans to do as much damage as possible to the candidacy of Charles E. Hughes and Governor Whitman and try to elect Judge Samuel Seabury, Governor.

The Hughes men in the Moose party are angry. They say they lost out because they lacked the right kind of leadership. They say Mr. Perkins intrusted the Progressive steam roller into the hands of men who did not understand the machinery, with the result that it wobbled badly and finally ran off the highway into the ditch. The Perkins-Republican men are disgusted, they say they are "through" and that they will return to the Republican party without further fuss.

Reports in circulation here today are to the effect that Tammany Hall is to oppose Justice Seabury. Nothing definite, however, can be learned. Judge Seabury and Mr. Murphy, the Tammany leader, are close personal friends. It is said that possibly after Mr. Seabury has obtained strong independent support that Tammany will "fall into line." Others believe that Tammany is waiting to see which way the wind blows before taking any definite action.

One thing is certain and this fact that the Tammany lieutenants took back to New York with them is that Justice Seabury has a well organized up-state backing and that it is almost a dead certainty that his name will be voted upon at the Democratic primaries as well as in the Progressive.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

TUESDAY, JULY 25, 1916

SELECTED EDITORIALS

The Woman's Journal:

The course of events is fast knocking the old arguments against woman suffrage to pieces. Democrats and Republicans alike are encouraging the formation of nation-wide organizations of women to aid the election respectively of Mr. Wilson and Mr. Hughes. A large meeting of Republican women for this purpose was held the other day at the house of a former president of the "Massachusetts Association Opposed to the Further Extension of Suffrage to Women."

The opponents of equal suffrage have been telling us for years that women could not find time to vote without neglecting their domestic duties. When the suffragists mildly pointed out that it takes but a few minutes to vote, the antis scornfully replied that it would take much longer to learn how to vote intelligently. This, of course, is true. But the antis have always said it was a woman's duty to influence her husband to vote the right way; and how is she to do that unless she looks into the mater enough to find out which the right way is? Now both political parties are trying, with the encouragement of the most ardent antis, to enlist every woman to influence not only her husband, but as many other voters as possible.

When Jane Addams used her indirect influence in favor of a presidential candidate four years ago, many anti-suffragists denounced her, and declared that she had lost her moral influence forever by "going into politics." Now many of the same antis are urging all women to "go into politics" by trying to elect Mr. Wilson or Mr. Hughes.

"Where the vanguard rests today
The rear shall rest tomorrow."

If women are to "mould public opinion," they must themselves form an opinion first. Either there is no truth in the anti-suffrage dogma that the average woman cannot form an intelligent opinion on political questions without neglecting her home, or else both Republicans and Democrats are in a conspiracy to break up the home, and some of the most ardent antis are giving their support to the plot.

* * *

Rochester Chronicle and Democrat:

A New York city justice has set a pattern in the treatment of reckless automobile drivers which suggests that means are at the disposal of the courts for preserving to a greater extent the rights of pedestrians and sane drivers of automobiles. It was shown that an accused chauffeur was a chronic offender against the speed laws, and that on the occasion of his last violation of the laws he was intoxicated and drove his machine at abnormally high speed. Incidentally he ran over and injured a pedestrian. In this case no fine was imposed, but the offender was given a stiff prison sentence. An appeal was taken, under a convenient certificate of reasonable doubt. But the law is plain and definite, and the facts were not seriously disputed; hence there is reasonable ground for hope that for once, by way of a desirable precedent, the mandate of the court will be carried out without unnecessary delay. Misguided leniency on the part of the courts has unfortunately led many reckless drivers to believe that in the rare case of arrest and conviction for reckless driving they will be able to escape the imposition of a small fine.

* * *

Watertown Times:

The prohibition national convention at St. Paul, Minn., has nominated J. Frank Hanly, former governor of Indiana as its candidate for president, but not unanimously. There was as big a fight on as if it was expected that the candidate would be elected. Our own ex-Governor Sulzer was the principal opponent and he says he was run over by the steam roller, which not being the first time, he is used to it. Mr. Hanly was born April 4, 1863, had a common school education, was teacher for eight years, admitted to practice of law in 1889 and also commenced the practice of politics. He did it with such success that the Republicans sent him to the state senate and afterwards to Congress. He tried to be a United State Senator and failed but succeeded in getting the Republican nomination for governor and was elected and he made a fair average administration. He is a more than ordinarily good talker and can make just as many speeches as Wilson or Hughes, though, of course, they ought to be very dry. As a national party prohibition has not amounted to very much or for that matter as a state party. Prohibition has been marching along steadily, but not through political party pressure so much as through business and social circles. The prohibitionists have not elected their ticket anywhere, but they have stirred up the prohibition sentiment so that the regular parties have been obliged to adopt it in a large number of states.

* * *

Watertown Standard:

A group of men in New York who gain a living by telling other folk what they ought to do, reports to the city of New York that a family of five cannot be maintained according to a standard of living consistent with American ideas on less than $840 a year. These survey accountants, therefore, recommend a minimum wage for the unskilled in the city's employ of $840. The wage may be low enough, but the theory upon which it is based is faulty. The American ideas of a standard of living are vague. There are many men with families of five who live on less than $840 and get along better in the world than would some of the researchers if they were less skilled in separating rich men and women from their money. This living, according to card indexes and making things square with statistics isn't American. It is better for an unskilled man that he study the thrift and habits of his neighbor who does so much with his wages than to devote attention to the endowed research bureau's efforts to raise his wages by a resolution. Wages like everything else will fluctuate in value. Standards of living will change. Card indexes will not always draw the same salaries even though they do not get public office which is their real aim.

BIDDLE BIBLE CLASS TO ENTER POLITICS

Philadelphia, Pa.—As the result of a talk in which A. J. Drexel Biddle advised the young men of his Bible class to take an active interest in practical politics, ward councils will be formed in the organization to co-operate with ward leaders in political matters that concern the city.

Mr. Biddle also advised that the members go about the movement not as "political reformers" stirring up trouble but, in an intelligent way, confer with political leaders and attempt by suasion to direct politics into clean channels. "Politics," he said, "will be better when more good men are engaged in it. We will have nothing to be ashamed of in our civic affairs if the right men take an active interest in it."

As it is at present constituted, the organization has five sectional divisions, one district alone numbering 12,000 men. The "class" has grown so rapidly of late that the five-section plan has become cumbersome and it is now planned to break it up into 48 distinct ward organizations. This will give one section for each of the wards in the city, and will greatly facilitate the work of the class generally.

The way to test this newspaper's strength is by inserting an ad in the Miscellaneous Want Column. See rates on fifth page.

Good Change.

"Auntie, can you change a dime for me?"

"How do you want it changed, dear?"

"Into a quarter, please."—Boston Transcript.

Days You'll Never Forget

Desire For Material Things Weakens Our Intellectual Life

By President W. H. P. FAUNCE, Brown University

WHEN our young people enter college we find the trouble with them is not that they have bad habits, but that they have no habits at all; not that they think badly, but that they do not think. All this is in the college simply because it is in our whole generation. IT IS THE INEVITABLE OUTCOME OF A LIFE THAT HAS NEVER KNOWN NATIONAL DISASTER AND HAS MADE MATERIAL PROSPERITY THE GOAL OF ITS DESIRE.

Shall the European nations emerge from the awful conflict disciplined, co-ordinated, accustomed to the service of the state, and shall we in America be found vacillating and irresolute, lovers of ignoble comfort, desiring above all things the full dinner pail and the fat purse? Shall Europe come forth purged of selfish individualism by the tremendous contest, while we, sitting on the "bleachers" of the world, make no sacrifice and win no inner victory?

God forbid that America should ever share in the frightful war! God forbid that America should fail to share in the worldwide sacrifice!

WE NEED DEEP AND EARNEST STUDY OF THE ISSUES THAT UNDERLIE THE STRUGGLE AND THE IDEALS FOR WHICH AMERICA STANDS.

Reason Enough.

David and Walter had not met in some time, and one morning when they boarded the same car they began a chat of old times.

"And when is your marriage to Carolyn Hathaway coming off, Dave?" queried Walter.

"It has been postponed indefinitely," replied David.

"Is that so?" said Walter in surprise. "What's the trouble?"

"She married another fellow."—New York Times.

Matter and Force.

Science has demonstrated the fact that matter and force are indestructible. To the sum total of the matter and energy of the universe nothing has ever been added, and from them nothing has ever been subtracted. Things are perpetually changing from one form into another—from one form of matter to another form of matter, from one form of force to another form of force—but amid the eternal transformation nothing is created, nothing annihilated.—New York American.

War Has Enhanced Our Opportunities For Trade With China

By Dr. V. K. WELLINGTON KOO, Chinese Minister to the United States

THE European war has created a new trade situation in the world and has dislocated business and industry in Europe. IN CONSEQUENCE THE BURDEN OF SUPPLYING THE MARKETS IN THE FAR EAST HAS LARGELY FALLEN UPON AMERICANS.

The enhanced interest of the United States in the trade of Asia, coupled with the great commercial and industrial awakening now sweeping over China, is an auspicious sign.

IN MY OPINION, IT INDICATES THE VITAL PART THESE TWO COUNTRIES WILL PLAY TO UNFOLD THE FUTURE OF THE PACIFIC OCEAN AS THE GREATEST COMMERCIAL HIGHWAY OF THE WORLD.

No two countries could be better qualified than the United States and China to co-operate with each other economically. The wise use of water and electric power and labor saving machinery in the United States has ever increased the output of her farms, mills, factories and foundries. To dispose of the goods made with such rapidity and ease Americans not only need a big market, but they require a demand that will increase with their increasing output. China offers such a market.

Flower of the Gods.

The carnation was cultivated by ancient Greeks, who gave it the name of Dianthus, flower of the gods. They used it for making chaplets, whence the name "coronation" was derived. It was partaken of at great banquets as a kind of salad, and during the reign of Charles II. it was used in the making of a liquor.

Utterly Worthless.

"No, you can't marry him. He's too no account."

"You ought not to say that, dad. He may have some good points that you have overlooked."

"No chance. I mopped up the floor with him just now, and he didn't even make a good mop."—Kansas City Journal.

CLEVER WOMAN

"WHY is it," asked the inquisitive husband, "that you never ask any one if your hat is on straight, as I so often hear other women do?"

"Well, if you must know," replied his wife. "it is because I love you so much."

"But I fail to see what your love for me has to do with it."

"Why, just think how it would disgrace you if I were to call any one's attention to the only hat I have had in three years."

And that's why on the very next occasion she went out she appeared in the latest creation of the milliner's art.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

DON'T BE A RECLUSE.

The lonely people of the world are usually those who, instead of going out and winning love and friendship, are simply standing still and waiting for love and friendship to come to them.

THE BRIGHT SIDE.

Look on the bright side always. Pessimists are ever in the rear and never in the van in the march of progress. Your successful men and women are never chronic grumblers.—Bishop Samuel Fallows.

Loyalty to the Flag Is the Price Of American Citizenship

By E. E. RITTENHOUSE, President Life Extension Institute

WHAT sort of an American conscience is it that demands the privileges of citizenship and the protection of the flag and refuses to defend either or to approve preparations for others to defend them?

SUCH PEOPLE DEMAND PEACE AND DENY THE GOVERNMENT THE POWER AND MEANS OF MAINTAINING IT.

They are passionately devoted to humanity, but not to that portion of humanity for which our nation is directly responsible. They are so fearful of militarism that they prefer to trust militaristic nations already armed and ready to attack us rather than to trust their own countrymen with arms for our defense.

Americans naturally love peace and abhor war, but for the patriotic American it must be the peace of righteousness.

The price of the honors and opportunities of American citizenship is obedience to the law and loyalty to the flag in peace and war. THOSE WHOSE CONSCIENCES WILL NOT PERMIT THEM TO PAY THE PRICE SHOULD NOT ACCEPT THE REWARD.

ONE STATE RUNS WOMAN'S SCHOOL

Chickasha, Okla.—A notable experiment in educational lines is Oklahoma College for Women, a school exclusively for girls, as its name indicates, and kept up entirely by the state. Its success during the past few years indicates that the day of the separate school is not past.

Though the idea of the founders was to make the work all of collegiate rank, the great demand for secondary training, due to poor public schools in the Indian Territory country in the early days, has made it impossible to reject young women who have not completed high school work. Courses are given that may be substituted for those ordinarily obtained in the high school, and advanced work leads to bachelor of arts, bachelor of science and bachelor of music degrees.

No attempt is being made to serve others than the young women of its own state. It is seeking to find the ideal education for the young women of Oklahoma, and to furnish that education at a cost that can be met by the great masses of people, especially the farmers.

During the past year, board and room were furnished in the state dormitories at $16 a month. Buying direct from the farm was what made the rate possible, college authorities say. Some young women have taken a year's study at a total cost of $175.

President G. W. Austin calls the education he is experimenting with "Education for the Home." There are two great features, household economics and music. These are given besides the regular high school and college courses. Attendance during the past year showed an increase over that of the year before of 71 per cent, and over that of two years ago of 176 per cent.

NEGRO STUDENTS SAVE ONION CROP

Amherst, Mass—A force of 300 Negro students from the Hampton, Va., institute and 500 other Negroes from the South farmed and harvested the onion crop in a portion of Connecticut this year, when the regular farm hands left the fields for higher wages in the munition factories of the state, according to a statement of J. W. Alsop of Avon, Conn., before the onion growers of Hampshire and Franklin counties yesterday.

Mr. Alsop said: "When our laborers went to the factories we raised $8,000 and sent to employment agents in the cities. The men provided were worse than useless. Then we sent to the South and got 300 students from Hampton Institute and other schools and 500 other Negroes.

"These students went to church, sang well and by their gentlemanly conduct won the good will of the community and the praise of their employers."

SOUTH DAKOTA FUND FROM SCHOOL LANDS

Pierre, S. D.—The state department, from sales of school lands during the fiscal year just closed, has obtained $1,095,737, which has been paid into various educational funds. The common schools received $993,463 of this amount and the remainder went to endowed institutions.

The funds are apportioned in the ratio of $5.74 to each pupil. Minnehaha county, largest in point of population, receives $42,985, and Brown county $32,641. Other counties paid $20,000 or more are Beadle, Brookings, Charles Mix, Codington, Day, Hutchinson, Lawrence, Roberts and Turner.

SEEK THE TRUTH.

Strive to be true in all things. It is wondrous how the truer we become the more unerringly we know the ring of truth, discern whether a man be true or not and can fasten at once upon the rising lie in word and look and dissembling act.—F. W. Robertson.

MILITIAMEN ARRIVING AT CAMP AT NATION'S CALL

Photo by American Press Association.

Members of national guard answering president's call arriving in their company auto truck at Camp Whitman, Beekman, N. Y.

WOULD ABOLISH IDLENESS EVIL

Organized Labor In California Plans to Stop Unemployment.

ADVOCATES BASIC REFORMS

Proposes to Shift Burden of Taxation From Industry to Privilege and Monopoly—Reduction of Hours of Labor Would Eliminate Many Abuses of the Industrial System.

By PAUL SHARRENBERG, Secretary San Francisco Labor Council.

The organized workers of California regard unemployment within our state as a wholly unnecessary evil.

It may be contended that it is very difficult and even impossible to do away with unemployment in the thickly populated industrial centers. But somehow no one has been found who can show good reasons why unemployment has become an issue in our own rich and fertile state which by her comparison with other countries should comfortably support many, many times her present population.

To eradicate this unnecessary evil in California organized labor has for years advocated certain fundamental reforms.

First, in order of importance, is the proposal to shift the burden of taxation from labor and industry to privilege and monopoly—in other words, to make it unprofitable for the land speculator to "hold on" to thousands upon thousands of idle and unimproved acres.

Second, but perhaps equally as important as "freeing the land," is the reduction of the working hours.

Working hours have been reduced by organizations and by legislation. California has done well by enacting the eight hour law for her working women, but much remains to be done in reducing the daily hours of our male working population.

The organized workers in California demand a reduction of the hours of labor because it would give a due share of work and wages to the reserve army of labor and eliminate many of the worst abuses of the industrial system now filling our poorhouses and jails. The movement for the reduction of the hours of labor is contemporaneous with the introduction of labor saving machinery and has been the most faithful of all reformatory attempts of modern times, since it has clearly revealed the power of the working people to realize an improved industrial system and raises the hope that we may yet be able to stem the tide of economic, social and moral degradations, robbing those who work of a great part of their natural wages and keeping the whole of society within a few months of destitution.

Finally, organized labor believes that there should be a greater restriction of immigration. It is very well to talk about America as the haven of the oppressed. For all I know it may be quite true that America is "big enough" to provide homes for all the teeming millions of Europe, but the fact is that we seem to be unable to properly care for those now here. So it is submitted that greater restriction of immigration is one of the important and essential steps that must be taken for the solution of the unemployment problem of our country.

At present organized labor in California proposes to abolish all employment agencies operated for profit. Many years ago congress passed a law which made it illegal to collect a fee for furnishing employment to seamen. This drove the crimps out of the business. And in view of the fact that in this state upward of $500,000 is now paid annually into the coffers of the employment agents by men who can least afford it, because they are out of work, it seems evident that we badly need legislation which will drive these land crimps out of business.

California state employment bureaus as they are now operated and conducted have accomplished a great deal, but as long as private bureaus exist they will never receive the patronage of a large number of employers.

As a pleasing contrast to this I beg to call your attention to the fact that in the shipping business on the Pacific coast men have been hired for a great many years without the aid of any bureaus, public or private. The employment bureaus for the shipping industry of the Pacific coast are maintained by the seamen's organizations to the satisfaction of workers and employers. Neither side pays a fee for this service, and if this state of affairs is possible for 10,000 men in one of the principal industries of the Pacific coast then we may well apply the same system to the other industries in our state.

BIG CATCH OF SHARKS.

Apollo's Crew Hooks and Kills Nineteen—Captain Gets Turtle.

Baltimore. — Catching sharks and shooting immense sea turtles was the pastime enjoyed by Captain Thomas Thomassen and his crew during the voyage of the Norwegian bark Apollo, now in port with manganese ore from Rio Janeiro. Nineteen sharks, the largest eleven feet long, were captured and dispatched by the ship's crew.

"It was on June 4," said Captain Thomassen, "that numerous sharks hovered about the vessel, fighting each other for the refuse from the ship's galley. I made a hook about twelve inches long on a two inch line, baited it with pork and fastened it to a two inch rope. The bait hardly reached the water when a shark swallowed it, and the tussle began. That day we caught seven of the monsters.

"It took five men to hoist a shark to the ship's deck. After killing the shark with an ax its fins were removed and the carcass thrown overboard.

"A large sea turtle was sighted about 200 yards from the vessel on June 10. I took a shot with a rifle and struck a vital part."

KISSING NEGRESS COST $3.50.

Young Man Who Saluted Her Was Put Under Arrest.

Pittsburgh.—Raymond Watkins, twenty years old, of Homeville and his companions were standing on a street corner in Munhall terrace recently chatting and joking when one of Watkins' friends bet him $1 he did not dare to kiss the first girl that came along. Watkins put up the money and soon got his chance to win a dollar.

Estelle Stanton, a negress, eighteen years old, living in Munhall terrace, walked along an instant later, and Watkins seized his opportunity, accosted the young woman and kissed her on the cheek. Watkins then turned to his companions and collected the dollar.

A few hours later he was taken into custody on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by the girl. Watkins paid the costs, $4.50, and was freed. Thus he lost $3.50.

TO FIDDLE FOR VOTES.

Missouri Girl Will Help Her Father's Campaign.

St. Louis.—When William C. Askin, a banker of Salem, Mo., announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for secretary of state his daughter, Miss Bernice Wolcott Askin, was in New York. The news of her father's candidacy, however, brought her back to Missouri with the announcement that she will accompany him on his campaign with her violin.

"Father has done much to aid me in my musical education," said Miss Askin at the home of a friend in St. Louis, "and now that he wants to be secretary of state I am going to do all I can for him. I may accompany him over the state during his entire campaign. If I do I shall take my violin along and entertain the voters."

Passing the Word.

We may not believe one-half we hear, but we don't hesitate to tell it all.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

HISTORY AS IT IS TAUGHT

A Plea For Really Neutral Textbook In Every Country.

History in every country is so taught as to magnify that country. Children learn to believe that their own country has been always in the right and almost always victorious, that it has produced almost all the great men and that it is in all respects superior to all other countries. Since these beliefs are flattering they are easily absorbed and hardly ever dislodged from instinct by later knowledge.

To take a simple and almost trivial example: The facts about the battle of Waterloo are known in great detail and with minute accuracy, but the facts as taught in elementary schools will be widely different in England, France and Germany. The ordinary English boy imagines that the Prussians played hardly any part; the ordinary German boy imagines that Wellington was practically defeated when the day was retrieved by Blucher's gallantry. If the facts were taught accurately in both countries national pride would not be fostered to the same extent, neither nation would feel so certain of victory in the event of war and the willingness to fight would be diminished.

It is this result which has to be prevented. Every state wishes to foster national pride and is conscious that this cannot be done by unbiased history.

The defenseless children are taught by distortions and suppressions and suggestions. The false ideas as to the history of the world which are taught in the various countries are of a kind which fosters strife and serves to keep alive a bigoted nationalism.

If good relations between states were desired one of the first steps ought to be to submit all teaching of history to an international commission which should produce neutral textbooks free from the patriotic bias which is now demanded everywhere.—Bertrand Russell in Atlantic Monthly.

CAMPERS STUDY GOOD FARMING

Madison, Wis.—Going to school and camping out, at one and the same time, is not a feature belonging exclusively to military academies. A six weeks' course in farm management has been established at the University of Wisconsin as a part of the work in agriculture. The course is held in midsummer on some of the best dairy farms of the state.

Twenty-one students have started on the six weeks' camping trip this summer, led by D. H. Otis, director of the course. They make their headquarters successively at Rosendale, Fon-du-Lac county, Bethesda station, Waukesha county, and at Beloit, Rock county.

These students milk cows, make hay, cultivate corn and potatoes and plan crop rotations, study soil conditions, draw maps and take inventories of everything on each farm visited. At the University of Wisconsin they require at least six months' farm experience before granting an agricultural student his degree. No student who has not had some of his necessary farm experience is allowed to take the six weeks' camp course in farm management.

Each student is required to prepare a map of some actual farm in the vicinity. Notes are taken on the size, location, shape, contour, conditions of each field and the appearance of the crops growing on them. A revised map is then drawn and such changes are made in the plan of the farm as in the thought of the student and instructor, contributed to the convenience, appearance and proper rotation of the crops. With this revised map a complete rotation scheme is planned showing the crops to be grown on each field for a series of years, with ideas for substitutes where failures might occur.

The "round-up" meeting at the close of the course is always popular. There the students present their findings and consult with the owners of the farms about certain details of soil fertility, or landscape gardening. Real difficulties are encountered and discussed from every angle. Many of the revised maps and crop rotation plans, prepared by the students are eventually adopted by the farmers as permanent policies of management.

BUSINESS REPORTED GOOD IN THE SOUTH

Baltimore, Md.—"Opportunity for the safe and profitable employment of capital in the South was never so alluring as it is today," declared Mayor James R. Littleton, of Augusta, Ga., who came to Baltimore to confer with local banking interests, says the News. "Prosperity is to be seen on every hand. The farmers are prosperous and are spending money freely: Crops are in splendid condition, and farm staples bring high prices. The South has learned its lesson about too much cotton and is now devoting more acreage to products other than the white staple. Money is plentiful in our section and business is at high tide."

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

SAYS HOT WATER WASHES POISONS FROM THE LIVER

Everyone should drink hot water with phosphate in it, before breakfast.

To feel as fine as the proverbial fiddle, we must keep the liver washed clean, almost every morning, to prevent its sponge-like pores from clogging with indigestible material, sour bile and poisonous toxins, says a noted physician.

If you get headaches, it's your liver. If you catch cold easily, it's your liver. If you wake up with a bad taste, furred tongue, nasty breath or stomach becomes rancid, it's your liver. Sallow skin, muddy complexion, watery eyes all denote liver uncleanliness. Your liver is the most important, also the most abused and neglected organ of the body. Few know its function or how to release the dammed-up body waste, bile and toxins. Most folks resort to violent calomel, which is a dangerous, salivating chemical which can only be used occasionally because it accumulates in the tissues, also attacks the bones.

Every man and woman, sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, to wash from the liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible material, the poisons, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Limestone phosphate does not restrict the diet like calomel, because it can not salivate, for it is harmless and you can eat anything afterwards. It is inexpensive and almost tasteless, and any pharmacist will sell you a quarter pound, which is sufficient for a demonstration of how hot water and limestone phosphate cleans, stimulates and freshens the liver, keeping you feeling fit day in and day out.

Diamonds In Your Own Back Yard
IF YOU KNOW HOW TO FIND THEM.
Do you doubt it? Hear Dr. Russell H. Conwell give his wonderful lecture "Acres of Diamonds" the third day of Chautauqua Week
Delivered more than 5,300 times to over 2,500,000 people, it is the best known and the most popular lecture in the world. Dr. Conwell is deservedly called "The Greatest Lecturer of Our Time."
This Great Lecture Is Alone Worth $2.00
But this small expenditure entitles you to also hear
MRS. SARAH TYSON RORER
Writer, teacher, speaker; authority on domestic science
JUDGE MARCUS A. KAVANAGH
One of our foremost jurists. Judge of Superior Court of Chicago
DR. EDWARD AMHERST OTT
Second consecutive appearance because of insistent demand
HON. JOE R. HANLEY
Lawyer, editor, traveler, in a thrilling patriotic address
PLEASE REMEMBER
That only 750 season tickets will be sold at $2.00. The local committee will sell them in advance at this price as long as they last. The $2.50 season tickets will not be on sale until Chautauqua opens and then only at the gate.
and
John B. Ratto
Alton Packard
Marigold Girls
Ben Greet Players
Five Eminent Artists
Elsie Baker Company
Scotch Highland Band
Children's Shakespeare Pageant
Cimera's Band and Lillian Hayward
NOTICE THIS
Seventeen entertainments and lectures. Junior Chautauqua under supervision of a trained playground expert. A popular lecture every morning by an inspirational speaker. Admissions for week total $6.70. You can miss two-thirds of the program and save money by having a season ticket.
FIX THE DATE FIRMLY IN MIND
In Fulton July 31st to August 5th

Insure Your Teeth
Better than the dentifrice you are using now
VIVAUDOU'S
Peroxide Tooth Paste

THE P. M.'S HAVE BANKING DUTIES

But Only In Towns Where No National Banks Exist ---Reserve Law Provides That Way.

Postmasters in Oswego County towns and cities where there is no member bank of the Federal Reserve System will in the future be forced to collect checks drawn upon non-member state banks and remit the proceeds to the respective Federal Reserve Banks under orders from Postmaster General Burleson just received at the local post office.

The secretary's recommendation is based upon the resolution passed by the Federal Reserve Board for the purpose of carrying into effect every detail of the new clearance plan providing for the country wide collection of checks at par by the Federal Reserve banks, which went into effect July 15.

In towns where there is no member bank of the Federal Reserve Bank the Postmaster General authorizes postmasters to receive checks from Federal Reserve banks drawn upon state banks non-members of the Federal Reserve system, and they are requested to collect these checks in currency and remit the currency to the Federal Reserve bank of the district to pay all expenses for postage and registration on fees upon funds thus remitted.

In explaining the new plan the post master general says:

"The clearing and collection plan covering the country wide collection of checks at par by Federal Reserve banks went into effect July 15. The request contained in the resolution is intended to enable the Federal Reserve board to make use of the postmasters for the presentation of checks at the counters of banks which refuse to remit to the Federal Reserve banks. It is desired that having received payment of these checks, the postmasters remit the proceeds to the Federal Reserve bank of the district. While it is not anticipated that it will be necessary to make use of this expedient to any wide extent, the permission so to do is much desired by the Board as a part of its clearing and collection plan. It will be necessary only towns or cities where there is no member bank of the system to make the collection."

The order will affect a large number of Oswego county towns where there is not a national bank.

Local and Personal

Mrs. Bayard Wellwood and son, George, are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Kelsey, of Oswego.

* * *

Mrs. George Robbillard, of West First street, is ill at the Lee Memorial Hospital.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Eckard and daughters, Katherine and Bertha, of Bundy's Crossing, are making an automobile tour of Western New York.

* * *

Miss Vera Bovard spent yesterday in Syracuse.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. Merton Reynolds, of Mexico Point, are visiting friends in this city today.

* * *

Prof. and Mrs. J. R. Fairgrieve and family, leave tomorrow for Mexico Point, for a month's outing.

* * *

The Presbyterian Sunday School picnic was held today at the Fair Grounds.

* * *

The All Saints' Church and Christ Church Sunday schools are enjoying the day at Long Branch.

* * *

The Baptist Church will hold a picnic tomorrow at the Fair Grounds. Dinner will be served and a general good time is in store for everybody.

* * *

Mr. Walter Guppy has been appointed to a vacancy made by James Fredenburgh in the fire department and is now an active member.

* * *

Mrs. Emma Coates and daughter, of New York city, are visiting Miss Gertrude Farrell.

* * *

Mr. Ross Eaton left yesterday for Auburn, where he will locate permanently with the Hammond Steel Co., as general manager.

* * *

Mrs. Harry Waugh and daughter, Ruth, are camping at Hinmanville.

Chautauqua Tickets Sold to 800 Persons

The ticket selling committee of the Chautauqua Association met last night in the library, to ascertain just how many tickets have been sold and whether the guaranteed number has yet been reached, or 750 tickets. That this happy result might obtain committees were formed and a contest waged. Mr. G. A. Ansermet was appointed captain of team number one, and W. H. Hornibrook captained team number two. The members of the teams were as follows:

No. One—W. H. Patterson, J. R. Fairgrieve, Almon Bristol, Dr. F. L. Cary, C. A. Dryer, J. M. Foster, W. B. Halstead, C. W. Hobbie, J. J. Jordan, D. L. Lipsky, Mrs. H. MacMurchy, Mrs. E. McCully, A. M. Hurd, Dr. L. F. Joy, Willis Morin, Mrs. T. J. Redhead, H. J. Wilson, C. E. Wilson, Rev. J. W. Barrett, O. T. Day, George T. Carner, G. E. True.

No. Two—E. J. Penfield, Rev. Mr. Olmstead, Dr. Anderson, Morrill Brothers, E. R. Redhead, A. E. Black, Mrs. O. S. Bogardus, D. A. Case, R. B. Crockett, Dr. E. J. Cusack, George B. Duell, J. W. Distin, W. L. Forsyth, Dr. E. A. Gladman, F. E. Goodjon, Rev. H. D. Holmes, Mrs. Eugene Holmes, Mrs. Evelyn Howard, W. C. Morgan, Helen S. Osborne, H. L. Paddock, Mrs. Fred Scholz, C. A. Streeter, F. J. Switzer, Mrs. Ernest Taft, A. W. Wiltsie.

No One, sold 389 1-2 tickets, of which, G. E. True sold 45, thus placing him at the lead of the contestants. Team No. Two sold 411 1-2 tickets and Dr. Anderson was awarded first place on that team, having sold thirty tickets. Some remarkable work was done selling tickets, as nearly everybody sold fifteen, while a number of people returned for more. The total number of tickets sold to date, is 801. About 200 additional have been promised, making a grand total of 1,000 tickets sold by the committeess, which is excellent work.

Mr. E. J. Penfield presided at the meeting last night with the following officials present: E. R. Redhead, vice president; F. E. Goodjon, second vice president; C. W. Streeter, treasurer; John M. Foster, secretary; Eleanor McCully, assistant secretary.

Light refreshments were served by Mr. G. A. Ansermet.

DELINQUENTS MUST PAY UP

If you do not pay your income tax within the next twenty days you will be prosecuted.

This is the ultimatum sent out by the Internal Revenue office at Washington to all collectors throughout this district, in an effort to round up all delinquents. Within the next twenty days every person liable under the law must either offer to pay the tax or effect a compromise, so the officials at Washington declare.

In case the persons liable do neither, their names will be handed over to the United State District Attorney for action, it is said.

There are a large number of delinquents in this district. Some of the cases are old ones and have been hanging fire for some time. No further time will be given this class. The others are those who are delinquent only this year.

This year's delinquents are likely to have a harder time than in the past, because the government says it will be lenient no more. The officials say that by this time the public should understand the law and they must pay the penalty, if they fail to obey it.

OSWEGO COUNTY TO GET [illegible] NEW HIGHWAYS

A large number of contracts for highway improvements in Oswego county will be awarded by the state between August 14 and 16, according to announcement by William M. Acheson, division engineer of the State Highway Department, in charge of the Oswego county section. Mr. Acheson has received official notice from Albany that eighty-one road contracts will be let next month. It will be one of the largest leting of contracts ever held in this State.

Bids will be received on the following roads in this section:

Fulton-Volney, part 1, waterbound Macadam, 0.57 miles; Sandy Creek-Smartville, bituminous Macadam, 6.36 miles; Fulton, East First street, brick, 0.36 miles.

Contracts will also be let for roads in Cortland, Cayuga, and Seneca counties at the same time.

EGGS OF ANCIENT BIRTH DATED

There will be no more romances of the type where a pretty country girl writes her name on an egg, sends it to cold storage, and half a dozen years later gets a letter from some "city feller" who just ate the egg for breakfast.

The State Department of foods and markets under the direction of John J. Dillon is going to stop it. He's going to have all eggs dated. What's more they're going to be dated with letters at least an eighth of an inch high. This date is to be attached when the egg goes into the cold storage factory. Also they must bear the stamp "cold storage."

This label is to be placed on each and every egg before it can be placed on the market, according to the new rule which is to go into effect September 1.

Last winter when almost anything resembling an egg was commanding fancy prices, the state department had trouble with some dealers who foisted off the most ancient kind of cold storage eggs upon the unsuspecting public as "strictly fresh." It is estimated that the people of the state lost upwards of $100,000 by this method.

Commissioner Dillon's order is that every egg other than those sold in an unbroken sealed package shall be marked "cold storage." In this way the commissioner believes there will be less chance to swindle the purchasers.

Efforts of thrifty housewives to "beat" the egg market this season are so painful as to be almost discouraging. They waited too long before buying a winter's supply of fresh eggs and "putting them down." Eggs were selling around twenty-five cents and then gradually dropped slightly. While the housewives were waiting for a still further drop they suddenly soared again and have remained at the high figure since.

The way to test this newspaper's strength is by inserting an ad in the Miscellaneous Want Column. See rates on fifth page.

PREVENTION IS BEST METHOD

State Department Issues Rules Which, If Observed, Should Stamp Out Popular Disease.

The State Department of Health has sent out the following article on Infantile Paralysis prepared by experts giving advice on how to avoid the disease and how to detect the first symptoms and what steps to take in effecting a cure or relief. It says in part:

"Infantile paralysis is a catching disease. How it is spread is not yet definitely known, but the disease may be taken directly from a sick person, or indirectly through a third person who has been caring for a patient or who has been living in the same household.

"The early symptoms are usually fever, weakness, fretfulness or irritability and vomiting. There may or may not be acute pain at this time. Later there is pain in the neck, back, legs and arms, with great weakness. If paralysis is to occur it generally appears from the second to the fifth day after the sickness begins. Many cases do not go to paralysis.

"The germ of this disease is present in discharges from the nose, throat and bowels of those ill from infantile paralysis. It may also be present in the nose and throat of healthy persons of the same family. For this reason you should not let your children play with children who have just been sick or with children from a family in which there is a case of infantile paralysis.

"In order to prevent the occurrence of this disease parents should observe the following rules:

"Keep your house or apartment absolutely clean.

"Go over all the woodwork daily with a damp cloth.

"Sweep floors only after they have been sprinkled with sawdust, old tea leaves, bits of newspaper which have been dampened. Never allow dry sweeping.

"Screen your windows against flies.

"Do not allow refuse of any kind to remain in your rooms.

"Kill all forms of vermin such as bedbugs and cockroaches.

"Pay special attention to bodily cleanliness. Take a bath every day and see that all clothing which comes in contact with the skin is clean.

"Keep your children by themselves as much as possible. Do not allow them to visit motion picture shows or other places where there may be a large gathering of children.

"Children should not be kept in the house; they should be out of doors as much as possible, but not in active contact with other children of the neighborhood.

"Do not take your children with you when you go shopping.

"Do not allow your children to be kissed.

"It is perfectly safe to let your children go to parks and playgrounds if only two or three of them play together; they should not play in large groups; you should not let them come in contact with children in other parts of the city.

"Remember that children need fresh air in the summer time and out of door life is one of the best ways to avoid disease.

"If there is a public shower bath in any of the schools in your vicinity, send the older children there for a shower every day. This is perfectly safe and will keep them in good health.

"Give your children plain, wholesome food, including plenty of milk and vegetables.

"Keep the milk, clean, covered and cold.

"Do not allow the milk or any other food to be exposed in a place where flies may light upon it.

"Wash well all food that is to be eaten raw.

"Remember that during the hot weather children are apt to have stomach and bowel trouble. If your child is taken sick do not at once fear that it must be infantile paralysis; it may be only a digestive disturbance. Give the child a table spoonful of castor oil, plenty of cool water to drink and send for the doctor at once.

"Do not give your children patent medicines or buy [illegible] of any kind to ward off disease. The best prevention is cleanliness and strict observance of the rules that have been given.

"Although there is no specific cure for the disease much can be done to reduce the amount of crippling caused by the paralysis. It is important to remember that this requires services of a trained physician and the care of a competent nurse. Unless you can give these to your child send word at once to the Department of Health, so that the patient may receive proper care in a well equipped hospital. Of the children cared for in hospitals only one quarter as many die as those treated at home. Give your child a fair chance and let the hospital doctors care for it.

"In case infantile paralysis occurs in your home, your doctor must at once notify the department of health. An inspector will be sent to investigate. He will paste a sign on your door warning all people not to enter. This sign must not be removed except by some one sent by the department of health. The inspector and nurse will tell you just what to do to protect yourself and the others in the family."

RETURN FROM MOTOR TRIP ALONG BORDER

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Smith returned from an extended auto trip. Mr. Smith was accompanied by his relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Warner Youmans of Camden, N. Y., and a party of friends. The trip was made entirely by automobile—a touring car and truck, the later being remodeled into a sleeping car, with berths installed.

Mr. Smith stated that many historical points and places of interest were visited, having made a complete tour of the border of the northern part of New York state. Camp was pitched wherever darkness overtook them, often times in woods, hills and villages.

FULTON WOMEN HELD BY FLOODS

News received in this city from Miss Marion Dickerman and Dr. Harriet Doane, who motored to Ashville, N. C., recently, indicates that they were in the midst of the hurricane district and were forced to ship the car home by rail, because they found the roads so badly used up by water and wind as to be impassable.

Inclosed in Miss Dickerman's letter was a newspaper, "The Ashville Citizen," a paper consisting of twenty-four pages under ordinary circumstances, but owing to the recent disastrous events comprised only four pages. The engine which drove the press consumed gasoline worth one dollar a gallon. The letter stated that the city officials had taken over all of the gasoline stored there and that the roads and railroads were torn and washed away, leaving the town practically isolated.

At the time of the storm clouds overhung the northern and western part of the state, covering a territory of one hundred and fifty miles. They were jet black and a furious gale prevailed, accompanied by hard rain.

All communication is still cut off and it is impossible for one to get in or out of that section. No lights are to be obtained and wires and circuits are entirely destroyed. Lakes are flooded, bridges washed away and many people were killed.

Dr. Doane's letter stated that although she was located on a high hill and fortunately had elevation enough to prevent the flood from reaching her.

The damage is estimated at $10,000,000 and many lives lost. At one place a hospital was flooded in which several nurses were killed. The city of Charlotte is reported to have been damaged in which the family of A. E. Casler, formerly of Fulton, are now residing. No word has been received from them. Six bridges are known to have been washed away, including the mammoth bridge at Biltmore.

COMMUNITY DANCING ON THE CITY PLAZA

There will be community dancing tomorrow night on the city plaza, and the Elks' band will be in atendance. Dance music intermingled with overtures and marches will be rendered as follows:

March—Operatic Rag ..... Lenzberg
Overture—Lustspiel ...... Kela Bela
Selection—Blue Paradise

JAMES R. SHEETS

James R. Sheets, ninety, died last night at his home, 208 Schuyler street. He was a former resident of Messina, St. Lawrence County and had lived in Fulton but three years. The funeral will be held tomorrow evening at 7:30 and the remains will be [illegible] to Messina for burial.

Man, Cruel Man!

"My husband is very inconsiderate." "How so?"

"Insists that the house needs shingling when he knows how badly I need a diamond ring."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

N. Y. C. REDUCES PAY OF GUARDS

Order Applies Only to Men Serving In Volunteers--- Pensions and Stations Unaffected.

All the Oswego County National Guardsmen, as well as those all over the country, who are employed by the New York Central Railroad Company, but are now in active service on the border, have been notified of a reduction in their pay effective while they are in the service of their country. Some have been notified that they will not be paid in excess of $100 per month while away from their offices.

This action, however, was not a surprise to the men as before the guardsmen departed this notice was posted by the Merchants' Association for the Central.

"Employes who were members of the National Guard on June 17 last and who are enrolled in the United States government service, or who may be serving in the National Guard in response to such call pending such enrollment, will be granted indefinite leaves of absence without impairing their pension or other records with the company as they then existed.

"Employes may return to the services in positions as remunerative as they held at the time of the call by making application within thirty days after their release by the government. Unless otherwise ordered by the Board of Directors the following payments will be made to such employes: First, full pay for the month of June, the time to apply on the annual vacation allowance for the year; second, after July 1, the married men full pay, to unmarried men with dependent families one half to full pay according to circumstances to be determined by the president; unmarried without dependents, one half pay, maximum payments $100 per month. The foregoing will apply to all New York Central lines except the Rutland."

About the Town

A daughter was born today to Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Ash, of 410 Highland street.

* * *

The Congregational Church Sunday school will picnic at Fair Haven tomorrow. Everybody is cordially invited to meet at the church at 9 a. m. sharp, as the autos and motor trucks will leave at 9:30 o'clock.

* * *

Mr. Clarence Hewitt left today for Geneva. He has been the guest of his parents.

* * *

Levi Abbey, clerk at the Clark House, spent yesterday in Syracuse.

* * *

Major D. W. Wilbur, of Poughkeepsie, was in town yesterday, in conference with Mayor Lewis.

* * *

Mr. John J. Jordan returned, yesterday, from an extended eastern trip.

* * *

Mr. Edward Snow, of New York city, is the guest of friends in this city.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. John McNamara, of New York city, left this morning after visiting Mr. and Mrs. William McNamara, of Broadway and First street.

Sensible.

Mrs. X.—The flat above us is unoccupied right now. Why don't you come and live there? Mrs. Y.—Oh, my dear, we've been such good friends, and I hate to start quarrelling with you!—Exchange.

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

For Sale—A good E. M. F. Touring Car, for $125. Van Wagenen, Inc.

Wanted Boarders—Desirable [illegible] good board, price reasonable. Seneca street. Mrs. Lamb.

For Sale—A good Overland car $200. Van Wagenen, Inc.

For Sale—A good Maxwell touring car for $250. Van Wagenen, Inc.

00,000 Chiclets for This City

here's a box of these sweet new ams Chiclets, like the one below, the counter of every store in city that sells gum. It took our only three days to put them
re. Because they're the new sen-ion in gum. They're candy and
. Candy first—then gum. White now, sweet as honey, and they w as gum never chewed before.
ey're not flat like most gum. They e a new shape. You let them
t in your mouth. Then when the dy's all gone you chew the gum.
nderful gum. And you get—ind of 5 slabs of gum for a nickel
Chiclets. Chew them, and
'll say they're great.

CHICLE

American
Chicle
Company

10 for 5c

Look for this box on the counter

ADAMS Chiclets

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

An Accepted Mid-Summer Vogue.

Individual in its design and development is this formal frock of striped chiffon cloth with bodice of black satin.

This black and white striped chiffon cloth skirt is topped with the most charming of bodices in black satin, which forms a waistcoat buttoning at the waistline below which it falls into two points exactly as does the masculine garment. It is cut in a deep V-in front to show an underbody of white chiffon, the sleeves of which are hemmed with satin. In medium size the costume requires 1⅜ yards 44-inch white chiffon, 2 yards 36-inch black satin and 4¾ yards striped chiffon cloth.

The skirt is a three-piece model gathered at the top and supplies the subject for today's home dressmaking lesson. The inserted side gore is finished at the top with a gathered heading. Join the front and back gores as notched, as the first step in making the skirt. Then turn under the upper edge of side gore on slot perforations and gather 2½ inches from folded edge. Join side gore to front and back gores as notched. Gather upper edge of skirt between double "TT" perforations. Adjust foundation yoke to position underneath front and back gores, center-fronts and center-backs even; stitch upper edges together, bringing side seam of skirt to small "o" perforation in yoke. Stitch lower edge of extensions in gores, along crossline of small "o" perforations in foundation yoke. Draw gathers in side gore to fit the extension and stitch to position bringing large "O" perforation in side gore to side seam. Close the center-back seam from large "O" perforation to lower edge, finish edges above for a placket and stitch a band of satin over the hem of the skirt.

Many of the formal frocks which have underblouses of white chiffon are made with a narrow band of pink chiffon running along the edge of the vest. If outlined with beading the beauty of the trimming is appreciably increased.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6832. Sizes, 34 to 42 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.
Skirt No. 6834. Sizes, 22 to 30 inches waist, Price, 15 cents.

CHAINED TO A ROCK

How the Turks Once Imprisoned a Greek Battleship.

DARING OF A YOUNG OFFICER.

His Pluck and Strategy Resulted In Making the Powerful Enemy Vessel Lie Helpless Within the Landlocked Waters of the Gulf of Arta.

It was during the war between Greece and Turkey in 1897 that the inhabitants of Gala Krini—a large village, since destroyed by the Turks, on the shores of the gulf of Arta—awoke one morning to find that a Hellenic battleship had entered the gulf and cast anchor off the shore. The surprise of the inhabitants of Gala Krini was nothing compared with that of a party of five Turkish officers, who, from the very crest of a hill towering above the village, watched the vessel through their telescopes.

These Turkish officers were on an urgent and important mission—to block out the Hellenic fleet from the gulf of Arta. Behind them, at the bottom of the deep ravine, were a number of heavy guns which had been dragged all the way from Saloniki, a long and difficult task, and with the artillery they had been ordered to fortify the strait.

To reach the strait, however, the Turkish column had to run the gantlet of the battleship's heavy guns, which meant sheer destruction. Somehow or other they must escape the man-of-war or prevent her interference with their work, but to do this seemed impossible.

In the midst of their discussion a young officer who had been listening said he could hold the vessel a prisoner if they would allow him. His pleading won, and, hurriedly changing his clothes for those of a shepherd, he descended in that disguise to Gala Krini.

Late that night a number of figures stole through the dark alleys of the village toward the shore. Close to the water's edge was an old boathouse, used as a shed for repairing boats. This the party silently entered and by the flickering light of a taper searched the black interior. At length there was a gentle rattle and from the gloom emerged Hassan, stripped to the waist, dragging a heavy chain. This, with the help of his comrades, he began to pull, and after an hour's laborious work the end of the great chain—once the cable of a Turkish vessel—was reached.

From the beach the chain was loaded on board a large caique, whose sides and floor had been covered with cloth to deaden the sound. This task accomplished, three men got in with Hassan and rowed with muffled oars toward a large rock in the middle of the bight. Round this rock the chain was laid and securely fastened. One man having been landed on the crag to keep guard over this end, the boat set out cautiously for the battleship, looming like a phantom in the distance. Not a sound did the men make as link by link the massive chain was paid out over the stern into the still water till they reached the vessel.

There was an excited gleam in Hassan's eyes as, with a sign to his comrades, he gradually lowered himself into the dark water, guiding himself by passing his fingers over the battleship's plates. A slight grating of the chain against the hull was all that his anxious companions in the boat heard, though now and then a reassuring pull was felt on the line that Hassan held, directing them how to pay out the chain. Hours rather than minutes seemed to have gone by ere the young officer came to the surface. So exhausted by his long dive was he that he had to be almost lifted into the boat.

"It is round the propeller," he gasped. "I have fixed it so that nothing can move it. Back you go."

Then link by link the tedious work was renewed until the boat returned to its starting point, where the other end of the chain was secured. The risky task was done, and the Hellenic battleship was securely moored to an immovable rock by a double thickness of cable.

The early rays of dawn revealed a sight which astonished the Greek commander. A whole regiment of Turks were on the march toward the strait of Arta, with train after train of artillery, the last of which disappeared beyond the intervening head before the ship's guns could be brought to bear on them. The commander gave orders for the guns to be run out and decks cleared for action, while the anchor was weighed, his intention being to prevent the Turks from fortifying the strait before they had become too strong. "Full speed ahead!" went the order to the engine room, and, propelled by her mighty screw, the battleship advanced, only to lurch backward as if dragged by some unseen force. Work as the engines would, the vessel seemed to be in an enchanted circle, beyond which it was impossible to go.

It was not until the sun's rays had penetrated the deep blue water alongside that the secret was revealed and the massive chain was discovered passing round the ship's propeller and the adjacent rock.

Before it could be removed, however, the strait had been sufficiently fortified by the Turks and a powerful Greek warship lay a helpless prisoner within the landlocked waters of Arta.

Giving Away the Bride.

An archaism of the English marriage service which has fallen into disuse is, "Who giveth this woman away?" It is a relic of the days when a woman could be donated by her father or her brothers as property.

It is related that at a wedding in California many years ago when the clergyman said, "Who giveth this woman away?" a sepulchral voice from the body of the audience replied, "I could, but I won't!"—Los Angeles Times.

Federal Inquiry or Railroad Strike?

Faced by demands from the conductors, engineers, firemen and brakemen that would impose on the country an additional burden in transportation costs of $100,000,000 a year, the railroads propose that this wage problem be settled by reference to an impartial Federal tribunal.

With these employes, whose efficient service is acknowledged, the railroads have no differences that could not be considered fairly and decided justly by such a public body.

Railroads Urge Public Inquiry and Arbitration

The formal proposal of the railroads to the employes for the settlement of the controversy is as follows:

"Our conferences have demonstrated that we cannot harmonize our differences of opinion, and that eventually the matters in controversy must be passed upon by other and disinterested agencies. Therefore, we propose that your proposals and the proposition of the railways be disposed of by one or the other of the following methods:

1. Preferably by submission to the Interstate Commerce Commission, the only tribunal which, by reason of its accumulated information bearing on railway conditions and its control of the revenue of the railways, is in a position to consider and protect the rights and equities of all the interests affected, and to provide additional revenue necessary to meet the added cost of operation in case your proposals are found by the Commission to be just and reasonable; or, in the event the Interstate Commerce Commission cannot, under existing laws, act in the premises, that we jointly request Congress to take such action as may be necessary to enable the Commission to consider and promptly dispose of the questions involved: or

2. By arbitration in accordance with the provisions of the Federal law" (The Newlands Act).

Leaders Refuse Offer and Take Strike Vote

Leaders of the train service brotherhoods, at the joint conference held in New York, June 1-15, refused the offer of the railroads to submit the issue to arbitration or Federal review, and the employes are now voting on the question whether authority shall be given these leaders to declare a nation-wide strike.

The Interstate Commerce Commission is proposed by the railroads as the public body to which this issue ought to be referred for these reasons:

No other body with such an intimate knowledge of railroad conditions has such an unquestioned position in the public confidence.

The rates the railroads may charge the public for transportation are now largely fixed by this Government board.

Out of every dollar received by the railroads from the public nearly one-half is paid directly to the employes as wages; and the money to pay increased wages can come from no other source than the rates paid by the public.

The Interstate Commerce Commission, with its control over rates, is in a position to make a complete investigation and render such decision as would protect the interests of the railroad employes, the owners of the railroads, and the public.

A Question For the Public to Decide

The railroads feel that they have no right to grant a wage preferment of $100,000,000 a year to these employes, now highly paid and constituting only one-fifth of all the employes, without a clear mandate from a public tribunal that shall determine the merits of the case after a review of all the facts.

The single issue before the country is whether this controversy is to be settled by an impartial Government inquiry or by industrial warfare.

National Conference Committee of the Railways

ELISHA LEE, Chairman

P. R. ALBRIGHT, Gen'l Manager, Atlantic Coast Line Railroad.
L. W. BALDWIN, Gen'l Manager, Central of Georgia Railway.
C. L. BARDO, Gen'l Manager, New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.
E. H. COAPMAN, Vice-President, Southern Railway.
S. E. COTTER, Gen'l Manager, Wabash Railway.
P. E. CROWLEY, Asst. Vice-President, New York Central Railroad.
G. H. EMERSON, Gen'l Manager, Great Northern Railway.
C. H. EWING, Gen'l Manager, Philadelphia & Reading Railway.
E. W. GRICE, Gen'l Supt. Transp., Chesapeake & Ohio Railway.
A. S. GREIG, Asst. to Receivers, St. Louis & San Francisco Railroad.
C. W. KOUNS, Gen'l Manager, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway.
H. W. McMASTER, Gen'l Manager, Wheeling & Lake Erie Railroad.
N. D. MAHER, Vice-President, Norfolk & Western Railway.
JAMES RUSSELL, Gen'l Manager, Denver & Rio Grande Railroad.
A. M. SCHOYER, Resident Vice-Pres., Pennsylvania Lines West.
W. L. SEDDON, Vice-President, Seaboard Air Line Railway.
A. J. STONE, Vice-President, Erie Railroad.
G. S. WAID, Vice-Pres. & Gen'l Mgr., Sunset Central Lines.

What Came Of a Sketch

By EDWARD T. STEWART

Ryerson was an American boy who went to Florence, Italy, to study art. The stories of some of these American youths' efforts to get an art education half a century ago are almost incredible. Ryerson paid his expenses to Italy and lived there a year on $350.

One day when he was eating his usual dinner of macaroni—with no entrees—in a cheap restaurant, costing him a couple of cents in our money, a man took a seat at a table opposite him, whose appearance seemed to offer a striking subject for a picture. He was shabbily dressed, a conical hat, mustache turned up, a pointed beard was suggestive of Mephistopheles. Ryerson asked him if he would object to his making a sketch of him. The man consented, and the artist, opening a portfolio he had with him, took out pencil and paper and went to work. The model was an Englishman, and they conversed during the sitting.

Ryerson possessed a gift for catching likenesses, important in that day when there was no cheap way of getting them, for Daguerre had only just invented his process. A sketch was made that was an excellent reproduction of the man's features, including a scar over the right eye. Ryerson regretted that he could not pay for the sitting, but the man declared that, being poor himself, he could appreciate the other's feelings. However, he expended a lira in a litre of wine, which he invited Ryerson to share with him. He seemed, however, to be a misanthropic person, and Ryerson judged that he had met with some misfortune or had been treated unjustly. At any rate, his disposition had evidently been soured. He made an impression on the artist, and after they parted Ryerson could not get him out of his mind, and the sketch kept the impression alive.

Ryerson engaged passage to America by way of Genoa, and while waiting for the ship to sail put up at a hotel where the guests were mostly English and Americans. In the reading room he picked up an English paper and while scanning it his eye caught an advertisement for information of Cecil Manchester, followed by a description which tallied with Ryerson's model. A reward of £200 was offered for information that would lead to the party's discovery.

Ryerson was so impressed with the belief that the two were identical that he was tempted to cancel his passage at Genoa and go home by way of London. His story of his meeting with the man he had sketched might [illegible] to his discovery. But [illegible] would be more ex- [illegible] a coin to decide [illegible] he should take his chances of profit by going to London, and London won.

Counting up his available funds, he found that he could get to London, but if he received no acquisition there he would be short of his passage money. Again he flipped the coin to determine if he should take this added chance. Again the risk won.

A few days later Ryerson stepped into the office of the London paper that had contained the ad. and told his story.

"Have you the sketch?" he was asked.

He at once produced it and was offered any price he would ask for its use. It was surely a likeness of the party sought for and the only likeness extant. Its publication would be of great help in finding the original. Ryerson told them that they could have the picture for any price they chose to pay, and they drew a check for a hundred pounds.

So far, so good. If the sketch led to finding the original Ryerson would receive the £200 reward in addition, in all $1,500.

The likeness was published all over the continent, especially in Italy, and finally met the eye of its original who had found a position as croupier at the casino in Lucerne. He at once opened a correspondence with the London paper.

The story of Cecil Manchester, second son of a British nobleman, is a voluminous one in itself, far too long to be given in this episode in the life of an American artist. He had unwittingly got mixed up with rascals and had shared their disgrace. He had jumped a bail bond and become a wanderer, his family having turned against him, not even knowing his whereabouts. Then he had been exonerated, and all were anxious to make reparation. He returned to England, where the fatted calf was killed for him by his father, who was rich.

Ryerson was in great luck. He was regarded as the connecting link between Cecil Manchester and his family, who had wronged him, and both were anxious to pour out favors upon the artist whose marvelous likeness had secured the wanderer's return. Having been paid the reward, he was invited to the family residence in Devonshire, where he was wined and dined to both his heart's and his stomach's content. An offer of another year's study in Italy was made him on an allowance of £500. But Ryerson was an American gentleman, though a struggling artist, and declined to accept the offer. However, the principal reason for his declining it was that he made a match with a younger sister of Cecil Manchester and took her back with him to America, where he achieved a reputation and wealth as a portrait painter.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

BALANCED MENU.

THURSDAY—BREAKFAST.
Strained Orange Juice.
Cooked Cereal With Sirup.
Creamed Finnan Haddie.
Watercress. Coffee.

LUNCHEON.
Clam Broth in Cups.
Curried Eggs. Rolls.
Warm Gingerbread With Chocolate Sauce.

DINNER.
Vegetable Chowder.
Cold Sliced Lamb, Chutney Sauce.
String Beans. Baked Potatoes.
Italian Macaroni.
Strawberry Shortcake.

MORE STRAWBERRIES.

STRAWBERRY PIE.—Line a deep pie plate with nice, rich pastry and bake. Then fill with fresh ripe berries, adding plenty of sugar. Cover with a meringue made of whites of two eggs whipped stiff with two or three tablespoonfuls powdered sugar and brown lightly in the oven.

Strawberry Fluff.—This makes a nice emergency dessert, as it is so quickly prepared. Put into a large bowl one and a half cupfuls of ripe strawberries, one cupful of sugar and the white of one egg. Beat with wire whisk until stiff enough to hold its shape, pile lightly on a dish, chill and surround with macaroons. Serve with whipped cream sweetened and flavored with orange extract.

Strawberry Custard.—Make a boiled custard with one quart of milk, beaten yolks of five eggs, one-half cupful of sugar and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Crush and strain one pint of ripe berries and mix with them one-half cupful of powdered sugar; then gradually beat this into the stiffly whipped whites of four eggs. Serve the custard in glass cups and pile the strawberry float on top.

Strawberry Cockades.—Fill small glasses with halved ripe strawberries. Mix one cupful of cream, one-half cupful of strained honey and juice of half a lemon and whip until stiff. Put a spoonful of cream over the berries in each cup and sprinkle the top with freshly grated cocoanut.

Strawberry Charlotte.—Whip a cupful of heavy cream until stiff and mix with it a stiffly beaten white of egg, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, a teaspoonful of vanilla and a teaspoonful of powdered gelatin, softened in cold water, dissolved in hot water, strained and cooled before adding to the cream. Mix in a quart of sweet and ripe strawberries which have been covered with sugar and chilled for an hour, then drained free of juice. Pour into a dessert dish. Chill and serve with the sweetened juice as a sauce.

Anna Thompson.

THE MAN WHO DIED TWICE.

Mystery of Jean, the Hairdresser of Marie Antoinette.

There are many puzzling features of French history, but perhaps the most puzzling of all, though it has to do with a comparatively minor personage, is that surrounding the mystery of the hairdresser of Marie Antoinette. It is not a common occurrence for a person to die twice, a circumstance which has occurred in the case of this hairdresser, who was known as Jean Antie, alias Leonard.

This Antie, or Leonard, was a Gascon, born in 1758, who acquired a reputation in Paris by reason of his great ingenuity in building the elaborate coiffures of the time of Louis XVI. In 1791 he was lodged at the Tuileries as hairdresser of the queen.

When Marie Antoinette and the royal family made their fruitless attempt to flee from France, Leonard was sent ahead as a scout. He was seized, brought back to the French capital and condemned to be executed as a traitor to the state.

So far as any one then knew, he was duly decapitated, his death being properly recorded in the register provided for the purpose. Investigation has, however, elicited the interesting fact that the ex-hairdresser was very much alive in Russia in the year 1814, and to complicate matters the Paris register showed his second death certificate under the year 1820. The question naturally arises, just how did Leonard manage to evade the penalty that every one had no doubt he had suffered? A great many guesses have been ventured, and the following explanation, offered by one puzzled historian, seems of all of them the most reasonable:

One day while a group of condemned were awaiting their turn for execution the guillotine broke down and had to be repaired. A number of victims had been executed; ten or a dozen were obliged to stand waiting until the repairs had been accomplished.

It appears that one individual, the twentieth on the list, whose hands were, as was the custom, bound behind him, grew faint at the delay. He leaned against the line of officers that separated the prisoners from the mob of spectators. Suddenly a gap opened behind the man. Almost unconsciously he slipped through, and the line closed once more. A bystander reached over and placed a hat on the man's bare head, and the people crowded about as if to hide him. A short time thereafter a man with his hands behind him was seen in the Champs Elysees, walking with the air of one out for a quiet stroll. This man was said to have spent the next night in a ditch and to have made his way to Russia subsequently. If this person, saved by a fortunate accident or by collusion, was Leonard the story explains the mystery of the two death certificates.—

Miss Simplicity Dons Her New Frock

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York.

VOILE, white striped with green, navy or black, is the fabric of this attractive, comfortable morning gown. The embroidered collar, cuffs and vestee are white organdie, pearl buttons trimming it. ANNA MAY.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper

By Pictorial Review

A Kimono You Can Make Yourself.

6783

Kimono in cream colored rice crepe figured in dainty design with pink and green flowers. The design may be shortened for a dressing sacque.

It is certainly a matter of vast satisfaction to be able to make one's own summer negligees. Think of the number of leisure robes one can have to change into for hot afternoons when one does not cost more than fifty or seventy-five cents! The long kimono shown here is developed in rice crepe, which comes in excellent patterns and good quality material for ten cents a yard. Two and one-half yard ribbon will do for the binding. The design, though long, can be abbreviated to dressing sacque length. The long one-piece raglan sleeves may be made with or without turn-back cuffs. Medium size requires 5⅝ yards of material.

Seams are very scarce, which adds to the value of this model. The woman who knows anything at all about sewing can make one of these kimonos in a few hours. The sleeve is a raglan effect and is first sewn to the front and back of the kimono as notched. Then close the under-arm and sleeve seams. There are large "O" perforations on the pattern to indicate the center of the front. If it is not desired to finish the lower edge of the robe with ribbon, then turn the hem on small "o" perforations.

If instead of making the full length kimono a short sacque be desired, cut off lower parts of front and back of pattern on crosslines of small "o" perforations before it is laid on the material.

CONSTRUCTION GUIDE 6783

Stitch a band of contrasting material or ribbon along the front edge of the front and on the sleeve as illustrated on the design.

Next, line and sew the collar to the neck edge, notches and center-backs even. Close the cuff seam as notched, then line and sew to lower edge of long sleeve, notches and seams even. If the short sleeve is used instead, finish the lower edge with a band or a ruffle of lace.

The more expensive crepes and washable satins may be used for these negligees and they are very smart.

Pictorial Review Kimono No. 6783. Sizes 32, 36, 40, 44 and 48 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

A WIDOW'S BARGAIN

By ALAN HINSDALE

My sister lived with me on my farm till I was thirty years old. Then she died and left me not only lonesome-like, but I had to take keer o' the house, make the beds, do my own cookin' and wash the dishes. I was mighty ignorant about sich things. I remember one day the Widow Sparks passin'. I ran down to the road, and I said to her, says I:

"Mrs. Sparks, would you mind tellin' me whether it's time to change the sheets on my bed?"

"How long since you changed 'em?"

"Reckon it's about six weeks."

She snickered and said she should think it was time to change 'em. She changed the sheets on her bed once a week.

I stood on one side o' the fence and the widow on the other talkin'. She told me a lot o' things about housekeepin' and cookin' and the like o' that. Then she asked me why I didn't get a woman to do it all for me. I said I didn't know any woman that would like to hire out for the purpose. She larfed and said she meant I ought to have a wife. I said I didn't know any woman that would like to marry me. Then she went on like this:

"There's half a dozen farmers within ten mile that have more darters than they kin use on their farms, and they're a big expense. I know a lot o' girls that would make you a first rate wife, and any and all of 'em have been brought up to do housework and cook."

"Miss Sparks," says I, "would you mind recommendin' me to one o' them girls for a husband?"

"Why, no," says she. "But you don't want to do it in that way. Come round to my house Saturday night, and I'll have a girl there to meet you. If you like her you kin do a job o' courtin' and marry her. If you don't like her I'll try some one else and keep on tryin' till I git one that suits you."

I told her I'd be around, and she went on. Saturday night I put on a biled shirt and my store clothes and went to the widow's. She was got up stunnin' and seemed powerful glad to see me. But she looked kind o' disappointed like.

"I'm mighty sorry, Mr. Shanks," says she, "but I haven't got a girl for you. I engaged one to come; jist the girl to suit you, I reckon, but at the last minute she sent me word her mother was tuk sick and she couldn't leave her."

"All right, Miss Sparks," says I. "Try it ag'in next Saturday night."

I was goin' away when she axed me to come in and rest myself. I allowed I would for a few minutes and went inside. Lord, what difference there was between her house and mine! We went into the livin' room, and everything there was spick and span—little white curtains to the winders, a fine rag carpet on the floor and logs burnin' bright in the fireplace. The widder give me the big rocker, and when I got sot down in it, warmin' my shins before the fire, I felt comfortabler than I ever felt in my life. The widder took a cheer on the other side o' the fireplace, and she sot off the room like a sparklin' stone in a gold ring. She axed me all about what crops I got in, how my stock was doin' and everything like that to make me feel at home. I axed her how many chickens she'd raised durin' the summer and how many dozen eggs she'd sold.

Waal, it was all so comfortable and homelike and the widder took so much o' the lonesomeness out o' me that it was powerful late before I thort o' goin'. I wouldn't a-knowed how late it was if I hadn't heard a clock in the kitchen strike 9. I got up, sayin' I wouldn't have time to git home before bedtime, and was goin' right off, when the widder axed me if I wouldn't like to see her kitchin. I allowed I would, and she tuk me in it. The pots and pans was a-hangin' all over, and you could a-seen your face in any one on 'em. She opened a cupboard, and there was a plate o' doughnuts, fresh made, lookin' right at me.

The widder took 'em out and put 'em on the table; then she poured out a couple o' glasses o' cider from a stone demijohn and we sat down by the table and had supper.

When we'd shoveled in a couple o' dozen doughnuts and drunk a gallon o' cider we went back into the livin' room. There was a sofy in the corner, and the widder allowed we'd better pull it up before the fire and give the doughnuts and cider time to settle before I went home. So we did, and when I'd set myself down the widder sat so close to me that you couldn't put a cushion between us. I never felt so contented before in my life. There didn't seem to be room enough for my arm, and I rested it on the back o' the sofy. But it wasn't comfortable there, and I let it fall till it struck the widder's waist. I thought she'd get mad, but she didn't.

Waal, to make a long story short, before I went home I tole the widder that she needn't have a girl to meet me next Saturday night; I'd ruther have her for courtin' purposes. But I didn't wait till Saturday. I went round the next night—Sunday—and durin' the settin we fixed it up that I was to shet up my house and live in hern. The minister made it all right, and I moved the last o' my furniture. It wasn't more'n five minutes' walk to her house, and there was parts o' the two farms that jined.

Trust a widder to make a bargain. She keeps the house tidy, but I have to do all the plowin' and the harvestin' on her farm, besides tendin' to her stock.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

While it is reminiscent of the Norfolk jacket, this design introduces new lines and is very effective in heavy Japanese silk. The belt and collar of checked cloth are attractive features, as are the button-over-the-belt pockets. The skirt is a plain model, full hanging and short. Medium size requires 6 yards 40-inch silk, with 3-4 yard cloth.

Pictorial Review Jacket No. 6657, sizes, 34 to 44 inches bust; price, 15 cents. Skirt No. 6614, sizes, 16 to 20 years; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

ANCIENT WAR WEAPONS.

The Battleax, the Halberd and the Armor Smashing Mace.

Probably nobody ever enjoyed being killed in battle. But there is certainly a choice as to how the job could be done. If you had to pass out, how much nicer it would be to have a high class swordsman turn the trick! He'd go to work so courteously and do such a neat, genteel job that you couldn't help feeling you had died in good society. But nothing of the sort about being killed with an ax. This would be one of the most untidy ends a man could meet.

The big hatchet, however, and its various descendants were long favorites for taking people apart, and even at the time that everything which could cut was made of flint it was in popular demand.

Later on we find the real battleax the favorite weapon of the Celts and the Scandinavians.

The halberd was the next step (up or down, as one looks at those things). This was a combination of ax and spear; a broad blade backed with a hook and tipped with a spear point, all mounted on a six foot haft. Humane chap who got it up! It was invented to give a single man on foot a chance against one on horseback. And it did. If you missed your jab you could still take a healthy swing with the ax or pull him off his horse with the hook. A whole regiment with spears might hold off a cavalry charge, but in individual contests the soldier with the halberd stood the better chance.

The ax was especially favored by the Swiss, and they did so nicely with it that it spread and became the principal weapon of central Europe for nearly 200 years. One English variation, the bill, had more of a sickle shaped blade; but, like the other, it was effective. After one big blow you had a case for the coroner, not the ambulance.

Other cheerful products of those days was the mace. This was a club of iron or steel, blossoming out at the business end into projecting ridges of metal. The operator grasped it with both hands, gave it a whirl and then smashed his opponent. Armor was useless; it crushed right through.

Philip II. of France had a royal bodyguard of sergeants-at-arms, who carried maces—real ones. King Richard I. took up the idea, but after awhile the good, stout old weapon lost its punch, so to speak. It got to be only a symbol of authority, a pretty ornament at fancy ceremonies. The house of commons in London has one dating back to 1649. It has the royal crown on top and is lugged around from time to time to show the king is boss.

It occasionally happens that a member of our own congress gets obstreperous and won't behave when the speaker talks nicely to him. Then the latter gives the order, and the sergeant-at-arms comes down the aisle, carrying the big silver mace. This means that Uncle Sam has stood all he plans to stand and that the row must stop at once.—St. Louis Post.

DEAD HORSE SURE DECOY FOR SHARKS

West Indian Tells How to Kill the Man Eaters.

SUCCESS IN CARIBBEAN SEA

Carcass Anchored Off Shore Would Attract Them, and Men In Boats Could Easily Harpoon Them—Sea Monsters Cowards and Never Attack Unless They Have Advantage.

James Glasco, a native of St. Croix Danish West Indies, told of a plan he believes will clear the New Jersey bathing resorts of any sharks that may be cruising off the coast. It is a plan adopted in the Caribbean sea and in those waters never fails.

Mr. Glasco spent many years shark fishing before he became a resident of the United States and is familiar with the habits of these undersea monsters. He thinks that undoubtedly the fish which killed several men off the Jersey coast was a shark and that it or a number still lurk in the same vicinity.

"If the authorities will take the carcass of a horse and anchor it from a half a mile to a mile off shore," said Mr. Glasco, "I will be greatly surprised if they do not get a chance to harpoon every shark within five miles. They won't have to wait long. Several boats should lie close should be used.

Feed on Carrion.

"Man eating and other sharks feed on carrion and the longer the horse has been dead the greater will be the attraction. My experience is that any shark cruising in the vicinity will detect the horse in a few hours. He will attack it viciously and may be easily harpooned. More than one boat should stand by for the reason that when a shark is hit he becomes blind with anger and is likely to dash into any one of the boats. He will strike with his triangular dorsal fin with enough force to crush or upset the boat."

Mr. Glasco said that sharks of the white, or man eating, variety usually travel in twos or threes, and that they might remain along the coast the entire summer unless caught. They keep close together, so if there is more than one the fact can be readily ascertained.

Sharks Are Cowards.

"It is most unusual for a shark to go in so close to the beach," he said. "As a rule, they fear they will get sand in their gills. Once sand reaches the gills breathing is difficult. Moreover, strange as it may seem, sharks are cowards. A man jumping from a boat will scare a man eater off, but he will lurk around waiting his chance. They like to strike when they are sure they can take their victim unawares."

According to Mr. Glasco, the pound nets off the coast near Spring Lake probably have attracted the sharks which he considers strayed north from the gulf stream into unfamiliar feeding grounds. Each morning these circular nets are filled with food fish and he thinks it likely that the man eaters, crazed by the sight of food they could not reach, became ravenous enough to go inshore for human flesh.

Crew Gives to Red Cross.

The officers and crew of the German undersea liner, the Deutschland, decided unanimously and enthusiastically to turn over to the German Red Cross the $10,000 check which has been donated to them by August Heckscher of New York in recognition of their pluck in bringing the submarine across the ocean.

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE
Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans
FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

FOR SALE
Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.
Ready for Prompt Delivery
Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

Happy Hour Theatre
TODAY—
"THE TEST OF CHIVALRY"
3 Reels.
"THE CONDEMNATION"
2 Reels.
One Comedy. SIX REEL SHOW FOR 5c
TOMORROW—
"City of Failing Light," 4 Reels
AND TWO OTHERS. 5 Cents

QUIRK THEATRE
Continuous 2 to 10:30
Feature Motion Pictures.
ALL SEATS 5—CENTS—5. NO HIGHER
TODAY—
Theda Bara in
"THE ETERNAL SAPHO"
5-Part Fox Feature
WEDNESDAY—
Julia Dean in
"THE RANSOM,"
5-part Equitable Feature.
3d Chapter of "The Secret of the Submarine."
THURSDAY—
Frank Sheridan in
"THE STRUGGLE"
5-part Equitable Feature.

HOW TO CONQUER HEAT.

One way to take the hot weather is to stew, fret, fan yourself and force your neighbor into company with your misery by asking him, "Is it hot enough for you?" Another way is to take it as an adventure. To be prepared for meeting the heat you should drink no liquor, eat moderately and reduce your clothing to—or, if your courage is great, below—the minimum prescribed by custom, advises the Waterbury (Conn.) Democrat.

The adventure itself is to prove yourself superior to the heat. Man, the master, can live in both hot and cold climates. His progress is marked by ever increasing fear of things outside of himself and ever increasing dominion over matter. His being—spiritual and eternal, most people call it nowadays—cowers no more. Look upon the sun and its warmth—pretty well tempered to us—as the friend and not the tormentor of humanity.

This establishment of a friendly relation with the source of heat waves helps some. But it is not enough. There is left the necessity for calling upon your inner strength to meet the heat and prepare yourself the better in the encounter. You may not win. But you will be calmer and more self respecting and "feel better" if you attempt the mastery than if you sink down at the first approach of heat and wait for its blows.

He Had the Proof.

A London writer was asked to write an article on superstition and imbecility. When the article was printed the opening sentence was found to be as follows:

"That imbecility is not on the wane perusal of the following lines will amply demonstrate."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

VATICAN HAS SHIP

For First Time Since 1870 Papal Flag Flies Over Steamer.

TO CONVEY REPRESENTATIVES

Painted With White and Yellow Stripes—Safety Said to Be Guaranteed—Reported Von Buelow Believed Best Way to Punish Italy Was to Restore Temporal Power to Pope.

Rome.—For the first time since 1870 the Papal flag is flying over a steamer owned by the Vatican, and strangely enough, it is sheltered in the Civita Vecchia harbor with the consent of the government at Rome. When United Italy under Victor Emmanuel II. established the house of Savoy at Rome in 1870, the pope was deprived of all power and position as a sovereign. He became a voluntary prisoner in the Vatican, while the king housed his court in the former papal palace of the Quirinal. As every king has been a devoted Catholic, the enmity between the king and pope has been a political expediency, a fiction in fact. Loyalty to the Catholic church on the part of influential members of the Italian cabinet, combined with the fear of German submarines, has brought to the pope the privilege of flying his own flag once more in Italian waters. The steamer has been bought by the Vatican to convey officials of the Catholic church whom the pope desires to send abroad as his representatives. The first voyage will be to South America, to convey the new papal nuncio, Mgr. Bassallo di Torregrossa, to Buenos Aires.

Photo by American Press Association.
POPE BENEDICT XV.

The steamer, to be known as the Nuncius, is painted with broad white and yellow stripes easily distinguished by submarines. Its safety is guaranteed, it is understood, by one of those secret agreements with Germany of which the papacy has been accused at various times by the quadruple entente. There would appear, however, to be no necessity for such a guarantee after the German government had been informed that such a vessel was on the high seas. Nothing would be gained by its destruction through a submarine. On the other hand, to grant it safety, even without this being requested by the papacy, would warm the hearts of Emperor William's Catholic subjects and stimulate their loyalty to him.

Prince von Buelow, a diplomatic envoy at the Vatican in his younger years, long before he was German ambassador at Rome, has always been friendly to the papal government. It is reported in London and has been for eight or nine months that Buelow believes in the restoration of temporal power to the pope as the best method of punishing Italy for participating in the war against her former allies of the triple alliance. While making extended visits to Switzerland Buelow has had frequent consultations with Catholic cardinals and other dignitaries of the church.

The pope's refusal to align himself on the side of the quadruple entente and especially to make public any protest against the invasion of Catholic Belgium by the Germans is declared in England to be due to a promise made by the sovereigns of the central empires that his temporal authority is to be restored after the war. The plan is, according to these reports, to make the pope the political as well as the spiritual sovereign in Palestine. A small state would be established, including Jerusalem and the other holy places as well as the seaport of Jaffa. The territory is believed to be enormously rich in natural resources and to be able to support a cardinal viceroy, who would rule there in the name of the pope.

The British government a few months after the beginning of the war made the extraordinary move of sending a minister to the Vatican, Sir Henry Howard, who had had a long diplomatic experience. This was a recognition of the pope's status as a sovereign, which Britain, along with all other non-Catholic governments, withdrew from the pope in 1870. Russia at the same time reopened her legation at the Vatican, where there had been no envoy for some time on account of the refusal of Russia to grant Catholics the protection which the papacy demanded. France has had no representative at the Vatican for some time, and neutral Catholic countries like Spain had also broken off diplomatic relations with the pope before the war.

GIRL HANGS TO ROOF OF AUTO BY HER NECK CHAIN

Father, Who Was Driving, Finds Her Unconscious and Effects Her Release.

Waverly, Kan.—Miss Dorothea Roberts, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. M. B. Roberts of Waverly, met with a very unusual and peculiar accident which almost cost her life.

With her father she was riding in their car, the girl in the rear seat, the father in the front seat, driving.

In passing over a culvert at good speed the girl was thrown against the top of the automobile and a strong chain which she wore about her neck caught over one of the bows in the top. There she hung until the father noticed that she failed to answer his remarks. When he looked around he found her unconscious hanging to the top of the automobile.

He stopped immediately and did what he could, but she was unconscious for several hours. Her mouth was full of blood caused from the choking of the chain. She is on the road to recovery.

BEGGAR PRODUCES MISSING ARM; HITS POLICEMAN

Surprised Patrolman Recovers and Puts Husky Fugitive Under Arrest After Fight.

San Francisco.—When is a one round beggar not a one armed beggar? Patrolman John J. Mullin learned the answer when he went to the hospital.

Mullin caught Russell Head, who says he is a waiter, begging alms on Market street, near O'Farrell. One sleeve of the alms seeker's coat was empty, and the arrest caused murmurs of sympathy for the woebegone beggar to well from the lips of passers by. Mullin took Head to a nearby patrol box.

With bewildering prestidigitation Head produced a second solid, substantial arm from under his coat. At the end of the "new" arm was attached a fist which resembled a ham. Before Mullin could recover from his astonishment Head leaned his fist against the former's jaw, and Mullin fell to the pavement.

Head ran away from there, with Mullin in hot pursuit. A brisk battle followed, during which Head seized the patrolman's third finger of the right hand in his mouth and nearly bit it off. Head is now in the city prison, charged with begging and resisting a policeman, and Mullin is in the hospital with a lacerated finger.

The Way of It.

"How are school troubles going?"

"In the usual way—by the board."—Baltimore American.

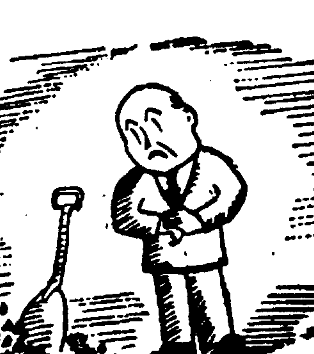
Cats and Witches.

In the middle ages, according to old legends, witches and sorcerers assumed the form of cats. Their mysterious movements and their eyes that glisten in the dark may well have been the cause of this legendary transformation. A German legend tells how a miller's assistant spied a large cat entering his mill. Failing to scare it away, he brought a stick down on its forefoot, and it fled, squeaking horribly. Next day he remarked that his wife had a bruised arm, and it turned out that she was a witch who had taken the form of Grimalkin. The story reminds us of the werewolf in Petronius who suffered in the same way.—Chambers' Journal.

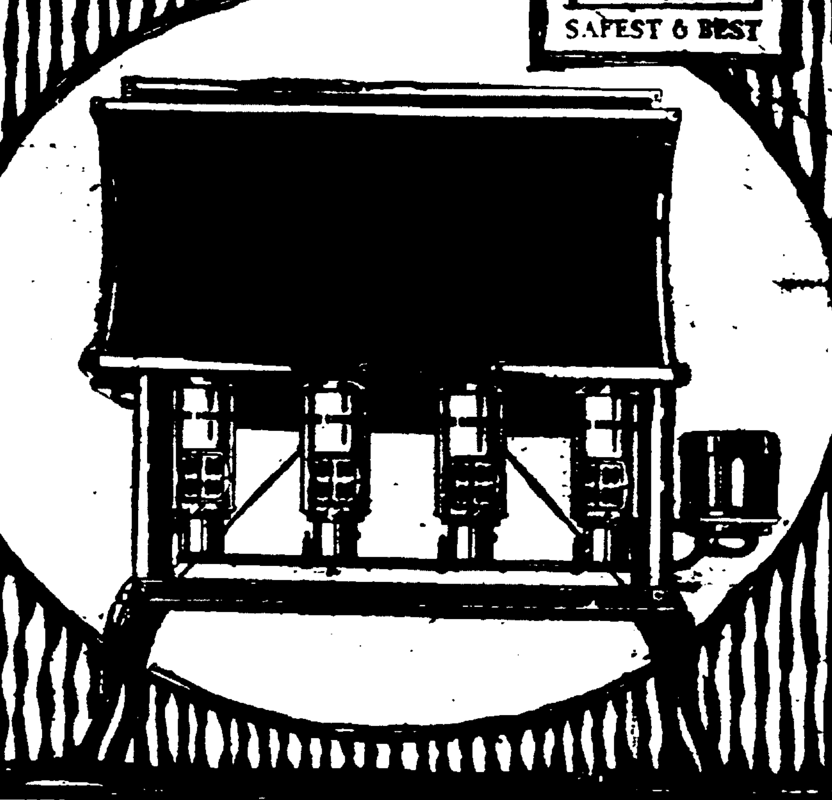
How to Clean Straw Hats.

"To make straw hats look like new," says the Woman's Home Companion, "have your druggist prepare a small quantity of shellac cut with wood alcohol, light colored shellac for light hats, brown shellac for brown or dark colors. For black hats you may add to the brown shellac and alcohol a small quantity of nigrosine. Shake well before using. Apply lightly and evenly with a small brush. It is well to lay the hat aside for a few hours to dry thoroughly, and to allow the odor of alcohol to evaporate. If the mixture is too thick, add a little more alcohol; if too thin, add a little more shellac."

NEW PERFECTION KITCHEN PRIMER
PAGE 4
LESSON 1



The Coal Man Wrings His Hands
See the fat man with the sad face. He is the coal man.
Why is he sad?
He is sad because all his customers are using Socony Kerosene Oil.
And not buying his coal?
No, because it costs less to cook on a New Perfection Oil Cook Stove. It costs only six cents a day to do the cooking for a family of six. Besides, the New Perfection is as quick as gas and doesn't make dirt and ashes.
Look for the long blue chimney—that's what makes the New Perfection efficient and trouble-proof. The 1916 models have the new patented reversible glass reservoir and many other improvements. Sold in 1, 2, 3, and 4-burner sizes (by hardware dealers, furniture and general stores) everywhere.
STANDARD OIL COMPANY OF NEW YORK
Principal Offices
New York Albany
Buffalo Boston
WE SELL SO NY SOCONY KEROSENE OIL STANDARD OIL CO. OF N.Y.
SAFEST & BEST



LOOK FOR THE LONG BLUE CHIMNEY

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

WEDNESDAY, JULY 26, 1916

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY

Not only the men, women and children of Indiana, but of the entire nation and largely of the world paid homage to their friend and beloved poet, James Whitcomb Riley, whose funeral took place yesterday. Of him it may be said truly, what Robert Burns said of himself:

"My muse, though hamely in attire,
May touch the heart."

His sweet, heart-felt poetry touched every heart. It is pleasing to know that his last resting place is where the people of the world may conveniently visit his grave and they will visit it because they love him and he loved them. He has by his sweet simplicity touched all hearts and the universal love that goes out to his memory now, will increase in fervor as the days go by.

Farewell, dear friend!

"I should like to do the right thing if I only knew what it was" Oh, there will be no trouble about that. In the street called Straight, my son, there are lights to show the way.

Do you love and feel tender, and hope and strive? So does the newspaper express in its own different way those things and try to make for better things.

It has been my plan in life to follow my convictions, at whatever personal cost.—James A. Garfield.

A lot of people who criticise others couldn't do half as well themselves, and they know it.

Every one improves a little with acquaintance, and some people a great deal.

Courage is all right, but discretion frequently answers the same purpose.

SELECTED EDITORIALS

New York Tribune:

There have been definitions which would exclude James Whitcomb Riley from the rank of poet, but they may be left to professional upholders of the special view of culture. In warmth of imagination and in lilt of line, as in unquestioned appeal and influence, the author of "The Old Swimmin' Hole" spoke with the voice of a poet, a minor one if you will, but a true singer of the emotions within his range. He deserves the honor which Indiana pays him, and his country is the better for his fine and gentle example.

It is a far cry from the old swimming hole to Spoon River, yet the mind instinctively takes the leap in seeking to establish Riley in his niche of fame. Just why does the rudely built verse of Edgar Lee Masters, another product of the Middle West, offer promise of greater things, an outlook incomparably more stirring, than the pleasing rhymes of Hoosierdom? To descant on Riley's dialect as a handicap is scarcely to the point, for Burns wrote his greatest lyrics in lowland Scotch. As for petty subjects dealt in, the people of Spoon River were type for type the people of the Riley volumes. Swimming holes and sweethearts were equally familiar to both.

The contrast lies in outlook, not in any limitations of time or place. The weakness of Riley was and is a prime weakness of American thought. He wrote not the truth of life but a partial, sweetened version of it, suffused with easy, conventional emotion. Such things as doubt, ugliness and sin not only have scant place in such writing, even by way of artistic contrast; they have no share in the moulding of the goodness which is upheld before us. The cheerful ending in novels and on the stage, the whole school of sentimental action in our magazines, are part of the same national tendency.

It is not a gloomy, pessimistic or decadent art that we need by way of corrective. It is the truth—that alone makes any people free. The fine, noble things that Riley wrote of would have been far finer, far nobler, had they touched life and reality rather than conventionalized tearducts. Whether the tragedies of Spoon River can claim any share of immortality and wherever they are to be ranked, they at least seek to turn our faces in the right direction. Therein lie their strength and prophecy for America.

* * *

The Pittsburgh Dispatch:

All through the central states there seems to be at present an unexpected interest in earth roads, and there is a wide-spread desire to have an authoritative opinion on the field for which such roads are adapted. It is a subject on which many experienced road engineers are not willing to make any statements for fear of being misunderstood or misquoted, but the road engineer of the Illinois State Highway Department has recently made some comments that answer a part of this oft-repeated question as follows: "The earth road cannot by any system of maintenance, be kept up throughout the entire year to the usual standard of the other types. The use of the road in a wet and softened condition is what causes the trouble. Under the conditions where the earth road is a suitable type, its total cost for construction and maintenance is less than that of any other type. In dry weather and when it is not too dusty, the properly constructed and maintained earth road is by far more pleasant and more satisfactory to travel upon than any other road. With neglected maintenance, however, no other type of road can go to pieces and become impassable so quickly as an earth road. Nor, on the other hand, can any other type be brought to a satisfactory condition for travel so quickly and so cheaply after having been impassable. From these peculiar features it will be noted that practically the entire problem with earth roads is their proper drainage and systematic maintenance. The opportunity for bettering our road conditions by properly improving the earth roads is almost beyond our imagination."

HOPES FOR DRAW TO END ALL WAR

New York—Dr. Irving Fisher, professor of political economy at Yale, forsees a world disaster if the present European war ends in a decisive victory for either belligerent. He thinks its most happy conclusion would a draw. Such a view, he believes, crystallized at a world conference of neutrals and presented forcibly to the fighting nations, would materially shorten the duration of the conflict.

Writing in this week's issue of "The Independent," Dr. Fisher says:

"All of us, neutrals and belligerents alike, want this to be the last great war. But the only hope of getting rid of war is to make the people disgusted with war, not only because of its costliness, but because of its vainness as a method of settling disputes.

"If this war 'settles something' so that somebody is satisfied, that somebody will be satisfied with war as an institution. However false this view may be, it will certainly be the view of a large number on the winning side.

"If, on the other hand, the conflict ends in a draw and the people on both sides become convinced that it has accomplished nothing except the destruction of wealth, the accumulation of debt and the slaughter of very flower of the manhood of Europe, then war itself will be regarded as an accursed institution, and there will rise such a popular clamor for safeguards against it that any nation will be willing to make whatever sacrifices are necessary to substitute a better method.

"A decisive victory will leave the question of future wars undecided, whereas a statement, although indecisive in the immediate and military sense, is far more likely to be decisive as against the whole idea of war.

"It is difficult to imagine that Germany can conquer a united world, and it is almost equally difficult to conceive that Germany can be destroyed or even temporarily crushed. If this view be correct, it should be formulated by neutrals in an international conference and presented to the warring nations, so that they can clearly see the only two prospects before them—one a long, infinitely costly struggle, ending in a victory for one side; the other being an earlier cessation of hostilities, with neither side victorious, with millions of valuable lives and wealth saved, with every chance for the formation of some organization to prevent future wars. When this view, if it be the view of neutral nations, is forced upon the belligerents, it is at least conceivable that they will conclude a peace and make it lasting, earlier by many years than would otherwise be the case.

For wire cuts use Hanford's Balsam of Myrrh to stop bleeding and to heal.—Adv.

ALASKA'S COMMERCE DOUBLES IN YEAR

Washington—Alaska's sales to the United States in the fiscal year 1916 aggregated nearly $50,000,000, a sum double the annual average since 1912. In addition to this, Alaska shipped to this country in 1915-'16 gold valued at $16,000,000 and silver to the value of $760,000, both from its own mines.

The feature of the year's trade, according to an analysis made by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce, was the rise of copper to the first place among Alaska's expert staples, supplanting salmon and gold as the leading items. Receipts of copper in ore, matte and regulus from Alaska aggregated 117,000,000 pounds, valued at $26,500,000. This is four times the average for the preceding three years and exceeds the combined imports of that class from Chili, Cuba, Canada and Mexico, the leading foreign sources of this form of copper.

Canned salmon shipped to the United States in the last fiscal year amounted to 216,000,000 pounds, valued at $18,333,000, an increase of 24,000,000 pounds over 1915 and of 40,000,000 over 1914.

The shipment of $16,200,000 worth of Alaskan gold to domestic ports was larger by $1,000,000 than the total for 1915 and by $4,000,000 than that for 1914. Silver shipments, valued at $760,000 in 1916, were $500,000 more than in 1915 and $600,000 more than in 1914.

THE CIRCUS.

The giddiest, gayest, glitterinist, grandest galaxy in all the land is treking this way. It's coming sure and soon.

And if the reader doesn't infer from this that reference is made to a circus then we'll have to make a search through Webster's book for more superlatives to put the case more clearly.

And again, if, when circus is mentioned, one doesn't infer that it's the Al. G. Barnes' circus that's coming, then the said show's agent who was in town yesterday, will regard the case as a hopeless one.

Murray A. Pennock, general contracting agent of the Barnes' circus was here making arrangements for the show's appearance in Fulton, on Saturday, August 5, and while the circus man was head-over-heels in work, arranging for feed and food, license, show grounds, water and the multitude of other things that must be contracted for, for the big show, he still found time to tell about the merit and the new features that are presented this season.

The show has been almost entirely rebuilt this year and this applies to its program, as well as to its cars, cages and wardrobe.

"Also there's been a splendid addition to the case of animal performers, fully two hundred more educated animals are shown this year. Many of these are wild animals and came direct from the jungles. They are now real actors and are grouped and performed in some of the most spectacular and thrilling acts ever shown.

"The wild animal features are not the only new ones, either, for a wondertul array of beautiful and instructive features are introduced in which domestic animals are the star performers. The world's champion dancing horses—sixteen in number, the trapese performing baboons and monkeys—a really wonderful act, and Maj. Thornton's clown pigs, and Miss Sarles' musical carrier pigeons, and——well——

"Say, I almost forgot, I came in to talk space, not new circus stunts, and the circus man let out a huge sigh, and hastily traced his "moniker" along the dotted line of an advertising contract.

MUSICIANS MUST HONOR AMERICA'S ANTHEM

Baltimore—Police have distributed copies of a municipal ordinance providing that "Musicians, performers or other persons shall stand while playing the "Star Spangled Banner." Any person violating the provisions of the ordinance "shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be fined not more than $100."

Distribution was made to all theatres, moving picture halls, restaurants and cafes and to the offices of all musicau unions or branches in Baltimore.

"SCYTHE TREE," FAMOUS IN SIXTIES, DOCTORED

Geneva—Willis Henderson, a tree doctor of this city, has just finished doctoring the famous scythe tree located between this city and Waterloo.

The tree, noted because it contains a scythe imbedded in the crotch of the young tree by a farmer who left for the front during the Civil War and never returned, was struck by lightning some time ago.

According to Mr. Henderson, the tree should live for years to come.

The Bane of Prosperity.

About the time the average family merges into prosperity the older members begin to be troubled with indigestion and constipation. J. W. Spencer, Chittenango, N. Y., writes, "When I get bilious, have headache and feel out of sorts, I take two or three of Chamberlain's Tablets and they fix me up all right."

For sale by all dealers.

RED CREEK MILLS CO. INCORPORATES

Auburn—A certificate of incorporation was filed in the county clerk's office today by the directors of the Red Creek Mills, Incorporated. The purpose of the corporation is stated to be the manufacture of flour, feed and feedstuffs, the buying, selling, handling and grinding of grains and all kinds of cereals; to export and import grain and to carry on a general milling business in Red Creek. The capital stock of the corporation is stated as $35,000 divided ito 350 shares of $100 each. All of the capital stock is paid in and there are three directors. Benjamin W. Mott, Frank Blass and William H. Pelton, all of whom reside in the village of Red Creek.

ADVERTISED LETTERS.

The following leters remain uncalled for at the Post Office July 26, 1916. Inquirers will please say advertised:

Men—Frank L. Doyle, Lloyd S. Martin, Kenneth Mattice, Edwin Morris, W. J. Watson, Guiseppe Commone, Koziano Ludwik.

Women—Miss Helen Cole, Miss C. Johnston, Miss Vernie Van Arsdale, Miss Ida Vincent, Miss Bertha Winke, Mrs. George V. Green, Mrs. Birt. Williams.

Mrs. Morris Finds a Cure for Rheumatism

"I suffered from rheumatism in my knee for over a week last winter," writes Mrs. Frank Morris, Jamesville, N. Y. "It kept me awake at night and the pain was sometimes dreadful. I obtained a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment. After the second application I rested comfortably all night, and by applying it for a few days I was cured."

For sale by all dealers.

Down In Maine

Where the Nights Are Cool

Camp out "miles from civilization" or vocation, in the pine woods, at cottage or hotel. There's "your place" at "your price."

Fishing's fine—so bring your rod and reel. Maine is famous for its beaches. There's every water sport. Coming this year?

Through car service to Boston, the gateway to New England points.

Boston Excursions

At frequent intervals. Limit 15 days. One way fare plus $3.00. Round Trip.

For information about tickets, time of trains and low excursion fares, consult local ticket agents.

NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES

For the Public Service

FOR SALE

I BEAMS, new and second-hand all sizes. Also PULLEYS, second-hand MACHINERY, PIPE and all sizes of IRON PLATES.

Inquire of

I. ALDERMAN

Schuyler Street

Office Phone 2242 Res. Phone 1242

"Onyx" Hosiery

You Get GOOD Value at ANY Price

Emery-Beers Company, Inc.

WHOLESALE 153-161 EAST ... ST. NEW YORK

For Sale by C. A. BECKWITH, Shoes

FULTON, N. Y.

A Skin Like Velvet smooth, clear, free of wrinkles

Use the exquisitely fragrant cream of the beauty flower of India and be complimented on your complexion. Your dealer has Elcaya or will get it.

CRÊME ELCAYA

HEAT WORST ENEMY OF OUR BOYS NOW IN CAMP ON MEXICAN BORDER

Guardsmen Are Being Fed Well; In Fact Some Get Better Food Than They Did at Home—Health of All Is Good.

Little Human Interest Stories About the National Guardsmen—Incidents In Their Daily Life That Interest All.

As Major General Tasker H. Bliss, assistant chief of staff, inspects the camps of regulars and militia, comprising close to 25,000 guardsmen and 6,000 regulars, he finds conditions much better than in the concentration camps at the time of the Spanish war.

Food complaints which flooded the east for the first day or two after the Massachusetts and Pennsylvania troops began arriving were little justified, even though the quartermaster's department was almost swamped in putting adequate supplies in the possession of the rapidly arriving contingents at widely separated camps, while at the same time shipping supplies to Columbus and Hachita, N. M., and numerous camps in the district outside El Paso.

The guardsmen are being well fed, many of them better fed than in civilian life. In quantity, quality and assortment their rations are no different from those of the regular army. In fact, the militia messes are very much more diversified than those of the regulars, for the militiamen are supplying themselves with all manner of delicacies, while many a tent is equipped with a private icebox and a supply of cold bottles.

Except for forty members of a Massachusetts company poisoned by eating tinned sardines, medical officers report little sickness.

Many of the complaints sent east undoubtedly are due in large measure to homesickness, from which, however, most of the militia seems to be recovering.

Prizefights Held.

Three prizefights and a vaudeville entertainment were given one evening by the men of the Seventh Illinois regiment. Color Sergeant Joseph J. Gallagher, who was one of the divers who worked on the Eastland wreck, was the promoter. The bouts were between New Swanson and Eddie Deneke, both of Company L; Rube Larson and Merben Frame, both of I company, and Danny Goodman of the First regiment and Pete Zanders of the Seventh.

Wife Sees Him Cooking.

The heat and smell of cooking at the guard camp were oppressive. Squads of recruits drilled with great determination. In every patch of shade weary men and boys lay stretched face downward. There was something in the air, a half realization of the things that had brought them all there, an uncertainty of the things to come, which was so perceptible that it seemed almost tangible.

Even the jokes seemed to serve only as conventional substitutes for the things that were not talked about. But there in the midst of it all a young soldier and his wife stood and laughed.

She had come to the camp expecting to find him marching or shooting, and she had found him cooking, or trying to. Now, he was a particularly young man. They had been married a very few months, but she had learned that he disliked washing dishes, that he could not and would not cook and that he was particularly averse to peeling potatoes. And so she laughed, a jolly, thoroughgoing little laugh that was full of real enjoyment, although there was a tenderness in it that brought a glad smile to his eyes and made it easy for him to laugh with her.

Bids Another Goodby.

With the departure of the Second Indiana regiment, only the First infantry, the field hospital company and ambulance company No. 2, recently recruited, will remain in camp at Fort Benjamin Harrison.

One officer in the Second and 260 enlisted men were disqualified by physical examination. Second Lieutenant Orval St. Clair of the Spencer company failed to pass the examining board. The board qualified fifty-two officers and 846 enlisted men. One hundred and thirty-four recruits have joined the regiment, which makes the total fifty-two officers and 960 enlisted men.

Colonel Coulter had a bit of patriotic sentiment woven into his camp experiences. An elderly woman, a Mrs. Coleman of Indianapolis, called at his headquarters and expressed a wish to say goodby to him before his departure.

"I bade your three uncles goodby when they started for the Mexican war back in the forties," she said. "It was at Washington, Ind., and I knew them very well. I am seventy-five years old, but I have come out here to say goodby to you before you, too, start for Mexico."

The colonel and Mrs. Coleman sat down for a chat, and their talk drifted to the stirring days when Mexico and the United States last met in battle.

Rumor Factory Active.

The rumor factory is in full blast at Laredo, where St. Louis men are in camp. The regulars are delighted to stuff the militiamen full of alarming reports. Hills are pointed out to the men, and they are told that they are Mexican hills and that French seventy-five centimeter guns are trained from behind them directly on the camp. The camp is worse than Alton for animal stories. A man who spent the night in the guardhouse woke up next to a rattler, the fact that the guard tent was policed by eight guards with bayoneted rifles to the contrary notwithstanding.

There are from 100 to 80,000 Mexicans across the river. Ready believers are found for each story.

The Maine troops at Laredo are equipped with four army type motor trucks. The Second and Third Missouri regiments at Nevada are to be equipped with small motor trucks furnished by their friends. The First Missouri regiment and Battery A, both of St. Louis, are the only troops seen without this modern equipment, and the question is asked, "Why doesn't St. Louis back its soldiers?"

Letter From Illinois Guardsman.

Fifteen minutes is a short time in which to fall in love, but when a troop train pauses in a Texas town and a pretty girl, with the tan of the prairies on her cheeks and a sombrero almost hiding her yellow curls, comes to the car window and—but read what Private Eugene La Pine of Company I, Second Illinois infantry, has to say about it:

10 a. m., Fort Sam Houston, July 7, 1916.

Arrived here last Sunday after a 63 hour ride. Found out this town to be better than Chicago; More places of enjoyment. On our trip girls through bouquet of flowers, flags and all sorts of Soveigners. One young lady from Cameron Texas who struck my facination is to become my wife as soon as my time expires. I have met her on the way to Ft. Sam Houston. Our train stopped at this town for 15 minutes. Have been corresponding with her every day and some times get two letters per day.

Monday went swimming; Uncle Sammy has plenty of showers; In the evening for a pass time we initiated all the rookies such as send him coal for the rifle range and Hanging Clothes on the skirmish line. Most of the boys have not gone to town as the Government have not yet issued all of the clothing. U. S. is particular how he sends his boys to town.

One morning our battalion took a seven mile walk with a full equipment and the boys felt fine on there returnal. Later got lemonade. All the boys are wishing to see real service and send to the border or even in Mexico. They have got accostomed to the climate. In the morning we had inspection of our entire outfit. No boys in our company have made many friends amongst the Civilians. All of the Illinois Infantry are in town. The 8th colored was the last to arrive, who came in one night about 8 o'clock.

On the train coming here our Company yelled a song at each town which was origginated by myself:

Rickawacher! Fire Quaker! Ziff!
Boom! Bah! "Company I."
"Company I!" Rah! Rah! Rah!
Rough, tough; we don't take a bluff.
Always fighting, and can't get enough.

On the trains were printed in large letters:

GET VILLA OR BUST!
COMPANY I THE GO GETTERS

And a long side of it a picture of Villa's head.

PRIVATE EUGENE LA PINE.

P. S.—Corporal Rude has been officially elected washwoman of our squad. He is braking in the rookies to his proffsion.

Private George Kern captured a wild man while on guard. (A wild insect which was crawling beneath his shirt.)

Want to Be Released.

Captain H. Q. Pickert, Troop B, Michigan cavalry, of Detroit said that a number of men had asked for releases. He said that a percentage of the cases were not in the least deserving.

"Many parents are showing the worst patriotism and judgment imaginable," he said. "They do not interest themselves in the moral or physical welfare of their children as long as neither interfere with their own pursuits, but the minute the children are called to the colors they immediately begin everything imaginable to bring about their releases. It is a fine thing for the boys to get this military experience, both physically and morally. They get exactly the same food as we do."

In preparation for service at the Mexican border a number of Michigan guardsmen and officers have been taking lessons in Spanish. Maxwell N. Rosean of Detroit instructs six classes daily.

Mexicans Are Scared.

A young German came across the border from Magdalena, in the state of Sonora, to the camp of the California troops at Nogales. He said that the Mexicans down there were almost in spasms of alarm over the military activity in Nogales. He said one of the Mexican papers came out with an extra edition in which it was stated that the Americans had 40,000 troops mobilized at Nogales and were about to cross into Mexico.

The German said that General Calles had about 20,000 soldiers scattered around through Sonora. Most of them were in relatively small garrisons. They seemed to have enough to eat, but they were carrying guns of every known variety and seemed to be shy on ammunition.

In Nogales one end of the town is Mexican, the other is American. The chief Mexican business street runs at right angles to the Broadway of the American side.

On one side of the street walk the American sentries, hugging the shade of the store buildings. Sentry duty on the Mexican side seems to be a matter of inspiration. Occasionally you see a fat buck riding on a cow pony with a rifle across his saddle pommel. In the middle of the street on the Mexican side is a funny little guardhouse. The sentry usually sits in the open window with his feet dangling outside smoking dobe cigarettes and looking unutterable things at the American. Once in awhile a stray shot gets on the wrong side of the border. Then the Mexican commander gets excited and blames it on the American custom house officers, and they blame it on him, and finally the Mexican commander compromises by blaming it on the American newspapers.

Heroic Treatment Wins.

The prize winning story of how an Ohio guardsman "got by" federal examining officers was told in camp. Tales of men drinking large quantities of water or eating prodigious amounts of food are comparatively common about camp, a number of men having in this way sufficiently amplified their weight to meet requirements, but one day, according to the latest story, a Cincinnati guardsman was a half inch lacking in height and knew it. He knew others had been rejected for no more serious defects and decided not to take the chances.

Out behind a shower bathhouse, according to the story, a stalwart messmate of the guardsman applied a broom handle. In a half hour, when the man was called for examination two well developed bumps on the trooper's cranium got him safely by the man with the measuring apparatus.

Battle With Scorpion.

Colonel Edwin Hunt, who is an Oakland (Cal.) business man when he is not commanding the Fifth California infantry, had a successful engagement with a large scorpion, which he declares was yellow, with pink stripes. The colonel's only proof is his word that he fired a volley of shoes and that the enemy retreated.

Major L. M. Farrell of San Jose also boasts of an experience. When he woke up one morning he found a horned toad enjoying half of his pillow. He exhibits the remains of the toad as proof that he was successful in the ensuing engagement.

Army officers place no credence in the story of the California private whose hand was blown off at midnight and who claimed he was assaulted by some person, presumably a Mexican with a bomb. It is believed he accidentally exploded some dynamite caps and sought to make his injury appear as having been received in the line of duty.

Georgia Men Happy.

Georgia's army taking the field has produced an abundant crop of songs—war songs, comic songs, semi-religious songs, songs that are sweet, songs that are sad. Some are sentimental, some nonsensical. Some are rollicking, others are plaintive. Some are of whole cloth, and some are parodies.

Some you can understand, and some you can't. Some are tuneful, and some resemble chants. Each camp has its refrain, each band its anthem. Troop F, Second squadron cavalry, nightly serenades the auxiliary camp occupied by the cavalry and artillery with a camp meeting aria of mountain origin.

The mountaineers are big, burly specimens of manhood. Their voices are trained to range over hill and vale. It is the possum hunting voice that can be heard over the midnight baying of a group of possum hungry hounds. Troop F gathers each day at sundown in the tent of its comic opera division, Troop X, and sings.

Succumbs From Heat.

The fierce heat has affected several of the Massachusetts men in El Paso, but none of them seriously, except Private Timothy Finn of Company B, Ninth regiment, a former member of the Lynn fire department. He is in the hospital under observation for depressive mania.

Finn was found acting strangely and taken in charge by the medical officers. Later he escaped from the hospital tent and set off for Mexico on the run, pursued by Private Frank J. Green, formerly in Carney hospital, and Sergeant John Murphy of the sanitary troops. The guard was called out to take up the chase. Finn was climbing over the wire fence of the boundary when he was caught. Two Texas rangers rode up at full speed and trained their rifles on the adobe huts in Mexico to guard against snipers while Finn was being subdued.

Troopers Honor Colonel.

Colonel Foreman of an Illinois regiment was the recipient of a mark of appreciation from his troopers. The first sergeants of the troop presented him with a testimonial signed by every soldier of the first section. It read:

"Realizing that we have been given exceptional accommodations on our journey and knowing that it is to you chiefly that we owe the comforts of this trip, we, the enlisted men of the first section of the First Illinois cavalry, desire to express to you, our colonel, our most sincere appreciation of your efforts in our behalf."

Didn't Eat the Chocolate.

Josephus Jackson, the porter in charge of the line officers' car on a New York train, has a powerful respect for "fightin' chocolate." The kind [illegible] eating day after day, [illegible] have told him, is treated [illegible] fight.

Lieutenant George B. [illegible] of Company B offered a piece of the chocolate to Josephus. The porter reached out his hand, then thought of the terrible possibilities should he yield to the influence of the fighting drug and join in the impending engagement at Brownsville.

"No, sah; no, sah!" he cried. "Ah don' want to get mean jes' now."

CHICAGO PAYS HIGH

Mayor Gets $18,000 a Year and Seventy Aldermen $3,000 Each.

NEW YORK IS NEXT IN LINE.

Gotham Allows Its Chief Executive $15,000, Philadelphia $12,000, Boston, St. Louis, Newark, N. J.; Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh $10,000, Indianapolis and Seattle $7,500.

Washington.—Chicago has the highest priced mayor in the country. He gets $18,000 a year and serves four years. New York comes next, with a $15,000 mayor, whose term also lasts four years. Philadelphia, third in the list, gives its mayor $12,000 a year for four years. Boston, St. Louis, Newark, N. J.; Cincinnati, Cleveland and Pittsburgh pay their mayors $10,000 annually, the term being four years in Boston, Pittsburgh and St. Louis, and two years in Cincinnati, Cleveland and Newark.

Indianapolis and Seattle pay their mayors $7,500 a year; San Francisco, Baltimore and Minneapolis $6,000 each; East St. Louis, Louisville, New Bedford, Detroit, Kansas City, Buffalo, Mount Vernon, Rochester, Columbus, Scranton, Providence, San Antonio, Tex., and Richmond pay $5,000 each.

The aldermen, who share with the mayor and certain other officials the responsibility of government in American cities, cost the taxpayers varying sums. Chicago has seventy aldermen, at $3,000 each; Boston, nine, at $1,500 each; St. Louis, twenty-nine, at $1,800 each; Newark, thirty-two, at $500 each; New York, seventy-three, at $2,000 each; Cincinnati, thirty-two, at $1,150 apiece; Cleveland, twenty-six, at $1,200 each; Philadelphia, forty-eight select councilmen and eighty-three common councilmen, all serving without salary; Pittsburgh, nine aldermen, at $6,500 each; Indianapolis, nine, at $[illegible] apiece, and Seattle, nine, at $3,000 apiece.

The only cities that have an upper and a lower house of aldermen or councilmen are Hartford, Conn.; New Britain, Conn.; Atlanta, Louisville, Portland, Me.; Baltimore (thirty-three in all, at $1,000 each); Brockton, Mass.; Cambridge, Mass.; Everett, Mass.; Malden, Mass.; Fitchburg, Mass.; New Bedford, Mass.; Pittsfield, Mass.; Springfield, Mass.; Worcester, Mass.; Kansas City, Mo.; Manchester, N. H.; Buffalo (thirty-six in all, at $1,000 each); Lancaster, Pa.; Philadelphia, Pawtucket, R. I.; Providence, R. I.; Woonsocket, R. I.; Lynchburg, Va.; Norfolk, Va.; Portsmouth, Va.; Richmond, Va., and Roanoke, Va.

The commission form of government, which takes the place of mayors and aldermen, involves a smaller salary outlay. In Washington, D. C., the three commissioners get a total of $15,000; in Denver, $25,000; in San Diego, $12,000; in Topeka, $9,000; in New Orleans, $30,000; in Salem, Mass., $10,000; in St. Paul, $31,500; in Lincoln, Neb., $10,000; in Atlantic City, $15,000; in Bayonne, N. J., $10,000; in Hoboken, $10,000; in Jersey City, $25,000; in Trenton, $15,000, and in Harrisburg, $13,000.

In some of the commission governed cities a mayor is elected as such, while in others he is chosen by the commission. Sometimes he gets an extra allowance as chairman of the commission, but this rarely exceeds $500, and is included in most of the above totals.

While most cities employ assessors to fix the valuation of property for the purposes of taxation, those of some states have no assessors, but report to the county the amount required to be raised for city purposes.

TELLS THE TIME BY HIS FAMILY'S FACES

He Is 1 o'Clock, His Wife Is 2, and Children Go According to Age.

St. Joseph, Mo.—The flight of the hours are marked on the dial of C. W. Humberd's watch by the faces of his ten children and by his own face and the face of his wife. Tiny photographs are set in the dial in place of the Roman numerals. Every time Mr. Humberd—who is a grading contractor here—looks at the time he sees his whole family.

He is 1 o'clock and his wife is 2. The children are arranged in the order of their birth, begining at 3 o'clock with Carl, who is thirty-four, and continuing through Calvin, Albert, Bertha, Glen, George, Eva, Robert, Vernon and little 12 o'clock Edith, who is three and the youngest of the family. The watch was made especially for Mr. Humberd a few years ago and he is so used to it that he can tell the exact time at a glance. He arises at Albert o'clock in the morning, has luncheon at half-past Edith and is usually home by Bertha.

If he refers to the watch a score of times throughout the day he is reminded each time of his loved ones and there is little chance that he will ever forget his family in the rush of business. The idea of putting the family in the watch occurred to him as a sentimental novelty, unlike anything he had ever heard of. His work as a grading contractor carries him out of town frequently, but he reports he is not so lonely as he used to be, since he feels that he can take a glimpse at his youngsters any time he cares to without attracting outside attention.

SHOULD SLOAN'S LINIMENT GO ALONG?

Of course it should! For after a strenuous day when your muscles have been exercised to the limit an application of Sloan's liniment will take the soreness and stiffness away and get you in fine shape for the morrow. You should also use it for a sudden attack of toothache, stiff neck, backache, stings, bites and the many accidents that are incidental to a vacation. "We would as soon leave our baggage as go on a vacation or camp out without Sloan's Liniment." Writes one vacationist: "We use it for everything from cramps to toothache." Put a bottle in your bag, be prepared and have no regrets.

BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

STRANGE ANIMAL FOUND.

Freak Resembles Alligator Crossed With California Product.

A strange freak of nature which some believe to be a young alligator and others say cannot be classified under that head has been captured in Soap lake, near Gilroy, Cal., by Leland B. Holloway.

When handled or otherwise aroused the thing emits a sound which is declared to be a cross between a bark and a grunt. Holloway took the freak to the University of California, where he asked that an attempt be made to classify it. It is thought to be a hybrid originating in a cross between an alligator and some other animal. An old alligator is believed to have been discarded by some passing circus.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts thru the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Cure fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio.

Sold by Druggists, 75c.

Hall's Family Pills for constipation.

BUELL BROS.
PLUMBING AND HEATING
Phone 186
17 N. Second St.

REDUCED FARES
NEW YORK CENTRAL LINES
Alexandria Bay 2.50
(Including Tour of Islands)
Round Trip. Every Wednesday, Saturday, Sunday and Holiday to August 30th. Return limit same day.
Consult local ticket agents for time of trains and other information.

Household Efficiency

Don't fail to hear this valuable discussion on efficient methods of home advancement by

Mrs. Sarah Tyson Rorer

The famous teacher, editor and author of cook books, in her demonstration lecture the fifth afternoon of

Chautauqua Week

Mrs. Rorer is a widely known authority on the many problems of dietetics, appetizing cookery and efficient home management. Your afternoon with her will be one well spent indeed.

Other Notable Events of the Week

Elsie Baker Company — Ben Greet Players
Five Eminent Artists — Dr. Russell H Conwell
Scotch Highland Band — Judge Marcus A. Kavanagh
Dr. Edward Amherst Ott — Cimera's Band and Singer

AND

The Children's Shakespeare Pageant

In Fulton July 31st to August 5th

FIRST NATIONAL BANK

PLEASURE AND PROFIT

PEOPLE WHO BANK THEIR MONEY WITH US REGULARLY FIND IT A PLEASURE AND PROFIT.

WE CORDIALLY INVITE YOU TO COME IN AND START AN ACCOUNT WITH US.

4% PAID IN OUR INTEREST DEPARTMENT

PI-LES-NO FOR PILES

THE HOME TREATMENT

A Simple, Soothing, Absorbent Remedy for Piles and all Rectal Diseases

¶ If you have Itching, Bleeding, Blind or Protruding Piles, don't suffer! Don't be discouraged because other treatments have failed to cure you. Send at once for the most wonderful Remedy Pi-les-no. Druggists do not handle. Agents do not sell.

¶ We prefer to sell direct to every sufferer of this distressing disease.

¶ We will cure you of Piles or give you back your money.

¶ Sold by mail in two sizes, 25c and $1.00.

¶ If your case is of long standing, order the $1.00 size tube, with the rectal tip attachment. If you have the first attack of Piles in a mild form the 25c size will give you quick relief. PI-LES-NO has cured thousands—it will cure you.

Stop Worry! Stop Pain! Send Now!

"If you have Piles, you haven't PI-LES-NO"

PI-LES-NO CO. FULTON N.Y.

CHAUTAUQUA'S JUNIOR LEADER

Miss Helen Murphy, the children's supervisor, will arrive here Saturday. She asks that all the children of the age of 6 to 14 inclusive meet her at the Park Saturday evening at seven o'clock. Let all come whether they have tickets or not.

Miss Murphy will meet the children every morning during Chautauqua week at 8:45 for play, stories and drill in the Peace Pageant which will be presented the last afternoon. The Redpath Chautauqua provides seventy-five beautiful costumes for this pageant, and you may feel sure that it is one of the most enjoyable entertainments of the week.

The children will be taken care of by Miss Murphy in the afternoons after the musical prelude. Those who do not wish to remain for the lecture may go with her for an hour of play and stories.

Parents, do not neglect to give the children this opportunity for a week's pure fun and excellent training. Let them meet Miss Murphy Saturday evening when she will explain the work and the plans for the week.

MR. CALKINS' GAS BIKE SAVED FROM INJURY

Contractor Verner Calkins is happy today, because of the outcome of a slight fire which he discovered on a portion of the motorwheel on which he rides around the city's streets.

He left the machine at a curb, to visit a downtown store and when he returned to the sidewalk he noticed a small flame near the gasoline tank. Bystanders aided him in putting out the blaze before it reached the gasoline storage tank, thus preventing an explosion.

THE QUIRK TODAY.

Julia Dean, the star of "The Ransom" which is on the Equitable Program at the Quirk Theatre today has to play a dual role, in each part of which her wonderful dramatic ability finds full scope and free expression. At first she is a young and rather willful wife, led astray by the glamor of the stage, and later she is the aged and repentant mother, intent on saving her own daughter, who is also on the stage, from the wiles of the same manager who had wrecked her own life. She accomplishes this in a thrilling manner, and after seeing her child safe in the arms of the man she loves, pays the ransom of her daughter's happiness with her own life, the relationship being unknown to the daughter at whose feet she falls dead in the theatre. The pictures of stage life thrown on the screen are a wonderful relevation and convey a striking lesson to those who see only the shiny side of the business.

The 3rd chapter of "The Secret of the Submarine" will also be shown and the admission is only five cents.

When your horse is galled, apply Hanford's Balsam and you can keep on working. Try it and if your horse is not cured quicker than by any other remedy, the dealer will refund your money.—Adv.

CITY TO ASK FOR DOUBLE TRACKS

While the Syracuse, Lake Shore and Northern railroad is laying double tracks in the city of Oswego, this city wants to know why it too cannot have double tracks instead of the single ones authorized by Justice Andrews last Saturday.

As a result representatives of the city of Fulton will appear before Justice Andrews in Syracuse, in special term next Saturday and ask an order permitting the double tracking of East First street. This double tracking will cost about $32,000 as compared with $18,000 which it was planned to spend on the single tracks.

After Saturday affairs of the line will be quiet for some time as Justice Andrews is going away on his vacation and will not return until September 1. No maters relating to the Empire United receiverships will be settled until that time.

NO MORE PARALYSIS FEARED IN THIS CITY

Dr. A. L. Hall, Health Officer, today denied the reported possibility of infantile paralysis spreading in this city. He says that every proper material precaution has been taken to prevent an epidemic, and that Fulton enjoys less danger than many of the other cities in this section of the state. He denies the report that the one fatality was the result of importing from New York an Angora kiten into the home where the death occurred, adding that no cat has been brought here from that point.

JOSEPH McCAFFREY GOES TO NORTH CAROLINA

Mr. Joseph McCaffrey left today for Asheville, N. C., to take a position as forest engineer for a large lumber company. He was recently graduated from the Forest Ranger School at Lake Wannekenna, and will be at the head of the logging engineering crew at Asheville.

AUTO OWNERRS FAILED TO BE INTERESTED

The automobile club run, to have been made today, was postponed indefinitely. The reason for so doing was that interest by the auto owners was not displayed and that few of them were able to make the trip.

For poisoned wounds use Hanford's Balsam.—Adv.

Local and Personal

Mr. George Kendricks has arrived in the city from Messena.

* * *

The vestry of All Saints' Church has invited the Fulton Symphony Orchestra to use the new Parish House for rehearsals.

* * *

The contract for paving East First street has been awarded the Pathfinder Contracting Co.

* * *

Miss Greta Lewis and Miss Mae Burke were the guests of friends at Edward's Falls, yesterday.

* * *

Miss Lillias Waugh and Miss Evelyn Howard are spending the week with friends in Syracuse.

* * *

Mrs. Mattie Barker, who has been spending the past month in the country, has returned to her home on Rochester street.

Boys, Look Out For Green Apples

Lester Wolroth had a very severe attack of cholera morbus brought on by eating green apples. His mother, Mrs. Pearl Wolroth, Herkimer, N. Y., says, "I was advised to give him Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which I did, and the relief from the first was very great. After taking three doses he was all right."

For sale by all dealers.

27,480 BOOKS IN CIRCULATION

Librarian's Report Shows Increased Interest in Books of Substantial Nature---Juvenile Books Lead Demand.

Miss Frances V. Forsyth, librarian, makes public the annual report of the Carnegie Public Library, and in conjunction therewith is the report of W. A. Butss, treasurer.

Miss Forsyth's report follows:

We have added 346 books, 62 of which were gifts. We have withdrawn 126 worn out books, making the net increase 220. The total number of books now is 8,183, of which 6,979 are adult, and 1,204 are juvenile. As most of the books withdrawn are juvenile the net increase in that department is necessarily small.

The circulation of books for the past year was: from the children's room 10,382; from the adult, 17,098, total 27,480. There has been a decided increase in the number of classed books issued; about one sixth of the total circulation being non-fiction books.

We have sent to the bindery 39 volumes of magazines for binding, and 151 books for rebinding. About 100 books are repaired and cleaned at the library every week.

Seventy-eight magazines, newspapers and pamphlets are regularly received. Of that number 34 are gifts. Beside being used in the reading rooms the magazines circulate the same as books, and the fact that more than 2,000 were loaned last year shows that they are appreciated and enjoyed. Our records show that 8,410 people used the reading and reference rooms, and 587 reference books were used.

The Assembly Hall has been rented 71 times for various purposes. We have received from that source $104.50, and from the Library Tea held in March, $60.76, making our receints from the hall $165.26.

We are glad to express here our appreciation of the many gifts we have received. Among them are—62 books, magazines, a small table, curtains for the Assembly Hall dressing room, flowers and money; for all of which we are very grateful.

Our thanks are also due to all those who helped to make the School Carnival such a splendid success, financially, and as an entertainment. The efforts of the committee, the teachers and scholars certainly merit the sincere appreciation of all who are interested in the welfare of the library.

The library was extremely fortunate in securing Miss Iuclie Stanley, last September, to succeed Miss Hayes as assistant librarian. Her work has been exceptionally good, and I am glad to report that she will remain another year. Mr. House continues as janitor.

I here wish to extend to them, and to the Board of Trustees, for their splendid assistance and co-operation, my very grateful thanks.

The report of the treasurer is as follows:

Receipts.
Appropriation from city...	$1,500 00
School entertainment	193 87
Fines	139 03
Gifts	2 00
Non-resident fees	1 25
Use of Assembly Hall	165 26
Other sources	44 72
State Dept. of Education..	100 00
	$2,146 13

Disbursements
Books	$295 67
Serials	77 75
Binding and repairs	42 54
Librarian and assistant ...	748 74
Janitor	202 00
Freight, express and post.	11 62
Fuel	274 68
Light	123 92
Printing	28 75
Repairs	47 66
Insurance	112 50
Overdraft 1915	115 38
Cash on hand	7 25
	$2,146 13

FORMER DOG CATCHER FINED BY CITY JUDGE

Former city dog catcher Reese was brought from Syracuse yesterday by a local patrolman. Mr. Reese was wanted on a charge of petit larceny. It is alleged that during his activities as city dog catcher, he misappropriated funds and has been wanted by the local police for several weeks.

A clue was found as to his whereabouts and yesterday he was landed. He was arranged in city court this morning before acting City Judge Rice and fined $23.

BAR MEMBERS OF TWO COUNTIES TO PICNIC

The Oswego and Jefferson County Bar Associations will hold a joint picnic at Mexico Point tomorrow. The trip will be made by automobile and every member of the profession is expected to be present.

The reason for having this annual occurrence, is to promote good fellowship and stronger fraternalism among the members of the bench and bar—to the betterment of those attending, and to the detriment of those remaining at home. There will be no courts held that will interfere and all references will be adjourned. There will be a five inning ball game, swimming races, fat man's race, three legged race, a tub race on the water and some fishing, after which a good dinner will be served, the price of which will not exceed two dollars.

The program states that "his highness the umpes", who officiates with the pebbles at the ball game will be worth seeing. Probably one of the funnest stunts which has been scheduled by the committee is the "Greased Pole Walk, over the water. It is a pole stretched from the lake shore out over the water. The pole is greased liberally and on one end of which will hang a valuable prize. It will be worth the trip to compete for this.

EARLY MORNING CHURCHWEDDING

Mr. Frank E. Hare and Miss Grace F. Miller were married at the Church of the Immaculate Conception this morning at 6:45 o'clock, by the Rev. Father Lindsman.

The witnesses of the ceremony were the immediate relatives of the bride and groom, and the attendants, Mr. Harold Andrews and Miss Bertha Miller, Mrs. Hare's younger sister.

The bride wore a pretty blue traveling suit and the groom appeared in a conventional business suit. Immediately following the wedding ceremony a breakfast was served at the home of the bride, after which Mr. and Mrs. Hare left the city by train for the Adirondacks where they will spend a brief honeymoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Hare are both graduates of the Fulton High school. They have hosts of social and business friends in the city, all of whom have been showering congratulations upon them ever since the day on which the engagement was announced.

Mr. Hare is a member of the staff attached to the local office of the Fulton Light, Heat and Power Company, and is also a member of the city's leading social and fraternal organizations.

About the Town

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Fairman have returned from one week's auto trip through Jefferson and St. Lawrence counties.

* * *

Mr. H. Putnam Allen will attend a meeting of the Board of Managers of the Oswego County Tuberculosis Hospital, at Cleveland, tomorrow.

* * *

Letter carriers attached to the local post office are invited to participate in the Oswego preparedness parade August 12.

* * *

District No. 30, will meet this evening at eight o'clock, with Mrs. Frank Cramer, 508 Oak street.

* * *

George Nichols, of North Sixth street, and George Lewis of New York, who is visiting relatives in this city, are spending a few days at Cleveland on Oneida lake.

* * *

Mrs. Margaret Atterbury and Earl and Hattie Nichols, of North Sixth street, left the city today on a long auto trip, which will include New York, Atlantic City and mountain resorts in New England.

* * *

The third troop of the Fulton Boy Scouts of the State Street M. E. Church will leave August 7 for Panther lake for two weeks' camp. Rev. H. D. Holmes and A. Lefeva, assistant scout master of the troop, will accompany the boys.

* * *

Mr. Leland H. Dann is ill at his home in West First street.

* * *

The W. C. T. U. picnic will be held Saturday afternoon at Pathfinder Island. Dinner will be served at 6 p. m., under the supervision of Mrs. Alonzo Holmes.

* * *

A victrola lawn social will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Delos Rowlee at Mount Pleasant Friday evening, July 28. Ice cream will be served and music enjoyed.

* * *

The Peacock trail hitters will hold a meeting at the Rowlee Schoolhouse on Sunday at 3:30 o'clock.

* * *

Chief Dyer, is attending the State Convention of police chieftains, in session at Kingston.

* * *

Mrs. Jeanette Smith and Miss Carrie Brunnett entertained friends from Watertown on Tuesday.

* * *

A party of young people including Thomas McCollum, Parker Van Buren and Miss Mayme Pare spent yesterday at Long Branch. Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Van Buren chaperoned the party.

* * *

A marriage license was issued to Jesse Taylor and Ethel May Allen this morning.

* * *

Mr. J. B. Beckwith, of Syracuse, was the guest of his brother, Clay A. Beckwith, yesterday.

* * *

Mr. J. C. O'Brien and family are enjoying the social life at Old Forge.

* * *

The Red Men's baseball team will play at Adams Saturday. The trip will be made by autos. The team will play at Oswego, Sunday.

* * *

Tomorrow afternoon the Parish of All Saints' Church will hold a social session in the Guild room of the Parish House. Light refreshments will be served.

* * *

Mr. Asa Rowlee of Detroit, Mich., is the guest of his relatives in this city.

Soreness removed by Hanford's Balsam.—Adv.

SPLIT BETWEEN LEADERS WIDENS

And Little Hope Remains for Its Closing In Time for Progressive's Second Convention.

With the Progressive state organization shattered as a result of the developments at the stormy session in Syracuse Saturday the Bull Moose leaders are now trying to save the pieces. Everything indicates that from now on the two Progressive factions will travel widely divergent routes.

The insurgent element which was successful at the meeting—to the extent that they managed to prevent an indorsement of Hughes is making preparations for a second Progressive convention in Chicago, August 5, according to reports filtering back this way. This day is the fourth anniversary of the party's birth.

A conference of all the Progressive leaders from all parts of the country is scheduled for some eastern city, some day the latter part of this week. The date and place have not yet been definitely decided upon. At this meeting an inventory will be taken of the insurgent Progressive strength and plans laid definitely for the proposed convention.

There is little likelihood that the convention will put a third ticket in the field by providing some substitute candidate in the place of Colonel Roosevelt. John M. Parker, the vice-presidential nominee is still in the race although strong pressure is being brought to bear upon him to have him withdraw his name.

Bainbridge Colby, who led the anti-Hughes forces in their battle against the Perkins regime last Saturday has been most pronounced in his opposition to the proposal for the Progressive indorsement of the Republican nominee. Colby is looked upon as the probable leader in any concerted action of nation wide scope that may be decided upon by the anti-Perkins element in the party. He has told his friends that he regards a third ticket utterly impracticable. In Democratic circles there is a joyful expectation that the insurgent Progressives may be induced to throw their solid support to President Wilson.

One Progressive leader said that while at first the Chicago conference had been suggested largely for sentimental reasons and with a view of giving the party launched amid such a burst of public fervor four years ago decent burial on the anniversary of its birth, the latter day developments had wrought a change in the situation and vested the prospective Bull Moose gathering at Chicago with much more importance. This leader held a Wilson indorsement by the Progressive insurgents when they meet not at all improbable and added that assurances had been given from Democratic leaders throughout the country that Progressives turning to Wilson would have no reason to reject their action.

The way to test this newspaper's strength is by inserting an ad in the Miscellaneous Want Column. See rates on fifth page.

Notice! Special Sale!

on

HAMMOCKS
ICE CREAM FREEZERS
REFRIGERATORS
and
PORCH SHADES

WILL BE SOLD AT SACRIFICE

People's Hardware, Inc.

ISOLATION NEEDED TO CURB SPREAD OF PARALYSIS, SAYS NOTED DOCTOR

No Reason For Panic, Dr. Simon Flexner of Rockefeller Institute Asserts.

"Susceptibility to Plague Lower Than In Measles and Scarlet Fever."

THE address of Dr. Simon Flexner, director of laboratories of the Rockefeller Institute For Medical Research, on "The Nature, Manner of Conveyance and Means of Prevention of Infantile Paralysis," before the New York Academy of Medicine follows in part:

"The Rockefeller Institute For Medical Research has been appealed to by so many physicians and laymen for information and advice on the subject of infantile paralysis that it has seemed desirable to relate the facts of present knowledge concerning certain highly pertinent aspects of the disease, together with deductions of practical importance derived from them.

"Infantile paralysis is an infectious and communicable disease which is caused by the invasion of the central nervous organs—the spinal cord and brain—of a minute, filterable micro-organism which has now been secured in an artificial culture and as such is distinctly visible under the higher powers of the microscope.

"The virus of infantile paralysis, as the micro-organism causing it is termed, exists constantly in the central nervous organs and upon the mucous membrane of the nose and throat and of the intestines in persons suffering from the disease; it occurs less frequently in the other internal organs, and it has not been detected in the general circulating blood of patients.

"Although the micro-organism of infantile paralysis is now known, the difficulties attending its artificial cultivation and identification under the microscope are such as to make futile the employment of ordinary bacteriological tests for its detection. Nevertheless the virus can be detected by inoculation tests upon monkeys, which animals develop a disease corresponding to infantile paralysis in human beings."

Dr. Flexner concluded with these practical deductions and applications:

"First.—The chief mode of demonstrated conveyance of the virus is through the agency of human beings. Whether still other modes of dissemination exist is unknown. According to our present knowledge, the virus leaves the body in the secretions of the nose and throat and in the discharge from the intestines. The conveyers of the virus include persons ill of infantile paralysis in any of its several forms and irrespective of whether they are paralyzed or not and such healthy persons who may have become contaminated by attendance on or association with the ill. How numerous the latter class may be is unknown.

"Second.—The chief means by which the secretions of the nose and throat are disseminated is through the act of kissing, coughing or sneezing; hence during the prevalence of an epidemic of infantile paralysis care should be exercised to restrict the distribution as far as possible through these common means. Habits of self denial, care and cleanliness and consideration for the public welfare can be made to go very far in limiting the dangers from these sources.

Fingers Soon Contaminated.

"Moreover, since the disease attacks by preference young children and infants, in whom the secretions from the nose and mouth are wiped away by mother or nurse, the fingers of these persons readily become contaminated. Through attentions on other children or the preparation of food which may be contaminated, the virus may thus be conveyed from the sick to the healthy.

"Third.—Flies also often collect about nose and mouth of patients ill of infantile paralysis and feed on the secretions, and they even gain access to the discharges from the intestines in homes unprotected by screens. This fact relates to the domestic fly, which, becoming grossly contaminated with the virus, may deposit it on the nose and mouth of healthy persons or upon food or eating utensils. To what extent the biting stable fly is to be incriminated as a carrier of infection is doubtful, but we already know enough to wish to exclude from the sick, and hence from menacing the well, all objectionable household insects.

Must Not Expose Food.

"Food exposed to sale may become contaminated by flies or from fingers which have been in contact with secretions containing the virus; hence food should not be exposed in shops and no person in attendance upon a case of infantile paralysis should be permitted to handle food for sale to the general public.

"Fourth.—Protection to the public can be best secured through the discovery and isolation of those ill of the disease and the sanitary control of those persons who have associated with the sick and whose business calls them away from home. Both these conditions can be secured without too great interference with the comforts and the rights of individuals.

"In the first place, where homes are not suited to the care of the ill so that other children in the same or adjacent families are exposed the parent should consent to removal to hospital in the interest of the sick child itself as well as in the interest of other children. But this removal or care must include not only the frankly paralyzed cases, but also the other forms of the disease.

"In the event of doubtful diagnosis the aid of the laboratory is to be sought, since even in the mildest cases changes will be detected in the cerebrospinal fluid removed by lumbar puncture. If the effort is to be made to control the disease by isolation and segregation of the ill, then these means must be made as inclusive as possible. It is obvious that in certain homes isolation can be carried out as effectively as in hospitals.

"In the end the early detection and isolation of the cases of infantile paralysis in all of its forms, with the attendant control of the households from which they come, will have to be relied upon as the chief measure of staying the progress of the epidemic.

"Fifth.—The degree of susceptibility of children and other members of the community to infantile paralysis is relatively small and is definitely lower than to such communicable diseases as measles, scarlet fever and diphtheria. This fact in itself constitutes a measure of control, and while it does not justify the abatement of any practicable means which may be employed to limit and suppress the epidemic, it should tend to prevent a state of over-anxiety and panic from taking hold of the community.

Death Percentage Varies.

"Sixth.—A percentage of persons, children particularly, die during the acute stage of the disease. This percentage varies from five in certain severe epidemics to twenty in others. The average death rate of many epidemics has been below 10 per cent. A reported high death rate may not be actual, but only apparent, since in every instance the death will be recorded, while many cases which recover may not be reported at all to the authorities. In the present instance it is too early in the course of the epidemic to calculate the death rate, which may prove to be considerably lower than it now seems to be.

"Seventh.—Of those who survive a part make complete recoveries, in which no crippling whatever remains. This number is greater than is usually supposed, because it includes not only the relatively large number of slight or abortive cases, but also a considerable number of cases in which more or less of paralysis was present at one time. The disappearance of the paralysis may be rapid or gradual—may be complete in a few days or may require several weeks or months.

"The remainder, and unfortunately not a small number, suffer some degree of permanent crippling. But even in this class the extent to which recovery from the paralysis may occur is very great. In many instances the residue of paralysis may be so small as not seriously to hamper the life activities of the individual; in others in whom it is greater it may be relieved or minimized by suitable orthopedic treatment.

No Ground For Early Despair.

"But what it is imperative to keep in mind is that the recovery of paralyzed parts and the restoration of lost muscular power and function is a process which extends over a long period of time—that is, over months and even years. So that even a severely paralyzed child who has made little recovery of function by the time the acute stage of the disease is over may go on gaining for weeks, months and even years until in the end he has regained a large part of his losses.

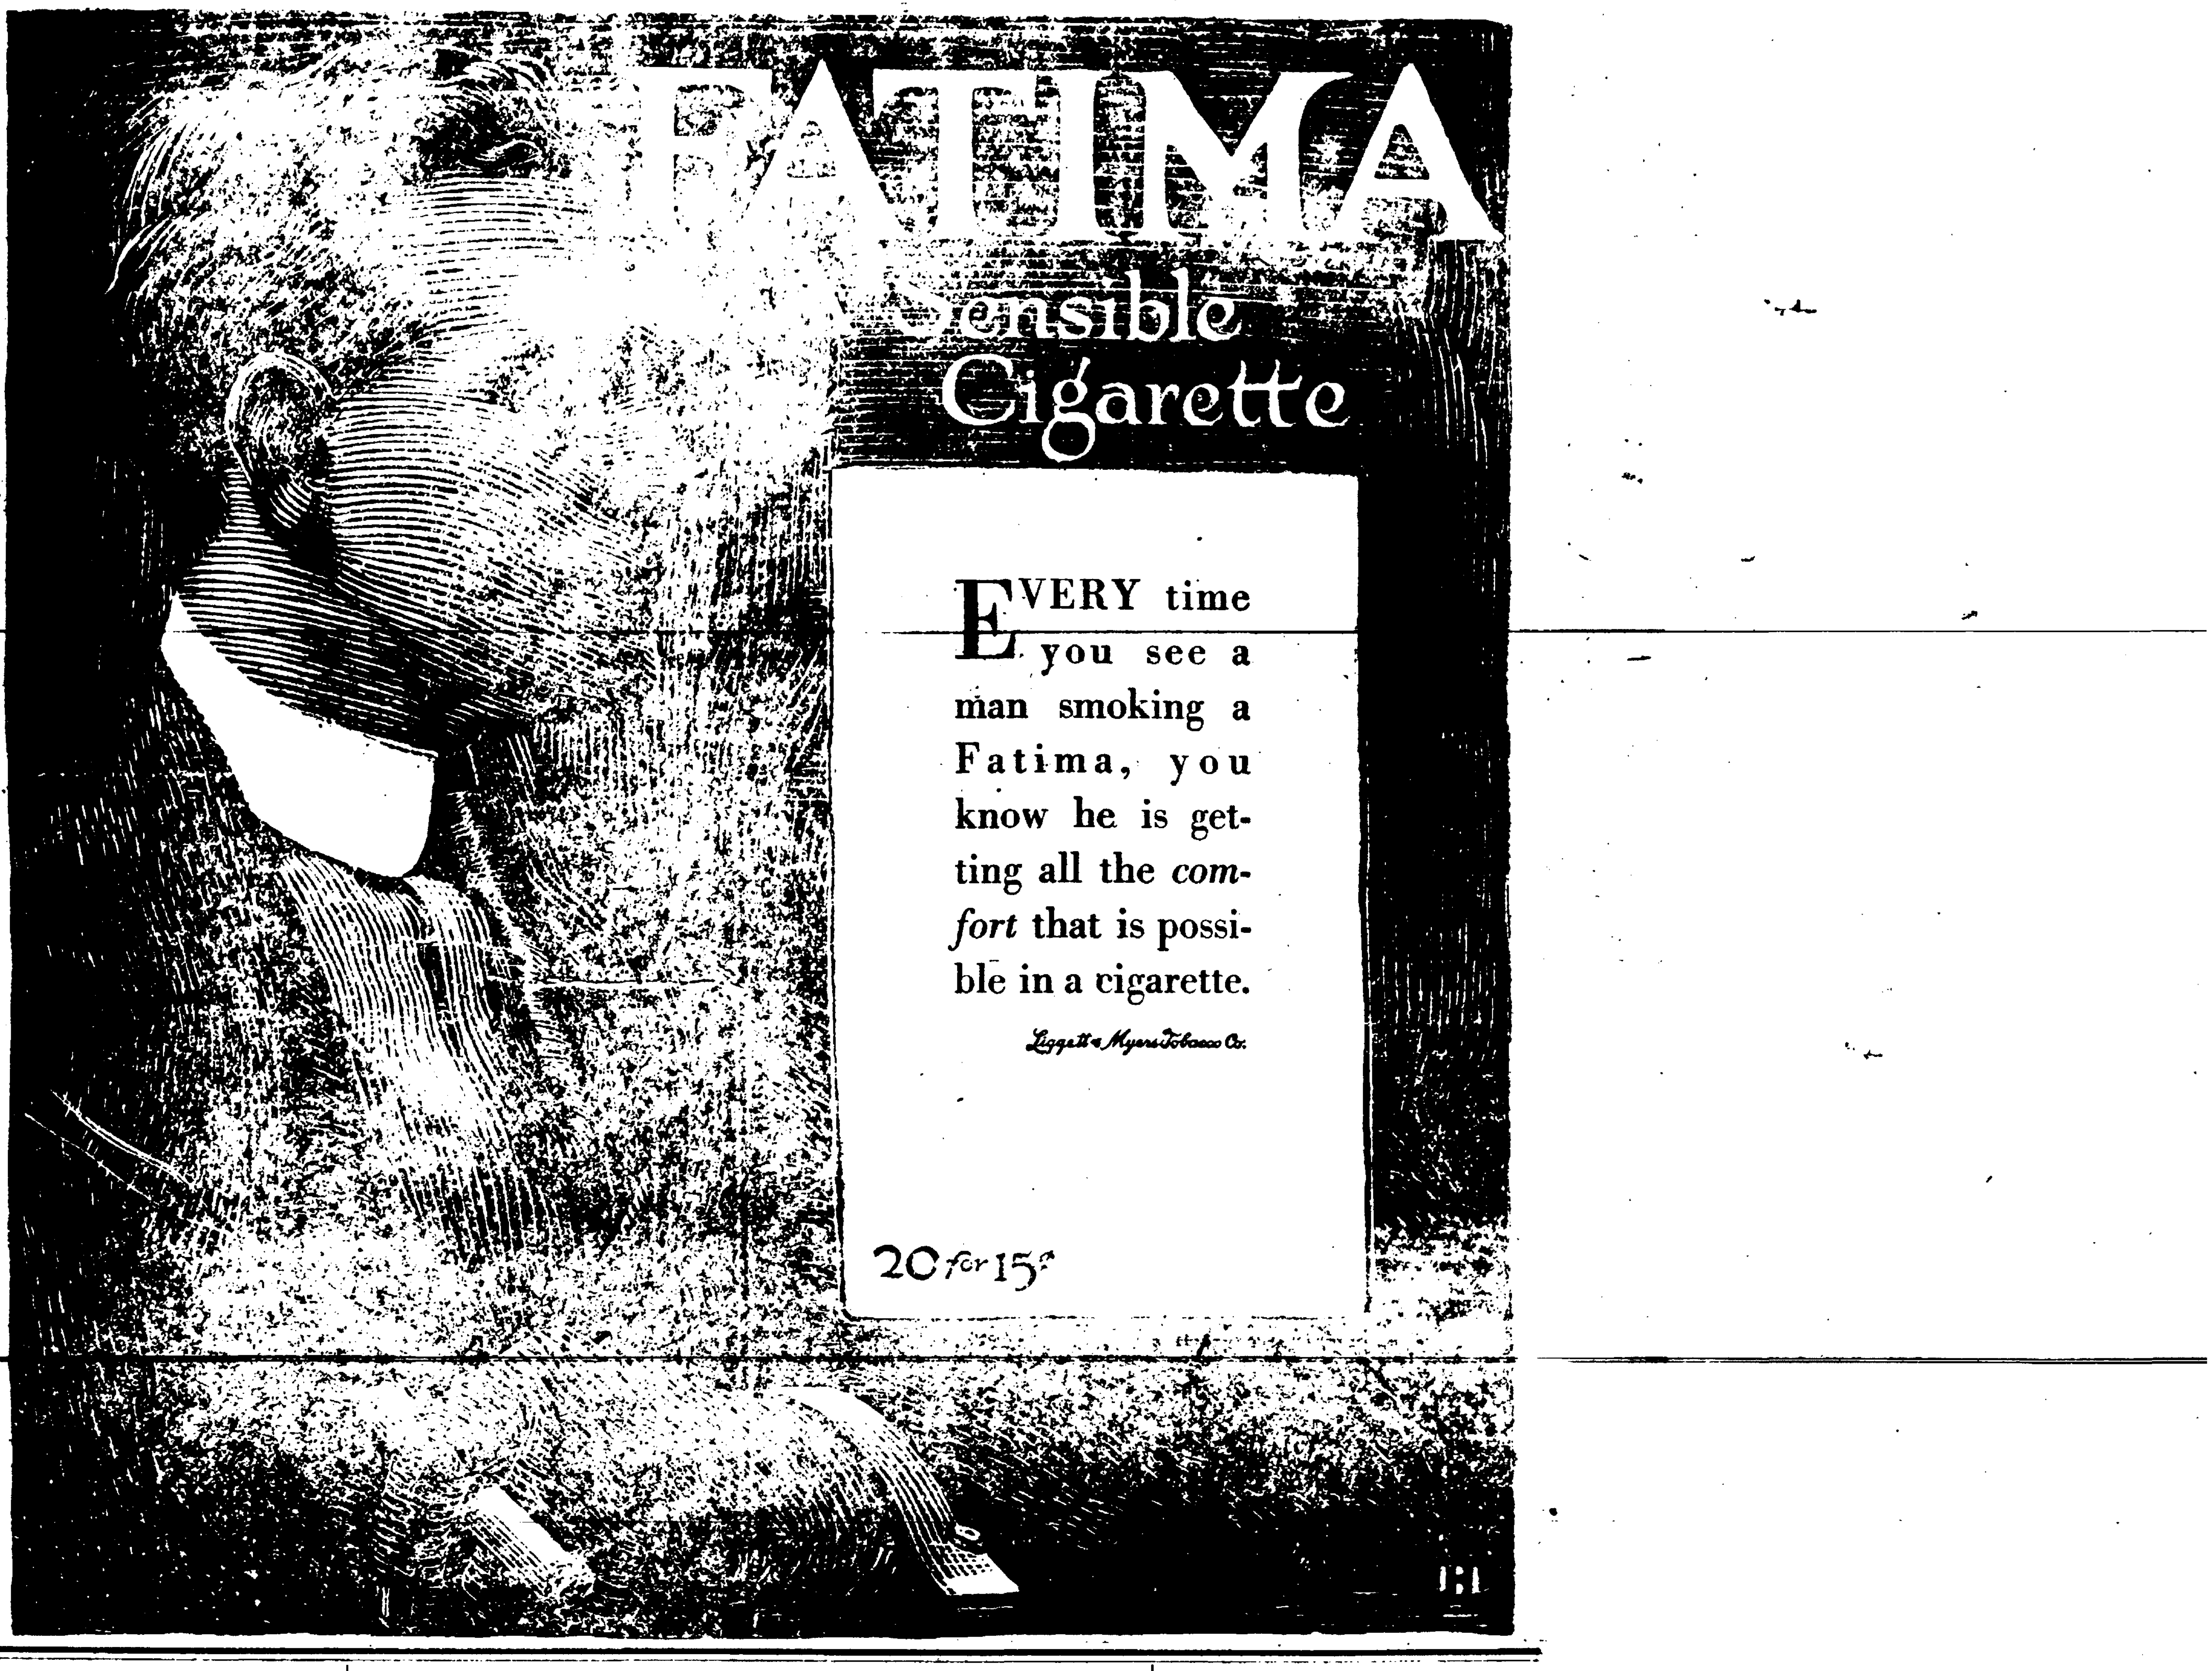
"Fortunately only a very small number of the attacked are left severely and helplessly crippled. There exists at present no safe method of preventive inoculation or vaccination and no practicable method of specific treatment. The prevention of the disease must be accomplished through general sanitary means. Recovery from the disease is a spontaneous process which can be greatly assisted by proper medical and surgical care. Infantile paralysis is an infectious disease, due to a definite and specific micro-organism or virus. Recovery is accomplished by a process of immunization which takes place during the acute period of the disease.

"The tendency of the disease is toward recovery, and it is chiefly or only because the paralysis in some instances involves those portions of the brain and spinal cord which control respiration or breathing and the heart's action that death results."

Hint of a probable cure for paralysis was given by Dr. S. J. Meltzer of the Rockefeller institute. Experiments made upon monkeys, he stated, had shown encouraging results when intraspinal injections of adrenaline were given.

"On the basis of experiments made by Dr. Loori and myself," said Dr. Meltzer, "the treatment of all cases of infantile paralysis by intra-spinal injections of adrenalin is advocated.

"Clinical experiments at Rockefeller institute, made by Dr. Clark and myself upon monkeys artificially infected with infantile paralysis, have yielded encouraging results. At this time, however, that is as much as can be stated."



GOULD'S WOULD CONTROL D. & R. G.

(By United Press)

New York—Control of the Denver and Rio Grande railroad and its outlet lines to the Pacific Southwest, by the Jay Gould estate, may be clinched at a conference in George J. Gould's office here today.

This meeting is the result of a young war between railroad magnates, over the control and development of the Missouri Pacific System and the D. & R. G. System, the ownership of the lines and their subsidiaries being sadly mixed up between the two groups.

The Jay Gould estate owns a controlling interest in the Texas and Pacific and International and Great Northern railroads. These two roads really are tap lines into the middle south territory for the Missouri Pacific railroad, but the group of bankers controlling the Missouri Pacific cannot use them as such because the Gould estate controls them.

On the other hand, the bankers controlling the Missouri Pacific also controls the Western Pacific, a tap-line into South-Western and Pacific Coast territory for the Denver and Rio Grande, and they won't let the Gould controlled D. & R. G. develop south-westward. The Missouri Pacific owners also hold a big block of D. & R. G. stock.

The Missouri Pacific control has been trying to freeze the Goulds out of the D. & R. G., so the D. & R. G. and the Missouri Pacific could be merged and the Pacific coast territory tapped.

The new plan, given favorable consideration at a preliminary meeting at Gould's office here a couple of weeks ago and to be definitely settled some way or another today, is to have the Gould estate give the Missouri Pacific its interest in the Texas and Pacific and International and Great Northern so the Missouri Pacific can develop in the middle-south, while the Goulds are to receive in exchange the Missouri Pacific's interest in the Western Pacific and D. & R. G., so the D. & R. G. can tap the southwest territory.

Compensations of Success.

Nipp—Would you rather be born great or acquire greatness?

Tuck — I'd rather acquire it. The man who is born great misses all the pleasure of telling how he did it.—Town Topics.

YOUNG MEN FORM A NEW SWIMMING CLUB

Swimming races, for long and short distances; is the objective desired by the members of the Fulton Swimming Club, recently formed, and to attain proficiency in the art of swimming the young men comprising the club are giving over a lot of time each evening, at the foot of Rochester street, for practice.

In the event that interest is maintained by the members of the club in the sport, challenges may be issued to lovers of aquatic sports in other cities to come here for contests. The present members of the club include Thomas McCollum, Parker VanBuren, Bernard Jones, Thomas Farrel, George Washburn, John Ward and William Cullen.

HOTEL ARRIVALS

The following are the hotel arrivals at the Clark House:

A. E. Whitcomb, Rochester, N. Y.; R. Boomer Sworts, Dundee, N. Y.; Clarence E. Hewitt, Geneva, N. Y.! W. L. Morse, Syracuse, N. Y.; G. R. Willis, Auburn, N. Y.; John Farley, Rochester, N. Y.; W. H. Rowland, Buffalo, N. Y.; R. W. Purdy, Syracuse, N. Y.; S. Scott Borlow, Syracuse, N. Y.; W. F. Lakin, Albany, N. Y.

WILL BE A GOOD GAME.

The Modern Woodmen ball team of this city will cross bats with the Maccabees team Saturday. This will make the second game of the series. The first having been won by the Woodmen. Keen interest is displayed in both organizatios and the game is sure to be exciting.

SCHWAB TO OPERATE ORE-CARRYING FLEET

South Bethlehem, Pa.—Charles M. Schwab placed an order today for five ocean ore-carrying vessels with his new subsidiary concern, the Maryland shipbuilding plant. These vessels will be used in the transportation of iron ore from the company's large properties in Chili and Cuba. The larger ships will carry 17,000 tons of cargo and the smaller 11,300 tons.

The vessels will fly the American flag and will be operated by the Ore Steamship Corporation, a subsidiary of the Bethlehem Steel Company, thus making the parent concern to a large extent independent of the fluctuations in steamship rates for ore.

It is believed that eventually Mr. Schwab will become the owner of one of the biggest fleets of vessels in the country.

YESTERDAY'S RECORDS OF HEAT IN CITIES

Fulton was one of the warm cities yesterday, the thermometer hovering close to the 100 degree mark, but as the sun sank beyond the West Side, a temperate breeze sprang up and a grateful city breathed relief.

Following is a list of cities where the thermometer showed varying degrees of heat and coolness:

Albany, ther., 74; wind S; cloudy.
Alpena, ther., 72; wind, NW; cloudy.
Atlantic City, ther., 72; wind S; rain.
Beaver Island, ther., – ; wind.
Boston, ther., 72; wind, 18m S; cloudy.
Buffalo, ther., 78; wind, 12m SW; cloudy.
Charleston, ther., 82; wind, 10m SW; p clear.
Chicago, ther., 78; wind, W; clear.
Cleveland, ther., 74; wind, S; cloudy
Denver, ther., 64; wind S; clear.
Detroit, ther., 78; wind NE; cloudy.
Duluth, ther., 58; wind, 10m N; cloudy.
Eastport, ther., 56; wind, S; foggy.
Erie, ther., 78; wind, S; p cloudy.
Escanaba, ther., 66; wind, NE; clear.
Galveston, ther., 80; wind, 14m; rain.
Grand Haven, ther., ; wind.
Green Bay, ther., 66; wind, N; clear.
Harbor Beach, ther, wind.
Hatteras, ther., 80; wind, 16m, SW; clear.
H avre, ther., 59; wind, W; clear.
Houghton, ther., 64; wind, 12m W; clear.
Kansas City, ther., 80; wind, N; cloudy.
Louisville, ther., 80; wind, N; clear.
Ludington, ther., 72; wind, NE; clear.
Marquette, ther., 64; wind, W; clear
Middle Island, ther., wind, 10m NW; clear.
Milwaukee, ther., 76 wind, 10m NE; clear.
Montreal, ther., 80; wind, S; p cloudy.
New Orleans, ther., 74; wind, SW; clear.
New York, ther., 74; wind, S; cloudy.
Oklahoma, ther., 78; wind, SE; clear.
Portland, O., ther., 54; wind, N; clear.
Rapid City, ther., 69; wind, W; p cloudy.
Rochester, ther., 78; wind, SW; clear.
Roswell, ther., 66; wind, E; clear.
St. Louis, ther., 80; wind, W; clear.
San Francisco, ther., 54; wind, SW; clear.
Saugeen, ther., 76; wind, SE; clear.
Sault St. Marie, ther., 62; wind, E; clear.
Tampa, ther., 80; wind, SE; clear.
Toledo, ther., 76; wind N; p cloudy.
Toronto, ther., 78; wind NE; clear.
Williston, ther., 58; wind E; cloudy.

FOR SALE

Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.

Ready for Prompt Delivery

Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

KAPLAN'S EXPRESS
Baggage, Trucking and Freight Handled Promptly, Ashes Drawn
Household Goods Moved
Prompt Deliveries Terms Reasonable
All kinds of second hand goods bought and sold
Phones Residence 1568, Business 4246
38 S. Second St., Fulton, N. Y.

INSURANCE — REAL ESTATE

Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading, 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Wanted—Good men to work in erecting room. Dilts Machine Works, Inc. 487

For Rent—Two double rooms, furnished, at 33 South Second street. Inquire of Robert Frazier. 1tp

Wanted Boarders—Desirable rooms, good board, price reasonable. 420 Seneca street. Mrs. Lamb. 484

Wanted—Girls at 551 W. Third St. Phone 175. 486

Keep Hanford's Balsam in your stable.—Adv.

Bowel Complaint in Children.

Mrs. Margaret Perry, Utica, N. Y., says, "When my son, now grown, was four years old he had a dreadful attack of bloody dysentery, and was so sick that the doctors gave him up to die. A neighbor who knew what a wonderful medicine Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is advised me to give it to him. It is a great medicine and can certainly be relied upon in cases of bowel trouble."

For sale by all dealers.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

A Stunning White Serge Coat.

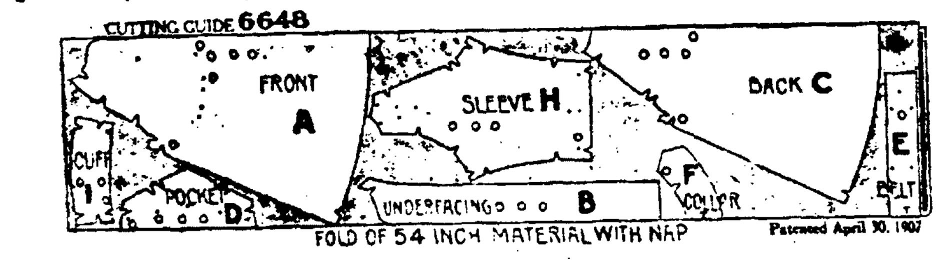
Since the wardrobe of the summer girl is not complete without a dressy topcoat why not adopt this attractive model in white serge trimmed with black moire?

A coat of white serge made without a lining and trimmed with a bit of black moire about the waist and neck is a very smart outer garment for young ladies of fashion. The model pictured today has one-piece raglan sleeves, made with turn-back cuffs. The front of the coat closes to the neck, though the fronts may be turned back to form revers. The belt is slipped through the underarm seam and lapped at the front. Wing pockets are added to the front decoration of the coat, but these may be tucked inward, if desired.

In medium size the coat requires 3¼ yards 54-inch serge, with ¾ yard silk for the trimming. Although the importance of studying the guide has been frequently emphasized, there are home dressmakers who overlook this step in their anxiety to finish a garment and, unless they have had wide experience in sewing, the result rerely fails to prove disastrous. But little time is required to study the guide carefully. Note how the cuff and pocket are placed into position first, each on a lengthwise thread of the goods, with the underfacing next. The collar and belt, in fact, are the only sections of the pattern that are laid on a lengthwise fold of the material.

The front, sleeve and back are placed on a lengthwise thread of the serge. If a shorter length coat is desired, cut off the lower edge of the front, back and underfacing the desired amount. The belt may be shortened by cutting off the front edge along the two small "o" perforations.

Worn over a sheer summer frock this coat adds chic to the toilette and supplies the element of comfort necessary on chilly afternoons or evenings.



Pictorial Review Coat No. 6648. Sizes 14 to 20 years. Price 15 cents.

The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE"

The largest and most costly steamer on any inland water of the world. Sleeping accommodations for 1500 passengers.

"CITY OF ERIE" —— 3 Magnificent Steamers —— "CITY OF BUFFALO"

BETWEEN

BUFFALO—Daily, May 1st to Nov. 15th—CLEVELAND

Leave Buffalo . . 9:00 P. M. Leave Cleveland . . 9:00 P. M.
Arrive Cleveland . . 7:30 A. M. Arrive Buffalo . . 7:30 A. M.
(Eastern Standard Time)

Connections at Cleveland for Cedar Point, Put-in-Bay, Toledo, Detroit and all points West and Southwest. Railroad tickets reading between Buffalo and Cleveland are good for transportation on our steamers. Ask your ticket agent for tickets via C. & B. Line.

Beautifully colored sectional puzzle chart, showing both exterior and interior of The Great Ship "SEEANDBEE" sent on receipt of five cents to cover postage and mailing. Also ask for our 24-page pictorial and descriptive booklet free.

THE CLEVELAND & BUFFALO TRANSIT CO., Cleveland, Ohio

Take a Cruise on the GREAT LAKES

Get away from the monotony of the office, factory or farm.

Take a Real Vacation—full of pleasant surprises—of unique features,—of wondrous sights.

Between Detroit, Mich., Sarnia, Ont., Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Port Arthur, Ont. Fort William, Ont. and Duluth, Minn.

Features of These Cruises

Complete Cruise $40

Everything Included, (6 day trip)

Also Georgian Bay one way 4 day trips—Between Collingwood and Sault Ste. Marie. Also 30,000 Island one way trip between Parry Sound and Penetang.

Good connections with through rail lines east and west at Detroit, Mich., Sarnia, Ont., Fort William, Ont., Port Arthur, Ont., and Duluth, Minn.

Write for folders and information—Ask any ticket agent. Make your reservations NOW in advance.

Northern Navigation Co., Ltd.
Sarnia, Ontario

SECRETS OF SPACE

What Might Be Revealed if Nature Lifted the Veil.

WONDERS OF THE INVISIBLE.

Evidence That What We Call the Universe Is Only a Part of a Far Grander and Perhaps Infinite System of Suns and Worlds and Planets.

Men of science have found reasons for believing that there may be, far off in infinite space, other material systems besides the one visible to us. We seem to be able with modern telescopes to reach the boundaries or farthest limits of the stellar system to which our sun belongs.

It is found that with increase of distance the relative number of stars decreases until, in most directions at least, a point is reached beyond which virtually no more stars can be seen. Then, too, it has been found that the stellar system has a fairly definite shape—a fact which in itself implies boundaries. The shape is that of a vast spiral, with curving arms surrounding a central agglomeration. If you will imagine floating in the middle of the room where you sit a roughly globular swarm of bright particles, distributed with a fair degree of uniformity as to distance from one another, and then outside of the swarm surrounding it, but separated from it by a space which is nearly but not quite empty, an irregular spiral ring of similar shining particles, you will have before you a picture of one of the latest astronomical conceptions of the form of the visible universe.

The central swarm will represent the assemblage of stars of which our sun is a modest member, while the enveloping spiral will represent the immense system of the Milky way, whose stars are vastly more numerous than those composing the globular swarm. The stars of the Milky way are the most distant members of the entire system, which appears to be shut in all around by black space. Viewed from afar off in the ebon depths of that space, this universe of ours would resemble a phosphorescent jellyfish, with faintly sparkling tentacles, afloat in the sea of immensity.

This being so, the question naturally arises, May there not be, or must there not be, an indefinite number of other such systems scattered through the limitless expanse of space? That question would forever remain a matter of pure conjecture if we did not have certain very suggestive facts which seem to indicate that it ought to be answered in the affirmative.

The facts of which I speak are objects of visual observation. But that does not necessarily make them parts of the "visible universe," because they appear to be unconnected with it and to lie beyond its boundaries.

These objects are known as spiral nebulae. The photographs that have been made of them in the past few years are simply amazing. The forms of many are surprisingly like that which has been described above as characterizing the stellar system. They have central agglomerations with enveloping spirals. They have knots of light which recall the globular clusters of stars found in the visible universe, but they are so distant that no separate stars can be detected in them.

They look like masses of more or less condensed glowing gas, but the spectroscope shows that the light coming from them is not that which is characteristic of gaseous nebulae, but that which belongs to true stars. The influence is that these wonderful objects may actually be other universes lying out in the ocean of space beyond our shores.

This inference is strengthened by what we know of the distance of some of these objects. The utmost diameter of the great spiral of the Milky way probably does not exceed from 4,000 to 6,000 "parsecs," or from 800 to 1,200 million times the earth's distance from the sun. A parsec, which corresponds to a parallax of one second of arc, equals about 19,000,000,000,000 (nineteen trillion) miles. But some of the spiral nebulae appear to be at least 10,000 parsecs distant.

If that is so there exists between them and the outer frontiers of the visible universe a gap far broader than the entire diameter of that universe. It can hardly be supposed, then, that they are outlying parts of or attendants upon our universe, but it is much more reasonable to conclude that they are other universes constructed on a similar plan, but so far away that as viewed with our utmost visual powers, our mightiest telescopes, they are but gleaming specks! Perhaps the nearest of these strange objects is the Andromeda nebula, which, in a small telescope, looks like a faint spindle shaped wisp.—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Journal.

Vengeance on the Caddie.

"What! Buying more golf clubs? I thought you had a pretty complete outfit before."

"I have, but that caddie of mine had the nerve to snigger when I topped my drive yesterday, and I'm going to make him carry double weight."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Happiness.

Happiness is that single and glorious thing which is the very light and sum of the whole animated universe, and where she is not it is better that nothing should be.—Colton.

The most completely lost of all days is the one on which we have not laughed.—Chamfort.

HOLD UP YOUR HEAD.

It Will Stimulate You Mentally as Well as Physically.

In a letter to Robert Grimshaw of the New York university William Muldoon gives advice that it would be well for every man and woman, boy and girl in America to take to heart. He says:

"I was taught in early manhood not to throw my shoulders back, stick my chest out, draw my stomach in or hold my chin down like a goat preparing to butt, but to always try and touch some imaginary thing with the crown of my head. If one tries to do that—first understands how to try and then tries—he doesn't have to pay any attention to the rest of his physical being. That effort to touch something above him not with his forehead, but with the crown of his head, will keep every particle of his body in the position that nature intended it should be.

And as a boy I was advised to frequently back up against the wall and make the back of my head, my shoulders, hips, heels all press against the wall at the same time, and in that way get an idea of what was straight, or, in other words, how crooked I was becoming by drooping."

Both to young and old Mr. Muldoon's "hold your head up" suggestion is inspiriting. Try it. The effect physically and mentally is immediate. When the head goes higher the impulse is to deeper breathing. A man finds more elasticity in his limbs. He steps out with more ease. There is more spring to his gait. He isn't a lumbering, shambling creature, but a man alive. With the elevation of the crown of the head there seems to come clearer thinking, a more buoyant feeling and a brighter outlook.—Commerce and Finance.

Open the Eyes Under Water.

Practice opening the eyes under water in swimming, for with favorable conditions there is much to be seen and enjoyed in the queer, ghostly light below. The ability to see when below the surface may some time prove of priceless value. It is one of the attributes of swimming, and it may be readily mastered. But do not open the eyes until well below. The closed lid is an ample protection when one is plunging from any height, and it should remain closed until the first swift downward rush is ended.—All Outdoors.

Sizes of the Planets

An ingenious way of comparing the sizes of planets with the sun is suggested by a French scientific writer. Let the earth, he says, be represented by a twenty franc piece; then Venus is 15 francs, Mars 2, Mercury 7, Uranus 280, Neptune 320, Saturn 1,840, Jupiter 6,800 and the sun 6,780,000.

SEND THAT NEXT PRINTING ORDER TO THE JOB-PRINTING-DEPT. THAT WILL GIVE YOU HIGHEST QUALITY LOWEST PRICES & SUPERIOR SERVICE.

WE ARE NOW READY TO EXECUTE YOUR WORK

PROMPTLY

AND WILL APPRECIATE YOUR PATRONAGE

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Telephone 45

Growing In Wisdom.

Mabel had developed a really passionate interest in Abraham Lincoln. She had always admired her grandfather, but her admiration deepened to veneration when she learned that the old gentleman had seen Lincoln often.

"And you can really remember Lincoln?" she repeated in awe struck tones.

"Yes, dear," said grandfather. "You know, I am much older than you."

"How much older must I be before I can remember him?" asked Mabel.—New York Times.

REMOVE FACE BLEMISHES

Pimples, Blackheads, Acne, Tetter, Ring Worm and that dreaded Eczema can be permanently removed from your face and body by Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment. It is no longer necessary to go around with an unsightly complexion and suffer the pain and annoyance that goes with unsightly ailments. Dr. Hobson's Eczema Ointment is a time tried, guaranteed remedy, good for infants, adults and aged who suffer with skin ailments. Buy a box to-day, start using at once. Money back if not satisfied. 50c. at your druggist.

The Biggest Nickel's Worth of Real Long Cut Tobacco

NO loose hard stems

NO broken leaf used is LIBERTY. Because it's all tobacco—no loose, hard stems in it. They're all picked out by hand.

That's why you get more good smokes and chews out of a package of LIBERTY than you get from a bigger-looking package.

What's more, LIBERTY is real Long Cut—made from ripe, selected long leaves—no short or broken leaf used. Result—LIBERTY always gives you a long, cool smoke and lasting, tasty chew.

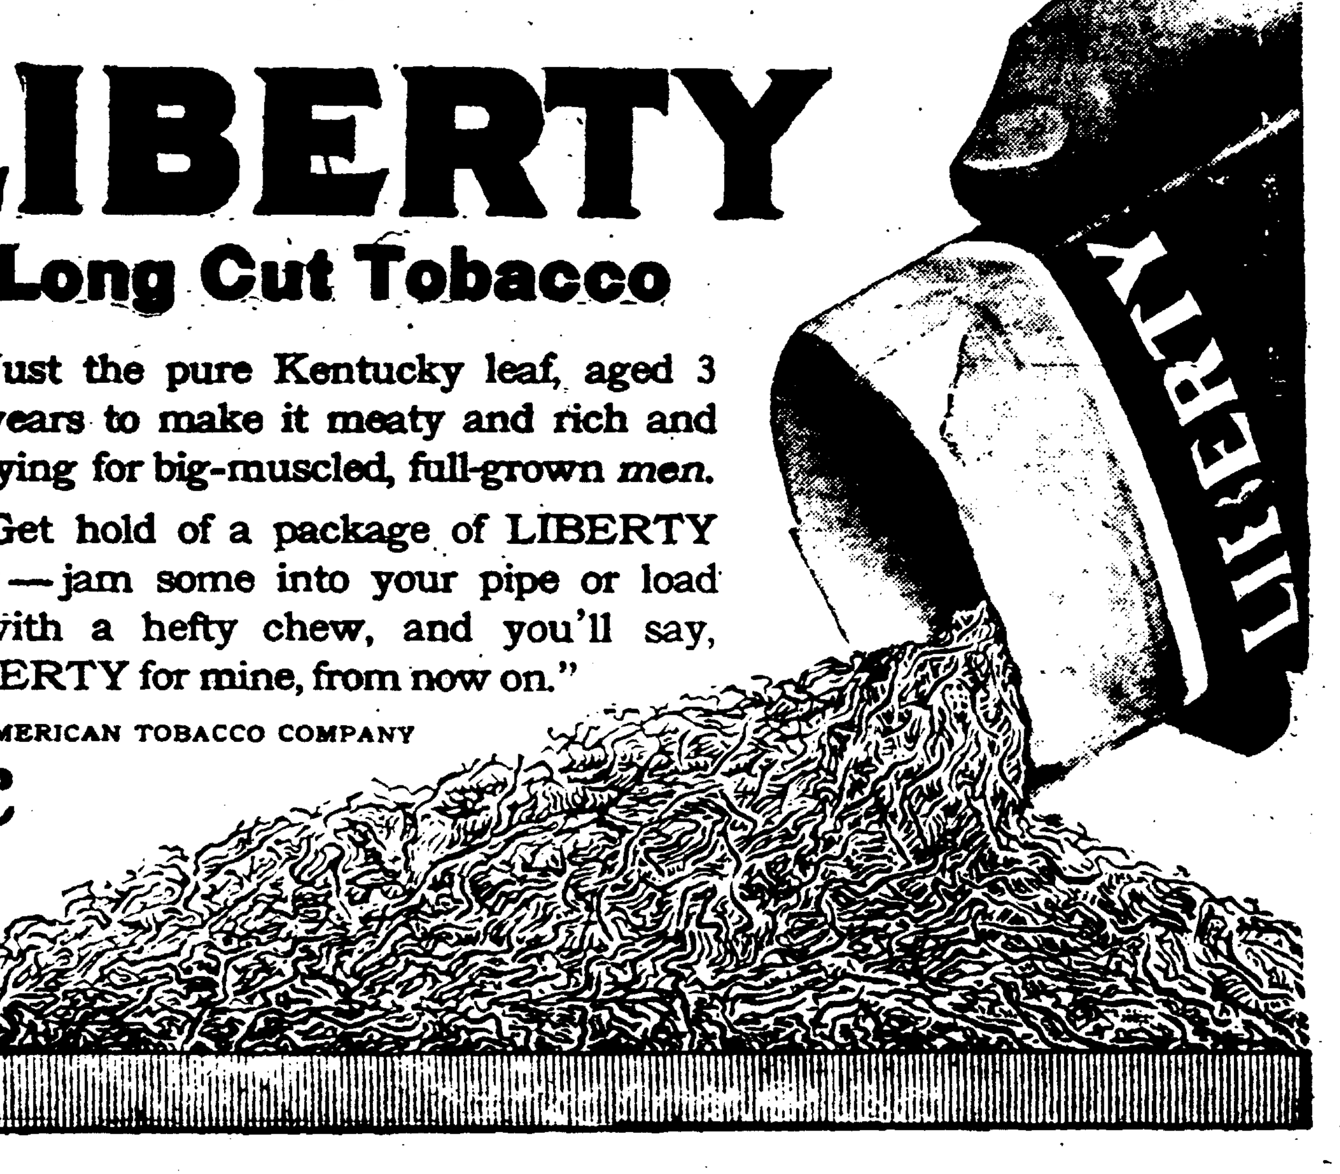
LIBERTY Long Cut Tobacco

Just the pure Kentucky leaf, aged 3 to 5 years to make it meaty and rich and satisfying for big-muscled, full-grown men.

Get hold of a package of LIBERTY today—jam some into your pipe or load up with a hefty chew, and you'll say, "LIBERTY for mine, from now on."

THE AMERICAN TOBACCO COMPANY

5¢



NEW WAR NURSE.

Ex-"White House Baby" Has Joined the Ranks.

STUDIED BRAILLE SYSTEM.

Twenty-two-year-old Daughter of Mrs. Thomas J. Preston, Jr., and the Late President Cleveland, Has Gone to France to Teach the Blind.

Once famous all over the world as "the White House baby," Miss Esther Cleveland has prepared to devote herself to the teaching of blind soldiers in France. From her home in Princeton, N. J., she traveled every day to Overbrook, a suburb of Philadelphia, to study the system in use at the Pennsylvania Institute For the Instruction of the Blind. Miss Cleveland's companion in the daily study was Miss Maria Osborne, daughter of the president of the American Museum of Natural History. When Miss Cleveland felt efficient in the work of teaching the blind how to take care of themselves in a world of darkness and how to engage in handicrafts by which they can support themselves she sailed for France, where she is now engaged with the American Ambulance corps. Miss Cleveland is twenty-two years old.

Photo by American Press Association.
MISS ESTHER CLEVELAND.

SEWING ROOM "WRINKLES."

A Dressmaker Gives Some Cues About Her Craft For Amateurs.

If your colored silk thread gives out when you lack only two or three inches of finishing tie the thread as soon as it leaves the spool to an ordinary spool of cotton thread; then it is possible to sew a distance of exactly ten inches more. The knot goes through all the openings except the needle's eye, and by being attached to the spool the thread is held taut.

Do not cut your sewing machine belt when it gets too loose. Instead put a few drops of pure castor oil on the band, run the machine a few minutes, and the belt will be tightened.

If you will cover your sewing table with white oilcloth stretched tightly and fastened with thumb tacks you will find no difficulty in keeping it free from dust, and the plain white surface is a help when cutting garments from dark materials.

When doing fine sewing or embroidering or anything that requires close attention the strain on the eyes will be much lessened if a dress or apron is worn of a color contrasting with the work in hand. If it is white wear a black apron; if black wear a white one, especially when sewing at night. When a needleworker arrives at the age when the threading of a needle is a strain on her eyes and patience let her adopt the crewel needle for all kinds of sewing.

For short lengths or piecework, where you don't care to bother with putting the ruffler on the sewing machine, simply lengthen the stitch a little and loosen the upper tension. Then stitch just as you would if the ruffler were on, and the bobbin thread will be found to make a perfect goffering thread on which the fabric may be drawn up to any desired fullness.

When cutting garments from patterns that you expect to use again mark plainly on each pattern the exact amount of material that is required. Frequently by careful cutting and a little piecing an amount of material less than the directions call for can be utilized, and a glance will tell just the amount you need when you wish to purchase material again.

About the Fall Suit.

Its line will be more or less optional, though some designs, of course, will predominate.

Three-quarter, half length and occasional hip length coats.

Slightly longer skirts that show the fullness pushed toward back.

Louis XV. vests of flowered silk.

The Moyen age influence.

Coats belted or beltless.

Military collars.

Circular jackets.

Russian blouses.

Darts.

ABOUT HANDBAGS.

Infinite Variety of Styles For All Individual Tastes.

Everywhere one goes the new hand bags are most noticeable. Here is a new fashion which has definite variety No two of them resemble each other Any woman of taste can design her own handbag and have something personal and unique.

These bags are on the order of the famous pocket of Lucy Lockett—that is to say, they are of the reticule type and hang over the arm by ribbons or chains They seldom have the gate or silver frame, but draw up through rings or in simple old fashioned style through a fold.

These bags are sometimes knitted bead affairs. A very stunning one often seen is so large one expects to find fancy work inside. It hangs over the arm by long platinum chains. The upper part is of suede leather, the lower part knitted in varicolored stripes There are also saddlebag shapes which hang over the arm. These are made of dark moire silk, generally heavily embroidered and fringed with several colors of beads. Others are embroidered with steel or silver beads.

One extremely large silk bag has a heavy silver frame. The bag part is made of beautiful brocade, often intermingled with gold or silver threads and fulled into the silver frame. It is so large and the chain so long that when held over the arm it drops more than halfway down to the knees.

The only sort of arm bag which resembles those carried last season are small shapes, the frames all covered with striped or plain taffeta. These should match the dress worn. The bead frame bags often have little all over patterns of contrasting colored beads.

All bags, whether of the reticule or frame bag type, are fitted inside with the usual small mirror, pocket powder puff, etc. A very odd fancy of the moment seems to be to go gloveless. The gloves are buttoned or snapped together at the last fastening and thrown across one end of the bag, saddle bag style. It looks very odd to see these white gloves, more or less clean, dangling over the bag.

For a shopping bag the very flat, thin envelope type seems to be the most popular. The polished and seal leathers are the most seen, and this bag has generally a leather handle on one side which can be slid along until it is a mere hand strap through which to thrust the hand.

Hand or arm bags show signs of wear quickly, and nothing takes away from a costume more than a shabby bag. This new style may be easily fashioned by the girl at home, for the inside of the bag is lined and faced with flat pockets to hold the vanities, which may be taken from old cases and recovered.

Extra Fine Piecrust.

One cupful of lard, two cupfuls of flour, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, three-quarters of a teaspoonful of salt, one egg and sufficient cold water to hold the mixture together. Sift the flour and salt into a basin. Flour the blade of a knife and chop the lard into the flour, being careful to keep the flour between the blade of the knife and the shortening. When the mixture looks like meal add gradually the egg, well beaten, and mixed with the lemon juice. Roll the pastry into a ball with the knife. It may be used at once, but it will be improved if allowed to stand in a cool place for one hour. This pastry should be rolled out once and handled as lightly as possible. Bake in a hot oven. Lemon juice makes gluten of flour more elastic, so that dough stretches rather than breaks as paste is rolled out.

PROUD SATISFACTION.

A Fetching Model That Mother Can Make at Home.

Ever useful gingham is the fabric used for this small gown cut with a high waist line and side plaited skirt. Envelope pockets and pique collar and cuffs are the only trimming. The colors are cool green and white stripe, but any shade becoming to daughter will be suitable.

VACATION GARB.

Jaunty Two Piece For Vacation Girl

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York.

WASHABLE frocks are now on the boards of fashion. This one, which comes in copenhagen or lavender linen trimmed with white or white trimmed with copenhagen, has a natty plaited jacket confined with a wide, straight belt. Emulating the braided suits of winter, all its edges are so finished.

ANNA MAY.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

Ideal In Foulard.

6746

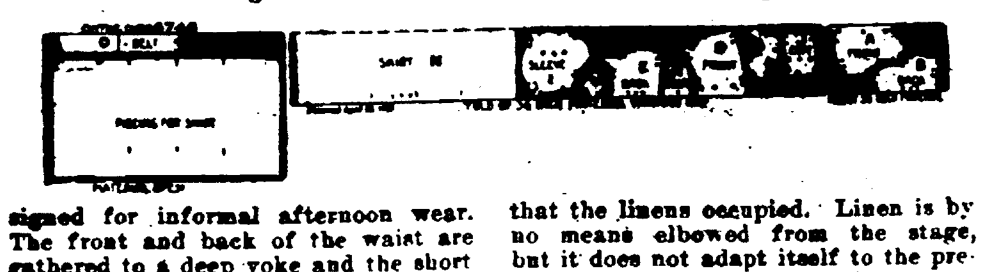
The frock ideal for summer wear, developed in figured foulard and trimmed with batiste and satin.

Every demand of simplicity is met in this frock of figured foulard designed for informal afternoon wear. The front and back of the waist are gathered to a deep yoke and the short sleeves are finished with dainty puffs of batiste. The collar and belt are in plain satin corresponding with the background of the foulard. Deep tucks trim the one-piece skirt, but these may be omitted.

In medium size the design requires 6⅝ yards 36-inch foulard, with ¾ yard batiste for the cuffs and 1 yard 27-inch satin for the collar and belt. The foulard is laid on the cutting table in two open width to cut the piecing for the skirt, and there will be sufficient space along the selvage edge for the belt. Now, fold the remaining material and along the lengthwise fold place the skirt section. Follow with the sleeve, placed on a lengthwise thread, then the back yoke, back of the outerblouse and collar, these on the fold of foulard, arranging the front of the outerblouse, front yoke and cuff on a lengthwise thread of the silk, last. To cut the lining, place the front on a lengthwise thread of the muslin and the back on the fold.

If the skirt is desired without tucks, the dress will require only 5¾ yards of material and 15 inches should be cut from the lower edge of the pattern before placing it upon the foulard for cutting. If the costume be desired closed in back and with low round neck, cut out the neck of the yoke lining, front and back, along small "o" perforations.

This design is ideal for soft Summer fabrics and would be quite as charming in figured lawn, organdy or cotton voile as in silk. All the tub silks and various types of pongee are not only admirable morning frock materials but are greatly liked for sports wear and to a certain degree fill the place that the linens occupied. Linen is by no means elbowed from the stage, but it does not adapt itself to the prevailing lines as do the softer materials.



Pictorial Review Costume No. 6746. Sizes, 14 to 20 years. Price, 15 cents.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

WITH SOUR MILK.

GRAHAM GEMS. To one egg well beaten add a third cupful of sugar, a cupful of sour milk, a level teaspoonful of soda, a tablespoonful of butter and a heaping cupful of graham flour. Bake in quick oven.

Sour Cream Pie.—To a cupful of sugar add a cupful of thick, sour cream, an egg, a cupful of chopped raisins, a teaspoonful of cinnamon, a teaspoonful of cloves and a teaspoonful of vinegar. Bake with two crusts This is a delicious substitute for mince pie.

Drop Cakes.—Beat two eggs light add two cupfuls of granulated sugar and beat again. Add a cupful of molasses, half a cupful of sour milk, two tablespoonfuls of melted butter, half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a tablespoonful of hot water, a cupful each of raisins and English walnuts cut in pieces, a teaspoonful each of cloves and cinnamon and five cupfuls of flour. Mix all ingredients together thoroughly. Drop from a spoon on a greased pan and bake in a slow oven.

"Squatter" Cakes.—To a cupful of brown sugar add two eggs beaten together, a cupful of molasses, a cupful of thick, sour cream, a teaspoonful of soda, half a teaspoonful of salt, a large teaspoonful of ginger and three cupfuls of flour. Drop small spoonfuls on greased tins and bake in a moderate oven.

Jam Cake.—To a cupful and a half of granulated sugar add a cupful of butter, three eggs, a cupful of sour milk, a teaspoonful of soda, three cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful each of cinnamon and cloves, half a teaspoonful of grated nutmeg and a large cupful of any kind of jam. Bake in a loaf in a rather slow oven.

Spice Cake For Large Family.—To a cupful and a half of granulated sugar add a cupful of butter, a cupful of thick, sour milk, five yolks of eggs and two whites (reserving three for icing), a cupful of raisins cut in small pieces two and a half cupfuls of flour, a teaspoonful each of soda, cinnamon cloves and allspice. Bake in two layers and put boiled icing between.

Spice Cake For Small Family.—To a cupful of granulated sugar add half a cupful of butter, two eggs, half a cupful of sour milk, half a cupful of molasses, a cupful and a half of flour half a teaspoonful each of cloves, cinnamon and soda. Bake in a shallow pan.

Anna Thompson.

DARING WHALERS.

Risks They Take When They Dive With the Harpooned Animal.

Many of the Japanese whalemen are most expert and daring men. After a whale has been cornered, harpooned and is slowly giving out from exhaustion the nimble expert of the whaling crew must prove his mettle.

The skilled Jap, after jumping upon the animal's back and cutting two gashes in the head, one on either side through which a rope must be run and tied, cannot always perform his work in one trial. Often the animal makes a deep dive. But the little Jap must hold fast to his quarry and dive also trusting to the fates that his own air supply in his lungs will last as long as that of the whale's.

The Jap is safer from being drowned than from being crushed by the infuriated animal's tail. If the little Jap lets go it usually means his death, so he hangs on to the diving quarry. Frequently these whalemen lose their lives from drowning, but the members of their crew look upon this misfortune with something of a fatalistic regard.

But the main business in hand is the capture of the whale. As the fight progresses and the maddened, frightened mammal grows weaker and finally is dying the boat crews row closer to the body and pray for the ease of his departing spirit. Members of the crew will call out the words, "Joraku, joraku, joraku!" and on the third day after the mammal has been hauled ashore a service is held and prayer offered for the animal's future contentment of spirit.

As soon as the animal has been towed to the shore line he is cut up, the Japs making huge excavations and penetrating inside the animal's body as though entering a mine shaft or gallery. It is a grewsome sight, but is looked upon purely as a matter of course among the Jap whalemen.—Exchange.

Didn't Care For It.

"Ever try liquid soap?" asked the barber.

"No, and don't want to," replied the man in the chair.

"Why not?"

"Oh, well, if I have to eat soap I'd just as leave chew it as drink it."—Yonkers Statesman.

Money by the Bushel.

She—What's this I hear about your getting a large sum of money from some woman? He—Some one's been kidding you. Who was the woman? She (innocently)—Why, May Wheat they told me her name was.—Boston Transcript.

Hopeless.

"He's no good at an argument, is he? Not at all convincing."

"Well, I should say not. Why, that man couldn't convince a woman that she was pretty."—London Stray Stories.

The Battle Against Wrinkles is being won everywhere, every day and by every woman who employs beauty's faithful ally Usit, the wonderful pure nut-oil skin food brought from old Egypt.

USIT "Wrinkle Chaser"

applied at night before retiring, is guaranteed to quickly banish all wrinkles, caused by old age, work, worry or exposure, bring back color and smoothness to faded complexions, and feed the skin back to perfect healthfulness. No other treatment is necessary. Contains nothing to cause hair growth. Always put up in opal bottles. Take nothing else.

Fifty Cents a Bottle at all drug stores

USIT M'F'G. COMPANY, 895 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Proprietors for United States.

For Sale by Fulton Pharmacy and dealers everywhere.

CHICHESTER S PILLS

THE DIAMOND BRAND. Ladies! Ask Your Druggist for Chi-ches-ter's Diamond Brand Pills in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with Blue Ribbon. Take no other. Buy of your Druggist. Ask for CHI-CHES-TER'S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS, for 25 years known as Best, Safest, Always Reliable

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

For summer days is the shirt waist of Roman striped lawn shown here. It is trimmed with pockets, cuffs and collar of white linen. Worn with the waist, which requires 2 1-4 yards 36-inch material, is a gathered skirt of white flannel, with broad front panels and buttons. In medium size the skirt requires 3 3-4 yards 54-inch material.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6634, sizes 34 to 44 inches bust; price, 15 cents. Skirt No. 6628, sizes, 22 to 40 inches waist; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Department store, Fulton.

A HACKING COUGH WEAKENS THE SYSTEM

Don't suffer with a hacking cough that has weakened your system—get a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery in use over 40 years, and benefiting all who use it, the soothing pine balsam with tar heal the irritated air passages—soothes the raw spots, loosens the mucous and prevents racking the body with coughing. Dr. King's New Discovery induces natural sleep and aids nature to cure you.

The Supernatural In Nippon.

Interesting stories are told of a Buddhist image in a temple in the suburbs of Kyoto. According to a record contained inside the image, it was carved by a famous Buddhist priest, and it is believed that the worshipers of the image will surely receive divine favor. At one time when a fire broke out in the temple, unknown to the caretaker, the image awoke him by calling "Fire!" and thus saved the temple from destruction. Another story says that the image was once stolen by a thief, who, however, fell dead when he was running away. Still another report says that no dust ever accumulates on the head of the image.

LOOK GOOD—FEEL GOOD

No one can either feel good nor look good while suffering from constipation. Get rid of that tired, draggy, lifeless feeling by a treatment of Dr. King's New Life Pills. Buy a box to-day, take one or two pills tonight. In the morning that stuffed, dull feeling is gone and you feel better at once. 25c. at your druggist.

PRESIDENT DEFENDS USE OF MILITIAMEN

(By United Press)

Washington—That the services of the National Guard on the Mexican border are a necessity to the United States, in protecting the country and not merely for the purpose of drill, was explained today in a letter written by President Wilson to Mrs. Henry Smith, of Winamach, Indiana.

The letter was in reply to one from Mrs. Smith expressing her distress for the hardships endured by her son who is compelled to undergo service as a militiaman.

* * *

Washington—American troops and militiamen on the Mexican border are to get foreign service pay, a considerable increase over the regular compensation, under the terms of an amendment to the army bill adopted today, after a hard fight by Senator Reese.

SAY RAILWAY MEN RECEIVE HIGH PAY

New York—Bidding for public backing for the plan to arbitrate difficulties between the railroads and their employes, the National Conference Committee of the Railroads yesterday announced the results of a study of wages. Railroad men, it is asserted by the committee, are one of the highest paid groups of workers in any industry.

The figures are an underestimate, the railroads declare, as every man whose name appeared on the January and December payrolls was considered as an employe for a year. The demands of the railroad men would mean an increase in wages of $100,000,000, it is said.

"You pay for rail transportation," says the committee's statement, "$3,000,000,000 a year, and 44 per cent out of every dollar goes to employes.

"A $100,000,000 wage increase for men in freight and yard service (less than one-fifth of all employes) is equal to a 5 per cent. advance in all freight rates.

"The managers of the railroads, as trustees for the public, have no right to place this burden on the cost of transportation to you without a clear mandate from a public tribunal speaking for you."

Settlement under the existing national arbitration law or by the Interstate Commerce Commission is the solution offered by the railroads.

QUIRK THEATRE

Continuous 2 to 10:30
Feature Motion Pictures.
ALL SEATS 5—CENTS—5. NO HIGHER

TODAY—
Julia Dean in
"THE RANSOM,"
5-part Equitable Feature.
3d Chapter of "The Secret of the Submarine."

THURSDAY—
Frank Sheridan in
"THE STRUGGLE"
5-part Equitable Feature.
International News No. 57

FRIDAY—
Clara Kimball Young in
"THE FEAST OF LIFE"
5-Part World Feature.
4—ACTS VAUDEVILLE—4

Notice From the Health Department

Fulton, N. Y., July 26, 1916.

To Whom It May Concern:

I hereby certify that there is no known case of infantile paralysis in the City of Fulton. The recent case died on the 24th instant after an illness of about one week. In my opinion, this was a true case of the disease. Every known precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease and if no other cases develop within the next ten days there need be no further fear of the disease so far as the recent case is concerned.

Any one desiring to come to Fulton need have no fear of encountering the disease as no case exists here.

A. L. HALL, M. D.,
Health Officer.
Fulton, N. Y.

GERMAN FOOD ECONOMY MAY BE URGED IN U. S.

Washington—Details of how Germany has managed to subsist so long without material assistance from the outside world and despite the reduced productivity of her farms were disclosed in reports reaching Washington today. She has issued numerous bulletins, circulars and pamphlets containing instructions to housekeepers and small gardeners on the utilization and preparation of food material.

The Washington authorties are considering distribution of these bulletins among the American people. The subjects include:

Cooking without fat.

The potato in the kitchen during war time.

Christmas pastry during war.

Small contributions on the subject of food for the people.

New recommendations for the kitchen during the war.

The preservation of fruit without sugar.

The kitchen during the summer of 1916.

Providing the German Empire with albumen.

Articles suited for fodder during the war.

Winter vegetables as food for the people.

The growing of vegetables in private gardens.

Preserved sausage and meat for the army and the people.

Hard at First.

Mrs. Wabash—Wasn't your first dollar the hardest to get? Mrs. Dearborn—Why, yes. After the first time it seemed easier to take 'em out of my husband's pockets when he was asleep. —Yonkers Statesman.

GERMAN TROOPS FIGHT BRITISH WITH MUD BEES

(By United Press)

London (by mail)—How the German colonial forces in East Africa enlisted bees to fight the British is told in an account arrived here today from Natal.

The natives in East Africa make beehives of hollow logs which they place in the trees. The Germans gathered large quantities of these hives and attached them upright to a wire in the long grass. To the wire was also attached a device which raised a white flag when anything came in contact with it.

A party of Britoshers had the misfortune to stumble over the wire and dozen of beehives came crashing to the ground simultaneously with the appearance of the white flag. Angry, fighting-made bees and German machine gun bullets were soon working together against the British. The account from Natal is without further detail except to say that the British had a hot time.

DIED ON OPERATING TABLE; IS ALIVE TODAY

(By United Press)

London (by mail)—Lance Corporal Mayes, Queen's Westminster Regiment, lives today to be able to say that he died.

A German shell clipped off part of Mayes' right arm at Ypres last Christmas. Eventually he landed in a London hospital with a stump of an arm that threatened blood poison. An operation became necessary.

Under an anaesthetic the soldier's heart collapsed and ceased to beat. The patient was dead. The surgeon in charge tried a quick experiment. He made an incision large enough to admit his hand in Mayes' side. He lifted the diaphragm, reached the heart and gently massaged the organ with his fingers. The heart responded and resumed pulsations.

Mayes is now on the road to complete recovery. In another month he will be wearing an artificial arm and learning to use it in a trade which he will be taught by the government.

COURT ATTACKS ALL FORECLOSURE ADS.

New York—Justice Charles L. Guy, of the Supreme Court, yesterday served notice on referees in foreclosure proceedings that he would not give judicial countenance to the practice, heretofore common, of inadequate advertising of real estate to be sold under foreclosure.

In an official memorandum he said such action was contrary to the code and frequently worked a great injury to the owners of property to be offered for sale.

Justice Guy pointed out that it had been the practice of some referees merely to insert a diagram of the property to be sold, with a brief description thereof, which, the court suggested, was hardly fair to the owner, whose entire equity might be wiped out because of the insufficiency of the advertisement by bringing at sale not more than the amount of the mortgage and the expenses.

There Is a Difference.

"A typical Sunday golfer," said a clergyman, "rang the bell at a manse on Sunday morning and asked to leave her golf sticks there during the service.

"'I can hardly let you do that,' I replied.

"'But,' the Sunday golfer objected, 'you've got a sign on the church porch to the effect that bicyclists can leave their machines at the manse during service, haven't you?'

"'Yes, ma'am, I have,' I answered. 'You can ride to church on a bicycle, you know, but you can't on a golf stick—unless you happen to be a witch.'"—Exchange.

SENTRY A CANDIDATE FOR WALKING RECORD

Arizona Man Makes Forty Miles to Find Relief—Reported "Missing."

Douglas, Ariz.—Adam Dockery, a private in Company B, Arizona militia, recently reported as missing, returned to camp after walking nearly forty miles while on outpost duty.

The private, a recent recruit, it was said at militia headquarters, was placed on guard at the international line, with instructions to walk to the east until he met the sentry he was to relieve.

Dockery missed the sentry. He kept walking until finally he met a patrol on guard, twenty miles east of the camp.

"Dockery certainly obeyed instructions," an officer remarked, "but it is a good thing he met that patrol, or he probably would have walked to El Paso."

HOUSE CARRIED THIRTY MILES BY TORNADO

Heavy Construction Literally Torn to Shreds—Parts Distributed Over Three Indiana Counties.

Brownstone, Ind.—Bits of books and pieces of boards have been picked up in Jackson and Scott counties which were identified as parts belonging to the house of Mrs. Elizabeth Wilcox, a widow living near Campbellsburg, Washington county, which was destroyed by a tornado and scattered along in the path of the storm for a distance of about thirty miles.

The house, a two story eight room building, stoutly constructed and in good shape, was literally torn to shreds in a few seconds. A barn across the road from the house was demolished, and of the corn crib, made of large round logs, no trace has been found. A large rug was taken off the floor of the house and carried about five miles. A heavy iron range was found about a quarter of a mile from the house, and an iron kettle weighing about seventy-five pounds was found a mile away from the place the next day.

Mrs. Wilcox felt a slight jar of the house just before going to bed on a cot near a large stone fireplace. Parts of the fireplace fell on her and pinioned her to the floor. The house was splintered and carried away by the storm. The tornado had dipped and struck a knoll just across the road from the house and scraped the sod off a space about twenty-five feet square.

Alex Brown, who lives near, stepped out early in the morning and found his front porch gone. Looking over toward Mrs. Wilcox's place, he noticed the ruins and hurried over. He found Mrs. Wilcox conscious and soon removed the stones that held her down. A doctor was called, and it was found that one arm was broken, her chest crushed in and bruises and scratches covered her body.

Three five-dollar gold pieces were carried away. One of them was found later about half a mile from the house. Rabbits and fox squirrels were slaughtered by the storm when it struck the woods east of the place. Of the 150 chickens on the place not more than twenty-five could be found, and several of them were stripped of their feathers by the storm. A black oak tree about three feet in diameter was found near the house, and no one seems to know where it came from, as there are no black oaks in the woods near by. An apple orchard was blown about a quarter of a mile from the place, and there was not a fence or post left standing on the place.

She Ran For President.

Only one woman was ever a presidential candidate. In the campaign of 1884 Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood was the candidate of the Equal Rights party, advocating woman suffrage. She obtained only about 2,500 votes out of a total of 10,000,000. Mrs. Lockwood in 1873 had been admitted to the bar of the supreme court of the District of Columbia and in 1879 was admitted to practice in the United States supreme court.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Notice to Creditors

IN PURSUANCE OF AN ORDER of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Bridget Gibbons, late of the City of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his office, No. 24 White Memorial Building, Syracuse, in the County of Onondaga, New York, on or before the 15th day of October, 1916.

Dated this 27th day of March, A. D., 1916.

EDWARD L. MOORE,
Executor of the Last Will and Testament of Bridget Gibbons, deceased.

WILLIAM H. BAMERICK,
Attorney for Executor,
24 White Memorial Bldg.,
Syracuse, N. Y.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against, Clark Butts, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his law office No. 59 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 15th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 29th day of May A. D., 1916.

JAMES R. SOMERS,
Attorney for Administrator

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of D. P. Morehouse, jr., special Surrogate of the County of Oswego, N. Y., notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Frank R. Caldwell, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at his office in the Village of Central Square, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 15th day of September, 1916.

Dated this 6th day of March, A D., 1916.

HENRY D. COVILLE
Executor

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Clara A. Fredenburg, late of the city of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at No. 59 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 23rd day of October, 1916.

Dated this 24th day of April, A. D., 1916.

JAMES R. SOMERS,
Attorney for the Administrator of the Estate of Clara A. Fredenburg, deceased.

STATE'S AUTOISTS WILL MEET NEXT WEDNESDAY

Albany (Special)—Arrangements have been completed for the Mid-Summer Meeting of the New York State Automobile Association, which will be held at the Thousand Island House, Alexandria Bay, Monday July 31, at 10:00 a. m. The State Highway Department officials have co-operated to the extent of putting the highways to Alexandria Bay from the different sections of the State in excellent condition so the visiting automobilists are assured of an enjoyable tour. The Jefferson County Automobile Club has provided a splendid program with special provision for ladies who attend.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Citation On Settlement.

The People of the State of New York:

To Robert E. Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Elmina Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Cyrus Frederick Phillips, Rochester, N. Y.; Ross Phillips, Niagara Falls, N. Y.; Asa Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Grace Phillips Bryant, Akron, O.; May Wood Taylor, St. Josephs, Mo.; All Saints' Church (formerly Zion Episcopal Church), Fulton, N. Y.; Mount Adnah Cemetery Association, Fulton, N. Y.; Minnie Wood Douglas, Nutley, N. J.; Charles Shaw, Kansas City, Mo.; Frank Barnes, Fulton, N. Y.; Hiram Barnes, Little Falls, N. Y.; Nellie Barnes Huntly, Colosse, N. Y.; Harriet A. Phillips, Denver, Col.; Charles R. Phillips, Youngstown, O.; Fanny Barnes Burt, Hannibal, N. Y.; Edith Barnes, Fulton, N. Y.; Hattie Hurlburt, Natural Bridge, N. Y.; Ella Reed, Russell, N. Y.; Mary Curtis, Hermon, N. Y.; Anna Phillips Nagle, Minneapolis, Minn.; Leonard T. Haight, Syracuse, N. Y.; William B. Phillips, Toledo, O.; Thurber C. Phillips, Long Island City, N. Y.; Mary Helen Winegar, Syracuse, N. Y.; Ruth Winegar, Nutley, N. J.; Josephine Broadwell, Fulton, N. Y.; Mary A. Phillips, Syracuse, N. Y.; Eleanor Barnes Tamlyn, Custer City, S. Dak.; George H. Phillips, Stockbridge, Mich.; Cyrus W. Phillips, Rochester, N. Y.; Florence C. Boddy, Rochester, N. Y., and to all other persons interested in the estate of Julia A. Broadwell late of the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, deceased, either as creditors, legatees, next of kin or otherwise, Send Greeting:

Upon the petition of Arvin Lewis Rice, of the City of Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, the executor of said Julia A. Broadwell, deceased:

You and each of you are hereby cited to show cause before the Surrogate's Court of Oswego County, New York, at the Surrogate's Office in the City of Oswego, in said county, on the 31st day of July, 1916, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, why the account of Arvin Lewis Rice as executor of said deceased should not be judicially settled and allowed, and such of you as are under age of twenty-one years are required to appear by your general guardian, if you have one; or if you have none, to appear and apply for one to be appointed; or in the event of your neglect or failure to do so, a special guardian will be appointed by the Surrogate's Court to represent and act for you in the proceeding.

In Testimony Whereof, We have caused the seal of the Surrogate's Court of the County of Oswego to be hereunto affixed:

(L.S.) Witness, Hon. Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of our said County of Oswego, at the City of Oswego, in the said County, the 26th day of June, A. D., 1916.

H. E. HINMAN,
Clerk of the Surrogate's Court.

Notice to Creditors

In Pursuance of an Order of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Sar[illegible] Hancock, late of the City of Fulton, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at the law office of Claude E. Guile, 35 South First street, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 1st day of September, 1916.

Dated this 7th day of February, A. D., 1916.

Alden M. Hurd,
Executor.

Claude E. Guile,
Attorney for Executor,
35 South 1st st., Fulton, N. Y.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 485 — THURSDAY, JULY 27, 1916 — Price, One Cent

DEUTSCHLAND STILL SAFE AT BALTIMORE

(By United Press)

Baltimore—Either alarming information or good news of the submarine Bremen kept the German Deutschland in port today, which it was the manager of the undersea boat refused to say. Orders for the vessel to go out over night were suddenly countermanded. Inasmuch as news of the Bremen was the determining factor in the matter of the Deutschland's sailing it was accepted as true that at last the Deutschland's sister ship had been heard from. Perhaps, it was said, the Bremen had met with mishap, and that the Deutschland would not make an attempt to run the allies' blockade. The tug Timmins has an extra stock of coal aboard, preparatory to making a run, or to interne for a time in a cove down the Chesapeake bay.

CONLEY BROTHERS WILL REMAIN IN BUSINESS

It is with pleasure that this newspaper makes a correction to an article that appeared in yesterday's edition, stating that Conley Brothers had sold their entire business interests. The citizens of this city will be pleased to know that the Conley Brothers are going to continue in the confectionery and stationery business. They have disposed of their cigar store with the intention of largely increasing their wholesale confectionery business, which is rapidly growing in volume, requiring much time and attention.

NEW P. O. BILL WINS SUPPORT

Clerks and carriers in the post office in this city are elated over the final passage of the annual post office appropriation bill which carries with it increases for some of the clerks and providing seven holidays in each year for the clerks and carriers. The bill has been signed by President Wilson.

Much credit for the provisions for the benefits to the clerks is due to the activity of the United National Association of Post Office clerks. This association has worked for years to secure some of the reforms that are contained in the bill.

The amendment provides for the promotion of five per cent. of the $1,200 clerks to be "special clerks" at $1,300 per year. It also provides for the promotion of five per cent. of the $1,300 clerks to be special clerks at $1,400 per year and promotion of five per cent. of the $1,100 clerks to $1,200 per year. The promotions under these terms will be announced at a later date.

It is presumed only first class mail and newspapers will be handled on holidays. This will enable the clerks to get seven full holidays per year.

PAPER MILL WORKER AFFECTED BY WEATHER

The heat and humidity of today affected Herbert Hicks, of Granby Center, while he was engaged at one of the grinding machines in the Granby paper mill. Dr. Joy was summoned and after treating the man, removed him to his home where he is resting comfortably.

DENOUNCES PARENTS WHO ROB CHILDREN OF SLEEP

By Samuel G. Dixon, M. D. (Pa. Commissioner of Health)

The present habit of turning night into day in our highly illuminated towns with all sorts of exciting entertainments keeps the nerves keyed high and upsets the equilibrium.

Children especially are apt to suffer from late hours. For the first two years of life, eating and sleeping are the two great essentials.

Babies should sleep from fifteen to twenty hours out of the twenty-four and older children from ten to fourteen hours. It is not an unusual thing to see babies in arms or very young children being carried about until their parents' bed time. This is injurious to the children and cannot be made up by additional rest the next day.

Permitting children to remain up late is a strain on their nervous system which, while it may not be immediately apparent, is bound to exert a detrimental influence in the long run. Oftentimes the ill effects are perfectly apparent to the intelligent obverver.

Irritableness and any of the train of evils which result from an overtaxed nervous system may result from continually robbing the child of sleep. A regular bed time should be set for children according to their age, ranging from six o'clock for babies to eight for children of eight or nine and this should be regularly adhered to. This is a matter of the utmost importance i n establishing a sturdy constitution in childhood.

With adults, irregularity and short hours of sleep are often a factor which predisposes to ill health. Occasionally one will find an individual who has an unusual capacity for work with less than the ordinary amount of rest, but for the ordinary man or woman this would end disastrously.

YOUR NICKLE IS WORTH FIVE CENTS—NO MORE

Acting Director of the Mint Chaffin, at Washington has punctured several dreams for wealth.

A few days ago it was currently reported that because of the war the price of nickle had reached a record breaking mark. Because of this rise in the price of this material it was said the price of the ordinary five cent piece had gone up to six cents because there was six cents worth of nickel used in its manufacture at the present high prices. Now he denies it all.

A five cent piece is worth five cents and that's all; is the gist of what he says.

"The five cent piece." he said. "is composed of seventy-five per cent. copper and twenty-five per cent. nickel. The piece weighs 77.16 grains. Copper is worth twenty-eight cents a pound, the price varying from day to day. Nickel is worth forty-five cents per pound the price also varying. Nickels really cost the government about forty-three cents per hundred to make, the government stamp adding the rest of the value."

DEMOCRATIC CHAIRMAN REFUTES STATEMENT

(By United Press)

Harrisburg, Pa.—Vance McCormick makes an emphatic deniel to the report that President Wilson was back of the Senate resolution, which, as passed today, will prevent the National Guardsmen in the service of the United States from voting at the coming November elections. It was claimed by the spreaders of the story that the President feared the political effect of allowing the soldiers to vote. and Mr. McCormick says the idea is preposterus and without foundation.

WEATHER FORECAST

General east winds. Generally fair tonight and Friday, with a little change in temperature.

BOYS AND GIRLS GET BUSY TODAY

The Evening Times Will Give 35 Free Tickets, Including Reserved Seats, to the Al. G. Barnes Circus. Go With Us to the Big Animal Show at Our Expense

The Evening Times Wild Animal Prize Contest.

To the Wild Animal Editor;

I hereby certify I am not over 15 years of age and I submit

.... names of wild animals in your prize contest for free tickets to the Al. G. Barnes Big Four Ring Wild Animal Circus exhibiting in Fulton on Saturday, August 5th.

Name ....

Address ....

(Pin one of these coupons on your list)

FIRST DAY STORY ANIMAL PRIZE CONTEST.

Whee-e-e-e. Kids!

How would you like to win tickets to the Al. G. Barnes Big Four Ring Wild Animal Circus, the most marvelous circus in the world, where lions and bears and tigers and leopards, and the funniest little monkeys and dogs ride horses?

Of course you want to win some of these tickets, and The Fulton Evening Times is going to help you do it.

Now read this carefully, every word of it, and then get your pencil, ask Papa or Mamma or Teacher to help you, and get busy.

The Barnes Circus, with wild animals doing all the things that humans used to do in circuses, is coming to Fulton on Saturday, August 5. It will come into town on two railroad trains of cars, double length. It will unload hundreds of the most beautiful animal cages, band wagons, calliopes and banners, and at 10:30 o'clock A. M. it will give the most glittering parade, a mile long, that was ever seen in Fulton.

Then it will give folks time to go home and eat a good dinner, after which they may go to the show grounds at one o'clock and see a most death-defying high dive by a daredevil who is willing to risk his life each day to thrill you. This will be free.

Then will come an hour of band music, and the Barnes Circus carries six concert and military bands. The doors of the circus open at one o'clock, and the seats provided for you are new, clean, and have backs and foot rests. Electric lights and electric fans make the big tent as brilliant and as comfortable as a huge theatre.

At 2 o'clock the circus opens with the grand pageant in which the 1,000 animals, 150 trainers, 506 attendants, 6 bands, the 40 clown animals, including the cutest little baby elephant only two weeks old and his proud mamma; "Holy Moses," the rare black camel, the 20 funny pigs, the 550 beautiful, prancing ponies and marching horses will participate.

Following this will come 65 of the most amazing, death-defying science-upsetting, side-splitting, heart-thrilling acts and features by wild animals handled by handsome men and beautiful women you ever saw in your life, or will ever see so long as circuses are.

While no fakers or "grafters" are allowed in or about the circus or the grounds, all the side show features, the happy spirit, the playing bands and funny clowns are there. It is a real old time circus made modern and wonderful.

Human clowns are funny, but just think of pigs being clowns, and dogs, and elephants, and mules, and even bears!

Then, in the evening the circus doors will open at seven o'clock and the circus will begin at eight. And, mark you, you see just as much circus in the evening as you do in the afternoon. No tearing down of seats or tents or moving of wagons while the show is going on. Mr. Barnes' men are there to entertain you, his wonder animals are there to thrill and instruct you, and not a seat falls, not a wagon moves, nothing is done but look after your pleasure and your comfort until the last complete event of the entire program is over.

And everything is clean, wholesome, moral, elevating and refined.

Not a word, not an act, not an incident that is not of the most fastidious refinement.

Now, just think, for a whole day this fairyland of animals is going to be here.

Conditions of Contest.

Here are the conditions of the big contest The Evening Times is conducting for boys and girls under 15 years of age.

Free tickets to the Al. G. Barnes Big Four Ring Wild Animal Circus which will exhibit in Fulton will be given the winners.

The letters contained in the sentence, "AL. G. BARNES WILD ANIMAL CIRCUS PRIZE CONTEST" are to be used in spelling the names of wild animals.

There are 18 different letters of the alphabet in the sentence and each letter may be used as often as necessary in one name.

Names of domestic animals, such as dog, horse, cow and cat, are not allowed by the Evening Times Contest Editor.

Lists are to be plainly written on one side of the paper and numbered.

The names of the animals must be correctly spelled and the lists be accompanied by a coupon clipped from The Evening Times.

The names of the animals must be correctly spelled and the lists be accompanied by a coupin clipped from The Evening Times.

Any boy or girl in Fulton and vicinity, 15 years or under, may compete in this contest and winners must appear at The Evening Times office at a date to be announced later, and receive their tickets. That great wizard of animal educators, Mr. Al. G. Barnes himself will be at The Evening Times office to distribute prizes and you will have a chance to shake hands with this wonderful man who pets lions and tigers and who makes the wild animal his friend and pupil.

The Prizes are awarded according to the longest correct list.

1st Prize—Six reserved seat tickets to the circus.

2nd Prize—Four reserved seat tickets to the circus.

3rd Prize—Three reserved seat tickets to the circus.

4th Prize—Two reserved seat tickets to the circus.

5th Prize—Two General admission tickets to the circus.

Next Eighteen Prizes—One general admission ticket each, to the circus.

All prizes are good for either afternoon or evening performances.

So thirty-five boys and girls in Fulton may see the circus free.

Last Minute News

London—Hand to hand encounters with the Germans, with an active artillery pounding, continued throughout the night, was reported today by General Sir Douglas Haig. He said that the Teutons were using quantities of big shells. No event of importance was reported by the British commander-in-chief. "Throughout the night," he said, "our artillery was active. We continued to press the enemy in hand to hand engagements at various points. Elsewhere the enemy was using gas and fear-producing shells."

* * *

Petrograd—Heavy rains are impeding the progress of the Russian drive into northern Galicia. The Styr, Stockhog and Liba rivers are swollen over their banks, and the sticky marshes in particular have been rendered even more impassable. Russian forces are battling against elements as well as against the Teuton troops, but notwithstanding the obstacles are steadily forcing onward.

Brody is harassed on two sides by a Russian ram, which is gradually crushing the resistance of General Boehm Ermolli's Austrian troops.

* * *

Berlin—Repulse of a British reconnoitering attack southwest of Warnton, near Richbourg, and failure of a French assault around Barlous and Fleury, were reported in the German official statement today.

* * *

Washington—The American note on the British "blacklist" was forwarded to London last night, Councillor Polk announced this morning.

* * *

Washington—President Wilson today signed the Rivers and Harbors bill, appropriating approximately forty-two million dollars for the construction of old projects and a few new ones.

* * *

Washington — Reversing yesterday's action the Senate today struck out of the army bill a provision to permit militiamen on the Mexican border to vote for President, Vice President, Senators and Congressmen.

JUNIOR CHAUTAUQUA TO GIVE PEACE PAGEANT

Since the European war began there has been a great deal of talk about peace: the means of securing and maintaining a world peace.

Because the question of peace is so pertinent at this time, the subject has been selected for presentation by means of a pageant by the children of the Junior Chautauqua on Saturday afternoon, August 5th, at 2:30.

Miss Mildred Luce, the children's play supervisor, assisted by Miss Morgan at the piano, will drill the children in the pageant every morning while the Chautauqua is in Fulton, beginning at 8:45. After a short time spent in drill, the children will spend an enjoyable time with Miss Luce in play and story telling.

Some seventy-five costumes will be provided by the Redpath Chautauqua for the pageant, so that the parents will be at no expense or worry along that line. The first meeting of the children will be Saturday evening at seven o'clock at the Park. Let all children of the ages of six to fifteen inclusive, meet Miss Luce there at that time, whether they have tickets or not.

CAMP MEETING SERVICES ON THE FAIR GROUNDS

The Free Methodist camp meeting services began last night on the Fair Grounds, West Broadway. A large audience greeted the preacher of the evening. Many tents are pitched on the grounds, to remain until the close of the meetings.

ALLIES POUND TEUTON LINES; SLIGHT GAINS

By Ed. L. Keen
United Press Correspondent

London—Hand to hand grapples, grenade attacks and reconnoitering expeditions to the north and violent artillery combats to the south, this was the total of the day's war news as told today in a statement from capitals of all the warring nations.

General Sir Douglas Haig reports no events of importance along the British front, but indicated German counter attacks, making special mention of the hand to hand fighting.

The German version of the fighting in this region was that a British grenade attack west of Pozieres was repulsed. The Teutons also mention an entirely new bit of activity. The British reconnoitering attack southwest of Warenton and near Richbourg is in the Dupray sector where there has been a lull for weeks.

The Berlin statement likewise indicates intense fighting along the northern part of the French front. Artillery firing between the Antre and the Somme, concerted infantry attacks at Barleaux and Fleury. The Teutonic version was that the French had been repulsed, but it was stated fighting was still in progress around Fleury.

The Vienna official statement admitted retirements of Austro-Hungary troops before the Russians along the northern Galicia fronts. It contains Russian advantages around Advidiloi, close to Brody, but dismisses them as insignificant. Further advances in this vicinity and along the northern line were claimed in today's official dispatches.

SYRACUSE FIRMS ARE PROTESTING

Several Central New York firms are hit by the British "blacklist" of houses with whom British subjects must not trade.

The Syracuse Chamber of Commerce has filed a vigorous protest with the authorities at Washington, declaring that many Central New York and Syracuse-made products to South American countries are held up by reason of the steamship companies refusing to transport goods consigned to individuals or firms on the blacklist.

It is declared in the letter of protest, that at least four large industries of Syracuse are affected by trade war measures against persons and firms having German affiliations, and the Chamber asks the State Department what it intends to do in the matter. Early action is requested.

Putting its statement in the form of allegations concerning the embargo on some of the products of the city, the Syracuse Chamber offers to undertake to furnish proof of specific instances of shipments to South America having been refused by the steamship lines, presumably under the influence of the British government.

The way to test this newspaper's strength is by inserting an ad in the Miscellaneous Want Column. See rates on fifth page.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

THURSDAY, JULY 27, 1916

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Christian Science Monitor:

Those who have followed with any care the development of the liquor question in the United Kingdom, during the past two years, cannot fail to have been struck by the difficulty experienced at every turn in ascertaining the actual situation. Statistics are abundant, and from many different sources, which go to show that the effect of the restrictions in the sale of liquor, instituted by the various control boards, has been, in the highest degree, satisfactory. It has frequently been a matter of comment how disturbances of various kinds, generally attributable to drink, have diminished, and how conditions in many districts have improved beyond all recognition since the restrictions were imposed. In spite of these undeniable facts, however, the investigator into the matter is faced by the official statement that the national drink bill for last year reached a total of £182,000,000, or £17,500,000 more than the previous year.

This increased expenditure is largely due to increased duties, but whatever the explanation may be, it cannot be wondered at that the publication of these figures should give fresh impetus to the movement in favor of total prohibition. The matter was very earnestly taken up at a recent meeting in Edinburgh of the United Free Church of Scotland. At this meeting, Principal Denny insisted that they needed prohibition, not only to secure the efficiency of their soldiers, but to secure the efficiency of their industries. No one needed any paper, white, blue or gray, to tell what intemperance meant in industry. The only thing that was of the slightest use was to make the getting of drink impossible. He ventured to think that all political, moral, economic and common-sense views were at one on this point, but the people of the country could not get their views put into effect. There was a selfish interest that tied the hands of the state, and they had to get that grip unloosed.

No doubt there are points upon which these statements of Principal Denny could be controverted. There are, however, certain facts that cannot be controverted, and that every day increase in cogency. The national drink bill has not only not decreased, but has actually increased in the United Kingdom under restriction; whilst Russia and, to a large extent, France, are standing examples as to the possibility and effectiveness of prohibition. In regard to the drink question, as in regard to so many other questions, the world is now faced, not with arguments, but with accomplished facts. It remains to be seen how far it will appreciate their significance and act upon them.

* * *

Buffalo Evening Times:

Prior to October of last year, the tilefish was practically unknown to American markets. Within a period of much less than a twelvemonth, a great deal has been done by the United States Bureau of Fisheries to make the American public acquainted with an important but hitherto unfamiliar food supply.

The results are noteworthy. The fishery which has been established centers at New York, but fishing-craft from other ports also are engaged in it.

The largest number of vessels landing these fish at New York in any one month was thirteen. From New York the fish are distributed over a wide area. In June one shipment of over 2,000 pounds was sent to Kansas City.

The extent of the fishery from month to month has fluctuated, but the general tendency has been upward. The receipts of fish in June were about twice those of the preceding month, and reached the very considerable total of 1,126,000 pounds, in twenty-six trips. The prices received by the fishers for the eviscerated fish have varied from two and a half to seven cents a pound, averaging five cents.

The monthly receipts at New York were: November, 156,500 pounds; December, 170,200; January, 398,000; February, 468,000; March, 332,000; April, 614,000; May, 594,000; June, 1,126,000; total, 3,858,700 pounds.

Adding to these small lots of tilefish landed in October, 1915 during the progress of the publicity campaign conducted by the Bureau, and the various fares brought into Atlantic City and other ports, it appears that the total quantity of tilefish caught and sold to June 30 was 4,030,000 pounds, with a first value exceeding $200,000.

* * *

The National Geographic Magazine:

The gold of the Indies was the attraction that led Columbus to sail westward, that carried Cortez to Mexico and Pizarro to Peru. The Incas had large stores of the precious metal, representing, no doubt, the accumulations of many centuries. The capture of such a booty resounded through Europe. Spain became for a time the wealthiest as well as the most powerful nation of Europe, and this was ascribed to the gold of Peru.

But Peru held another treasure much more valuable for the nations of Europe than the golden booty of Pizarro. Carrying the potato to Europe was an event of much more profound significance in relation to the subsequent history of the world than sending the Inca gold to the coffers of Spain. But nobody understood the value of the potato, and its Peruvian origin was generally forgotten before the plant became well known. Instead of Peruvian potatoes we call them Irish potatoes.

The potato was the basis of the ancient Peruvian nation and has attained almost the same importance in other parts of the world within the last hundred years.

* * *

New York World:

Commissioner of Health Emerson confers higher honors upon womanhood than are contemplated by any Suffrage amendment. Hereafter, women nurses are to take the place of policemen on all Health department ambulances.

Recent unhappy experiences should not have been necessary to suggest the change ordered. On general principles, a nurse is naturally associated with an ambulance, and except in cases of riot, a police officer is not. More important than this, however, is recognition of the fact that on errands a good woman is often of more service than many men.

There may be a few exceptions, of course, but for the most part these nurses will neither smoke, chew nor drink. They will not loaf around saloons while their patients suffer in the streets. The calls that they receive will be answered and reported according to schedule. Of even more importance, they will almost unconsciously promote attentiveness and sobriety on the part of their associates.

NEW TAX DOESN'T FIT ALLEYS

Proprietors of pool rooms, and bowling alleys in this city, who have been anxious on account of earlier reports concerning the new war revenue measures, under which it first appeared that pool tables and bowling alleys would be assessed an extra $5 have been reassured that their fears are groundless, according to the latest interpretation.

Under the war revenue bill of October 22, 1914, the United States government imposed a tax of $5 per table. When the new measure was introduced a short time ago again imposing a $5 tax per table, poolroom proprietors became much concerned and claimed such an additional tax would work a hardship on them. The misunderstanding is due to an oversight. In the old war revenue bill passed in 1914, it specifically stated in Section 24:

"On the day after the 31st of December 1915, the taxes levied under this act shall no longer be collected."

In other words, the authority of the old war revenue bill ceased on New Year's day, 1916. The passage of the new war revenue measure will not mean the levy of an additional $5 per table, but will merely re-establish that tax.

YUAN SHI KAI'S CHILDREN SCATTERED ACCORDING TO WILL OF THEIR FATHER

Peking—In accordance with the late President Yuan Shi Kai's final instructions, sons and daughters of the dead ruler are preparing today to be sent to many widely separated places in charge of government officials.

Before his death, Yuan directed that his eldest, second and third sons and all his daughters and concubines should return to his native place to be cared for by Yuan Shi-in, his fifth youngest brother.

His fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh sons were ordered sent to England, in charge of Yen Hsiu, former minister of education, for their schooling. His four youngest sons were entrusted to the care of Hsu Shichang, former secretary of state. Several weeks have elapsed since the death of the ruler, the tension at foreign legations here is decreased and fear that a disturbance similar to the Boxer war might be imminent has been dissipated.

For some time after Yuan's death foreigners believed danger near. At several of the legations entrenchments were thrown up, machine guns placed at advantageous positions and large stores of food prepared for a seige. Foreigners were warned to be ready to seek the shelter of their legations at a moment's notice.

NEW WORKING PACT FOR RAILWAY MEN

A working agreement between the Empire United Railways and the Amalgamated Association of street and electric railway employees will probably be concluded and signed before the first of the month, as a result of a series of conferences that are now under way between officials of the union and representatives of the railway. G. Loomis Allen is taking care of the railroads' interest, while George Keenan, international vice-president of the union, is looking after the interests of the workmen.

The uncertainty of the financial affairs of the railway has had a tendency to delay the conclusion of the agreement, but now that a receiver has been named, it is believed the conferences will go forward more rapidly.

General shortening of the working hours of both conductors and motormen and an increase in wages is the object of the union. The old agreement expired last May, but the men have been working under it until a new one is drafted.

FULTON PEOPLE GET INSTANT ACTION

Those who have used it in Fulton are astonished at the INSTANT action of simple buckthorn bark, glycerine, etc., as mixed in Adler-i-ka. Because it acts on BOTH lower and upper bowel, ONE SPOONFUL Adler-i-ka relieves almost ANY CASE constipation, sour stomach or gas. It removes such surprising foul matter that a few doses often relieve or prevent appendicitis. A short treatment helps chronic stomach trouble. W. H. Gayer & Son, druggists. adv

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT

By S. W. STRAUS

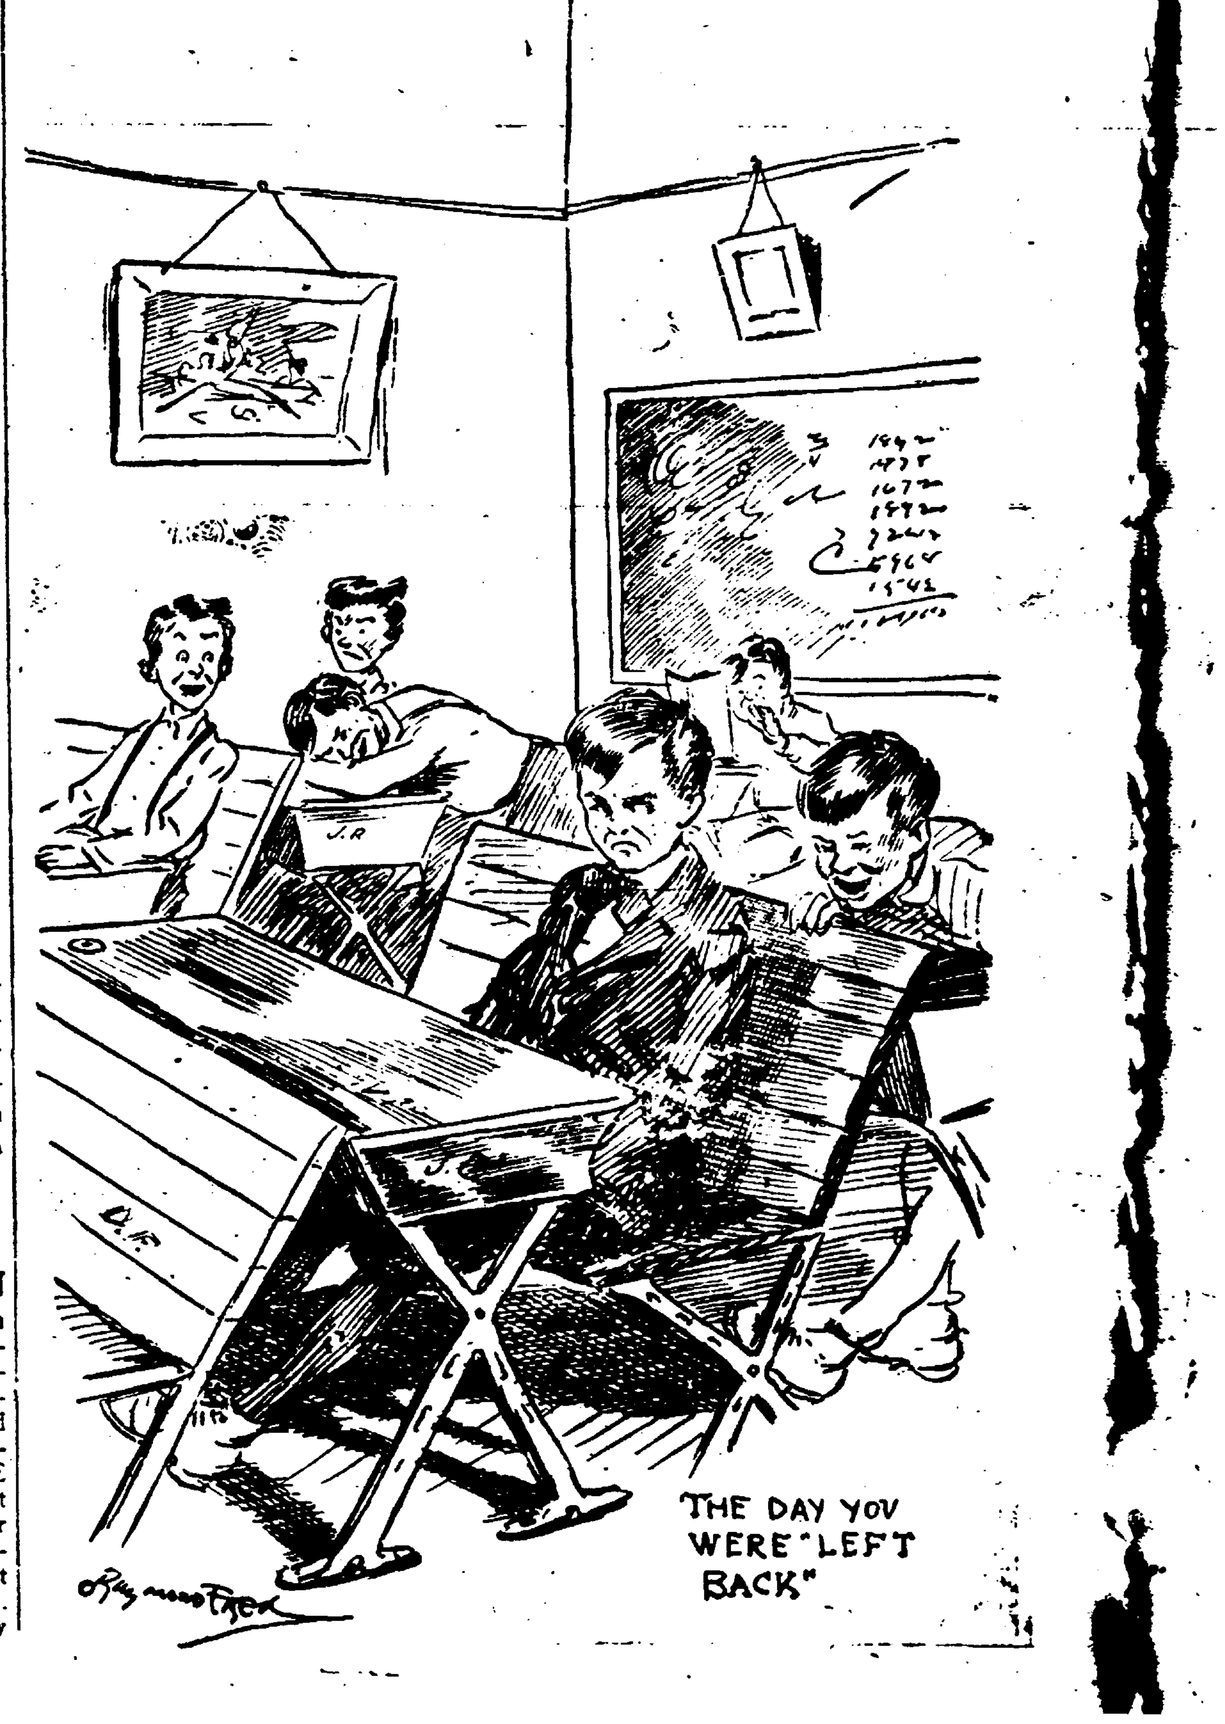
President American Society for Thrift

The average American housewife of today destroys what she has use for no longer, including old clothing and paper and this destruction of material that could be used again represents in money, it is said, a hundred million dollars a year. Rags and paper are badly needed by paper manufacturers, for they are unable to get the raw material from abroad now. So great is this demand that advertisements of the high prices paid for old rags and paper have been placarded in various public places to catch the eye of the housewife and even the United States government has taken a hand. The president of a large paper company in the East is quoted as saying that American thriftlessness in destroying old rags and papers is responsible for a score of abandoned paper mills in that immediate section of the country. They simply could not get the raw material to work with.

False pride is responsible for much of the lack of thrift in America, but, happily, our great business institutions are not so afflicted. President T. P. Shonts, of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company of New York, announces that the discarded papers picked up by the train guards are converted into real money and used to defray the expense of keeping the trains and stations neat. During the last six months the passengers on the subway left more than nine hundred tons of newspapers behind them when they left the trains, an average of five tons a day. These discarded newspapers net the company about $8,000.00 a year.

When the National Guard regiments were ordered to the border a few weeks ago, many of the members found themselves in a sad predicament. They were forced to go and leave behind dependent families. Just before leaving Chicago a serious-faced guardsman swung himself on a street car and fell into conversation with the man next to him. "I always made a good salary," he said, "but we lived it all up as we went along and now I don't know what will become of my wife and children." If a man only knew for a certainty that he would have to meet an emergency, and if he knew what kind of an emergency it would be, he would know how to prepare for it, and he would prepare. The trouble is he does not know. Preparedness for the rainy day is often the best means of warding it off.

Days You'll Never Forget



BELL-ANS
Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

INGALLS CROSSING

Mrs. W. A. Loomis returned Monday from a visit to her daughter, Mrs. H. C. Hewitt, at Sharon Hill, Pa. Ruth Loomis accompanied her there and will remain for several weeks.

* * *

C. S. Pritchard and family have moved to Syracuse.

* * *

Mrs. Paul Foster has been spending a few weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Thompson. She will leave today for Oberlin, Ohio, to join her husband, who has engaged in the undertaking business.

* * *

Mrs. M. G. Lewis and daughter, Marion, left this morning for Philadelphia, Pa., to spend a few weeks with Mr. Lewis.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. G. Northrup are entertaining their daughter from the west.

* * *

Miss Alice Vase, of Providence, R. I., has been spending the last two weeks at the Babcock homestead, left this morning for her home.

* * *

Merle Hopkins is spending a few days with friends at Clifford, N. Y.

* * *

Mrs. L. Kline and sons, of Minetto, were over Sunday guests of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Chesbro. They motored to Long Branch Sunday.

* * *

Miss Vera Chiffeu is visiting her aunt and family at Niagara Falls.

* * *

Mrs. Paul Baldwin returned Sunday. She spent five weeks with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Muchmore.

* * *

Mrs. H. A. Sutton and son, Clayton, were guests at J. Van Epps, in Fulton, Sunday.

* * *

Lora Everett, of Fulton, was an over Sunday guest of Mr. and Mrs. L. Eames.

* * *

Mr. George Hollenbeck was taken to the Fulton hospital last Wednesday. His condition is not considered serious.

* * *

Hay is a good crop here this year. The weather has been unusually good for harvesting the crop, but corn and potatoes need rain. The mercury has stood at ninety every day for nearly two weeks.

LEE ESTATE HAS MANY BONDS

In a recent issue of The Oswego Times it was shown that the transfer tax appraisal of the estate of the late Mrs. Eva Case Lee of Fulton, gives the gross value as $158,461.38. The net estate is $143,390.41, there being a deduction of $15,070.97 for debts and expenses. A detailed list of the stocks and bonds forming the bulk of the personal estate is given as follows:

Five Skaneateles bonds, $5,000, interest, $61.26; 1 Northern Pacific bond, $320; 5 Rochester, Syracuse and Eastern bonds, $3,750; 46 Granby Pulp & Paper bonds, $46,000; 5 Battle Island Paper bonds, $1,000, at $50 each, $250; 3 Hunter Bros. Paper Bonds, $1,000 each at $10, $30; 20 shares United States Express stock at 67 3-4, $1,355; 260 shares Citizens' National Bank stock (Fulton), $39,000; 21 shares Oswego & Syracuse railroad stock, par $50, $2,100; 5 shares First National Bank stock, at $125, $625; 3 shares Standard Oil Company of Kentucky, $735.

The following shares are given as having no value: 50 shares common capital stock of Battle Island Paper Company; 15 shares preferred stock of Auto Mail Distributing Company; 30 shares common stock of Auto Mail Distributing Company; 50 shares Porcupine Mining Company stock.

The remainder of Mrs. Lee's personal property was in mortgages, a land contract, promissory notes, a loan, cash in banks, $1,100.95; and household effects. There was received $788.63 from the State as the proceeds of a claim for land appropriation for barge canal purposes.

The real estate held by Mrs. Lee consisted of the Hart property (six houses in Fulton), $6,000; homestead lot, Fulton, $10,000; house, west side of First street, Fulton, $3,000; tenement house, Second street, Fulton, $2,000; Pruyn house, Second street, Fulton, $800; 2 vacant lots, Fultonia park, $200; about 10 acres of land, town of Volney, $1,500.

The appraisal gives a list of the Standard Oil stocks claimed by the estate but which are also claimed by the heirs of the deceased brothers of George M. Case, father of Mrs. Lee, who allege that under the will of Mr. Case, the residuary estate was to go to the children of his brothers if Mrs. Lee died without children. The value of the stocks is not definitely known but it it placed at from $90,000 to $100,000. Surrogate Miller has not yet determined the case, owing to the fact that further evidence is to be introduced. The original Standard Oil stocks were replaced by shares in a number of the subsidiaries of that company.

The following persons are mentioned as having an interest in the estate but the amounts have not been determined: Sallie Poter, Grace Potter, Allie Cook, Bessie Kellogg, Will Moody, Sam Case, cousins; Agnes McCaffrey, Fulton Library, Presbyterian church, May F. Willard, cousin; Dr. Charles R. Lee, husband, life estate.

The Skeel Estate.

The transfer tax appraisal of the estate of Monroe Skeel, late of Fulton, was filed today. The appraised value of the estate is $4,576.25 personal and $5,500 real; the debts and expenses were $679.72, leaving a net estate of $9,396.53. The widow and two daughters share in the estate and bequests of $100 to Mt. Pleasant, M. E. Church society and $50 to Mt. Adnah cemetery are made.

The report of Benjamin C. Rice as commissioner to take the evidence at Lapeer, Mich., of John Loughnane and George Gritzinger, witnesses to the will of Mrs. Harriet T. Lawton, was filed in Surrogate's office today. Mrs. Lawton divided her estate equally between her daughters, Hattie J. Sampson of Syracuse and Florence E. Miles of Lapeer, Mich., except for a bequest of $300 to Maude T. Lawton of Syracuse.

Cornelius Hayes Estate

The will of Cornelius Hayes, who died in this city last week, disposes of an estate valued at $1,000 personal property. He leaves three-fifths of the estate to a daughter, Frances L. Hayes, and the remaining one-fifth to be divided among the other children, Margaret V. McNamara, Chicago; Lieut. Daniel J. Hayes, M. R. C., now on duty at the Texas border; Mary Hayes Flakin, St. Louis, Mo.; Anna Hayes Mooney, Watertown, N. Y.; John F. Hayes, Oak Park, Ill.; Edwin C. Hayes, Buffalo; Helen C. Hayes, of New York. The will was witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. William H. Quigley.

The account of George D. Gass, as executor of the estate of M. Maria Howard, late of Mexico, was filed, showing the receipts to have been $5,470.01.

A petition was filed by Margaret M. Woodruff, for letters of administration on the estate of Martin Hess, late of Mexico. The value is $4,000 personal.

The account of Loretta E. Cook, as administrator of the estate of Martin Cook, deceased, was also filed.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

GREAT AMERICAN FOOT FEELING PINCH OF WAR

Chicago—Evidence of how the European war is pinching tender American toes and pocketbooks was shown here today at the closing session of the Illinois Shoe Retailers association.

O. L. Triebel, Jr., of Springfield, secretary, declared prices for shoes have jumped 20 to 40 per cent. during the last year and it is up to the consumer to pay the price.

Demand for leather for shoes for the European armies caused the advance.

Triebel said tan calfskin for shoes retailing at $5.00 sold at 30 cents a foot a year ago and now brings 47 cents; men's dull calf leather, formerly 30 cents, now sells for 44 cents; white calf for women's shoes, formerly sold for 28 cents, now sells at 55, and so on down the line. Linings, lacings, eyelets and buttons also have advanced in price.

SON OF MEXICAN BANDIT CHIEF IN OHIO MILITIA

Camp Willis, Columbus, O.—The son of a Mexican bandit chief is in the ranks of the Ohio national guardsmen here today. He is is Oscar Jones, private, Co. I, Second Regiment, of Kenton.

Oscar's father was chief of one of the lawless bands that ravage northern Mexico and the border.

"His escapades brought ruin to us and broke my mother's heart—that's why I'm in the ranks, hating my father's people," said Jones.

"Jones is a willing worker. He'll make a good soldier," said Capt. Edward Collins.

BANKERS HAVE IN VIEW ENJOYABLE JOURNEY

Members of the American Bankers' Association, of Syracuse and Fulton, are expected to attend the forty-second annual convention at Kansas City, Mo., from September 25 to 30.

Three special trains will be run to accommodate the financial men and their friends from the eastern states via the New York Central. These trains provide for three tours—one through the Yellowstone National Park and the Colorado Rockies, another through the Rocky Mountain National Park and the Colorado Rockies and the third direct to Kansas City and return.

Perfunctory Inquiry

"Johnny, aren't you getting into the habit of asking questions about things in which you are not really interested?"

"Maybe. But that's what our teacher does."—Washington Star.

FLOUR PRICES JUMP HIGHER

The price of flour has jumped approximately thirty-five cents per barrel, during the past ten days. Millers say the advance is due directly to the sharp rise which has taken place in wheat value in the last two weeks. The western spring wheat markets have advanced from 15 to 20 cents a bushel and the millers have been forced to pay the higher prices for their raw material.

The best bread flour, known in the trade as "spring patents," is now selling at from $6 to $6.25 per barrel. Pastry flour has advanced from $5.50 to $6.50 per barrel, while bakers "clears" is selling at from $5.50 to $6.00 per barrel.

There is a corresponding increase in rye and graham flour prices. For ry flour, from $5.15 to $* is asked, and for Graham stock, $6.50 per barrel is demanded.

POISON TROUT BIT HIM.

Fish Leaps Out of the Water to Assault an Angler.

Pasadena, Cal.—An angler who is the proprietor of a Pasadena cafe has documentary evidence of the following:

While fishing in Deep creek recently he spotted a twelve inch trout and tried for an hour to land it. Following it from rock to rock, spashing through the water in pursuit as it played its game of hide and seek, the weary fisherman finally closed in on the fish under a ledge which overlooked the water.

As he peered over the edge to land his game the trout leaped to his face and fastened itself in his jaw. It held on until two companions came to the rescue, beating off the assailant with the butt ends of casting rods.

The cafe proprietor's face became swollen to twice its normal size. He and his companions are warm in their praise of the efficiency of whisky as an antidote for venomous bites. They declare that a bottle which they had handy saved the unfortunate angler's life.

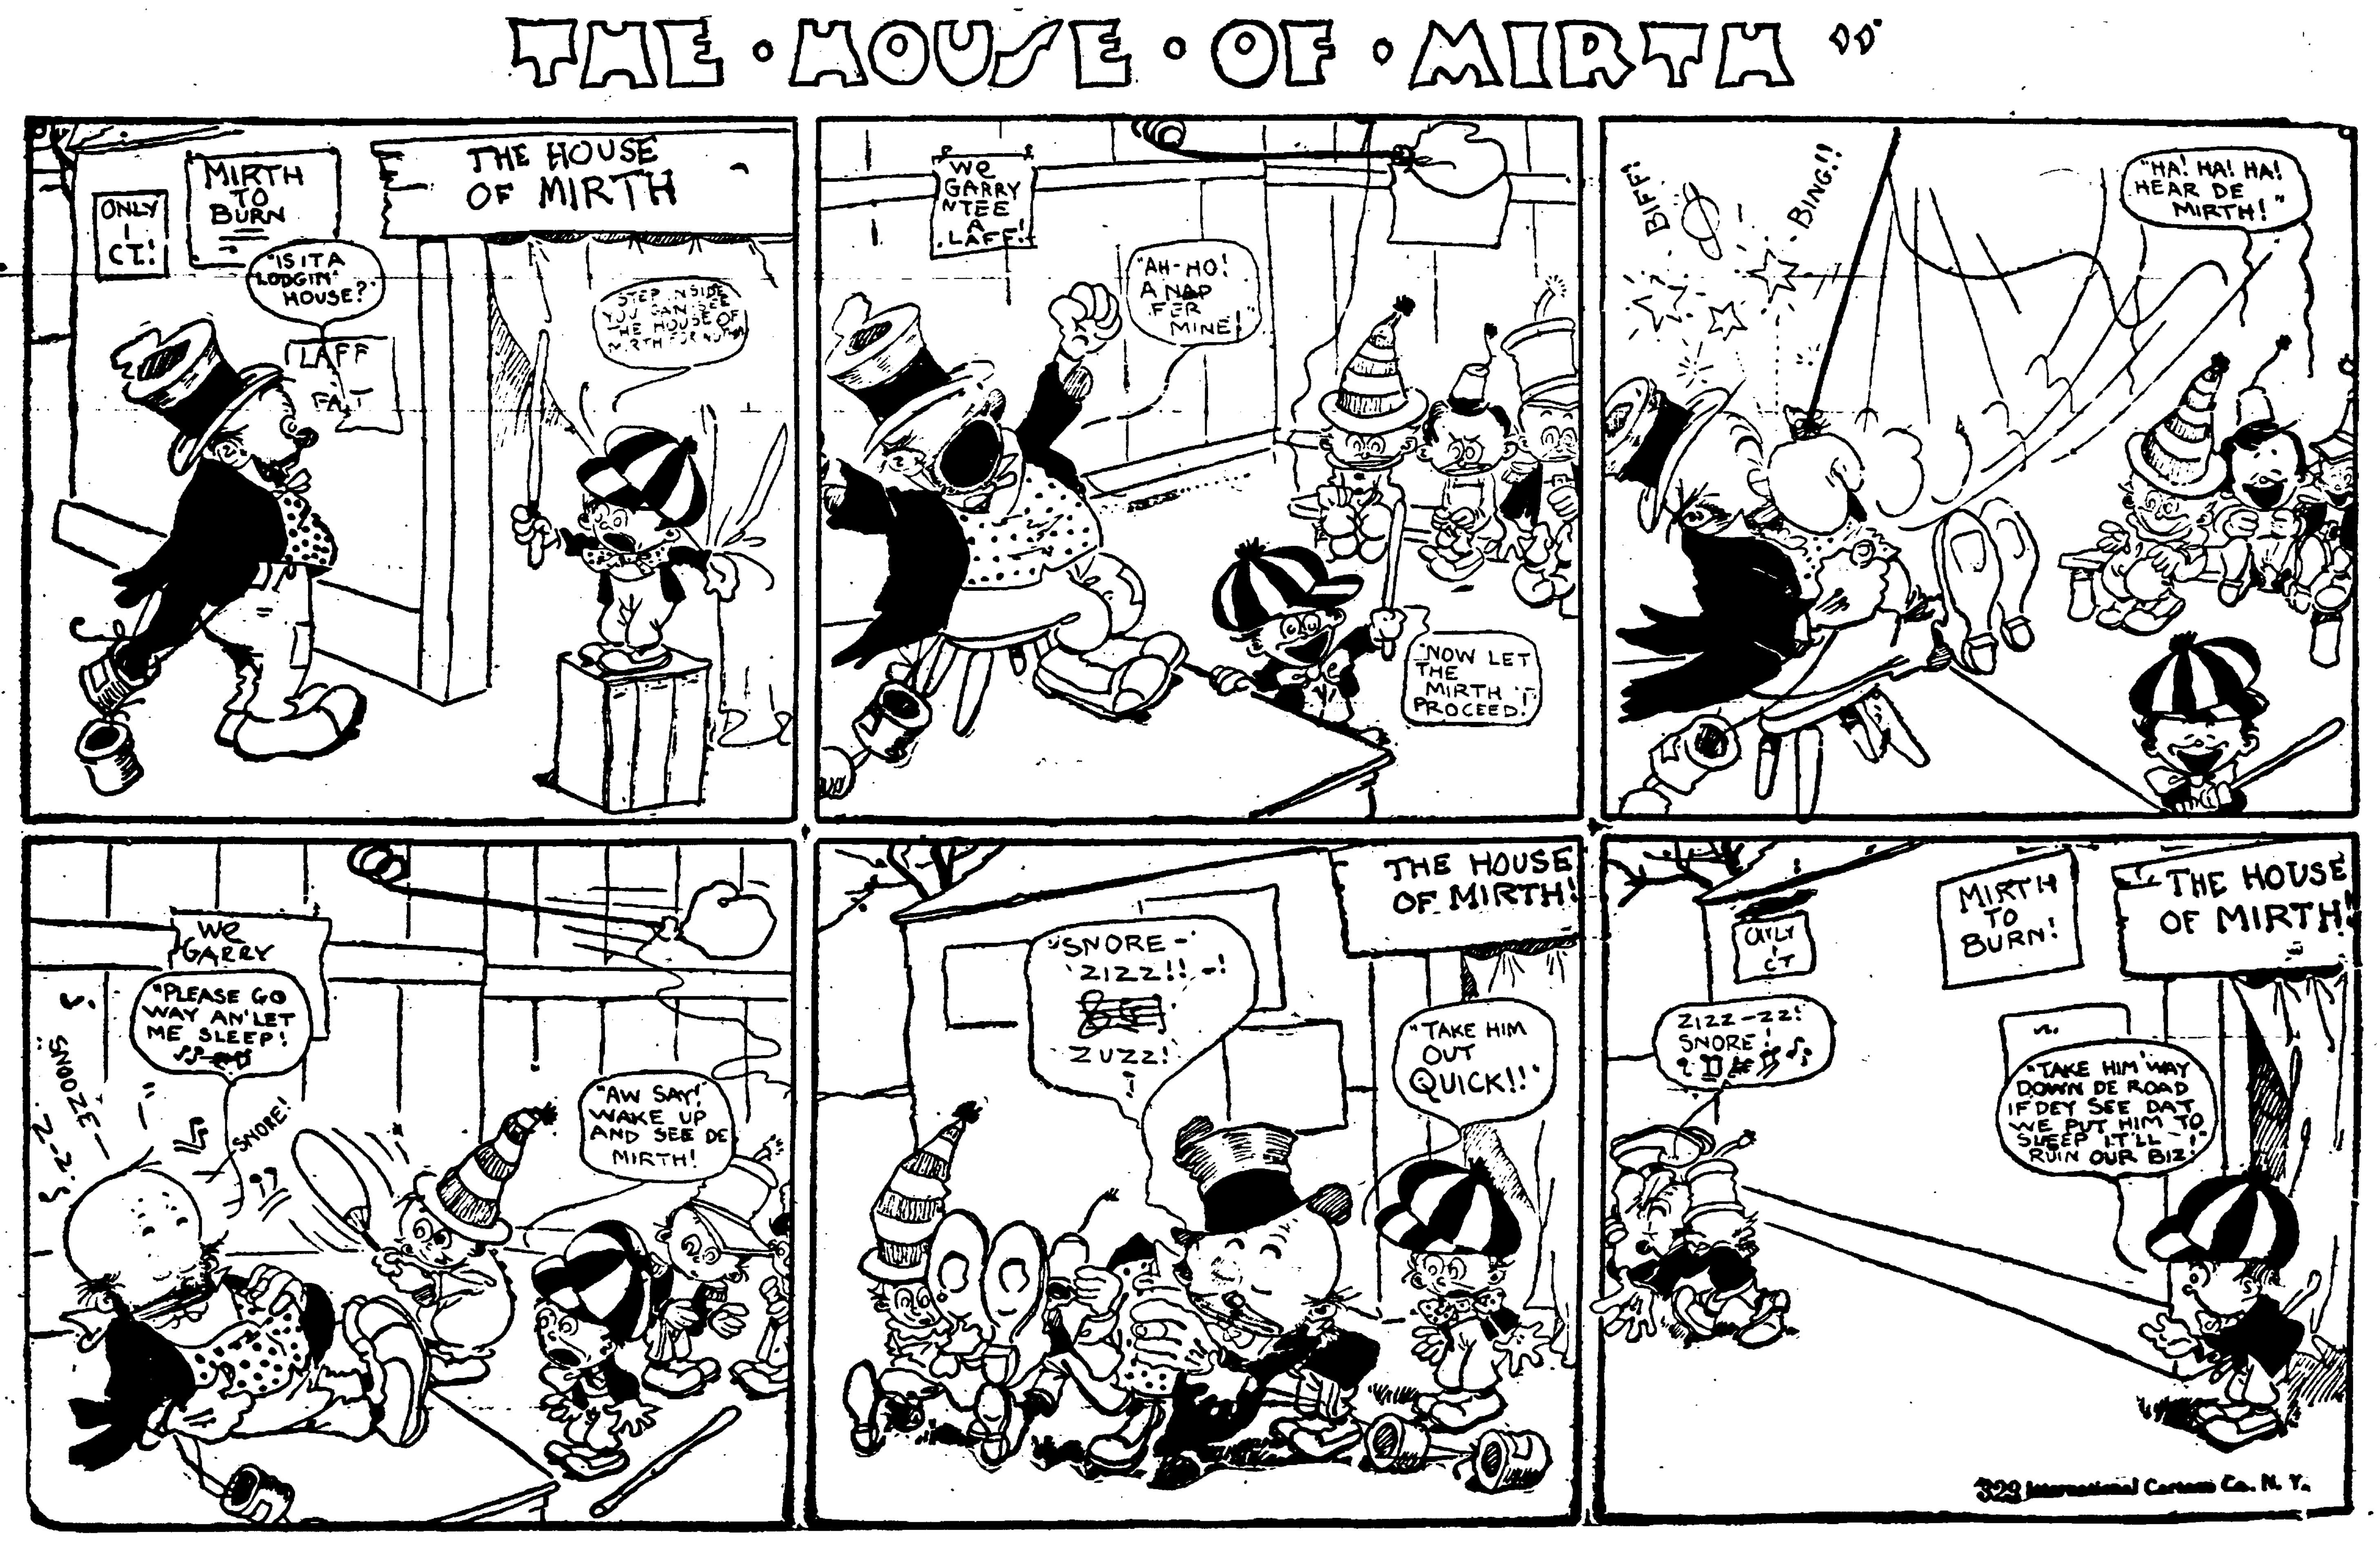
INDIANS GAVE HIM NAME.

Chief of Police of Albany, Ore., Has Interesting History.

Albany, Ore.—John Catlin, chief of police here, has an interesting history. He was first found by United States troops in 1852 among the Snake Indians of Oregon when he was three years old.

The Indians said his father and mother had been killed and that they did not know his name, so they gave him the name of John Catlin.

He served through the civil war as a bugler and was in the army for twenty-five years after that until he returned to Albany, where he has been a police official ever since.



DAIRYMEN WANT HIGHER PRICES

May Organize for Big Demand Upon Milk Distributors---Complaints of Hard Lines.

If plans now in the making are carried out New York state may witness this fall an organized attempt by farmers to compel the milk distributing companies to pay them more money for their product. Originators of the plan, say that a great strike is not impossible—such a strike as the dairymen around Chicago undertook successfully last spring, even going to the extreme of employing pickets and adopting the other tactics of the labor unions.

From many parts of the state come dismal reports of the dairyman's condition. For years it has been pictured in hues the darkness of which has been accentuated in the last two years by the alarming rise in the cost of staples which the farmer and his family is forced to purchase.

On the one hand there is the testimony of many dairymen backed by the investigations of the State College of Agriculture at Cornell, that they are barely making a living or are losing money. Their imagination excited by the prices the city consumers pay for bottled milk the farmers say they are not getting a fair share of the profits.

On the other hand, the big companies that buy the milk from the producer and distribute it, declare that their own expenses are so great despite economical management that their profit on each quart is only a fraction of a cent, and, that they could not pay the farmer more without raising the price to the consumer. Without attempting to minimize the problems of the farmer the companies declare that his prosperity lies in his own hands, for the reason that the richer the milk the more he gets for it and, that the producers of rich milk are making a good living.

Supposedly disinterested investigators at Cornell and John J. Dillon, state commissioner of foods and markets, insist that the average cow, under present conditions, does not pay; that two-thirds of the farmers are no better off than their hired men, in the matter of labor income; that farmers are quitting the milk business; that the dairying industry is not keeping pace with the increase in population and that there is danger of losing its place at the head of the list of dairy states.

Heroic Reform Needed.

"The state," said Commissioner Dillon, "cannot afford to let such an important industry decline, and statistics show that it is relatively on the decline. Not only individual but whole sections of the state are going out of the business of producing milk and unless the industry can be put on a paying basis our supply of milk will not be sufficient for city needs and the state will lose the profit and the prestige it has enjoyed from its dairy farms."

Mr. Dillon is trying to persuade the farmers to establish an association and sell their milk in the open market in co-operation with the Department of Foods and Markets. Meanwhile two other agencies are at work—one designed to solve the puzzle by state investigation and legislation, and the other bent on getting the farmers into a combination that shall dictate prices as did the milk producers' association which engineered the Chicago strike.

The first of these two agencies is the Wicks committee of the New York legislature. The second is the dairyman's league, which is especially active in Western New York and has branches in five states, for the milk problem is not alone confined to this state.

The Wicks committee, so-called because its chairman is Senator Charles W. Wicks, has already heard testimony at Oswego, Ithaca, Binghamton, Cortland and other points in this section and expects to quest officers of the distributing companies in New York city before it ends its work.

TAYLOR—ALLEN

Mr. Jesse Smith Taylor and Miss Ethel M. Allen, both well known and popular young people of Fulton, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Allen, of 409 South Sixth street this morning at eight o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. D. Holmes, pastor of the State street M. E. Church and the contracting parties were attended by Miss Grace E. Chesbro and Mr. Alex Mansfield.

After the wedding breakfast the happy couple left for New York and after their wedding tour will make their future home in Milford, Conn. The best wishes of a host of friends is extended to them.

SKEEL—GARRISON

Clarence Skeel and Miss Lizzie Garrison were married by Rev. H. D. Holmes at the parsonage Monday evening at eight o'clock. They will make their home on a farm at Volney.

OPPOSITION TO MILITARY LAW

Petitioners Against Welsh Law Declare Its Provisions More Drastic Than Kaiser's Way of Getting Troops.

Petitions have been circulated and signed by hundreds of Central New Yorkers, both men and women, demanding the repeal of the conscription laws passed by the last legislature. The petitions were gathered by the New York Committee Opposed to Conscription Laws and will shortly be presented to the chief executive.

Members of the committee backing the movement and some of those who have signed the petitions declare that Germany, the most military nation, would not attempt to go as far in military training as the Welsh law provides. Under this law the military training commission of the state will begin training children above the age of eight years in all elementary and secondary schools. The training is to begin after September 1. Under the Slater law enacted at the same time, military training of not more than three hours per week will be forced on all boys between sixteen and nineteen years of age, in schools and colleges, with state military training camps in the summer.

The greatest protest is made against the Stivers law, which gives the Governor the power of drafting all males of military age into the reserve militia. The enrollment of all men in the state for the militia will begin in a few weeks. The law enables the governor to direct the mayors of all cities to draft men into the National Guard in the reserve militia in case of "insurrection, invasion, tumult, riot, breach of the peace, or imminent danger thereof." The law also gives the governor the power of draft to fill up the militia companies.

As the Stivers law became effective the day it was passed all able bodied men of the state are subject to the conscription law. It is said in some quarters that many residents of New York state will move to other states to escape the law, and others will move rather than have their children submit to the drills.

In other quarters it is pointed out that a state wide conscription such as provided by the law would be a great hindrance to manufacturing industries and might, in some cases, cause some plants to shut down entirely.

The way to test this newspaper's strength is by inserting an ad in the Miscellaneous Want Column. See rates on fifth page.

YOUR TOWN
YOUR CHAUTAUQUA
YOUR SEASON TICKET

CHAUTAUQUA WEEK IS COMING. IT HAS BEEN MADE POSSIBLE FOR YOUR TOWN AND FOR YOU BY A MONEY GUARANTEE GIVEN BY OVER FIFTY PUBLIC SPIRITED CITIZENS. THEY ARE DEVOTING TIME, ENERGY AND HARD WORK TO MAKE IT A SUCCESS. THEY ASK ONLY YOUR CO-OPERATION.

THE LOCAL COMMITTEE HAS 750 SEASON TICKETS, WHICH WILL BE SOLD AT $2.00 EACH. WHEN THESE ARE GONE NONE CAN BE BOUGHT FOR LESS THAN $2.50 AND THEN ONLY AT THE GATE AFTER THE OPENING OF CHAUTAUQUA. THE $2.00 TICKETS CAN BE SECURED ONLY FROM THE LOCAL COMMITTEE. AT NO TIME WILL THERE BE A REDUCTION IN THESE PRICES.

SINGLE ADMISSIONS TO THE SEVENTEEN PROGRAMS AGGREGATE OVER $6.70. YOU CAN MISS TWO-THIRDS OF THE NUMBERS AND THEN SAVE MONEY BY HAVING A SEASON TICKET.

SEASON TICKETS ARE TRANSFERABLE ONLY WITHIN THE OWNER'S FAMILY. CHILDREN'S TICKETS, $1.00 EACH, ADMIT CHILDREN AGED FROM SIX TO FOURTEEN YEARS, INCLUSIVE, TO ALL PROGRAMS AS WELL AS TO THE JUNIOR CHAUTAUQUA.

A BIG OPPORTUNITY IS OFFERED YOU, NOT IN THE SENSE OF A BARGAIN, ALTHOUGH A $2.00 SEASON TICKET FOR THE SIX BIG DAYS IS A BIG BARGAIN. YOUR OPPORTUNITY LIES IN BOOSTING YOUR TOWN BY BOOSTING THE CHAUTAUQUA.

THIS IS A COMMUNITY WELFARE WEEK, WORTH WHILE IN EVERY RESPECT—WITH ITS CLEAN ENTERTAINMENT, INSPIRING MUSIC AND INSTRUCTIVE LECTURES. IT LEAVES YOU AND YOUR TOWN BIGGER AND BETTER, WITH NO REGRETS OR DISSATISFACTION AS AN AFTERMATH.

TWO DOLLARS INVESTED IN A SEASON TICKET BRINGS YOU EVER INCREASING DIVIDENDS. SWING INTO LINE AND DO YOUR PART WITH THOSE WHO ARE WORKING TO MAKE THIS THE GREATEST WEEK OF THE YEAR.

WOODMEN OF AMERICA GIVEN BEAUTIFUL URN

The Modern Woodmen of America were presented last evening with a beautiful urn, by two local, merry Woodmen, Neighbors Clayton Brewer and Fred Perchway. The gift is a model of one of the many individual cottages maintained near Colorado Springs for the benefit of members afflicted with tuberculosis. The superstructure consists of a symmetrical base, with drawers into which the pebbles are dropped. The material is selected cypress, artistically burnt. The letters M. W. A. appear on both sides of the base, in the society colors, which are red, white and green.

* * *

Nearly one hundred new uniforms have been ordered to date, in preparation for the preparedness parade, to be held in Oswego August 12th.

* * *

District Deputy J. J. Buckley was in attendance last evening to notify the Fulton Camp that on August 23rd the National lecturer, Thomas E. Duffy has an open date which can be secured by this camp if desired. Neighbors George W. Roy, Irving Ellis and Frank Hyde were appointed a committee to make arrangements for this regardless of the affiliations.

Local and Personal

Mr. Herbert Adkins and Prof. J. R. Fairgrieve, are in Syracuse today investigating the public school accounting system which has been recommended by the state officials.

* * *

Mr. Earl Washburn, of Syracuse, was the guest of friends in Fulton, yesterday.

* * *

Harry Wilson was taken to the Rochester Industrial school early this morning. He was sentenced to an indefinite term by acting City Judge Rice yesterday.

* * *

Miss Jane Stapleton, of Oneonta, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. James Boland. A party was given yesterday afternoon in honor of Miss Stapleton, at North Bay. Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. James Boland, Misses Elizabeth and Marguerite Culkin, Misses Alice and Agnes McCaffrey, and Mr. and Mrs C. H. Boland.

* * *

The Maccabee baseball team will play the Oswego Milling Company's team at Oswego Saturday.

* * *

The Misses Marguerite and Hilda Clark, daughters of Mrs. Mary Clark, are recovering from the effects of an operation at a Syracuse hospital.

* * *

The old house which is being moved through south Fourth street has blockaded traffic on that thoroughfare for the past few days.

* * *

William Gravely, formerly employed by James Campbell, has been taken to the Ogdensburg Hospital.

* * *

Fully two thousand persons were at the city plaza last evening to be entertained by our local band. After rendering a few overtures the band played some dance music and many of our prominent citizens availed themselves of the opportunity to enjoy a pleasant hour in the dancing arena.

THE QUIRK TODAY

For intensely dramatic action, and a plot which gives Frank Sheridan, the star of the piece, full scope for his admittedly great powers as a character actor, "The Struggle," which is at the Quirk Theatre today is easily in the front rank of thrilling photodramas. The story is absorbing in its intensity, packed full of exciting scenes, alive with virility, and depicts with startling fidelity the manner in which the stern training in self-repression of army life modifies the elemental passions which are ever lurking just beneath the surface of the man proud of his strength. Moral weakness on one side is bolstered up by moral strength on the other, and while the weak man wins in the beginning, he loses, realizes his weakness and endeavors to recover his lost ground, but it is too late.

HOTEL ARRIVALS

The following are the arrivals at the Clark House: G. R. Conyne, New York city; G. S. Newton, Buffalo, N. Y.; Max Berger, Auburn, N. Y.; F. E. Brown, Boston, Mass.; Dr. M. J. Terry, Pulaski, N. Y

CASTORIA
For Infants and Children
In Use For Over 30 Years
Always bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Notice! Special Sale!

on

HAMMOCKS
ICE CREAM FREEZERS
REFRIGERATORS
and
PORCH SHADES

WILL BE SOLD AT SACRIFICE

People's Hardware Co., Inc

NAVY'S NEW GUN

Will Be Mounted on Battleships For Use Against Air Craft.

BELIEVED TO BE EFFECTIVE.

Is of Three Inch Bore and of 50 Calibers, and Claim Is That It Will Shoot Five Miles Straight Up Into the Air. Already Mounted on Nevada and Pennsylvania.

Washington.—Forty of the new anti air craft guns for use by the American navy have been completed and will be mounted on twenty battleships of the Atlantic fleet as rapidly as is possible without interfering with the summer maneuvers. Two of the newest dread-

Photos by American Press Association.
NEVADA AND TYPE OF NEW ANTI-AIR CRAFT GUN.

naughts of the Atlantic fleet, the Pennsylvania and the Nevada, have already been equipped with these guns.

American naval officers contend that these are the most effective guns in the world for use against air craft. This claim is set up in a statement recently issued by Secretary Daniels, in which he says:

"Several of the newest dreadnaughts of the Atlantic fleet are now equipped with the most effective anti-air craft guns in the world. A quantity of these guns are completed and will be mounted on other vessels as rapidly as ships become available for navy yard work. Three years ago we had no anti-air craft guns. The design then under consideration, which proposed the adaptation of former secondary battery guns, had to be discarded."

The gun is of three inch bore and of fifty calibers. The claim made for it by naval ordnance experts is that it will shoot five miles straight up into the air.

OWL CAR FOR LOVERS.

Traction Magnate Out West Will Make New Arrangements.

Cleveland, O.—That all the world still loves a lover is to be demonstrated by Joseph Jordan of Willoughby, vice president and general manager of the Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern railroad.

"And I'm going to see that every one of them gets a square deal if my influence counts for anything," he said.

Mr. Jordan learned that young men who go to see their "best girls" in Lake county and take the last car back to Cleveland at night must wait three-quarters of an hour for a city car at the East Cleveland "Y" after midnight before they can continue their journey.

"I shall take the matter up with John Stanley of the Cleveland Railroad company and arrange with him to have a city car wait for the last interurban car," Mr. Jordan said.

OPERATION ON SKULL REFORMS PRISONER

Convict's Change Causes Jersey Pardon Board to Grant Him Freedom. Once Rebellious, Now Gentle.

Trenton, N. J.—The New Jersey court of pardons announced recently that at its meeting a long list of applications from convicts for pardon and parole had been considered.

A noteworthy case for parole acted upon favorably was that of James Szikely, a Hungarian, sentenced to serve thirty years in state prison for killing a fellow countryman in Warren county. The murder was particularly brutal. Szikely manifested morose tendencies in prison and complained continually of pains in his head. Dr. Martin W. Redden, a surgeon of Trenton, and the visiting prison physician, decided to operate on the prisoner's skull. For a time after the operation the man hovered between life and death, but his condition improved and he was restored to his faculties. From a sullen, rebellious prisoner he became a willing, eager and kindly worker. He could remember nothing whatever about the crime for which he had been given a long sentence. The operation established a precedent in the medical world.

MISS MAY JONES SITS IN GOVERNOR'S CHAIR

Acts as North Carolina Executive While Governor Craig is Detained From Capital.

Raleigh, N. C.—While Governor Craig was isolated at Asheville on account of the floods that put out of commission train service between that part of the state and this, Miss May Jones, his private secretary, performed the duties of chief executive.

She was free to exercise all powers of the office except those constitutionally invested in the governor. Her only assistant was Miss Mamie C. Turner, the newly appointed executive secretary, who has assumed her duties, succeeding Joseph J. Mackay, Jr., who resigned.

This is perhaps the only governor's office in the United States where all its employees are women. During the day Miss Jones announced the appointment of a hundred delegates who are to represent North Carolina officially at four gatherings, including the deeper waterways convention and the national negro educational conference. She also announced that she had issued extradition papers for an alleged bigamist wanted in Georgia and held in this state.

HOUSE HAS MELON FEAST.

Many Washington Notables Turn Out For Adamson's Party.

Washington.—Forty Georgia watermelons were cut in the rooms of the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce recently, and Chairman Adamson contributed to an early adjournment of the lower body when he announced on the floor that all members were invited to attend the cutting.

Secretary McAdoo, Assistant Secretary Newton, First Assistant Postmaster General Roper, Speaker Clark and a hundred members of the house and members of the press gallery were on hand. As the last melon was cut Representative James R. Mann proposed three cheers and a tiger for Charley Adamson and the Georgia watermelon. Two score women, the wives of house members, joined in the cheering.

A Modern Slave of the Hearth.

Woman is tired of a home that is too large, where the third floor gets dirty while she is cleaning the first, of a home that cannot be left lest it should be burglarized, of a home where there is always a slate wrong or a broken window or a shortage of coal. She is tired of being immolated on the domestic hearth.—W. L. George in Harper's Magazine.

FOR SALE

Bar Iron and Steel, Round, Flat and Square; Angels, Chenells, I Beams and Shafting.

Ready for Prompt Delivery

Oswego Paper Stock Co.
Phone 1118-W Oswego, N. Y.

INSURANCE—REAL ESTATE
Surety Bonds of All Kinds
Real Estate Loans

FREDERICK G. SPENCER
Phone 122

MISCELLANEOUS WANTS

Advertisements under this heading 1 cent a word each insertion. No charge less than 15 cents.

Wanted—Good men to work in erecting room. Dilts Machine Works, Inc. 487

For Rent—Two double rooms, furnished, at 33 South Second street. Inquire of Robert Frazier. 1tp

Wanted—Girls at 551 W. Third St. Phone 175. 486

Free Offer—3 loads of building stone, at 61 East First street, rear. 487

NEW ANTI-HOG CHOLERA SERUM

Farmers May Have Free Use of It---A Sure Preventive of Foot and Mouth Disease

Oswego county farmers who have been standing in fear of another foot and mouth disease epidemic throughout this section will be interested in a new method of preparing anti-hog-cholera serum which renders the product absolutely free from that plague. The serum has been discovered by the Department of Agriculture experts in animal industry. As far as known it is not yet being manufactured, nor is it being sold by any of the commercial serum laboratories. Having been discovered by a department of the Federal government anyone is free to use it.

The advantage claimed for the new method is that it makes possible the production of anti-hog cholera serum which can be quickly sterilized by heat to a point that will absolutely kill any germs of the foot and mouth disease and so yield a serum that is absolutely safe, even if taken from a hog which might harbor foot and mouth disease, and yet give no indication of being infected.

The secret of the new method lies in the use of a slight amount of an extract from ordinary white navy beans. The addition of this extract to the defibrinated hog-cholera-immune blood (which has been the form of serum used in the past) produces a clear serum. To increase the yield of clear serum by this method the discoverers added a small amount of ordinary salt, obtaining from seventy to seventy-four per cent. of clear serum. This it was found could be heated for thirty minutes at a temperature of 60 degrees centigrade without changing its consistency or lessening in any way its effectiveness in preventing hog cholera. The heating to this point for this length of time is more than sufficient to kill any germs of foot and mouth disease which might accidentally be present. This has been proved by practical tests.

By the former process it was possible ordinarily to secure only about fifty per cent. of serum, while under the new method it is possible to secure as high as seventy-four per cent. of clear serum, moreover, can be completely sterilized in thirty minutes, where the old serum had to be heated steadily for twelve hours.

The First Gentleman.

Who was the first "gentleman?" The Prince of Darkness has been pronounced one, but only mortals can fairly count. According to John Bull's time, there was no gentleman when Adam delved and Eve span. The first of them soon arrived, however, for, according to Dame Juliana Berners, writing upon coat armor in 1486, "Cain became a churl from the curse of God and Seth a gentleman through his father's and mother's blessing." That is to say, Seth was the first man who could boast of "family," Cain having been cast out of the pale, while Abel presumably perished too young.—London Chronicle.

Ancient Troy.

The site of ancient Troy lies between the Dardanelles and the Arabian gulf in Asia Minor.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

Chiclets Certainly Are Good

That's the common verdict in this City on Adams Chiclets—the new sensation in gum. There's a box like the one shown on every gum counter in town—and they're going fast. Because they're so good. Candy and gum. Snow-white, honey-sweet, delightfully pure. Melt them in your mouth, and when the candy's all gone, chew the gum. Delicious! New—in shape and make-up—and fine for after meals. And for your nickel—10 Chiclets. Ten that are there!

AMERICAN CHICLE COMPANY

10 for 5c

Look for this box on the counter

ADAMS Chiclets

LEAVES CANADIAN ARMY TO REJOIN U. S. COLORS

Camp Willis, Columbus, O.—Three weeks ago, Private Harry E. Smith was drilling around Camp Borden in Canada to the martial air of "God Save the King."

To-day he is tramping around Camp Willis to the same air, but the words of the song have a different meaning.

Now he is Lieutenant Harry E. Smith of Co. J, Second Regiment of Kenton. Tired of the monotony of an annual camping trip and listless practice at his local armory during winter evenings, Smith resigned his commission in his regiment at Kenton on February 29. He wanted action.

He started for it the next morning by leaving for Detroit. From there he proceeded to Toronto, Canada, where he enlisted in the 124th Battalion of the Canadian expeditionary forces. He has been sent back and forth to various Canadian training camps ever since.

Had Found Her.

A young Swede appeared at the county judge's office and asked for a license.

"What kind of a license?" asked the judge. "A hunting license?"

"No," was the answer. "Aye tank aye bane hunting long enough. Aye want marriage license."—Everybody's Magazine.

Fill your home atmosphere with exquisite lasting fragrance—

ED. PINAUD'S LILAC

The great French perfume, winner of highest international awards. Each drop as sweet and fragrant as the living Lilac blossom. A celebrated connoisseur said: "I don't see how you can sell such a remarkable perfume for 75 cents a bottle"—and remember each bottle contains 6 oz.—it is wonderful value. Try it. Ask your dealer today for ED. PINAUD'S LILAC. For 10 cents our American offices will send you a testing bottle. Write today.

PARFUMERIE ED. PINAUD, Dept. M ED. PINAUD Bldg., New York

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

As It Looks From The Back.

Blue gingham in a cool shade of blue, trimmed with striped lawn makes up this morning frock in effective fashion.

This very attractive frock for morning wear is carried out in China blue gingham trimmed with striped lawn. The back view is particularly interesting, the hip-yoke being laced over the full gathered skirt, which is plain in front. In medium size the costume requires 5¾ yards 36-inch gingham with ¾ yard of lawn for collar and cuffs.

The home dressmaker who is apt with her needle ought to be able to construct this frock in a day, as it does not require a great deal of work. First the seams of the waist are closed, after which the front is hemmed on the right side. The large "O" perforations indicate the center of the front. Plait front and back placing single "T" on corresponding small "o" perforations and tack. Gather between double "TT" perforations and 2 inches above. Adjust stay under gathers, then sew the collar to the neck edge, notches and center-backs even.

Now the seams of the sleeve and turnback cuff may be closed as notched. Line cuff, sew to sleeve, seams even, and sew in armhole as notched. The front edge of the right front of the skirt should be turned under next, as it appears to be a continuation of the hem in the waist. Lap right front gore on left, edges underneath even; stitch 1 inch from fold leaving edges free above single large "O" perforation in right front gore for placket. Gather back gore between double "TT" perforations; adjust yoke on back gore, and bring back edge of yoke to center back, work eyelets and lace. Join gores as notched.

To make the plaited trimming above the yoke at the back, fold trimming piece through the center and baste edges together. Plait placing "T" on small "o" perforations; and continue plaiting (equal distances apart, making 8 plaits in all) turning all plaits in the same direction. Sew to upper edge of skirt at center back.

A pocket may be added to the front if desired.

Pictorial Review Costume No. 6955. Sizes, 34 to 46 inches bust. Price, 15 cents.

Out of the Dungeon

A Story of Ancient England

By F. A. MITCHEL

Before England became united under one government there were many kings there. These kings ruled little tracts that afterward became counties, and their rulers became nobles. The full regalia of a peer of England includes a coronet, and the fact that these petty kings were in time reduced from royalty to nobility is the reason why the higher British nobles wear a kingly headgear.

The residences of these kings were not called palaces, but castles. They were usually built on an eminence and were surrounded by heavy walls and a moat and the entrance was protected by a drawbridge. The reason for this was that the sovereign of all England had very little power, and in consequence the subkings were usually fighting with each other and needed to live in fortified homes.

Away back in early times when this feudal system was the only English system of laws known there was a king of Gloucester. He had been a powerful sovereign in his day and had won many victories over the neighboring potentates. He and the sovereign of Warwick had been in perpetual warfare and Gloucester had conquered his enemy, who had fled, no one knew where, with his wife and child, the latter a boy only a few years old. Afterward one of Warwick's subjects named Conrad led an army against Gloucester's forces and, achieving his independence, made himself king.

In this contest a young man not over twenty-one or twenty-two years old distinguished himself fighting in the ranks of Warwick. He was captured and imprisoned in one of the dungeons under Gloucester castle. There he remained for a long while forgotten.

Meanwhile the new king of Warwick was becoming daily more powerful and his former enemy, Gloucester, was growing old and the number of his armed retainers was diminishing. At last it occurred to Conrad that he might overthrow his neighbor and add his kingdom to his own.

In order to pick a quarrel with Gloucester, Conrad went to Gloucester castle to make upon the old king certain insolent demands that he knew would not be granted. While there he saw the king's daughter, Eleanor, a beautiful girl who had just come to a marriageable age. Upon beholding her he agreed to withdraw his demands provided the king would give him his daughter to wife.

Now, Conrad was not only a bad man, but he was very repulsive physically.

The old king of Gloucester, aware that he no longer possessed the power to resist a strong enemy, knew not what to say to Conrad's proposition.

Eleanor understood her father's position and the terrible alternative before her. Either she must become the wife of her father's enemy or he would be overpowered, and they would meet the fate they had inflicted on the real king of Warwick. She had often heard the story of his flight with his wife and child and regretted that her father had been instrumental in bringing about his fall and the rise of the usurper. And now the latter had come to revenge the man he had driven from his kingdom.

Eleanor had never seen the usurper and before deciding consented to meet him. When he came into her presence he bent his long body on his bandy legs, the plume of his hat sweeping the floor, expressing at the same time his admiration in a leer. She could not conceal her disgust. Turning from him, she swept out of the room.

The hot blood mounted to Conrad's cheek. He scowled, half drew his sword, then thrust it back into its scabbard and, stalking out into the courtyard, mounted his horse and, followed by his attendants, rode out through the castle gateway, crossed the drawbridge and went down the declivity.

Nothing remained for the old king of Gloucester but to put his castle in as good a state for defense as possible, arm his retainers and sell his kingdom as dearly as possible. His daughter did what she could to assist in the preparations, but her efforts were confined principally to getting together material that would be needed by the wounded. She knew that there were prisoners in the dungeons below, and she went down there to see if any of them could be persuaded to fight for the king of Gloucester.

A young man, pale from confinement, was led out to her. It was some time before he could see her in the strong light.

"Who are you?" she asked.

"I was taken prisoner, I know not how long ago, fighting in the army of Conrad the usurper."

"Why do you call him the usurper?"

"Because there is but one king of Warwick, and he is not on the throne."

"We are to be attacked by this pretended king of Warwick."

"Grant me leave to fight for you, good lady, and I will do so."

"Will you fight for the king of Gloucester?"

"No; for you."

"What is your name?"

"Harold."

At a signal from Eleanor the young man's chains were knocked off him. He was taken up into the castle, where he was washed and fed and armed for a soldier. The next day he met Eleanor hurrying through the courtyard and said to her:

"Good lady, have I your permission to point out to you certain weak points in the castle?"

"You have."

Taking her to a part of the wall he showed her that it was ready to tumble. Then, in the armory, he convinced her that most of the weapons were blunt and certain armor had rusted till it could be punctured with a wooden sword. Leading her here and there, he showed her various imperfections, and she gave orders that they should be made good.

Going to her father, she asked him who was to lead in the defense. He replied that he would command. Then she told him about the released prisoner who had noticed the deficiencies and suggested that he be made second in command since he seemed to have been trained for a soldier and there were no leaders among the defenders of the castle. The king said that he cared not who was second in command, for all must obey his own orders. But it made no difference, he added, who commanded since defeat was inevitable.

When Eleanor told Harold that he would command under her father he said to her:

"Thanks, lady, for an opportunity to crack crowns with this bandy legged, red headed usurper. If we do not knock the circlet off his head and the scepter out of his hand, then I die here in Gloucester castle."

This encouraged Eleanor, though she did not understand what he meant by cracking crowns, nor could she account for his desire to defeat a man in whose ranks he had fought. But she was so intent on saving the kingdom from the enemy that she gave no thought to anything else.

Harold at once took charge of all preparations. In this he was not subject to interference, for the old king was lamenting his fate in his apartments. At last the army of Conrad was seen marching in the valley, and when it reached the bottom of the hill on which Gloucester castle was situated the men encircled it, and it was evident that if they did not take it by storm they would starve the garrison into subjection.

The king of Gloucester came out clad in a suit of armor, but it was too heavy for his reduced strength. He stumbled and fell under its weight and was carried back to his room. This gave Harold full control. He gave Eleanor his plan. It was to act so that the invaders would believe that they had only to take their ease for a short time and their enemies would have to surrender for want of provisions. When they seemed most confident Harold would strike.

So he sent a deputation to say that since they had but five days' provisions the men of Gloucester must surrender and to ask what terms would be granted. Conrad said that he would grant no conditions. The deputation returned in the evening, and Conrad expected to receive a surrender the next day. Till midnight he and his army made the night ring with song and shouting. They had not finished carousing when the castle clock struck 2. Slowly the portcullis was raised, the drawbridge (the chains had been oiled to prevent a rattle) let down, and the little army of Gloucester, led by Harold, silently emerged and, dividing into four bands, bore down from the four points of the compass upon the men of Conrad and with a yell began to stab and hack those who were sober enough to resist them and cut down those who attempted to rise.

Harold had noted the tent of Conrad, and while the usurper, half drunk, was endeavoring to get on his arms the late prisoner raised his sword and brought it down, cleaving his enemy's shoulder. Conrad was felled by the blow, and Harold, standing over him with raised sword, said:

"I am Harold, king of Warwick, come to avenge the death of my father. I came from exile and without being known joined your retainers as they were setting out to fight my father's old enemy of Gloucester. I came to watch my opportunity for vengeance on you. It has come."

When Conrad was killed his army was fleeing down the hill. As soon as they heard that their leader was dead they gave up all hope of getting safely back to Warwick and expected to pass the rest of their lives in the dungeons of Gloucester. In the morning Harold rode down to them and, calling them together, announced himself as their legitimate king. Conrad had been hated by them, and they received Harold's announcement with joy.

Harold bade them re-establish their camp and promised to lead them to Warwick. Then he rode back to Gloucester castle.

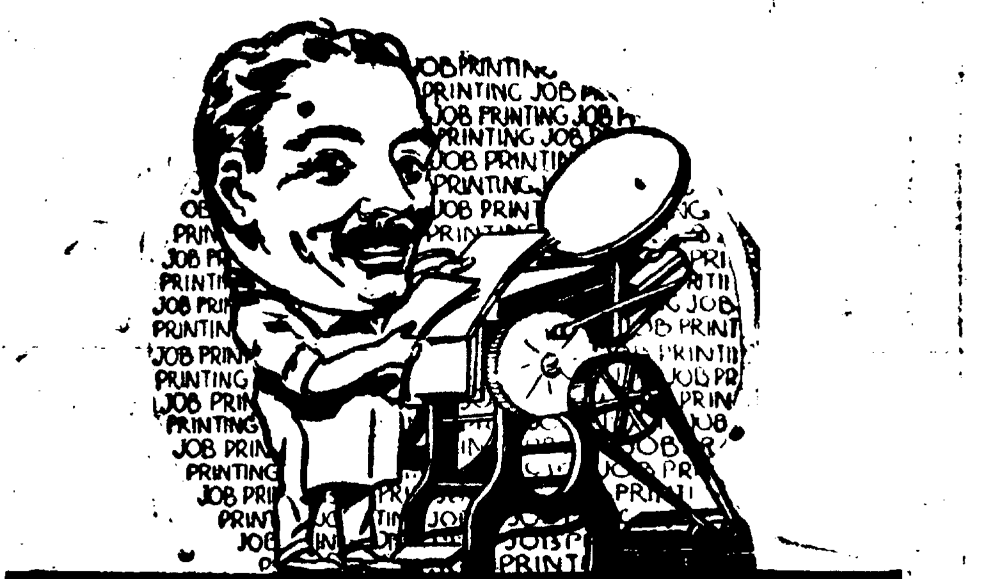
He found great joy there, even to the old king, who had got up from his bed and come out to the courtyard to welcome and thank his deliverer. But Harold, ignoring him, dismounted and, kneeling at Eleanor's feet, said:

"Good lady, I told you I would fight for you and not for the enemy of my father, for I am king of Warwick, who as a child was spirited away to prevent my being murdered by this infamous usurper."

"The enmity between our houses," replied Eleanor, "is ended by this splendid defense of yours."

And leading him to her father she effected a reconciliation.

The reconciliation was cemented by the marriage of King Harold and the Princess Eleanor. But that was many centuries ago. The house of Warwick still occupies Warwick castle, but the lineage has often changed since the period of this story.



SEND THAT NEXT PRINTING ORDER TO THE
JOB-PRINTING-DEPT.
THAT WILL GIVE YOU HIGHEST QUALITY LOWEST PRICES & SUPERIOR SERVICE.

WE ARE NOW READY TO EXECUTE YOUR WORK

PROMPTLY

AND WILL APPRECIATE YOUR PATRONAGE

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Telephone 45

Fear of Financial Depression After the War Not Justified

By WILLIAM G. M'ADOO, Secretary of the Treasury

THE duty devolves upon the bankers of the United States because the responsibility rests primarily upon them to curb speculation and to restrain inflationary tendencies. The federal reserve board at Washington will use its great power to assist in the wholesome use of the great credit resources of the country and to prevent unhealthful tendencies, but the banks themselves have the chief power and responsibility. The federal reserve board can only contribute toward this result to the extent that the law gives it the necessary authority.

Photo by American Press Association.

W. G. M'ADOO.

When I speak this word of caution about speculation and inflation I must at the same time express my lack of sympathy with the views so strenuously put forward, and I think for selfish motives primarily by some people, that the United States must face a period of serious depression, if not possible disaster, upon the conclusion of peace in Europe.

UNREASONABLE FEAR ALONE SEEMS TO ME TO BE AT THE BASIS OF ALL HONEST APPREHENSION ON THIS SCORE.

Preservation of the Nation Depends on Character, Not Force

By President JOHN M. THOMAS, Middlebury College

IF our eyes are really open we shall be stirred to something far more serious, far more radical, than a burst of naval and military enthusiasm. There is a superficiality in the present preparedness movement that is all too characteristically American. If we are threatened by one or more of the empires of the world we shall not meet the situation BY THE MILITARY TRAINING OF A FEW THOUSAND MORE AND THE BUILDING OF A FEW DREADNAUGHTS.

It is a time for deep searching of heart as to the national character, on which alone eventually the national preservation must depend. We can no longer blunder our way to prosperity; we must earn and deserve it.

WE MUST PRODUCE BY INTENTION AND RESOLVE THE CHARACTER WE NEED TO HOLD OUR OWN AGAINST THE NATIONS OF THE WORLD.

Greek Ideal of Beauty Revived by American Women

By Mrs. HARRY PAYNE WHITNEY, Noted Sculptor

THE sculptor's idea of beauty is very generally that of the Greeks. The strong, straight woman, developed by exercise in the open air, seems the most beautiful to me. I think that is the general conception of beauty today.

The Greek worship of beauty seems to me to be revived among us. The American girl's fondness for clothes, even the wrong clothes sometimes, is an expression of the search for beauty. But real beauty depends very little on clothes.

SOME OF THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMEN I HAVE EVER SEEN ARE AMERICAN MODELS I EMPLOY IN MY STUDIO.

You can see in all their faces the ideal of service and of helpfulness. I believe that work beautifies women, you know—that it keeps them young. Not necessarily work for money—that depends on individual circumstances — BUT THE IDEA OF DOING SOMETHING FOR OTHERS.

THE TOWN SLOUCH

By ELLIS M. CLARKE.

Mis' Cawkins Has to Keep Up Cy's Insurance. He Won't Carry Anything.

Man hastes to th' polls at a bustlin' gait, But a woman won't budge 'til her hat is on straight.

No wonder German bands are noisy; they're always Teuton.

Th' fool's cap was always a mighty handy cap when we were a boy.

HOW TO MEASURE

Do Proportions Bother You Greatly on Cooking Days?

LIQUIDS AND THICKENINGS.

This List Will Be of Real Help to the Home Baker—Interesting and Valuable Items About the Art of Simple Everyday Cookery.

Proportion often bothers the best of cooks to a tremendous extent. She may be glad, therefore, to have the following very useful table:

Batters, one cupful of liquid to one cupful of flour.

Muffin or cake dough, one cupful of liquid to two cupfuls of flour.

Dough to knead, one cupful of liquid to three cupfuls of flour.

Dough to roll out, one cupful of liquid to four cupfuls of flour.

Six teaspoonfuls of baking powder to one quart of flour, if no eggs are used or one and one-half teaspoonfuls of baking powder to one cupful of flour.

One-half teaspoonful of soda or one teaspoonful of cream of tartar is about equivalent to two teaspoonfuls of baking powder.

One-half cupful of liquid yeast equals one-half dry yeast cake or one-fourth compressed yeast cake.

One cupful of liquid yeast, one dry yeast cake, or one-half compressed yeast cake to one pint of liquid if bread is raised during the day.

One-half cupful of liquid yeast, one half dry yeast cake or one-fourth compressed yeast cake to one pint of liquid if bread is raised overnight.

One and one-half teaspoonfuls of soda to one pint of thick sour milk.

One and one-half teaspoonfuls of soda to one pint of molasses.

One teaspoonful of soda to one and one-half cupfuls of thick sour cream.

One-half cupful of cornstarch to one quart of milk for blancmange.

One teaspoonful of salt to one quart of soup stock, sauces, etc.

One-eighth teaspoonful of pepper to each teaspoonful of salt.

Two to four egg yolks to one pint of milk for soft custards.

Two to three whole eggs to one pint of milk for cup custards.

One teaspoonful of salt to one quart of water for boiling vegetables, meats, etc.

Two tablespoonfuls of flour to one cupful of liquid for white sauces and gravies.

HER SUMMER HAT.

One of the New Models That Smart Women Prefer.

This attractive garden hat has a broad brim of leghorn straw faced with pale pink georgette crape. A cluster of wax flowers and black velvet ribbon streamers add much to its picturesqueness. It is worn with a white net frock.

BEAUTIFUL LINES.

Homemade Pillowcases.

Any one who has any spare time can devote it pleasantly and usefully by making pillowcases. They can be made much cheaper than bought and with little or no trouble. You can buy pillow tubing at 25 cents a yard. Two yards will make a pair. Draw very evenly two rows of shallow scallops around the opening. Be careful that you measure them evenly so that you will not have uneven scallops at the end. That done, crochet a double edging without hemming the case. For 55 cents you can make a handsome pair of pillow cases. If desired one or more initials could be embroidered in the center above the crocheted edge.

Barberry Sauce.

One peck of barberries, six quarts of sweet Baldwin apples, sugar and the best molasses. Pick stems off, wash and peel the apples, core and cut in quarters. If you have three bowls of berries after they are picked take two bowls of granulated sugar and one bowl of molasses. Mix, then add the apples and cook till tender. Remove, add the berries, boil hard till you can see the seeds in them, then add the apples and simmer till it is done. You can tell if it is done by cooking a little in a flat dish. If boiled too long it will candy when cold.

What Next?

Polka dot slippers.

Decided bustle effects.

Petticoats ruffled to the waist line.

Chiffon veils with dollar sized dots.

Soldier button links in sweater cuffs.

Three tiered collars of embroidered organdie.

Velvet parasols to give character to sheer frocks.

The leg-o' mutton puff and the graceful bishop sleeves.

'How Would You Like This For Your Rest Gown?

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York.

BEAUTIFUL in material and design is this simple negligee put up in either pink, light blue or orchid silk crape. Over this comfortable, kimono-like slip goes a shadowy lace coatee trimmed with narrow shirred ribbon, rosette and a streamer down the front. The effect is feminine and graceful to a degree and universally becoming. ANNA MAY.

Easy & Practical Home Dress Making Lessons

Prepared Specially for This Newspaper By Pictorial Review

A New Model For Evening Wear.

A fitted bodice and one of the new one-piece bouffant skirts comprise this charming costume in pussywillow taffeta.

This fetching costume is in pussywillow taffeta, with the snuggest of bodices and the fashionable one-piece bouffant skirt.

The waist is mounted on an underbody of white net faced in vest effect with white Georgette crepe. In medium size the entire costume requires 6 yards 40-inch taffeta, 1½ yards 36-inch net, ¾ yard crepe Georgette and 1¾ yards lace.

Although it presents a very elaborate effect the dress is within the capabilities of the home dressmaker. Try the underbody first. Face the front, from front edge to 1 inch beyond small "o" perforations to form the vest. Turn in the hem then plait the lower edges. Close under-arm and shoulder seams, then sew the lace along the front along line of small "o" perforations. The trimming piece may now be adjusted to the front, bringing single large "O" perforation to corresponding perforation near lower edge of underbody front. Stitch the right side edge to position and finish the left side edge for closing. Next take the sleeve, and close seam as notched. Lap elbow cuff, matching small "o" perforations and sew to sleeve, bringing large "O" perforation at lower edge of cuff to single large "O" perforation in sleeve, and single small "o" perforation in cuff at seam of sleeve. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched, small "o" perforation at shoulder seam easing any fulness.

When it comes to the outer waist, if desired, cut through pattern of front on small "o" perforations near front edge and add ⅜ inch to both edges for a seam and close the seam. Close under-arm and shoulder seams as notched. Sew square collar to neck edge, notches and center-backs even; stitch boning about 2¼ inches long to position (lower edge of boning at neck edge) at center-back and along side edges. Gather lower edge of front between double "TT" perforations. Gather front and back above lower edge, along small "o" perforations.

Now, adjust the belt on outer front, stitch upper edge over upper row of gathers bringing under-arm seam to small "o" perforation in belt and tie in back. Arrange outside on underbody, center-backs and underarm seams even. Stitch gathers in back, and lower row of gathers in front to position along lower edge of underbody, bringing front edge of front to the folded edge of center plait. Stitch upper row of gathers in front to position.

Tassels may be added to the ends of the sash at the back, these being very fashionable just now.

Pictorial Review Waist No. 6785. Sizes, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust. Price, 15 cents. Skirt No. 6812. Sizes, 22 to 30 inches waist. Price, 15 cents.

OUR VEGETABLES.

Suggestions About How to Store the Surplus.

CELERY VINEGAR RECIPE.

A Scientist Tells Us How to Dry Common Rootlets So That They Last a Year and Taste Like Fresh Ones. Economy the Keynote.

Vegetables are a fruitful source of wastage. Most housewives look after cold vegetables when they have been cooked, but the care of them before cooking is quite a different matter. Small scraps of vegetables are thrown away; sprays of sweet herbs wither and are spoiled; carrots and turnips shrivel and grow moldy in the vegetable basket. It is difficult to purchase the exact quantity required, but this is no reason why the surplus should be thrown away or be allowed to decay. You may save it and also store up your home grown vegetables for winter use.

All surplus carrots, turnips and parsnips should be washed, scraped and cut into thin slice or cubes. Sprinkle the slices over a large dish, taking care that they are spread thinly. When the oven is empty after dinner slip the dish into it, leave the oven door open and the vegetables will dry slowly. The heat must not be strong enough to color them at all. Stir the vegetables every hour, and as the quantity on the dish shrinks add a few more slices, but do not allow the fresh pieces to touch the half dried ones. So soon as the slices dry they must be removed from the dish, allowed to cool and then be packed away in airtight tins.

These dried vegetables, if carefully prepared and stored, will last for a year or more, and will come in usefully when fresh vegetables are scarce or difficult to procure. They always are ready for soups and stews or can be boiled in the usual way.

Before boiling they should be soaked for a few hours unless you want to use them in soups or stews which will be boiled for a long time, when there is no need to soak them beforehand. If a few extra bunches of carrots are bought when these vegetables are cheap and plentiful, a good supply can be made to last through the winter.

Celery tops, roots and the outside stalks are invariably thrown away, yet these make delicious flavorings for soups and stews and dry just as successfully as carrots. Celery vinegar is delicious for salads. Take celery roots and wash them very carefully, but do not peel off the skin. Cut them into pieces and pass through a mincer. Put the minced root into a large, wide mouthed bottle, pour over it a quart of hot vinegar and add six small chillies; add any celery roots there may be from time to time, and make the vinegar very hot between each addition of celery. Leave for six weeks, then strain the whole through a fine sieve and bottle for future use.

TREAT OF A BLOUSE.

They Say Lingerie Is Coming In Again For Waists.

Hand embroidery done on fine batiste gives this blouse for wear with suits. All seams are hemstitched, and the V neck closes with a lace collar and a jabot down the front. This model is a good one also for a georgette crape blouse.

EASILY MADE.

One Good Idea.

If you have in your wardrobe one of those old embroidered voile dresses with the narrow skirt of two years back you will appreciate this way of fixing it over into a wearable frock. From the narrow skirt, if it is not too narrow, you can cut a Russian blouse using the border of the skirt for the border of the blouse. It may be necessary to set in side sections to widen the blouse, but these may be tucked and look as if they were intentional. From the old blouse you will probably get sleeves and enough embroidery for a collar. Then you will have to make a new skirt, topping it with net to the depth of the blouse and using plain voile with graduated tucks for the bottom. This extra material will not be much expense, and the satisfaction from using up the good embroidery and having a new frock into the bargain will surely outmeasure it.

Children Cry for Fletcher's

CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over 30 years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher and has been made under his personal supervision since its infancy. Allow no one to deceive you in this. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is a harmless substitute for Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups. It is pleasant. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. Its age is its guarantee. It destroys Worms and allays Feverishness. For more than thirty years it has been in constant use for the relief of Constipation, Flatulency, Wind Colic, all Teething Troubles and Diarrhœa. It regulates the Stomach and Bowels, assimilates the Food, giving healthy and natural sleep. The Children's Panacea—The Mother's Friend.

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS

Bears the Signature of

Chas. H. Fletcher.

In Use For Over 30 Years

The Kind You Have Always Bought

THE CENTAUR COMPANY, NEW YORK CITY.

TODAY'S FASHION NOTE

For matrons there are charming frocks of summer serge for general wear. Typical of the newest modes is this one-piece costume, trimmed with braid and having the front of the waist extended for length of line. The neck is finished with a collar of embroidered lawn. Four and one half yards 54-inch sedge make the dress.

Pictorial Review Costume, No. 6607 sizes 34 to 44 inches bust; price, 15 cents.

Pictorial Review Patterns may be procured at the M. Katz & Co. Departmen store. Fulton.

Boucicault Knew.

In the office of a broker in plays in New York city this framed placard hangs as a suggestion to authors that they must persevere: "Plays are not written; they are rewritten.—Boucicault."

Scarcity of Labor.

Wages of common labor have gone up, indicating growing scarcity, over an area which represents 61 per cent of the total population of the United States on the basis of the 1910 census, according to an analysis in the current issue of the Engineering Record. Still more acute conditions, it is said, are already being felt over an area in which 27 per cent of the total population of the country is concentrated. This has occurred at the very beginning of the construction season and before the annual demand for farm labor has made itself felt.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FISH DAY MENU.

FRIDAY—BREAKFAST.
Molded Cereal With Dates.
Spanish Omelet.
Bran Drops. Coffee.

LUNCHEON.
Stuffed Green Peppers.
(Last of the Cold Lamb).
Potato Chips. Rye Gems.
Crackers and Cheese.

DINNER.
Lamb Broth With Barley
(From Lamb Bones).
Baked Haddock With Savory Dressing.
Sweet Pickle.
Potato Puff. Buttered Beets.
Lettuce, French Dressing.
Tapioca Ice.

SEASONABLE VEGETABLES.

CREAMED NEW POTATOES WITH PARSLEY.—Drop the potatoes into boiling water and cook until they can be pierced with a fine skewer. Do not use the tines of a fork, which would burst them. Neither should you expect them to be mealy, for in new potatoes the starch cells are not yet developed. Drain and arrange in a hot vegetable dish. To make the sauce put two level tablespoonfuls of butter in a saucepan with one of flour. When melted and bubbly add a cupful of thin cream and stir constantly until it boils and thickens. Then add a level teaspoonful of salt, a dash of white or black pepper and a tablespoonful of chopped parsley.

Green Peas With Cream.—Shell two quarts of young peas and cook until done in a little slightly salted boiling water. When the water is nearly absorbed turn in one-half pint cream or rich milk, add a lump of butter and a dash of paprika and let simmer a minute or two; cut as many pieces of bread as will be required two and a half inches wide by four inches long and about one inch thick; scoop out the crumbs until the sides and bottom are only half an inch thick; brush all over inside and out with soft butter, brown delicately in the oven and fill with the hot creamed peas.

Stuffed Peppers.—Cut the tops from eight red or green peppers, remove seeds, cover with boiling water, leave standing five minutes. Fill with the following mixture, cover with buttered breadcrumbs, arrange in baking dish and bake one-half hour. Filling: Cook one cupful of rice or macaroni in chicken stock until tender, add one-fourth cupful onion finely chopped, two tablespoonfuls of red pepper finely chopped, two tablespoonfuls melted butter. Season with salt and pepper. In filling add more stock or hot water if necessary.

Stewed Mushrooms.—Peel and rinse the mushrooms and cut off the ends of the stalks. Stew them gently in water, stock or milk quite tender, adding pepper and salt to taste. Then thicken the gravy with a little flour and let it cook well, stirring carefully, adding cream.

Creamed Cauliflower.—Remove the leaves, cut off stalk, soak thirty minutes head down in cold water to cover. Cook (head up) twenty minutes, or until soft, in boiling salted water, drain, separate flowerets and reheat in one and one-half cupfuls white sauce. White Sauce: Two tablespoonfuls butter, two tablespoonfuls flour, cupful milk, one-fourth teaspoonful salt, few grains pepper; cream butter and flour, stir into hot milk, thicken.

Anna Thompson.

EARL WASN'T A BAD SCOUT

By J. W. Pegler.
(U. P. Staff Correspondent)

London (by mail)—An Earl isn't a bad sort of scout at all.

Joseph Eichwald, a San Francisco tobacco salesman, called the Earl of Limerick "Earl," invited him to "have a little something" and got away with it while astonished Britoshers gaped in amazement.

Further than that, the dice-box being handy, he taught the Earl to shoot craps and learned from him an equally fascinating British pastime with the dice.

It happened aboard the American liner St. Louis, from New York to Liverpool. Eichwald, long on conviviality but short on formal English etiquette, spied his Grace seated at a green-covered table in the smoking room. Two friends were with him.

"I'd like to ask the Earl to have a drink" he confided to his traveling companions.

"Well, why don't you?" asked one of them.

Eichwald did.

"Hey, Earl," he called across the room, "have a drink?"

The Earl would, when he recovered from the momentary shock, and moved over to the American's table to have it.

Eichwald's companions, an Australian and an American from St. Louis, began nudging the dice for sevens, 'levens and "points" f or tuppence. Eichwald, the Earl's co-star in the little smoking-room skit, seized the bones and faded the pair tuppence apiece. Then he talked to the dice.

"Oh-h-h! Ba-aby dice! Turn over fo' pop-ah!" he pleaded. "Mm-mm, Dice! Oh-seven."

His Grace leaned over the table, watching the bones intently, trying to "make" the game. It was beyond him and Eichwald explained that "if you make seven or eleven on the first roll, you win; two, three or twelve you lose the 'fade' but not the dice" and on down through the intricacies of the negro game.

Then the Earl took the bones and the quartet shot an immaginative game in this method, with 50,000 pounds at stake on each turn, Eichwald scarcely downing an impulse to slap him on the back and call him "Limmy."

No, indeed; an Earl isn't a bad sort at all. The Earl of Limerick is a little round man, with a partly exposed pate, a sorrel, close-cropped beard and mustache and an inborn aversion to the poetical metre bearing the name of his line. Limericks, he said, were not invented by him, though wherever he visits he is called upon to tax his ingeuity to device jingles about people whose names simply are not rhyme-able.

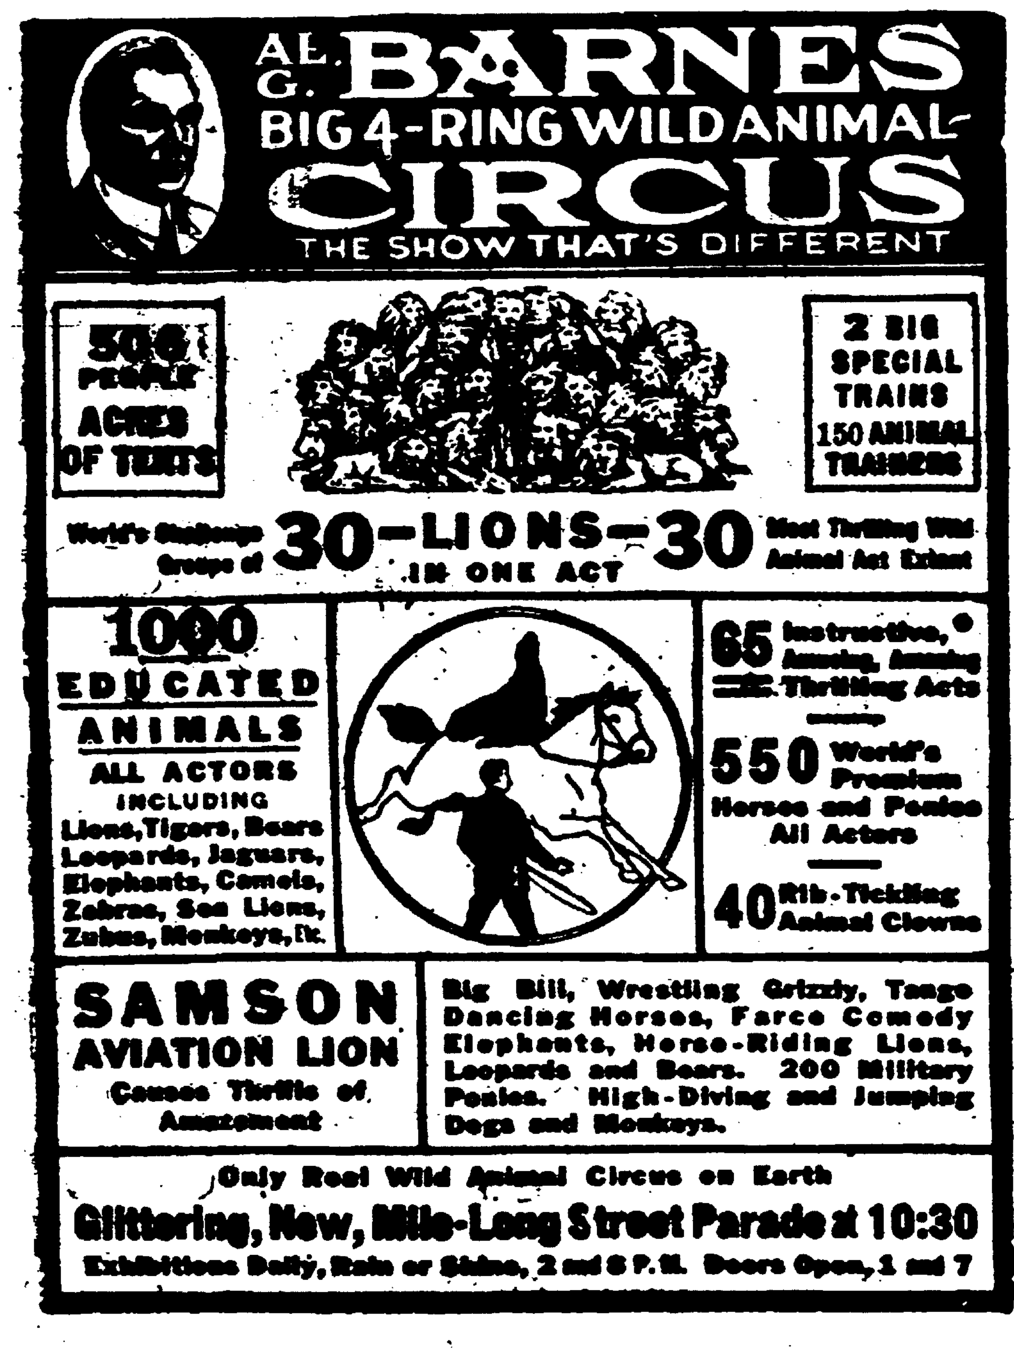
"I have just been touring part of the States," he said. "I went to Newport and got as far west as Philadelphia. Next time I come over I am going to visit a gentleman in Dallas, a banker who tells me Texas is a beautiful state. I am also going to visit the Grand Canyon and that valley I've heard so much about; the Yosemite."

The way to test this newspaper's strength is by inserting an ad in the Miscellaneous Want Column. See rates on fifth page.

A Fortune In Snuffboxes.

Count Nesselrode, the Russian statesman of the last century, was a famous collector of snuffboxes. He collected them as a diplomatist, receiving one or two for each treaty he signed, and when he had got $100,000 worth of them turned them into cash and became a capitalist. His capital he invested so judiciously that his descendants are multimillionaires. The moral of Count Nesselrode's experience is that a snuffbox is not to be sneezed at.

FULTON
SATURDAY, AUG. 5



DELINQUENTS IN THE MINORITY

Only a proportionately few of the special taxpayers of this district have failed to comply with the Federal law that requires the special taxes to be paid into the collector's office before the last day of the present month.

The special taxes which are raised as war revenue by the government, to meet expenses created by the European conflict, include among their payers brokers of all sorts, proprietors of museums, theatres, concert halls and circuses and proprietors of all kinds of public exhibitions, commission merchants, bowling alleys, billiard halls, dealers, in leaf tobacco and tobacco manufacturers.

In addition to the special war taxes the regular special tax imposed on brewers, rectifiers of spirits and retail liquor dealers also is due, and July 31 is the last day of payment.

According to the law, a tax is not paid until the amount in legal tender is in the hands of the collector. If certified checks, drafts or money orders are sent, the collector cannot issue a stamp in exchange until the paper is cashed. Therefore, the collectors have called attention to the fact that if payment is made by any of these methods, allowance must be made for time consumed in converting the paper into cash.

ADDITIONS TO BE MADE TO CHOCOLATE WORKS

The local chocolate works is now in a state of alteration. The large packing and shipping house through which all of the out put goes, is under repair and Mr. Achilli stated this morning that the out put would be greatly increased by this adventure

At present conditions are congested at the shipping department, but by increasing this part of the plant and laying new tracks, more work could be done in less time. At present the factory is employing three hundred people and the plant is working both night and day in most departments.

Mr. Achilli stated that the product is reaching all parts of the United States and that the concern was in difficulty to fill the orders.

Twenty-five thousand pounds of milk are used daily in the manufacture of this product and it is amazing to see how much of the process of chocolate making is done by hand. Very little is done owing to the speed and accuracy of the machine process.

Seven tons of chocolate is the daily output of the concern which is sent out in orders as soon as packed. Difficulty is often met with in extremely warm weather as to the packing, but Mr. Achilli said this morning that trouble in that respect had occurred thus far this season at the local factory.

PHEASANT CHICKS AND NO MOTHER THRIVING

Mr. C. A. Beckwith stated to the Times representative this morning that he had received a letter yesterday from his parents in Jefferson county, in which it stated that his father while cutting hay in the field had run onto a brood of pheasants consisting of the mother and six little ones. Mr. Beckwith said that the mother of the brood was killed by one of the blades of the machine, but that the tiny ones were saved and placed under a setting hen. He said that the event took place three weeks ago and that at the present time the birds have grown rapidly and are absolutely tame and that they respond to the call of the domesticated chicken. Mrs. Beckwith is able to pick them up in her arms and they run to her when called.

SHORTAGE OF ACIDS IN BRITAIN FOR DYES

Manchester, England—The scarceity of acids for the manufacture of dyes was touched upon at the recent annual meeting of the Bleachers Association held at the Midland hotel, Manchester.

H. Whitehead, who presided, in moving the adoption of the report said that the need of a large and constant supply of men to enable them to win the war could not but make the maintenance of output increasingly difficult, added to which there was the question of the supply of chemicals, such as acids, becoming appreciably more acute owing to the ever-growing government demands. Starches also were in the same category owing to the curtailment of the avilable freight.

The position of the dyestuff manufacturers had been most unfortunate, owing to the government appropriating more and more acid, which was the basis of virtually all synthetic dyes, and consequently curtailing the production of dyestuffs. At the present time one could not forecast how long the government would be compelled to continue this policy, but he was confident they were fully aware of the importance of not crippling the trade beyond what was absolutely essential for the national needs. He could only hope that in the near future one might find the government able to release larger quantities of acid and thereby assist not only the color producers in England, but also in Switzerland, from which country they had received most valuable assistance, and should have received much more had they been able to supply the necessary raw materials and intermediates.

YOUTH, 20, MADE JUDGE.

Texas Claims Youngest Jurist In This Country.

Bandera, Tex.—Bandera probably enjoys the distinction of having the youngest judge in Texas, if not in the whole country. Joseph G. Montague, twenty years old, has just been chosen to precinct No. 1 in this county by the commissioner's court to succeed H. B. White, resigned.

The new jurist is a graduate of the class of '15 of St. Louis college, San Antonio, Tex., and since graduation has been in the law office of his father, the late Charles Montague. Mr. Montague, though in the ordinary course of affairs is a minor, yet legally is of age, having had his disabilities as a minor removed at the last term of the district court.

PARK FOR WOMEN ONLY.

No Chance For Spooning In New Kansas City Playground.

Kansas City, Mo.—A park exclusively for women was established by the Kansas City park board following the plea of a business women's organization for a recreation and rest ground where women can enjoy themselves unmolested.

A site was chosen on a high point overlooking the Missouri river, where tennis courts, croquet grounds and a "Dutch oven" will be constructed and a shelter house built.

His Sleep Was Fatal.

Camden, N. J.—Harry Walls, thirty-five, a farmer, of Beverly was killed by a fall from his truck while driving produce to the Philadelphia market. It is supposed he fell asleep and was jolted off. The horses, having made the trip many times, came without a driver through this city and stopped in line at the ferry to Philadelphia.

'KERCHOO!' NOW ON

Hay Feverites Are Facing Many Discomforts.

LIKELY TO HOLD POPULARITY

Average Number of Days Sneezers Sneeze Is Forty-two, Number of Sneezes Sneezers Sneeze Each Day Is Seventy-three — Now, Victims, Go Through Your Ordeal.

New York.—The annual report of the United States Hay Fever association—the official organization of the 200,000 summer sneezers in this country—was made public recently. Very few copies of this report are distributed, it is said, and hay feverites never read it, for the stories of ragweed and goldenrod pollen will double a confirmed sneezer into a "kerchoo!" five weeks ahead of schedule.

Bethlehem, N. H., up in the White mountains, has been chosen as the

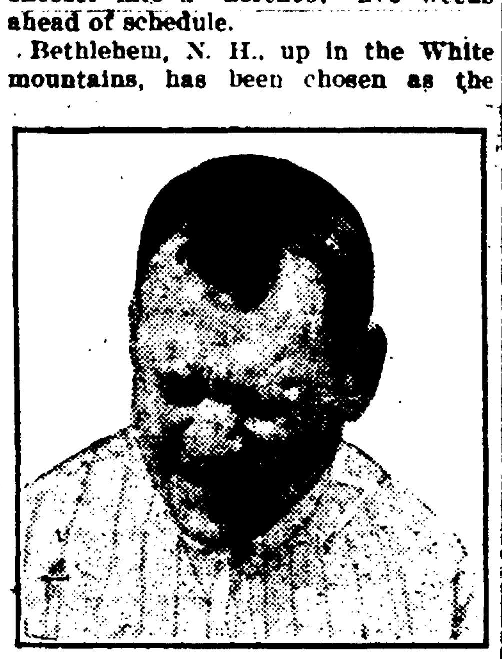


Photo by American Press Association.
HAY FEVERITE HAVING HIS TROUBLES.

Mecca of immunity for the annual convention of the pollinosis patients.

In New York, since time immemorial, Aug. 15 has been the official day for the opening of the open season for sneezes. The red noses and weeping eyes will arrive right on time this year, according to P. F. Jerome, chairman of the board of directors of the Hay Fever association and custodian, during eleven months of the year, of all the sneezes of the nation. Mr. Jerome says that hay fever promises to retain its popularity this year, despite the drive of appendicitis as the ailment of the aristocracy.

That there are 25,000 sneezers in New York state is stated in the annual report. The report adds that the average number of days that sneezers sneeze is forty-two each year; that the average number of sneezes sneezers sneeze each day is seventy-three. This makes a grand total of 76,650,000 sneezes a year in New York. Rookies in the ranks of the hay feverites point with pride to these figures.

STRAY DOG KEEPS VIGIL.

In Five Years Has Never Deserted Grave In Ohio Cemetery.

Fultonham, O.—In the cemetery here a homeless cur mourns on the grave of George Baker. They call her "the graveyard dog."

Five years ago the dog came to the cemetery following the funeral procession of Baker, an aged farmer, who died at his home, near here.

Every night the dog keeps a close vigil over the grave. It sleeps for hours at a stretch during the day on the little mound that marks Baker's resting place.

Villagers long ago gave up hope of coaxing the dog away from there. She leaves the cemetery only long enough each day to search for food.

Friends of Baker say he never owned the dog. Cemetery trustees refuse to drive it away, and she seems likely to spend the rest of her life in this strange manner.

Reason For His Disgust.

"He's disgusted with the way the politicians are running things in this town."

"Is that so?"

"Yes. He ran for office and was defeated."—Detroit Free Press.

PREPAREDNESS IN VOCATIONAL EDUCATION URGED

Washington, D. C.—Vocational education of the American boy and girl was urged upon the Senate Monday by Senator Carroll S. Page of Vermont, as an essential part of the preparedness program. He advocated passage at this session, of the bill, similar to the one he has introduced in several congresses, prepared by the vocational education commission, which President Wilson appointed. Senator Page is known in Congress as the principal champion of federal aid in vocational education.

"If in all our great plans for preparedness," he said, "there is any one measure more essential than preparedness of the American boy for efficiency in the economic battle to be fought at the close of the European war, I do not know what that measure is."

Only two boys in 100, said Senator Page, get a college education, and this bill is to help the other 98. The first year the bill would appropriate $1,700,000, which would be increased ultimately until it would reach $7,200,000 a year—an annual per capita tax of seven cents.

The senator called attention to the shrinkage of New England farm acreage in sixty years from 12,215,277 acres to 7,112,698 acres. "We must relieve the crowded conditions in the cities," he said, "by keeping our boys and girls on the farm, and we can't keep them there unless we so educate them that farm life is both profitable and pleasant—pleasant largely because profitable." He made a plea for home economics education for girls.

Children Cry
FOR FLETCHER'S
CASTORIA

Notice From the Health Department

Fulton, N. Y., July 26, 1916.

To Whom It May Concern:

I hereby certify that there is no known case of infantile paralysis in the City of Fulton. The recent case died on the 24th instant after an illness of about one week. In my opinion, this was a true case of the disease. Every known precaution has been taken to prevent the spread of the disease and if no other cases develop within the next ten days there need be no further fear of the disease so far as the recent case is concerned.

Any one desiring to come to Fulton need have no fear of encountering the disease as no case exists here.

A. L. HALL, M. D.,
Health Officer,
Fulton, N. Y.

LEGAL NOTICES.

Notice to Creditors.

In pursuance of an Order of Clayton I. Miller, Surrogate of the County of Oswego, New York, notice is hereby given according to law, to all persons having claims against Eliza Birdsall, late of the Town of Granby, in said County, deceased, that they are required to exhibit the same, with the vouchers therefor, to the subscriber at law offices of Wilson & Rice, Savings Bank Building, Fulton, in the County of Oswego, New York, on or before the 4th day of December, 1916.

Dated this 22d day of May A. D., 1916.

NELLIE E. WILCOX,
Executrix.

By ARVIN L. RICE,
Attorney.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

"A Herald of Progress"

Volume 2, No. 486 — FRIDAY, JULY 28, 1916 — Price, One Cent

CONTEST FOR CIRCUS TICKETS IS MOVING

Fulton Boys and Girls Are Getting Busy and There Will be a Warm Contest for the FREE TICKETS to the Circus. The Educational Feature Connected with This Contest Will be Beneficial to the Boys and Girls of Fulton and Vicinity.

The Evening Times Wild Animal Prize Contest.

To the Wild Animal Editor:

I hereby certify I am not over 15 years of age and I submit

.... names of wild animals in your prize contest for free tickets to the Al. G. Barnes Big Four Ring Wild Animal Circus exhibiting in Fulton on Saturday, August 5th.

Name ....

Address ....

(Pin one of these coupons on your list)

Did you read the conditions of The Evening Times Wild Animal Prize Contest now on, in which you may win free tickets to the Al. G. Barnes Big Four Ring Wild Animal Circus which will exhibit in Fulton on the afternoon and evening of Saturday August 5th? The particulars of the contest were in yesterday's issue of The Evening Times. Better get a copy at once and read it. Already answers are beginning to come in, and by 6 p. m., August 4th 35 boys and girls of this city and vicinity will be the happy winners of prizes.

The Barnes Big Four Ring Wild Animal Circus is greater this year than ever before. Beside the two sawdust rings, two big elevated steel arenas have been built in which the most dangerous acts, featuring 30 ferocious, full-grown Agrican lions, under command of the celebrated Herr Louie Roth, do amazing things which lions never in history did before.

And the pigs. You must see those clown pigs, with old mamma pig making them mind, and the funny things they do.

And in addition to all these things there are 1,000 wonderful animals, each and every one trained to do more tricks and acts than any dog you ever saw.

And you can see all this free if you will enter The Evening Times contest and think up the names of wild animals. Get a Times of yesterday and read up on the contest.

BOOSTERS' AUTO JOYFUL RIDE

The Fulton Chautauqua Association has planned a big automobile parade and joy ride for Saturday evening to celebrate the successful ticket selling campaign which closed last Monday night. When the check up was made, it was found that the two teams had sold 807 tickets; 57 more than was required by their contract. While the contest closed Monday evening yet the ticket sale did not stop, but a few tickets were left on sale so that those who wanted to get season tickets at the $2.00 rate might do so. The Chautauqua people will sell no season tickets for less than $2.50.

The Automobile Parade will start from the Chamber of Commerce Saturday evening at 7:15 o'clock. Every member of the Chautauqua Association who has a car will join in the parade and all others who are interested in the Chautauqua and are proud of the way Fulton has carried the enterprise through, are requested to join in the celebration. If you cannot come, send your car.. The cars will make a run around the streets of Fulton and then go to Oswego.

Fulton has made one of the best records of any of the Redpatth Chautauqua towns this season and has just reason for being proud of the record she has made. The success of the Chautauqua in this city is assured.

Mr. H. W. Rockwell, the Chautauqua Superintendent, will arrive here this evening. The tent will arrive today, also and will be immediately set up at the Park where it was located last year.

Miss Mildred Luce, the children's supervisor, will arrive Saturday afternoon and will meet all the children at the Park at seven o'clock that evening to make plans for the coming week. All children, whether they have tickets or not, are asked to meet her at that time. Miss Ruth Morgan, 409 Oneida street, will assist Miss Luce.

Remember the joy ride, starting from the Chamber of Commerce at 7:15 p. m. Let all friends of the Chautauqua come there and have their cars decorated with Chautauqua pennants and banners and help make Chautauqua Week the biggest and brightest week in the year.

COAL SHIPMENTS MAY BE SHORT THIS YEAR

A coal shortage this winter, because of the general shortage of labor and the small stocks of coal on hand, is being predicted in some quarters. If the same difficulties arise this year as were experienced last year regarding railroad transportation, the situation will become serious, it is said.

From the Pennsylvania coal regions comes the report that the shipments of anthracite for June, 1916, amounted to 5,636,075 long tons, as compared with 5,547,899 tons in June, 1915. The increase over June, 1915 for June this year was 177,365 tons, and, as compared with May, 1915, the increase was 89,976 tons. The shipments for the six months ending June 30, 1916 have shown an increase of 1,092,674 tons.

ACCOUNTING SYSTEM FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Prof. J. R. Fairgrieve and City Chamberlain Adkins were in Syracuse yesterday investigating the accounting system for schools of New York State. All of the cities of Central New York State were represented by their superintendent of schools and various questions were decided by the organization. The system gives a complete analysis of expenditures whereby the state can make comparison as to the unit cost of operation of plant, maintenannce of plant, fixed charges, debt service and capital outlay. All of which go to make a scientific advancement in the accounting system of public schools.

WAGNER LOOMS UP STRONGER

A new candidate for Democratic gubernatorial honors has bobbed up in the political arena, in the person of State Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York city. It is said that he has had a number of men quietly booming his interests throughout the state for the past few days and is prepared to give Justice Seabury quite a scrap at the coming unofficial Democratic convention in Saratoga.

Following the tactics it adopted early in the race, Tammany Hall has not jumped off the neutrality fence in the fight for the nomination for governor. Some Tammany men are strong for Seabury, while others are equally as strong for Wagner, and several of the others who have announced that their hats were in the ring.

Up until the time of the Democratic gathering in Saratoga, it is not believed that anything startling will develop beyond the activity of the managers of the several candidates in strengthening their positions.

In the Republican ranks there is some dissatisfaction over the personnel of the executive committee, believing it contains too many of the "old guard." This step is merely in line with the avowed Republican policy of not treating with the Progressives at all, and declaring for a straight-out, old fashioned fight this fall when they hope to bury the Moose once and for all. The new executive committee is to meet Saturday in New York city. Governor Whitman will attend and it will then be decided whether to call a special session of the legislature.

The subject of soldiers' votes will also be taken up at this meeting, and every effort will be made to find some way in which they can be cast. The Republican leaders believe that the guardsmen are anti-Wilson. It is not probable that the soldiers will be allowed to vote by mail, as the constitution provides that this can be done only in case of war. Some way must be found, however, to eliminate the requirement for personal registration and if it is necessary the legislature will be called into special session, and the legislation enacted.

LARGER PROFITS FROM SALE OF MILK WANTED

Syracuse—The Wicks committee named by the legislature to investigate the marketing and production of dairy products will conduct a meeting in this city within a short time.

Hearings have been held in Oswego, Katertown and other cities throughout the state, in an effort to solve the milk problem. The farmers maintain that they are not getting their share of the profits and say the distributor is making all the money. The distributors maintain that they make but a scant margin and that if the farmers raise the prices they will be forced to raise the price to city consumers.

CHICAGO'S HEAT WAVE FATAL IN 26 INSTANCES

Chicago—Twenty-six persons died during the night as the result of the terrific heat wave which has been sweeping over the prairie states the last two weeks, reports to the coroner's office showed today. This makes the total number of dead forty-four during the last twenty-four hours.

WILL NEW DREADNAUGHT BE USED ON MEXICO?

It has been cause for speculation whether the dreadnaught Pennsylvania, Uncle Sam's biggest warship just put into commission, would be ordered to use her big fourteen inch guns in bombarding Mexican ports. The Pennsylvania is commanded by Captain H. B. Wilson.

Villa Rushsng Into First Chief's Trap

(By United Press)

Mexico City—Pancho Villa is being driven into a trap by Carranzista troops and his capture is imminent. This announcement was made in reply to rumors current here that the bandit chief is moving toward Torreon. Such a story is ridiculous, it was stated today by a high official who said that Villa cannot move south.

Reply to First Chief Carranza's note suggesting a joint commission for the settlement of the border differences is expected hourly from the United States.

Deutschland Held Up By Pilot's Absence

(By United Press)

Baltimore—The Deutschland prepared today to take on a pilot from the Maryland Pilots' Association, but that organization said Owen Coleman, who brought her up the river, was out of town and not immediately available for service. While the captain of the tug Timmins wants Coleman, the rules of the association require that vessels take the first man on the pilot list. A "twenty-four-crew" is aboard the Timmins, giving the impression that the stay of the Deutschland is not long and that when she does get out she may plan a layover in the lower bay before trying to run the Allies' patrol.

Republicans to Seek Enemy's Weakest Point

(By United Press)

New York—Present indications are that Mexico will be the main issue on which the Republicans will attack the Wilson administration in the Presidential campaign. This was indicated in a statement issued today by National Chairman Wilcox. The statement denied the Republican party's criticism of the handling of the Mexican problem was dictated by any sinister influence and bitterly assailed Wilson's maladministration of affairs there.

MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT ON TRIAL TODAY

London—Laurence Ginnell, author, humanitarian and prominent Irish member of the British parliament, was placed on trial here today by his government, charged with violating the Defence of The Realm Act.

Penalties for conviction of the violation of this act range from a ten shilling fine to imprisonment.

Ginnell was arrested by order of General Lloyd. Information came to the officer that Ginnell had visited a detention camp at Knutsford near Manchesteer under an assumed name and there spent some time talking in a suspicious manner with Irish rebel prisoners.

Ginnell has long been known for his sympathy with the Irish cause. He has frequently and openly criticized the government for not giving Ireland home rule. He was particularly bitter in denouncing the government for what he termed its failure to deal more leniently with the Irish rebels following the Easter rebellion.

Ginnell is a member from County Westmeath, a hotbed of Irish rebellion, from which he was elected in 1906. He is a self educated man and a fine natural orator. He was one of the founders of the Irish Literary Society of London and is the author of several books dealing with Irish questions.

AGENTS' STRIKE WON'T SPREAD

No effort has yet been reported to form a branch union among the Prudential Insurance Company agents in this city or throughout Central New York, and it is not probable that the movement will be pushed outside of New York and other large cities.

The older men work on a straight commission basis, while the new agents work for salary and commission. The Prudential is one of the mutual companies in which the policy holders have a voice in the business management, and it is probable that the company may go direct to the policy holders if the agents and collectors declare a general strike similar to the one now in progress in New York city.

The principal grievance of the New York strikers is that the men are not pleased with the company's order, which says that all policies must be cancelled when the premiums are four months in arrears. The agents claim that this would result in the lapse of many policies and a reduction in the agents' incomes. The men are also demanding recognition of the union, better pay and a change in working hours.

The company officials allege that the trouble started when a number of agents were discharged in New York for an alleged attempt to defraud the policy holders, many of whom in New York city are foreigners who do not understand the business methods. It is alleged some of these agents had persuaded the foreigners to surrender their policies and take a cash payment, after which the agent would re-insure the policy holder and thus get an additional fee for new business from the company. The policy holders lost their rights by surrendering the old policies and gained a much smaller amount of insurance on the new policies. The company officials say they tried to break up this system and the strike resulted.

BROTHERHOODS INSIST UPON HIGHER RATE

(By United Press)

Cleveland, Ohio—Four railway brotherhoods today notified the railroad commissioners that they are prepared to resume conferences on an eight-hour day, at ten-hour pay, and time-and-a-half for overtime on August 1st in New York.

GUNMEN BARRED FROM N. Y. STRIKERS' RANKS

New York—Police Commissioner Woods today notified both strikers and employers in the Bronx strike zone, that they must immediately dispense with the use of gangsters. The police fear that the hiring of gunmen of all sorts will lead to a reign of terror.

WEATHER FORECAST

Gentle moderate east wind. Generally fair to-night and Saturday. Warmer Saturday.

THE FULTON EVENING TIMES

Published Daily, except Sunday, at the Grange Building, East First Street, Fulton, New York.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Fulton, New York, under Act of March 3, 1879.

DWIGHT J. ROBBINS, Owner and Publisher

FRIDAY, JULY 28, 1916

SELECTED EDITORIALS

Christian Science Monitor:

Reports have it that, in his various conferences with visiting delegations and individuals, Charles Evans Hughes is constantly striving to impress upon the Republican party workers the necessity of winning Congress as well as the presidency. The more experienced campaigners, of course, do not need to be told how important it is to a Republican President to be supported by a Republican House and Senate. Presidents who find themselves without a working majority at the other end of Pennsylvania avenue are deprived of the ability to give the country an administration in accordance with their liking or of that of their parties. The hands of a number of presidents have thus been bound, sometimes during a part of their terms, sometimes during their entire occupancy of the executive chair. It was one of the disappointments of Grover Cleveland's career that, in a critical period, he could not depend upon Congress to support him in putting through measures calculated to give expression to his ideas of government. Woodrow Wilson, the only Democratic President since the civil war, has been more fortunate. While he has not succeeded in obtaining all the legislation he has sought, yet the Congresses he has been called upon to deal with have been with him politically, and partisan opposition has not at any time seriously hampered him.

The Senate in existence at the time of his inauguration contained fifty-one Republicans and forty-three Democrats, there being two vacancies; but the Democrats soon came into control, and have held it ever since. The House in 1913 was composed of 229 Democrats, 161 Republicans, one Progressive Republican and one Socialist. The Senate in the following year was composed of fifty-three Democrats, forty-two Republicans and one Progressive, while the House had 289 Democrats and only 128 Republicans. In this House the Progressives, owing to the defection of 1912, increased to fifteen, and one seat was held by an independent. The present Congress, upon assembling, was composed of fifty-six Democrats to thirty-nine Republicans in the Senate, showing a very considerable gain in that chamber, and of 232 Democrats to 190 Republicans, showing a considerable loss for the former.

This fall an entire new House of Representatives and thirty-three members of the Senate are to be elected. Of the senators whose terms are expiring, eighteen are Democrats and fifteen are Republicans. During the last year the Republicans have gained one senator, making their total number forty. To control the next Senate they must have forty-nine members. In other words, they must make a gain of nine, or elect twenty-four out of the thirty-three to be chosen. The fact that, in the by-election of 1914, large gains were shown nearly everywhere by the Republicans, although the party was still divided, leads to the belief that a united party this year can perform the task it has set itself of obtaining mastery once more in the Senate.

An impartial survey of the field indicates, that, at the present time at least, advantage in the congressional fight lies with the Republicans. The gains made by the Democrats in 1912, and partly held in 1914, were due largely to the fact that Progressive candidates were put forward to divide the vote in Republican districts. The leaders instrumental in this movement have now returned to allegiance, and it is understood that no third tickets likely to affect the chances of Republican candidates will be put in the field anywhere. In some of the states the probabilities favor the election of Republican senators in place of sitting Democrats. Indiana, it is thought, will reject both Taggart & Kern, because of the nomination of the former; it is expected that the split in the Nebraska Democracy will allow a Republican to displace Senator Hitchcock; Mr. Martine's tenure is pronounced insecure in New Jersey; a Republican is likely to succeed Senator O'Gorman in New York, and other prospects of a like flattering character present themselves to the optimistic Republican thought.

Much, however, if not everything, will depend upon the outcome of the presidential contest. A landslide either way would in all probability carry everything else with it. If Woodrow Wilson is re-elected, it is fair to assume that he will have a Congress to his liking; and should Charles Evans Hughes be chosen it may be taken for granted that he will not lack effective support at the Capitol. But it is evident that the leaders on both sides intend to regard the congressional contest as if it were in no degree secondary to the struggle for possession of the White House. Speakers of talent, and in great number, are to be thrown into all the doubtful districts early in September, and these will give quite as much attention to the campaign in the states for senators, and to the campaign in the districts for representatives, as to the campaign in the nation for President.

The Republicans, with a Republican President, and a Democratic Congress, or with either a Democratic Senate or House, could not feel that the victory was complete. To reverse the Democratic party on the tariff, for instance, would demand complete control over the administrative and legislative branches of the government; and let it not be forgotten that reversal of the Democratic tariff policy is one of the principal objectives of the Republican campaign.

* * *

Boston Post:

Generally speaking, a man sixty years old has slept twenty years, played twenty years and worked twenty years. That is to say, he has divided each day of his life as follows: Eight hours for sleep, eight hours for pleasure and recreation and eight hours for work.

If he sleeps too much, he's a dope; if he plays too much, he vegetates and disqualifies himself for work; if he works too much, he breaks down.

Only a third of one's life seems a small proportion to devote to work. It would seem that a man could not accomplish much who devotes two-thirds of his life to sleep and recreation, and some men do not accomplish much; but that is because they do not make the most of their working hours.

The secret of successful accomplishment in the day's work—the secret of success in your life's work, lies in industry. While you are working, work—don't dilly dally and gather wool and run to the window when you hear the fire engine coming. Keep eternally on your job in the office from the time you hang up yourhat in the morning until the clock strikes for quitting time. Make a chip fly every second—concentrate every ounce of mental or physical energy on the work at hand—let there be no lost motion, no cerebral vibration—maintain yourself at the highest degree of efficiency.

If you do this for eight hours every day you'll be heard from ere you are long on the job—men will marvel at your achievements—you won't have much competition. The reason why one man can do in two hours what another man accomplishes with difficulty in eight is not hard to find if you watch both workers for a fewminutes.

* * *

Boston Transcript:

If present international conditions argue for an increased military establishment in the United States, they argue also, many persons will think, for the same thing in South America. If the largest republic in the western hemisphere is in risk of being challenged, the small republics seemingly must be, too; especially since these are not asking the United States to defend them. When at the north preparedness schemes are hastening, and at the south affairs are going on in the usual way, some observers may explain that Argentina, Brazil and Chili have no munitions-making communities to keep busy.

WITH THE SUFFRAGISTS

"Tell me," asks The Independent, "what any good politician can say to the question, 'Do you or do you not accept the declaration of your national platform in favor of woman suffrage?"

* * *

To a delegation of inquiring suffragists Candidate Hughes stated that the announcement of his position on the suffrage question whoch would be a part of his coming speech of acceptance would be satisfactory, so he thought, to all votes for women advovates.

* * *

"How ashamed we feel of the sanity and decorum with which the women conducted themselves," writes the San Francisco Star of the recent biennial meeting of the National Federation of Women's Clubs. "Nobody yelled for an hour, 'We want Mamie! We want Janie!' Nobody stormed around the hall clutching banners and bumping heads. They just talked and voted and went home."

* * *

Because the recent Progressive convention in Syracuse had to be calmed down by the police with all that that implies, no publicist has so far suggested that the event proved the unfitness of all men for political duties. But if the police had been called in to quell disorder in an assembly of women, ink would not have been spared in noting the total incapacity of women to maintain that judicial calm necessary to the discharge of political functions.

* * *

Suffragists note with satisfaction that the primaries in North Dakota placed in nomination most of the candidates indorsed by the Farmers' Non-Partisan League. The League candidates are considered solid for woman suffrage. The struggle for a suffrage amendment therefore will be resumed in the coming legislature with every prospect of success.

South Dakota votes once more this fall on the votes for women proposition. It stands second only to Oregon in the number of its suffrage referendums. Oregon became an equal suffrage state in 1912 after six elections. South Dakota has had four. In 1890 at the first election after statehood, South Dakota gavesuffrage to Indians and refused it to women. In 1896 a suffrage amendment was believed to have carried and been counted out. In 1909 suffrage was again defeated, but it was voted on a ballot seven feet long. It lost by 22,000. Last year the adverse majority dropped to 12,000. Suffrage is evidently on the way in South Dakota.

GOOD CLOTHES FOR GOOD TIMES

Long Beach—Never were styles more frivolous and ornate than this year when the "Sport" note dominates everything and sweaters are a prize possession in every smart wardrobe.

Formerly the feature of clothes built for the open, was their tailored design and finish, now we have added to this, colorings that outdo the blossoms by the wayside, and elaboration of detail that would seem in place only in a dance frock. Yet the effect is charming, and never did the crowd that assembles here appear more attractive. The beach swarms with bathing suits in every color of the rainbow, or if some tame hue is selected it is made gay with pipings of brilliant color, and topped by headgear that must make the mermaids envious. Rubber has been made to assume every color of the rainbow, and then fashioned in caps and hats that copy every shape known and a few besides. Rubber flowers adorn these or ornament the belt or corsage, and gay pagoda parasols are used for their effectiveness in the lounge on the sand before or after the bath.

Castle House

Castle House is popular as ever for dance and dinner, and the other places are not a whit less crowded in consequence.

Beach Cafes

The downstairs cafe's where bathers can lunch without changing their dress, and be in readiness for a second plunge into the cool waves continue to be popular, with a day crowd, and with people to whom the sea means lounging and bathing and little else.

McCall Design

It would seem that there might be a place for a seaside resort without clap trap though I for one have never seen it, and probably the patrons would be too few to pay the bills. Even at gay Long Beach, however, one can get away from the crowds, and watch the sun set, or the moon rise in quietness reflected in the ever moving waves, and then shortly be back where evtrything hums with life, and where anyone who can pay for it, can get the best of good eating, and watch the world and its grandmother go by attired in every last freak of fashion.

A Pink Season

No one can fail to notice the prevalence of pink this year. Any shade from pale flesh to deep orchid is used and never before has there been such a showing of pink lingerie.

Organdie, voiles and taffetas in pink and white check or peppermint candy stripes, all contribute their share to swell the pink note. Foulards, especially those with big polka dots, are very well worn, and with or without sport rigs, nearly all the younger set are wearing sport rings on the little finger. These are set with opaque stones of large size and of the semi-precious variety for the most part.

BELL-ANS

Absolutely Removes Indigestion. One package proves it. 25c at all druggists.

CHICHESTER S PILLS

THE DIAMOND BRAND.

Ladies! Ask your Druggist for Chi-ches-ter's Diamond Brand Pills in Red and Gold metallic boxes, sealed with Blue Ribbon. Take no other. Buy of your Druggist. Ask for CHI-CHES-TER'S DIAMOND BRAND PILLS, for years known as Best, Safest, Always Reliable

SOLD BY DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE

"LISTEN TO THE MUSIC OF THE BIG BRASS BAND"

BAND DAY IS THE FOURTH DAY OF

Redpath Chautauqua Week

This Will Be a Real Joy Day For Music Lovers, One Which Will Long Be Remembered
Two Great Concerts of Thrilling Marches, Stately Overtures and Heart Throbbing Songs by

CIMERA'S CELEBRATED BAND

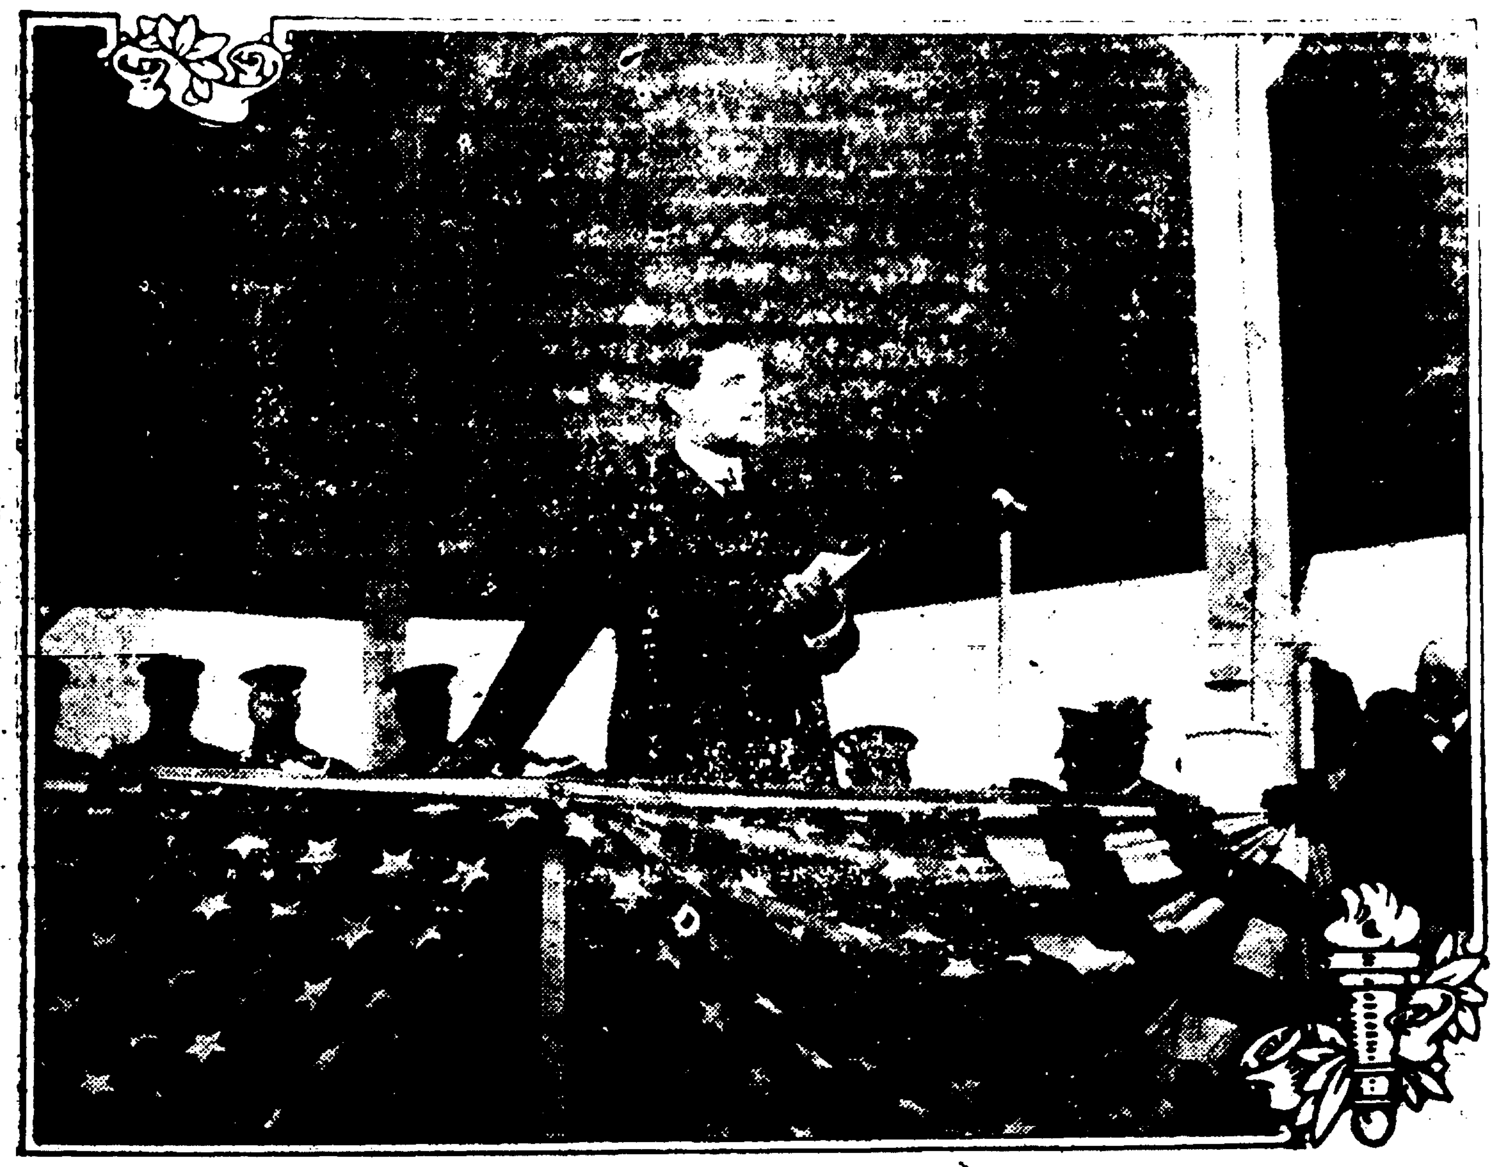
AND

MISS LILLIAN HEYWARD, Soprano

Your Season Ticket Admits You to Both Programs

Afternoon { Adults, - 50 Cents / Children, 25 Cents } SINGLE ADMISSIONS Evening { Adults, - 50 Cents / Children, 35 Cents }

Whitman to Inspect State Fair



Above is shown the governor speaking at the State Fair last year. He complimented the commission, but declared the Fair must be bigger and better. He is going back to Syracuse next month to see if the state officers have made good.

WILL BE READY FOR WHITMAN

Commission Promises Best Fair Ever Held In the State.

RETURN OF PUBLIC FAVOR.

Demands For Space and Renewed Interest In All Departments Taken as Sign of Public Confidence—Preparations For Record Crowds.

After a two day inspection of the New York State Fair at Syracuse last year Governor Charles S. Whitman agreed with the commission—created a few months before and headed by Lieutenant Governor Edward Schoeneck—that the fair was at last properly performing its functions as a great educational institution, and also that it was of inestimable value to the state's agricultural and commercial interests.

The governor complimented the commission on the wonderful improvement in the exhibition brought about in one year and expressed himself as gratified at the reawakened interest on the part of the public evidenced by the fact that there were over 50,000 people in attendance on Thursday — Governors' day.

"This is a wonderful fair," said the governor, "but"—

It wasn't necessary for Mr. Whitman to give further expression of his thought.

The commission anticipated him. Lieutenant Governor Schoeneck hastened to assure the chief executive that the commission was clearly mindful of the Empire State's rank in the Union; of the value of its horses, live stock and dairy interests as compared with the other states and that New York State of a right ought to have the biggest fair in the land.

"But," began the lieutenant governor where the governor was cut off. "Allow us another year."

When the big exposition opens on Sept. 11 the State Fair commission will have had another year. They have been trying for a higher mark, in fact the highest point of perfection ever fixed by a State Fair commission, and Governor Whitman on the occasion of his second annual inspection will score the commission's effort.

The indications from the office of the State Fair commission at Syracuse are that the Fair of 1916 will far eclipse all previous expositions. Before July the demands from exhibitors were far in excess of the space available in the large buildings, which is accepted as a sure sign of the return of public favor. The officials in charge of the various departments say that entries to date with the assurances received from the biggest exhibitors mean that accommodations will be taxed to the utmost.

The commission is planning to handle a record crowd in such a way that every man and woman visitor will want to go to the fair in 1917. There will be added entrances and numerous improvements, all for the greater comfort and convenience of the crowds. The educational features will, it is promised, be worth traveling miles to see and will leave a lasting impression in the minds of the people interested in the various phases of the agricultural industry.

The entertainment features, including grand circuit races, aeroplane flights, mounted police drills and band concerts by organizations of national reputation, will be of the high order reached at the Panama-Pacific exposition. In this connection it is said that many of the more spectacular attractions will be furnished by the same people who delighted the crowds at the world's fair.

The State Fair commission is aware that Governor Whitman does not propose to limit his stay at the fair grounds to the time required for the formal address of the chief executive, as was the practice of many of his predecessors, but will again go over the entire exhibition with a critical eye.

The commissioners say with confidence that they will be ready and waiting for Governor Whitman.

FORESTRY AT STATE FAIR.

Nearly a half of the state of New York is better suited to the growing of forests than any other crop from the soil. From this great area of forest land the state will eventually secure an income of many hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Thirty years ago New York was one of the leading lumber producing states in the Union. Today more than thirty states produce more timber in value than comes from the forests and wood lots of New York. In fact, the lumber cut annually in the state of New York today is equal in amount only to the lumber used in the box board industry.

However, though New York is now far behind other states in the annual cut of lumber, it is forging ahead in the development of industries using the products of the forest. Last year the lumber bill of the state was over $125,000,000, and, unfortunately for the state, nearly $80,000,000 of this was sent to the south and into the far west for lumber which New York ought to be producing in amount at least. It is not likely that the great industries using wood will become fewer in number or use less wood. New York is beginning to see that it is a sound economic proposition that its great area of forest land must be made to produce more timber, and by producing more timber, produce more water, more fish and game, and with all a better recreation place for the people of the state.

Models showing virgin forests, forests as left by the lumbermen, and a forest as it should be reproduced, and models showing the effect of erosion, the function of the College of Forestry in the state, and other models were prepared under the direction of the New York Panama-Pacific Exposition commission and shown at San Francisco. These models received a gold medal and will be next exhibited in the State Institutions building at the State Fair at Syracuse next month.

EXHIBIT OF WILD FOWL.

A collection of wild birds, including many rare species of wild fowl, will be shown in the Poultry Building at the New York State Fair. A large enclosure has been provided in the center of the building with a pond sufficiently deep to permit the birds to bathe and dive and to keep in a healthy, natural state.

In the collection will be many species of swans, geese and brant, some of which are seldom seen in captivity. There will be a number of wood duck, the most beautiful of wild fowl, besides teal, mallards, black ducks and pintails. The exhibition will in itself be worth a trip to the fair, State Fair Commissioners declare.

A RECORD CROWD FOR FIRST DAY

This is What Syracuse Promises to Do For State Fair.

NEW MOVEMENT IS ON.

Agreement Made by City Is Backed by All of Strong Civic Organizations. Free Evening Entertainment Will Be on More Elaborate Scale Than Ever Before Attempted.

In appreciation of its importance to central New York and with the idea of opening the Seventy-sixth New York State Fair in a whirlwind of interest and enthusiasm Syracuse has agreed to send 50,000 people to the Fair on the first day, Monday, Sept. 11.

The agreement is backed by all of the strong civic organizations of the city which, for the purpose of the movement now well under way, are known as the Allied Clubs of Syracuse. From now until the massive gates of the Fair Grounds are opened to the people of the state every day will be devoted to a campaign to enlist the aid of manufacturers, merchants and the public generally, and from the assurances of support received there is every likelihood that the Allied Clubs will make good their promise to the State Fair Commission.

Everything Will Be Ready.

With the object of doing its part the commission guarantees that every exhibit of every nature will be in place and ready for public inspection at 8 a. m. on the opening day. The indications are that for the first time in the Fair's history the exhibition will be complete from the start and the attractions will be equal, if not superior, to those of any other day of the week.

The present movement is not undertaken with the feeling that Syracuse has been neglectful of the State's annual exposition in the past. Attention is called to the great amount of work and the expense undertaken by the citizens of Syracuse in the preparations for the Ka-Noo-No Karnival, the free evening entertainment provided in the streets and squares of Syracuse for Fair visitors and which this year will be on a more elaborate scale than ever before attempted. But the present movement is in a new direction and has for its object the raising of the attendance on the first day from the usual 8,000 or 10,000 to that of the biggest day of the Fair, and the size of the city's contract may be appreciated when it is considered that 65,000 people have passed the turnstiles in one day.

Ka-Noo-No Karnival.

The Mystique Krewe of Ka-Noo-No, the civic organization which takes charge of the Karnival, has plans well under way for the big show which nightly during the exposition entertains and amuses thousands in the streets of Syracuse. It will be much like a big circus, and there is one advantage over the circus in that it will be free. There is no "This way for the big show" at 50 cents per show heard at the Ka-Noo-No Karnival. The "big show" is everywhere on the streets, and the only admission required is a smile and a desire to be entertained.

"All For Fun and Fun For All," is the slogan of the jolly monarch who presides at the Karnival ceremonies and who has enlisted the services of thousands of citizens of the Salt City to aid him in his undertaking of driving away dull care for a week.

Over 1,000 young girls and men will take part in the Clinton Square spectacle alone, to say nothing of hundreds and hundreds who appear in the numerous parades which move through the brilliantly lighted streets of Syracuse and a feature of which is a parade of 5,000 school children in fancy costume and carrying flowers.

Fun and Frolic.

It is in the central spot of the city that King Ka-Noo-No will establish his great court. With all the ceremonial pomp that has been handed down through generations of royalty, he and his consort will be crowned to the plaudits of an admiring court and thousands of spectators labeled "general public." Then will follow a bewildering series of dances and pantomimes, in which these jolly jesters, Fun and Frolic, will be most in evidence.

"The Mardi of the North" the Ka-Noo-No Karnival is known, and well it deserves its name, as thousands who have witnessed the past festivals have attested.

ART SMITH HAS FAST BABY RACER

Great Aviator Not to Confine Exhibitions to Aeroplane.

